

Sept. Term Lists 5 Murder Cases

Grand Jury May Indict 2 More In Conley Death

The Floyd circuit court may be facing one of its busiest sessions when it convenes Sept. 3, court officials say.

It has, to begin with, 90 cases docketed for trial, and five of these are for murder.

And the grand jury is expected to add two more murder cases to the docket with the indictment of James and Otis Gibson, brothers, who were jailed in the recent slaying of Ollie James Conley, near Hueysville.

Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo looks to the month ahead with some concern because of the criminal load in the court here and the possibility that the trial of Eddie Jones, charged with the murders of Lawrence Conley and James Clayton Conley in this county, will be heard during the same month in the Pike circuit court to which the cases were transferred on change of venue.

"If the Jones case is tried in September, at the same time we have the court term going here, it's going to be rough," Stumbo remarked.

One of the murder cases docketed for trial here is on change of venue from Pike county. This is the case of Robert Sykes, charged with murder in the slaying of Mrs. Boone Deskins. The Sykes trial is booked for Sept. 23. The husband of the slain woman and two others already have been convicted, and Sykes is the last defendant in the case to come to trial.

Two of the murder cases scheduled for the court term here next month name John Martin as defendant in the Conleys' slayings for which Eddie Jones is accused. His trial has been set for Sept. 10 but may be continued.

Other murder trials docketed here at the September term:

Planners Cite Need For Semi-Mall Here

Prestonsburg's central business district remains at or near the top in the view of planners for improvement and development here.

The report recently submitted to the City Council by Scruggs & Hammond, Inc., of Lexington, for the City Planning Commission pointed out:

"The Central Business District is in such a present state of clutter and congestion that an outlying shopping center will cause a great harm in the economic stability of the . . . district."

The resultant recommendation went back to the uptown mall idea suggested earlier by the late Mayor George P. Archer and City Manager Curtis Clark, or to a variation of that plan.

It was suggested that all on-street parking in that area be eliminated and transferred to enlarged parking facilities, the sidewalks widened, trees planted, all overhead utilities put underground, benches placed in the area, and generally a more pleasant shopping environment created.

The report recognized, however, the financial difficulties involved, noting that the cost would largely fall on local businessmen. The report pointed out, however, that increased parking facilities will pay for themselves, that the street improvement is the responsibility of the city and that relocation of utilities would be a task for their owners.

Recommended for construction in the next five years was sewer and sewage treatment work costing a total of $1,140,100 (sewage treatment has already been begun), and proposed water plant improvements and line extensions which would in the short-range program cost $1,675,000. An additional $836,420 was suggested for the long-range water program. Federal grants and bond issues would finance such work.

The recreation program envisioned by the planners includes an innovative pedestrian parkway along the river, from the high school area and the uptown business district. This would include clearing and draining of the river-bank, landscaping, construction of an eight-foot-wide paved strip the length of the parkway, with a bikeway.

This Town . . . That World

It was Montaigne, I believe, who said, "The pleasantest things in the world are pleasant thoughts, and the great art of life is to have as many of them as possible."

At this time of the week, what with last Friday's happenings and all, I haven't had time to practise the art, but it's worth a try for us all, the time we have left.

DANGER AHEAD

This fellow Ford apparently is getting off to a good start. But somebody should warn him that as the word gets around that he cooks his own breakfast he might be in danger of impeachment. The example he sets may get some Congressman's wives around to deciding that if the President can get his own breakfast their husbands aren't too good to do the same chore. And that could get dander up on Capitol Hill.

There's a possibility, too, that it may lose him some support from some husbands out in the boonocks.

And, please, Mr. President, next time you take to TV, don't cut in on a Cincinnati baseball game.

THE TIE THAT BINDS

All attempts at levity fall flat. I keep thinking of Richard Nixon's farewell to his staff. Maybe it had no place on national television, to begin with, but it served to flush many the arid tear duct.

First Day of School Aug. 19 To Be Full Day

County Supt. of Schools Charles Clark said this week that Floyd schools will not only open August 19—they will remain in session all day.

He suggested that parents prepare their children for a full day at school and not to expect only a brief session for registering.

Bureau of Outdoor Recreation funds, it was said, would be available for easements and land acquisition, landscaping and beaches. It was indicated Department of Transportation funds might be sought for the bikeway.

Generally, the planners called for a solid waste program, improved housing, an updating of planning and zoning and subdivision regulation, flood insurance compliance, possible mass transportation, the resolution of problems

Only Fancy Enlivens the Scene

The ruins of this chimney, one of the few remaining signs of a family home on Turkey Creek, can be given life only by a lively imagination which turns to winter scenes and family members before its roaring fire. The small structure at left still houses some of the tools used by the owner, now dead.

Court Accepts Bid of $33,982 On Roof Work

The Floyd fiscal court last Wednesday accepted the apparent low bid on reroofing of the courthouse and at the same meeting discussed with its architect preliminary plans for an annex to the courthouse which would house a juvenile detention center and some county offices.

The low bid on the roofing work was $33,982, submitted by Tri-State Roofing and Sheet Metal Co., Charleston, W. Va. The only other bid offered was by Robert B. Pace, Winchester roofing contractor, for $36,597.

The courthouse roof has leaked since early days of occupancy of the building, 10 years ago, and a suit filed by the court against the contractor is pending.

Roof work will begin soon after the signing of a contract.

Representing Forrest McCloskey & Associates, Lexington architects, Marvin Crider, Jr., of Prestonsburg, reviewed for the court preliminary plans for the proposed annex at the rear of the courthouse proper. The two-story structure, as proposed, would cover about 13,000 square feet, and would include a juvenile detention center to comply with a legal ruling holding that juveniles in custody must be separated from sight and sound of adult prisoners. Separate rooms would be provided for each juvenile held, and in connection with the center would be a reception area, a library, a meeting room, game room, kitchen and isolation room—all on the second floor.

Office space for the juvenile court judge and juvenile probation officer, in addition to room for other county offices, are included in the plans for the first floor of the annex.

Cost of such a building is to be considered before any final decision is made, County Judge Henry Stumbo said.

13 Flee 'Pot' Party, Officers Arrest 14

A police investigation into neighbors' reports of a disturbance in an apartment building at the Goble-Roberts Addition here late Monday night terminated a "pot" party and resulted in the arrests of 14 youths.

Charged with possession of marijuana and breaking and entering were Anna Mae Branham, James Case, Donnie Combs, Hobert Hurt, Jr., Ilene Moore, Michael Halbert, Carl Scott and seven juveniles. Warrants were also served by City Policeman Otis Trusty on Tuesday morning charging Case and Halbert with contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The breaking and entering counts resulted from the fact that the youths had gained entry to the apartment by way of a sliding window. The apartment was rented to Glenna Shipley who was in Texas at the time.

A police spokesman said the smell of marijuana was immediately noticeable on the premises and described the apartment as looking like an "opium den." The butts of marijuana cigarettes were scattered about the floor and a small quantity of the substance was confiscated. Thirteen other persons were

Suit Says City Government Not Legally Formed

The Mountain Investment Company, the Florida-based firm which "owns" the town of Wheelwright, filed Monday in circuit court here a suit asking that Wheelwright officials be enjoined from enforcing ordinances adopted recently to control housing and other conditions there.

The petition for injunction is based on the claim that the city government there is not legally constituted, that Wheelwright is a sixth class municipality and is governed by Kentucky Revised Statute 88.010-230.

This statute provides, it is pointed out, that the governing body of such a city "shall be vested in a Board of Trustees consisting of five members, a police judge, a treasurer, a clerk, a marshal and such subordinate officers as are hereinafter provided for."

The ordinances under attack were enacted in June by the City Council and published in The Floyd County Times. They established a housing code; created the office of building inspector with authority to inspect buildings and determine if they are fit for human habitation or may be injurious to health and to take action against the owners of buildings declared below prescribed standards; a building code, and an ordinance controlling operation or construction of the city swimming pool.

These ordinances, the suit contends, "adversely affect, regulate and confiscate plaintiff's property and rights, effective 12:01 a.m., July 26, 1974."

Stumbo in Move To Sell Vehicles In Rum Traffic

Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo last Thursday filed circuit court actions to sell as public nuisances three vehicles used in the bootleg liquor business in this county, and the following day Sheriff Joe W. Lewis announced he would move this week toward the sale of a fourth.

Sheriff Lewis arrested all three of the men listed as owners of the vehicles after taking office last Jan. 1 and launching a drive on bootlegging. Those named in the suits have been convicted or entered pleas of guilty. They are:

Jack Little, arrested Feb. 19 on a charge of having alcoholic beverages in his 1969 Oldsmobile and of transporting the intoxicants in dry territory. He was later convicted in circuit court.

Harold Joseph, who was arrested June 1 on the same charge. Sale of the 1972 Ford Torino he drove at the time is asked. He was convicted in Magistrate's court, the day of his arrest.

Newest Floyd School Construction

Although completion of the Phase II construction program at the new Allen Central High School is not expected before next year, there are those who still hope that the gymnasium section can be ready for basketball play with the opening of the coming season. Photo shows superstructure steel going up. The building is being constructed by Akers & Akers, Dana contractors, on a bid of $1,579,501, and work began last spring. In addition to the physical education department, Phase II will include space for the school's music department, vocational training and a swimming pool.

Floyd Clubs Cancel Search Agreements

Two Floyd county clubs last week cancelled the agreement under which they had operated since last Dec. 17, permitting officers to enter and search them without a search warrant.

The agreement was entered into at a time when some of the county's private clubs were threatened with closure and prosecution.

The first notice that the agreement is no longer in effect was received last Friday by Commonwealth's Attorney Harold J. Stumbo from the Eagles Club here. The second, identical in its wording and also addressed to Stumbo, was from the AMVETS Club at Martin.

