Grand Jurors To Investigate 2 More Slayings

The Floyd circuit court began its September criminal term Monday morning with five murder cases on its docket and two others ready for grand jury action. It is the heaviest murder docket here in years.

One of the slayings which the grand jury will investigate is that of Ollie James Conley, uncle of Circuit Judge Hollie Conley, who was shot to death recently on Salt Lick Creek. James and Otis Gibson, brothers, were arrested in the slaying.

The second such case arises from the death May 21 of Carlos James (Dicky) Hall, of a bullet wound. His brother-in-law, Greenbury Tackett, was later jailed on a murder warrant, and his common-law wife, Mary Ireton, was held to $1000 bond as a material witness.

The two-year-old murder of James Chaffin on Arkansas Creek may also be investigated.

The grand jury of 11 men and one woman has as its foreman Phillip E. Stumbo, Harold insurance man.

During his instructions to the grand jury, Judge Conley again cited the wholesale clutter that exists in the county through wilful or negligent littering of roads and countryside with refuse and the pollution of streams. He spoke of the efforts of the fiscal court to find acceptable landfill sites for solid waste disposal and asked County Judge Henry Stumbo to report on what has been achieved.

Judge Stumbo said one landfill location on Turkey Creek has been procured two soil tests made and engineering work completed, but that the court is still awaiting state and federal approval. "As soon as the weather dries up we're going to open that landfill, whether we have approval or not," Judge Stumbo said.

Judge Conley expressed his approval of that decision. He told the grand jury

This Town... That World

You might say that those who had their "last fling" at summer vacation on Labor Day were, the weather being what it was, taking the last plunge.

GONE UNDERGROUND?

I keep wondering what happened to that club Watt Hale reported as once flourishing in West Prestonsburg. It was in the days before Women's Lib and was a stab by a group of husbands at making apron strings something less confining than a noose. It was called the Amalgamated Sons of Independence, or something of the sort. But I may be trying to revive what you might call a dead hoss. I seem to recall that the organization went into sort of a decline after some of the boys caught the president of the club doing the wife's dishes.

SICK, SICK

One of the "sick" jokes heard hereabouts relates to the man who had "lost" two wives under mysterious circumstances. The first, he explained, died after eating poison mushrooms. When the second died of a gunshot wound there were those who inquired about what had happened.

"She wouldn't eat her mushrooms," the husband patiently explained.

LAST OF THE HEROES?

You know, it's just possible the Age of Heroes is past. This thought came to me when I heard last week that Charles Lindbergh, "the Lone Eagle," had died. Many youngsters, these days, may not know who Lindbergh is, or was, but we who got the sudden announcement one day, all those years ago, that this youngster had flown the Atlantic, non-stop, in a tiny wisp of an airplane remember so well the thrill to this youngster's daring and high accomplishment.

None of the astronauts have received the adulation earned and deserved by Lindy. It just can't be, ever again, I suppose. You see too much of the

Receive Strip-Mine Fees

Gov. Wendell H. Ford presents a check for $20,597.50 representing Floyd county's share of $592,965 in strip mining fees returned by the state to Kentucky's 40 coal producing counties. Accepting for Floyd county is Judge Henry Stumbo (center) and County Attorney James Allen (right). The presentation was made last Thursday.

Load Up on Permits, Is Advice by Harris

Thomas O. Harris, head of the state Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, told coal operators in a meeting here recently they would do well to "load up" on strip-mining permits before the bill now in Congress becomes law and imposes new federal requirements.

The long-delayed federal surface-mining law is not yet ready for President Ford's approval or veto. The House and Senate voted different versions of the bill and it is now before a conference committee which will attempt to iron out the differences.

Harris addressed coal operators and enforcement personnel in a series of meetings which, in addition to the one here, were held at Hazard, Middlesboro and Madisonville.

Harris' meeting here was not reported by any newspaper, but he later recounted for Livingston Taylor, of The Courier-Journal, his advice to operators. He was careful to qualify his statements about federal requirements, explaining that many details will depend upon the final form the legislation takes, once it clears the conference committee.

Harris said he told the operators that they should have enough land under state permit "to run them for awhile" because, under proposed federal legislation, "it could take six, eight, 10 months to get a permit."

Without an ample amount of land under state permit, an operator might have to shut down until a new permit could be obtained under federally required procedures, Harris said.

"It is going to be tougher to get a permit than it has been in the past," Harris said, "from the standpoint . . . of the possibility of having to have hydrologists to run water samples and geologists to do some core drilling," Harris said.

In addition, one or both of two pending bills require public advertisement of permit applications, the right of an affected party to call for a hearing and an appeal procedure.

Harris said that, under a new federal law, regulations to be prepared within 180 days by the U. S. Department of the Interior likely would supersede existing state regulations, although state personnel would continue in enforcement as long as the state's program met federal standards.

Third Offense Liquor Charge Placed vs. Two

Two persons were arrested over the past week, both on third offense liquor charges, in separate raids by county law officers.

Gordon Lee Porter, of Dwale, was charged with possession of alcoholic beverages Thursday night by Deputy Sheriffs Doug Lewis, Green Slone, and Linzie Hunt. The deputies recovered 31 half-pints whiskey and 30 cans of beer from Porter's 1973 Chevrolet which was also confiscated.

Deputies Doug Lewis, Green Slone, Ray Reynolds, Denver Newsome, Linzie Hunt and Roland Howell arrested Cora Slone after a search of her home near Sugar Loaf, Friday night, netted the officers 10 pints and six fifths of whiskey. Booked on charges of possession of marijuana Friday night were David George and Harris Howard, III, both of Prestonsburg. City Policeman Keith Lawson and Deputy Sheriffs Doug Lewis and Linzie Hunt first arrested Howard and George on charges of drunk driving and public drunk, respectively, and upon inspection of the car found the marijuana and a variety of alcoholic beverages.

Including the above offenses and a variety of others, the Labor Day week-end proved to be what one deputy described as "the busiest I've ever seen," with a total of 59 persons being booked at the county jail between Friday and Sunday. Thirty-nine were jailed on Saturday alone.

Others arrested, charges against each and arresting officers follow:

1-Party Service To All Planned, Gearheart Says

When its million-dollar-plus development and improvement program is completed within the next year, the Harold Telephone Company will have 4,000 or more subscribers and it will become the first commercial independent telephone system in Kentucky to have one-party service for every customer.

This announcement was made Monday by Paul R. Gearheart, president of the company, after the Rural Telephone Bank, Washington, D. C., had made a loan of $1,335,600 to the Harold firm.

Announcing the loan, Senator Marlow W. Cook said it will finance facilities to connect 971 additional subscribers, construct 58 miles of new line, build additions to the central offices at the Wheelwright and Harold exchanges, upgrade service to all one-party lines and provide new toll facilities.

Mr. Gearheart said there is involved in the one-party service "a break for the little fellow up the creeks" that has been a dream of his for years. This benefit will accrue, he said, from the fact that there will be no mileage charge to the subscriber living farther away from the exchange. In the past, the charge to the subscriber who lives in isolated head-of-the-creek sections has uniformly been higher than to those nearer the telephone exchanges.

In fact, he said, most of the 58 miles of new line will be to take phone service into

Riding Gear Favorite Target Of Area Thieves

When two men and a woman were frightened away from the garage of a Jenny's Creek man from which they had taken riding equipment last Friday night the investigation of a series of such thefts may have been favored by a break.

Sheriff Joe W. Lewis said Lowell Pelphrey, of the Jenny's Creek section of this county, told him three unidentified persons had stacked two saddles, two bridles and six halters outside his garage. The appearance of neighbors set them to flight.

An Ivyton man later appeared at an Abbott Creek home and said he had been injured in an auto wreck. He later was reported in a Lexington hospital with a skull fracture. No connection has been made, however, between his injury and the attempted theft.

Biggest haul in riding equipment made by thieves in the area was from the Big Sandy Valley Stables, Paintsville, which is owned by Mrs. Burl Wells Spurlock, of Prestonsburg. An estimated $2600 worth of saddles, bridles, halters and training equipment was stolen from the stables, the night of Aug. 21.

Also stolen recently were saddles from the premises of Henry B. Wright at Cliff and Virgil Smith at Allen.

Sheriff Lewis Has Fixed Ideas About Making Enforcement Work; Says Action, Not Talk, Is Needed

Now in his 15th year as a peace officer,—five as sheriff of this county and 10 as a deputy on the staffs of three of his predecessors in the office,—Sheriff Joe W. Lewis has some fixed ideas about how to make law-enforcement a fact.

"Threats are no good, it takes action, and it's got to apply to all," he said.

In the "action department" he and his deputies last week made their 73rd arrest on a liquor charge since he began his second term as sheriff last Jan. 1. He also has 14 cars impounded, hopefully for sale, after liquor raids. One such vehicle has already been advertised for sale, and suit to sell five in all has been filed.

