

Lake Area Strip Mines Number 112

Land Surface-Mined In Last Three Years Twice Area of Lake

Surface mining in the Dewey Lake watershed peaked in 1974 when 55 permits covering 1997 acres of disturbed surface were granted.

Beginning in 1973, when 26 permits to mine 671 acres were granted to the four granted this year to date on 150 acres, a total of 3,777 acres of land has been opened to surface mining there.

That is roughly twice the acreage of the lake itself.

From the 1974 peak the number of permits in the upper Johns Creek basin, which feeds Dewey Lake, only 27 permits were issued last year, and these covered 961 acres. In all, 112 permits had been granted as of early this month.

These are figures of the U. S. District Corps of Engineers.

Although strip-mining is strongly suspected of supplying a large part of the silt load entering the lake, H. K. Crisp, chief of the Operations Division, Corps of Engineers, wrote John Rosenberg, of Prestonsburg, director of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of Kentucky, Inc., earlier this month:

"Surface mining is just a small part of the increased mining activity. Underground mining has increased significantly in the Dewey Lake watershed. A new railroad spur was constructed that required nine channel changes of Johns Creek. Loading tipplines, increased truck traffic and many more mining related activities have changed the land use characteristics of the basin . . ."

Mr. Crisp added, ". . . however, the Corps of Engineers lacks authority to regulate those surface disturbing activities outside the limits of Corps-owned land."

Influenza Near Epidemic Stage

Influenza, which spared Floyd county till long after other sections had been hit, attained epidemic proportions last week.

Although illness was more frequent in places where crowds gather, notably in the schools, all sections of the county have suffered in varying degree.

Prestonsburg High School, for example, had more than 200 of its 810 pupils absent last week, and seven teachers were ill. The percentage of absenteeism rose alarmingly near the 30 pct. mark set by the Floyd County Board of Education for the closing of a school.

The influenza is not the "killer type" such as the "swine flu" which is feared late this year, but is severe and has caused a number of deaths over the country.

Some of the school absenteeism may not have altogether been the result of influenza, it was surmised. "Absenteeism was worst during the state tournament," one educator admitted.

Judge Layne Named To Hear Jones Case

Judge Caswell P. Layne, of the 21st judicial district, has been designated by the Kentucky Supreme Court to preside as special judge in the trial of Eddie Jones on a charge of murder.

Judge Layne was appointed to hear the case after Judge Ralph N. Walter, of West Oiberty, had asked to be relieved of his appointment as special judge.

No date has been set by Judge Layne for the trial.

Judge Stumbo Returns $4,626 Excess Fees

County Judge Henry Stumbo announced last week that he has returned to W. J. May, county treasurer, $4,626 excess fees collected by his office for the year 1974.

The refund was made last Nov. 21.

Court Reverses Conviction Here On Booze Charge

The Kentucky Supreme Court last Friday ruled that elderly Dora Johnson and Bill See, of Melvin, were entitled to a directed verdict of not guilty in their circuit court trial here last year instead of the fines and jail terms imposed on them for possession of alcoholic beverages.

The court in a split vote held that there was "insufficient evidence to connect either Johnson or See with the contraband liquor."

The two were arrested after search of a building that had been known as Johnson's store yielded a large quantity of whiskey, beer, gin and vodka. But, the court pointed out, the officers failed to find any of the contraband liquors where the defendants lived.

At the trial of the case here Mrs. Johnson drew a 30-day jail term and was fined $50. See was sentenced to 60 days in jail and fined $100. Their attorney, A. A. Burchett, filed an appeal.

The majority court opinion said, in part:

"The only evidence to connect Johnson and See with the premises was that of a state trooper and a state detective who testified that the only people they ever saw around the abandoned building were Johnson and See. The officers testified also that Johnson and See had the reputation of selling and possessing alcoholic beverages. This simply is not sufficient to connect Johnson and See with the whiskey, beer, gin and vodka which was found and introduced as evidence against them."

The court granted that the two defendants might have owned the liquors but noted that there were a dozen residences surrounding the building in question and that these residents had as much access to the building as the defendants.

Discuss Industrial Sites

A portion of the Floyd county group formed at last week's seminar to discuss community problems with Commerce Commissioner Townsend. From left—State Representative James "Jitter" Allen, Mr. Townsend, Ted Nairn, of the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Joe P. Tackett, Jr., Prestonsburg city treasurer.

At the community development seminar held at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park last Wednesday for communities of the Big Sandy Area Development District Floyd county officials agreed to a recommendation to develop an industrial site owned by the local industrial development foundation, Jim Navolio, of the Kentucky Department of Commerce, Community Services division, announced.

In addition to the development of the site located on KY 1428 (Old US 23), Navolio said, it was recommended that the foundation search for other sites for possible industrial development. A site located behind the Community College in Prestonsburg was suggested for consideration.

The meeting, sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Commerce, was designed as an opportunity for community and local government leaders to discuss problems and possible solutions with state government officials.

Townsend Says Roads Critical Area Need

This Town...That World

I am, as a rule, willing to share with others of my meager store of information, but when an acquaintance blandly inquired the other day when Daylight Time begins I gave him only a blank stare. The fact is, I haven't the faintest idea, and if I did I wouldn't risk a firm statement on the matter.

We've written about birds and the feeders we have out for them till now those blackbirds have fled the hostile environs of the lowlands and landed squarely outside our window.

FOR THE BIRDS

Jean Burke writes to inform George Brown, yours truly, et al that these evening grosbeaks are nothing new around here, that they have been coming to her house since the fall of 1971.

Mrs. Burke says she has a special table with suet and bread scraps for a mockingbird, a brown thrasher and two small woodpeckers. They never eat at the feeder, and the result is that she winds up in the doghouse. For she gives these special guests her leftover cornbread, and when her husband asks about the cornbread for a bedtime snack, she has to admit that it's for the birds.

Seminar Hears Problems, Plans Of Area Groups

A "Developing Kentucky Communities Seminar" was held last Wednesday at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park by the Kentucky Department of Commerce as an opportunity for community and local government leaders of the Big Sandy Area Development District to discuss common problems and future development plans with state government officials.

Representatives of communities from Floyd, Magoffin, Johnson, Martin and Pike counties were invited by the Department to meet, with officials of the Department of Commerce and other state agencies, including the Departments for Natural Resources, Transportation, and the Office of Local Government.

In his address to the meeting, Commerce Commissioner Larry Townsend identified highways as one of the area's critical needs. The high cost of highway construction in the mountainous terrain of eastern Kentucky, coupled with the low traffic density of the area, is a major dilemma facing the administrators of state highway funds, Townsend said. He added that a newly-established energy road fund will prove $25 million through 1978 for construction, maintenance, and repair of roads in coal-producing counties.

He said that recommendations for road projects under this program will be made to the Department of Highways through the county fiscal courts.

Another major problem facing the area, according to Townsend, is the lack of large amounts of level acreage to accommodate industrial growth, especially when considered on a county by county basis. The solution to this disadvantage proposed by Townsend was the concept of regional industrial sites drawing workers from throughout the area counties to a central, accessible point.

Grant To Help Community Park

U. S. Senators Wendell H. Ford and Walter "Dee" Huddleston this week notified County Judge Henry Stumbo that a $20,384 grant has been awarded to the Floyd fiscal court by the Department of Interior's Bureau of Outdoor Recreation for land acquisition and development for the Left Beaver Community Park at Minnie.

The funds, the senators said, are for the purchase of 5.63 acres of land and development of the park. Development work would include grading, general site improvement and a ballfield.

Judge Stumbo said the court has already paid $32,000 for land at the park site, which is at the junction of the Steele's Creek road with the Left Beaver highway. The Bureau of Outdoor Recreation grant will presumably reimburse the court for money expended on land.

The fiscal court at its meeting last week authorized Judge Stumbo to employ an engineer to do preliminary work on planning the park, but the judge said H. K. Bell Engineers, of Lexington, have already done preliminary planning and that the authorization needed is for the employment of an engineering firm to do the final plans.

A spokesman for the Left Beaver group said last week approximately 11 acres of land are available for the park and that committees which meet the last Monday of each month are at work soliciting pledges of contributions toward the founding of a community center on the tract.

James L. Reed, of Drift, is general chairman of the community drive for the park. (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

Radar Operation Begins Saturday, Drivers Warned

The Prestonsburg police department announced this week that it will begin the operation Saturday of radar equipment recently purchased by the city for the control of motor vehicle speeds here.

Use of radar followed the erection of speed limit signs and other signs announcing that speeds are radar-monitored over the city.

City Manager Curtis Clark said police have been asked to be as lenient as possible, particularly at first, with drivers, but he emphasized that there will be no favorites played.

"We do not want Prestonsburg to be called a 'speed trap town,' and we will not try to make the use of radar a money-making venture. But radar will be used to control speeds of vehicles."

Biggest Changes in New Route For KY 80 Will Be in Floyd

The corridor for relocation of KY 80 between Hazard and US 23 at Water Gap has been identified and consultants to design the new road have been named, Transportation Secretary John C. Roberts announced last Friday.

(The accompanying map shows the new route planned for the highway. Two of the big changes in routing will apparently be at Langley (Maytown) where the new road will reportedly leave old KY 80 and go up Turkey Creek, crossing the mountain to Garrett; the other, leaving US 23 at Water Gap and missing both Allen and Martin, intersecting old KY 80 in the vicinity of Dinwood.)

Based on preliminary studies, Roberts said, the proposed "resource recovery road" will begin at the end of the Daniel Boone Parkway in Hazard and run generally northeast, paralleling on the north existing KY 80 in Perry and Knott counties. In this county it will continue northeast to US 23 at Water Gap, crossing and recrossing KY 80 on the way. The total length will be about 42.5 miles.

Roberts said the Department of Transportation is now completing a contract with Brighton Engineering Company, of Frankfort, for over-all supervision of the design phase of the project.

The four consulting firms employed to prepare final right-of-way and construction plans are H. A. Spalding, Inc., of Hazard; Hurst-Rosche Engineers, Inc., of Frankfort; Haworth and Associates, Inc., also of Frankfort; and Johnson, Depp and Quisenberry, of Owensboro.

Spalding will have the Perry county section; Hurst-Rosche, Knott county; Johnson, Depp and Quisenberry, the section west of Langley in Floyd county, and the last section on to US 23 and Water Gap, is to be designed by Haworth.

Roberts explained that the department expects to hold public meetings in each of the three counties, reviewing its activities and answering the questions of interested citizens. These meetings are tentatively scheduled for sometime in June. It will be possible then to show the alignment to be followed by the new road and where points of access will be located.

Secretary Roberts said, "By fall this year we expect to have plans advanced so that needed right-of-way can be identified. Then we will be able to start appraising and buying the property we must have."

"Gov. Carroll," he said, "has directed us to push this project to completion just as fast as possible, considering the complexity of designing in building a modern four-lane highway. Since it is to be financed with state funds we will avoid many of the time-consuming phases of federally-supported projects."

Funds for the KY 80 project are provided by the severance tax package proposed by Gov. Carroll and enacted at the just-concluded session of the General Assembly. When announcing his plans, Gov. Carroll said the project is expected to cost $176 million.

Bonds to finance construction will be sold by the Kentucky Turnpike Authority and retired by annual charges to the revenues of the severance tax.