The notice declared the clubs have been operating according to law, and the trustees of the two clubs noted: "We consider the agreement entered into Dec. 17, 1973 concerning the operation of our club to have been broken."

Commonwealth's Attorney Stumbo was singled out for criticism.

"Our members," each of the notices read, "have been abused by the office of the Commonwealth's Attorney, who seems to have assumed the position of assistant sheriff or deputy sheriff, and by the office of the sheriff, with the assistance of the State Police."

Mr. Stumbo accompanied Sheriff Joe W. Lewis in an unannounced visit to the Eagles Club here, earlier in the year. Intoxicants found on the premises were confiscated. The club manager was arrested, but the case was later dropped in quarterly court.

The notice served on Stumbo by the two clubs said no person is to be admitted to the clubs except their members or officers with a valid search warrant.

The clubs maintain that members' civil rights have been violated. "Any further violation of the constitutional rights of the members of our club," the statement reads, "will be reported to the U. S. Department of Justice with a request for criminal charges to be filed in federal court against those responsible."

The Eagles Club notice was signed by trustees, Malcolm Johnson, Robert E. Barnett and Donald Fitch. Trustees of the AMVETS whose signatures appeared on their notice are Oliver Williamson, Ernest Burchett, Charles W. Dingus, Gorman Bradley and Eugene Howard.

Perhaps I can teach about my own country, make friends, invite them to my home . . . bridge the gap . . . America has always fascinated me. I'm used to being with foreigners and can think of no better way to really get to know them than living in their home."

Her hobbies include art and architecture, theatre and drama, swimming and sailing, hiking, cooking,

Letters to the Editor

Going Back in History

Editor, The Times:

While we plan to observe our nation's birthday of 200 years, it may be good to refresh our memory of our history. But we may not have an honest and correct history. Men always have been too prejudicial and biased, especially in wars of the world, to give an absolutely true picture.

If we could collect family records back through the remote past we might gain the truest history of our people. A very important part of American history is found in my own family records which reach back to the time of Cromwell.

These old records say that William Goforth, one of my maternal great-grandfathers, and his wife, Ann Skipwith, were run out of England in 1667 because they were Quakers. These records say they and a small party settled on the west bank of the Delaware River and built the first Quaker church in that section.

These records say that at that time a savage war between Iroquois and Lenni Lenapes was raging, the latter being almost wiped out. These records say this William Goforth and his wife went into the woods and gathered up sick and wounded Indians of both sides, brought them to their cabins, fed and sheltered them till their wounds were healed.

These records say this was the beginning of friendship between the Indians of that section and the settlers. The first agreement between these Indians and settlers was written by this William Goforth and is included in these records. When William Penn came 13 years later, he accepted this agreement, called it a treaty and made it the basic law of all Pennsylvania which he now was the sole owner.

I've read much of these records—some in Asheville, North Carolina, some in Tulsa, Okla., and some at Beattyville, Kentucky. Most of the records were copies but some were original.

In a history written by Sylvia Worbel and published by Cumberland Press, Danville, Ky., it is stated that Isaac Shelby who commanded troops at the battle of Kings Mountain and later became the first governor of Kentucky, saw two brothers aim long rifles at each other and both fall dead.

These Goforth records say these brothers were John Goforth and his brother Preston, great-grandsons of this William Goforth. Stone markers bearing their names can be seen on the Kings Mountain battleground, said to be at the place where they fell. As you know, this battle was fought largely between people of this mountain section and many families were divided, some on the British side and some on the American.

It seems the Goforths have been fighters as far back as I can trace them. Uncle William Goforth, who lived at Beattyville, had five sons in World War I. One was a colonel and, just before going into battle, one of his younger brothers called at the door of his tent.

"Get to hell back to your place of duty," bellowed the colonel. "It's no time to talk of the past."

I've heard them discuss the matter after the war. The colonel said he didn't know it was his brother but if he had known it he guessed he would have said the same thing.

I might mention that Goforth is a nickname for my family. The original name was Gofair. Cromwell or some one in his army named them Goforths because they were always in the front lines of armies trying to run the kings out of England.

Says Support Lacking For Sr. Citizens' Center

Floyd county, don't you care any more? You have one of the few Senior Citizens Centers in Southeastern Kentucky and yet the total number of those availing themselves of its services number little more than 100. Would you believe that over 1,000 phone calls have been made since its operation in February to interest people in attending the center? Excuses for not coming range from a sore toe to "too busy." Covered dish dinners, parties, art exhibits, picnics have all been given to entice senior citizens to visit, but to no avail. We even have a new 12-passenger, air-conditioned mini-bus to provide transportation to those who could not otherwise come in. Still, little or no response.

Yet, the apathy is not confined to our senior citizens. How many people have we asked to serve as volunteers? to come in and visit with our participants? to teach them handicrafts? Most people, including community and church groups we haven't spoken before, nod politely and we never hear from them. How many elected officials voice their opposition to our center to everyone but us?

We are only two people, with the capacity to do only so much work. We need support and encouragement from every Floyd county, be they six or sixty. Without it, our center will cease to exist.

Floyd county—it is your center—stand behind it!

Suggests More Lights

We think the traffic lights at the Mountain Parkway are a really practical improvement in our town. Now, if we could just get some lights at the corner of North Lake Drive by the Economic Security Building, it would slow down the speeders and save accidents. We work and live in this section, and with the high school, Economic Security building, and Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company, there is a lot of traffic here. We have seen many accidents on that corner due to congestion.

State To Appeal Rule Crippling Implied Consent in Floyd Case

The state of Kentucky will continue to enforce its implied-consent law, pending an appeal from the recent ruling made by U. S. District Judge Mac Swinford, holding the law unconstitutional.

(The implied consent law, enacted in 1968, provides that all motorists are deemed to have given their consent to submit to a chemical test to determine if they were intoxicated, should they be arrested as drunk driving suspects. The test is popularly known as the Breathalyzer. The statute permits the state to revoke a driver's license for up to six months if the driver refuses the test.)

Judge Swinford's ruling was in the nature of a declaratory judgment. Had an injunction been asked in the Floyd case which resulted in the opinion, a three-judge panel would have been required and the result would have been a delay of perhaps a year.

Now, however, since the state is appealing the decision to the Sixth U. S. Court of Appeals, the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund, which represents Denver Slone, of McDowell, in the case, may go the three-judge route, it was indicated.

The state does not now notify persons who refuse to take a chemical test that they can request a hearing on the proposed license revocation, nor has it done so in the past. Perry Lewis, Transportation Department attorney, said that policy would change soon "as a courtesy" to those facing license revocation.

Atty. Gen. Ed W. Hancock said he agreed with the Transportation Department's decision not to follow Swinford's ruling until appeals courts have decided the issue.

"I think Judge Swinford is wrong," Hancock stated, adding that the Kentucky Court of Appeals has upheld the implied-consent law.

He said he thought the U. S. Supreme Court would also uphold the state law, indicating there may be an appeal beyond the 6th Circuit Court of Appeals should that court find the law unconstitutional.

Dean H. Rivkin, Lexington, an attorney for the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of Kentucky, who filed the suit for Slone, said he felt Swinford's decision "should carry the weight of law."

However, he noted that the court has not ordered the state to comply.

Rivkin explained that originally the complaint filed on behalf of Slone asked for it to be a class-action suit and that the state be enjoined from revoking licenses without a hearing.

A class-action suit is one brought by a plaintiff or plaintiffs on behalf of other persons similarly situated.

Rivkin said, however, that in order to expedite the suit he agreed to strike from the complaint the requests for class-action status and injunctive relief, which would have required a three-judge panel in a procedure which often is time-consuming.

As a result, Swinford ruled in a declaratory judgment for Slone, but without directing the state to comply with his ruling. The state contends the ruling applies only to Slone and not to others similarly situated.

Slone's case arose last December when he was arrested and, according to State Trooper Orlyzer Estep, refused to take a Breathalyzer test. Slone contended he took the test twice.

Upon receiving an affidavit from Estep that Slone refused to take the test, the state Division of Driver Licensing revoked Slone's driver's license.

(The charge against Slone was later filed away in Floyd quarterly court after Estep, in the prosecuting witness, failed on two occasions to appear in court.)

Slone contended in his suit, filed in federal court May 20, that he was denied the 14th Amendment right to due process of law by the state's summarily revoking his license without notifying him that he had a right to a hearing.

Transportation Department attorney Lewis maintains that persons about to have their licenses revoked should know—that they can have a hearing if sought within 10 days.

He contended that the implied-consent law should be well known to Kentucky motorists and that a part of that law is that persons subject to it are entitled to a hearing within 10 days of notification. Thus, since provision for such a hearing is included in the law, he argued, there is no excuse for a motorist not to ask for such a hearing if he desires it. He added: "The law has been on the books for some time."

Three Pay Fines As 21 Truckers Cited in County

A continuing effort on the part of Kentucky Department of Transportation Weights and Measures officers to check the increased traffic of overweight coal trucks in Floyd county resulted over the past week in the issuance of 21 citations to drivers of overloaded trucks. Suit Alleging Political Bias Is Dismissed

Franklin Circuit Judge Henry Meigs dismissed Monday a suit by which three state manpower employees sought to obtain a hearing before the state Personnel Board.

Meigs said the suit is premature because the board has not completed an administrative investigation of the case, which involves alleged political favoritism in promoting William J. Reynolds III, 27, of Martin.

Reynolds, the son of state Rep. William J. Reynolds, House Democratic caucus chairman, has been named district program manager over the Prestonsburg and Pikeville offices of the state Bureau for Manpower Services.

Thomas M. Hereford III of West Prestonsburg, William L. Baldrige of East Point, and James L. Reed, of Salyersville, employees with more seniority who also had applied for the manager's job, filed suit after being denied a hearing before the Personnel Board.

