

Area Coal Not Boom Or Bust

Prices Lower, But Production Strong, Situation Stable

Production has caught up with demand and prices have dropped, but the firm status of the coal business is confirmed by the growing number of new applications for mining permits, the high pace of loadings and the increased employment by the industry.

The jam of coal trucks on highways isn't as heavy as a few months ago during the "boom" when anything that was black was acceptable on a hungry market, but they're still running and production is high.

That the "slump" is not a "bust" is evident in the current coal prices. They don't skyrocket to the nearly $90 a ton metallurgical coal from this section drew last year, but they have levelled off and sound business men are making good—somebody said, "real"—money in coal. The prices are said to be as high as $22 a ton for coal used by electric power generating plants and up to $30 and $35 for metallurgical coal.

That's down from 1974, but before the Arab oil embargo triggered the coal

Cleaver Taken After Escape At Hospital

George Herman Cleaver, 20, the man who has been held in the Floyd county jail here since the slaying last month of the assistant postmaster at Boons Camp, Johnson county, was recaptured last Thursday after his flight from a Louisville hospital where he had been taken for psychiatric examination.

Cleaver is accused of the fatal shooting of Mrs. Sandra Penix, wife of the Boons Camp postmaster, during a holdup.

He escaped last Wednesday from Central State Hospital, Louisville, while being transferred from one building to another. He fled, still handcuffed, and was captured the following day in his hometown, Coldwater, Michigan.

Legal steps to extradite Cleaver and return him to jail here to be held till his trial were begun last week. Though unarmed at the time of his escape, officials warned that he was considered extremely dangerous.

'Caucus' Talks Severance Tax On Hazard TV

Members of the "Mountain Caucus," the legislative group which led the successful fight two years ago for the coal severance tax, adopted in a televised meeting at Hazard Sunday the resolution offered by Rep. Hoover Dawhare proposing that the severance tax be directly due the coal-producing counties, with the counties sharing with the state rather than the allotment of revenues being made to the counties by the state. The state would share in the funds, according to this plan, but not as the prime dispenser of the tax monies collected.

The group also approved a proposal that coal companies be permitted to make payments on such taxes directly to the counties and be given credit against the total due by them for a given year. No strings would be attached to taxes thus paid.

The Hazard meeting was attended by eight members of the House and Senator-elect Jim Hammond, of Prestonsburg. Mr. Hammond was named temporary chairman of the Senate division of the Mountain Caucus; Rep. Dawhare, of the House group. The full Caucus will meet in Frankfort June 24, a day after its meeting with Governor Carroll.

The Caucus also endorsed annual General Assembly sessions. It was pointed out that during fiscal 1973-74 Kentucky had a surplus of $125 million, all left in the Governor's hands since there was no intervening Assembly session to earmark the funds for specific purposes.

Higher per pupil funding was approved for education.

Daniel's Creek, County's Only 1-Room School

Teacher and pupils of the one-room Daniels Creek school on the last day of the term. Bottom photo shows the building which houses the county's only one-teacher school. Note basketball goal and pump at the well.

Friday was the last day of the school year for the one-room school on Daniel's Creek, and, having already turned in their books, most of the 34 pupils were taking turns at bat in the adjoining lot which serves as the baseball field.

Inside the school house, Helen Martin, teacher of Floyd county's last one-roomer, attended to the business of ending another school year and generally "straightening things up."

This would be Mrs. Martin's last day at the school—a position nearer her home at Garrett had opened and it would be impractical to pass it up. This had been her first teaching job and for the past four years the young teacher had seen many of the same faces almost every day of the school year.

"I just don't know if I can give them up," she said. "These children are different—really," Mrs. Martin said. "I can actually say that there are no discipline problems. They're so well-behaved and they seem to have a respect for older people that you don't generally find nowadays."

As the teacher spoke, there would be the occasional thump of a rubber baseball on the school building's tin roof and the sound of the squeaky well pump handle was almost constant as thirsty children refreshed themselves—one child pumping, another catching the water in a cup. The whole atmosphere of the place—the smell of oiled board floors, the pot-bellied stove and brightly-colored ABC's and pictures tacked around the walls—was one which seemed to belong to a different time. And the knowledge that the Daniel's Creek school, one of nine remaining in the entire state, faces the inevitable process of consolidation, was saddening.

"I hope they never close the school," Mrs. Martin said. "Almost all of the children's parents and even some young grandparents attended this same school." Mrs. Martin was quick to point out the educational aids which she has at her disposal including such things as a phonograph, film strips, microscope, and piano. The building is also air-conditioned and Mrs. Martin believes the pupils aren't missing out on the advantages of larger schools at all.

"The parents on Daniel's Creek are quite interested in their children's education and many check frequently to make sure their children are on the same level as the students in the larger schools. We've always found that the children from Daniel's Creek school are at least on a level with the consolidated school students and in certain areas are more advanced."

Mrs. Martin said she believes that one real advantage of the one-room school situation is that children in lower grades "pickup" bits of the older children's lessons. "Then when those children reach that grade level, you're very likely to be supplementing and reinforcing something that is already in the child's mind," she said. Mrs. Martin also

Floyd county has a total of 3,300 veterans, according to a Veterans Administration compilation made as of December 31, 1974.

$150,000 ARC Funds To Provide Trails, Recreation at Park

Congressman Carl D. Perkins has announced Monday that $150,000 will be forthcoming for work on hiking and recreational facilities at Jenny Wiley State Park. The funds are furnished through the Economic Development Administration for job opportunities under recently passed legislation. The program in this case is administered by the Appalachian Regional Commission, and about 25 persons should be employed under it.

which became popular as a single after the original cast album was released, prompted one reviewer to report: "The music varies from operetta to salvation rock, from soft-shoe shuffles to a kind of country and Eastern style with a kind of fervor."

Susan Rosenstock, director, has put the cast through its circus paces and Mary Turner has designed the tattereddemalion costumes. In addition to Jon Reininga, as Jesus, the company includes Dan Delafield, Kathleen Grennon, Tina James, Beth McVey, Jeff Oetjen, Dick Pugh, Ted Randall, Mary Stout and Linda Wells.

The show opens with 10 young people, voicing first separately and then in chorus passages from the wisdom of Socrates, Thomas Aquinas, Sartre, Leonardo da Vinci, and Buckminster Fuller, among others, to represent the Tower of Babel. The performers don clown-like costumes and then one emerges as Jesus.

'Godspell' Opens Season Tonight

One of the most popular off-Broadway musical hits of the early '70s has been announced as the season-opener at the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre here with performances scheduled from tonight (Wednesday) to June 22 and then every Friday evening through August 15.

It is "Godspell," the modern rock adaptation of the Gospel according to St. Matthew, that drew packed audiences for three years in New York, equally long in London and in numerous other cities in the U. S. and abroad in the early 1970's. It drew audiences of believers and non-believers alike. With its spirit of jubilant love-thy-neighbor radiance, it enchanted

No Cutback In Gas Seen For County

Columbia Proposes 28% Curtailment As Supply Drops

Floyd and neighboring counties may be the more fortunate ones as many Kentucky counties, their industries and schools face a natural gas shortage next winter as a result of a cutback by Columbia Gas of Kentucky.

Columbia proposes to reduce gas allocations to 110 large commercial customers in the state, including about 40 schools, and to suspend service to 133 industrial consumers from Nov. 1 till next March 1. The Public Service Commission held hearings Monday on Columbia's proposal.

Even if the proposal is approved by the PSC, the cutback will have little effect in this area. Two of its too-few manufacturing industries could be affected, but neither depends upon natural gas beyond heating.

Jack Stumbo, Columbia's district production superintendent here, said Monday that U. S. Shoe Company here and American Standard, near Paintsville, could suffer curtailment of gas service. He also said Alice Lloyd College could be hit by the cutback.

This Town... That World

We, my friends, are in the midst of the first drouth of the year. Two whole days of it.

When Watt Hale became suddenly ill last week he was on his way to this office to ask me, I am told, to print a brief statement to announce that because of failing health he would no longer be able to keep his barber shop in West Prestonsburg open, and to express his appreciation to all his friends and customers over the years. That I am doing right now for my old friend, and I hope all for whom it was intended read it.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A PEDAGOGUE

My son's pictures and accompanying story of the school on Daniel's Creek wakens memories. On Right Beaver Creek, almost two miles out of Bosco, there still stands such a school, pot-bellied stove and all, where the Young Idea of the community was introduced, after a fashion, by y'r's tr'ly to Readin', Ritin' and 'Rithmetic.

That was some years back, I must admit. In fact, one of my pupils recently introduced me to her granddaughter, and I aged perceptibly. Those youngsters did not benefit from the guidance of a great

County Map Project To Start in July

The Floyd County Mapping Project, an undertaking of the Kentucky Department of Revenue to identify every parcel of property in the county, will begin in early July, it was said here this week.

Preliminary work has already been begun by Buel Jetton, Murray, Ky., supervisor of the project, and his assistant, Jane Stepp, of Elkhorn City, and an office has been opened in the Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad building.

The program will require from 18 months to two years for completion and will involve locating and identifying each parcel of real estate, including property in towns as well as in rural sections. Aerial photographs will be made.

The program has nothing to do with property evaluation or assessment, it was emphasized. Approximately 90 counties have already been mapped, and the work has discovered numerous parcels of property not listed for tax purposes.

The program will employ eight enumerators and two clerks.

The college scholarship program is one of the community youth activities supported by the County Farm Bureau. Additional information on the program can be obtained by contacting the county high school guidance counselors or Arnold Lowe, Eastern, Ky., chairman of the Scholarship Committee.

Special Day To Honor Two Retiring at Mayo Vocational

A special day to honor George L. Ramey, Sr., director of Mayo School, and Luther S. Safriet, assistant director, who are retiring June 30, has been designated for Friday, June 27 in Paintsville.

Immediately following the graduation exercises at Mayo, which will begin at 1:30 p.m., an honor parade will be conducted through Paintsville, starting at Mayo School at 3 p.m. going down Church Street to Main Street, proceeding east on Main Street to College Street, then left to Third Street and returning to Mayo. The Paintsville band will head the parade.

In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Ramey and Mr. and Mrs. Safriet, tentative plans include Governor Carroll, Congressman Carl D. Perkins, members of the Bureau of Vocational Education and Mr. and Mrs. Escrom Chandler to be in the parade. Mr. Chandler is chairman of the Regional Advisory Council for Vocational Education.

Following the parade an Honor Dinner will be held at the Johnson Central School cafeteria to which the public is invited. Tickets for this event will be on sale in Paintsville, Prestonsburg, Inez, Pikeville and Salyersville. Tickets also may be purchased at the door.