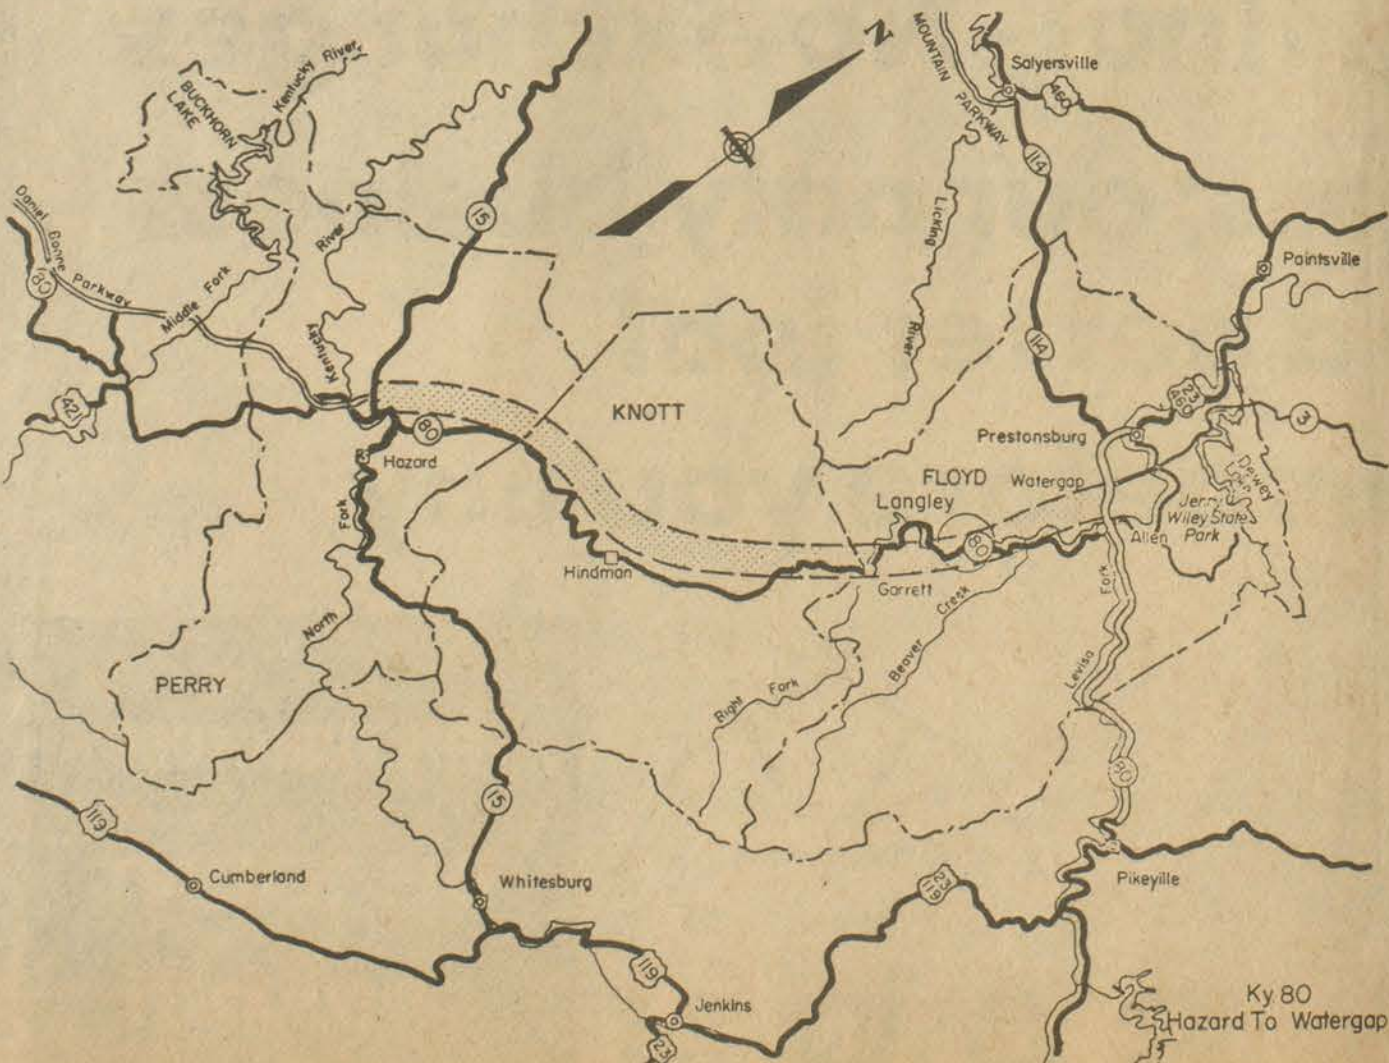

The need for a modern highway in the KY 80 corridor has been recognized since the early 1960's when a citizen's committee proposed a better road system for Eastern Kentucky.

Construction of the Daniel Boone Parkway and the inclusion of US 23 in the Appalachian Highway Program have served to heighten regional interest in a connecting link.

Gov. Carroll has identified KY 80 a "resource recovery road" because of its significance to the coal industry in Eastern Kentucky, particularly since the demand for coal has escalated.

"By assuring funding for its construction with severance tax, the governor showed how he sees its im-

Scout Units Prep For Bicentennial

More than 100 Scouting units in this area are preparing for their launching of the nation's Bicentennial observance throughout the Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America.

The theme of the observance is "Heritage '76", a look at history; "Festival USA," related to a greater knowledge of the country; and "Horizon '76," a look into the nation's future.

Cub Scout packs, Scout troops, and Explorer units throughout the council are scheduling participation in national and local activities and have started plans for monthly program themes and features, according to John Fischer, Council president.

"In this bicentennial year, programs will feature activities stressing the conservation of human resources and home, as well as traffic and outdoor safety through increased skills," Fischer said.

Cub Scout packs will plan monthly themes including a bicycle safety and a bike rodeo, sports carnival, Cub Scout olympics and historical activities.

Scout troops will include in their regular program such features as safety, emergency preparedness, personal fitness, cycling, and water safety.

Brother, Sister Win Ky. Titles

Lance Blackburn inspecting one of his pines.

A Floyd county brother and sister have between them won three state project championships, it was announced last week by Jack Friar, Floyd county 4-H agent.

Eighteen-year-old Lance Blackburn, of Stanville, is the winner of two state titles—one in soil and water conservation, the other in forestry. His sister, Vicki, who is 16, won her championship in the state strawberry project. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Blackburn, of Stanville, and both are members of the Betsy Layne 4-H Club.

Lance Blackburn, who now is a student at Prestonsburg Community College, in his soil-water conservation project planted 4,300 trees and sowed cover crops to prevent erosion; built a dam on his father's farm and stocked the small lake with fish, has taken soil samples and fertilized and reseeded the farm as needed. His winning forestry project involved the planting of trees and timber improvement work.

He has twice been Floyd county's outstanding 4-H boy, was a member of the state championship poultry judging team from this county and won a silver medal at the national poultry judging event in Chicago. He also was a member of the state vegetable judging team and was in the top three in state demonstrations. Young Blackburn has worked as a teen leader in 4-H.

His sister Vicki, who is 16, is a junior student at Betsy Layne High School. She has been involved in her strawberry project six years, and has a half-acre of strawberries now. Last year she netted more than $1700 on her strawberries.

Miss Blackburn is a county and area demonstration champion, is a teen leader and participated in the 4-H style revue.

Licensure Board Meeting Slated At May Lodge

The group home level of care which would provide an alternative to institutionalization for Kentucky's mentally retarded-developmentally disabled has been approved by the Certificate of Need and Licensure Board.

Approval by the board ratifies action taken by the state Comprehensive Health Planning Council last month.

Staff from the Department for Human Resources will assist a committee from the board in establishing regulations for the new level of care. The department will also license facilities as they are established.

Group homes offer these individuals the opportunity to learn to meet their own personal needs and live a normal life within their community. Residents of group homes work at sheltered workshops or other jobs and contribute a portion of their salaries to help meet the costs of their care.

Future meetings of the board will include tours of health facilities around the state. In May, the board will meet at Jenny Wiley State Park, and tour primary care centers in the Floyd-Knott county area.

The board approved the following applications from Eastern Kentucky health facilities and services:

Nim Henson Geriatric Center, of Jackson, to convert 22 personal care beds to intermediate care beds.

Lee County Personal Care Home, Inc. to convert 20 personal care beds to intermediate care beds.

The Laurvels, Inc., of Harlan, to construct 20 new personal care beds to an existing 30-bed personal care home.

Diagnostic and Evaluation Center of Corbin to establish a Region C in-patient diagnostic and evaluation center for mentally retarded and/or developmentally disabled children.

Proffitt Family Care Home, of London, to establish a three-bed family care home.

Oneida Nursing Center, of Oneida, Clay county, to establish a primary care center to provide midwifery, pediatrics, general health and emergency services.

Golden Years Nursing Home, of Monticello, to construct a 50-bed facility with 30 intermediate care beds and 20 personal care beds.

Hancock Family Care Home, of Monticello, to establish a three-bed family care home.

St. Claire Medical Center, Inc., of Morehead, to add 58 acute care beds.

East Kentucky Health Services Center, of Topmost, and East Kentucky Health Services Center, of Wayland, to construct a primary care center are from the same applicant. The board approved both applications with the stipulation that the applicant choose one of the two sites before the certificate is issued.

Tri-City Medical Complex, Valley View Hospital, of Cumberland, to delicense the 14 acute care beds and to develop the medical center complex to be done in two phases.

Lynch Medical Services, of Lynch, to establish a primary care center was disapproved as the board had already approved Tri-City Medical Complex to provide multi-levels of care in the same area.

Terry Family Care Home, of London, to establish a two-bed family care home, was disapproved because of failure to meet licensure standards.

A Responsible Action

It is quite possible that many in this area had never truly appreciated the Highlands Medical Center and its splendid facilities until it was virtually closed during a threatened strike. The return to normal operation is not the only source of gratification to us, although that is of prime importance. We find the fact that union and management modified their divergent stances and that both yielded—all to the end that hospital services could be renewed—is a heartening indication that they are people of goodwill with a sense of responsibility to others.

Hold the Parents Responsible

The Legislature is adjourned, and any suggestions we have to offer legislators come too late perhaps for this year. Yet we have a suggestion for consideration at a future session. We would ask that thought be given to a law which would make parents responsible for the violation of personal and property rights of others by their children who have not attained their majority. First of all, we have an idea that much of the juvenile delinquency we hear so much about these days results from adult delinquency and downright neglect by parents of their children. Next, we consider this: If your dog or mine bites another, we are responsible for the damage; or if any other dumb animal owned by us causes damage, we are held to account for it. Then why not lay on parents the liability for the vandalism, the theft of the belongings of others, or the personal attacks on others committed by their children? As matters now stand, we are merely coddling potential criminals, encouraging them through insipid laws to go out and do more damage—and all the while the persons responsible for these youngsters being in the world, to start with, are relieved of any requirement to care for and control them.

mediate worth," Roberts said, "However, its total value is evident to everyone interested in promoting a broad-based economy in eastern Kentucky."

The secretary added: "There is so much regional interest in the KY 80 project that I feel obligated to keep everyone abreast of developments that affect it. I just want to assure all of them we will move this project just as fast as we know how."

"I personally hope the police do not have to arrest one driver," Clark added. "There will be no trouble for anybody if speed limits are observed, but the public must be protected."

The city manager said some residents have asked that "speed bumps" be installed in their streets because speeding vehicles have been a threat to children and others."

The radar equipment to be in use here may be attached to a police cruiser or operated manually. It "locks in" on the speed of the vehicle under observation so that the driver may confirm his or her speed as it is registered.

declaring there was more than sufficient evidence to connect the two defendants with the premises.

The Supreme Court upheld a ruling by Elliott Circuit Judge Ralph N. Walter in favor of Ray O. Brown.

James Howard, who fell into a grease pit in Brown's garage while inspecting a car he was considering buying, had sued, but the court said the evidence disclosed that the area was well lighted around the grease pit and that Howard was wearing dark glasses at the time. Brown is state representative for the 99th District.

The Supreme Court also upheld Boyd Circuit Judge William E. Fanning's decision to dismiss the retrial of a jury award of $65,000 to the late Ted Gearhart, formerly of Floyd county, in a condemnation proceeding involving the state highway department.

The Court of Appeals had several years ago reversed that jury judgment and ordered a retrial, but after a 1966 attempt to set the case for trial, all further attempts were abandoned.

Fanning found last year that attorneys for both parties were deceased or not available and that the delay of more than seven years was unreasonable.

Floyd County Health Notes

Friday, April 2, the Floyd County Health Department will conduct a glaucoma clinic from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and from 1 to 3 p.m. Glaucoma is a serious disease that can cause blindness if left undetected or untreated. It usually strikes persons age 35 and over slowly and painlessly. Because of this many people who have glaucoma are unaware of it.

The health department advises all persons over 35 years of age to be screened for glaucoma at least once every two years. Having this simple test could save your eyesight.

Monday, April 5, a public health nurse will hold an outpost clinic at the Beaver Valley Clinic in Martin. Clinic hours will be from 10 a.m. to 12 and from 1 to 2 p.m. with the following medical services being available: immunizations, TB skin tests, diabetes screening, blood pressures and pap smears.

These services are free and all persons in the Martin area are urged to take advantage of them.

