

Corps Eyes Flood Curb In 4th Dam Russell Fork Dam At Haysi Could Be Next Impoundment

Construction of a fourth dam in the headwaters of the Big Sandy will get a new and hard look by the U.S. Corps of Army Engineers as one of the moves intended to reduce, but not eliminate, flooding of the valley.

The new impoundment, Haysi Lake, in the Virginia headwaters of the Russell Fork of the river, according to Charles McIntyre, chief planner for the Corps of Engineers' district office in Huntington, would have cut the April 4 flood crest by three to four feet at Pikeville and would have reduced flooding further downstream. The Corps of Engineers last week expressed the belief that much of the water which threatened Prestonsburg, Paintsville and Louisa came from the Russell Fork, which the Haysi dam would help control.

Fishtrap, John Flannagan and North Fork of Pound reservoirs have been in operation several years and failed to protect the nearest sizeable town, Pikeville, as expected. But only 50.5 per cent of the watershed above Pikeville drains into these three lakes. At that, it is estimated that the three existing dams saved Pikeville 13.6 feet more water and cut Prestonsburg's crest by 11.7 feet.

At that, the Corps admits, most of the flood control projects it has under review would have only a comparatively light impact on floods such as those of 1957 and 1977. It has no project or series of projects in mind that would guarantee protection from future flooding.

A second dam, this on Panther Creek, a tributary of the Tug Fork, may also get strong consideration. But the Corps planner, McIntyre, estimates that the dam would have reduced the flooding at hard-hit Williamson, W. Va. by only one foot, had it been in operation when the April flood came.

Congress authorized the Haysi dam in 1937 and Tug River dam, some years ago, but neither has been funded.

One project reported under consideration as a joint venture of the Corps of Engineers and the Kentucky Bureau of Highways would make changes in the rechanneling of the Big Sandy from its present course around Pikeville. Together, they may redesign two highway underpasses and Pikeville's drainage system to eliminate flood danger after the river is moved through the cut-through now under construction. Three dams already are under construction in Eastern Kentucky.

The Corps believes the dam on Martins Fork of the Cumberland River, (See Story No. 2, Page 4)

DeRossett Says He Will Suggest Pay for Training

After he and two of the election commissioners had spent the first half of primary election day trouble-shooting at perhaps half a dozen voting precincts where poll officials had had trouble with the voting machines, DeGarmo DeRossett, who supervises the storage, care and delivery to the precincts of the machines, said he will ask the Floyd fiscal court at its next meeting to provide for pay of election officers for attending pre-election instruction sessions.

"I am not implying in any sense that the election officers are incompetent; they simply haven't taken the instruction they need for the proper operation of the machines," DeRossett said.

He added that perhaps a fourth of the poll officials came here for the pre-primary instruction session. Floyd county does not pay them for taking instruction. Neighboring Johnson county pays its election officers $10, in addition to $15 for their services on election day, and gets good instruction attendance, he said.

By noon DeRossett, accompanied by two members of the election commission, had made trips to Cliff, John Ant, John Possum, Maytown and Richmond precincts to correct problems encountered by poll officials.

A three-hour delay was encountered at John Possum where officials failed to pull out a knob. At Cliff only one election officer was present for the 6 a.m. opening of the polls. In Magisterial districts 1, 2 and 3, where there was no Republican strip on the machines—either because nobody was a candidate as a Republican or, if there were candidates they were without opposition—officers were confused and attempted to pull out the G. O. P. knob on the machine, it was said.

DeRossett said failure of the machines themselves was at the rate of less than one per cent.

TO MAKE WAY for construction of Riverview Manor Nursing Home which is being built on the former J. D. Mayo farm adjacent to Briarwood Addition here, the old dairy barn and a smaller structure which occupied the site were burned under the supervision of the Prestonsburg Fire Department, Saturday. Firemen utilized the controlled burning of the buildings to conduct a firefighting training session in which various firefighting techniques and procedures were practiced. At left, a fireman directs water toward a blaze while photo at right shows flames and smoke issuing from the upper section of the barn, long a local landmark.

This Town...That World

This, my countrymen, is no easy job. If you think it is, just try, as I have during these weeks of torrid political campaigning, to keep your mouth shut, to treat everybody as nearly alike as possible, and to keep your cool when you're accused of doing otherwise. If I seem to walk with a sort of rolling gait, these days, it comes from straddling the fence. . . . As Kung Fu, or somebody, said, "Man straddle fence—both sides get sore."

BACK TO THE MINORS

When I asked Earl Castle, home from Kerr Lake with buckoo fish, if Roy Ramey went with him, he said, "No, we farmed Roy out to Pikeville. But the kid has possibilities—believe he'll make it back to the Big Leagues, some day."

I didn't ask but I wondered if Ramey was having trouble, as I do, with the strike zone.

CITY-DWELLER

I know where a red fox lies outside his den here, watching us geese, but as far as I can keep it secret so it will remain. There are too many trigger-happy geese around.

Was it told about election liquor? I think so. Anyway, the man was given a drink, then was asked what he thought about it. "Jest right," he replied. "If it was any better, you'd have drunk it yourself, and if it was any worse it would gag a buzzard."

HENRY TO THE RESCUE

I am always at the point of fawning upon anybody who will tell me a story that can be printed in this space without first a trip to the dry-cleaners. This one, though you may have heard it, will do. It's the story of Carter, Nixon, Kissinger, a hippie and a priest who were the sole occupants of a plane when suddenly over the inter-com came the pilot's voice.

Mud Creek Man Killed, One Hurt

The first of two Mud Creek residents to die last week in accidents was Larry Dale Mitchell, 26, of Beaver, who was dead on arrival at the McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital after his motorcycle had rammed the auto of Scott Hines, of Weeksbury, Friday afternoon.

The second victim was Quentin Adkins, Jr., who was a drowning victim Saturday at Dewey Lake.

Eddie Tackett, also of Mud Creek, passenger on Mitchell's cycle, suffered severe leg injuries. He was also taken to the McDowell hospital.

Hines, who was driving a compact model car, suffered an arm injury. The collision took place on the curve near the Burton church. Hines said he was unable to avoid the smashup. It was said here that neither Mitchell nor Tackett wore helmets at the time of the crash.

The victim was a son of Edward Mitchell, of Beaver, and the late Bernice Hamilton Mitchell. He had been employed the last eight years at the Ligon coal preparation plant.

Besides his father, he is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mabeth Webb Mitchell; one son, Larry David, and three daughters, Brenda Lou, Bernice and Betty Sue, all of Galveston; two brothers, Lee Franklin and Wilburn Gerald Mitchell, both of Teaberry, and three sisters, Mrs. Mildred Sue Howell, Della Marie and Offie Kay Mitchell, all of Teaberry.

Funeral rites were conducted at 10 a.m. Monday from the home of the victim by ministers of the Regular Baptist Church, and burial in the Ike Roberts cemetery at Grethel was under direction of the Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

On This Matter of Voting . . .

Both Old and New Methods Judged Less Than Perfect

As a heated primary election campaign was ending last week the integrity of voting methods was being discussed by candidates and their supporters.

There were some who argued that the voting machines are very fallible and may, if manipulated, serve to hasten the voting fraud process. These maintained that a candidate's name may be "locked out," and that votes cast for him or her in that case would not be counted. The sophisticated machines, others claim, can be manipulated in other ways.

On the other hand, those who claim the voting machines constitute the greatest stride forward ever taken in the balloting process, not only argue the honesty of the voting device but also point to what existed before voting machines took the place of the old "paper ballot."

They not only point out the convenient "loss" of entire ballot boxes on occasion, the long days of counting the votes, the nights of guarding the ballots against those who would tinker with them but also hark back to the days when votes were bought and delivery guaranteed through what at that time was known as "the chain ballot."

Many young voters have not heard of the chain ballot system, much less of how it worked. One who was active in political campaigns, years ago, gave this example:

First of all, the "striker," the individual assigned to "fight" for a certain candidate at a precinct, went himself, or sent a confederate, into the voting place with a piece of paper folded much as a ballot would appear. Receiving a ballot from the election officer, he retired to a booth, there pretended to vote but actually kept the ballot, depositing in the ballot box the piece of paper which he had brought into the voting-place and leaving with the real ballot.

So was created the first link in the chain. The "striker" had this ballot, and it was voted as he wanted it when he bought a vote and sent the voter inside with it secreted on his person. The voter in turn received another ballot from the election official, went into the booth, returned to deposit the ballot which had been voted outside and left to give the striker the unvoted ballot.

Only then was the voter paid—when he delivered the unvoted ballot to the buyer of his vote.

So was forged a "chain" that ended only when the buyer ran out of "floaters"—or out of money.

Galveston Boy First To Drown At Dewey in '77

Dewey Lake claimed its first drowning victim of the year late Saturday when 16-year-old Quentin Adkins, Jr., of Galveston, drowned near the German recreation area.

The first lake victim of the year, William C. Bryant, Lexington architect, apparently died of electric shock while working on an outboard motor, a few weeks ago.