Mr. Ramey taught electricity at Mayo from 1945 to 1952 when he became director of the school. He has served as president of KVA, EKVA, and was appointed by President Johnson and President Nixon to serve on the National Advisory Council for Vocational Education, and has been a leader in vocational education at both the state and national levels.

Mr. Safriet began his career in vocational education as a welding teacher at the Harlan Vocational School in 1940. He continued in that position until he became director of the Harlan school in 1945 and served in that position until 1953. He came to Mayo School in 1953 as assistant director and continued in this position until the present time. He has served as president of the KVA, EKVA, KIEA, and the Paintsville Rotary Club, as district governor of Rotary, and is now serving on the Liaison committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools.

Recognition Day is sponsored by the Paintsville Chamber of Commerce, the Chambers of Commerce in Salyersville, Prestonsburg, and Pikeville, local service clubs, the Regional Advisory Council for Vocational Education and interested citizens.

Historical Society Discusses Writers

The broad field of Appalachian literature was the theme of the quarterly meeting Saturday of the Big Sandy Valley Historical Society held at Rhododendron Lodge, Breaks Interstate Park.

Albert Stewart, instructor of English at Alice Lloyd College, Pippa Passes, discussed such authors as John Fox, Jr., Ann Cobb and many others. President Henry P. Scalf in a response to Stewart's speech commented that one promising and fledgling writer, Scottie Hamilton, of Grethel, could have surpassed Jesse Stewart in time but he had deserted the field of literature for work in a Michigan plant.

The speaker noted that the Southern Appalachians has many promising young writers. Many efforts too are being made to preserve our regional culture. Scalf pointed out that Appalachian Heritage, a magazine edited by Stewart, is a leader in this field.

The Society voted to launch a periodical to use articles of general historical interest. Edward R. Hazelett, Paintsville, Bob Kennedy, Kenova, and George Pruner, Lebanon, Va., were appointed as a committee, under the chairmanship of Hazelett, to lay the foundation for the new journal.

The music program was presented by Dennie Slone, of Allen, under the direction of Mrs. Edith F. James, Prestonsburg. Reports were given on the success of the book, "The Hatfields," by George Elliott Hatfield, published a year ago by the Society. The Society envisions other publications in the future.

Lewis Woods, of Frankfort, field representative of the Kentucky Historical Society, noted that the Big Sandy Valley Historical Society is the most active and aggressive in the state. Mr. Pruner, a member of the Society, and Commonwealth's Attorney of Russell County, Virginia, presented an award to Edward Hazelett in recognition of his work in history.

The next meeting of the Society is scheduled at Alice Lloyd College, in early September. The genealogical arm of the Society will meet at Paintsville, October 13, it is announced.

Gas Company Cuts Down Its Own Use of Energy

Columbia Gas of Kentucky isn't just asking its customers to take steps to conserve natural gas and other forms of energy. The gas company is practicing what it has been preaching.

Jack Stumbo, area manager for Columbia Gas of Kentucky in the Prestonsburg area, reports that, statewide, during 1974 the gas company reduced its own natural gas usage by 40.7 per cent, or 10,665,000 cubic feet. In addition, electric usage was cut 19.7 per cent and gasoline consumption by 18,605 gallons, a reduction of 8.4 per cent.

Energy savings were made by setting back thermostats in offices, garages and warehouses, and by improving insulation.

Increasing the Cost of Coal

Coal produced in the early days of strip-mining may, before the paying is all done, be the costliest ever produced.

It didn't cost the buyer so much, back then, but the real cost is now showing up. We do not refer to the loss of topsoil, the damage to the water quality, the silting of streams and lakes and so on. This is dollar cost, and we're all paying it.

It began recently with the decision by the Appalachian Regional Commission to invest $305,000 in building catch basins for the silt that is choking Troublesome Creek in Knott and Perry counties, with the provision that local and state governments would be responsible for a like sum on that one project.

That is a mere start in one strip-mined valley. There are hundreds of such streams and perhaps thousands of "orphan" spoil banks to demand millions of dollars in the years ahead if much of the coal-producing areas of the United States is to be habitable after the coal is gone.

We think it is well that the ARC has taken this step toward reclamation at public expense. True, the Troublesome Creek valley should have been protected, to begin with, but it wasn't, and so the burden devolves—not on the coal company which reaped the greatest profit—but on us all.

Whose is the blame for the situation? Human nature being what it is, and the operator not having been required to do a complete reclamation job, he could not be expected to spend money unless obliged to do so. Then the blame lies with government, state or federal, or both, which failed to look down the road to the day which is called Pay-Day.

At any rate, it appears that herein may lie a source of public employment in the future. It will require thousands of workers and perhaps billions of taxpayers' dollars, but it must be done as fully as human hands and ingenuity can move to repair the damage.

And that will make the coal costly, no matter how cheap it was when it first went to market.

pointed out that the learning environment in such a school is "simpler, quieter and more uncomplicated." Mrs. Martin, who brings her own son from Garrett each day, pointed out that "you could ask him where he would rather go and he's say Daniel's Creek."

An additional "modern" feature at the school is the school lunch program which works very much like those in larger schools and which assures pupils of well-balanced and wholesome meals. Some of the girls cook the meal each day and, not to be discriminatory, two boys serve as dish washers.

The days of the Daniel's Creek school are surely numbered as the trend to consolidation has in 15 years reduced the number of single-teacher schools from 69 to 1 in Floyd county. Statewide, the number in that period has been reduced from 1,116 to the 9 remaining in the state's mountain section. Besides the Daniel's Creek school, four other one-room schools still operate in Knott county, two in Lawrence, one in Perry and one in Letcher county. Consolidation of the schools awaits road improvements which, in most cases, are already under way. In the case of the Daniel's Creek school, buses to transport children to Betsy Layne are unable to ford the creek during high water and the road offers no suitable place for a school bus to turn. But culvert work and road improvements are under way which leave in doubt the school's prospects for another year of operation.

Whether or not consolidation and the consequent disappearance of the one-room country school are considered manifestations of "progress," the passing of another vestige of Appalachian life is at the least a cause for nostalgic sadness.

"It's a part of our culture," Mrs. Martin said. "And you should see how beautiful those pines are after a heavy snow."

boom in October, 1973 prices for utilities-grade coal were way down from $5 to $10 a ton, and metallurgical coal sold for no more than $15 a ton.

There has been some stockpiling of coal in this county, with operators waiting for an expected price rise. But those who have been in the business for years are pretty well satisfied with things as they are. They think the coal business has stabilized and that the future is bright.

"I think prices have stabilized to the point where responsible operations can make a good profit, and that's as it should be," Robert Holcomb, president of Coal Operators & Associates, Pikeville, said recently in a discussion of the situation.

For some the "gold rush" has ended in the disappointment experienced by the Forty-Niners. Some already have got out of the business.

On the other hand, it is reported, many experienced operators are opening new mines or expanding their operations on leases already owned and with equipment bought when prices of machinery were not so high.

Most of Floyd county's remaining coal will be stripped. Few remaining tracts of coal in the county are large enough to justify the heavy investment of money required for deep mining.

teacher. In fact, I had only a certificate to teach and not a day of training in the art. For all I knew, my job was to teach those youngsters their abc's, how to read and spell, and later to do fractions and practical measurement and percentage and how to diagram sentences, parse nouns, conjugate verbs, and so on.

Yet, for all my youthful ignorance, they learned—these, mind you, were bright kids—and those who went on to high school or college did as well as, or better than, some who had had better teachers and attended larger schools.

I lasted out four years of teaching all eight grades in that one-room school, and when somebody snidely remarks that I never did any hard work I rise in high dudgeon to remind them that I kept such a school with as many as 80 pupils attending at times and was busier than the proverbial bee, eight hours a day.

Somebody once said I was more of a pedagogue than a pedagogue, and I suspect they were on target. I wasn't cut out for the schoolmaster role. Maybe those children did miss a lot, there in that one-room school. They deserved better than they received, the Lord knows. But they also missed a lot of the children of today would be better off if they had less of. There is a seclusion, a peaceful atmosphere, a closeness to nature and people in such schools that cannot be found elsewhere.

Nostalgia drove me back to this old deserted school, some months ago, and although there was the roar of cars in the distance I was caught up in the old quietness for a few moments, and I took time to do a mental exercise with the recall of pupils.

Don't believe I missed even one.

Letters to the Editor

Teacher Will Be Missed

McDowell School will have reached the end of an era upon the completion of the 1974-'75 school term.

The retirement of Mrs. Pauline Hall Allen will leave a void within the teaching staff that will long remain. We could scarcely be expected to accept the loss of a lovely lady whose teaching career has spanned some four decades without feeling the loss. It is made a bit easier, however, when such fond memories can be recalled.

There are few of the McDowell High School alumni whose life she did not touch. If we didn't sit in her classroom, our parents did. If she didn't guide them through their educational experience, luckily our children had that opportunity. Teaching is a difficult but highly rewarding profession. The success of a student is the proverbial "icing on the cake." As is the case with all devoted educators, the long hours of hard work didn't end with the school bell.

Mrs. Allen was a shining example of that. Many parents such as myself have been guests in her home, yet we always discovered we had interrupted her school work if we came unannounced.

In talking with other parents of her students, I find many of them to be a bit like myself—selfish. We know she has earned her retirement and we all wish her well in all she chooses to do. Happy though the memories are and sincere though our good wishes may be, there are few of us who cannot yet express sadness. You see, Mrs. Allen, somewhere in the very near future is another child, grandchild, niece or nephew who will have missed something because you're not part of their lives.

Somewhere I read a unique recipe for a mother. It was composed of measurements known to every housewife; however, the ingredients included humility, loyalty, patience, understanding, love, compassion, etc. I don't think I would be incorrect in assuming she displayed these qualities as a mother. As a teacher, I know she did.

McDowell School has indeed been a fortunate institution due to the high quality of its educators. As they depart they leave difficult shoes to fill and, fortunately, we maintain the best. Not only do they leave the results of a monumental undertaking behind but their memories as well. It smarts a bit when one realizes one recognized their true value sometimes later than one should.

Another era ended with the departure of George and Nellie Moore. Their wisdom and our memories of them remain. I'll swear, I can still hear his voice echoing through those hallways.

To Pauline H. Allen we would say, "Godspeed and success in every endeavor." Most of all, we would say a sincere, "Thanks for being where you were when you were." Even that seems so inadequate.

A Safety Reminder

A good reminder for all of our tourists in and around all parks and lakes, especially the picnic areas where you may take your family for a cookout—watch out for where your little ones play. You all know that where food has been dropped on the ground you may find a snake also looking for his lunch. This could include a dangerous rattlesnake or copperhead. Also our lake now is a lot of muddy water which is not clean enough for children to swim in, so play it safe and take them to a swimming area where you know the water is clean.