COURAGE—THERE'S HOPE!

There's always somebody at hand to prescribe for what ails you. I am encouraged not to give up but to rely on a mess of poke, or sulphur and molasses or generous draughts of sassafras tea—either, or, or all three—to pull me through.

One of these "doctors" this week asked me if I was aware that there was a time when folks believed that your blood in the springtime turned to lead and that it in turn gravitated to the seat of your pants. I hadn't, but now I know whence came the oft-heard injunction, "Get the lead out."

ODE TO APRIL 15

With that certain date just a matter of two weeks ahead, I may be forgiven for printing here the following which some unnamed versifier compiled in one of his more bitter moments:

Tax his cow, tax his goat,
Tax his pants, tax his coat,
Tax his ties, tax his dirt.

Tax his chew, tax his smoke,
Teach him taxes is no joke.
Tax his car, tax his gas,
Tax the roads he must pass.

Tax his land, tax his wage,
Tax the bed in which he lies,
Tax his tractor, tax his mule,
Tax the books used in school.

Tax him good and let him know
That after taxes he has no dough.
If he hollers, tax him more—
Tax him till he's good and sore.

Tax his coffin, tax his grave,
Tax the sod in which he's laid;
Put these words upon his tomb,
"Taxes drove me to my doom."

And when he's gone they won't relax—
They'll still be after Inheritance Tax.

Among the advantages Townsend attributed to the area is the large available labor force. He said the Big Sandy area can support more than 11,000 additional manufacturing jobs. There is also a great potential in the area for companies which hire predominantly women employees, he added.

Other action at the morning session of the seminar included presentations on the principles of community development, community water and sewer projects, industrial site access roads, and the development of industrial sites. During afternoon "community critique" sessions, groups from each county were formed to discuss local issues, problems and projects in more detail. Townsend said each community was encouraged to "become involved in its own plan for progress."

Officers Allege Gasoline Theft

Prestonsburg Policemen Keith Lawson and Craig Kilgore arrested Clayton Bailey Sunday night, charging him with theft by unlawful taking in the first degree.

Bailey, of Hippo, was charged in connection with the siphoning of gasoline from a number of trucks belonging to the VanHoose Lumber Company at West Prestonsburg. Officers alleged that Bailey had stolen about 20 gallons of gas at the time of his arrest. Warrants have also been issued for the arrest of two other persons on the same charge. Bailey, who was booked in Prestonsburg Police Judge Tom Lafferty's court, executed bond the following day.

Twenty persons were booked at the county jail over the past week on charges of public drunkenness.

Others booked at the county jail over the past week, charges against each and arresting officers follow:

Club To Distribute Seedlings in Area

Toward an effort to replenish dwindling wildlife habitat and food, the Dewey Lake Fish and Game Club is presently in its fifth year of distributing Autumn Olive seedlings to Floyd, Pike, and Johnson county residents. This year the club has obtained 5,000 seedlings, raising the total to 20,000 over the past five years.

The Autumn Olive is most noted as a producer of food for both game and song birds. It is also useful for erosion control, as screens and barriers, and even as an ornamental in landscape design. In the spring the Autumn Olive has small, yellow, sweet-scented, flowers that attract honey-bees. In the fall and winter the Autumn Olive has reliably heavy crops of red berries that furnish food for many kinds of birds and beautify the landscape. Under favorable conditions, Autumn Olive grows rapidly and has berries by its third to fifth year. By that time it is from 4-8 feet tall.

The Dewey Lake Fish and Game Club is distributing this year's seedlings free to residents through the Greenhouse Training Program on the Auxier Road. (Phone 886-6815)

Kentucky Power To Ask General Boost in Rates

Citing a losing battle with inflation as the main reason, Kentucky Power Company today (Wednesday) announced it is planning to apply for a general upward adjustment in all retail tariffs—the first in the company's more than 50-year history.

Waldo S. LaFon, executive vice-president of Kentucky Power, said, "We are preparing final testimony to present, in the very near future, to the Public Service Commission in Frankfort. The testimony will document the necessity of increasing annual revenues in order to enable us to continue to give satisfactory service to our customers."

He added that the amount of increase needed will be made public as soon as figures are completed.

The utility executive said the company has been on the brink of filing for the past few years, but up until now had been able to avoid it through rather drastic reductions in expenditures, such as delaying new construction, reduction in some customer services because of manpower cutbacks and delaying planned upgrading of lines and stations in some areas. "Most every electric utility in the nation during this same inflationary period found it necessary, some more than once, to seek additional revenues from customers by increasing rates," he said.

La Fon added that the company was somewhat reluctant to file, "because of the great pride we have taken in the fact we have never asked for a general increase, but the time is here. If we wait until we are in deep financial trouble, our customers will suffer."

With the filing, the company announced it also plans to "fold" into the base rate a portion of fuel costs now reflected under the fuel adjustment clause. "This will fix the cost of fuel in the base rate at approximate current costs, which will have the effect of virtually negating the fuel clause effect on customers' bills, as long as coal costs remain stable," La Fon said.

Currently, only about $4.50 per ton in coal costs is included in the base rate and the remainder is collected through the fuel cost adjustment.

He cautioned, though, that this doesn't mean the fuel clause is being eliminated, pointing out "if coal costs decline customers will receive a credit on bills and if the costs go up the adjustment will be upward."

Another consumer-oriented part of the filing plan includes a request for a change in the tariffs to allow the Equal Payment Plan, or budget billing, to be available to all residential customers. Presently only electric heat or total electric customers are eligible.

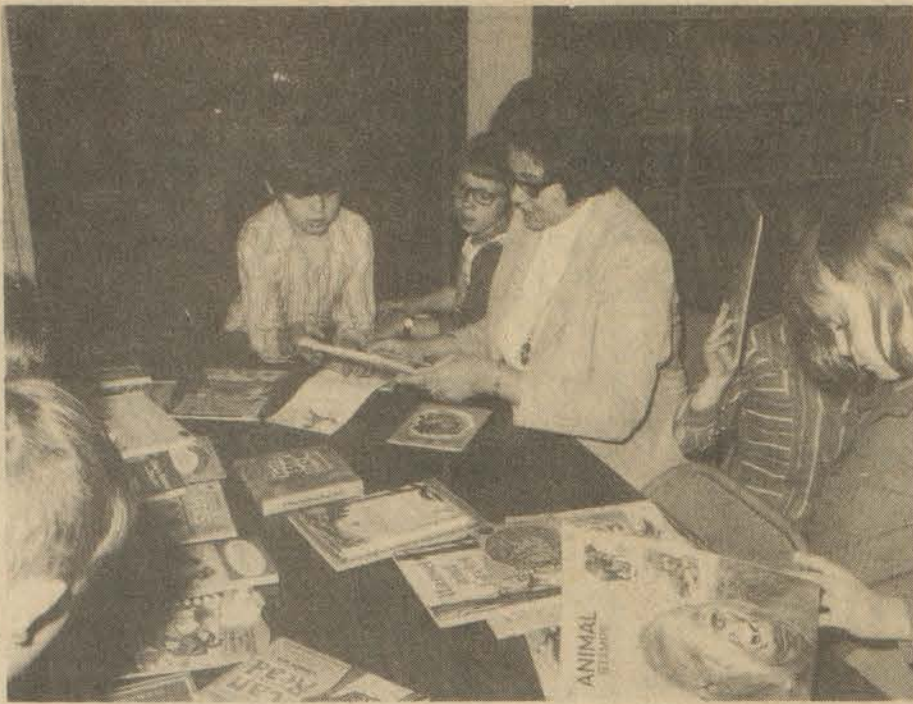

La Fon said that this was an attempt to help customers, especially those with air conditioning, by giving them the option of electing to spread out their electricity costs more evenly over a 12-month period. "Even with an increase," La Fon concluded, "we are confident our rates will remain among the lowest in the state and much lower than in many other areas of the country."

ANNOUNCE BIRTH OF DAUGHTER

Mr. and Mrs. Reese Ray, of the Auxier Road, announce the birth of their first child, a daughter, March 19 at the Methodist hospital, Pikeville. The child has been named Jessica Elizabeth. The paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Beekle Ray, of the Abbott Road, and the maternal grandmother is Mrs. Ola Wells, of Auxier.

A Bookish Air Prevailed

A parent volunteer assists students in selecting books for ownership during the book fair held last week at Clark Elementary School.

When totals were made after the book fair was over last week at Clark School, it was easy to see the two goals that had been set were surpassed: More children selected more books for ownership, and more parents were involved in the selection process and as school volunteers.

Louise Howard, the school librarian and book fair chairman, reported that 367 children made book selections, and a total of 1,017 books were selected and have been ordered.

Assisting Mrs. Howard and the children as parent volunteers were Alice Ratliff, Gayle Herald, Jan Dingus, Sue Hall, Carole Rice, Sue Nairn, Edwina Honn, Mary Sue Moore, Shirley Combs, and Hilda McKinney.

"Profits from the fair are going into an incentive program for all children in the school to encourage more reading. Details of this program are to be worked out shortly," John Pitts, the school principal, said.

Deskins Garb, Highly Visible

Frankfort, Ky.—If maintaining a high degree of visibility is any measure of success, Herbert "Herbie" Deskins, Jr., of Pikeville, was a smash in the just-concluded session of the General Assembly.

Often dressed in blue jeans and workshirt, Deskins was not hard to spot on the floor of the normally staid House of Representatives. But chances are the youthful legislator, described as "intense and outspoken" by one of his colleagues, would have attracted attention no matter what his attire. His reflections on his term as a representative reveal the figurative side of his visibility.

"I've taught political science and state government and I can say that the actual workings of government are completely different," he says. "The theory behind the passage of a bill is one thing, but the practical aspects of getting a bill passed is another."

Deskins called his term an experience that introduced him to the many intricacies of lawmaking. He cited a bill which would have raised juror's pay in the state to $15 per day as an example. "The bill didn't pass, but it was introduced, a prior bill passed during the '74 General Assembly calling for juror's pay of $12.50 was finally funded," he explained.

In looking at action taken during the session, Deskins expressed optimism about legislation affecting eastern Kentucky, especially the coal severance tax program.

"The severance tax program of Gov. Carroll is fantastic if the coal counties take advantage of it," he says. "In Pike county we have a good planning staff and Judge Rutherford will seek out what is beneficial for the county."

Deskins was a sole sponsor of House Bill 602, which declares all underground coal mines as gassy.

He says, "My working constituency unanimously supported the bill, but the smaller independent coal operators who talked with me feel the bill will put them out of business. All it will do is bring state laws in compliance with federal statutes, which these coal operators already abide by."

Deskins feels the future of eastern Kentucky as a whole looks great." He says, "When Lyndon Johnson campaigned in Martin county it had the highest unemployment not only in the state, but in the nation. Now, it has the highest employment in Kentucky."

Deskins, who served for six years as Pike County Attorney, says he first got involved in politics when he was five years old.

"The mines were shut down and my father ran for county court clerk of Johnson county. I helped hand out campaign literature and from then on—all through grade school, high school and college—I've been interested in politics," he says.

Community Service Program at PCC Lists New Classes

A short course, "Automobile Maintenance and Emergency Repair," will be taught by Ronald L. Carter as part of the Community Service Program at Prestonsburg Community College. Enrollment will be limited.

An intermediate Hatha Yoga Sanga (association) is being formed at Prestonsburg Community College through the Community Service Program. The sessions will be guided by Kathy McCavitt. Beginning April 5 and continuing as an on-going group gathering, the Sanga will meet each Monday evening from 7 to 9 p.m. in Room 216 of the Technology Building.

A knitting class will be taught by Mrs. Frances Rose, 6:30-8:30 p.m., Tuesdays, April 6 through May 25 in Building A, Room 1 on the PCC Campus. This class is for both beginners and those who are more advanced.

ONE DEAD AFTER PROTESTS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland—Violence erupted Friday night in Belfast, leaving one man dead and the city in turmoil, police said.

Car bombs exploded. Cars, buses and trucks were hijacked and set afire. Barricades were thrown up in parts of the city.

The violence was thought by security forces to be protesting the decision to give no special treatment to persons arrested after March 1, for political crimes.

Let's keep it growing for 200 more years.

Welcome God to America's bicentennial... practice what you pray.

A Public Service of The Newspaper & The Advertising Council Ad Council

By LARRY BURKE

In 1954 some figures were released on the cost of crime in New York. These figures revealed this interesting comparison.