A jury empanelled by Coroner James J. Carter held that the youth's death was accidental. Five youths, companions of the victim on an outing at the lake, were witnesses, and they were quoted as saying he had swum across the lake, approximately 100 feet downstream from the German boat ramp, and had started to return when he began to sink. One of the group swam to his assistance but failed to reach him before he disappeared.

The tragedy occurred about 8:10 p.m. The body was recovered at 9:30 p.m. (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Lewis-Hale Race Tight For Sheriff

Floyd county voters went to the polls Tuesday to give their collective answer to the 100 candidates who for weeks had been importuning them for support.

The fight was in the main an intra-party affair among Democrats, since few Republicans were entered in the primary.

And the results recorded few upsets. In most Democratic races the incumbents were the winners. The exceptions were Magistrate Leroy Akers, who was defeated in District 3 by Eddie Caudill, a former Magistrate; and Magistrate Dewey Roberts, who lost in District 4 to Elder Hershel Hamilton.

The day was unmarred by major disturbance at any of the county's voting places, but some trouble in the operation of the voting machines was encountered. About 12,000 votes were cast.

The tabulation of the vote was completed by 9:30 Tuesday night. The unofficial returns gave the winners and their nearest opponents these vote totals:

Judicial Ballot

District Judge—Harold Stumbo, 6,462; Scott Collins, 2,715; Jarvis Allen, 2,235. Stumbo and Collins will run for the judgeship in the November finals.

Democrats

County Judge—Henry Stumbo, 6,827; Bill Wells, 5,052.

Representative—James "Jitter" Allen, 6,640; Tommy Boyd, 2,671; Everett Akers, 1,005.

County Attorney—Arnold Turner, Jr., 8,190; Burnis Martin, 2,513.

Sheriff—Doug Lewis, 4,767; Henry C. Hale, 4,615.

Magistrate Kenneth Roberts won nomination in District 2 over Ex-Magistrate Zeb Ousley. In District 1 Herschel Ray Wilcox, a newcomer to politics, won the nomination for magistrate. His nearest opponent was Gerald DeRossett.

Jailer Lawrence Hale and Coroner James J. Carter easily won their nominations. They have no opposition in November.

The vote shown here does not include absentee ballots, but it was said these will not affect the final results. The vote totals in other races were not available before The Times' press deadline.

Joseph Slated For DAV Post

Hershel Joseph, executive director of the Floyd County Chapter, American Red Cross, announced last Thursday at a meeting of the Red Cross Board that he has accepted permanent employment with the state Disabled American Veterans organization and the new position will require relocation to Louisville and consequently his resignation from the local Red Cross chapter.

The 29-year-old Joseph will work as Department adjutant treasurer with the D.A.V. for the state and will be based in Louisville. Joseph, who has served as Seventh District commander, D.A.V., will be inducted to the new position at the D.A.V. state convention which begins June 9.

Jim Springer, district manager of the Bluegrass District, Kentucky Division of the American Red Cross, commended Joseph for his "commitment and dedication" with the Red Cross and cited Joseph's work during recent Red Cross flood relief operations in the county.

"We (the Red Cross) hate to see Hershel leave the organization, but we're happy for him and his family on his acceptance of his new position," Springer said.

The Red Cross board will meet Thursday to discuss a replacement for Joseph.

Strike Idles Plant at Warco

Striking workers outside Warco Plant.

Approximately 65 shop employees of the EIMCO Elkhorn Division of Envirotech Corporation at Warco were off work this week, picketing company grounds as part of a strike which began last Tuesday morning.

The Elkhorn walkout brought to two the number of strikes which are presently affecting Floyd county plants. Workers at Kentucky Hydrocarbon Company at Langley have been on strike since Midnight, April 30.

The Elkhorn employees are reportedly protesting the company's refusal to recognize the Teamsters' union as a valid bargaining agent.

According to Elkhorn striker Glen Spears, of Halo, serious talk of a strike began when Elkhorn company representatives failed to attend a National Labor Relations Board meeting which was held April 8 at Paintsville to discuss employees' wishes to join Teamsters Local 505, Huntington, West Virginia.

"The shops can't keep up with other jobs around here in terms of pay," one employee commented, referring specifically to jobs in the coal industry.

Although no official statement was released by the company, Rex Ankrom, Elkhorn official, said company people were aware of rumors that the Teamsters may be "moving in on Eastern Kentucky" to take advantage of the situation which may result if UMWA strikes occur in late fall as predicted.

Elkhorn strikers are manning the picket lines around the clock and all ingoing and outgoing supplies to the company have been stopped. Although the strikers have vowed to remain on the picket lines indefinitely, a spokesman for the men stressed the point that the group intends no violence.

EIMCO Elkhorn manufactures mining equipment and has an international market.

Measles in Ky. Held Epidemic

A measles outbreak in Kentucky has already reached epidemic proportions with almost 489 cases reported this month alone, according to Dr. Carlos Hernandez, the state's director of preventive services in the Department for Human Resources.

During the same period last year 97 cases were reported.

The recent outbreak in Kentucky and other states could have been prevented if pre-school children had been properly immunized, Hernandez said. Parents are responsible for making sure children are immunized, he said.

Most of the 489 cases reported this month occurred in central and far-western Kentucky. The bulk were reported from Green, Hardin, Marshall, McCreary, and Monroe counties.

Dr. Hernandez said the majority of the cases reported are children in the upper grades of elementary school or early high school. "Many of these kids never got measles vaccine or else got it before they were 12 months of age," he said. "Prior to 12 months, the vaccine may not have given adequate protection."

In a letter to county health departments this week, Dr. Hernandez recommended that infants in counties affected by the outbreak should be considered for immunization at six months. But he noted that such infants must be revaccinated at 15 months in order to have lifetime immunity from measles. Adults do not usually need to be immunized even if they have no "history" of the disease, he said. "Especially in the face of this recent epidemic, children vaccinated before 1970, and any persons uncertain about their immunization history should be vaccinated."

"This will result in many children being unnecessarily revaccinated, but this is preferable to some remaining unimmunized," Dr. Hernandez noted.

Measles is the most serious of the common childhood diseases. It causes deafness, blindness, convulsions, or brain damage once in every 1,000 cases, he said.

Hernandez emphasized that parents should have children vaccinated before cases of the disease show up. Measles vaccination is free of charge at local health departments.

Four Local Breaks Yield Little Loot

Burglars were busy last week, but their haul was light.

The Prestonsburg Elementary School was broken into last Wednesday night for the second time in a week—and through the same door that was entered in the first break—but only a small amount of cash was taken. The same night, Wells' Grocery in the Goble-Roberts Addition was entered. The haul of merchandise was light.

What could have been a sensational break into the Thomas Hereford Company was forestalled before dusk last Saturday by an alarm. Thieves had come off the roof of the First Avenue building into a window when the alarm sounded. They fled, leaving behind a bag of burglar tools.

An attempt to rob a coin-changer at U.S. Shoe Company here was foiled by the toughness of the machine. It was badly battered but defied attempts to open it, Policeman Darrel J. Conley said.

More Water Drawn From Flanagan Dam

Additional water is being released from John W. Flanagan Reservoir, near Haysi, Va., to improve water quality at Pikeville and other downstream communities along the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River.

According to the Army Corps of Engineers' Huntington district office, Congressional justification for the Flanagan project included additional storage for the purpose of supplementing downstream water quality. The reservoir's other features include flood control and recreation.

Operation of the Flanagan project includes maintaining a flow at Pikeville of no less than 190 cubic feet per second. This benefit of supplementing natural low flows extends to downstream communities such as Prestonsburg, Paintsville and Louisa.

A Corps spokesman said the increased flows would continue until the Eastern Kentucky area receives additional rain.

Blame It on the Law

For all our impatience with HUD, SBA and other federal agencies which have disappointed thousands with ineffectual efforts to meet the crisis created in Eastern Kentucky by last month's flood conditions, we sympathize with those individuals who, representing these agencies, personally encounter the verbal abuse that belongs to their employers.

The individuals who came to this and other counties to offer help in the name of HUD came into the flood area in a leaky boat. However much they wanted to be of service, they were bound in red tape, and if they had cut it and proceeded with the work that needed to be done now, not later, there would have been hearings in Washington, perhaps, even formal charges of waste and violation of the law.

It is true that those mobile homes which HUD promised were needed last month, not next month or next July. It is true that a Small Business Administration loan at 6% per cent interest isn't much help when the borrower is already paying on an earlier SBA loan. It seems ridiculous that Zaire, for instance, can get millions at no interest while an American citizen in direst need must pledge his possessions to repay an SBA loan and meanwhile pay interest on it.

But that's the law.

U.S. Senator Walter "Dee" Huddleston pretty well described the situation at the hearing at which he presided in Washington last week. Commenting on the response of federal officials that aid is reaching flood victims at reasonable speed, considering the natural obstacles presented by the mountainous area, he said:

"From their (federal officials') standpoint, they possibly could be right," Huddleston said, "but from the standpoint of what I think we ought to be able to do, it falls far short."

"They're operating under a specific set of laws and perhaps that's the best they can do under those laws. Perhaps they could have done better. The important thing is that we need a better mechanism, a better set of laws, relating to disaster aid, which I think out of this hearing and others we'll be able to develop."

through dragging operations by the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad, assisted by rangers of the Corps of Engineers. The water was between 17 and 20 feet deep where the body was found, it was said.