Thank you,
MRS. CORA PENNINGTON

Cross Your Fingers, Hold Your Breath

This road cut on U. S. 23 North, in Prestonsburg, continues to hold area motorists in suspense as they pass under the overhanging sandstone boulders which rest on crumbling layers of shale. The site of numerous rockfalls and resulting accidents, work which was begun last winter to shave the cliff face away from the highway was abandoned and no further efforts have been made to finish the much needed project.

Lodge Seminar Talks Judicial Improvement

Those supporting the judicial improvement amendment to the state constitution, the fate of which will be decided by Kentucky voters at the November polls, entertain no illusions of easy victory. They know the fight will be tough, but they're going to wage it.

Kentucky Citizens for Judicial Improvement last Thursday sponsored a seminar at May Lodge to acquaint attorneys, officials and others with the merits of the proposed amendment.

The exactly two dozen persons at the seminar heard:

1. That the amendment would relieve judges or magistrates of all lower courts of their judicial duties and their judicial work would be vested in a district court. This court would perform all the trial court functions and would relieve the circuit courts of the greater part of their load of cases—perhaps as much as 90 per cent of that load. The circuit court would remain as at present but its docket would not be loaded with minor cases.

2. That district judges would be licensed attorneys, and they and circuit judges would be elected on non-partisan tickets.

3. That the Court of Appeals, which now has seven justices, would be comprised of 14. Three-man panels of these judges would be formed to go into the state's judicial districts, hear cases on appeal on "home grounds" and save litigants the heavy expense of providing transcripts of evidence.

4. That the state Supreme Court which the amendment would create would be similar to the present Court of Appeals, would hear all cases referred to it by the Appellate Court and also all cases involving the death penalty or prison terms of 20 years or more.

If the amendment should be adopted, the first district judges would be elected in November, 1977 and take office in January, 1978.

Leslie G. Whitmer, a director of the Kentucky Bar Association, presided at the seminar.

James Holzman, manager of American Standard, said, however, that since his company's use of natural gas is only for heating and is not used for production, the reduction there will be, he thinks, not more than 40 per cent.

"In any event," he said, "we are in position to convert to other fuel, if necessary."

US Shoe Company is in much the same position as American Standard, in that it is not dependent upon gas for production.

Floyd county's schools served by Columbia will not be affected. These are the schools at Harold, Betsy Layne and McDowell. The communities of Lancer, Drift, Harold and Betsy Layne are dependent upon Columbia for their gas supply, but no curtailment is seen for these or any residential consumers.

In fact, Mr. Stumbo said, Columbia's cutback in the face of its own supply shortage, is designed to protect homes and hospitals. The gas company has been notified that it will receive only 72 per cent of its requirements during the Nov. 1-March 1 period.

Gas company officials point out that Congress, departments of government and gas users have been warned since 1970 of the growing shortage of natural gas. Texas, one of the prime sources of the fuel, is not piping gas, as expected, to other states, since inter-state commerce regulations would govern its price. Petro-chemical plants, instead, are locating in that state for the manufacture and sale of byproducts at higher prices.

Gov. Julian Carroll says he is seeking to increase the gas supply for the affected area, and Congressman John Breckinridge, D-Ky., says he will present the views of Central Kentucky businessmen opposed to the cutback when he goes before a Federal Power Commission hearing later this month.

State energy officials say that after the hearings that began Monday, the PSC might: (1) Approve the cutback as it stands; (2) Change the distribution of the curtailments, possibly to spread them over a broader group of customers, or (3) spread the cutback even to residential users, although that possibility is considered remote.

Report Made on Maxey Flats

By J. PATRICK MATHES
Frankfort, Ky.—“No immediate danger” was the report of Damon Harrison, of the state planning office, to the Environmental Quality Commission last week concerning Maxey Flats, a low-level nuclear waste disposal site in Fleming county. Harrison also said that a federal report on the facility should be in the hands of the Governor by the end of the month.

Presently, according to Harrison, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is reviewing a six-month study on the site conducted by the Department for Human Resources. Harrison said the Commission's report “hopefully will be made available to the Governor late this month.”

“Although there is no immediate danger,” said Harrison, “the concerns are of what the potential danger might be.”

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is looking at what the state is doing for the care and maintenance of the facility. The Department for Human Resources (DHR) is the primary responsible state agency for maintaining the site and correcting any health hazards that might develop from any radioactive materials deposited at the site. In addition, the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection permits the site through the divisions of air pollution, water quality and solid waste.

The DHR Radiation Control Unit will be examining the site in detail during the next few months. An inspector from DHR will be visiting the site every two weeks to examine environmental samples from approximately 30 locations in and around the facility.

Charles Hardin, manager of the Radiation Control Branch, DHR, explained that the radiation has been decreasing steadily at the location of most concern and that at no time was the intensity of the radiation hazardous.

ASCS Outlines 1975 Program

Floyd county farmers who plan to start conservation practices under the Agricultural Conservation Program (ACP) are being urged, as the first step, to discuss their farm needs with the county office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS).

It is being pointed out that there are some differences between ACP and the 1974 conservation program, and when a farmer has determined the conservation needs on his farm he should contact the local ASCS office. Important objectives of the program this year are: first, that the needed conservation must be beyond that which the farmer would accomplish without cost-share assistance; and second, the practices must provide enduring benefits.

With the $12,023 allocated to Floyd county, ACP cost share assistance of 50 to 75 pct. will help correct some conservation problems in the area, and ASCS is endeavoring to assure that the tax dollar is well spent.

The work of developing ACP practices is under authority of the farmer-elected county ASC committee. The county program development group is consulted, and the selected practices are then subject to approval by the state ASC committee and the State Program Development group.

Scouting Camps Meet Standards

With four hundred members of the Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America, using council camping facilities this year, inspections have been held to insure that national standards have been met for facilities, equipment, staff services, and program.

Arthur Leach, Council camping chairman, headed an inspection group which included technicians who are experts to evaluate conditions of the camps. Members of the inspection team, in addition to Leach, are John Fanning, Scout executive; Roy May, of Langley, and James Sherman, camp ranger.

"Before Camp Shawnee opens, it must meet 26 mandatory national standards that will ensure the health and safety of those who attend," Leach said. The mandatory items include tested drinking water, milk supply, refrigeration, physical examinations, medical inspections, use of a health log, latrines, waste disposal, state and local permits or licenses, and pre-camp health, safety, and sanitary inspections.

In addition, the facilities and operating standards during the camp season include about 90 items covering troop site facilities, food service, health, safety, camp staff, troop leadership, program, and administration.

"The strict national standards for camps operated by the Lonesome Pine Council are also reviewed while the camp is in operation and includes a formal inspection by the Southeast Region of the Boy Scouts of America and by the Floyd County Health Department," Leach said.

Pupils Study Book Selection

Getting ready for a summer of reading are these youngsters at the Clark Elementary School.

Children involved in the Reading is Fundamental Project (RIF) at Clark School made their third book selection of the year last week, two days before the close of school.

The Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club sponsored the project which began last fall for approximately 150 children in grades 4-8 who were enrolled in remedial reading classes at the school.

In order to select their own books for ownership, the children earned stars by reading library books. They used the stars to "purchase" the R.I.F. books. The school reading staff reports that the group read and reported on 4,849 books for the year and earned 750 books to keep.

John Pitts, the school principal, said, "This is the first time we have attempted a project of this type, and from all indications it was certainly worth the time and effort spent. We appreciate the interest the Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club showed, without which there would have been no R.I.F. Program for our boys and girls. We are also pleased that they are again sponsoring the program for next year. Of course, we are encouraging any club or group to join the effort so the program can include more children."

Johnson County Also 'Sharing'

PAINTSVILLE, Ky.—First there was federal revenue sharing. Now, there's the return of state-collected coal severance tax to the counties. Later this year, Johnson county has plans of returning some of its revenue to the people.

"We've checked it out completely. It's going to be good for the people," said Johnson County Judge Bill Ward.

Ward and his three-commissioner fiscal court have decided to set aside $20,000 from next year's expected $350,000 in federal revenue sharing program funds for what they call the "county-community sharing fund."

The funds will be available—about mid-July—on a 50-50 matching basis to organizations in Johnson county for community projects.

"We couldn't use regular tax money and do this," said Ward. "Our source is the federal revenue sharing money and guidelines with those funds are pretty explicit about what you can do with it."

Ward says it's perfectly legal and officials in the state attorney general's office agree—under terms of "home rule" legislation granted by the general assembly.

By "community projects," Ward is still rather unclear about what these might be.

"Say there's a development club in one of the rural areas who would like to improve the area—say but some playground equipment—almost any worthwhile project," he said.

Later this year, Ward will appoint a three-person screening committee to study the requests for use of the money and authorize the expenditures.

"They'll draw up some guidelines about July 1st," said Ward.

In Johnson fiscal court's meeting earlier this month, Ward said some people were already asking about the project, which is unique in the state according to officials in the office of local government in Frankfort.

"Johnson county communities have shown over the past several years that community development is best accomplished at the community level," added Ward.

"The county-community sharing and carries this theme one step further . . . county government can now encourage in a fangible way the local initiative that gets things done that need to be done."

Still unused for similar projects is the county's $50,882 in coal severance taxes returned to the Eastern Kentucky counties by the state.

Concerning this latter fund, constitutional restrictions concerning the return of state revenues—from whatever source—to the individual counties were circumvented through the use of a similar state-level screening committee, made up of state legislators.

But since two separate sections of the state constitution specifically prohibit the lending of credit or actual funds from the state to other, smaller governmental entities, with the coal severance fund, the state pays the county-allocated money directly to the vendor on behalf of the county, and for the purpose intended by the county fiscal court.

The Johnson county "sharing" fund comes under similar restrictions.

But with "home rule" statutes passed by the General Assembly, attorney general's office sources indicated the Court of Appeals would probably extend constitutional guarantees from the General Assembly to fiscal courts, in letting them decide what is and what is not a public purpose.

Ward is in his second term as county judge—the only twice-elected Democrat in Johnson county's history. The county is a Republican stronghold.

The United States Employment Service and state employment service agencies have cooperative agreements with the Veterans Administration and Defense Department to provide services to veterans.

Carroll Names Rickert Advisor On Environmental Affairs

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Gov. Julian Carroll has appointed former state legislator Jon Rickert to serve as a special advisor on environmental affairs. Rickert, a 40-year-old Elizabethtown attorney, has had a life-long interest in environmental concerns.

For the past five years, Rickert, a professional ornithologist, has been compiling information for a book on "bird-finding areas" in the United States and Canada.