When a gun-toting youth on a rampage kills a man, it costs the state about $225,000 to send him through the courts to a life term in prison. Thus one crime is equal to the cost of a church building in which thousands each year learn something about the sacredness of life.

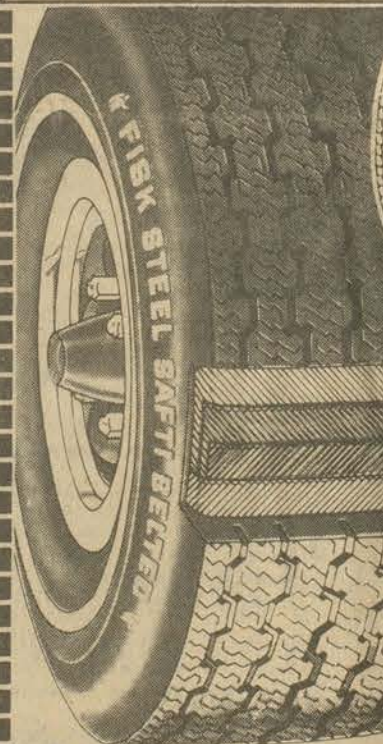

What is the price of decency? It is very low as compared to the price of crime.

We should feel justly proud of our great accomplishments in this country. And, on the other hand, we should take a shameful look at the high cost of our destructive, ungodly ways of life.

OUR THOUGHT TO REMEMBER: One wrong is more costly than much that is good.

More than 91 per cent of the patients were treated in VA hospitals and on an average day 173,630 veterans were cared for. Outpatient care increased by 19 per cent to a total of 14,630,000 visits to VA staff or private doctors on a fee basis.

State Board OK's Project To Study School Improvement

Frankfort, Ky.—After some discussion, the State Board of Education has voted unanimously to approve a revised Professional Performance Improvement Project. Essentially, the project calls for each local school district to establish a plan by which professional school employees outline an area needing improvement and determine methods of improving their performance and of testing whether there has been improvement.

The project was approved at a recent State Board of Education meeting despite the objections of the Kentucky Education Association (KEA). Billy Pope, KEA president, told the board that the KEA board of directors had voted to oppose the project.

Pope said she opposed the project because she felt it was "an evaluation document" which could be used against teachers and because she felt that it did not include any guaranteed protection for teachers.

In the presentation of the project, however, Sidney Simandle, director of the education department's division of teacher education and certification, said the project is not for evaluation. He commented that other states "are going the evaluation route" and apparently it is not working.

Peg Clark, president of the Kentucky PTA, told the board that her group had unanimously approved the project.

Dr. James Graham, state superintendent of public instruction, was named secretary of the board in the recent meeting effective July 1.

The board has scheduled a special meeting for school accreditation for May 5 at 10 a.m.

'Unforgettable Casey Stengel'

A thirty-year friendship with one of baseball's most colorful figures is described by another colorful diamond stalwart in the April issue of Reader's Digest.

"Unforgettable Casey Stengel" is the subject of an article by New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin, who says that "if any manager can ever be called a genius, Casey Stengel was that man."

According to Martin, Stengel's "invention of the science—or art—of 'platooning,' which some saw at the time as a kind of puppetry gone mad, was actually the product of a memory that was faultless—"as clear and specific as the ring of a bell on a still day."

"It was the gift, the switch that he pulled to maneuver his players on and off the field, and it made him a master of the subtle game of using a certain batter against a certain pitcher, of putting a strong arm in the right position," Martin writes.

Martin also reveals a side of Stengel's character that has not generally been disclosed to the public—his generosity. He used to send money quietly to old players, down on their luck. Once when Martin questioned Casey about the practice, Stengel shot back: "Mind your own business, Martin! You might be sittin' in a rockin' chair some day on the porch of some nursing home. Come to think of it, you belong in one now."

But of all the characteristics that made Stengel the unforgettable character he was, perhaps the most memorable was the use—or misuse—of language that came to be known as Stengelese. Martin cites this example, which burst from Casey when he was discussing one young player:

"That feller runs splendid but he needs help at the plate, which coming from the country chasing rabbits all winter give him strong legs, although he broke one falling out of a tree, which shows you can't tell, and when a curve ball comes he waves at it and if the pitchers don't throw curves you have no pitching staff, so how is a manager going to know whether to tell boys to fall out of trees and break legs so he can run fast even if he can't hit a curve ball."

Six months after Casey's death at the age of 85, it's good to be reminded of how much that crusty, quixotic character contributed to baseball.

Kentucky Afield

By Hope Carleton
Dept. of Fish and Wildlife

During the last 50 years the fishing in Kentucky has changed considerably due, in large measure, to the creation of 15 major lakes by the U. S. Corps of Engineers, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Kentucky Utilities Company.

These lakes, each of which has at least 1,000 surface acres of water at seasonal pool, have given Kentucky a total of 197,996 surface acres of impounded waters—and a new breed of fishermen who more or less restrict their angling to the "big waters."

Back in the mid-1920s when Kentucky Utilities built Lake Herrington, fishermen came from far and wide to this Central Bluegrass lake, most of them in quest of black bass. Indeed, this oldest of the major lake chain is said to be the spot where a new method of fishing for the big bass—jigging—originated.

Today, although black bass still top the list of angler favorite, fishermen find the lakes abound with crappie, white bass, bluegill, channel catfish, musky and other native species as well as a couple of "new" fish—rainbow trout and rockfish—thanks to Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources fisheries research and management.

All the lakes offer good fishing but each, because of size, location or other physical features is unique and many are best known as "home" of one particular species of fish, for example, the crappie in Kentucky Lake.

Following is a brief rundown of these lakes, including size and location. We'll list those we have room for today and the remainder next week.

HERRINGTON LAKE: Central Kentucky. 1,860 surface acres; extends 35 miles upstream from the dam on Dix River; 165 miles of shoreline. Good population of white bass, largemouth bass, crappie and a good developing fishery for rockfish. (The 44-pound, 4-ounce state record rockfish was taken there in 1970.) Created in the mid-20s by KU.

DALE HOLLOW: Southcentral Kentucky. 27,700 surface acres with 4,300 in Kentucky, the remainder in Tennessee; 61 miles long, 620 miles of shoreline. Good populations of both large and smallmouth bass, white bass, crappie and bluegill. The world record smallmouth (11 pounds, 15 ounces) was taken out of Dale Hollow in 1955. Created in 1943 when Tennessee's Obey River was dammed by the Corps.

KENTUCKY LAKE: West Kentucky. 158,300 surface acres of water, with 48,100 in Kentucky, the remainder in Tennessee; 184 miles long; 2,380 miles of shoreline. Best known for spring crappie run but also very good for largemouth black bass and white bass. Large population of sauger which are seldom fished for; rockfish and catfish below the dam on the Tennessee River. State record fish taken from the lake include: 6-pound, 1-ounce sauger, 1972; freshwater drum (white perch), 31 pounds in 1956; 100-pound blue catfish, from tailwaters in 1970, and 5-pound white bass, 1943, which ties with a 5-pounder taken from Herrington in 1957. Created by TVA in 1944.

CUMBERLAND LAKE: Southcentral Kentucky. 50,250 surface acres, the largest impoundment lying completely within Kentucky boundaries; 1,255 miles of shoreline extending 101 miles upstream from the dam on the Cumberland River. Good for black bass, white bass and crappie. Fair trout fishing in the lake, excellent in the tailwaters where the 14-pound, 6-ounce state record arinbow was taken in 1972. Other records: 21-pound, 8-ounce walleye, 1958; 72 pound spoonbill catfish, 1957, and sturgeon, 36 pounds, 8 ounces, 1954. Impounded by the Corps in 1950.

DEWEY LAKE: Eastern Kentucky. 1,150 surface acres; 52 miles of shoreline, extending 18½ miles upstream from the dam on John's Creek. Largemouth black bass, bluegill, crappie and catfish. Some white bass. Musky stocked in 1957. Impounded by the Corps in 1951.

The Kentucky Society for Crippled Children provided assistance to 8000 Kentuckians last year. The varied program of services included hospitalization, resident and day camping, special swim programs, hearing and speech therapies, physical and occupational therapies, and special education opportunities.

Kentucky Mines Official Discusses Scotia Tragedy

By PAULA ALEXANDER

Frankfort, Ky.—The tragic double mine explosions that shook the tiny Letcher county hamlet of Oven Fork and surrounding communities by claiming 26 lives has left an entire nation wondering "why."

The first explosion occurred March 9, killing 15 men. While inspectors were fairly sure that a high concentration of methane gas was responsible they were undecided on what ignited the blast. Then, two days later, 11 more men were killed in Scotia's Mine No. 1. A second explosion had ripped through the mine as a team of inspectors and volunteer employees were inside repairing a weak roof and monitoring the ventilation.

Since atmospheric conditions were so volatile within Scotia, a unanimous decision was later made to temporarily seal the mine before bringing out the remaining bodies.

Like several officials involved in that decision-making, Commission Harrel N. Kirkpatrick of the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals hopes to provide some eventual answers to the "why." Back in his Lexington office after several round trips from the mine site, Kirkpatrick reflected on the unredeemable past and spoke of the future.

The commissioner said he was concerned about reports that he and other officials had sent three Mining Enforcement Safety Administration (MESA) officials and 10 Scotia employees into the mine, knowing a possibly faulty compressor on a mine vehicle might be responsible for having sparked the first explosion. Kirkpatrick explained that they did not learn about the compressor until after the second explosion.

He added that he, MESA administrator Robert Barrett and other mining personnel were preparing to make their way into the mine just before the incident. "Why would I and all those other men have been ready to go in for an inspection if we knew about the compressor?" he asked.

Kirkpatrick said that they, too, might have been in the mine if a weak roof had not been discovered, thus delaying their entry. The eight volunteer miners killed were repairing the roof while the MESA inspectors were checking atmospheric conditions and making sure that the workers did not enter the vicinity of the first explosion.

"I can only hope that in the future those people who know of potentially dangerous situations will come forward before another tragedy like this makes headlines," the commissioner stated.

Several additional factors could have been responsible for the ignition, said Kirkpatrick, mentioning a smoldering fire from a previous, undetected explosion or a roof fall during which falling rocks may have hit rail tracks in the mine's interior and thus caused sparks.

Also, Kirkpatrick reported that those outside the mine were unaware of the second explosion until two survivors reached the entrance. The monitoring equipment had not recorded the blast.

One factor that still puzzles Kirkpatrick is that a MESA official killed during the second explosion had called out a zero reading of methane gas minutes before the incident. Explosions are possible with readings between four and one-half and 15 per cent. Methane counts of less than four and one-half do not provide enough fuel for ignition while a concentration above 15 is too saturated.

Kirkpatrick labeled as untrue those charges that Scotia is one of the gasiest mines in the U. S. Measurements taken at Scotia reveal that it puts out 250,000 cubic feet of methane during a 24-hour period. Kirkpatrick said a nearby Virginia mine releases some 10 million cubic feet of methane every 24 hours. Another out-of-state mine reportedly liberates 16 million cubic feet of methane per day.

Kirkpatrick said there is now law against working a "gassy" mine. He pointed out that such mines require more ventilation and increased safety measures. The commissioner also noted that mine locomotives and compressors are also permitted as long as a free air flow is directed toward the equipment.

The Mines and Minerals chief said that no major clues will be erased before Scotia is reopened in some two to three months since the sealed mine should contain no air. The mine will be opened once again after the interior conditions have stabilized.

The situation within the mine is now much too hazardous to risk additional lives for the recovery of the remaining bodies, Kirkpatrick said, explaining that mine rescue is a dangerous operation even for experts. The Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals and MESA are thus refusing all premature recovery offers.

Kirkpatrick stated that definite conclusions can not be reached until the mine undergoes a thorough investigation and is followed by a public hearing. The U. S. Interior Department has called a preliminary hearing April 5-6 in Whitesburg. Both Kirkpatrick and MESA's Barrett are included on that panel.

In addition to the federal hearings and others following a thorough mine inspection, Kirkpatrick will make a report to the governor while Barrett will compile MESA's report.

As part of its tree planting improvement program, the division of forestry in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection tells both urban and rural planters how to plant young trees. A few tips include: choose location carefully; give roots plenty of room; keep soil moist; spiral-wrap trunk; support tree firmly; and prune branches 25 per cent.