The board last week held that a law granting the right of hearing to merit-system employees who are "penalized" does not apply because failure to get a promotion is not penalization.

Under a different section of the law, however, the board ordered an investigation into charges that Reynolds was chosen over the other three applicants because of political influence.

Mrs. Teddi Pence entertained Mrs. Peggy Vaughn and Mrs. Margaret Memory to lunch at the Plantation Motel, Wednesday of last week. Mrs. Vaughn and Margaret Ann, who have spent the summer months here with Dr. J. H. Allen and Harriet, left Friday for their home in Oak Ridge, Tenn.

Abductor Slays Ashland Woman

An Ashland automobile dealer's wife was slain Monday afternoon by a man who abducted the woman and her 12-year-old son at a downtown shopping center.

Ashland police Sgt. Warren Rayburn said the boy apparently was saved by a group of workmen who responded to the screams of the victim, Mrs. William J. Niesel.

"They frightened the man away," said Rayburn.

Rayburn said the workmen flagged down a passing policeman and directed him to the site, a sparsely-settled area at the southern edge of town. He said the patrolman said the men told of seeing a man with collar-length brown hair drive away in Ms. Niesel's car—a yellow Volkswagen.

The car was discovered shortly after 2 p.m. in the same shopping center parking lot where Ms. Niesel and her son were abducted only an hour before.

"We have an all-points bulletin out for a white male, aged 30 to 35," said Rayburn. "He's about 6-2, weighs 150 to 155 pounds and when last seen was wearing a yellow, short-sleeved shirt and white dress shoes."

Rayburn said the victim's son broke loose from his captor when the workmen arrived on the scene. He said the boy, later hospitalized and treated for shock, ran to a house a quarter of a mile away from the death scene and asked the residents to summon aid.

The killing occurred in the Skyline Drive section of Ashland. Rayburn said the death weapon was a boning knife, purchased earlier from an Ashland variety store.

He said the sales slip and plastic container for the knife were found near Mrs. Niesel's body but that the weapon was missing.

UMW Called Five-Day Holiday May Close East Kentucky Mines

The United Mine Workers called Monday for a five-day shutdown of the nation's soft-coal mines, starting next Monday.

The union hopes the action will "dramatize" its concerns over mine safety, black lung disease, and its organizing strike at the Brookside mine in Harlan county.

In the announcement UMW President Arnold Miller said the week-long "memorial period"—allowed by the union's present national contract—would "commemorate" the victims of mine disasters, black lung and coal company violence.

In addition, rallies and demonstrations in the coalfields—including Harlan—will protest the Mining Enforcement Safety Administration's "failure" to enforce the law and the "recent attacks on striking miners at Duke Power's Brookside and Highsplit mines."

Reaction to the proposed five-day work stoppage from union and coal industry sources in the Eastern Kentucky coal fields was guarded largely because none of the sources had received any official confirmation that the memorial days would definitely be called.

J. B. Trout, international board member for UMW District 30 in Pikeville, said, "If the international calls a memorial period, our men would definitely support it."

Trout said that a memorial period would not lead to picket lines at the nation's UMW mines.

"The men would just stay at home and enjoy it," he said.

At Knoxville, Tenn., a spokesman for the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA), which operates two generating plants in Western Kentucky, said:

"Anything at this point—because we have seriously low stockpiles at several plants—which further interrupts deliveries certainly doesn't improve the picture as far as keeping these plants in operation is concerned.

"We're not going to run out of coal tomorrow, but we're in a situation where we're worried about the upcoming winter."

In Eastern Kentucky, coal industry spokesmen were cautious in their statements, partly because they had not been officially notified of the memorial period and partly because they said they wanted to avoid making inflammatory statements that might jeopardize renegotiation of the UMW's national contract, which expires this November. However, they agreed that a shutdown would make coal, which is already scarce, in even shorter supply.

Paul Taylor, a management official with Beth-Elkhorn Corp. in Jenkins in Letcher county, noted: "We've already had a shortage of railroad cars, and our production has already suffered from that. This (the memorial period) would add to that shortage."

Cave Run Reservoir Area And Fish Hatchery Dedicated

By HELEN PRICE STACY

Dedication ceremonies for the Cave Run Reservoir area and the adjacent Minor E. Clark Fish Hatchery were held Aug. 3, beneath the 148-foot dam.

Carl D. Perkins, Seventh district congressman from Hindman, officially dedicated the project, along with personnel of the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers and U. S. Forest Service.

Quality water was cited by Perkins as the main benefit other than flood control of the Licking River impoundment across a Rowan and Bath county valley south of Farmers.

"Eastern Kentucky will revive and be more prosperous than ever," Perkins said. "We are laying the foundation for outside industry when we make available quality water. We must continue with the development we have started. We have not by any means completed construction on Cave Run Reservoir."

Congressman Perkins pointed out the importance of tourist dollars to lake counties of Rowan, Bath, Morgan and Menifee and nearby Montgomery. He lauded the location of the fish hatchery in the area and said that additional improvements were planned.

Other points he brought out included the spending of millions of dollars to provide more adequate community water and sewage facilities; the possibility of raising the water level in the lake to create a deeper pool in Morgan county, and a continued need for Royalton Reservoir at the head of Licking River in Magoffin county.

Cave Run Reservoir area, one of the largest in Kentucky, is expected to also provide boating, swimming, camping and fishing, with lodges, restaurants and marinas planned to serve the two and three million visitors expected within the next few years.

Already open to the public is Twin Knob Recreation site in Rowan, one of six anticipated sites in the area.

Kentucky Drownings Reach 110 in 7 Months

Frankfort, Ky.—A total of 110 drownings have occurred on Kentucky's waters this year through July 31, according to records of the state Division of Water Enforcement. Twenty-eight of the fatalities resulted from boating accidents and the rest were non-boat related accidental drownings.

Water Enforcement Administrator Doug Shoulders said that waterskiing activity is currently heavy on the state's major waterways and careless waterskiing practices can result in fatalities. Shoulders says there have been a number of injuries from this cause recently.

"Some of the state's major lakes," he said, "have a very shallow average depth."

"People need to be familiar with the areas they are waterskiing in, and should ski in channels where the buoys indicate the water is deep. Never ski close to shore or near swimmers or other boaters."

He added that state law permits waterskiing only during daylight hours. "Skiers should also be aware of the restrictions on skiing times and designated skiing areas on lakes which have their own specific rules."

President Nixon majored in history and literature when he was a student at Whittier College.

New Act Helps 55,000 Veterans

Some 55,000 school-going veterans whose GI Bill eligibility was extended by two years under a law signed by the President on July 10 received education assistance checks during July, the Veterans Administration reports.

The former eight-year deadline on using school benefits expired June 30 for veterans separated from military service between Jan. 31, 1955, and July 1, 1966. VA explained. Those veterans who happened to be in summer school at the time the Public Law 93-337 was enacted can now be paid legally for training beyond the former expiration date of June 30.

Normally, checks are delivered in advance of each month of training, VA explained, so the agency prepared in advance of the new bill's enactment to process payments for summer school students as soon as legal authority to make the payments was received.

Veterans in school who were discharged less than eight years ago continued to receive their monthly checks without interruption, and they will have continuing eligibility under the new law for up to 10 years after separation from service.

Eligibility had expired for some four million veterans discharged between January 31, 1955, and July 1, 1966. Of these some 55,000 were in summer schools and approximately 100,000 were taking correspondence courses.

The extension of eligibility from 8 to 10 years also applies to eligible wives and widows of veterans who train under VA's dependents' educational assistance act and to veterans who take farm cooperative, flight, apprentice and on-the-job training.

The law granting the two-year extension was the second in recent weeks which eliminated deadlines for using GI Bill benefits. On May 31, the President signed PL 93-293 which provided a 30-day extension to June 30 for veterans whose benefits were due to expire May 31.

Single veterans going to school full-time under the GI Bill draw $220 monthly in educational assistance, but VA officials noted legislation is pending in Congress to increase allowances.

Rural Nostalgia

Although the scenes themselves may have little appeal to their "innerselves," most people born and brought up in the city take a keen delight in trips into the country. Principally, the change from the hustle and bustle and noise to the comparative quiet of the countryside is what pleases them, and their "deep-down" enjoyment doesn't usually last.

But how different the effect on those who have been born and raised on a farm and who have been away for some time. A woodpecker, a daisy, the remnant of an old rail fence, a shady lane, the song of a jay, the odor of wild honeysuckle—and familiar sight strikes a vibrant note on the strings of memory, arousing recollections dear to the heart that have been unconsciously carried in the mind since childhood.

Only for those with a country upbringing do such rustic and commonplace things bring lasting joy. Driving home the cows from the back pasture after a long day's labor in the cornfield was not much pleasure at the time. Neither was it much fun crawling from a warm bed at midnight and wading barefoot through the dew to help the dog drive a gang of marauding pigs from the sweet potato patch. When brought to mind in other years, however, such incidents have a mysterious power to arouse a pleasing nostalgia for a rugged time and a place that can never be again.

For those with a backwoods upbringing who have taken up an urban existence, happiness and good welfare are more dependent than usually realized on these "memory vales" and on frequent excursions back into the outdoors to stimulate them. Separated from the good earth and the natural things that spring from it, a person deprived of an occasional return to the wild surroundings of his youth becomes as a wanderer in space—lonely, unsatisfied, and desperate for the meaningfulness that once was his birthright.

In modern civilization's search for greater creature comforts and escape from long hours of labor, a separation from the farm and an alienation from nature took place that was unexampled in human history. Despite all the resulting benefits in terms of a less exhausting way of life, the cost—measured in terms of reality and humanity—was great. With the break of a close relationship with Nature, there was an erosion of religious reverence, poetic sense, neighborliness, and many social customs that make life most worthwhile.