In 1968, he was the first elected Kentucky official to come out against the original proposal for a dam in the upper Red River Gorge suggesting if a dam was found necessary that it be constructed in the lower gorge. He has not taken a position on the current dam site proposal.

As an outgrowth of the Red River Dam controversy, Rickert proposed legislation in 1968 which would have established a system of nature preserves in the state. One feature of the proposal provided for a registry of all "natural areas" in Kentucky worth preserving.

While Rickert's proposal never passed, similar concepts were included in a state wild rivers protection bill that did become law in 1972.

Rickert was employed as a laboratory instructor in ornithology while a student at Indiana University. He received his bachelor's degree in business and economics in 1958. He received a law degree from Vanderbilt in 1961 and has had a general law practice in Elizabethtown since 1963, where he will continue to practice while serving in this voluntary advisory capacity.

He is a member of the National Audubon Society, Nature Conservancy, National Wildlife Federation, The League of Kentucky Sportsmen, American Ornithologists' Union and the Kentucky Ornithological Society.

Rickert and his wife, Bobbie, live in Elizabethtown with their three children.

Area Airports Are 'Tricky'

By JIM CLARKE

The plane circles smoothly over the mountain-shrouded valley. Suddenly, the pilot drops the nose of the small, single-engine craft and we are in a steep, sloping descent. Before my stomach has a chance to return to its proper position in my body, we're taxiing from the gravel runway towards a white, weather-worn, wooden building that serves as the control tower, check-in terminal and waiting area for the Pikeville Airport.

Marcel Hanscom, 27, aviation regulatory coordinator for the state Department of Transportation's Division of Aeronautics, gathers the spread of papers before him and stuffs them into his blue folder.

"We only have to do this a couple of more times today," he says, referring to the maneuvering that is necessary to land at a number of Eastern Kentucky airports.

The pilot, Boyd McDaniels, who has been flying for the state since 1957, feels that the Hazard Airport is the "trickiest" in Eastern Kentucky. "You have only one approach through the valley and a mountain at the other end of the airstrip.

"This Pikeville Airport," McDaniels says, "is another tricky one." It's boxed in on all sides by mountains and has a gravel runway.

Hanscom is in the middle of a one-day inspection tour of seven airports located in the rugged Appalachian terrain of the eastern section of the Commonwealth.

Before the day's end, he will have visited airports in West Liberty, Mt. Sterling, Paintsville-Prestonsburg, Whitesburg, Hazard and Stanton.

The inspections, which are required semi-annually by state law for each of Kentucky's 80 commercial and private airports, are primarily oriented to safety factors and equipment, such as wind socks, lighting and airstrip condition. "But, we also check customer service facilities," Hanscom added, "everything from hangers to restrooms."

According to Hanscom, "If any violations of state airport safety laws are found, a letter from the Division of Aeronautics is sent to the chairman of the Airport Board of the cited airport, stating the infraction and giving a certain period of time to correct the problem.

Usually, the airport must have the problem taken care of by the time their land area designation certificate comes up for review.

The Division of Aeronautics has the authority to close any airport that disregards the warnings or is found to be in continual violation of the safety rules.

After completing the inspection of the Pikeville Airport, we climb into our plane, buckle our safety belts, take a deep breath and get ready to depart for Whitesburg. Now let me tell you about those take-offs

Service Memorializes Mrs. Virgie Spencer

Wayland, Ky.—A memorial service for the late Virgie Spencer was held by the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club Wednesday evening, June 4, at the Garrett Missionary Baptist Church. Mrs. Spencer had been a long-time active member of the club until the final stage of her illness.

The 23rd Psalm was read by Mrs. J. T. Spillman, followed by the reading of the Club Collect. Six members of the club lighted tapers in a special candlelight service. The club president, Mrs. J. C. Wells, gave a reading, titled, "The Departed Clubmember," followed by the reading by Mrs. Otto Martin, of the poem, "My Garden." A prayer was given in unison by the club women. During the entire service Mrs. Lucy Sturgill, honorary clubmember and wife of the minister, played background music at the organ.

Mrs. Wells then presented the church with several checks in memory of Mrs. Spencer. The Rev. Edward Sturgill, pastor of the Garrett church, gave the benediction.

Clubwomen taking part in the service were: Mrs. J. C. Wells, Mrs. J. T. Spillman, Mrs. S. M. Martin, Mrs. James E. Martin, Mrs. Hansel Bradley, Mrs. Eugene Mullins, Mrs. Bobby Joe Castle, Mrs. Don Hughes, and Mrs. Otto Martin. Other members present were Mrs. E. E. DeCoursey, Mrs. M. M. Collins, Mrs. James A. Duff, Mrs. Arthur Haywood, Mrs. Stanley Bamer, Mrs. Marcellous Dunfee and Mrs. Felix Coburn. Also present were members of the local congregation who had had their monthly business meeting prior to the memorial service.

Eagles Help Children's Program

Tray Music accepts on behalf of Children's Summer Program $200 check from Malcolm Johnson, of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. Fred Goble, of the Eagles' Floyd Chapter, is at left.

Floyd County Chapter, Fraternal Order of Eagles, has contributed $200 to the Floyd County Mountain Comprehensive Care Center (MCCC) summer program for children with learning disabilities.

The contribution represents a significant proportion of the $1,700 needed for materials and supplies for the five-week program which will be conducted at the Charles Clark Elementary School. It is tentatively scheduled to begin July 5.

A drive to secure the necessary funds is being conducted by the MCCC Children's Services staff under the guidance of Mrs. Shirley Hughes, Floyd county community services worker.

"The purpose of the summer program," according to Joel Robinson, MCCC's Children's Services Supervisor, "is to give the child with a learning disability the additional training and therapy he needs in order to enable him to more successfully compete in the public school classroom when school reopens in the fall."

"Children who fall into the special education category," he explains further, "must work harder and more consistently than other children in order to develop their potential, and they need more individualized attention from teachers who have been trained in special techniques that can more effectively help the child with learning problems."

The contribution was officially presented June 6 at the MCCC outpatient unit in Prestonsburg. Several of MCCC Children's Services staff were present to observe Tray Music, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin E. Music, Jr. of Prestonsburg receive the check from two of the Eagles' three-member board of directors, Malcolm Johnson and Fred Goble.

In addition to the $200 contribution to the MCCC summer program, the Eagles plan a $500 donation to be presented in July to the Floyd county Handicapped Children's drive.

Eagle President, Carl T. Horne said the organization takes a special interest in the welfare of the handicapped children of Floyd County and has always been willing to contribute generously to all worthwhile causes, especially those which affect the health and well-being of the people of the county.

"Our most significant achievement along this line," he points out, "is the $10,000 grant which the Floyd County Chapter was instrumental in acquiring from the National Order of Eagles for use in the development of the Highlands Regional Hospital. That's one we really worked for, and we're proud of it."

Jehovah's Witnesses Schedule Conventions

A series of more than 100 conventions of Jehovah's Witnesses is scheduled this summer in the United States and Canada. Mr. Spurlock, minister of the Paintsville congregation, said several delegates will represent this area at sessions set for the Louisville Coliseum. Spurlock said 10,500 persons are expected for the four-day meeting July 3-6.

Discussing the convention program, Spurlock said it will explore all the problems confronting mankind today and systematically review the ultimate solution.

Vietnam Veterans' Benefits Reviewed

Almost 9.7 million men and women remain eligible for wartime veterans benefits based on military service during the Vietnam Era, which was ended May 7, 1975, by Presidential proclamation.

The Veterans Administration explained that more than 7.5 million persons, who have been separated from military service since Aug. 4, 1964, and some 2.1 million who were on active duty May 7, 1975, are entitled to full wartime benefits.

All persons who are disabled in service, regardless of entry date, will continue to receive compensation and dependents' benefits on a par with veterans of wartime service.

Potential eligibility for persons entering service after May 7 was terminated by Presidential proclamation for such benefits as nonservice-connected disability pensions for veterans, burial allowances and non-service-connected death pensions for widows and surviving children of veterans.

Burial allowances include payment of $250 toward burial and funeral expenses and a $150 plot allowance.

The termination of wartime status came more than 27 months after the cessation of hostilities involving use of U. S. combat forces in Southeast Asia. This extension of eligibility was longer than in any prior war.

Eligibility for World War I wartime benefits ended with the Nov. 11, 1918 armistice. After World War II the eligibility period was concluded Dec. 31, 1946, some 16 months after the surrender of Japan.

A proclamation by President Eisenhower ended the Korean Conflict eligibility period Jan. 31, 1955, 18 months after the armistice.

In terminating the Vietnam Era, the President also has asked the Congress to end the eligibility period for GI Bill education and training benefits for persons who will be entering peacetime voluntary military service on or after July 1, 1975.

The Presidential request pertains only to educational training earned through a minimum of 181 continuous days military service since Jan. 31, 1955. Not included is vocational rehabilitation training provided veterans with service-connected disabilities.

Unaffected by the Presidential proclamation and the requested Congressional action is GI home loan eligibility. The Veterans Housing Act of 1970 revived all expired, unused GI home loan entitlements and erased expiration dates on veterans' eligibility, it was noted.

Subsequent home loans, where previous loans were satisfied, and an increase from $12,500 to $17,500 in the maximum portion of the GI loan which VA can guarantee was authorized last year. There is no limit on the amount of the loan to which the VA guarantee applies.

The Veterans Health Care Expansion Act of 1973 eliminated the requirement for wartime service as a condition for eligibility for VA medical care.

New Boating Regulations in Effect

FRANKFORT, Ky.—Forewarned is forearmed: New regulations governing water sports in Kentucky will be in effect this summer.

A number of regulations have been revised and some new ones went into effect as of May 16, according to Director of Water Enforcement, Doug Shoulders. The regulations, filed by the legislative Research Commission, will be enforced by Shoulders' office, which is a division of the Kentucky Department of Transportation.

Water Enforcement officers will not start passing out citations immediately, however. "The officers are not out to catch you," Shoulders said, "but they will be out to instruct people using the waterways of Kentucky."

Citations will be issued, of course, after there has been reasonable opportunity for boaters to familiarize themselves with the new rules and regulations.

Most of the changes are in regulations affecting water skiing (and the persons who pull the skiers), water kiting and scuba diving.

New equipment requirements and a tightening of safety rules are on the books for water skiers. Previously, skiers were allowed to use ski belts which were strapped around the waist. Such belts had never been approved by the U. S. Coast Guard and have never been ranked as personal flotation devices (PFD).

Regulations brought out in October, 1973 by the U. S. Coast Guard stipulated that all boats 16 feet in length, or longer, had to have one Type I, II, or III PFD for each person on board, plus one Type IV device. The first three are wearable life jackets; the latter refers to an approved throwable ring or cushion.