And when the grand jury convened here Tuesday Sheriff Lewis was ready with evidence to submit, seeking the indictment of 13 persons on third-offense charges of possessing intoxicating beverages for the purpose of sale. (The penalty upon conviction on a third-offense county may carry a one-year penitentiary term.)

When he ran for office last year, Sheriff

Lewis was told by several "in the business"—the liquor traffic—that they would vote for him. Asked how he could hold the friendship of those whom he had raided and arrested, he expressed the belief that "it's because they know there's nothing personal about it, that I'm simply doing my duty and that I treat them, every one, alike."

Then he asked a question: "Do you think it's right to put some old country boy in jail and let him stay in and turn somebody else loose; simply because he's a friend, or wears better clothes?"

The sheriff has another idea: If more of the Crime Council money was spent on actual police work instead of gadgets, more law-enforcement would result.

He also said that possibly the greatest weapon against bootlegging is never used. "If the courts would get tough and sell the buildings this liquor is kept in, you would be able to tell the difference, right quick," he said.

Highlands Folk Fest Stresses Heritage in Music, Dance, Crafts

True to this year's theme of "Preserving the Old World heritage in folk music and dance," the ninth annual Highlands Folk Festival, held here Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Jenny Wiley State Park amphitheatre, gave audiences a varied look at the forms in which music and dance, brought to this section primarily from the British Isles, have been preserved.

Secular music, including ballads, mountain dances, dulcimer players, oldtime string bands, and a host of banjo pickers, fiddlers and guitar players, was featured on Friday and Saturday nights' performances.

A poets' corner which was held Saturday afternoon featured a larger number of contributors than ever before, as well as the largest attendance yet for this part of the festival. Works by local artists and craftsmen were also featured.

Sunday afternoon's performance was dedicated to the traditional religious music of the Southern Highlands and included musical forms ranging from "modal" tunes related to the Gregorian Chant to modern choral church music.

Floyd Junkyard Named in Action

The Kentucky Department of Transportation last Friday filed suit in the Floyd circuit court asking an injunction against Milt Hunt and Clifford Coleman to require them to remove junked vehicles in their junkyard a distance of at least 2,000 feet from any road or, as an alternative, to screen their junkyard from the view of passing motorists.

The junkyard is located on old US 23, 200 yards south of Stanville, and is operating without a permit, the department alleges.

The petition alleges that defendants have been advised by agents of the department either to move the junked vehicles or to screen the yard. Defendants have refused to do either, it is claimed.

Holiday Campers Defy the Weather

Although Labor Day began with rain, many "last fling" vacationers defied the weather. Photo shows part of the sizeable village of campers in the new Goble Branch camping area of Jenny Wiley State Park, morning of the holiday. By afternoon the grounds were pretty well deserted.

Recalls Earlier Life, Music Here

The following account was written by Sarah Gertrude Knott, founder of the National Folk Festival, concerning a visit to Prestonsburg in the Depression years of the thirties. Staying with long-time friend and fellow folk music collector, Mrs. Edith Fitzpatrick James, Mrs. Knott visited many of the local men whom she had heard performing in Washington, D. C.

It was the opening day of court in Prestonsburg, Kentucky, a most important day for the people of this little mountain town and the country folks from miles around. It was also horse and mule-tending day. Men stood in small groups around their animals trying to strike a bargain with neighbors. The streets and sidewalks were a beehive of activity.

I had arrived the night before from Washington, D. C., to meet old friends who had brought their religious songs to several National Folk Festivals. We were to start the day by hearing some of the songs as they are used at court opening.

When we reached the courthouse, people were pouring in, and it was not long before every seat was filled and there was no standing room left.

After the ordinary procedure of opening court, Judge John Caudill took over, and said: "Brother Stratton, will you lead us in prayer?" There followed the impassioned prayer of a Primitive Baptist preacher, with a fervor and style that cannot be set down on paper. No conventional prayer was this! On his knees he sought the guidance of the Lord for those who had sinned against Him and had broken the laws of the community. He arose to lead, "O Turn Ye," an old modal tune, which seemed a very appropriate admonition to those who had broken the law. "When Jesus Christ Was Here Below," a song also used for the foot-washing ceremonies of the Primitive Baptist followed. Without these two songs, court in Prestonsburg seldom opens.

When the Judge gave his instructions to the jury, he did not confine himself merely to the laws laid down in the statute book, but emphasized especially the higher, divine laws as laid down in the Bible. He stressed the sin of killing, of drinking liquor, dancing, fighting, and other things, which he did not think led to good citizenship or Christian living. It was evident that here in Prestonsburg the lines were clearly drawn between the God-fearing and the sinful.

Suddenly, while I was pondering on the sinfulness of the world, the Judge interrupted the procedure to say: "We have a guest today, the Director of the National Folk Festival, in which we are all interested. Some of our people usually take part. We'll take time out now to hear Miss Knott give us the story firsthand." Tom had tipped the Judge off that I was there. Surprised, I hesitatingly got up, wondering what to say. "Come on up here by me," said the Judge; and I took my place in the jury box. This was my first experience in being called before court, and for a time I could find no words. I knew that this was neither the proper time nor place to recommend the square dance as a leisure-time activity. Even square dancing evidently would not be "wholesome" recreation to His Honor, who had known many a fight and much trouble to come from dances where crowds came together, and drinking was the common occurrence on these occasions. I understood some of the reasons behind the old prejudice of dancing as never before.

My tale told, the Judge announced that I would be at Edith and Tom's and that I wanted to meet the singers. No sooner had we got back to the house than they began to appear on the scene. Some of them had come in from their mountain homes, but most of them were ministers or members of the Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, and Holiness Churches in Prestonsburg.

I had heard a number of the songs on festival programs; but as I heard them again, sung around the log fire in Edith's living room with only the singers present, I knew that I had missed something of the real essence and beauty of the songs when I had heard them sung from a city stage. There could be no mistake that the songs meant much to the singers. They were not merely singing them for me. Each song was a religious experience to the singers.

Even songs were divided into the sinful and the non-sinful class in Prestonsburg. The "ballets" were in the sinful class. Sam Lafferty's daughter sang them, but he did not. "They hurt my feelings," he said, "but the religious songs, they give me liberty and freedom when I have some kind of trouble." Although Albert Hall, who called himself a "sinner-man," was not sure it was right, he admitted that he sang the "ballets." The religious songs, however, meant most to him. "I can be broken-hearted," he said, "and get out in the hills with one of the old songs, and the echoes coming back, ease me."

I asked to hear the "funeralizin' songs," which I had heard were sung at the funerals often held a year or two after death in Kentucky mountains. They had never heard of the word "funeralizin'," but called the songs used on these occasions, "memorial" songs. Sometimes the funerals are regularly held in the mountains, as they are in most places, but it is not an unusual thing for them to be held a year or more later. This is largely, a matter of convenience. In the old days, and even yet, in some sections the roads are so bad in winter time that it is impractical for friends to attend the funeral, if held at the time of death. Then perhaps no minister is available, and so, although the body is buried, the funeral is delayed. Sam's son had died two years before, and the funeral had not yet been held. "We just didn't want the funeral then," he said.

Even though funeral services are held immediately after death, memorial services are often observed for years afterward. Theodore Holbrook had recently attended the memorial service for his grandfather, which had been held on the fourth of July for forty-five years.

Although most of the religious songs might be used on any religious occasion, certain ones have their special use for special occasions. Theodore sang "Travelin' to the Graveyard," commonly sung as the casket is carried to its final resting place. As he started the song, he closed his eyes, spoke each line of the first verse, and the others joined in with him. As he came to the second verse, he hesitated, and said: "I can't think of the second verse until I get it, then the words will come like a crack of thunder, like a grasshopper jump." Most of these songs had never appeared in a book; or if they had, usually there were only the words with no music. They sang them as they had been handed down traditionally from generation to generation since pioneers cut their way through the wildernesses and made their homes in the Kentucky mountains.

The day before, Sam's brother had been buried; and at the service, a girl had sung, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." Sam did not like the song. It was not the "feeling kind," he thought, so he chose and led one which better expressed the way he felt, "Lord, I Can't Keep From Crying," and "Lord, I Wonder If My Mother Will Be On That Train." In the latter song the singers joined in as each new verse was sung, until every member of the family, father, mother, brother, and sister were added.

Before we knew it, the sun was sinking behind the mountains that overlook Prestonsburg. We had heard "O Death"; "My Body's Goin' To Moulder In The Clay"; "Long Time Travelin'"; "The Dear Old Village Churchyard"; "O Brother, Will You Meet Me?"; "I Wonder What They're Doin' Up In Heaven Today"; "My Head and Stay Has Been Called Away." The closing song was "When Jesus Christ Was Here Below," which we had heard at opening of court that day.