Our Fragile Earth

By JERRY HOWELL Director of Environmental Studies Morehead State University

Recent articles have examined various aspects of surface mining, including those of open pit mining and contour strip mining. Other forms of surface mining include area, dredge, and hydraulic mining.

Area coal strip mining creates spoil piles or ridges with crests 50 or more feet high and 50 to 100 feet apart. The erosion rate on these areas is comparable to that of contour mines, but a large percentage of the sediment is retained in depressions on the site. Thus streams and adjoining lands are not as severely affected as in contour stripping areas. Area mine depressions are a result of the way this type of mining is carried out. The coal lies just under the surface on flat or gently sloping land and lends itself to harvesting in rows, much like a garden. The created depressions often fill with water, forming sterile lakes with high acid contents. Area strip mines are often easier to reclaim than contour mines, but they have their own set of problems.

Dredge mining takes minerals from lakes, estuaries and stream bottoms. Sand and gravel are the most commonly dredged minerals, although in coastal areas the removal of shell deposits for construction and fill materials is common. Sometimes dredging is done for other purposes, such as stream widening or channelization, but the removed materials are not usually utilized.

Dredging for sand and gravel has been shown to destroy aquatic flora and fauna at the site and is responsible for further damage downstream. Other damages, such as stream bed widening and elevations in temperature, along with coating of the stream bottom with silt, have also been shown to result from dredging.

Shell dredging in bays and rivers has adversely affected populations of freshwater fish, shrimp and other shellfish. The shell carcasses are sometimes used to fill in near shore area swamps, many of which are ecologically unique. The fill is then covered with houses and businesses.

In hydraulic mining a powerful jet of water is employed to erode down earth banks which are either the overburden or contain the desired ore. Hydraulic mining was used extensively in the past to mine gold and other precious metals, but is only in use today in a few operations in Alaska, California and Oregon, although the potential still exists for expansion. The major environmental problem in hydraulic mining is sedimentation. Where practiced it creates much the same problems as sand and gravel dredging.

Like some contour strip miners, some area dredge and hydraulic miners are attempting to properly reclaim their areas. These types of surface mining, along with the open pit type, must be limited, controlled and strictly regulated now and in the future. We can ill afford not to.

Only Pikeville Gets Share Of $10.4 Million HUD Funds

An analysis of funds approved by the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for 22 Kentucky communities shows that Republican Congressman Tim Lee Carter's Fifth district will receive 62.81 per cent of the $10.4 million allocated, according to Joseph S. McCauley, executive director of the Big Sandy Area Development District.

Meanwhile, the Big Sandy district is getting only 3.42 per cent of the funds and the entire Seventh Congressional district will get only 19.38 per cent unless the distribution of these funds is further adjudicated, Mr. McCauley said.

Two congressional districts, the Third and Fourth, received nothing. The First was allocated 8.92 per cent; the Second,

6.71 per cent, and the Sixth 1.98 per cent, according to this tabulation made on the basis of a newspaper listing of allocations.

Only $342,150 was approved for the five-county Big Sandy ADD, and all that goes to Pikeville. Funds approved for other communities of Eastern Kentucky but not in the Big Sandy area are:

The Pribilof Islands, some 200 miles north of Alaska, are breeding grounds for most of the world's northern seal population—currently about 1.3 million. According to the April Reader's Digest, there were probably 3 million when the site was discovered in 1786. But, after 40 years of slaughter for their valuable fur pelts, the seal population decreased alarmingly—to about 150,000. Currently only "bachelor" males can be killed, under authority of the U. S. Department of Commerce, and the Pribilof seal population is expected to remain constant at 1.3 million.

Most Schools Comply With Title IX Rules

"So far 80 per cent of the schools in the state have complied with the initial Title IX regulations (1975 amendments regarding sex equality in education)," said Ross Henderson, coordinator of Title IX in the state Department of Education.

Title IX regulations require schools to file assurance with Health, Education, and Welfare that they intend to abide by the Title IX, establish a grievance procedure, and appoint a person to coordinate Title IX. "I estimate that by July 1 this year, 95 per cent of the schools will have these requirements satisfied," said Henderson.

Elementary schools have one year to implement Title IX while secondary schools have three years.

Staff members of the state Department of Education are winding up regional workshops on the topic begun in February, Henderson explained.

The amendment, which became effective July 21, 1975, applies only to educational programs and activities receiving federal financial assistance. It covers the treatment of all employees involved in educational programs and activities rather than only professional and paraprofessional employees directly responsible for the education of students. It also covers discrimination because of sex in student programs and activities.

One of the biggest problems presented by the amendments is financing girls' athletic programs. Schools are having difficulty in providing funds for athletic programs for girls comparable to what the boys have, said Henderson.

Some school boards, such as Owensboro, have allocated a specific amount to the school system for implementing a girls' athletic program, Henderson said. However, many school systems just don't have the money, she said.

"There are two areas of concern for our continuation of Kentucky's successful Title IX fulfillment," said Henderson, "sexual stereotyping in textbooks, and in the vocational educational curriculum. An equitable and active examination of those areas of concern are already being scrutinized now in Kentucky within our own State Department of Education," she said.

Tribute Paid 'a Gallant Lady'

County Judge Henry Stumbo last Friday issued a proclamation "to offer a long-deserved tribute to a most gallant lady."

The proclamation was in honor of 81-year-old Ella Noel White and Floyd Chapter, American Red Cross, "the organization which she has served and which she still serves."

Miss White was a pneumonia patient in Highlands Medical Center at the time the tribute was paid her. The proclamation follows, in part:

"In 1930, Miss Ella Noel White began a career as the American Red Cross representative in Floyd county, Kentucky. It was during the Great Depression and Miss White began her work by supervising distribution of food to the needy. Since those days the Red Cross and Miss White have been involved in helping people in all kinds of problems, including emergency furloughs for servicemen, assistance to victims of hurricanes in Western Kentucky and Florida, the school bus disaster, floods along the Big Sandy River and the Mississippi, earthquakes in Guatemala and Nicaragua, blood donors for victims of accidents, bandages during World War II, and ranging from Vietnam and Korea to Germany, France, North America and all of Floyd county from Little Paint Creek to the headwaters of Beaver Creek.

"Miss White has received very little monetary pay for the devoted labor and long hours of paper work and telephone

Carroll Commended By Development Group

The Kentucky Industrial Development Council (KIDC) has voted to commend Gov. Julian Carroll "for the contribution he has made to the economic development of Kentucky."

The unanimously passed resolution was proposed at a March 24 meeting following a panel discussion in which members of the KIDC were briefed on the effects of action in the 1976 General Assembly in the field of economic development.

Panel members were Secretary of Development William L. Short, Commerce Commissioner Larry Townsend, Kentucky Industrial Development Finance Authority Director Jack Hoover and Deputy Commissioner of Commerce James Roberts.

Short told the group that Gov. Carroll's Kentucky Economic Development Plan and related legislation represent the largest development package to be enacted in the history of the state. He and Townsend spent about an hour with the gathering in a question and answer session on the 1975-'76 budget, and on new laws affecting the economic picture in Kentucky.

The Veterans Administration forecasts the nation's veterans population will peak at 29.7 million in fiscal year 1979.

State Receives "On The Road" Segments

Gov. Julian Carroll and the Kentucky Department of Library and Archives have received film copies of a segment of CBS Newsman Charles Kuralt's "On the Road," compliments of CBS News.

The segment, one of CBS's Bicentennial projects recently broadcast on "CBS Evening News," follows Kuralt on still-existing sections of the Wilderness Road talking about Daniel Boone. Tracing Boone's trail when the pioneer fled North Carolina to escape being jailed for his debts and later when land laws denied Boone the Kentucky lands he had settled, Kuralt said, "Daniel Boone kept on going." This theme was repeated throughout the segment.

According to a letter from Peter M. Herford, director of affiliate liaison for CBS News, the network is sending each state governor and each state archives a copy of Kuralt's programs.

Dam Overloads Draw Citations to U.S. Court

An interesting sidelight to the Pikeville College seminar last Wednesday on coal mining regulations was the discussion of overloaded trucks crossing Dewey Dam and the federal action taken against their drivers.

After the Corps of Engineers had been told that a 15-ton load limit for roads and bridges on government property will be enforced from permits issued by the state Department of Transportation, a ranger employed at the dam said the Corps had already cited several drivers to U.S. district court for overloads, some as high as 118,000 pounds. The federal penalties for such violations have, to date, been restricted to fines ranging as high as $125.

A few cases are yet pending in district court, Dean Murray, Dewey Reservoir manager, said this week.

Robert D. Bell, secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, stood up at the seminar to correct the head of the Atlanta office of the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) water pollution permit section, William Cloward.

After Cloward told the audience, "You've got to get behind your legislators to simplify the process" (of coordinating coal mine permit requirements dealing with reclamation, water pollution by state and federal branches), Bell said:

"I'd like to clarify this a little. When you gave us your proposals (EPA) at the beginning of the session we told you then it would never get out of committee. When you gave us the second set of proposals it was too late then to do anything."

At the end of the afternoon seminar, a coal operator, Gene Castle, echoed the sentiments of Bell's remarks.

"He told it like it was. The feds were misrepresenting themselves. All these new laws are hard to keep up with. It costs us money to train the people to even understand it."

The seminar was designed to bring members of the coal industry up to date on changes in federal laws affecting coal mines, and permit requirements.

The audience of 150 heard officials from the Army Corps of Engineers, the state Department of Transportation, and Natural Resources, and EPA officials from Atlanta.

Cloward told the operators that May 1, 1976, "is the magic day for coal mines." After that date, he said, all coal mines going into business will be required to assess their environmental impact in order to be granted permits for discharge of water pollutants.

State Transportation Secretary John Roberts said that $12 million will be available for improvements to Eastern Kentucky's coal haul roads, beginning July 1.

But Roberts also told a seminar of coal operators and state and federal officials the amount "is still a far cry from meeting the needs of the roads so important to your industry."

He said $13 million will be available for the following fiscal year and that all the money will be divided among the counties according to the tonnage they produced.

"We are not going to fritter away this money on thinly applied blacktop which wouldn't carry a fat man on a bicycle," he added.

He also advised the audience that legal weight limits on state roads have been raised from 30,000 to 40,000 pounds.

Asked if the Department of Transportation would enforce the new legal weight limits, Roberts said, "There would be no change. Department men will continue their efforts as they always have. The prosecution will be left up to the local courts."

He urged the coal industry to accept "a common responsibility in the use of coal haul roads to help others in the state understand the interests of the coal industry."

Roberts said "reasonable loads" would be permitted but he said it "depends substantially on the sense of responsibility" taken by the coal industry.

113,000 Kentuckians Jobless in February

MacDonald's report estimates that some 113,000 Kentuckians were without work in February. Approximately 1,400 of the new unemployed persons are people just entering the labor force.

KEA Lists Teacher Pay— Floyd's from $7,190 to $10,470

Special to The Times
Louisville, Ky.—Starting salaries this year for Kentucky's public-school classroom teachers with bachelor's degrees and no experience range from $6,765 to $8,750, according to a new Kentucky Education Association (KEA) research publication.

The bulletin, "Salary Schedules of Kentucky Public-School Teachers, 1975-76," shows a $6,765 beginning minimum salary in the Hart county school system. The top minimum of $8,750 for beginners is scheduled in the Fort Thomas system. KEA public relations and research director Charles Whaley said last year's scheduled salaries for beginning teachers with bachelor's degrees ranged from $6,325 in Knox county to $8,150 in Fort Thomas.

Most Kentucky teachers are in the Rank III category, which means they have a bachelor's degree. The state-mandated minimum this year for Rank III teachers with no experience is $6,733.20. This is 93 percent of the state's foundation program allotment of $7,240 for such teachers.

For Rank III teachers at the maximum level of experience the highest scheduled salary ranges from $8,550 in Wayne county after eight years to $13,437 in the Anchorage and Jefferson county systems after 13 years.

Betsy Layne Five Loses To Eventual State Champs

All but one of the "Sweet Sixteen" were losers in last week's Kentucky State High School Basketball Tournament, and of all those who were unsuccessful in their bids for the championship, none lost more honorably than Floyd county's own Betsy Layne High School as the Bobcats played "touch and go" throughout their game with Edmonson County, actually outscoring the eventual state champions from the field.