The victim was a son of Mrs. Martha Adams Adkins, of Galveston, and the late Quentin Adkins. Besides his mother, survivors are his stepfather, Noah Adkins, of Galveston; three brothers and five sisters, Jay Lee, Willie and Jimmy D. Adkins, all of Galveston, Mrs. Jewel Dean Williamson, Lorain, O., Mrs. Arizona Ward, Delaware, O., Mrs. Teresa Hall, Mrs. Joyce Hall and Miss Kathryn Adkins, all of Galveston.

Funeral services were conducted at 10 a.m. Tuesday from the home of the victim's mother, ministers of the Regular Baptist Church officiating. Burial was in the Adkins cemetery at Galveston, the Hall Brothers Funeral Home directing.

"Gentlemen," he said, "remain cool, but I mist tell you that we have just ruptured a fuel line and must crash. My co-pilot and I have two parachutes and will be jumping in the next few seconds. You have four chutes. Be gentlemen, decide who will use them, and good luck."

Carter softly reminded the others that he didn't want to seem presumptuous but that, since he was President of the United States, much depended upon him and he should have one of the parachutes. The other agreed, and he floated out.

Nixon then told the other three that only he could tell the full story of Watergate, that he thought it would be of benefit to the nation, and so should be next in line. No objection.

Then Kissinger spoke up in his broadest accent: "I am the smartest man in the world, and my mind is needed as this country of ours faces one crisis after another." The other two agreed, and he jumped.

The priest then spoke up. "I," he told the hippie, "am an old man. I have lived a full life, you are young, and I want you to take the one parachute that is left."

"Cool it, man!" the hippie cried. "We've got two chutes, man! Put one on and jump. That 'smartest man in the world' just jumped with my knapsack on his back."

scheduled for completion in December, would have reduced flooding at Harlan by two feet and cut damage figures by $3 million.

The corps is also building the controversial Paintsville and Yatesville dams. President Carter tried to drop both projects earlier this year, but the Paintsville Dam seems likely to be reinstated and supporters of the Yatesville Dam plan to fight for that project. Both are scheduled for completion in 1980.

The corps has released statements saying that the Paintsville and Yatesville dams would have prevented $1 million in damage last month on the Big Sandy and Ohio rivers. However, McIntyre acknowledged that the dams were outside the areas of heavy rainfall last month and said, "For all practical purposes, they wouldn't have had much effect."

Chuck Hoffman, spokesman for the Kentucky Rivers Coalition, which has led the fight against the Paintsville and Yatesville dams, said that the corps' position that the two projects would have reduced damage is foolish.

Hoffman said that the corps should not build more small dams. Instead, he said, it should construct local floodwalls and levees, promote flood-plain management, improve forecasting and revise the statistical data on which the corps plans.

First Woman Mine Graduate Has Job with Island Creek

Deborah "Debbie" Wagner became the first woman to graduate from the Mining Technology associate degree program at Pikeville College during commencement exercises Sunday, May 8.

A native of Louisville, Miss Wagner is the daughter of Rudy and Billie Wagner, teachers at Millard and Mullins High Schools, respectively. She lives with her parents at Mossy Bottom.

A 1975 graduate of Mullins High School, she intended to become a secretary for a mining concern when she first entered the mining technology program at Pikeville College. She had received a business certificate at Mullins High School and did her first summer internship in the mining technology program as a secretary in the office of Atty. Herbert Deskins. During this time, she became more and more interested in other aspects of the mining industry.

At the beginning of her second year of studies at the college, she went inside several mines during field trips with her class and spent two weeks studying blasting inside various mines. "That was when I made my decision to go into the mining industry in a job other than that of a secretary," Wagner recalled. "I just really enjoyed it."

Keenly interested in what she saw and learned, Miss Wagner was on her way to a job in the mining industry. As of May 16, she is on the job for Island Creek Coal Company. She was recruited by the company at a starting salary of $850 a month with a possibility of a raise in six months. She will be working at one of Island Creek's mines on Big Creek, underground, where the coal seam is about 7 feet high. Her job will be to take samples as a dust inspector for the company. She hopes to work her way up as a safety inspector which, she pointed out, will take "five years at least, if no longer."

"Island Creek wanted me to start work May 1," Miss Wagner explained, "but they have been very patient and allowed me to finish the semester and graduate before I started. Then I was involved in an automobile accident and had to ask them to let me wait a week longer. They have been most patient and I really appreciate that."

She has received encouragement from all the members of her family throughout her studies at Pikeville College, particularly her mother.

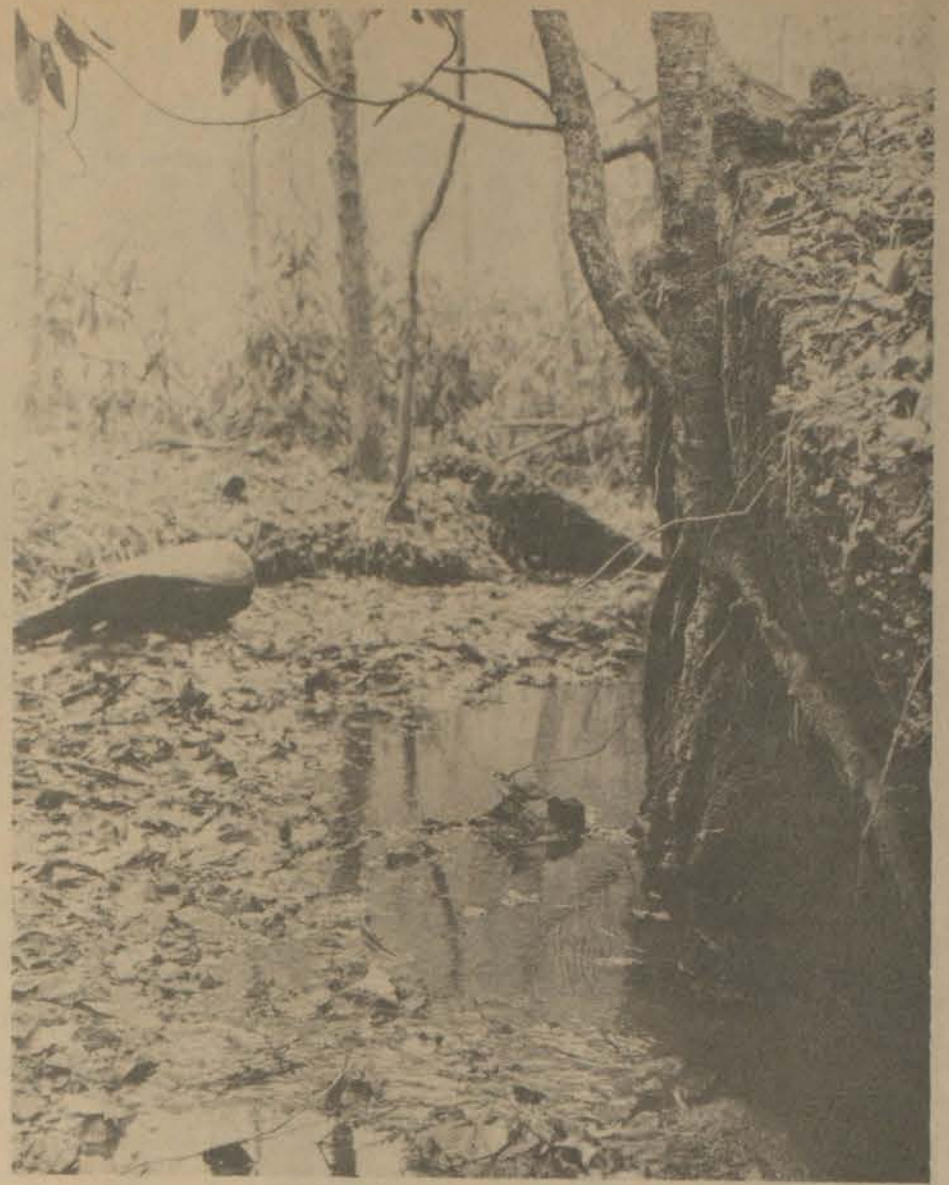

She would like to encourage other young people to go into mining if they are good in mathematics and science. She explained that they must be determined to go into mining and commit themselves to finishing the courses. She advises taking all the math and chemistry available at the high school level before entering the program.

Claude Brown, adjunct instructor in the mining technology program at Pikeville College, taught Miss Wagner in mine economics and mine supervision classes. Brown commented that "Debbie has a personality that will do well in the industry. She commands respect from the men who work with her, she does not demand it. She is likeable, but there is no foolishness about her. She has a business-like attitude. She has excellent potential and could easily work her way into a supervisory capacity."

The Big Sandy-Elkhorn Coal Mining Institute, the safety arm of the coal industry in 15 counties of eastern Kentucky, must think the gal has potential, too. They took a special vote to make her a member—the first woman—of their prestigious organization.

LEAVES HOSPITAL

Mrs. Edith Kendrick, who spent several days last week in the Highlands Regional Hospital, is recovering nicely at her home here.