Of Bridges and Mountains

If Floyd county ever had a covered bridge, its history is buried in antiquity and the bridge itself has long since passed from the scene. If the county had such a monument to the past, and if it were threatened as are those yet standing in other Kentucky counties, we would lead the drive to preserve them.

Why? What good are they? These are questions that may be heard, particularly at this time when values are too often gauged in dollars and cents. Just as a visitor to Prestonsburg recently asked "what good" was a hillside which we had said should not be mutilated or destroyed.

Is only a bridge of concrete and steel and four lanes, and it crowded with traffic, of any worth? Is only land worthwhile that is level and can be the site of houses and factories and paved streets and jammed with frustrated people? Pardon the silly questions.

Life is precious and so are the things that mean a way of life. Those who cannot see the value of a covered bridge because it is not usable or of a mountain because it simply stands there would shoot down the evening star if they thought it was of no cash value.

Mall Idea Deserves Consideration

The Times does not presume to tell Prestonsburg business men what they can or cannot do, but it does not hesitate to point out that, if they can, they should make a serious effort to join in the plan for a mall, or semi-mall, in the uptown business district.

The idea was first suggested, a few years ago, by the late Dr. George P. Archer, then mayor of Prestonsburg. His idea was, as it now is that of present planners, to make the shopping center of the town attractive, pleasant and inviting and thus protect it from the threat of a suburban shopping center.

The "inner city" of most municipalities is suffering, these days. In the larger cities muggers and pickpockets make it unattractive. In others, time and decay have taken their toll. So the shopper seeks and finds, outside this inner city, new, quiet, attractive surroundings and comparative safety.

Inviting, too, is the planners' concept of a pedestrian parkway along the riverfront from Court street to Prestonsburg High School. The proposed cleanup of the river banks, the parkway where pedestrians and bicyclists would have no competition from motor traffic—all this makes a pleasant picture, even if it is one that may never get off the easel or drawing board.

Water Hearing Set Sept. 6

The Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection has scheduled a public hearing Friday on new requirements for permits to withdraw water from state streams and rivers.

The regulations were submitted to the Legislative Research Commission and published in the new state administrative register in accordance with a 1974 law requiring publication of all new and existing standards before July, 1975. Although the legislation does not require a hearing unless one is requested from outside the administrative agency, the department announced its intentions to hold the water hearing "since the new policy is a result of an amendment to the water resources law passed by the 1974 Legislature."

The water withdrawal regulations were revised to "give the Water Resources Division an up-dated, continuing source of data on the amount of water being used by major businesses and industries," according to Dave Rosenbaum of the Water Resources Division. Rosenbaum said the information will be used to plan for adequate water sources.

According to the proposed regulations, water withdrawal permits will be necessary when a user's "average withdrawal rate is more than 10,000 gallons per day," or when irregular usage is determined to "represent a significant portion of the available water supply."

In addition to permits, users also will be required to record their withdrawal rate and file regular reports to the Water Resources Division.

The hearing on the water regulations will be at 2 p.m. in the auditorium of the Capital Plaza Building, Frankfort. Interested persons are invited to attend and present testimony or submit their comments in writing to the Office of the Secretary, Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, Fifth Floor, Capital Plaza Building, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

ATTEND PICNIC

The Maytown Homemakers Club attended the countywide homemakers' picnic held at Dewey Lake last Thursday. Attending from Maytown were Mesdames Imalee Spillman, Minnie Gearheart, Alda Gibson, Betty May, Trilby May, Thelma Hicks, Sandy Bradley, Helen Boyd, and three guests, Christy and Beth Ann Hewlett and Kelly Elaine Carter, all of Lexington.

Adkins-Counts Vows Solemnized

Miss Shirley Ann Adkins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emzie A. Adkins, of Cannonsburg, and Ricky Darrell Counts were united in marriage Aug. 17 in the Liberty Missionary Baptist Church, Princess, Ky. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Counts, of Wheelwright.

The Rev. Charles Boyd, uncle of the bride, performed the double-ring ceremony at 6:30 p.m. before an altar decorated with two arrangements of white baby's breath and pink ice carnations and branched candelabra holding lighted tapers.

A program of nuptial selections was presented by Mrs. Michael Neal, of Lexington, sister of the bride, pianist, and Mr. Larry Shannon, organist. Mrs. James Young of Lexington, soloist, sang "Annie's Song," "Sunrise, Sunset" and "Whither Thou Goest".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional floor-length gown of beau de soie in an A-line silhouette. The high-fitted band and the long, full venise lace sleeves were gathered into deep cuffs. Attached to the gown was a long chapel train of venise lace. The elbow-length veil of illusion was attached to a crown of lace. The bride carried a nosegay bouquet of pink tipped roses, pink ice carnations, and baby's breath tied with white and pink streamers.

Miss Carol June Adkins, sister of the bride, was maid of honor in a floor-length gown of peach pin-strippd voile fashioned with a small ruffle at the neck and sleeves and wide ruffle attached to the gathered skirt. She wore a white garden hat trimmed with peach satin ribbon and carried a long-stemmed pink ice carnation.

The bridesmaids, Miss Vicki Counts, sister of the bridegroom and Mrs. Larry Lester, sister of the bride, wore gowns and hats identical to those of the maid of honor. They carried long-stemmed pink ice carnations tied with pink streamers.

Misses Angela Ruth Neal and Kelly Lee Neal, nieces of the bride, were flower girls in gowns styled similar to the bridesmaids'. They wore peach satin ribbons in their hair and carried white baskets filled with rose petals.

Gary Hall, of Wheelwright, served as best man for the groom, and ushers were Julian (Jad) Deaton, of Wheelwright, and Dwight Collins, of Morehead.

Mrs. Adkins chose for her daughter's wedding a blue floor-length polyester dress, and the bridegroom's mother wore a beige floor-length dress.

Miss June Cordrey, Troy, Ohio, Mrs. David Miller and Mrs. Philip Holmes, Kenova, W. Va., assisted at the reception following the ceremony in the home of the bride's parents. Guests were registered by Mrs. Richard McCall, of Lexington, sister of the bride.

Paintsville Veteran Writes Verse During Vets Hospital Stay

Lexington, Ky. (Special)—Time spent in a hospital bed can become very boring, but Vietnam veteran Mike O'Bryant has found good use for his spare time. During his eight-month stay at the Cooper Drive division of the Veterans Administration hospital here, O'Bryant has written what amounts to more than three books of poetry.

He submitted several of his poems to Veterans Voices Magazine, a special nationwide publication featuring the writings of hospitalized veterans. One of his poems has already been printed and more are slated for publication soon.

A native of Paintsville, O'Bryant began writing poetry in high school as a hobby and has continued doing it "just for fun." He says he enjoys writing about almost everything. "Just give me a topic and I'll write you a poem," he said.

O'Bryant, who served as an army paratrooper for three years and was stationed in Fort Campbell, Ky., and in Vietnam, has been discharged from in-patient status at the hospital. He says he plans to continue with his writing because "it is a source of relaxation for me."

Letters To the Editor

While it is the job of this agency to write news stories for your newspaper and others, every once in a while a project or program comes along which requires the personal touch—or one which is so deserving that it should be handled on the spot. Such a case is at hand.

The Kentucky Library for the Blind and Physically Handicapped, an agency of the Kentucky Education Department has available to Kentuckians who cannot see or who cannot hold a book comfortably library services such as talking book records, cassettes, and open reel tape recordings of books and with them machines on which they can be played. They are mailed to the person.

There is no charge, and the machine is issued to the person for as long as he is eligible to use it. Persons with either a permanent or a temporary handicap can obtain more information by calling 1-800-372-2968, a toll-free number.

It is my hope that you will print this letter, so that those reading it who may have a blind or handicapped friend or relative may make them aware of this free service and thereby ease some of the burden for thousands of Kentuckians.

SEX HORMONES MAY HELP IN UNBLOCKING LUNGS

Female sex hormones may help treat some kinds of lung diseases. In men as well as women.

Dr. Henry Yeager—assistant professor medicine at Georgetown University in Washington, D. C.—is investigating the effects of female hormones on mucous membranes in the respiratory tract. Although results are inconclusive as yet, there is some evidence that the hormones can help change membranes that function abnormally in patients who have such diseases as bronchitis and asthma. Dr. Yeager's research is supported by a grant from the American Lung Association.

Consumer Comments

By ED W. HANCOCK
(Attorney General)

One of the most commonly used—and often abused—forms of bargain advertising is to quote a former price offered by a merchant and to claim that the sale price is a substantial reduction from the former selling price. Although the majority of businessmen are honest and reliable, it is important to be aware that some former prices—sometimes termed "was", "regular", or "usually" prices—may be fictitious.