Fortunately, though, the pendulum now seems to be swinging in a new direction. More and more people, including those native to the city, are discovering the healing virtues of the land. They are developing a new appreciation for the land and things of the land. They are expending much effort to protect, beautify, and restore much of it to its former state. Many city people, along with erstwhile countrymen, are moving back to the land, and this movement could be a good thing.

Rural progress, initiated by agricultural departments of great universities of the nation, has removed a tremendous amount of drudgery and, at the same time, made farm life and country life more profitable. Other enterprises have contributed until now rural living can be as comfortable and convenient as city living.

This current burgeoning of appeal of the land seems all but universal and, according to many leading sociologists, is not only a good thing but also a very good sign.

Perhaps helped along by rural nostalgia and an atavism that goes back a long, long way, this back-to-the-land movement could indicate, the sociologists say, returning stability for the nation and a more peaceful and less harassed way of life for many of its people.

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
(UK College of Agriculture)

If this be true, then—despite all the present turmoil and unrest—there is bright hope for the future. One thing for sure, there is healing in the land.

Mud Creek Woman's Attempt To Alter Council By-Laws Fails

A move headed by Mrs. Eula Hall, of Mud Creek, to strengthen the hand of "the poor and working class" in the control of the Council of the Southern Mountains failed at least temporarily last week at the Council's annual meeting at Barboursville, but the Council's by-laws are to be rewritten.

Mrs. Hall, who helped write the amendments to the by-laws which would have made it harder for such professionals as writers, teachers and researchers to have a voice in Council affairs, told the Barboursville gathering that she does not like "supposedly professional people talking down to poor people."

Opponents to the amendments argued that the Council cannot afford to lose the advice and guidance of the non-poor who take part in its affairs.

Some of the speakers implied that professionals were moving to take control of the organization.

Mrs. Hall maintained that, as now written, the by-laws permit any group to join the Council. "We could even get strip miners joining," she said, adding that the only qualification for membership under the present by-laws is for an organization simply to declare that it wants to help poor people.

The changes sought would have permitted only people from "the poor and working class" to hold council office, would have abolished the council commissions on which some professionals work and established strict membership qualifications.

Jim Somerville, a Presbyterian minister from Racine, W. Va., charged that supporters of these proposed changes were trying to narrow membership to the extent that the council "will never become a political force."

The poor won 51 per cent control of the council in 1969. Apparently, there will no further changes until the rewritten by-laws are considered at the 1975 annual meeting.

Football Roundup

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON

High school football in Eastern Kentucky will get the jump on other high schools in the state by opening this week-end with a few scattered games.

Coach Eddie Radjunas and the Prestonsburg Blackcats will play in a Grid-o-Rama, Friday evening. The Blackcats, however, won't open their regular season until August 23, and this will be the first of 12 games.

The Blackcats will travel to Richmond, Ky., Aug. 23 to face Richmond Madison. This will be Coach Radjunas' fourth year as head coach. This year, the Blackcats will open with a smaller number of players on the roster, but in weight and experience the Blackcats are better. The Blackcats will face Greenup County in the Grid-o-Rama at 5:30 p.m. (Prestonsburg time) Friday in two 12-minute quarters.

Following that match, Belfry will go against Boyd County. After that, Russell will face Ashland in the finale of the Grid-o-Rama. Coach Bruce Howard, former Prestonsburg football star, will guide the Johnson Central Golden Eagles against Montgomery County.

Coach Don Daniels and the Wheelwright Trojans will be in action Saturday night when they travel to Fleming County. The Trojans this season have been tabbed one of the outstanding football teams in Class A. Coach Don Daniels' young team should have the experience this season to capture the Region 4 title. The only problem that Coach Daniels will have will be depth.

Study Says Money Needed To Lure Industry to Area

A new government-financed study has concluded that the Appalachian redevelopment program has failed to attract enough industry to the poverty-stricken region and that another $76.4 million annually is needed to lure factories to such places as Eastern Kentucky.

A study team headed by former Kentucky Commerce Commissioner Katherine Peden says in a report that the millions of dollars in indirect aid that has flowed into Appalachia the last decade has been "helpful" but it didn't meet economic development needs.

The study acknowledges a marked improvement in the job picture during the last decade in the hard-pressed central part of Appalachia, but it notes this has been due largely to an upsurge in the coal industry.

"It is still difficult to succeed with enterprise development in most of central Appalachia unless it is related to mining," it said.

An unfavorable public image of Appalachia, a lack of industrial sites and difficult access to major markets were cited as the obstacles to development.

The study, financed by the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) stopped short of recommending a full-scale new economic development program for the 13-state Appalachian region.

But it recommended a moderate enterprise development effort that would include the following:

1. Grants for cities and counties to build industrial sites which the study said is the "single most important development need for the Appalachian Region at this time."
2. Establishment of a six-member ARC enterprise development staff.
3. Grants to assist new and expanding businesses in mountain areas.
4. An increased emphasis on research and industrial development by multi-county area development districts.

The study puts a $76.4 million annual price tag on the proposals. The largest single share of this, $62.5 million would go to build industrial sites.

To be implemented, the proposals would have to be approved by the ARC, a federal-state agency, and Congress.

A total of $1.7 billion in state, federal and local government funds has been invested in economic development activities in Appalachia since the creation of the ARC in 1965, the report said.

But most of this went for hospitals, roads, schools and water and sewer projects only indirectly related to bringing jobs to hardpressed areas like Eastern Kentucky.

The study is only mildly critical of these activities. At one point, for example, it notes the ARC has had "very little contact with the business establishment in the region . . . and knows very little about businesses in the region and the problems they face."

It does, however, suggest a promotional campaign to improve Appalachia's image and a closer alliance with business interests.

The study was financed with a $69,400 ARC grant as a part of a major re-evaluation of the agency.

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Goble has returned to her home in Louisville after a visit here with Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Kendrick.

District 30, United Mine Workers of America, proposed to the fiscal court that Floyd county join in a medical plan for a five county area which would include trained paramedics on ambulances, free ambulance service and a communications network.

James Smith, UMW consultant, who proposed the program, say fiscal courts of Floyd, Pike, Johnson, Magoffin and Martin counties are being asked to invest between $40,000 and $50,000 a year in the program. The United Mine Workers' contribution, he said, would be about $1 million a year, this to be raised by a deduction of 2 1/2 cents per hour from UMW members' wages. He added that state and federal grants are available to get the program under way but that the UMW and the counties would be required to keep it going.

The court expressed an interest in the plan but deferred action. Later, both Judge Stumbo and County Attorney James R. Allen expressed doubt that public funds could be invested in a program providing free ambulance service to all and without charge to those who are able to pay.

Local ambulance owners said recently, when it was first announced that the plan would be submitted to the fiscal courts, that they already have trained paramedics on their ambulances.

1. To adjudge the ordinances of no force and effect and to enjoin defendants from enforcing them.

2. To prohibit Paul Osborne, chief building inspector, from interfering with plaintiff's use of its property.

3. To declare non-existent the authority of the mayor, councilmen and others.

4. To remove from the company houses which they now occupy Terry Feathers, assistant to the mayor, and Don Daniels, who is described in the suit as secretary. Both men, the company says, have been notified to vacate the premises which they rent, month to month.

Listed as defendants are the City of Wheelwright, Mayor Elmer Ferguson, City Councilmen Robert Fields, Delbert Davis, James Osborne and Roy Curry, Building Inspector Paul Osborne and Feathers and Daniels.

Daniels and Feathers announced this week that they plan to file counter-suits, alleging violation of their civil rights. It also was said that the city is considering adoption of a landlord-tenant bill modeled after the legislation enacted by the Kentucky Legislature.

Daniels and Feathers, who were notified to move on June 25, say they intend to fight eviction. They claim no reason was given for the company's eviction notices at the time they were given but that Ms. Janice Grigsby, Mountain Investment's representative, at a subsequent City Council meeting termed them "troublemakers," and that Gordon Brown, president of Mountain Investment, had said he does not want persons who are hostile to Mountain Investment living in its houses.

Gas Firm's Suit Says Line Buried By Mining Work

Separate branches of the fuel industry are involved in a suit filed in circuit court here last week.

In the action the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company asked the court to issue a mandatory injunction ordering the Naff Corp., Kentucky Coal Company, Rex B. Merritt and Mrs. Eddie B. Lewis to remove from its line earth and rockfill.

The gas company alleges that defendants have dumped already, and are preparing to dump more, rocks and earth onto its line from a gas well in the Cow Creek vicinity. Plaintiff claims the rocks and earthfill present a serious threat of damage to the line which transmits gas interstate to West Virginia and Pennsylvania and that if further dumping is done it will be unable to maintain the line.

The petition for injunction asked that defendants be required to move the accumulation from the line and to clear a space at least 30 feet in width above the line to make possible necessary maintenance and repair.

hindering construction of a city building, sidewalks along South Lake Drive at critical points and annexation of additional lands.

On the topic of recreation the report suggested employment of a fulltime recreation director; the founding of small recreation (mini-parks) areas in developed sections of West Prestonsburg and other parts of the city, and the use of University of Kentucky graduate students and students at Prestonsburg Community College as recreation program directors for city and county and at school grounds.

It was pointed out that not only the young but persons of all ages are needed in the development of a recreation program.

Also suggested was the possible restoration of Garfield Place and the old May House.

Additional sidewalks for West Prestonsburg were pointed to as a need in the general improvement program.

The study and subsequent report was made under the supervision and administration of the Executive Department for Finance and Administration and the Big Sandy Area Development District.

Scruggs & Hammond acknowledged that a major contribution of information came from the Inter-Club Council which has made a study of the local situation.

All the charges, the tapes, the profanity, the gutter language, the lame excuses were forgotten as Nixon, a tragic figure, stripped of power and facing an uncertain future, spoke of other days, of past defeats and the need to keep trying. He was the central figure, but perhaps whatever tears we shed should have been in sympathy with the wife and daughters who gamely stood by—another American family drawn closer by common tragedy, and standing firm.