"We played a respectable game," said Betsy Layne coach William Newsome, Jr., who was quick to point out that his Bobcats outscored Edmonson county by 12 points from the field in first-round tournament play last Wednesday evening at Louisville's Freedom Hall. "They beat us from the foul line," said Coach Newsome, referring to Edmonson county's 19 points to Betsy Layne's 6 points collected on foul shots.

Newsome said several turnovers in the first quarter forced the Bobcats to play a lot of "catch up" ball and "the loss of Jim Rose, who was hurt midway in the game, also hurt us," according to Newsome. Even with those factors against them, the Bobcats ended the first half with a 31-31 tie with the eventual champions. Final score in the contest was Edmonson county 77, Betsy Layne 72.

Leading scorer for Betsy Layne was Ron Clark with 21 points, which included 9 of 13 from the field. Ricky Roberts collected 18, Wilburn Sammons 12, and Jim Rose 5. Bruce Stapleton and Randy Ferrell, who came off the bench during the game, collected 10 each.

When Betsy Layne drew Edmonson County for Wednesday's contest, Coach Newsome said, "We thought we had a break because nobody figured them to win."

"I actually had Henry Clay picked to win," said Newsome, but he said the "luck of the draw" was not with his team, after all, as Edmonson County upset Harrison county, 61-57, on Friday, and downed Christian county, 74-52 in the championship game Saturday.

Coach Newsome said his team will lose only three regulars next season and he classed five of the nine who will remain from this year as "veterans."

"We're looking for a real good season next year," Newsome said.

Betsy Layne ended the season last Wednesday with a record of 28-7.

DUTCH COMMANDERS WARN AGAINST SERVICEMEN STRIKES
THE HAGUE, The Netherlands—The commanders-in-chief of the Dutch armed forces said that strikes by military servicemen "can lead to punishment and disciplinary actions."

Telegrams by the commanders were sent to units after a demand for increased pay was made by an organization that claims to represent 25,000 of the 45,000 conscripts in the Dutch armed forces.

The group said it would "take 'tough action' if the conscripts don't receive more pay for late work and week-end duties.

Nearly 36 million women were in the labor force in 1974; this was 46 per cent of all women 16 years of age and over, according to the U. S. Department of Labor's 1975 Handbook on Women Workers.

Equivalency Proposal Draws KEA Opposition

Frankfort, Ky.—The Kentucky Education Association (KEA) is opposing a proposed State Board of Education regulation that "appears to be an effort to lower (certification) standards."

At KEA's request the State board recently held a hearing on the proposed regulation, which would establish 128 college hours and 10 years of teaching experience as an "equivalency" to Rank III (bachelor's degree).

Testifying at the hearing, KEA President Billy Pope noted that the state's Council on Teacher Education and Certification had previously tabled action on the proposal.

This was done after it was brought out that the proposed regulation would discriminate against those who taught at and retired at Rank IV and against those who sacrificed to gain the bachelor's degree required for Rank III certification.

AMERICAN TRASH

Although Americans are creating enough trash each year to fill the Panama Canal four times over—400 billion pounds—we now are reclaiming less than one per cent of our municipal waste. The U. S. Bureau of Mines says the 500,000 tons of fly ash produced from burning refuse every year could yield 150,000 pounds of reclaimed silver alone. Besides retrieving valuable metals, shredded burnable refuse could reclaim one quadrillion Btu's of energy a year, about one-third the energy expected from the Alaska pipeline.

More than 70 million Americans tune in to the trauma of TV soap operas each week, reports the April Reader's Digest. Tears and tribulations turn handsome profits for the networks: one week of "Days of Our Lives" costs NBC $170,000 to produce and brings in daily ad revenues of $120,000.

Visit Children's Home

The Open Door Children's Home sits high on "Sunshine Mountain," overlooking the Perry county town of Cornettsville, and it was there that Mrs. Leona May Winkler, of Prestonsburg, who served there as teacher and principal of the Open Door Elementary School for 20 years, took visitors recently.

The children's home was founded 28 years ago when Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Ragsdale sold all their worldly possessions in California and moved to Eastern Kentucky to do mission work. They found a great need among children and turned their financial resources and energies to a home for them. Mr. Ragsdale is buried near the 23-room main house on the mountain; Mrs. Ragsdale continues in the work to which she dedicated her life.

Visiting the home with Mrs. Winkler were Mrs. Eileen Keene, Misses Rayanna and Dewana Kay Rodebaugh, David Robinson, Mrs. Nan Robinson, Mrs. Rhoda Brickley, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Jordan, all of Prestonsburg, and personnel of the Blue Grass Army Depot, Lexington. Treats and gifts for the children were taken by the visitors.

Crippling disorders prevent almost one in six Americans from leading what is termed a "normal" life, the Easter Seal Society reports.

Army including one year in Viet Nam. After joining the state police in May, 1972, Trooper Stephens was assigned to Martin county where he served for three years. He has served in Floyd county since December 13, 1975.

A son of Hubert and Bessie Stephens, of Prestonsburg, Trooper Stephens resides here with his wife, the former Sharon Kaye Sexton, of Manton, and four-year-old son Robert.

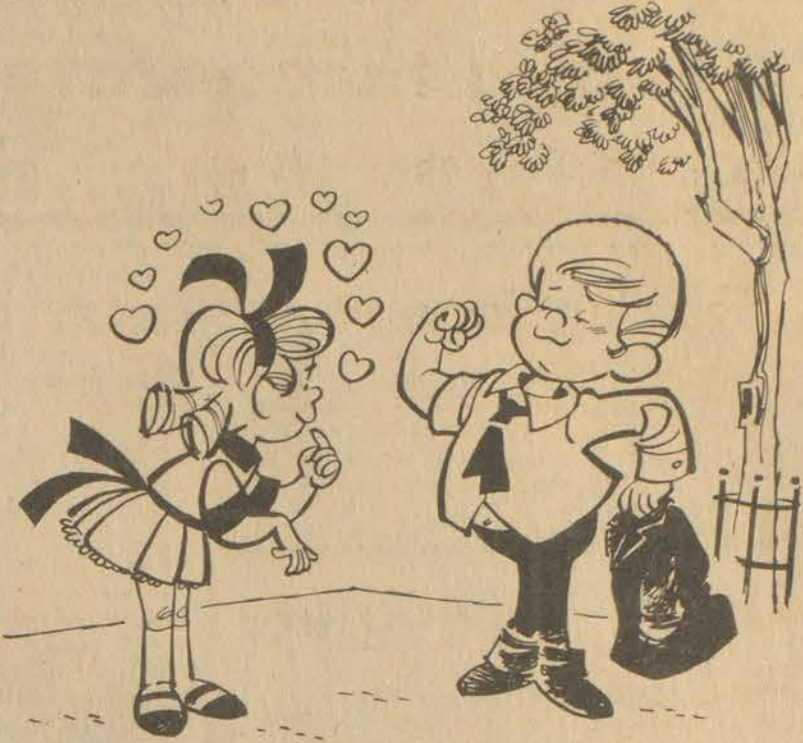

Commander of Post 9 is Capt. Billy Lykins.

Nature Trails

By Rufus M. Reed

Of the Earth, Earthy

The apostle Paul wrote in First Corinthians, 15th chapter: "Man is of the earth, earthy."

I love that word, "earthy." It precisely depicts our physical existence on this planet earth. We are earth-bound mortals; we came from the earth and our bodies are built and sustained by the elements of earth. I also like to think of our planet as "This Good Earth." At Creation, God pronounced it "good," not evil. Any evils of our earth are caused by man, by his folly and greed, and by his misuse of the environment.

I also like to think of our earth as a great space ship flying through endless space at a fantastic speed, which takes it in a great orbit around the sun in one year.

We are all passengers on the good ship Earth. We have no power to say: "Stop, Earth, and let me off." We are held unalterably fixed to earth by the laws of gravity. Knowing this, we should do all we can to keep our earth safe, beautiful and a fitting place to life. We should protect and preserve all our natural resources, for on these depend our future welfare. We should be proud to be called "earthy mortals," because this means to be "down to earth," to feel a kinship with earth, with stone and plant and water; we should have high regard for the laws of Nature, which sustain and maintain our planet earth.

Each of us has his own individual environment on this earth, each has his "own place in the sun," and each of us has problems peculiar to his environment. We must cope with these problems and do our best to solve them.

There are many destructive things carried on which cause grave harm to one's environment, and it is our duty to roll up our sleeves and pitch in to help correct the damage done, mostly by all of us. Let us all adopt this motto: "We can change the bad things and make them good."

The problem of pollution is a grave one today. It is a nationwide problem and it does not seem to get any better. Pollution mars the beauty of the earth; it ruins the streams, poisons the air, destroys wild life. It creates ugliness, despoils the environment and is a high mark of carelessness and indifference. When our country was founded 200 years ago, we had clear streams, placid lakes, great virgin forests and air pure and sweet. Today in our Bi-Centennial year, we can truthfully say that our nation is now in "The Great Garbage Age." Everywhere we see garbage piled up or tossed into streams. Our streams are also being ruined with silt and mud. Such pollution destroyed all the life in them.

When I was in my youth, every April I watched the great schools of fish swimming in a hurry toward the headwaters of Wolf Creek, there to spawn in the clean mountain water. Today I never see even one small gang of fish heading upstream to spawn; the creek is too polluted; it would kill them before they could reach the headwaters.

Today we are plagued by disastrous flash floods. These are caused by removal of the trees from our mountainsides and by our failure to sow grass and reforest the denuded mountains. Tree roots are like human fingers gripping the soil, holding it back, but when the trees are cut down, the roots soon die and lose their grip.

Siltation of our streams is also a major problem. It soon settles on the stream bottom, fills up the streams, raises the water level and is a major factor in producing flash floods.

Let us love, protect and cherish our planet earth, as it is our natural home as long as life lasts.

Crippling is robbing the nation of a vast resource of talents, says the Easter Seal Society. Many such physical disabilities can be overcome by appropriate treatment.

Hugh B. Henigar, Sr.

Hugh B. Henigar, Sr., of Wayland, died March 22 at Highlands Regional Medical Center here following an extended illness. He was 77 years old.

A retired coal miner and member of Local Union 1741, UMWA, Mr. Henigar was born May 3, 1895 in Union county, Tennessee, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Marshall Henigar. He was a member of the Odd Fellows' and a deacon of the Free Will Baptist Church. His wife, Alice Workman Henigar, survives.

Other survivors include four sons, Hugh H. Henigar, Jr., of Lexington, Ky., Alger Burt Henigar, of Macon, Georgia, James Walter Henigar, of Wayland, and William H. Henigar, of Cleveland, Ohio; a daughter, Rosemary Mason, of Columbus, Ohio, and a brother, James Duff Henigar, Tennessee. Mr. Henigar also leaves 17 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday at the Martin Branch Free Will Baptist Church at Estill. Burial was made in the Clear Creek cemetery at Fifty, Ky. under the direction of the Merion Funeral Chapel.

J. B. Bays

J. B. Bays, 83, of Bonanza, died Thursday, March 25, at Mountain Manor Nursing Home here following a prolonged illness.

A son of the late Joe and Quintella Yates Bays, he was a retired carpenter and farmer. He was also a veteran of World War I and a member of the United Baptist Church. His wife, Mrs. Lily May Robinson Bays preceded him in death in 1972.

Surviving him are two half-sisters. Funeral rites were conducted from the residence at Bonanza at 10 o'clock Sunday morning by the Revs. Wallace Calhoun, Dilman Stanley, Vernon Hall, Don Neeley and Jack Moore. Burial was made in the Bill Webb cemetery at Bonanza under direction of Carter Funeral Home.

Sen. Ford Calls For Investigation Into Mine Tragedy

Sen. Wendell Ford has seconded the call for a Congressional investigation into a pair of coal mine explosions last week at Oven Fork, Kentucky, urging that it be followed by Senate oversight hearings on the 1969 Coal Mine Health and Safety Act.

In remarks on the Senate floor, Ford pointed out that no formal oversight hearings have been held since 1972 on the legislation which established federal health and safety regulations for coal mines.

"I have suggested that the investigation, called for over the week-end by the Chairman of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee (Sen. Harrison A. Williams, Jr. D-N.J.), serve as a prelude to thorough and careful oversight hearings," Ford said. "It is imperative that Congress determine if the intent of this legislation is being fulfilled."