A "was" price is fictitious if it is an artificial, inflated price which has been established for the purpose of enabling the seller subsequently to offer a large reduction. Such fictitious pricing is false, misleading, and deceptive, and contrary to the Kentucky Consumer Protection Act.

The Federal Trade Commission has established guidelines for former price comparisons which require that a former price must be the actual, good faith price at which the article was offered to the public on a regular basis for a reasonably substantial period of time.

A merchant is prohibited from advertising a former price for an article unless the article was in fact offered at that price, in the recent past and in the regular course of business. It is a fictitious price comparison if the former price was only offered at some remote period in the past, the price was not offered openly to the public, or the price was not maintained for a reasonable length of time.

While a sale price of $150 on an article formerly sold for $300 may indicate a terrific bargain, the consumer should question and investigate any advertisements which claim extraordinarily high former prices. A simple method of testing such sales is to compare ordinary prices for the same item in other stores or to request verification of former price from the store manager.

If a consumer has reason to believe that fictitious prices are being used by a merchant, he should contact this office. For additional information regarding these or other consumer protection laws, Kentucky residents may write the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, Room 34, Capitol, Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or call toll-free on the consumer hotline 1-800-372-2960.

County Projects Slated To Start This Fiscal Year

The Big Sandy Resource Conservation and Development Council's project plan is expected to reach the operational phase by December 1, it was said recently by Ollie J. Arnett, Council chairman.

Project sponsors of each of the five counties in the project area—Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin and Pike—have submitted one measure to be begun this fiscal year. Floyd county has a land drainage measure in Prestonsburg. Johnson county has planned a flood protection project at the Porter Elementary School, near Blockhouse Bottom; Magoffin, a lake construction for community water supply, fish and wildlife, recreation and flood prevention; Martin county, a water-based recreation complex, and Pike has road-bank stabilization and water-based recreation measures.

New measures may be added to the plan, as desired and needed. The project council is composed of one representative from each project sponsor, plus one at-large member from Martin county. The sponsors are the fiscal courts of each participating county, the conservation districts of each county and the city governments of Prestonsburg, Paintsville, Pikeville and Salyersville. The Martin county at-large member represents the Inez area.

W. H. Dempsey is project coordinator. Members of the Council are Ollie J. Arnett, Salyersville, chairman; James T. Newman, Paintsville, vice-chairman; H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr., Prestonsburg, secretary, and Dr. W. C. Hambley, Pikeville, treasurer. Mrs. Roslyn H. Burchett, of Prestonsburg, project clerk, has been assigned to fulltime status by the Soil Conservation Service.

that it should investigate littering and pollution reports and, if the evidence warrants, make indictments.

The jury instructions included a reminder that most major crime "goes back to whiskey," and that the liquor traffic should be investigated. Judge Conley suggested that indictments should not be voted "for the mere sake of making an indictment" but that it should indict in all cases where evidence indicated the accused should answer to justice.

A number of those summoned for jury duty failed to appear. Addressing the courtroom gathering, Judge Conley said, "Jury duty has been shirked almost to the point where we have to excuse nobody except for sickness. If the people refuse to become involved, the day could come when the jury system might be abolished and trials held by a panel of judges. This could be bad."

Before the grand jury began its work Tuesday the court docket had 90 cases listed for trial this month. Murder trials on the docket are:

Robert Sykes, charged with the murder of Mrs. Boone Deskins in Pike county, transferred here on change of venue for trial Sept. 23; John Martin, charged in the slayings of Deputy Sheriff Lawrence Conley and James Clayton Conley, trial set Sept. 10 but a continuance expected (trial of Eddie Jones in the same slayings has been transferred to the Pike circuit court); Richard Tackett, accused of the murder of Claude Hamilton, trial set Sept. 16; Carlos Johnson, charged with the slaying of Roy Dean Ray, and William Howard Nelson, who was named in a murder indictment for the slaying of his sister, both trials set Sept. 18.

preparations, the take-off, the flight, hear too much. By the time the boys on TV get through with you, even a stunt such as walking on the moon has lost some of its mystery and glamor.

Or is it I who doesn't know a real hero, any more? Evel Knievel, for instance, leaves me cold. But I insist that if you'd put Christopher Columbus on TV and have him standing there on the deck, sailing into uncharted seas, his locks streaming behind him in the wind while declaiming Joaquin Miller to beat the band—I still say, the tube would spoil the show for me.

Installs New Radio Unit

A technician installs one of two new mobile radio units received recently by the Sheriff's department. An additional mobile unit and two walkie-talkies were purchased for use by County Detective Sam Hale and four walkie-talkie units were received by Prestonsburg police. The new, two-channel radios which are replacing the older, single-channel units, allow police vehicles to communicate directly with each other rather than having to relay all communications through the main unit in the Sheriff's office.

the heads of the creeks. These lines will be in the Mud Creek, Prater Creek and Left Beaver areas, and some will be in Pike county.

Both the Harold and Wheelwright office buildings will be doubled in capacity to accommodate additional equipment.

The hope long entertained by Gearheart that toll-free service can be made available from the Harold exchange to all parts of the county, and vice versa, apparently cannot be realized, because it is now impossible to get the conventional equipment necessary for such service. So the telephone executive has devised an optional calling plan in which South Central Bell reportedly concurs. This plan gives the Harold Telephone Company subscriber the option of contracting for 60 minutes per month of toll-free service to any point in the county for a flat charge of $3.35. Such calls may be placed, and time from 7 p.m. to 5 a.m. Or for the same service at any hour the charge will be $5.35 per month.

Engineering work in preparation for the proposed improvements began about 18 months ago, it was said. Construction is expected to begin within 90 days.

Growth of the Harold Telephone Company since it began operation in 1953 is one of the success stories of the area. At that time its predecessor served less than 100 subscribers and was mainly a neighborhood operation. The company's development has extended approximately 200 miles of line into Hurricane Creek and other nearby areas of Pike county, and into the Mud Creek, Prater Creek and Left Beaver sections of this county.

Mr. Gearheart credits the coal boom with much of his firm's recent growth. "Over a two-week period recently we had at least one new application a day for telephone service from a coal company," he said.

Harris said it is not clear how long previously obtained state permits could remain in effect, but possibly as long as 18 months. During this period, although operators probably would not have to reapply for a permit under federal rules, they would be required to follow federal requirements concerning mining methods and reclamation, Harris said.

One of the state laws which apparently will be superseded is the so-called "40 per cent overburden" bill, passed after considerable hassling by the 1974 legislature.

The bill, to take effect July 1, 1975, would limit to 40 per cent the amount of earth and rocks pushed over the outer slope in mountainous strip mining.

Harris said that many operators already have ordered expensive earth-moving equipment in order to comply with the bill and that, under the proposed federal legislation, "they haven't wasted their money."

"They'll need that equipment," Harris said. "The federal government conceivably could stop damn near everything from going over the out-slope."

The purpose of the membership tea is to acquaint young women between the ages of 18 and 35 with the aims of the club, which is a member of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs. Membership in the club is open to all young women who are interested in becoming involved in community service and in helping others.

The membership committee is composed of Mrs. Kenneth Brown, chairman, Mrs. David P. Allen, Mrs. James R. Allen, Mrs. William W. Hall, Mrs. Charles Johnson, Miss Earlene Spears, Mrs. Edward Radjunas, Mrs. Tom Rose, Miss Rita Campbell and Mrs. Gene Stanley.

The executive board of the club met August 26 at the Floyd County Library, with Mrs. David P. Allen presiding. The purpose of the session was to plan the club's membership tea, the budget and arrange plans-of-work for presentation to the club membership. This was the third such work session of the board, which is readying activities for the first meeting of club year, September 19.

Mrs. Kenneth Brown, membership chairman, spoke briefly to board members and announced the total membership goal had been set at 22. She requested all clubwomen to help secure quality prospective members for the organization.

Those attending the work session were Mrs. David P. Allen, Mrs. James R. Allen, Mrs. William W. Hall, Mrs. Charles Johnson, Miss Earlene Spears, Miss Edward Radjunas, Mrs. Tom Rose, and special guest, Mrs. Kenneth Brown.

Kentucky Road Safety Record For Half-Year Is Praised

A significant reduction in the number of traffic deaths reported in Kentucky for the first half of 1974 has earned the state a special letter of commendation from the National Safety Council. In a letter to Gov. Wendell H. Ford, NSC President Vincent L. Tofany wrote that while traffic deaths are down in many states this year, Kentucky has bettered the average national rate of reduction by nine per cent. Nationally, 23 per cent fewer traffic fatalities have been reported over the first six months of this year. In Kentucky, however, the rate of reduction for that period was 32 per cent. Tofany said, "... we feel that a state which is able to reduce its traffic (death) toll more than the national average and maintains a greater level of reduction is putting forth an additional safety effort and manifesting a high degree of concern for the welfare of its citizens." "We commend Kentucky for its concern with the traffic accident problem and its efforts to solve it," he said. As of June 30, the state's traffic death toll stood at 356 as compared with 537 on the same date a year ago.