QUESTION

Now, will the former President be prosecuted? Is the country to be wrenched and skewered by divergent views and emotions through another ordeal?

If they don't prosecute, what is to be done with all the others who have been convicted? Turned free? And if so, what of all others who have been brought to trial?

Don't ask me—I'm asking you.

REMINDER

My neighbor, George Brown, writes. "Near my father's farm in Lawrence county ran a stream, draining a large tract of land owned mostly by two men. At the place where their boundary lines crossed the creek the farmers placed what was then called a 'watergate' anchored to large locust posts on each side. The rain came sooner than expected—literally, a small cloudburst—and brush, driftwood and fence rails began to pile up against it. The gate held for some time, then finally went with a bang.

Later upon examination, the large anchor post was found to be rot inside. "The whole thing seems to remind me of something."

Abandoned Mines, Gas Wells Could Support 'Growing' Industry

JACKSON, Ky.—Economically depressed Eastern Kentucky could be on the verge of a profitable new industry—lower cost growing of greenhouse vegetables and flowers.

"It's still a dream and I can't say it will go yet, but we're coming close and it looks better all the time," Dale Anastasi, a horticulturist here with the University of Kentucky, said.

"I'm really excited about this thing, but we've got to keep our feet on the ground. We've got to do our homework before we get this thing started," he added.

The project involves using abandoned coal mines and low pressure gas wells to lower or almost eliminate the heating and cooling costs for greenhouses.

Working with Dr. John Walker, an agricultural engineer, Anastasi said he has located and identified 1,900 low pressure gas wells in Eastern Kentucky, some of which might support greenhouse operations.

"These are wells that no longer have commercial value. A well might produce 200,000 or 300,000 cubic feet of gas a day, but doesn't have enough pressure to get it into a pipeline," he explained.

A well producing 300,000 cubic feet a day might support a greenhouse of seven-tenths of an acre, he said.

Mine sites that could be used for greenhouses would have to be on the southern side of a hill to get enough daylight and would need proper access, said Walker, who is based in Lexington with the university.

"We've started a survey of Pike County, which has more underground mines than any other county in the state, and our preliminary figures show 90 suitable sites there," he said.

"Ours is a two-fold approach now," Anastasi said. "If we can get enough growers or potential growers, then we can examine the gas wells to see if they'll support greenhouse operations."

He estimated that perhaps 40 of each 100 would be suitable.

"I've been working on this for nine years and at one time I projected a possible cooperative formation in September of 1975, but we may be much closer than that. We just don't know," he said.

Somewhere along the way, Anastasi ventured into a coal mine "and my training in horticulture made me notice the constant temperature, just what is needed for greenhouses," he said.

With funds supplied by the Surface Mining and Reclamation Association, Anastasi and Walker began two years ago to take a closer look at use of mine air for greenhouse operation.

In exhaustive tests, they found no evidence of any gases in the mine air that would harm plants. In fact, they noted a high level of carbon dioxide, which increases growth.

However, the mine air is extremely humid, "around 100 per cent," Walker said. And that would limit what plants could grow in greenhouses that use it as a temperature control.

Lettuce and several varieties of flowers thrive in humidity, the two men said, "but we really ought to do plant studies before we recommended this idea to anybody commercially," Walker said.

"But even if the one idea doesn't go, the gas wells could be used for greenhouses," he added.

Anastasi said the fuel costs for one month for a half-acre greenhouse were $2,900, "and that was the month of May, during the warm season."

If mine air were used, instead, the only costs would be fans to blow it into the greenhouse and electricity to operate the fans, Walker noted.

Anastasi said he hadn't checked to find out what the cost of abandoned gas wells might be, "but they could be purchased, rented from the owner or used by the grower on some kind of cooperative arrangement," he said.

Walker estimated it would cost about $20,000 to build a quarter-acre greenhouse and Anastasi said the annual profits from such an operation would be about $10,000-$12,500.

But both men warned that operating costs could vary widely.

NEWS OF THE MARTIN COMMUNITY

Kentucky Afield

By Hope Carleton
Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

By JOHN WILSON
Guest Writer

As the weather starts to cool, the fishing starts getting hot. The bass, which have spent the summer holed up in a nice shady spot deep in the lakes, will begin to prowl the shorelines, since they can find suitable temperatures in shallow water once more.

Also prowling the shoreline will be Kentucky's knowledgeable fishermen, who know that autumn offers some of the year's best bass fishing. In addition, the cool days and bright fall colors of the woods make just being outdoors a joy after the heat and humidity of a summer.

Most of the speedboaters and water-skiers will be gone after the Labor Day week-end, and many sportsmen, distracted by the lure of squirrel and dove hunting, will also be off the water.

But the serious bass fishermen will be on the lakes and doing quite well. From about the first of September until maybe the middle of December (depending, as always, on the weather) the fishing should be very good. And with the modern insulated clothing now available, anglers can brave even the occasional cold spell in comfort.

The floor-control lakes will be undergoing their winter drawdown, but this is usually a slow and gradual lowering of the lake, in contrast to the up-and-down-and-up again levels of the spring. After they reach winter pool, most lakes will remain fairly stable until spring.

Fishing action can be fast, with the bass often going on feeding sprees in preparation for the lean days of winter. They will often hit readily on surface lures, both along shoreline cover and in jumps, where the bass are chasing schools of shad minnows. At other times, they will hit medium runners or even bottom-bouncing lures, such as the dollily or artificial nightcrawler.

Crappie and white bass fishermen also continue to enjoy good catches in the fall, when the most productive method is night fishing with live minnows dangled under a lantern or other light. And in Kentucky's musky streams, these giant battlers become active in late autumn, after the leaves have fallen.

Trout fishing also continues good into the fall. Several streams are stocked in September and October, as are the tailwaters below many of the major lakes, where conditions are often excellent for either the artificial or natural bait fisherman.

So don't store away your fishing tackle just because summer is over—some of the year's best fishing is still ahead of you.

'Little Shepherd' Presentation: Sharing of Mountain Heritage

By SUE WELLER

Every Friday, Saturday and Sunday night this summer, a small group of determined mountain folk have been working together on a hillside in Eastern Kentucky to reach one common goal: to share their heritage with people through the production of the outdoor drama, "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come."

The drama, in its third season, is based on John Fox Jr.'s novel of the same name, and tells the story of Chad, a mountain waif, and his experiences growing up in Kingdom Come Valley, and later in the Civil War.

Unlike the many outdoor dramas that employ professionals, this cast is made up entirely of local citizens, ages 9 through 70.

"It's a community thing," said one cast member. "In fact, it's a family thing—three generations of my family are in this play."

Don Amburgey, producer of the drama since its beginning, said the show is the major social activity in the summer for many of the people.

"They really enjoy it," said Amburgey. "It's their play and they're proud of it."

The entire production has been a community project since its conception.

Citizens got the original idea and pitched in to build the hillside amphitheater in Van, five miles north of Whitesburg on KY-15. Local civic organizations donated funds to help with the endeavor and soon the dream became a reality.

Attendance has been recorded from 49 states and Canada since its opening in 1972.

The play runs Fridays through Sundays through September 1, at 8:30 p.m., C.D.T.

Pike Girl Seeks Historic Sites

By JoD Neace
 Frankfort, Ky.—Kathy Burke, a 21-year-old senior at Pikeville College, is one of 15 administrative interns spending their summer and fall semester working in a state agency for college credit.
 Her job is at the Kentucky Heritage Commission. "I research sites nominated for the National Register of Historic Places and help with the Landmark Certificate Program," she said. "Right now we are preparing certificates to present to owners of historic places in Paintsville on October 12. I am finding the addresses of the owners and properties."
 Majoring in American studies, she is concentrating on history and politics. An interest in history makes her job more interesting. She talked about one site she recently researched. "I found Sellers Mansion in Carter county very fascinating. The original owner of the home was involved in aviation; he probably invented the airplane in Kentucky. This guy also experimented with wind tunnels and had electricity in his house."
 Besides the work in their agencies, the administrative interns also attend classes and take field trips.
 Right now the Pike county native is trying to find a site or buildings in which some part of the Hatfield-McCoy feud took place. She would like to have something of the feud on the National Register of Historical Places.
 When Kathy graduates from college, she is planning to attend law school. "I hope to attend one of the Kentucky law schools," she said. "Although I love history, I would like to work with legislation. I want to be able to draft legislation; to have an influence on the things that affect our very lives."

In Quest of the Staff of Life

A little more than a generation ago there was a small segment of the population in the mountain counties of Eastern Kentucky who were referred to as "dirt poor." They owned no livestock, no land, and lived in houses that had been discarded by the more prosperous farmers. They paid no rent but performed certain chores for the farmers for the privilege of keeping a roof over their heads.
 For this group of people life was a constant struggle to keep the wolf from the door. Their most immediate concern was to provide themselves with the staff of life. In the early days of Morehead State College, there was a Prof. W. L. Jayne, who taught rural sociology. He would jokingly tell his class that corn bread was the staff of life in all the mountain counties except Knott; in Knott, dried apples was the staff of life. He said that they would eat dried apples for breakfast, drink water for dinner and swell up for supper.
 In the period we are considering here, the staff of life consisted either of corn bread or biscuits. That newfangled stuff called light bread had not yet penetrated the hill country. For those at the very bottom rung of the economic ladder, the staff of life was corn bread three times daily. To add variety, they sometimes had mush for supper, the leftovers from which turned up on the table the following day as fried mushcakes. However, the main dish made from corn meal was a concoction called "poor do." It was a greasy gravy with scraps of bacon fat and numerous ingredients thrown in. I once knew a man who consumed such large quantities of this stuff as a boy that they nicknamed him "Poor Do." In later years, after he had become quite prosperous, they still called him Old Poor Do.