Up to now, Kentucky regulations allowed water skiers to wear the commonly used ski belts as long as there was an approved PFD on board for his use when he was a passenger. Unfortunately, a PFD stored in the boat is of no help to a fallen skier floundering in the boat's wake.

Under the new Kentucky regulations, a skier must actually wear the Type I, II, or III flotation device. Unlike the ski belt, the approved life jackets will keep a person afloat, will keep him turned on his back and will hold an unconscious person's head above the water. Additionally, the approved jackets afford protection for the rib cage and organs of the skier. Falling into the water while skiing at 30 mph has been compared to hitting a hardwood surface in a fall.

Another regulation calls for a third person to participate in water skiing. In addition to the skier and the boat operator, an observer of at least 12 years of age must be aboard. A provision states that, in skiing, an observer is not necessary if the boat is equipped with a wide angle mirror so that the boat operator can observe the skier at all times. Nearly all states now have such a law on the books.

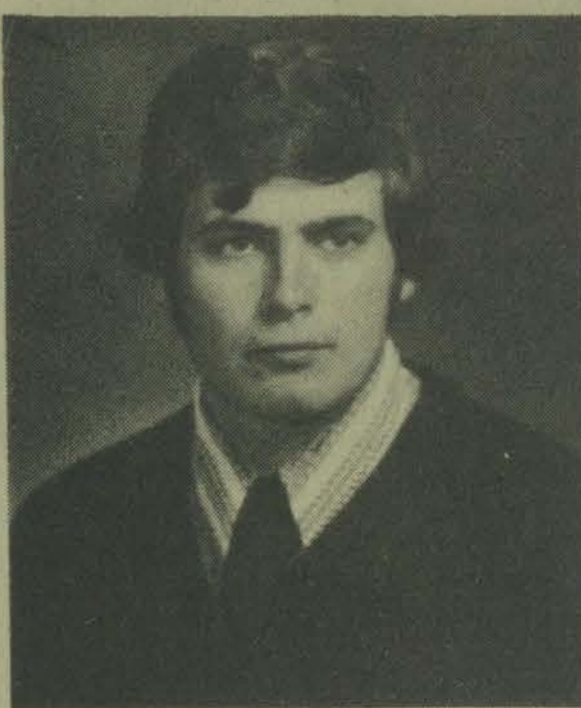

Kiting, being more dangerous, has more stringent rules. A third person, 12 years old or older, must be aboard to act as observer when a person is being towed airborne. No mirror will suffice in this case.

The new regulations also spell out safety practices for scuba divers. They make it mandatory that an international diver's flag be placed on a buoy or a floating device to mark the location of the dive. No boat, other than the diving boat, may operate within a radius of 100 feet of the diver's flag; divers and underwater swimmers may not rise to the surface outside of a 50 foot radius from the flag, except in emergency.

Shoulders particularly stressed the ruling that scuba divers and underwater swimmers may not dive or swim in established traffic lanes and must not obstruct boats from their destinations where there are no reasonable alternative routes.

"All these regulations are aimed at making Kentucky waterways safe for all users," Shoulders pointed out. "The safety practices underlying each of the regulations should become second nature for all persons using our lakes and streams for recreation."

By LARRY BURKE

A sophomore in Washington College was summoned to the President's office and gently admonished that only perseverance and industry would prevent that failure that would inevitably come to him through college and through life.

"But, General (President Robert E. Lee), you failed," remarked the sophomore.

"I hope that you will be more fortunate than I," was the tranquil answer.

To fail is no disgrace, but to fail and never rise again is tragic. Sometimes a treasure reclaimed from a shipwreck at the bottom of the sea is twice as valuable as before.

EKCEP To Work 3,100 in Area

Plans to administer a 1975 Summer Youth Program have been announced by Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program (EKCEP) Executive Director Virgil Osborne.

"The program is designed to provide meaningful work experience, financial assistance and encouragement to remain in school for more than 3,100 economically disadvantaged youths in the 22 Eastern Kentucky counties served by EKCEP," Osborne said. Through the program, communities will also be provided services that otherwise would not be available, Osborne added.

Through its 1975 Summer Youth Program, EKCEP will provide short-term employment for students who will be returning to the regular secondary school program in the fall, recent graduates who plan to enroll in higher education or vocational training in the fall and recent graduates who have no definite occupational goal and for whom no training or job opportunity immediately exists.

The program will be operated in two major segments. Those youths between 14 and 22 who will be returning to secondary school in the fall will be provided services through contractual agreement with respective boards of education in the area. Youths who were high school seniors this year and college youths and dropouts who are eligible and who indicate they are planning to return to school, college or vocational or technical school in the fall will be provided services through local Community Action Agencies.

Program activities will not extend beyond Aug. 15. Participants will be paid the federal minimum wage ($2.10 per hour) for actual hours worked and will be afforded workmen's compensation. It is anticipated that enrollees will work an average of 160 hours during an eight-week period.

Eligibility is based on need as evidenced by family income and size. Youths age 14 to 22 who feel they may be eligible and would like to participate in the program should contact their school superintendent if they will be returning to the regular secondary school program in the fall or local Community Action Agency if they are graduates or have dropped out.

The 22 counties served by EKCEP and participating in the 1975 Summer Youth Program are Floyd, Bell, Breathitt, Carter, Clay, Elliott, Harlan, Jackson, Johnson, Knott, Knox, Lawrence, Leslie, Letcher, Magoffin, Martin, Menifee, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Pike and Wolfe.

Homemaker Aid To Be Expanded

Frankfort, Ky.—Commissioner Jerry Hissong, Bureau for Social Services, has announced to members of the bureau's Advisory Council that a program to provide expanded homemaker services to Kentucky's aged has been approved by Gov. Julian M. Carroll.

The expanded service program outlined by Commissioner Hissong involves establishing positions for home service aides to serve in most of Kentucky's 120 counties.

"The primary goal of this new program is to assist many elderly Kentuckians maintain independent living in their own home, rather than to place them in nursing homes or the homes of relatives."

The Home Service Aide program is to be carried out in two phases. Phase I will involve placing the aide in the field to screen those persons in need of emergency services. Other needs also will be assessed during this period. In Phase II, the aides will begin delivering the long-term services required by each individual.

The kinds of services include:
—Personal care services such as bathing, feeding and health care;
—Transportation and escort services;
—Recreation and companionship;
—Planning and preparation of meals;
—General cleaning and minor home repairs.

Hissong said that the Home Service Aide program is just the beginning of a broad plan aimed at providing increased assistance and expansion of services to Kentucky's aged, blind and disabled.

The mpg cars:
34 mpg. EPA hwy. test.
23 mpg. EPA city test.

Today you don't have to buy an import to get a car with high EPA test mileage.

Now you can order one of Ford Motor Company's newly re-engineered Pintos, Mustang II's or Bobcats that were rated at 34 miles per gallon in the EPA highway dynamometer test and 23 miles per gallon in the city dynamometer test.

We call them our MPG cars. They're starting to arrive at dealers' showrooms.

They each got EPA test mileage that's better than 135 little foreign cars. Better than any American as well, except two that you have to equip specially with an optional engine with a $50 extra sticker price.

You also get the widest choice from Ford Motor Company. Count 'em—we have eight models that were rated at 34 mpg. in the highway test and 23 mpg. in the city test. VW has five at our mileage or better. Datsun, only three. All of GM, only two. Toyota, none.

What's more, since we introduced our '75's, we've re-engineered axle ratios, carburetion, and engine timing on many of our cars in every size. So today, in mid-1975, most Fords and Mercurys coming to dealerships are getting better gas mileage than before.

If you didn't know it before, you know it now. You don't have to buy an import to get a high gas mileage rating. Or to get low prices. No GM cars, and only three of the 153 import cars have lower sticker prices than a Ford Pinto MPG 2-door.

Finis of the import myth.
We got the Beetle beat by a mile.

33 mpg. hwy. test.
22 mpg. city test.

34 mpg. hwy. test.
23 mpg. city test.

For over 25 years, VW Beetle has been known for its excellent gas mileage. Now in EPA tests, the eight Ford Motor Company MPG cars beat the Beetle's EPA Buyer's Guide figures, 34 mpg. to 33 mpg. in EPA highway tests and 23 mpg. to 22 mpg. in EPA city tests.

Have we got a choice for you!
More than Toyota.
More than VW and Datsun put together.

You get more than great gas mileage at Ford and Lincoln-Mercury dealers. You also get the luxury of choice. Subcompact Pintos and Bobcats, including station wagons. Sporty personal size Mustang II's. Compact Mavericks and Comets. Luxurious precision size Monarchs and Granadas. And exciting 1976 Capri II's, the new, sexy European.

So whatever kind of small car you need, come to the leader in small cars. Ford Motor Company has 26 models in all. Toyota offers only 17. VW and Datsun, only 12 each.

What does EPA mean?

You've been seeing those initials used in connection with gas mileage for over a year now. Here's what they mean to you as a car buyer:

Each year, the United States Environmental Protection Agency rates the gas mileage of all domestic and foreign cars sold in this country. The ratings are the results of dynamometer tests that simulate both city and highway driving conditions. These tests produce the government ratings by which you can compare gas mileage.

However, the main thing to remember is that the gas mileage you actually get on the road depends on you. Your type of driving. Your driving habits. Good maintenance. Road and weather conditions. And how your car is equipped. Some conveniences such as automatic transmissions and power steering can reduce gas mileage.

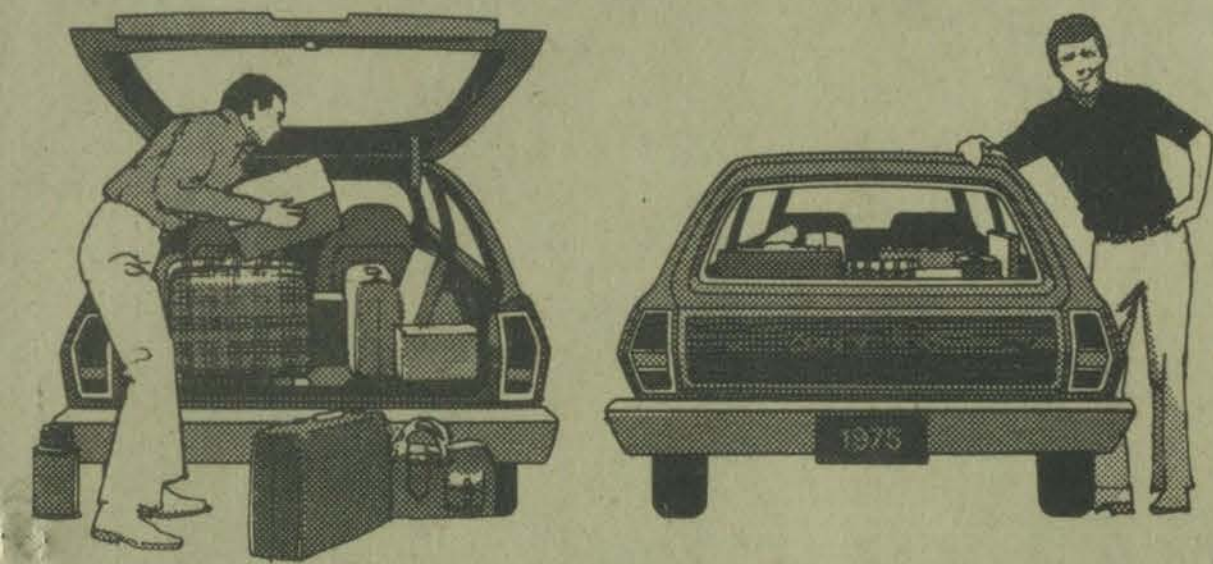

For example, here's how the MPG cars performed in the EPA tests with and without automatic transmissions:
Without Automatic Transmission: 34 mpg. hwy. test/23 mpg. city test.
With Automatic Transmission: 30 mpg. hwy. test/21 mpg. city test.