According to State Police Commissioner Ron L. Johnson, Kentucky began the year with fewer road deaths largely because the gasoline shortage forced many motorists to remain closer home.

The volume of traffic on Kentucky highways has returned to normal or near-normal levels. The 55 mile-an-hour speed law, ordered into effect last March 1, has helped prevent any sudden surge in highway deaths during the traditionally "high-travel" summer months, he said.

However, speeding will continue to be somewhat of a problem, he said, "since there always is a certain percentage of motorists who never slow down."

Johnson noted that state police speeding arrests reported for the first half of 1974 totaled 45,700 as compared with 32,000 over the same period in 1973. Accident investigations by state police, over the same period, however, were down from 13,438 in 1973 to 11,028.

Martin P.-T.A. Meet First of New Year

Martin, Ky.—Parents and teachers assembled recently in the Martin Elementary School auditorium to participate in the first Martin PTA meeting of the 1974-'75 school year. Guests for the evening included Mrs. Edith Maddox, first vice-president of the Kentucky Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Mrs. Helen Adkins, who serves the organization as fourth vice-president. Both Mrs. Maddox and Mrs. Adkins were present to assist members in settling points of dispute concerning the PTA by-laws and Robert's Rules of Order.

"Your by-laws always supersede the Robert's Rules of Order," Mrs. Maddox told the group. She pointed out the official role of any PTA organization. "The PTA serves as . . . a common ground for communication and cooperative efforts to benefit the students," she said, urging that any PTA organization keep its objectives in view and work only towards the attainment of these goals.

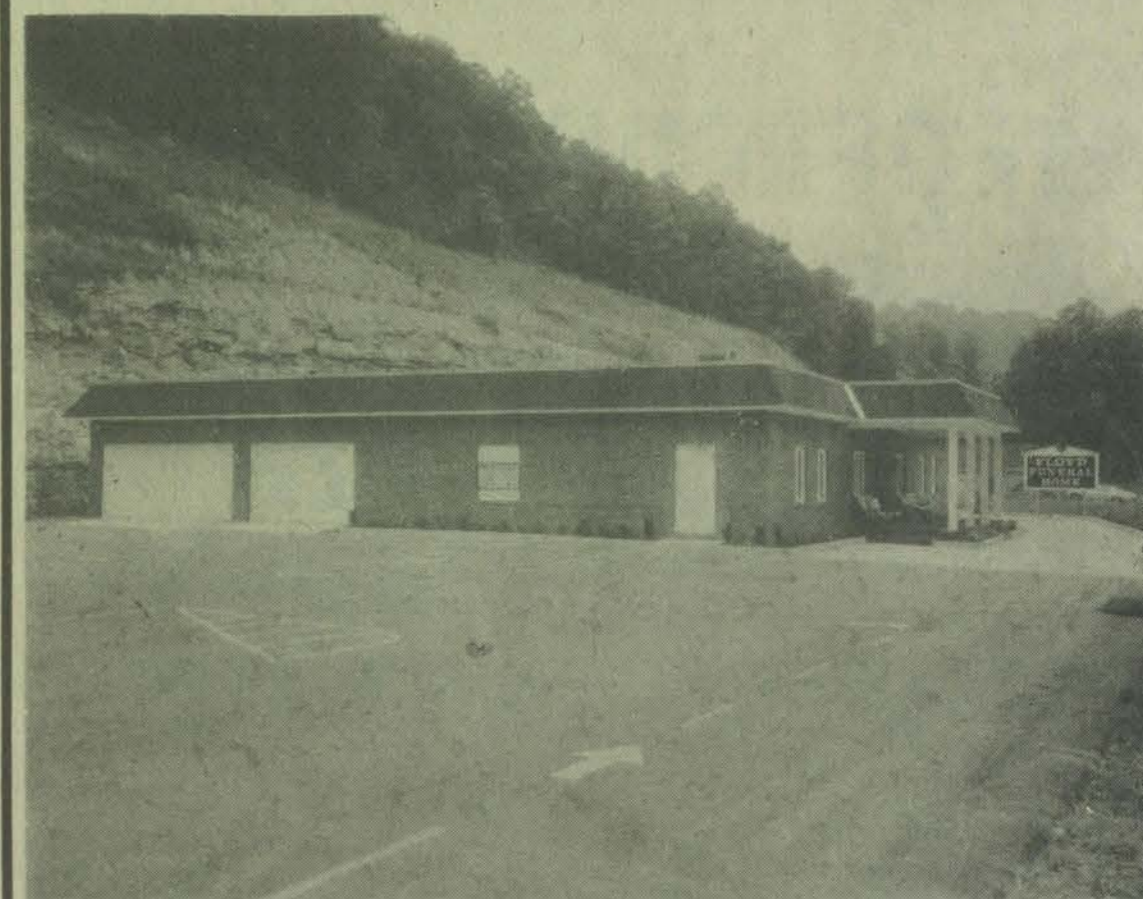

A plan of work for the 1974-'75 school year was presented to the general membership for approval. The plan of work, which was adopted with minor revisions, included reading promotion, health and hygiene projects, and PTA-sponsored clothing assistance, as well as projects to supplement the school's supply of teaching aids.

Martin PTA President J. O. Dingus announced that the PTA will meet on the fourth Monday of each month.

Why Vote for Donnie Lafferty???

School Board District 2

Because his EXPERIENCE with Martin School has made him the BEST QUALIFIED to deal with the spreading tentacles of a corrupt school administration, and because he has learned the answers to the following questions, and wants only to work for a solution to our educational problems.

1. How and why Floyd County preachers have been denied invitations to address PTA, by school principals and teachers?
2. Why the Superintendent of Floyd County Schools wishes to kill a PTA paper dedicated to informing the people.
3. What is a state "Hatchet Man", who he works under, and what his duties are in regard to school board elections?
4. Why employees of the Commonwealth of Kentucky and the Floyd County Board of Education seldom ever speak out against the tyranny in the Floyd County system, and what can happen to them if they do?
5. Why, in this election year, the Floyd County Board of Education suddenly developed the need for a 2nd Assistant Superintendent, at an exorbitant expense to the taxpayers?

If you are shocked by these questions, support and vote for my brother-in-law, Donald L. Lafferty. He is the people's candidate and our way to say NO to the POWER HUNGRY POLITICIANS who would continue robbing our children of quality education.

Wallace Appointed Parole Board Head

Grady A. Wallace, one of the best-known of Eastern Kentucky athletes, has been appointed director of the South Carolina Probation, Pardon and Parole Board, effective July 26.

A son of Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Wallace, of Stanville, he was an outstanding player on the Pikeville Junior College basketball team, earning a scholarship to play at the University of South Carolina in 1955. In his two years at S. C., he was selected to several All-American teams and was the nation's top-scorer in 1957. He has been inducted to the University of South Carolina Athletic Hall of Fame.

A member of the South Carolina Probation, Pardon and Parole Board for the past 14 years, he was training officer for the department at the time of his appointment as director.

For nine years, after working hours, he coached basketball at Cardinal Newman High School in Columbia. During that time his team won several conference championships and two state titles.

Wallace lives in Columbia, S. C. with his wife, the former Janet Boney, of Columbia, and their two children, Leigh Ann and Thomas.

Opinions From the Office Of the Attorney General

In response to police Sergeant Guy Kerfoot, of Elizabethtown, the Attorney General's office says that an ambulance is still an emergency vehicle when operated without its siren. An ambulance transporting a heart patient and proceeding without its siren for the benefit of the patient, should reduce its speed especially in an intersection.

In answer to Leo E. Brauer, of Paris, the Attorney General's office says that a school board member must be a voter from the district in which he serves. If he moves from that district, his office shall without further action be vacant. He will continue as a de facto member of the board of education until he either resigns or is removed by judgement of a court. Until then all of his acts as a board member shall be valid.

Donald L. Smalley, of Louisville, was advised by the Attorney General's office says the Jefferson county elevator inspector may continue his functions under local regulations provided he and the county government observe the requirements of the state laws.

Fills Rail Commission Vacancy

In ceremonies at the office of Mrs. Frances Jones Mills, clerk of the Court of Appeals, John Manning, of Louisville, received the constitutional oath upon appointment by Governor Wendell Ford to fill the unexpired term of Chester L. Riggsby as Railroad Commissioner from the Second railroad district. Mr. Manning's appointment will continue until November, 1975. Shown standing at Mrs. Mills' desk are, from left, Commissioner Manning, Commissioner Robert Damron, of Ivel, and Leslie Bruce, of Lexington.

Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

By JOHN WILSON

Sportsmen throughout the state have voiced concern about the status and future of Lake Cumberland, which has been well below the normal seasonal pool all summer.

Repair work at the dam has necessitated this condition, which is expected to continue for at least another year. However, fishermen have nothing to worry about and can perhaps reap some benefits from the low lake levels, according to Charles Bowers, director of the Division of Fisheries for the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

Since the water level is now lower than what is normally experienced during the winter drawdown, none of the docks or launching ramps has been adversely affected. The fish populations remain about the same, but they are now concentrated in a smaller than normal area, making them easier for the angler to find. According to the fishing reports which the Department of Fish and Wildlife compiles each week, Cumberland has been one of the consistently best producers in the state all summer.

When the lake is allowed to return to its normal summer pool, the vegetation which has grown in the exposed areas will provide both nutrients and cover for many species of fish, according to Bowers. This boost in fertility should provide some even better fishing in the future.

The U. S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Department of Fish and Wildlife are also considering plans to place "fish attractors" in suitable locations along the exposed lake bottom. These will consist of anchored brush piles which, when the lake returns to normal pool, will offer areas where crappie, bluegill, and largemouth bass will congregate.

Fishermen themselves can take advantage of the low water by doing a little exploring. With the lake currently 35 feet below seasonal pool, many features which are usually underwater are now in plain sight. Old stump beds, drop-offs, submerged trees, and other areas which attract fish can be located and remembered for future use. The angler can either mark these locations on a map or remember their location in relation to shoreline features, so that when the water comes back up, he will have a good notion of the underwater features of the lake.

The Untold Story of the Mingo Oak

What a tragedy that we humans are all too prone to forget the great things that have contributed so much to life! So the Mingo Oak died and was chopped down, and has passed into the limbo of forgotten things. It had become a living, spiritual symbol to many religious-minded people. Here in the cloisters of the mountains it had stood for nearly six centuries. It had always produced a bountiful crop of acorns each year, which had helped to feed the abundant wild life of the region.

Oldtimers could remember when large flocks of the famous passenger pigeons visited the oak to feast on its acorns. And here under its shade the eastern buffalo herds often lay down to chew their cuds in peace; and here under its spreading crown the wild red men often lit their campfires and smoked their pipes in peace.

That the great oak would some day fade and die before the astonished eyes of the people had never occurred to many. To most persons, the tree seemed as timeless and enduring as the mountains of its birth.

It was, moreover, a distinct shock to the people of the region when the oak's crown began to turn brown and crisp in 1938. It was a wholly unexpected thing—a tragedy that struck the beholders dumb with amazement. People began to wonder as to the cause of the tree's death. There were those who said the great oak's time had come to die; death was inevitable for all living things, no matter how great and wonderful they might be. As the writer of Proverbs says: "There is a time to be born, and there is a time to die."

There were others who had a different belief as to the cause of the oak's death. These believed that the big oak might have fallen a victim of killer smog—the deadliest killer of trees known. It takes only a small dose of this deadly smog to kill a tree; and, once a tree is attacked by it, there is no chance to save it. In the forests of the west millions of trees have been killed by smog, especially in the San Bernadino National Forest where multiplied thousands of them have been killed by smog.

Just across the low gap at the head of Trace, there had been a mountain of burning mine waste which had smoked and fumed, and for decades this had filled the air with a sulphurous, rotten-egg stench. This mine waste, consisting of inferior grades of coal, bone, slate, gob had caught on fire from spontaneous combustion and there was no known way to stop the burning. Day and night its fumes and poisonous smoke filled the sky and killed all the trees and shrubs of the surrounding region. The smog was often carried by the winds in many directions. The big oak's crown, liften high above the valley, apparently breathed in a lethal dose of the killer smoke. It had breathed in the pure mountain air for centuries, so when its leaves got a dose of the killer smog, it could not stand the shock. In a matter of a short time, it expired. This is what many local people believed; for mute evidence there were hundreds of other dead trees in the immediate region.

Some persons claimed the oak had always looked stalwart and healthy and might have lived to the age of 1,000 years, had it not been suffocated by smog.

Floyd Upward Bound Student At ALC Learns 'the Hard Way'

Pippa Passes, Ky.—Four Alice Lloyd College Upward Bound students and the College's head tutor returned last week from an unusual 10-day learning experience conducted by Murray State University at Land-Between-the-Lakes. Land-Between-the-Lakes, a 170,000 square mile National Recreation Area owned by the Tennessee Valley Authority, is located about 15 miles from Murray. Murray State uses Land-Between-the-Lakes to operate an educational program called Project Apollo. Upward Bound students from several states participate in the program. Project Apollo is intended to develop self-confidence by exposing students to primeval living conditions and by demonstrating that even the harshest conditions can be overcome through self-reliance and team effort.

Area students participating in the 10-day living-learning experience were: Debbie Madden, a sophomore at Knott County High School and daughter of Dorothy Madden, of Amburgey; David Moore, a senior at Hindman High School and son of Mr. and Mrs. David Moore, of Hindman; Denzil Smith, also a senior at Hindman High School, son of Mrs. E. Jean Smith, of Hindman; and Virgil Crum, a senior at Allen Central High School, son of Mr. and Mrs. Linzie Crum, of Wayland.

"The whole point of the program is to pit the student against nature and give him self confidence," said Carol Hughes, director of ALC's Upward Bound Program. "Results of tests given to students before and after participating in Project Apollo indicate the students come back better able to perform academically."

ALC's Head Tutor, Judy Johnson, a graduate of ALC and Berea College, went on the trip with the students and kept a journal describing her reactions to the activities.

Her journal entry following the first full day of activity provides a sense of what was to come. She writes: "I've stopped worrying about writing and observing the success of Project Apollo. My major, or perhaps only, worry is my sore body, my heavy pack and getting home alive."

Although participants worry about accidents, Apollo workers report no major injuries among the literally thousands of students participating in Project Apollo since it started over a year ago. The feeling that students have of overcoming danger helps build self-confidence, they report.

On the next day, Miss Johnson's group was to go caving. "Before I went down, I told the staff that I wanted to go home," she wrote. They took me for a walk and talked to me about setting an example for the younger members of the group. I agreed to stay, and no one has mentioned wanting to go home since.

"Then on to the cave—one of the hardest and yet most exciting activities of the trip. We entered the cave by walking through a stream with water three feet deep. The water temperature was about 50 degrees. The water ran for about a mile. We carried carbide lanterns and we had to hold on to each other because it was so muddy."

The group explored large caverns as Project staff members explained rock formations to the students. Then, according to Miss Johnson's account, "we climbed a 30 foot hill straight up with ropes and then went on from here through a place where the ceilings were about three feet from the floor for about a mile until we came to a 100 foot drop into a huge canyon. At this point we stopped, turned off all the lanterns, and observed the total darkness and sounds of the cave. The leaders talked about darkness and the sense of being blind."

The visit to the underground canyon marked the end of the cave tour. The Apollo Project staff members told the students to find their own way back using maps. While the students never actually got lost, they thought they did, and according to Miss Johnson's journal, staff members were deliberately not helpful, "people were hysterical by the time we got out," she writes.

The climax of the trip was a survival test which lasted 30 hours. According to Miss Johnson's journal, students were taken by canoe to isolated spots about three miles apart and left there with two matches, four cookies, and a poncho.

About 25 ALC Upward Bound students have gone on Project Apollo trips in the last year, and all students have found the trip beneficial, says Mrs. Hughes.

"We would like to put every Upward Bound and regular College student through the experience," she said.

Upward Bound is a federally financed program of cultural and academic enrichment for qualified high school students.

Bonanza Club Has Organizational Meet

The Bonanza Community Development Club, the first organized in this county under the 1973 Rural Development Act, met recently with Extension Specialist Bill Bridges to discuss its needs. Thirty-two members attended.

Miss Peggy Bradford, president of the Weeksbur Development Club, spoke to the group on how residents there had worked together for its improvement. Elbert Gibson and Mrs. Virgie Hurt, of Weeksbur, also contributed to the discussion.

These needs of the community were listed:

Clean up old store building for community center and other purposes, water system, sewage system, roadside clean-up, elimination of water pollution, highway improvements (including left fork of Abbott Creek blacktopping). Boy and Girl Scout troops, Homemakers Club. Young people as well as adults stressed the need for playground equipment, bathroom, athletic field, an encyclopedia for the school and T. V. cable.

A nominating committee was named, and its members are James Shepherd, temporary chairman, Bill Campbell, Abe Sparks, Billy Merritt, Tommy Hall, Johnny Clark, and Mrs. Avanel Neeley. The election of officers will be held at the next meeting, September 17, at 7 p.m., at the Bonanza Elementary School.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Delzie Boyd, who passed away two years ago today, Sept. 5, 1972.