SCENE IN A SHADED HOLLOW reveals trickling branch, moss-covered boulders, and an abundance of laurel.

Rumex crispus is a wild perennial better known to farmers, gardeners and herb doctors as either yellow, curly, or sour dock. A native of Europe, it has long since been naturalized in the United States and from the standpoint of herbal medicines, is one of our more important weeds. For nearly 400 years the plant has been employed in the treatment of a wide range of ailments all the way from glandular tumors to cases of the "little red itch." Herb simples compounded from the seed were used to treat infections of the kidneys and tea from the dried leaves was a good astringent. Its dried and pulverized root considered the finest of dentifrices, and the whole plant was utilized in the production of tonics and blood purifiers. Since the roots of dock contain a tremendous amount of iron, they are all but specifics for "tired blood."

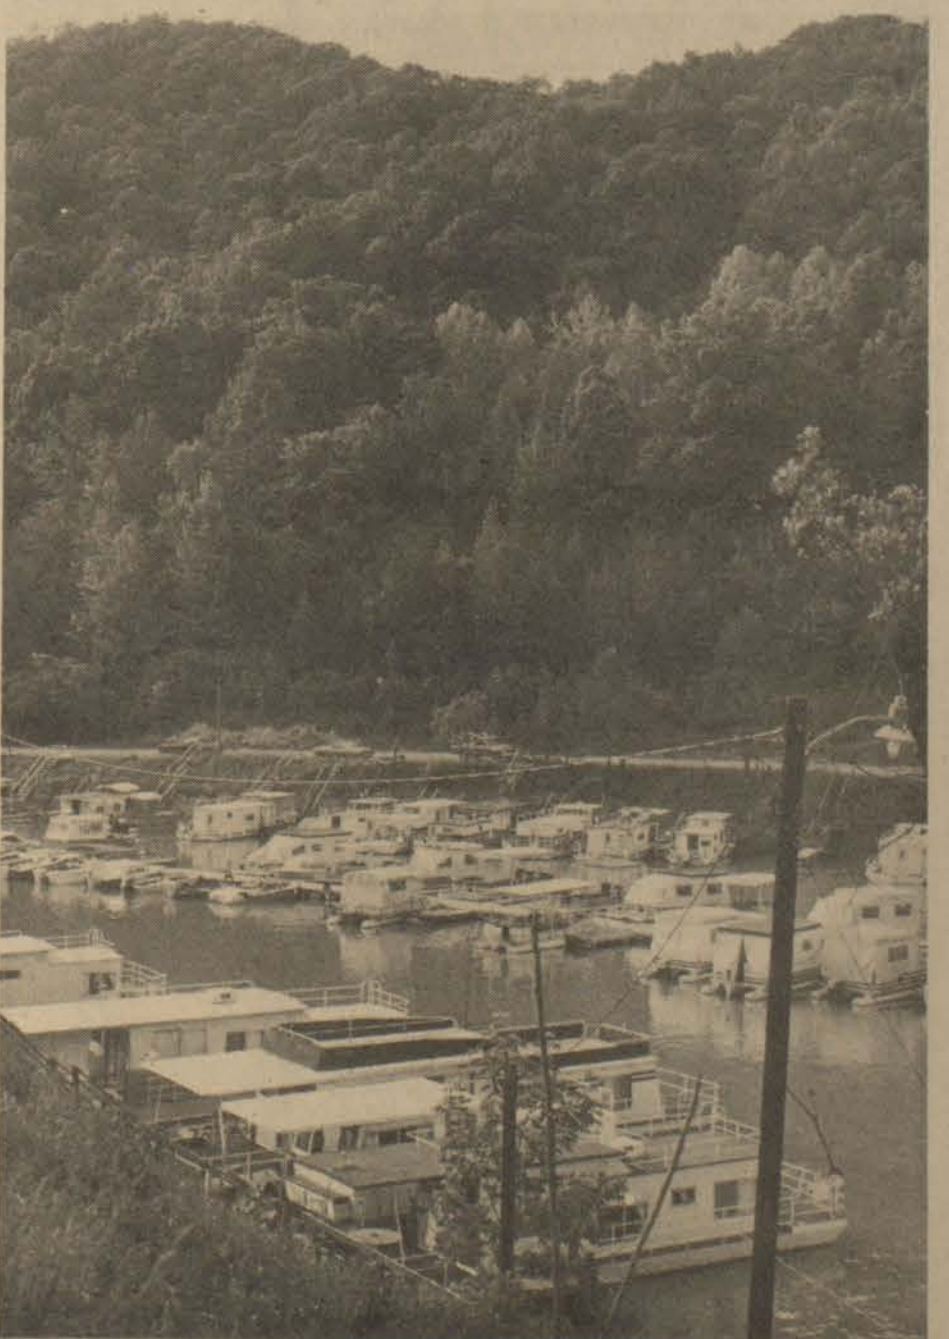

In addition to dock's use as a medicine, the leaves, mixed with dandelion, wild mustard, cress and other edible plants, give a mess of wild greens a taste-touch that approaches the sublime. According to Dr. John Gerard of 16th century England and a self-styled "Country Scholler," eating salads concocted from dock leaves "purifieth the blood and makes young wenches faire and cherry-like."

Dr. Gerard highly recommended dock as both "meate and medicine" and referred to it as Monk's Rhubarb. And, according to later pharmacists and medical scientists, dock does possess many of the medicinal virtues of our common garden rhubarb or pie plant. In a medical formulary published more than 300 years after Gerard, it is written that, if eaten in the spring, its "leaves exercise an excellent laxative and antiscorbutic effect."

A member of the Buckwheat Family of plants, Rumex crispus is a tall, stiff-stalked weed with wavy leaf margins and heart-shaped seed wings. It blooms in June and July and grows along back country lanes, in fence corners, in city lots and just about any place else where the soil is left unmolested.

The leaves, rubbed between the palms into a juicy pulp and pressed against wasp and bee stings, soon alleviates the pain and soreness.

An old recipe for a healing salve to treat old sores and a whole raft of skin problems runs thusly: "Bruise the fresh root in cream, lard, or butter and apply to the affections. If properly compounded with appropriate adjuncts and corrigents, the ointment has no equal in the treatment of scorbutic, cutaneous, cancerous, and elephantiasis conditions."

DEWEY LAKE DOCKS are filled to capacity with vessels of all shapes and sizes now that warm weather appears to be here to stay and water levels have returned to normal.

USDA Sets Registration For Referendum Vote

The U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) recently announced June 6 as the beginning of a two-week registration period for the beef research and information order referendum and issued rules for the referendum.

Anyone who was a cattle producer during 1976 can register to vote, either in person or by mail, at local Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices between June 6 and June 17. A list of those who register will be posted daily at ASCS offices and a final listing will be posted five days after registration closes. Those registered can vote between July 5 and July 15 at their ASCS office. For approval of the beef research and information order, at least 50 percent of those registered must vote, and two-thirds of them must favor it.

Way of the Cross Outreach would like to welcome everyone to join us Friday, May 27, and Saturday, May 28, at 7:30 p.m., for special services conducted by Teen Challenge from Louisville.

Teen Challenge is a nationwide, non-profit, church related organization, devoted to salvaging the lives of broken youngsters. The founder of Teen Challenge is David Wilkerson, the famous author of the "Cross and the Switchblade". For more than ten years, he has gone to aid troubled kids "where the action is" — on roofs, in basements, and on streets. He knows what we must do to save our most precious commodity — our youth.

The director is Bill Dickey, who will be coming here with some of the members of Teen Challenge. They will be showing a film called, "HIGH SOCIETY", and some will be giving their testimony. For instance, here is one of thousands of testimonies, telling what conditions some of our teenagers have gone through: "I came from a broken home. When I was 10 I was already on my own. . . I began shining shoes at a bar and had started drinking by the time I was 12. I was locked up for being drunk at 14 and soon afterwards started travelling with carnivals. At 16, I was doing drugs of all kinds and started shooting heroin and speed at 18. I've been locked up in jails all over the U.S. I ran with motorcycle gangs. . . I was a fighter. . . Once I got shot in the leg. . . The day I turned 20 I began serving six months for assault and battery on a cop. . . I started drinking more heavily from then on as alcohol was easier to get than drugs. I was constantly on drugs or alcohol from the age of 13 until I met Christ.

One day I met some friends in a bar who told me about Christ. I learned more about Christ at the Coffee house on 26th St. Finally, after waking up on the sidewalk on Broadway I realized I needed Help. . . I came to Teen Challenge. Christ has given me peace and a reason for living. TEEN CHALLENGE IS THE BEST PLACE THIS SIDE OF HEAVEN! It was here that I got my life together. I am now a staff trainee and want to help others the way I have been helped."

YOU'RE URGED TO ATTEND THIS INSPIRING PROGRAM.

Leadership II

By WILMAY

The last column generalized on leadership, which has negative and positive aspects, emphasis here on the latter. Most personality traits originate in childhood. Children respond to a variety of interests. Those surrounded with music, art, books, mechanical toys, plants, etc, find themselves easier than others. Politics was a frequent conversational topic in the Kennedy home.

As youngsters mature preparation is vital for any task: study, invaluable. Prayer and faith work miracles in any life, all ages. We all miss blessings by thinking anything too small for God's concern.