I am told that there lived in our neighborhood at this period a character called Uncle Tom Lowe. Uncle Tom never seemed to be able to make both ends meet. The more prosperous farmers always raised enough corn to provide meal for the entire year. Uncle Tom always ran short in the early spring and had to resort to store-bought meal.
 The country merchants purchased flour and meal in wooden barrels in those days. Those who could afford to do so purchased a whole barrel of flour at a time. The same was not true of meal. The head of the barrel was removed and meal was sold by the gallon, peck or half-bushel. In due time paper bags came into general use. The paper bags, I might add, were not made of the tough, waxy material used today. The paper used in that day was a soft, porous material that fell apart when exposed to moisture.
 One warm day in April, Uncle Tom purchased a 50-pound bag of meal from a country store. He swung the paper bag over his shoulder and headed for home. On his way home he had to climb a long, steep hill that led through a pasture field. As he began to climb the hill, he began to perspire freely. The moistened paper bag began to fall apart. He eased the bag gently to the grass. What was he to do? Some hungry cows were eyeing the contents of the opened bag. He was too far from any house to call for help. If he left to fetch a container, the hungry cows would certainly devour his precious meal.
 Uncle Tom was equal to the task that confronted him. In desperation he stripped off his long underwear, tied a string securely around each leg of the garment at the tip, poured the meal inside, swung the contents over his back, and resumed his homeward journey.

 It was now high noon and my father had returned from working in the field. Uncle Tom was standing at the well with this odd looking thing on his back. My dad looked on in complete amazement. He said, "Tom, what are you doing with that forked poke on your back?" Uncle

Tom replied, "Listen man, bread stuff is bread stuff where I come from."
 The word soon got around about how Uncle Tom had saved his meal. He was completely puzzled when he attempted to pay back borrowed meal. The lender very graciously refused his offer, and Uncle Tom never did learn that the refusal had anything to do with sanitation.

Passes State Exam

Roger Gene Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson, of Dwale, and a graduate of the Kentucky School of Mortuary Science, Louisville, has successfully passed the State Board of Funeral Directors and Embalmers examination.

Mr. Nelson is a graduate of Prestonsburg High School, class of 1968, and is now employed at the Floyd Funeral Home of Water Gap.

Mr. Nelson is married to the former Sandra DeRossett and they have one son, Roger Gene Nelson, II.

A Visit With History

When my son, Sam Thacker, and his daughters, Mary Jo and Andrea Lee, of Attica, O., visited me recently we made a visit to Virginia and West Virginia, seeing the old historical spots frequented by their foreparent, John Davidson, who came to this country from Dublin, Ireland and in 1794 patented 200 of land on which the city of Bluefield now stands.

He and Richard Bailey built what was known as the Davidson and Bailey fort as protection from the Indians in about 1778. On the 8th of March, 1793 a body of twelve Indians and one white man named Ricet murdered John Goolman Davidson. Mr. Davidson's nude body was found under the roots of a beech tree, on the banks of the Laurel river.

The fort was 200 yards from the home of Joseph Davidson. The home has stood in good condition until moved recently to the City Park and is now in good condition—a three-story cabin and kitchen attached, surrounded by beautiful mountain laurel, growing almost to the top.

Many markers in Bluefield mark places of Davidson activities. One is where the cabin of Andrew Davidson was burned, his children killed and his wife taken captive but later redeemed by a Canadian family and returned to her husband.

We stopped in Tazewell, Va. at the old May cemetery and the graves of Col. Andrew Jackson May and his wife, Matilda Davidson May. Colonel May was a Confederate leader in this part of Kentucky during the Civil War. On the old Davidson part of Davidson Memorial Gardens at Ivel is the tall stone that marks the graves of Samuel Patton Davidson and wife, Judith Morgan Lackey Davidson. Near the foot of the cemetery hill, in 1861 Union General Bull Nelson planted his cannon and banged away at Col. Andrew Jackson May's forces. The Battle of Ivy Mountain was fought there.

The old Davidson home stood nearby. The family put the silverware in a pillow case and dropped it into the well and fled across Prater Mountain to the home of the James Johnson family and lived with them until the army passed.

When they returned home they found no linens and no food, except some wheat. They lived on cooked wheat—"fermity," they called it—and wildlife until food was brought in by boat from down Sandy. Old members of the family said clotted blood shoe-mouth deep was in the house. An old sword left by some soldier is in the Hill family now.

East Ky. Area Gets Marine Recruiter

New Marine recruiter for this area is Staff Sgt. Bob Herndon, 25-year-old veteran of six years Marine Corps service, who will be in charge of the Marine Recruiting Office at 205 Pike Street, in Pikeville. He will be responsible for Marine enlistment programs in Pike, Floyd, Johnson, Martin, Letcher, Knott, Perry, Breathitt and Magoffin counties in Kentucky, as well as Mingo county in West Virginia.

Although being in charge of Marine recruiting in an 11-county area is a large responsibility, Herndon believes he can handle it. "I feel my experience as a Marine and my knowledge of Marine programs will help me establish a rapport with the youth of this area," Herndon says. "And, I feel that communication with today's youth is the key to a successful recruiting program."

Herndon pointed out that the Marines are offering more than 400 jobs in guaranteed fields ranging from aviation to personnel and administration. Included in the guaranteed fields are communications, computers, electronics, food services, infantry, military police and motor transport.

"It has been more than a year since the Marine Corps has had a Marine recruiter stationed in Pikeville," Herndon said, "but, I'm here now and I would like for anyone interested in Marine enlistment programs to visit me at 205 Pike Street or call me in Pikeville at 437-4471. I will accept collect phone calls."

Sgt. Herndon last served at Camp Lejeune, North Carolina. During his Marine service he has also been stationed in South Carolina, Virginia, California, Okinawa and Vietnam. A native of Charleston, W. Va., he is married to the former Miss Pamela Gail Doss, also of Charleston. They and their two daughters now make their home at Rt. 2, Pikeville.

More Engineers, Variety Shrink

By MARVA GAY

Frankfort, Ky.—This year, Kentuckians have more engineers but fewer varieties of them than ever before.

There is one professional engineer registered in this state for every 555 Kentuckians. Most of them are civil engineers, though many are mechanical, electrical and chemical.

Altogether, the state Board of Engineers and Land Surveyors registers 11 varieties of engineers. Those also include agricultural, highway, industrial, metallurgical, mining, petroleum and structural. Last year, the number was 12, but coal mining was combined with mining. About 40 years ago, when the board was in its early years, there were as many as 49 different varieties.

"The board dropped coal mining and the other varieties because few, if any, applications had been received for registration in those areas for a few years," explained James D. Wilson, executive director of the board. Highway engineering may be the next to go. Most young engineers prefer to be registered in the civil engineering rather than the highway category.

"There seems to be a national trend toward consolidation of the types of engineers," said Wilson. "Some states have more categories, some less, than Kentucky. Fourteen states issue one registration for professional engineers although that causes some testing problems. Kentucky's 11 varieties is about the national average."

Some of the varieties used by other state included hydraulic, architectural, aeronautical, sanitary, drainage, traffic, railway, marine, fire protection and nuclear.

The shrinkage of varieties is just one indication of how the engineering profession accreditation process has and is changing.

The forefather of today's engineering specialties isn't even included in Kentucky's list. That was military engineering. By the middle of the 18th Century a new class of engineers emerged and busied themselves with building roads. These were civil engineers—still the largest group.

There are about 6,300 engineers registered in Kentucky and near 400,000 in the nation. "The total of engineers registered in Kentucky alone has been jumping by about 10 per cent each year," Wilson said. "That is a trend we expect will continue."

Actually, there are more engineers than that in the state. Kentucky law says all engineers working in the state except those in education or manufacturing must be registered. According to Wilson, many fall in the manufacturing category.

Though the number of registrations is growing, it's getting harder to become registered. When Wyoming started registering engineers about 60 years ago, Kentuckians simply called themselves engineers and no one could stop them. After Ohio began registering them, some Kentuckians crossed the border to become certified.

It wasn't until 1938 that Kentucky passed a registration law. Still, until after 1939, anyone who had been working as an engineer could be registered by the board without passing any test or holding a degree.

Today, experience and tests are the prerequisites for registration in Kentucky. But, education can substitute for some experience. To be registered in Kentucky now, a person must have eight years of work experience under the supervision of a registered professional engineer. Then, he must pass two tests—one on fundamentals, the other on principles and practice. All tests, except those for highway, mining and metallurgical categories, are standardized and used in most states.

A graduate of an accredited engineering college may substitute his engineering degree for four years experience. An advanced degree in engineering counts as another year.

Also, an engineering graduate may omit the second test, opting instead to simply be interviewed and approved by the board at the end of his eight years. However, if he omits that test, he can not be registered in another state unless he takes the test there. What's more, after 1976, every engineer must take both tests.

And, beginning in 1980, no one will be registered in Kentucky who does not hold an engineering degree. According to Wilson, most states either require degrees now or will in the future.

Garth School To Offer Class In Health Field

Through the Garth Area Vocational Education Center, the Floyd county school system will offer an elective high school health careers class to inform the student of the variety of careers in the health field. 6,500 4-H'ers To Take Part In 1974 State Fair Events

Some 6,500 4-H young people are expected to take part in Kentucky State Fair events, sending examples of their project work to be judged or going to Louisville themselves to participate in the special 4-H activities this week and next in connection with the Fair.

State "finals" in several 4-H demonstration and judging contests are held at the Fair each year, with state champions in these activities, selected from among top winners from each Extension Area. Most of these 4-H events are divided into junior and senior divisions, giving junior members (those 9-13 years of age) a chance to compete against their own age group while older 4-H'ers (ages 14-19) take part in separate contests.