God took him home; it was his will.

But in my heart, I love him still.

His memory is as dear today As in the hour he passed away.

I often sit and think of him when I am all alone, For memory is the only friend

That grief can call its own. In wisdom's way we spent our days.

Much comfort we did find. But he is gone. In dust he lies, And I am left behind.

SOAP, CANDLE MAKING PRACTICED NOW AT FORT BOONESBOROUGH

By Paula Alexander

Resourcefulness was the key word to survival for Fort Boonesborough's settlers when they struggled to make a home in Kentucky's unfamiliar and often hostile wilderness in 1775.

Equipped with only their own knowledge and a few tools brought with them from North Carolina, they had to "get by" on nature's storehouse. They met the challenge, pooling talents until their new life in Fort Boonesborough more than justified the effort.

All evidence of the first Boonesborough has passed from existence, but modern-day builders have re-created the fort and modern-day artisans have captured the essence of its lifestyle, as visitors will see when the replica opens to the public this month (August 1974). Once inside, they will see such demonstrations as pottery making, weaving, blacksmithing and woodcarving by costumed craftsmen.

Two "pioneers" especially exemplify the resourceful spirit of 200 years ago, although their skills are no longer vital to either comfort or necessity. Despite an avalanche of commercial products, Neil Colmer, a candlemaker from Berea, and Maxie Townsend, a Winchester soapmaker, have continued their crafts from a love of working with their hands. They are also obeying the old adage, "If you want something done right, do it yourself."

Like several Boonesborough artists, Colmer says his interest in his line of work was a detour from original goals. He explains that, although he received a degree in Spanish from Berea College, he became more involved with weaving, which he learned as part of the college's work-study program.

His success with a loom led to job with an Ohio amusement park after graduation. There he learned candlemaking from another craftsman and often did demonstrations in his place on his days off.

So what began as a sideline resulted in Colmer's being brought to Boonesborough, where he will show how the pioneers made candles when their only other illumination at night was from fires or the moon. Adhering to the theme of authenticity, Colmer said most of his demonstrations would involve the Colonial techniques of "dipping."

"Early settlers would dip the wicking in tallow repeatedly until the desired layer of wax built up for candles," Colmer said. The resulting shape was, naturally, the source of the name "taper."

The candlemaker also noted that he will occasionally use molds, a quicker method than dipping, and he will have antique candle molds for the process. Animal fat was not only used for early candles, but the settlers depended on it for their soapmaking, a familiar skill to Mrs. Townsend.

"Pioneers never wasted anything, so they would use the rind around smoked meat to give the soap weight," she said. A mixture of lye, water and the meat fat would boil for about five hours outside in a large black kettle, after which the skins would be discarded, she continued.

Mrs. Townsend has been in soap-making for 20 years. She not only "just likes to fool with it as a hobby," but several of her ancestors also practiced the craft, handing it down from one generation to another for at least 200 years.

Soap improves with age as it dries, she said, and it was often stored in smokehouses with cured meat.

Mrs. Townsend admitted that soap-making was a lengthy process compared to buying a commercial brand from the nearest market, but said she preferred her own since it was "smoother" and "good for dandruff."

She will never claim her product contains lanolin, bath oil or any added medication, but it must be successful since the recipe has survived longer than any for the ordinary supermarket soaps.

Making soap, making candles—only two of the various crafts that will live on the new "old" Fort Boonesborough when it opens August 30. Plans are for the fort to be open from 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., with an admission price of $2 for adults, 75 cents for children 12 or under, and special rates for groups of 10 or more people, student or adult.

Eye burns from common household chemicals, such as alkalis or caustic acids, can be extremely serious—in the case of aerosols, compounded by the force of impact. If chemical contact occurs, immediately flood the eye with water, recommends the Kentucky Society for the Prevention of Blindness, and continue for at least 15 minutes. Then see a doctor.

Our Fragile Earth

By DR. JERRY HOWELL
(Director of Environment Studies, Morehead State University)

Does it matter to us in the United States what happens in other countries throughout the world? Should we be concerned about mercury pollution in Japan or the problems involved in feeding the people of India and other countries of the world?

The answer is very simple—yes. We should be concerned about world environmental problems because we are all in the same "boat." Although most countries in the world are separated by oceans or political barriers, they are inescapably linked climatically and biologically. We are forced to live together and to breathe the same air and drink the same water. This is known as the "finite earth" or "spaceship earth" concept.

Several situations illustrate this concept. The exploitation of world natural resources is a case in point. When the Middle East or other areas of the world can no longer supply us with oil, we are going to be affected unless we can develop our own resources or find substitutes to quench our massive energy demands. International politics plays a major role in this example.

This scarcity of some wood construction materials, especially those of higher quality, such as California redwood or Central American mahogany, has affected lumber and paper prices in this and other countries.

The global pathways or water and air pollutants provide yet another illustration of our finite planet. Oceanic oil pollution, regardless of whether it originated from the United States, Russia, or another country, has an impact on all citizens of the world. Oil on and in the ocean has been shown to be lethal not only to seagoing birds but also to fish and shellfish. One spill off the coast of Massachusetts in 1969 killed 95 percent of the ocean life in the area. Repopulation still had not taken place nine months later. Surviving oysters were judged unfit for human consumption.

Hunger and food production problems in the rest of the world affect us more than we may realize. Starvation in many countries, whether due to poor production or inadequate distribution of food or a combination of factors, will certainly affect the United States. On our finite planet, no country is an island.

Of the annual average of 4.3 million unemployed in 1973, about three-fourths (3.3 million) were seeking full-time work; nearly all of the adult jobless men sought full-time jobs, while one of every five jobless women and one of every two teenagers wanted part-time work, according to the 1974 Manpower Report of the President.

Luxmore Becomes Faculty Member At Pike College

John Waddell, provost at Pikeville College, has announced the appointment of a Floyd countian and two others as fulltime professors and one part-time professor.

Appointed as an instructor in music was Russell S. Patterson, Jackson, Miss. native.

Ronald Moore, a native of Gatlinburg, Tennessee, was named instructor in business.

The new faculty member from Floyd county is William Paul Luxmore, who was appointed as an instructor in education. Luxmore joined the Pikeville College faculty after two years at Alice Lloyd College. He received his Master of Arts degree from Morehead State University in 1969 and his Bachelor of Science degree from Pikeville College in 1960.

Luxmore has taught in the Floyd county schools and at Morehead State University. He has been a consultant for the National Science Foundation and director of In-Service programs in nine Eastern Kentucky counties.

Kentucky's Newest Bridge

This new bridge, which opened recently near Corbin, was built by Prestonsburg contractor Joe A. Burchett, of Bush & Burchett, Inc., Frankfort, Ky., and was designed by the Nashville District, U. S. Army Corps of Engineers. The $1.1 million span crosses the Laurel River and is near Kentucky's newest lake, Laurel River Lake, which was impounded for hydropower generation and recreation.

Wildflowers Are for Gathering

By HELEN PRICE STACY

Now is the time to gather wildflowers, for their brightness will soon be gone.

These plants—they can hardly be called weeds—have names almost as colorful as their blooms.

As its name implies, queen of the meadow is a stately flower. Alongside the soft dusty rose of this statuesque Kentucky wildflower, often grows purple ironweed and goldenrod.

Though queen of the meadow (joe-pye weed) and ironweed both grow five to ten feet high, stems can be broken to match the shorter goldenrod for a handsome bouquet. Flower lovers may keep such a bouquet through the winter by giving the bloom a light coating of hair spray.

Some weeds and wildflowers are in abundance and may be picked for bouquets; other Kentucky flowers should be left growing. These include turk's cap lily and coneflowers.

Others should not be picked because their beauty fades. The beautiful cobalt blue chicory that grows on slender stems along Kentucky lanes provided a substitute coffee for Indians and early settlers and helped a clockless generation tell the time of day. As the day progressed the flower closed its petals to await another dawn.

Oldtimers still claim the common milkweed will remove warts. A few families gather certain parts of wildflowers to boil and mix into teas, poultices and salves as protection and cures for a number of ailments.

Among wildflowers to watch for during autumn trips are blue curl, pinesap, the asters (who knows the calico aster?), field daisies, bur-marigold, the goldenrods, thistles, blazing star, mistflower, cudweed, pennyroyal, false dragonhead, the lobelias, scarlet pimpernel, ginseng, pokeberry, gentian, bouncing bet, jimsonweed, morning glory, various grasses and cattails.

Throughout Kentucky's park system, many of these varieties are protected.

More than 500 Truck Owners, Drivers Named

Frankfort, Ky.—The State Transportation Department last Thursday filed suit in Pike circuit court at Pikeville in an effort to stop overweight coal trucks in that county.

The suit asks for temporary and permanent injunctions against overweight coal trucks on 14 state-maintained highways and seeks $3,059,000 in damages to the roads.