One major leadership priority is to love everybody. Youngsters have to be taught to love. Some never are. A few people cannot accept love because they harbor hatred which stems from childhood. Another need for leaders in particular is a forgiving heart. Offenses, slights, and wrongs—real or imaginary—occur wherever people exist. All of us are guilty, intentionally or not. All are targets, too. Jesus forgives only if we do. One unforgiving individual causes a stalemate in any group.

Ideal administrators keep confidences, and promises they make. Truthfulness commands respect. Little falsehoods lead to big ones, one lie to another. Liars cannot enter heaven. Rev. 21:8. Honesty is less prevalent today, even in charity drives. The head of enterprises is wise to see that treasurers are unrelated to him. Sincerely bestowed praise is heavenly, especially for children and budding leaders, whom it inspires. Patience and promptness mark efficient leaders. Delay creates bottlenecks and wrecks deadlines. Courtesy and kindness pay high dividends. Habitual, harsh, ugly remarks begin in childhood and reflect an absence of refinement. Empathy, understanding, and a sense of humor promote harmony and mobilize workers. Enthusiasm—a priceless ingredient for success—is contagious. No Ford salesman drives a Chevrolet! One must believe in what he sells or the project he administers and realize that a majority get out of any venture in proportion to what he and associates put into it. This calls for "elbow grease" as well as livewire leadership that gets results if zeal is genuine. Good leaders carry their share of the load. Slow persons may do a better job than the "race horses." The tortoise beat the hare. After all, there is more to life than outdoing the other fellow!

Criticism is one inevitable fee for leadership. It pays to ignore the vindictive kind; return good for evil; accept constructive censure, which is often needed. Striking back when abused accomplishes little. Fault-finders hurt themselves more than their victims. People who dig pits for others fall in themselves. Pr. 28:10. Persecution, a by-product of leadership, is to be expected. Jesus found that a prophet is not without honor save in his locale. Mt. 13:57. Moses, Paul, and the prophets were harassed.

Availability may equal ability. Thousands have charge in countless fields because they are accessible and willing. Numerous persons with no thought of ever being in command develop into experts. Minor jobs done well lead to larger opportunities and promotions. Few reach a summit without starting at the bottom. Leaders are required to make decisions, to say "no" sometimes, refuse to pass the buck, to accept responsibilities accompanying any office. Old-fashioned "backbone" may come in handy. Mistakes are unavoidable. It is impossible to please everybody. It is better to take blame, though innocent, than to see a guiltless co-worker falsely accused, and strife result as can happen.

High value is placed on cooperation, something some have difficulty promoting. Like rapport and love, it begins at the top. Even children know the worth of harmonious effort, and the inescapable defeat when mules pull in opposite directions. If leaders lack vision there may be little to cooperate with, no goals, programs, or plans. Giving is part of life, the same as receiving. Yielding is often sensible, except when principles are at stake or long-range views show the opposite course to be absurd and/or costly. No one can have his way all the time. Issues are made over in consequential matters. Nobody will die because some committee selects draperies whose color and texture clash with everything else in the new teacherage or clubhouse! Contentiousness limits the future of some leaders whose services are needed, while lust for power is not only apparent, dangerous, and repulsive but also the graveyard of many.

Recently this column mentioned the danger of cancer to girls whose mothers were given stilbestrol during pregnancy. On May 16, NBC news at 6:30, one announcer said 144 women are now suing the pharmaceutical companies because they have cancer, and their mothers were on the drug that has been outlawed and (or) restricted in many places. The man reporting said 2 million were exposed in 1947 to 1964, possibly more, and that the drug also can cause defects and deformities in the children whose mothers received it during pregnancy. Attorneys say they cannot sue as a group, must do so individually.

Thousands of Dams Could Be Dangerous

The collapse of the Teton Dam last year created damage amounting to $400 million and took 14 lives. But there may be worse to come. According to James Nathan Miller, who writes on federal dams in the June Reader's Digest, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation (BuRec) has constructed other dams on unsafe sites, with inadequate protection against erosion, and without instrumentation to alert engineers to impending collapse.

The Teton site was selected, Miller writes, because it was close to the farmers and could impound a large amount of water. It was also built because politicians in the Senate and House wanted a pork-barrel project for the voters of southeast Idaho. The project was actively supported by Senator Frank Church, (D. Idaho), chairman of the Senate Interior subcommittee on Energy and Natural Water Resources, to which BuRec reports. This, despite the fact that one of BuRec's own geologists stated publicly that the dam would never hold water.

Further, the section of the dam that was to be impervious to water turned out to have been made of a fine silt that was instead quite susceptible to water erosion. The silt was used because it was inexpensive and easily available. In justifying its use, BuRec said the material had been used in nine other dam constructions which so far have not leaked.

"To detect potentially dangerous changes (in the structure)," Miller writes, "It is an elementary requirement that there should be buried inside every big dam an array of strain gauges, earth- and water-pressure measuring devices, accelerometers, etc." But to save money, not a single instrument was implanted in the body of the Teton. The post-collapse investigation brought to light the fact that BuRec has constructed 37 other large dams since 1950 with no instruments in their bodies.

In California, BuRec is constructing Auburn Dam, a 60-story structure that the Association of Engineering Geologists has charged is highly susceptible to destruction by an earthquake of the force that can be expected in the region. At peril is the population of Sacramento—275,000 people—which would be inundated in the event of the dam's collapse. President Carter has asked that funds be halted because of the safety problems, but Congress could vote the funds if it wishes.

In addition to the large federal projects, there are some 44,000 non-federal dams, and the Army Corps of Engineers rates 10,000 of them as having a "high or significant hazard potential." While a National Dam Inspection Act is on the books, it excludes Corps of Engineers and BuRec dams and makes no provision for funding inspections. A bill to cure these defects has been introduced. Meanwhile, the people on the downstream side of large dams are largely unprotected.

(Listed by the writer as dams that have come under serious criticism for unsafe sites or faulty design are Wolf Creek Dam in Kentucky (Lake Cumberland), on which repair work is now being done; and Gathright Dam in Virginia on which work was begun before it was determined that the site of the dam is underlaid by huge limestone caves.—Editor)

Counselors Meet Set at U. of L.

Counselors from the state departments of education and human resources who serve on the Interagency Council will participate in the Kentucky Employment Counselors Association Conference Thursday, May 26, at the University of Louisville's University Center.

The Interagency Council's coordination committee will give a special presentation entitled "Toward Improving Coordination Among All Counselors" at 2 p.m.

The council was formed over a year ago to improve the communications and effectiveness of counselors throughout the state working to meet the needs of today's students, according to Dr. Bill Braden, council chairman and assistant director of the Division of Guidance Services, Kentucky Department of Education.

Dr. Braden said that students are confronted with decisions and choice-making in almost every area of their lives because of such a varied array of alternatives. "These areas include politics, religion, sex, friends, drugs, education, aging, death and even leisure time," Dr. Braden said. "Counselors can help both parents and students find answers and solutions to problems in making wise choices."

CHURCH DINNER PLANNED

A covered dish dinner will be held at Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church, this (Wednesday) evening, at 6. Members are asked to bring extra food for the Youth Choir, who will present at 7:30 the musical program, "Because He Lives," under the direction of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Kalos.

Attend Conference on Aging

Attending the two-day Conference on Aging at Western State University, May 18-19 were the following as pictured above:

The group included members of both the Martin and Prestonsburg Senior Citizens' Centers who heard state and federal officials, including Arthur Flemming, Commissioner, Administration on Aging, Washington, D.C. In addition, the group enjoyed dancing and a performance by Jim Owen, country singer from Nashville, Tennessee.

Youth Program Set for Area

The Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program will administer a summer youth program for economically disadvantaged youths in 22 Eastern Kentucky counties, according to Virgil Osborne, executive director of EKCEP. "The program will provide meaningful work experience, financial assistance and encouragement to remain in school for 4400 economically disadvantaged youths in our 22 counties," Osborne said. Communities will also be provided services which otherwise would not be available, he added.

Through its 1977 summer youth program, EKCEP will provide short-term employment for students who will be returning to the regular secondary school program in the fall, recent graduates who plan to enroll in higher education or vocational education in the fall and recent graduates who have no definite occupational goal and for whom no training or job opportunity immediately exists.

In addition, a number of students will participate in a project at vocational schools and their satellite centers. They will be provided orientation to the world of work and some of the types of vocational training available.

The program will be operated in two major segments. Youths between 14 and 22 who will be returning to secondary school in the fall will be provided services through contractual agreement with respective boards of education in the area. Youths who were high school seniors this year, college youths and dropouts who are eligible and who indicate they are planning to return to school, college or vocational or technical school in the fall will be provided services through local Community Action Agencies.

Program activities will not extend beyond Aug. 15. Participants will be paid the federal minimum wage, $2.30 per hour, for actual hours worked (not to exceed 175 hours maximum).

Eligibility is based on need as evidenced by family income and size. Youths ages 14 to 22 who feel they may be eligible and would like to participate in the program should contact their school superintendent if they will be returning to the regular secondary school program in the fall or local Community Action Agency if they are no longer in school.