Ford told the Senate that last week's disaster which claimed 26 lives was the worst in the United States since one at Hyden, Kentucky, claimed 38 lives in 1970.

"The scope of this tragedy points out once again that no profession poses greater risk to human safety and health than deep mining," Ford said. "The grim memories of what has occurred must not fade from either our hearts or minds. Rather, they should serve as a constant reminder to us in the Congress that we must never turn our backs or be remiss in our responsibility to legislate the highest mine health and safety standards, and ensure that they do indeed become reality."

State Said Ready For Immunizations

Kentucky will be able "to do the job" if a mass immunization program against swine influenza goes into effect, says Dr. William P. McElwain, Commissioner of the Bureau for Health Services in the Department for Human Resources. Because every county has a local health department and public health nurses, it will be "fairly easy" to distribute and administer the vaccine, according to McElwain.

"The problem will be in obtaining the vaccine. It's a question of whether or not enough vaccine can be produced in the available time," he explains.

The proposed mass inoculation program is "totally unprecedented—we've never done anything like this before, but we do have the experience of the polio campaigns to draw upon," McElwain continues. He suggests that Human Resources would distribute the vaccine, and each county health department would decide on how best to handle the actual immunizations for their area.

McElwain says that if most of the inoculations are administered by September or October, "we'll be all right—but we'd like to see children immunized before school starts." He explains that in this state, the flu season usually begins about December, but that if a vaccine is to be effective, it must be administered several weeks before exposure to the disease is likely to occur.

Dr. McElwain and a representative of the Kentucky Medical Association will attend a briefing on the flu immunization program to be held in Atlanta on April 2.

Of the nation's 29.5 million living veterans, more than 13.4 million served during World War II.

Giles Wins Trooper of Year Award

State Trooper William L. Giles, of Lawrenceburg was presented the eighth annual "Trooper-of-the-Year Award" during ceremonies at the Galt House, Louisville, Jan. 21.

Kenneth L. Rigdon, of Scottsville was voted first runner-up in the competition, which is sponsored by the Kentucky Petroleum Marketers.

Nominees for the award are chosen by members of their respective posts or sections. Each post or section is eligible to have one nominee. A five-member board, consisting of state police majors, then makes the final decision for the award.

Their decision is based on the trooper's general appearance, self-expression, total activity for the period being evaluated and his basic knowledge of all police work. Twenty-one troopers were nominated.

Giles, 36, has been a trooper for nearly six years. He is a graduate of Anderson county high school and a member of the United States Marine Corps reserve.

Levi Jackson Sewer Work Near Complete

The Kentucky Department of Parks announced the near-completion of work to replace the main sewer line serving Levi Jackson State Park near London, Ky.

According to a Department of Parks spokesman, the existing sewer line was experiencing severe infiltration problems, indicating extensive deterioration of the system. Problems of this nature require replacement of the existing line, according to the spokesman.

A state contract totaling $22,291 was awarded to G & G Construction Co., Inc., of London for their successful bid on the project.

The project consists of the construction of over 1,800 feet of eight-inch sewer and the installation of 10 manholes.

The Veterans Administration is responsible for the operation of 103 national cemeteries in the United States.

Kentucky may have more old dams still operating than any other state. Many are more than 100 years old. Kentuckians began building locks and dams in the early 1800's to raise the water level and aid navigation. The materials used to build the locks and dams were crude and common. The walls of the lock chamber were made of native limestone block. The dams were rock-filled timber cribs with wood-sheathed crests.

The beautification office in the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection reports that a research project sponsored by Keep America Beautiful, Inc., on litter control indicates that people tend to litter where litter has already accumulated, where they feel no sense of ownership for the area and where they believe someone else will clean up after them.

Kentucky To Have Only State Weather Radio System

Due primarily to the efforts of Kentucky Sen. Walter D. Huddleston and Gov. Julian Carroll, Kentucky will soon have the only state-wide weather radio system in the nation.

An agreement was signed earlier this week between the Commonwealth of Kentucky and the National Weather Service to create a system which will enable all Kentuckians to receive weather warnings much earlier than ever before.

"These contracts insure the installation of a system that will be of immeasurable help to Kentucky residents," Gov. Carroll said. "We expect the system to be operational by May First."

Gov. Carroll added that Sen. Huddleston and his staff, along with officials of the Kentucky Division of Disaster and Emergency Services, have worked for several months to assure Kentucky's participation in this experimental program, which will be set up and operated with both Federal and state funds.

According to Robert L. McFerren, deputy director of the Kentucky DES Division, the system could easily save lives and prevent injury by giving the public the earliest possible severe weather warnings.

"Considering the enormity of the April, 1974, tornadoes and the massive damage they caused, we in Kentucky and surrounding states were extremely fortunate that more citizens were not killed and injured," Gov. Carroll pointed out.

"Studies show," he continued, "that sufficient and timely information about severe weather will save lives. I am insistent and join with Senator Huddleston in seeing to it that we in Kentucky do all we can to minimize the effects of dangerous weather on people and property."

Nine transmitter sites, including eight in Kentucky, will be used to provide around-the-clock weather information over the network that will be established. Receivers will be available to schools, hospital, businesses; other points where large numbers of people are gathered and in homes.

James L. Mathews, DES communications director, indicates that the receivers can be fully installed at a very nominal cost, beginning at about $11.

Each of the nine transmitters on the network will have a range of from 40 to 60 miles, points out Paul Warnecke, coordinator of the Kentucky Early Warning System, on which planning began early in 1975. The Kentucky wide weather alert system will complement the planned KEWS system.

Warnecke is responsible for Kentucky becoming quickly operational on a weather alert basis.

During routine operation, the weather warning system will provide forecasts; radar summaries; specialized forecasts to meet agricultural, recreational and other needs; temperature and weather summaries; and other information.

All of the warnings will be preceded by an alarm and all programming will be tailored to the needs of each of the nine areas served by a transmitter.

Gov. Carroll explained that the National Weather Service has currently in force weather warning networks that operate on a regional basis, such as in the Great Lakes and along the Eastern Seacoast, but that Kentucky will be the first state to be fully implemented.

Radio Frequencies For Weather Warning System To Be Announced

It's too early to buy receivers to pick up broadcasts on the state's new weather radio warning system, according to James L. Mathews, director of communications for the state Division of Disaster and Emergency Services.

Mathews made the comment in response to many inquiries about the equipment.

"The Federal Communications Commission (FCC) can't give us the exact frequencies until April 21," he explained, "and any crystal controlled equipment purchased now might prove useless."

The radio network, which will cover the state from nine transmitters, is scheduled to begin operation May 1 and expand as equipment is installed.

The system will be the first in the nation to offer state-wide coverage and is a result of a two-year effort by Kentucky Sen. Walter D. Huddleston and Gov. Julian Carroll.

When the system is fully operational, state officials hope that every school, hospital, and public building will have a receiver. The low-cost receivers will also be available to the public through commercial vendors.

"As soon as we've got accurate details about the receivers, we'll use every available means to get the information to the public," Mathews said.

Wayland Accepted For Flood Insurance

The U. S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has announced that, effective Monday of this week, the town of Wayland was accepted into the National Flood Insurance Program.

Wayland thus joins Prestonsburg and Wheelwright among the municipalities and all Floyd county outside incorporated towns as participating in the program.

Policies for Wayland residents are effective immediately during the first 30 days the insurance becomes available. After the first 30 days, there will be a 15-day waiting period. The policies may be purchased from any licensed property insurance agent or broker.

Projects in Competition

Floyd county 4-H Club members were represented in nine projects at the state 4-H project record judging held last week at the University of Kentucky.

These members won three state championships, one runnerup, and two fourth places in the competition.

State champions were Vicky Blackburn, strawberry; Lance Blackburn, forestry and conservation; Debbie Reffett was runnerup in the career project and fourth in the health project. Teresa Huff was fourth in the safety project.

Other records in the state competition included Ann Flannery, clothing and citizenship, and Teddy Meadows, woodworking.

The state champions' records will be entered in national competition this fall.

What To Do in April

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD (UK College of Agriculture)

"April brings the sun and showers, and the pretty wild-wood flowers" says an old rhyme—and indeed it does. It is a month of new life everywhere. Grass grows freshly green, trees and shrubs put out new leaves, and wildflowers push their way up through the thatch of the meadow and the leave and leaf mold of the woodland floor. Migrant birds have set out on their northward journey, and almost all things that make summer delightful to the senses are putting in an appearance.

April is also one of the loveliest months of the year, and its name, which comes from the Latin word "to open", is especially fitting. It is the time of the opening of buds. It is a month, too, of transition and is characterized by its ever changing weather. Often some of its days are extremely cold, giving names to such incongruous seasons as "black-berry winter," "snowball winter," and such, but its most distinctive feature is the "April shower."

Changes from brilliant sunlight to pouring rain are frequent, and poet William Watson's lines:

"April, April, laugh thy golden laughter,
But the moment after, Weep thy golden tears" gives us as good a picture of the month as can be expressed in words.

In April everything is coming our way, but for the farmer and gardener it is a very busy month. By this time many early vegetables have already been planted, but by the middle of the month here in Kentucky it is generally safe to plant sweet corn, bush beans, Bibb lettuce, and several other vegetable crops.

In the latter part of the month, early planted crops should be cultivated and some may need thinning. Cultivation will help get ahead of the weeds and save a little time later on perhaps to go fishing.

As the tulips wilt in the flower garden, remove the spent flowers and do not let the seeds form. Do not, however, disturb the tulip foliage. This foliage will help the plant store up energy for blooming again next year. Also, since they can withstand temperatures down to 29 degrees, petunias can be started in most sections of Kentucky.

Some other things to do in April that will work to the benefit of the gardener include such things as searching the shrubs and fruit trees for caterpillar egg masses. If cedars around the place develop brown galls, these should be pulled off and destroyed before they can produce spores that spread the disease to apple trees.

Before the grass gets any higher on the lawn, go over the area carefully and remove stones, sticks, bones, or anything else that might come in contact with the whirling blades of the powermower. When picked up by the blade of the mower, such objects become missiles that could break plate glass windows and even maim or kill someone. Don't take this chance. Search your lawn before the grass can hide such objects. April is a good month to check the sprayer and duster and have them ready for use against the insects and diseases that may soon make their appearances in the vegetable patch. Buy the pesticides you expect to need, too, but lay in only enough for this season's use. Storing left-over garden chemicals from year to year is not a good practice. Some chemicals may lose their effectiveness. Children or livestock may be poisoned by others left on the shelves of outbuildings.

If such is desired, saplings may be transplanted in April with a good chance of success. Horticulturists say it is the best month of all for transplanting holly trees.

April is a busy month, but it is a good month. Don't get too busy to enjoy it.

It's Your Tax Money—Do You Know Where It Goes?

Would you hand over more than a third of your income without finding out what it was being spent for? Some people may be doing just that if they don't keep informed on government spending—federal and local—based on their tax dollars.

From a quiz on taxes and spending compiled by Ralph Kinney Bennett in the April Reader's Digest come some staggering sums and frightening facts:

—Federal, state and local tax collectors put the bite on 37c out of every dollar of national income.

Energy Publication Is Available, Gratis

Frankfort, Ky.—A new publication, "Energy in the Kentucky Economy," is now available from the Kentucky Department of Energy, according to Energy Commissioner Damon Harrison.

The study, prepared by the University of Kentucky Office of Business Development and Government Services, is an analysis of energy conditions in the state and their relations to the economy, according to Harrison. He said the report represents a first effort to develop a broad picture of energy availability in the state as well as usage and requirement patterns. In addition, he said the report tries to define the relationship of energy to production and employment conditions.

Harrison said the study also deals with the possibility of future energy shortages and the impact they might have on the state's economy.

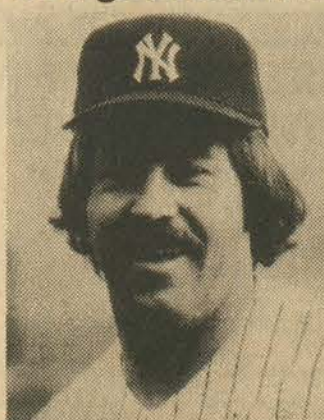

The report, released early this year, is available at no cost from the Kentucky Department of Energy, 9th Floor, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Ky., 40601.