Cars from Ford Motor Company, All with 34 mpg fuel economy.*

*34 mpg. EPA highway dynamometer test, 23 mpg. city test. MPG cars come with 2.3 litre 2V 4-cyl. engine, 4-speed man. trans., 3.18 axle and catalytic converter at no extra cost.

Here's where our small cars beat their small cars.

Our Bobcat wagon gives you 23% more cargo space than the Pontiac Astre SJ Safari wagon. 23% translated: our wagon gives you 57.6 cubic feet of space, Astre 46.6 cubic feet. Another noteworthy fact: we're sticker priced $204 less. (Based on a comparison of sticker prices, excluding taxes, title, destination charges and dealer prep., which may affect the comparison in some areas.)

Pontiac Astre

Mercury Bobcat mpg

Ford Motor Company small cars offer you a wider choice of engine options than the imports. Examples: Mercury Monarch and Ford Granada have a choice of four engines: the std. 200 CID "6", the opt. 250 CID "6", the 302 CID V-8 and the 351 CID V-8. The Maverick offers three engines. With the imports such as Toyota, Datsun and VW, there is no choice. You take the engine that comes with the car.

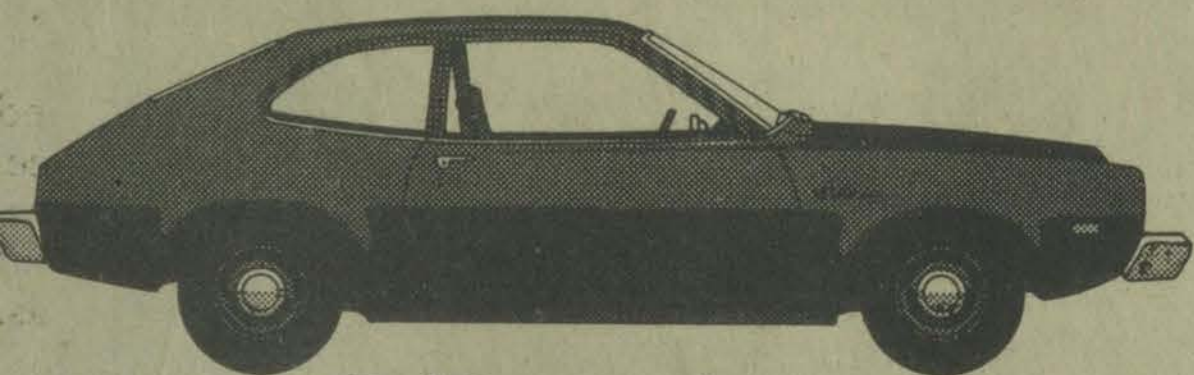

Ford Motor Company also has a wider choice of options than any import. We let you personalize or tailor your car to your taste and to your pocketbook. Many of our small cars offer features like AM/FM stereo deck, power steering, power front disc brakes, forged aluminum wheels, cast spoke or styled wheels, vinyl roof, sunroof, special glamour paints—you name it.

Our small cars have the same type of Ford Motor Company Lifeguard Design Safety Features found in our Lincoln Continentals and Mark IV's—including safety-designed roof and front-end structures, side door beams and protective bumpers.

Some imports have better mileage. But you pay the price.

VW Rabbit $3330.
38 mpg. EPA hwy. test/24 mpg. EPA city test.

Ford Pinto mpg 2-dr. $2769.
34 mpg. EPA hwy. test/23 mpg. EPA city test.

Although VW Rabbit did get a superior gas mileage rating in the EPA Buyer's Guide highway category, its advantage over Pinto MPG was only 1 mile per gallon in the city test.

So before you hop into a Rabbit for its gas mileage, take a second look at the price you have to pay for it. Instead of a Rabbit, you could be driving a Pinto and enjoy a $561 sticker price advantage. That $561 can buy you a lot of gas. And you'll be secure in the knowledge that Pinto surrounds you with more car. Compared to the Rabbit, Pinto's longer, wider, and more than 700 pounds heavier. And Pinto includes reliable solid state ignition as standard equipment. You don't get it on Rabbit.

Base sticker prices excluding title, taxes, destination, and dealer prep. VW mileage based on EPA Buyer's Guide. Price comparison based on sticker prices, excluding taxes, title, destination and dealer prep., which may affect comparison in some areas.

Our high resale values: they tell you something.

No one thing tells you more about a car than the price people are willing to pay for a used one. When you compare current NADA trade-in values, you see that Ford Motor Company small cars' record for high resale value is tough to beat.

For example, National Automobile Dealers Association figures show that a 1973 Pinto 2-door sedan today has retained a higher percentage of its original sticker price than any '73 Chevy Vega.

Here's another example of trade-in value. A 1973 Mustang 2-door hardtop has retained a higher percentage of its original sticker price than a '73 Pontiac Grand Am, Dodge Charger "6" or V-8, Buick's Opel and Dodge Colt.

We've got the lowest priced small car built in America. With 11 small cars under $3,500.

Ford Pinto mpg 2-door Sedan.
America's lowest priced small car.

Ford Maverick Family Sedan.
America's lowest priced 4-door car.

At $2,769 (base sticker price, excluding title, taxes, destination, and dealer prep.), Ford Pinto MPG 2-door is the lowest priced car built in America. It's also below any VW and any Datsun.

Need a family sedan? You can get a Maverick 4-door with a sticker price of $3,061. That's $148 lower than Chevy's lowest priced Nova 4-door (comparison of base sticker prices, excluding taxes, title, destination and dealer prep., which may affect comparison in some areas). And in EPA tests, the Maverick with its 200 CID "6" got 17 mpg. in the city test and 24 mpg. in the highway test, compared to 16 mpg. city and 21 mpg. highway for the Nova. (EPA Buyer's Guide mileage.)

The point is, when you come to the leader in small cars, you're coming to where the real values are.

'76 Capri II. Even more exciting than the original sexy European.

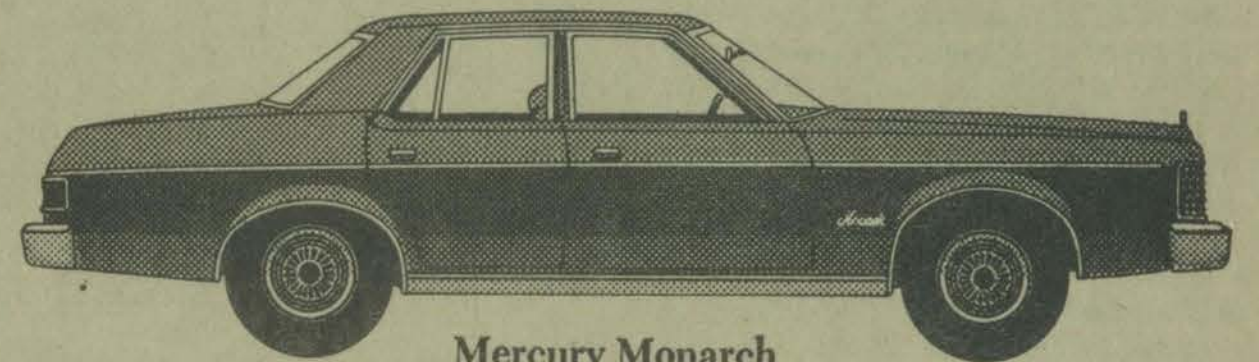

In the government EPA tests, Capri II, with its new 2.3 litre overhead cam engine and standard 4-speed transmission, got 27 miles per gallon in the highway test and 18 miles per gallon in the city test. And it's loaded with features that come as standard equipment: rack and pinion steering (with optional power steering also available), full instrumentation including tach, power front disc brakes, reclining buckets, fold-down rear seat, steel belted radials.

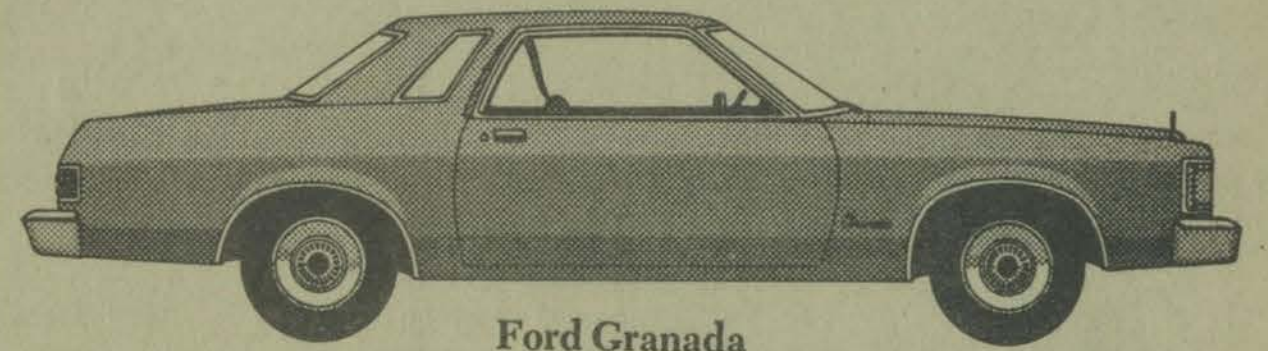

1976 Capri II

Yet its price is surprisingly low—$132 less than Toyota Celica GT, $583 less than Audi Fox 2-door, $832 less than VW Scirocco Coupe, and $2,167 less than Datsun 280Z Coupe. (Based on comparison of sticker prices, excluding taxes, title, destination charges and dealer prep., which may affect comparisons in some areas.)