River Basins Report Asks Area Program

A final copy of the Big Sandy and Guyandotte River Basins report, as reviewed by the governors and heads of federal agencies and departments, is now available.

The document contains recommendations for water and related land projects and programs. This report was prepared under the leadership of the Ohio River Basin Commission and contains information furnished by the states and federal agencies directly influencing the two river basins.

Recommendations for implementation during the next five years include improved municipal waste treatment facilities at 29 communities. The report also recommends the construction of six U.S. Department of Agriculture-Soil Conservation Service (USDA-SCS) watershed projects and one Corps of Engineers' reservoir.

The state members of the Commission recommend that funding for abandoned mine drainage abatement and state water quality enforcement programs be provided on an 80 percent federal, 20 percent local cost-sharing basis. Additional federal funding is also recommended for recreation on lands adjacent to federal water resource projects.

Copies of the report may be obtained from the Ohio River Basin Commission, 36 East Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio 45202.

Mary Todd Lincoln House, Restored, To Open June 9

The restored Mary Todd Lincoln House, on West Main Street, Lexington, will open Thursday, June 9, with a dedication luncheon in the Lexington Center at noon.

The former First Lady lived in the house, with her family, from 1832 until 1839. She then went to Illinois, where she married another native Kentuckian, Abraham Lincoln. On several occasions, the Lincolns returned to Lexington, visiting in the house, with their sons. A number of Mary Todd Lincoln's possessions have been returned to the house.

Restoring the house to its former elegance has taken 14 months, but the process of obtaining ownership by the Commonwealth of Kentucky dates back to 1969. The restoration was done by the Kentucky Mansions Preservation Foundation, a group chaired by Mrs. Louie B. Nunn.

Gov. Julian M. Carroll will deliver the dedication address and, along with former Gov. Louie B. Nunn, unveil the plaques for the Mary Todd Lincoln House.

Robert Todd Lincoln Beckwith, great-grandson of Mary Todd and Abraham Lincoln, will be an honored guest at the dedication.

Luncheon tickets can be obtained by writing the Kentucky Mansions Preservation Foundation, Parker Place, 511 West Short Street, Lexington, Kentucky, 40507, or by calling 606-233-9999. Luncheon reservations close on Tuesday May 31.

Are all Banks created equal?

Yes . . . that's the way they all start out . . . Uncle Sam makes sure of that. And it's true . . . all banks are governed by the same federal and state regulations, controlling what we can and cannot offer you.

But there is no ceiling on courtesy, efficiency and helpfulness, and right now there's a major campaign taking place at the Bank Josephine that emphasizes our attitudes toward each of our customers.

At The Bank Josephine we treat every customer like our business depends on them. Because it does! And we try never to forget that.

Uncle Sam can't make us any better than anyone else . . . only our people can! We mean what we say. Stop by and see for yourself.

Flood: the Guard Was There

(REPRINTED FROM THE KENTUCKY GUARDSMAN MAGAZINE.)
By 1st Lt. Tom Little

By all rules of journalism, this should be an objective report of the Kentucky National Guard's flood-relief efforts in the southeastern part of the state, but it can't be. And it won't be.

Rather, it will be a highly subjective look at the people in muddy green fatigues and rumpled flight suits who expended so much effort to help thousands of flood victims during the first weeks of April.

I was there — not as one doing the hard and dirty work — but as an observer. And I will never forget what I saw.

Nearly 1,000 men and women were there at the height of the activity and every one I saw was glad to be able to help. They were tired. They were dirty beyond description. But they were enthusiastic.

Naturally, there were problems, as in any operation of such magnitude. Mostly they stemmed from too few people or not enough equipment to meet the awesome demand. But spirits were high as the tired Guardsmen discussed what they had done and what they would do tomorrow.

Those tasks ranged from cleaning books and shelves in the Pikeville Library to helping the elderly and handicapped clean their homes. They included hauling water to people unable to travel to pick it up.

There were unusual tasks, such as flying 3,000 donated McDonald's hamburgers on the "Big Mac Express" to Prestonsburg, Pineville, and Pikeville. And there were crucial tasks, such as transporting seriously ill patients by air to medical centers in Lexington and elsewhere.

There are statistics that give an idea of the enormity of the Guard accomplishment.

For example, the Guard hauled about 250 tons of supplies into the 15 counties declared major disaster areas. Guard aviators provided the only link some small communities had with the outside world during the early days of the crisis. During a 10-day period, aviators transported 95 tons of general supplies, 8,500 pounds of medical supplies, and more than 109,000 pounds of food and water, while logging 580 hours of flight time.

Medical evacuation by UH-1 helicopters undoubtedly saved lives. Fifteen people were flown to hospitals and 19 more were transferred from area hospitals to other medical centers where more sophisticated care was available.

GRETHEL HOMEMAKERS NEWS

The Grethel Homemakers' Club met at the John M. Stumbo School at 7 p.m. Monday, May 2, with the meeting called to order by Mrs. Cosetta Newsome, president.

Devotions were led by Mrs. Frances Pitts on the theme of "Mothers' Day." Officers elected for 1977-78 are President, Mrs. Cosetta Newsome; Vice President, Mrs. Arietta Hall; Secretary, Mrs. Eileen Martin; Treasurer, Mrs. Glenn Evans; Devotional Chairman, Mrs. Maisie Anspaugh; Telephone Chairman, Mrs. Linda Tackett.

The lesson for the evening, "Small Electrical Appliances" was taught by our Floyd Co. Extension Agent, Mrs. Frances Pitts.

Literature relating to electrical appliances, energy crisis, draperies, bathroom decor, furniture repair, and zucchini recipes was given to each homemaker.

Guard aviators also rescued at least 50 trapped by the rising water in Pineville, Pikeville and other areas.

Even though those numbers are impressive, they don't begin to tell the story of the work that was done. They don't mention, for example, that many of those flying hours were at night, sometimes in snow and ice.

They don't tell how many hours the truck drivers kept going to deliver badly-needed food and water. And they don't tell how hard the people worked to move water and set up water purification systems.

The honor roll is long. Guardsmen came from Ashland, Barbourville, Williamsburg, Harlan, Middlesboro, London, Prestonsburg, Ravenna, Richmond, Somerset, Olive Hill, Jackson, Carlisle, Cynthiana, Harrodsburg, Frankfort, and Louisville.

And, as most of the Guard forces finally withdrew to turn the clean-up over to others after more than a week on active duty, the 207th Engineer Company and members of the 198th Military Police Battalion, both from Louisville, remained in eastern Pike County on annual training status.

Praise for the Guardsmen was universal and summarized well in an editorial that appeared in the Ashland "Independent." It said, "The plight of the victims would have been much more grim, however, had the National Guard not been there to help. That assistance, so professionally and humanitarily rendered, should earn them the gratitude and respect of victims and non-victims alike."

I was, and remain, proud to be a member of the Kentucky National Guard.

More Warning System Towers in Eastern Kentucky OK'd

Approval to further expand the state's Emergency Warning System by erecting additional communications antenna towers at new locations in 27 counties was given last week.

Permission to build the new towers, which will become part of a statewide disaster-alert system, had been sought from the Kentucky Airport Zoning Commission (KAZC) by the state's Department for Finance and Administration during the KAZC's last regular meeting, held at Frankfort on Wed. May 18.

KAZC approval was required because that agency has a statutory responsibility to regulate the height of any structure that might intrude dangerously into Kentucky's navigational air space.

According to State Transportation Secretary Calvin G. Grayson, who chairs the KAZC, the towers for Eastern Kentucky will be erected at the following locations:

Hindman in Knott county; Hoskinson, Leslie county; Parker's Lake, Pulaski county; Middlesboro, Bell county; Gray, Knox county; West Liberty, Morgan county; Cooksburg, Rockcastle county; Manchester, Clay county, and Pikeville.

The ARC and Eastern Kentucky

By MAC HARRIS
(Second of a series)

During the worst of last winter's severe cold, some eastern Kentucky communities had no water to drink because water mains and pipes had frozen and burst. But in Owingsville Phyllis Byron and her neighbors had plenty of water. "We completed our water and sewage improvements just in time," she said. Miss Byron, who is editor of the Bath County News Outlook, feels the community owes its good fortune this winter to the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC).

"Our water and sewer project was at standstill recently," she said. "We had a loan commitment, but an Economic Development Administration grant fell through. But we found out about ARC, and a Gateway Area Development District representative helped us apply for a grant."

The ARC grant to Owingsville allowed the community to meet loan requirements and so finance installation of a new 250,000-gal. water tank and new water mains and pipes, as well as to repair the old tank.

"ARC was absolutely wonderful in its cooperation," Miss Byron said. "Our 47-year-old pipes would not have withstood the cold this winter."

Mainly, what ARC does is invest money in local projects so the communities can meet matching fund requirements for regular grant and loan programs.

"Without ARC money," said Kentucky Development Secretary William L. Short, "most of our eastern Kentucky communities would have no chance of raising the money to meet the matching fund requirements for federal grants from agencies like Housing and Urban Development, Transportation and Health, Education and Welfare."

"The ARC setup allows a community to decide its own needs, with the state insuring that the local projects meet the criteria for its development program," Short added.