These 4-H events will show Fair-goers the wide variety of activities available to 4-H members and the accomplishments of the 4-H'ers taking part in these activities, according to state 4-H staff members with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture's Cooperative Extension Service. All the events except the judging contests are open to the public.

The 4-H events at the Fair also illustrate two of the major differences between the modern 4-H program and the traditional idea of 4-H, the 4-H staff members point out. Although 4-H began as a program for rural youth, it now offers projects and activities to interest any young person, no matter where he or she lives. And 4-H participants at the Fair will be urban as well as rural youth from throughout the state.

In the early days of 4-H, the center of attention was on the project or the products of the project, such as a prize-winning calf or dress. Today's 4-H program emphasized development of the individual young person, providing an opportunity for growth in leadership, citizenship and knowledge through both projects and activities. This can be seen at the Fair in those events where the 4-H'ers themselves are judged rather than—or in addition to—finished products of their projects.

The major 4-H events that Fair-goers may want to see include the following:

The 4-H Fashion Revues and 4-H Variety Shows to be presented during the Fair will be of special interest, although they are not contests in which winners will be selected. The Fashion Revues—scheduled Saturday, Aug. 17, and Sunday, Aug. 18 at 12 noon each day on the Travel Stage in the East Wing—will feature those girls selected as finalists in state 4-H Fashion Revue competition earlier this summer. These 60 girls—half of them in each revue—will model the award-winning outfits made in their 4-H clothing projects. Featured in the 4-H Variety Shows on Friday and Saturday nights, Aug. 16-17, will be the club and specialty talent acts that won top honors in area 4-H Variety Shows earlier this year. The shows will be held in New Market Hall at 7:30 p.m. each night.

The state 4-H Horse Show was held in Freedom Hall, Aug. 10-12, before the official opening of the fair.

Other 4-H livestock events include Ayrshire, Brown Swiss and Guernsey shows on Wednesday, Aug. 14, in the West Wing show ring; on Thursday, Aug. 15, showing of Jerseys, and Holsteins in Freedom Hall; the sheep show in the West Wing's Sheep Barn on Friday, Aug. 16; the swine show on Saturday, Aug. 17, in the Swine Barn, West Wing; and the beef show on Wednesday, Aug. 21 in the West Wing. In addition, a 4-H dog show will be held Sunday, Aug. 18.

State 4-H demonstration competition, for both juniors and seniors, is scheduled for Aug. 16-18, at several different locations on the Fairgrounds. A schedule of times and locations of the different demonstrations contests will be available at the 4-H office in the East Wing and are also listed in the Fair catalog.

Demonstration competition will be held in 13 different subject areas: safety, photography, health, creative crafts, entomology, horticulture, agricultural engineering, home management, home environment, clothing, agronomy, animal science, and general. All the 4-H'ers competing in these contests are area winners in the different demonstration divisions.

Several state 4-H judging contests are scheduled during the Fair—foods, clothing, and home furnishings judging on Thursday, Aug. 15, and on Tuesday, Aug. 20, poultry, meats and land judging. In these 4-H judging events, the participants qualify for the state contest by attending special workshops at different locations in the state. The state 4-H tobacco grading contest also will be held at the Fair Wednesday, Aug. 21.

In addition, the finals of the state 4-H dairy and meat animal judging contests are scheduled during the Fair. In each of these contests the senior 4-H'ers who scored highest in state competition at the University of Kentucky will come to the Fair for a final round of judging. And, in each contest, the 4-H'ers will be competing for the opportunity to represent Kentucky in national dairy or meat animal judging contests later this year. The dairy judging event is scheduled for Monday, Aug. 19, and the meat animal judging competition on Wednesday, Aug. 21.

Fair-goers also will want to see the colorful 4-H project exhibits in the East Wing. On display throughout the Fair will be 4-H members' exhibits in home economics (clothing, foods, knitting, food preservation, and home furnishings); photography; entomology; electricity; geology, woodcraft; tobacco; and forestry.

DIRECTORS' MEETINGS

Meeting of the Big Sandy Regional Family Planning board of directors will be held on the second Wednesday of each month at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park.

Junior Golf Tourney Won by Floyd Golfer

Philip Dale Greene, of Emma, a senior at Prestonsburg High School, took an extra hole to edge out Bob Meade, of Paintsville, in the junior golf tournament held recently at the Paintsville Country Club course.

The third tournament under the direction of Nelson Gullett, golf coach at Johnson Central High School, featured 19 entries, including one girl. Because Joyce Miller was the only female entry, Gullett placed her in the third flight.

Making up the championship flight were David VanHoose, Bob Meade, Phil Greene and Joe Adkins. VanHoose had made the flight by beating Larry Brown; Meade had previously bested Gary Brown; Greene had edged out Dan Patton, and Adkins had out-scored Alan Hall.

MY NAME IS JAKE LAYNE

I am the man that addressed the subject of DICTATORSHIP and TYRANNY in Floyd County schools two weeks ago in this paper.

I have studied the three candidates for District 2 school board member and find that there is one who is unquestionably the man the people should elect.

Donnie Lafferty is our hope to free the school system from the tyrannical abuse of power our children have suffered under the leadership of Charles Clark, Superintendent of Floyd County schools.

Donnie Lafferty is the true candidate, the people's candidate. He has asked me to participate in his effort to oppose OPPRESSION and work for a school system that would be FOR THE CHILDREN.

Overweight Truck Citations Are Issued

Frankfort, Ky.—Officers of the Bureau of Vehicle Regulation's Division of Highway Enforcement issued 296 overweight truck citations between June 22 and July 19.

Citations to operators of overweight coal trucks (most of which were cited in the eastern Kentucky coal counties; accounted for 131 of the total.

The remaining 165 citations were issued primarily to freight carriers at the bureau's weigh stations on the interstates and other major Kentucky trucking routes.

The latest figures bring the total of overweight citations issued throughout the state during 1974 (including the last week of 1973) to 3,185. Citations to overweight coal trucks have accounted for 1,216 of the total number issued.

Kentucky Afield

By Hope Carleton
Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

Mid-summer fishing is a tricky proposition, particularly for the bass fisherman. It takes an angler who really "knows his stuff" to harvest bass consistently during this time.

The major problem is that the fish are hard to find during hot weather. To better understand why this is so, one needs to know a little about what is happening to the lakes themselves.

According to Charles Bowers, director of the Division of Fisheries for the Department of Fish and Wildlife, all of Kentucky's larger lakes (with the exceptions of Kentucky and Barkley) and most of the smaller state-owned lakes will stratify during the summer months into three distinct layers, differing widely in temperature and dissolved oxygen.

The surface layer of water, although it may contain ample oxygen, is often too warm for the fish's comfort, so they will move deeper looking for a more comfortable temperature. But if they get too deep, they enter a layer where the oxygen content may be intolerably low. So they need to find a depth with both suitable temperature and oxygen.

Add to this the fact that bass, in particular, prefer to be near some kind of cover—a rock ledge, submerged timber, old stumps, or whatever else offers some shelter.

So the fish often have trouble finding an area where these three requirements—temperature, oxygen and cover—can be found. Such areas can occur at various depths around a lake, but they are almost always in deeper water, where they often are difficult to locate.

Thus, the first step is to find out at what depth the fish will be. Many "pro" bass fishermen now use electronic thermometers, oxygen meters and depth finders to help them find the fish, but the angler of average means can seldom afford these luxuries.

Lacking the electronics of the pro, the next best thing is to ascertain, either from a dock owner or another fisherman, at what depth the fish are being taken. Since successful fishermen mean repeat customers for dock operators, most will be happy to give you the information.

Contour maps of the lake bottom (available from the Map Sales Section, Department of Commerce, Frankfort, Ky. 40601) are helpful aids in locating submerged cover at a specific depth which may harbor fish. If you hear, for example, that fish are being taken at 20 feet deep off rocky points, you can locate these areas on your map and you're all set.

Trolling deep runners can also be an effective summer technique, since it allows the fisherman to cover more territory than casting. Once a fish is taken, be sure to troll back through the same area with the lure running at the same depth, since fish do tend to congregate in suitable areas. Or locate the fish by trolling, then anchor the boat and work the bottom with artificial nightcrawlers or other deep running lures.

Many summer fishermen abandon daytime fishing altogether, confining their activities to early morning, late afternoon, or at night. Not only are the fish often more active when the sun is not beating down on the water, but there is also less competition from pleasure boaters or water skiers. Bass and other game fish will sometimes leave their deep-water haunts at night to prow the shoreline, and a noisy top-water lure can produce some fast action

To Discuss Needs In Mine Safety

Views of the Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration (MESA) on coal mine safety research needs and other topics will be the subject of the 15th meeting of the Secretary of the Interior's Advisory Committee on Coal Mine Safety Research, to be held here August 20.

The meeting, which is open to the public, will be held from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park. Opening remarks will be delivered by Dr. Thomas V. Falkie, director of the Bureau of Mines.

Under the Federal Coal Mine Health and Safety Act of 1969, the Bureau of Mines conducts research, while MESA inspects mines and gives miner training courses. At the request of the Committee, most of the August 20 meeting will be taken up by MESA presentations on suggested research priorities. MESA representatives will also discuss coal mine accident data, and interactions between the two agencies in the preparation of new mine safety standards.

Coal Manpower Needs Studied

By KEN W. SNYDER

Frankfort, Ky.—A study assessing needed manpower for future Kentucky coal production has been prepared by Spindletop Research.

The project was undertaken in response to a proposal for coal manpower evaluation by Dr. Charles F. Haywood, secretary of the Development Cabinet. It is designed to provide a basis for coal manpower development under Kentucky's Energy Resource Utilization Program.

That program was expanded by a 1974 General Assembly appropriation of $57.7 million and is responsible for coal conversion projects.

The study examines manpower needs and coal industry jobs and skills among other major factors that will influence increased mining and production of coal in Kentucky.