Mercury Monarch/Ford Granada. The new entry sales champs for '75.

Mercury Monarch

Ford Granada

Last fall we introduced a new breed of small luxury cars. And America showed us they were just what everyone was waiting for. Ford Granada and Mercury Monarch have outsold all the new domestic small car entries—Chevy Monza, Pontiac Astre, Olds Starfire, Buick Skyhawk, and AMC Pacer—combined.

Here are a few other things you might want to know. Instead of Toyota Mark II, consider the Limited Edition Ford Granada. Granada's EPA highway test mileage with its 250 CID "6" and manual transmission is only one mile per gallon lower. And Granada's sticker price is $2,226 lower.

Instead of a Volvo 242, consider a Limited Edition Mercury Monarch. Its sticker price is $2,111 lower.

You can get a Ford Granada whose sticker price is $1,251 less than VW Scirocco. And $1,251 buys a lot of gas.

Instead of a mid-size Olds Cutlass Supreme, you could come within an inch-and-a-half of its front seat leg and headroom in a Mercury Monarch and enjoy a $271 sticker price advantage.

These sticker price comparisons exclude taxes, title, destination charges and dealer prep., which may affect comparisons in some areas.

Kentucky Afield

By JOHN WILSON

Several lakes around Kentucky now are reporting that the white bass are "in the jumps." This is a signal for those who like their fishing fast-paced and exciting to hitch up the boat and head for the water.

Basically, jump fishing means locating white bass (and sometimes black bass as well) feeding on schools of forage fish. Most of the time they aren't hard to locate, since much of the activity will be on the surface. Once the angler spots the feeding fish and moves quietly into casting range, he may catch a fish, or at least get a strike, on each cast until the school submerges.

Tackle for jump fishing should be designed for long casts. This means a fairly light line, a long rod and a comparatively heavy lure with a little wind resistance. Flashing spoons and weighted spinners are favorites.

Jump fishermen on Herrington Lake have developed another lure that works well—the "plunker and fly" combination. This is a top-water popping lure with the hooks removed and a streamer fly attached to the rear with about 18 inches of strong monofilament line. The hookless lure not only gives the combination the necessary weight for long casts, but the sound it makes also possibly attracts fish by imitating the splash of a feeding white bass.

While retrieving the lure near the surface is productive, it will often produce only small fish. The older, smarter and bigger whites will sometimes stay beneath the school of forage fish, waiting for minnows crippled by the energetic youngsters to sink.

To catch these larger fish, just reel your lure into the school and let it sink. A fish will often take it as it flutters down through the water.

Sometimes, particularly in shallow lakes such as Kentucky and Barkley, the forage fish will not be on the surface but congregated around some underwater cover, such as gravel or sand bars. Although there will be no sign of surface activity, the white bass will be feeding in the same areas. Trolling is a good way to locate these underwater schools.

Another good area to look for schooling whites is around bridge pilings, particularly if there is a current. Cast as close to the pilings as possible, even letting the lure bump off them.

White bass will be active in the jumps all summer and into the early fall. Since black bass fishing often slows down considerably in the hot summer months, it's usually a good idea to take a jump-fishing rig along, even if your primary quarry is black bass. If the blacks aren't biting, you can perhaps find some hungry white bass willing to keep your from having a fishless trip.

Announces Position Changes

Two new staff members, Ron Daley and Lyn Adams, were recently added to the Appalachian Learning Laboratory at Alice Lloyd College. Mike Mullins, former director of ALC's Appalachian Oral History Project, has been named director of the laboratory.

Mullins explains that the "Appalachian Learning Laboratory is a composite of the Appalachian-emphasis programs at ALC which are developing resources concerned with the area through the use of students." The ultimate goal of the laboratory, according to Mullins, is to make Alice Lloyd College a center for Appalachian life and culture.

Mullins, director of the Oral History project since October, 1972, is a native of Hi Hat. He received his BA in history from Berea College and his master's degree from the University of Cincinnati.

Daley, who is from Watford City, N. D., replaces Mullins as director of the ALC campus Appalachian Oral History Project and Appalachian Term. The AOHP involves students who go out into the community to interview resident historians—resource people of all ages. The students tape record the recollections about the people, events, stories and songs that help tell the history of the region.

These tapes are then edited and transcribed by the students and are made available to scholars, writers and others interested in the study of Appalachia.

Announce Services

On the third Saturday night in June, at 7 o'clock there will be a feet washing at Tom's Creek Free Will Baptist Church at Ivel, Ky. The Rev. Bill Campbell will be bringing the message. Campbell will be bringing the message on Sunday, and dinner will be served on the ground.

College Announces History Project Grant of $20,000

Alice Lloyd College has been informed that it will receive a $20,000 grant from the Steele-Reese Foundation of New York to help finance activities of the Appalachian Oral History Project.

The project is a joint venture between ALC, Lees Junior College, Appalachian State University and Emory and Henry College, and it is directed by Michael Mullins, a native of Hi Hat.

The Appalachian Oral History Project involves students who go out into the community to interview resident historians—resource people of all ages. The students tape record the recollections about the people, events, stories and songs that help tell the history of the region.

These tapes are then edited and transcribed by the students and are made available to scholars, writers and others interested in the study of Appalachia.

The grant will be divided among the four schools to carry out their ten-week summer programs.

The A.O.H.P. is in its fourth year of operation. During this period more than 2,000 interviews have been collected.

Floyd County Health Notes

By DONNA J. GRIFFITH (Health Educator)

Here's a reminder from the Floyd County Health Department. Kentucky law requires immunization during infancy, but some parents wait until it's time for school. The health department asks . . . Why wait so long before safeguarding your child's health? When he's two months old, a baby should start getting his shots, to protect him from polio, whooping cough, diphtheria and tetanus. Then, when he's about one year old, a single shot will give him lifetime immunity from measles and rubella. Why wait?

There are about a million and a half Americans who know they have diabetes and are working with their physicians to control their disease. But medical authorities estimate that there are just as many diabetics who don't know they're really sick. They think they are just tired and run down or have a minor complaint which will go away.

Diabetes doesn't go away, but it can be controlled with diet, exercise, medication and regular living habits. The sooner diabetes is diagnosed and the patient is under treatment, the better his chances are for a long full life. Many undiagnosed cases are mild ones which respond well to treatment. Often diet and reduction of excess weight alone are enough to control blood sugar levels. Diabetes is the sixth leading cause of death in Kentucky and the third leading cause of blindness in the United States. Diabetics tend to develop hardening of the arteries at an earlier age than other people, and are more likely to have heart disease or eye troubles. But, if diabetes is detected early and the patient learns to control his condition, he has a chance to prevent complications.

This disease is most likely to occur in people who have diabetic relatives, people who are overweight and constantly thirsty, or women who have given birth to a baby weighing over nine pounds. Others likely candidates are people who tire easily, eat excessively or find that wounds heal slowly. Anyone in these categories should be tested for diabetes either by his private physician or at the Floyd County Health Department.

The health department offers diabetes screening, free of charge, Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The National Apprenticeship Act was passed in 1937 to bring labor, management and government together in creating a program to train people as journeymen in skilled trades and crafts.

Belcher Named Program Leader

Richard T. Stai, executive director of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, announced recently the appointment of Bruce Belcher to the position of occupational program consultant for District 11—the Big Sandy Area Development District which includes Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin and Pike counties.

The appointment marks the initial stage in the development of an employee assistance service—an occupational program for troubled employees within the five counties.

Occupational programs in the state of Kentucky are the most recent effort to improve the mental health of citizens by bringing to bear as many needed elements as possible at a point where, in the development of emotional problems, there is a high probability that they can alleviate the problem or arrest its progress. Among these elements are early intervention, high motivation, confidentiality and the support of having employment while going through treatment.

Development of the Employee Assistance Service within the district will initially involve establishment of an open line of communication and a mutual trust between local industries and human service delivery agencies such as Mountain Comprehensive Care Center.

In meeting the responsibilities of the position, Mr. Belcher will serve in a liaison capacity between employees of local industry and the information, screening and referral service units maintained by Mountain Comprehensive Care Center in each of the five counties.

The program will seek to reach the troubled employee while he is still employed, still capable of paying for his own treatment, and still capable of being helped. Full utilization of the service will benefit the employee, the employer and society.

Mr. Belcher is a native of Floyd county, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy F. Belcher, of Wheelwright. He was graduated from Wheelwright High School and attended Marshall University, Huntington, W. Va. where he received a B.A. degree in secondary education.

He was associated for two years with A.C.F. Industries in Huntington and six with Ford Motor Company's assembly plant at Wayne, Michigan, where he served as an industrial relations analyst.

Clerks Aim Candid Cameras

FRANKFORT, Ky.—“That's the ugliest thing I ever did see,” said the Eastern Kentucky housewife, eyeing her color portrait on her new Kentucky driver's license.

“We take whatever sits down in front of us,” the circuit court clerk replied in a matter-of-fact voice.

The comments of those charged with issuing drivers licenses and—since January of this year—making the color photographs which are part of the license are varied. They range from expressions of pleased surprise at the public's acceptance to, “The law says take 'em, and we take 'em.”

Carroll county Circuit Court Clerk Virginia Fothergill says that she, and her friends in front of the camera, are always pleased with what they get. She starts out by telling the applicant, “C'mon, let's get this darn thing over with. We all know each other anyway and we're all friends.”

Fothergill said she usually manages to draw forth a smile for the photograph by saying, “We want everybody to know that people in Carroll County are the happiest people in the state.”

Policy may change from county to county, as does the artistry of the photographer behind the Poloariod Color Pak II. Beyond the equipment, state law does not specify the physical setup the counties must use. That's up to the county; specifically, it's up to the circuit court clerk.

Jackson county Circuit Court Clerk Don Hayes built a small picture taking booth with a friend's help and materials supplied by the fiscal court. “Some people would be embarrassed,” said Hayes, “to sit for a picture before an audience.”

At Lexington, where they will have as many as 60-70 people at a time in one big room, there is no private booth. But the public seems to like the product, according to Kay Foley, who is in charge of the licensing office there.

Foley reports they get upwards of 90 requests for duplicates each week.

As in any place where a crowd must queue up, all types of people will be thrown together. Foley remembers one very nice gentleman who came in, not with, but at the same time as a woman in a hurry and in a bad mood. The room was already full of applicants.

She and the elderly man were being issued their applications simultaneously. She snatched the first one finished (it was his) and hurried back to the clerk at the camera, with the man following her.

When he came back past Foley's desk, he was looking at his new license. “When I came in here I was a 74 year old man; I'm going out as a 46 year old woman.”

He smiled, savoring the joke of his transformation. “And it only cost me four dollars.”