Normally, if a community can invest 20 per cent of the money needed for a project, ARC will approve an investment of up to 30 per cent so that the community can obtain the rest of the money from a loan or a regular program grant.

"With an allocation of $10 million in ARC funds," said Wilburn J. Pratt, Development Cabinet executive assistant for community and regional planning, who is in charge of the state ARC program, "we could well be talking about $100 million worth of total project benefits. ARC acts as a lever to secure other funds."

Actually, since the ARC program began, $328 million in ARC funds have been allocated for highways in Appalachian Kentucky, and $120 million for area development projects, according to Pratt.

A large array of development projects—many like the water and sewer project in Owingsville, and others, "people projects," like health care, child development and vocational education—have been funded by ARC in eastern Kentucky in the past 12 years.

"In terms of helping provide community services and in upgrading the quality of social services," Pratt said, "I think we have been successful."

Lois Smith agrees. She teaches cosmetology at the Hazard State Vocational-Technical School, largely funded by ARC money.

"This school is the most progressive and helpful thing established in the area," she said. "Without the vocational and technical programs many people here would have to leave or be on relief."

There are now nine vocational-technical schools across eastern Kentucky that state officials say would not have been available without substantial ARC investment.

The school at Hazard, which serves eight counties, provides training in maintenance and repair of mining machinery, as well as maintenance and operation of heavy equipment related to mining. Facilities and Equipment for both programs were largely funded by ARC with an eye towards energy development.

Special training for vocational teachers and administrators is another aspect of ARC education allocations.

The Kentucky Appalachian Staff Exchange project of the Kentucky Office of Vocational Education, funded for the most part from state ARC allocations, assists instructors or administrators in updating their skills by paying their expenses for a one-to-three-week period while they work in the industries they teach about.

Miss Smith took advantage of the program to update her knowledge in cosmetology by working with McAlpin's department store in Lexington last summer. "Besides learning new techniques," she said, "I was able to recommend some of my students for jobs."

But ARC money has helped Kentuckians obtain jobs in other ways too.

"With the money working mothers make in Jackson county, they can not afford baby sitters," said Nadine McQueen, director of the county's three Day Care centers.

"There was not enough local support for our centers, so the ARC investment has been a blessing for this county," she said.

The day care centers in Jackson county are part of a network of ARC-funded facilities in 19 Appalachian Kentucky counties serving 1500 children.

Not only have the centers given many mothers the opportunity to work, but the program has provided transportation for the children and mothers for physical and dental examinations, pre-natal care and family-planning counseling.

Beyond vocational training and child care and development, money from the state ARC allocation has been invested in better health care for eastern Kentuckians.

Randolph Richardson is a Bath county funeral home director whose mother died last fall. Richardson wanted her to be able to die at home—"not in a hospital, with all the machines, but at home with her family."

Had it not been for ARC's investment in a Home Health program, Richardson said, he could not have had his wish for his mother.

"When her condition became critical," he said, "a doctor from the Bath County Primary Care Center helped us keep her at home. The physician extender came by almost every day and helped make her comfortable. I can't tell you how much that meant to us."

ARC provided substantial funds for a Regional Health Care Center at the St. Clair Hospital in Morehead which serves primary care centers in medically underserved Bath and Menifee counties, and the home health network. The Commission's share of a $6-million-expansion program at St. Clair amounted to $400,000.

Also, 350,000 ARC dollars were allocated to help provide emergency medical service throughout eastern Kentucky, and other ARC funds have been used to construct a Developmental Disability facility for mental health in Ashland which will serve Boyd and surrounding counties.

ARC money helped Pikeville obtain a U.S. Dept. of Transportation grant for a river-diversion project that will solve growth and flooding problems there.

With ARC funds as leverage, Winchester was able to get U.S. Dept. of Housing and Urban Development money for construction of a water treatment plant.

In the area of natural resources, ARC participated in the development of the Fishpond Lake Recreation Area Reservoir project in Letcher County, designed to provide water and to control erosion.

The FIVCO district Timber Development Organization used ARC dollars to encourage commercial timber production and the preservation of forest stands.

In addition, money from the state ARC allocation has been used for recreation development, including development of Fort Boonesborough State Park, and of smaller parks in Floyd County and McCreary County.

Commission money also helped establish the Jenny Wiley Hiking Trail from Ashland to Paintsville, a tourist project, but one which provided immediate employment in the Boyd-Lawrence-Johnson county area.

The ARC allocation has provided money for construction of airports in Ashland, Harlan, Madison county, and in other locations.

Access roads to the Harlan airport, to the American Greeting Cards Company in Laurel county and to a carpet factory in Lawrence county were funded in part by ARC dollars.

In addition to money provided for vocational education, ARC, along with the state Council on Higher Education, assisted some construction efforts at regional private colleges including Alice Lloyd College, Sue Bennett College and Union College.

Now, after 12 years of providing money for community services and social programs, ARC officials say the emphasis is changing.

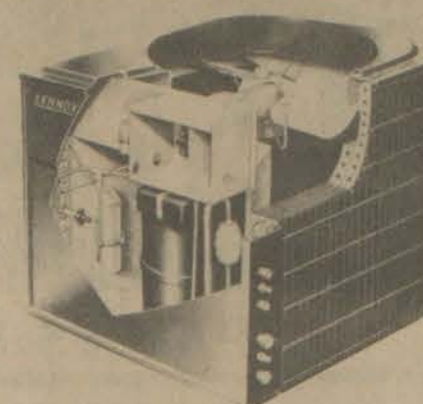

"We are ready to tackle the real culprit now—income," said Development Secretary Short. "Energy development and industrial development will be the primary goals for the state's efforts in Eastern Kentucky."

"Coal production and industrial development in Appalachia will provide jobs for Kentuckians and the needed tax base for Eastern Kentucky communities," Short explained. "Those goals will be achieved by providing ARC funds for improved mining technology, manpower training, better housing, an up-to-date transportation network and the development of regional industrial parks."

With ARC dollars being spent now for such projects as a coal gasification plant in Pike county, research efforts in improved surface mining techniques, solid waste disposal and coal refuse utilization, the construction of a joint federal-state-local-private industry housing project in Jenkins and development of a tri-county industrial park in Corbin, the shift in emphasis is evident.

By taking advantage of Kentucky's greatest resource—coal—and by building an industrial base in the region, ARC is moving towards a new role for itself and a new future for Appalachian Kentucky.

OUTDOOR LORE

by Nevyle Shackelford

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY • COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

Ghosts are very much a part of the outdoors, especially of lonely country graveyards, and many notable people have believed in their existence. Pliny the Younger did. So did Mary Roberts Rinehart, Abraham Lincoln, and many many others of equal fame.

As history notes, Lincoln, weary in mind and body, would often go to bed and dream of battles being fought and of the death of kinfolk. Upon awakening, no one had to tell him the outcome of the battles or which of his distant kin had died. He already knew. He even foresaw his own death. Like Lincoln, Mrs. Rinehart and Pliny left their own tales of the unexplainable.

Personally speaking, I have never seen a ghost or been involved in an unexplainable incident. Many years ago, however, a wonderful and deeply religious woman, a very close friend of our family, did have such an experience and this is her story.

Back around the turn of the century, when she and her husband married, they lived for a time as tenants on a farm belonging to a couple that had been obliged to take in an orphaned relative, a somewhat sickly 10-year-old girl. For no reason that was obvious, the couple seemed to hate the little waif and continually subjected her to brutal tongue-lashings and whippings.

It deeply grieved this kind woman and with little avail she often tried to intercede in the pitiful little girl's behalf. Then late one evening after seeing the girl brutally slapped for accidentally spilling a cup of milk, she went home, got down on her knees and asked God to take pity and have mercy on the little child. Later in the night this is what happened.

Awakened by a knock on her door, the woman arose from bed and opened it. No one was there, but from the house where the little girl was staying, there came the sound of music more beautiful than anything she had ever heard before.

As she stood there wondering and listening, the music seemed to fade away in the distance. The good woman went back to bed and early next morning there was another knock on the door. The knocker was the landlord who told her the little orphan had died in her sleep during the night.

To the end of her long and happy life, this woman and our neighbor, always contended that her prayer was answered. She was sure that the knock on her door was made by the hand of God and that the music she heard was made by angels that came and carried the poor little mistreated child to Heaven.

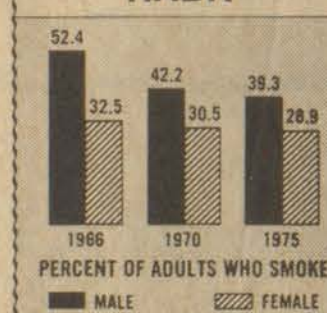

Cub Packs Prepared For Annual Planning

Cub Scouts packs in this area will soon be doing their annual planning, using a list of suggested program themes, according to Barbara Polly, of Big Stone Gap, Va., vice-president for Cub Scouting of the Lonesome Pine Council, Boy Scouts of America.