The Spindletop report estimates the state's coal firms will employ 40,450 men in 1980 to mine a projected 176.9 million tons of coal and 53,204 men in 1984 to mine almost 237 million tons.

Last year Kentucky's coal industry mines 127.6 million tons of coal with a work force of 29,216 to lead the nation in coal production.

The likely projection for increased manpower is needed to produce 29.2 million tons of coal for gasification or liquefaction processes in Kentucky and nearby states in 1984 in addition to basic increased coal demands. Anticipated coal conversion processes are expected to be 10 per cent operational by 1979 and to increase at 10 per cent-per-year through 1983 and become fully operational in 1984.

The study also projects a possible employment high of 64,535 jobs in 1984.

In evaluation of present and future manpower needs, the study examined the availability of experienced coal miners presently unemployed, inexperienced labor, non-participants in the labor force who would take a job in the coal industry, manpower from neighboring states and emigrants who would return to Kentucky for mining employment.

Haywood said that "actually more out-migrants would return to employment in coal related businesses. We've already noticed the beginning of a return to the Eastern Kentucky coal fields since 1971."

Major factors dealt with in the study include present equipment and supply shortages and investment capital.

"At present the availability of mining equipment and parts for the equipment is the major problem," Haywood said.

Needed investment capital is estimated to be between $10 billion and $15 billion if the nation's coal production can reach 900 million tons per year by 1985.

The study estimates coal reserves in Kentucky at about 65 billion tons. Half of these reserves, 32 billion tons which is equivalent to 250 years of production at present rate, are presently recoverable. With new techniques, up to 67 per cent may be recoverable in some areas which would increase coal reserves to about 44 billion tons.

Also taken into account are future federal regulations governing the coal industry. The study points out that passage of either the House or Senate version of a new strip mining bill will have impact on manpower requirements for surface mining in Kentucky.

The recommendations of the study call for establishment of a comprehensive Coal Mining Manpower Development Program and an interdepartmental task force for coal production under the Kentucky Energy Council.

These programs would predict mining work force needs, design and develop mine training programs and technical curricula, monitor job opportunities, provide job counseling and placement, and recruit manpower.

Other recommendations are that the secretary for Development establish a multi-agency communications program for public information relating to the coal industry, a recoverable coal deposits identification program, a program for development of coal mine-related communities and continued analysis of coal as a raw material for the petrochemical industry.

Floyd County Health Notes
 By DONNA J. GRIFFITH (Health Educator)
 A nurse from the Floyd County Health Department will hold an outpost clinic next Monday at Ethel Osborne's Store at Bypro, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. All persons in the Bypro area are welcome to attend this clinic for the following free services: TB skin tests, immunizations, blood pressures and diabetes screening.

Cervical cancer is the second leading cause of cancer deaths in women but is potentially curable if caught early enough. Cancer experts believe that these deaths would be completely eliminated if all women would get a yearly pap smear.
 The Floyd County Health Department will be holding a pap smear clinic Wednesday, August 21, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Patients will be seen by appointment only. If you need an appointment, call the health department at 886-2788 Monday through Friday.

Community Services Program at College Adds New Classes

The Community Services Program at Prestonsburg Community College continues enlargement of its "curriculum" to meet the needs and interest of persons of all ages and various backgrounds.

"Elementary Landscape Oil Painting" will be the title of one class taught by Russell May, well-known Prestonsburg artist. The class will be offered for those who desire to learn landscape oil-painting techniques. Mr. May will invite guests from Kentucky Heritage Artists to lecture and demonstrate during the course of study. The class will meet for 10 sessions on Thursdays, 6:30-9 p.m. from September 5 to November 7 in the art room of the Pike Technology Building. Enrollment will be limited.

If you want to know how to establish a new lawn or how to take care of the one you have, you will do well to enroll in the Lawn Care and Maintenance class at the college. Presented as part of the Community Service Program, the course will cover technical topics such as grading, soil preparation, seeding, sodding, sprigging, fertilizing, fertility and acidity levels, irrigation, mowing and mowers, raking and rakes, rolling, weed control, insect control, disease control, and ground covers. There will be a special section on how to establish a putting green in your back yard.

David Gillespie, horticulturist with the Greenhouse Project of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, will be the instructor. The class will meet in Room 113 of the Pike Technology Building on Thursday evenings, 7-9 p.m., September 5 to October 10. Enrollment will be limited to 40.

The Community Service Program is attempting to contact adults who are interested in learning to drive.

For further information about these and other classes offered by the Community Service Program, call 886-3863, extension 208, or write James Ratcliff, coordinator of the program, at the college.

The Nifty Weather Machine.
 It's a total heating-air conditioning system.

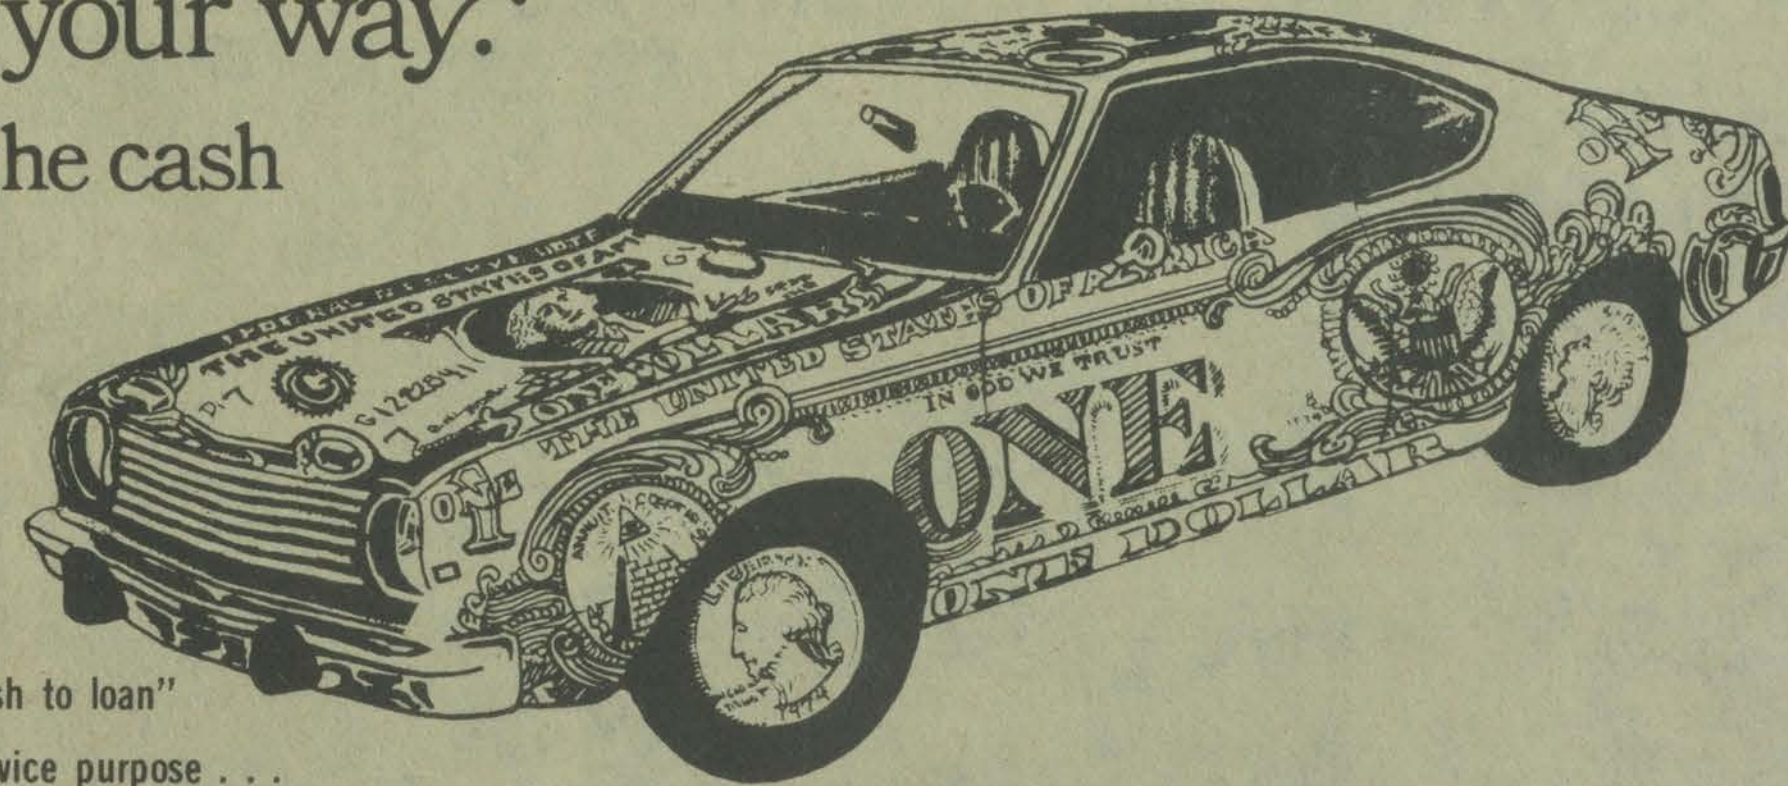

There have been a lot of changes in comfort systems since Dave Lennox rolled out his first furnace in 1893. Now there are Lennox nifty weather machines that warm, cool, clean the air and even control the moisture in homes and buildings.

And there's a superservice organization to back them up. Just in case. Get out from under the weather with a Lennox nifty weather machine.

Going your way.
 We have the cash for that new car.

The Bank Josephine's "cash to loan" people have a specific service purpose . . . loaning you money when you need it. So, when purchasing that new car, ask your local dealer for Bank Josephine auto financing. Or, stop by The Bank Josephine's "cash to loan" department for the auto financing you require. It's nice to meet people going your way!