The suit names more than 500 truck owners and operators as defendants. It is the second filed by the department against overweight coal trucks.

State Transportation Secretary Billy Paxton said his department is investigating several other coal-producing counties in both Eastern and Western Kentucky for possible similar court action.

In May, the department filed a suit in Clay county against 137 owners and operators and asked for $625,000 in damages.

The authority for the suits is in a state law empowering the courts to prohibit any person from violating any of the provisions of the state statutes in relation to the operation of a motor vehicle and the public insurance law.

Paxton said the court actions are being taken in counties where local courts are not felt to be accurately responding to overweight citations.

The suit filed Thursday in Pike county charges damage has been done to Kentucky routes 881, 1469, 195, 632, 611, 1056, 468, 292, 1384, 199, 319, 1426, 1441, 1789, 2062 and 1373 by overweight coal trucks.

What To Do in September

Now comes September, the month that calls youngsters back to school, gives the workman his Labor Day, and revives once again in almost every living creature a strange yearning, a wanderlust to be up and away.

Across open fields, in the woodlands, along roadsides, and over croplands flows a brownning of vegetation—the rust of autumn. Soon the yellow glow of the goldenrod will be illuminating old weed fields, and the scarlet tapers of the cardinal flower that so impressed Daniel Boone on his first visit to Kentucky will be working their magic in the swamp. September is a good month and beautiful month, a time when the first hues of autumn begins to spread across the land.

With so many "lovely tokens" of fall to see, to enjoy, and experience, it is rather difficult to bring up the subject of work and recommend things to do in the garden, but to maintain a good existence, to have a pleasant winter, and a joyous, beautiful spring, some things need to be done in September. Here are some suggestions from Extension specialists at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Potatoes should be dug and stored away in September, apples picked, and particular care should be given to cabbage, cauliflower, celery, and other late crops. These crops should be watched carefully and sprayed when necessary to prevent late insect damage.

Daffodil and tulip bulbs should be set now and, for a more beautiful flower garden next spring, such bloomers as alyssum, Canterbury bells, candytuft, daylilies, delphiniums, fox-gloves, and peonies should be divided and replanted.

House plants that have been outside in the full sun this summer should be moved now to a location where there is heavy shade. After about four weeks in the shade—or at least a couple of weeks before frost—they can be moved indoors. However, don't move plants directly inside from a full-sun location outdoors—the shock could be fatal to them.

House plants for the winter should be started in September if possible. Cuttings may be taken from geraniums and similar bedding plants now and rooted in water or damp sand. The repotting of old plants can also be done now to good advantage.

September is also a good month to renovate the lawn. Late this month is a favorable time to de-thatch, reseed and fertilize. New lawns should be seeded by mid-September in most areas of Kentucky, but seeding can be done until the end of the month. Late September, too, when temperatures are expected to be in the 60-degree range for several days, is the best time to use herbicides for control of such perennial broadleaf weeds in the lawn as buckhorn plantain, broadleaf plantain, wild garlic, dandelion, and ground ivy.

Whether renovating an old lawn or starting a new one, the homeowner should check with his county Extension agent for recommendations as to type of grass to sow and kinds of fertilizer to use and for a copy of the UK Extension publication, "Home Lawns in Kentucky" (ID-6), which contains a wealth of information on lawn establishment and maintenance.

The Old Almanac recommends reading the 34th Psalm in September and suggests that one will do well to check the chimney for cracks that might allow a stray spark to pop out and set the house on fire. It also urges one and all to go paw-paw and wild grape hunting and to take time to enjoy the blooming of that last wildflower of the season which old-timers used to call "Farewell Summer."

This, too, is good advice. So do what must be done, but above all don't let garden chores prevent you from enjoying this month which as the poet says, holds "summer's best of weather and autumn's best of cheer."

"THOSE CRAZY EPISCOPALIANS"

THE BIBLE IS OUT OF DATE!

did they swap the bible for a prayer book?

Indeed not! From beginning to end, the Episcopal Prayer Book IS the Bible in some form or another. It's possibly the finest key available to understanding the Bible. The person who follows this book faithfully finds himself reading the New Testament twice and the Old Testament once in a year's time.

The Prayer Book is so arranged that the minister cannot depart from the Bible. He is discouraged from dealing in ideas that have no Biblical foundation... or from belaboring his congregation, over and over, with his own favorite passages.

Episcopalians are never required to accept any belief that cannot be proved from, or is not agreeable to, the teachings of Holy Scripture.

Your nearest Episcopal minister would be happy to explain why, for him and his congregation, the Bible will never be obsolete. It's all a matter of viewpoint... and there's no obligation on your part if you'd like to understand the Episcopal viewpoint.

The Jenny Wiley Reading Council will meet next Tuesday at 7 p.m. at the Porter Elementary School in Johnson county, and Joseph T. Clark, the Language Arts and Right to Read consultant for Kentucky, will be the featured speaker.

Mr. Clark has served as a teacher of English, reading and journalism in schools in Kentucky and in Florida. His topic for discussion will be, "Where It's At in Reading".

Mrs. Delphia Hicks, president of the Reading Council, told Council directors at a meeting last Thursday night that several new projects are planned for the year. These will be discussed at the Tuesday night meeting. Also, said Mrs. Hicks, plans will be made to involve Council members in some community service programs.

The Jenny Wiley Reading Council is a local affiliate of the International Reading Association, an organization devoted to improvement of reading and reading instruction.

The public is invited.

'Learning-Working' Program Discussion Slated Sept. 17-18

Cooperative education—learning which takes place as students alternate periods of study with periods of work or service away from the campus—will be the subject of a mid-September area conference in Lexington. Educators and employers will hear a panel of experts discuss successful programs in the field and ways to plan and implement experimental programs.

(Cooperative education was introduced to students at the recent opening of Prestonsburg Community College.)

Dr. Lyman V. Ginger, Kentucky superintendent of public instruction, will take part in the conference, along with other state leaders of industry and education.

The University of Kentucky Community College System and Alderson-Broadus College will jointly sponsor the meeting to introduce educators and employers to this new form of learning, said Dr. Stanley Wall, vice-president of the University of Kentucky Community Colleges.

Also appearing on the program will be outstanding national figures in the field of cooperative education, including Dr. Mary Hunt, former director of cooperative education at Antioch College; Dr. Harry Heinemann, dean of cooperative education, Fiorello LaGuardia Community College; JoAnn Hinton, director of cooperative education, Villa Maria College of Buffalo; and Gary E. Wilson, personnel development coordinator, the International Nickel Company.

"We are inviting anyone from any academic institution or business in Kentucky or surrounding states to learn from examples of successful programs currently being operated in industry, government and education," said Wall.

The conference will be held Sept. 17-18 at the Hospitality Motor Inn, Lexington. A federal grant makes possible the event. "We have compressed a three-day conference into 24 hours; noon Tuesday to noon Wednesday," said Wall.

In its first year, the Labor Department's WIN II Program—an effort that stresses immediate jobs for welfare recipients—registered about 1.28 million welfare recipients, screened 525,000 to determine their job potential, and placed 142,000 in unsubsidized jobs.

Day Care Standards Up for Discussion

One of 25 forums scheduled in the state for discussion of the proposed Child Day Care standards and regulations prepared by the Kentucky Department for Human Resources will be held Sept. 24 at Pike Auditorium, Prestonsburg Community College.

Bob Rennick, Day Care representative for the department, said participation in the forum is sought from school, civic and church leaders and, especially, from parents.

Two day care centers are now in operation here, at Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church and at the First Presbyterian Church.

The standards and regulations to be considered at the forum here were approved by the state Day Care Advisory Committee last January. Mr. Rennick said copies are available, on request, in advance of the Sept. 24 meeting.

Mine Effects Regulation Hearing To Be Held

A public hearing will be held at Frankfort, Sept. 6, on a proposed regulation to control the surface effects of underground mining. The regulation, drafted by the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, would implement a 1974 law that for the first time holds underground coal mine operators responsible for environmental damage they may cause. The hearing will be held in the Capital Plaza Building.

Community Chorus Rehearsals Slated

Gus Kalos announced this week that the Prestonsburg Community Chorus will rehearse Cantatas Nos. 1 and 4 from the "Christmas Oratoria," by Johann Sebastian Bach, and "Fantasia on Christmas Carols," by English composer Ralph Vaughan Williams. Rehearsals will be held on Mondays in the choral room of the Johnson Administration Building from 7 to 9 p.m., beginning September 9. The choral group is open for membership to all people in the area who enjoy singing.

"We are indeed fortunate to have an opportunity to perform works by these two great composers, and the community is equally fortunate to have such a fine conductor of Mr. Kalos' ability to direct this dedicated group of singers," a Prestonsburg Community College spokesman said.