Sue Bennett Folk Festival Slated March 31-April 3

By HELEN PRICE STACY

"The third Sue Bennett Folk Festival plans have been completed and will again be a part of the Kentucky Bicentennial celebrations," stated festival chairman Mrs. Don Chesnut of 110 Skyline Drive, London, Ky.

The major activity of the third festival will be an arts and crafts show together with a variety of entertainment. The dates for the event are Wednesday, March 31 through Saturday, April 3.

Included as part of special features will be singer-composer Billy Edd Wheeler, the Roadside Theatre from Appalshop, musician John McCucheon from Clinch Valley College, and Mike Mullins of the oral history faculty from Alice Lloyd College at Pippa Passes.

All artists and craftsmen interested in exhibiting and demonstrating during the festival should contact Mrs. Chesnut. Some rooms for women will be available in the girls' dormitory "on a first come, first served" basis. Exhibitors are invited to eat lunch and dinner in the Sue Bennett College dining room as guests of the college.

Artists and artisans might want to do some exploring of their own while in the area, as visitors might want to do family research this bicentennial year.

Aeroflot, the airline of the U.S.S.R., is No. 1 in the world, says the April Reader's Digest. It employs more people and flies more planes than any other line.

When Persecution Goes Unchecked

(An editorial in The Courier-Journal)

Recent reports of the persecution suffered by some 30,000 Jehovah's Witnesses in the east African nation of Malawi tell a shameful story. Depressing, too, is the realization that this persecuted minority group is only a small fraction of the millions the world over who because of their race or their religious or political beliefs suffer repression and torture at the hands of their government.

But what really makes the heart sink is the knowledge that, though the spotlight of publicity may shine on a few cases from time to time—such as in South Africa, Brazil or Chile—most of this governmental brutality passes unnoticed by an uncaring world.

The only reason the Malawi persecutions have been publicized at all is that Jehovah's Witnesses here and in Europe have worked hard to attract attention to the plight of their black co-religionists. The Malawi government repeatedly denies that it is engaged in persecution, but Western journalists have not been allowed into the country to investigate the reports.

These reports, which have come from enough different sources within Malawi to be substantially credible, tell of men severely beaten, their wives and daughters raped and homes destroyed.

The only offense these people have committed is to refuse to join the one legal political party in the state. Their religion recognizes no earthly governmental authority. So they pay taxes and are otherwise loyal citizens, but Jehovah's Witnesses do not participate in political activity.

The first campaign against this sect was launched 12 years ago, shortly after independence. But at that time it was still possible to seek redress in the Malawi courts. A second onslaught four years ago was more fierce. The Witnesses were declared to be hindering the development of the country because of their refusal to join the party. This time, members of the sect were systematically deprived of their jobs and their property destroyed.

Most fled across the border into Mozambique, then a Portuguese colony, where they lived in refugee camps. But after Mozambique became independent last summer, the Malawi Witnesses were no longer welcome. Their forced return to Malawi touched off yet another terrible round of persecution and torture.

What can the West do to try to stop this savage mistreatment of helpless people, in Malawi or elsewhere? Protests can be made, but they generally fall on deaf ears. Complaints can be sent to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, but these are usually buried. That agency has become the captive of governments that resist close examination of the actions of others lest their own behavior come under scrutiny, too.

Congress is trying to take a stand by writing into the current foreign aid legislation a provision that no aid should go to countries violating basic human rights. But withholding aid is at best a clumsy instrument, and has no impact at all on wealthier offenders, such as the Soviet Union. Among the poorer countries, such a policy could do more harm than good in the long run.

Tyranny operates most successfully in the dark. So our best way to combat it is ceaseless efforts to penetrate the secrecy around such places as Malawi, and continuing expressions of outrage if our fears are confirmed.

This kind of pressure is often hard to mobilize. But on a shrinking planet in which our interdependence becomes more obvious with each passing day, it often can be effective. The truth can be a great weapon.

ATTENTION SENIOR CITIZENS:

Dear Senior Citizen:

Welcome to the Senior Citizens Club!

As a part of our ever-continuing effort to better serve our customers, Shoppers Choice has recently organized a club for senior citizens so that we may offer a special savings at our stores.

One way that we want to help is through our Super Saver program which has been newly revised for our senior citizens. Each week in our ads certain items are featured as Super Saver items. These items may be purchased at a very reduced price with one filled Super Saver Card. For instance 49oz. Tide which regularly sells for $1.45 may be offered at 89¢ with one filled Super Saver Card. This would mean a 56¢ savings to all our customers. For each one dollar ($1.00) purchase in our stores, our customers receive one Super Saver token; however, as a senior citizen you will receive twice as much or two tokens for every $1.00 purchase. Simply place the tokens on a Super Saver Card, which is available at our check-out register. Each card requires 15 tokens.

In addition to our Super Saver Specials, we also offer Bonus Super Saver Coupons to our customers. These coupons are valid on a specified item. For example, 1 extra Super Saver card with a $15.00 order or 10 Super Saver tokens on a package of luncheon. Senior Citizens will receive double the coupon amount listed on the Bonus Super Saver Coupons.

Shoppers Choice uses Bargain Coupons for national items such as Maxwell House Coffee at 99¢ for a one pound tin with a $10.00 order. We also advertise items such as fryers at 29¢ a pound with a $10.00 order. Senior Citizens do not have to buy a minimum order to qualify for these advertised specials. Just one more way Shoppers Choice helps Senior Citizens!

To help you become familiar with our Super Saver Program and how it works, we will give all senior citizens who sign up three filled super saver cards at our Shoppers Choice store offices. And, just to welcome you to the Senior Citizens Club a coupon for a free loaf of our Country Oven Bakery bread is at the store office. Stop by and get your free loaf of bread soon!

To qualify for the above savings, simply sign up at our store office or our service centers. Then when you shop, show the card to the cashier at the check-out counter. This card will enable you to receive double Super Saver tokens.

Thank you,
Joseph E. Holdren

KEA President Disappointed That Teacher Negotiation Failed

Louisville, Ky.—Kentucky Education Association (KEA) president Billye Pope says she has "mixed emotions" about the education legislation enacted by the 1976 General Assembly.

"There is no question that elementary and secondary education attained a high priority status with the legislature and with the governor," Mrs. Pope declared in evaluating the session that ended March 20.

"This was reflected in the budget bill, which increased teacher salaries; funded additional kindergarten, special education, and vocational education units; provided free textbooks for more public-school children; eliminated some fees charged such children, and made a modest beginning in the implementation of the power equalization program.

"There is also no question that teachers made some gains," asserted the Fayette county teacher.

"Salaries were increased, the notification date for non-renewal of contract was moved back to April 30, and a maximum of 30 days sick leave can be transferred from one school district to another."

Permissive legislation in the area of personal leave and sabbatical leave also was enacted, she noted.

"However, the KEA's highest priority—professional negotiation legislation—failed again."

Mrs. Pope termed it "incomprehensible" that Kentucky's teachers—"the largest group of well-educated, highly trained professionals in this state"—have "again been denied the right to participate in making those policy decisions that most affect them and the children they teach."

"We can never adequately fill the needs of our children until we have developed an educational system that is responsive to those needs, acts promptly, and projects for future needs."

"Teachers know best what those needs are," said Mrs. Pope. "They must be guaranteed the right to participate in deciding how best to meet those needs."

"Professional negotiation legislation is that guarantee. We shall continue to press for its enactment."

Magazine To Feature State Resort Parks

Frankfort, Ky.—Kentucky's system of 15 state resort parks has been cited as "the model for those run by other states" in the current issue of Family Circle Magazine.

In a feature article on affordable resort vacations, the magazine called Kentucky state resort parks "the first and finest" of their kind.

Author Jean Anderson praised the parks system for having a park to suit every family's taste and budget. In her article, she described Kentucky parks as ranging from those suitable as an escape from big-city pressure such as Pennyrie Forest, Cumberland Falls and the mountain parks of eastern Kentucky, to the more "swinging" parks such as Lake Barkley, Lake Cumberland and General Butler.

The April issue of Family Circle Magazine has already generated over 800 requests for information about Kentucky resort parks, according to a parks department spokesman. Family Circle is published by the New York Times.

March at Mt. Manor

March has been a busy month at Mountain Manor, as usual. Patsy Evans, activity director, was asked to talk about nursing home life to a sociology class at Prestonsburg Community College. Mr. Weddle, of the college, brought some of his classes to visit the home during the month and interviewed some of the residents.

St. Patrick's day was a fun day. Refreshments were served. Entertainment at the piano was by the Rev. Ray Snyder.

Wade Moore recently showed slides of the Holy Land, using sound and also explaining the Holy Land as it is today.

Singers from the Pentecostal Church of Drift visited Mountain Manor and sang as they visited through the halls. Groups are always welcome to share with the residents of the home, Mrs. Eleanor Robinson, administrator, said.

Emergency Act To Aid Families Of Mine Victims

Frankfort, Ky.—Families of the 11 Scotia mine disaster victims still in the mine will be able to get immediate aid as a result of an emergency amendment to Kentucky law signed Thursday by Gov. Julian Carroll. The amendment, originally suggested to the governor by Atty. Gen. Robert F. Stephens and Asst. Gen. Mark Armstrong, was approved by the House of Representatives on March 18.

"The law, KRS Chapter 213, required an examination of the body by a coroner before a death certificate could be issued," Gov. Carroll said, "and that certificate is necessary for surviving families to apply for Social Security, workmen's compensation, and other death-related benefits. Although we know this won't ease their anguish at the loss of their loved ones, we hope it will make their day-to-day lives a little easier."

The amendment states "Whereas, a mine disaster has occurred during this session of the General Assembly and certificates of death cannot be issued under existing law to insure the availability of death benefits for the surviving families of the victims thereof, an emergency is hereby declared to exist and Section 2 of this Act shall become effective upon its passage and approval by the Governor."

Section 2 of the act states that the coroner may issue a death certificate in the absence of the body of the deceased if the evidence clearly established the location of the body.

The emergency amendment was necessary because the bodies of the 11 men still in the Scotia mine may not be removed for some considerable time.

Other provisions of the new law call for the death certificate to be issued upon establishment of the identity of the deceased; that the death was caused by fire or explosion or related causes in an underground passageway; and the certification of those facts by the commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals.

Every year the beautiful American countryside is messed up with 60-billion no-deposit cans and bottles. It is estimated that $20 million is spent each year to kill so-called bottle bills aimed at legislation to prevent the litter. No one knows for sure how many more millions are spent each year to pick up the debris on our roadsides.—SPORTS AFIELD

There may be good news for swimmers who are allergic to sharks in a small tape recorder capable of operating under water. The tape will play Beethoven music. A team of scientists in Melbourne, Australia, has discovered that the sharks in their holding pools panicked and tried to jump back into the ocean when the Beatles beat was piped down to them. But, should you get one of these shark chasers, don't load it with a waltz or fox trot; the researchers also found that the sharks had a special appetite for the ballroom oldies.—SPORTS AFIELD

Based on Road & Track magazine's consideration of hundreds of 1975 automobiles:
You're looking at the best car in the world for under $3500.

There are winners in this world.

And there are losers.

The Volkswagen Rabbit is a winner.

After considering hundreds of '75 cars, the experts at Road & Track named it "the best car for under $3500."

Toyota didn't make it. The Datsun didn't make it. Vega, Pinto, Honda, Fiat—did not make it.

Compare the Rabbit on performance. (From 0 to 50, a Datsun B-210 is 60% slower.)

Compare the Rabbit on roominess. (It has the head and leg room of some mid-size cars.)

Compare the Rabbit

on gas mileage.

39 mpg on the highway, 25 in the city. These are EPA estimates of what the Rabbit with stick shift got in 1976 EPA tests.

(The mileage you get can vary, depending on how and where you drive, optional equipment, and the condition of your car.)

No other car will give you the combination of performance, space and economy that you'll find in a Rabbit.

You owe it to yourself to try the best, before you settle for something less.

- 3/4 cup soup stock
- 1 cup sour cream
- salt and pepper

Wipe rib or loin chops with damp cloth and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Heat bacon fat in a heavy frying pan and add chops and carefully peeled white onions. Sear the chops on both sides, pour in the soup stock, cover and simmer over a low fire until the stock is almost cooked away. Add sour cream and cook, uncovered, until the cream is thick and smooth.