Jackson county's Don Hayes tells about two older men who came in wearing hats. Don suggested to the first that he remove his hat for the photograph.

“You make me take my hat off and I won't have my picture taken,” he was told. Hayes told him, “Fine, if you want your picture taken with your hat on, why, just leave your hat on.” The man then confessed that he was bald and didn't like to admit it.

He may be one of the few license holders wearing headgear in his picture, but if he is ever stopped by a patrolman and needs to identify himself, he will have that hat—in picture and in reality—firmly attached.

All of which proves what more than one of the clerks has noted: men and women are equally vain when it comes to posing for a picture. They look around for a mirror. They do a bit of quick hair-combing and tie straightening.

In Grayson county, Circuit Court Clerk Faye Pofeet reports that on the first day the new equipment was used, she filled out the card for applicant number one and told her she would now take her picture.

“Goodness gracious! I can't do that. I'll have to go out and get my hair done,” the woman shrieked. She fled, leaving the completed forms on the desk. She returned perfectly coiffed to complete the process—two weeks later.

In Louisville (where approximately one-fourth of all Kentucky driver licenses are issued), comments have been favorable. There are five licensing locations.

Director Eugene Hodges of the Kentucky Division of Driver Licensing said that acceptance of the photographs generally has been positive. Hodges said that after some initial problems with shipment of supplies, the program is going well.

The attitude of Mrs. Ruth Johnson, circuit court clerk at Hickman in Fulton county, seems to typify the feelings of circuit court clerks around the state.

Johnson says she and her clerk both take the pictures which go on the licenses and they take the time to do it as well as possible because the picture is going to be shown to a lot of people during the two-year license period.

Johnson concluded, “We want people to be pleased with the way it all turns out.”

Population Growth: What It Means

By PAUL D. WARNER
(Extension Sociologist, University of Kentucky College of Agriculture)

We have heard predictions that we are approaching the point of zero population growth (ZPG) in the United States. In support of this position observers pointed to the rapid decline in the birth rate from 25.2 per 1,000 population in the mid-fifties to the lowest level ever observed in the U.S. in 1973 (14.9 per 1,000).

Now the preliminary 1974 figures show a one per cent increase in the number of births in 1974, over 1973 (3,166,000 in 1974 compared with 3,141,000 in 1973). The birth rate increased from 14.9 to 15.0 per 1,000 in the past year. To the casual observer this increase appears to be contradictory to an established trend of a decreasing birth rate in this country.

What's happening? Are we going to larger families again? The answer is NO! The number of children per family continues to decline. The rise in the number of births in 1974 can be attributed to an increase in the number of women in the childbearing ages (15-44 years), rather than to an increase in the rate at which women are bearing children. The number of women in the childbearing ages increased two percent between 1973 and 1974, and according to projections, it will increase another 12 per cent by 1980. Women from ages 20-24 account for approximately one-third of all live births, and this age group increased from 5.5 million in 1960 to roughly 8.5 million in 1970 (over 50 percent more than in 1960)!

America's number of births went up last year not because each woman is having more babies, but because there are more women having babies. The women born during the post World War II baby boom are now in their child bearing years. And although on the average they are having fewer children, the total number of babies born in 1974 was greater than in 1973.

Thus, when examining the growth of our population through births, it is important to consider, both the birth rate and the number of women having children.

Another factor in population change is deaths. Our death rate dropped last year to the lowest level in history (9.1 per 1,000 population). There were an estimated 1,933,000 deaths recorded in 1974, which was 44,000 fewer than in 1973.

Therefore, fewer deaths together with more births contributed to an increase of 1,223,000 people in 1974.

The rate of natural increase of the population (the excess of births over deaths) has dropped from 16.0 in 1954 to 5.9 in 1974 (i.e., the population of the United States increased in 1974 at a rate of 5.9 persons per 1,000 population). The total population in the U.S. at the end of 1974 was estimated to be 211,400,000.

If these trends continue, the National Center for Health Statistics predicts that our population will reach ZPG, or a stable level, sometime around the year 2020.

Attorney General's Opinions

Charles D. Wickliffe, attorney for the Executive Department of Finance and Administration, asked if a circuit court judge can appoint a state agent to return to the Commonwealth a fugitive who has escaped or broken the terms of his bail after committing a felony. The office of the Attorney General held that only the county judge of the county in which the felony was committed, or from which the escape was made, can designate the agent. There is no statute authorizing a circuit judge to perform this duty.

E. G. Clemons, superintendent of Jackson county schools, inquired if a guidance counselor is entitled to a hearing under the Fair Demotion of Administrators Law when his position is being eliminated but he is being kept on as a teacher, drawing the same salary as he was when a counselor. The Attorney General's opinion was that no such hearing is called for. The reassignment is clearly a lateral transfer since the teacher will not suffer any reduction in rank or pay.

Richard M. Rawdon, Jr., Scott county attorney, asked if a dog warden has the same powers of arrest as a peace officer. Since a dog warden, under the Kentucky statutes, is not defined as a peace officer unless appointed, for example, as a deputy sheriff, the Attorney General's offices of the opinion that these officials do not have the power to arrest individuals in order to enforce the provisions of the dog laws. Dog wardens are required, however, to "arrest" unlicensed dogs running at large.

Patrick E. Price, a Flemingsburg attorney, wanted to know if a school board meeting, which has been called to discuss whether or not the basketball coach is to be rehired, can be closed. The coach has requested the meeting be open. It is the opinion of the office of the Attorney General that all meetings of a school board are required to be open to the public. If the basketball coach wishes to have the question of his employment open, he is entitled to have it so, although he is not permitted to take any part whatsoever in the meeting.

John T. Fowler, III, assistant Jefferson county attorney, asked if it were necessary to establish that a juvenile has become delinquent when prosecuting an adult for contributing to the minor's delinquency. It is the opinion of the office of the Attorney General that a formal delinquency finding against a juvenile is not required to determine whether or not an adult actually has contributed to the child's committing an unlawful act. All that is necessary is to discover whether the adult has committed acts specifically prohibited by law.

Steven Lowery, editor-in-chief of the Murray State News, inquired if he is entitled to have access to the Murray State University (SMU) faculty salary roster. The Attorney General's office held that MSU is a state agency and, as such, its records should be accessible to public inspection.

James S. Secrest, Allen county attorney, asked if a minister who is a resident of another state has the authority to solemnize marriages in Kentucky without first obtaining a license in this state from the county in which he is currently pastor. The Attorney General's office is of the opinion that the Kentucky legislature has the right to place restrictions upon marriage ceremonies conducted in the Commonwealth. One of these restrictions is that a license for solemnizing marriages must be procured by the practicing minister before he can legally marry any couple.

Robert L. Smoot, of Morehead asked if a Vietnam veteran may give up his rights under the G.I. Bill in order to further his schooling by obtaining benefits from the state's scholarship program for veterans. The Attorney General's office held that a veteran cannot elect to refuse federal benefits since the G. I. Bill has been repeatedly amended to include such conflicts as those in Korea and Vietnam, which were never officially declared as wars. Kentucky statute's provide scholarship benefits only for veterans of declared wars.

Mrs. Lucille Robuck, chairman of the Kentucky State Parole Board, asked if time spent in custody before sentencing should be credited to the time a prisoner serves before parole. It is the opinion of the Attorney General's office that the time should be credited to the prison term, but the parole board, in order to evaluate the prisoner's rehabilitation, may require him to spend some time in self-help programs within the correctional institution before parole consideration.

Flanery, Teacher Share Recognition

This year's outstanding Prestonsburg High School student, James David Flanery, senior, and his teacher, Ronald Robinson, were recognized by the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce and the First National Bank of Louisville, co-sponsors of the annual Star Student-Teacher Achievement Recognition Program given at the local, regional and state levels at the graduation exercises here June 9 and the Honors Day program, June 11, and each was presented a $100 U. S. Saving Bond.

To become a school's star student, each participant was required to take the American College Test (ACT) on or before December 31, 1974. The student who scored highest on the test was declared that school's star student. The student was then requested to name a star teacher, one who, in the student's opinion, made the most significant contribution to his or her scholastic achievement.

The State Star Student and teacher will be presented a certificate, plaque, and a $500 U. S. Savings Bond which will be presented at a statewide meeting of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce in August at the Kentucky State Fair.

New Jack Tales In Summer Play

"Jack and the Bean Tree and Other Tales," a play for the whole family based on the ever-popular Appalachian Jack tales, will open Sunday, June 15, in Cushing Hall on the Alice Lloyd College campus.

This play, produced by the ALC Appalachian Summer Theatre, will run each Sunday afternoon through August 3. There is no admission charge. The time is 2:30 p.m.

"Jack and the Bean Tree and Other Tales" is a continuation of last season's original Jack tales play. This new production was written by Director Kenneth Baldridge in collaboration with his drama students, and it is a combination of three Appalachian tales. "Jack and the Boogers" is a re-working of the familiar "Where's My Big Toe?". "Jack and the Bean Tree" is unmistakably the delightful children's tale in which Jack slays his first giant.

Has 89th Birthday

A surprise birthday party was given June 8 for Mrs. Nanay Jane Adkins, 89, of Harold. Mrs. Adkins was born June 8, 1886. The party was attended by Mrs. Adkins' sister, Phena Parsons, Violet Shelton and Rudolph Parsons, all of McDowell; twin nieces, Mrs. Pearl Martin and Mrs. Goldie Clark, both of Galveston; Mrs. Adkins' son, Evan Adkins, and wife, Goldie, and children Michael and Patty Sue, Jeff and Phena Howell and son Tracy, Mrs. Flaura Tackett, Raymond Hamilton, Earl and Sally Adkins and daughter, Phillip and Glenna Adkins and daughters, George and Bonnie Adkins and daughters, Greg and Clara Hall and children, James and Girdell Hall and son, Wendell and Mary Newman and daughter, Ralph and Joanne Adkins.

We want to express our gratitude to those who sent flowers and food, to the Floyd Funeral Home and the Free Will Baptist Church, their minister, the Rev. Clifford Austin, and the church singers. Thank you, and may God bless you all.

Salary Ordinance Voted Here Held Void by Herdman

The ordinance enacted May 1 by the Prestonsburg City Council to increase the salary of Mayor William O. Goebel, Jr. from $100 to $300 a month is not legal, the attorney general's office held last Thursday.

After the pay increase was voted, City Attorney Joe Hobson asked the attorney general for a ruling as to validity of the ordinance. Mayor Goebel later said that, although his expenses are greater than the amount paid him, he did not seek the increase in salary.

The opinion, written by Asst. Atty. Gen. Walter C. Herdman, held that the previously fixed $100-a-month salary is all that the mayor may receive during his present term of office.