Nearly 50 Cub Scout packs in the Council will be selecting monthly program themes for the next 12 months. The monthly theme has been the foundation of Cub Scout program planning for more than 30 years, with each theme designed to provide fun, variety, action, and purpose. The suggested monthly themes, researched, planned, and written to give a varied program for the next year, are: June, muscle builders; July, trails, treks, trips; August, water fun; September, doorways to adventure; October, discover America; November, the American Indian; December, do your best; January, going places; February, blue and gold traditions; March, let's go to a circus; April, the world around us; and May, growing food.

Among the special events that may be included in each pack's program during the coming year are safe bicycle driving, Cub Scout physical fitness, learn-to-swim program, a Cubmobile derby, the pinewood or space derby, service projects, and participation in School Night for Cub Scouting, when new Cub Scouts and their parents join a pack in the spring or fall. Boys are eligible to become Cub Scouts when they are eight years old or on the day after they complete the second grade in school.

Carroll Says State Expenses May Exceed Income by 1981

Kentucky's expenses could exceed its revenues by seven per cent by the 1981-1982 budget year if current trends continue, Gov. Julian Carroll told an interim legislative committee in Frankfort recently.

He said he was not suggesting an increase in taxes but a reduction in expenditures. He also told the Appropriations and Revenue Committee that "we're hopeful and have some reason to believe that our projections are a little low," adding that he hoped revenues from increased production of coal would improve the state's financial position.

Of the state's General Fund, Gov. Carroll said, 61 per cent was spent on education and 17 per cent was spent for welfare in the last budget.

The governor said that increased emphasis should be placed on elementary and secondary education, adding that the investment would be repaid four of five times its cost in reduced crime and unemployment.

He said that there is overlap in higher education, however, and said, "I've never found so little foresight in budget planning" as he has in vocational education. He said that in his hometown of Paducah, there is a vocational high school, an occupational vocational school, and a community college "all competing for the same students."

Carroll suggested reversing the current trends of budgeting in state government which follow the request line "appropriation for wants rather than for needs." He said, however, that at present "we don't have any truly effective mechanism through which we can evaluate" needs.

He said that "we don't want to be everybody's sugardaddy," and that he wanted agencies to justify their expenditures in terms of what the public need really is, in order to start utilizing zero based budgeting (ZBB) in Kentucky.

He called ZBB an attitude adjustment problem, and said that under ZBB, agencies would assume that they had no money, and would have to justify existing programs as well as any new programs. "It changes the whole system from a shopping list of wants to a shopping list of needs," he said.

To implement the approach, he said that the state would use a statewide planning manual and would hold planning seminars for agency executives on the implementation of budgets. He also stressed the need for methods of evaluating budgeting requests, noting that program statistical reports "are basically worthless and the reports given to me are worthless" in evaluating programs.

He also suggested that the state hold public hearings on budgetary requests and that consumers of state services evaluate those services to increase public involvement in the budgetary process.

District 30 Loser May Challenge Poll Results

Squire Feltner, president of Dist. 30, United Mine Workers of America, said last week he will challenge the results of the May 10 election in his district which he lost to Robert Carter, of Jenkins.

Carter, a coal tipple worker from Jenkins, out-pollled Feltner by 91 votes in the elections. He received 2,459 votes to 2,368 for Feltner. District 30 has approximately 18,000 members throughout Eastern Kentucky.

The election results were something of a surprise, since Feltner had received 26 local union nominations to only 9 for Carter in the nominations process two months ago.

Feltner attributed Carter's strength to the low voter turnout. He said many of his own supporters stayed home since "everybody assumed I would win, hands down." Feltner has served one term as district president.

Regarding the protest, Feltner said the election committee will make its recommendation on the matter to the international board, which then has three months to hand down a final ruling.

The results of the district election may have some significance in the June 14 international president's race between incumbent Arnold Miller, Lee Roy Patterson of Madisonville, and current national secretary Harry Patrick. Feltner has indicated his support of Patterson, while observers feel Carter is a Patrick supporter.

3 from Thelma Win In Wheelchair Olympics

Wilma Vanlandingham, Virginia Lee Hitchcock and Larry Dalton work at the Eastern Kentucky Rehabilitation Center in Thelma. All three have spent most of their lives in wheelchairs. Virginia and Larry had polio when they were very young and Wilma was born with a calcium deficiency.

"For those who are willing to work to overcome their handicap, life offers both challenges and rewards," said Virginia.

Recently, the three participated in the Wheelchair Olympics in Fishersville, Va., and brought back eight medals.

Wilma, a clerk-typist at the center, won first place in bowling and third place in table tennis. Virginia, who teaches upholstery and refinishing at the center, won second place in bowling and third in discus and shotput.

Larry, a recreation aide at the center, won first place in table tennis and is now eligible to enter the national competition at San Diego. He also won third place in rifle and bowling.

"We like to compete and we like to win," said Wilma. All three drive cars which are equipped with hand controls. In addition to participating in sports and recreational activities, they take classes at universities nearby and engage in various hobbies. Each is also involved with programs to help the handicapped.

"Perhaps our most important victory is learning to live independently," Wilma said.

Along with individual and team sports, the Rehabilitation Center offers courses in 17 different vocational skills. Medical treatment, counseling and adjustment services are also a part of the comprehensive treatment program at the center, which is coordinated by the state Bureau of Rehabilitation Services.

KENTUCKY AFIELD

By JOHN WILSON

If that fresh fish dinner you've been looking forward to all winter doesn't live up to your expectations, don't be too quick to blame the cook. Chances are you (or whoever caught the fish) are responsible for "strong" tasting or watery fish.

Probably more fish are spoiled by improper handling between the time they're pulled from the water to the time they're brought to the kitchen than are ruined by improper cooking. To assure a tasty fish dinner, the fisherman should handle his catch with its ultimate destination—the frying pan—in mind.

First, the fish should be kept alive until they are ready to be cleaned. On boats equipped with live wells, this is usually no problem, but make sure that the well will retain water when the boat is running at speed. If the well is above the water surface while the boat is planing, it will drain and leave the fish inside high and dry.

If you use a stringer, string the fish through both lips rather than through the gills, and don't drag them through the water while motoring from place to place. Wrapping the fish in a damp cloth will allow them to survive fairly short periods out of water, but if a long boat ride is necessary, it's best to put the fish in an ice chest or to "field dress" them by removing the intestines and gills and wrapping them in damp cloths. Any fish that die before the trip is over should be treated the same way.

Never keep dead fish, cleaned or uncleaned, in water. This makes the fish flabby and watery. If you transport your fish in an ice chest, protect them from the melted ice by placing them in some kind of a container or in a sealed plastic bag.

Back at the dock, the fish must, of course, be cleaned. The method used can sometimes have an influence on how the fish taste. Most of the strong flavor or "fishy" taste is concentrated in the skin, bones, or kidney. Filleting removes all three sources of strong flavor and is thus advisable for those who don't like their fish strong or bony.

Fish are at their best if cooked as soon as possible, but if properly frozen they can be kept for several months with very little loss in flavor. A handy way to freeze fish is to immerse them in a container of water (leave at least a half-inch space to allow for expansion) and freeze. Most ice-cube tray compartments of refrigerators are unsuitable for long-term storage of fish, since they do not maintain the near-zero temperatures required to completely prevent changes in flavor or texture.

'Highest' Man with ETV

By LISA ENGLISH

Bob Bunting Sr., says he never has the problem of having someone look over his shoulder while he's working.

"I might not be the highest paid state employee, but I am the highest," he adds.

Bunting is listed as a tower and antenna technician on the KET employee roster. In practical terms, he's the man who inspects the network's 13 transmitter and seven translator towers, including general repair and maintenance. And this isn't accomplished from the ground. He has to climb the metal structures, sometimes as high as 1,000 feet.

Bob has been employed as KET's tower climber since 1970. Before that he did "free lance" work across the eastern half of the U.S.

"Bob came to us with the proper training—a lack of fear of heights," says Robert Klein, KET's director of engineering.

"His primary job is to inspect the tower, making sure bolts are tight and that there is no unusual vibration or sway." He also repairs the lighting system, checks the paint job, keeps tabs on the "guy" cables (used to hold the tower in place) and maintains each tower's auxiliary services such as NOAA Weather Radio and microwave systems.

Bunting does use a safety belt when he's up on a tower. "I hang on for dear life," he states emphatically. More often than not, several hours at a time are spent "hanging on."

"I eat my lunch on top of the tower," he continues. "There's a lot of room up there. Of course you wouldn't want to take any naps."

Bob graduated from Prestonsburg High School and ricocheted through UK's College of Arts and Sciences for several semesters. "I started out as a geology major, then pre-med, general business and out," he says with a laugh. A more exciting career ended his college stay. Through a "trial and error" technique, he taught himself how to work on broadcast towers. After coming to KET, he received some additional specialized training.

"While I'm up there everything goes through my mind," Bunting continues. "I like the outdoors. It's a mean job in the winter (there is about a 15-degree drop in temperature from the base of the tower to the top), but in the summer it's great."

Bob enjoys watching the wildlife from his crow's nest. Birds, and on one occasion a B-52 bomber, soar below him. At times, buzzards are found roosting on the towers.

The work is exciting, but can be dangerous. "I was caught in a storm on the Morehead transmitter. I got off that tower fast," he says. Lightning was a little too close for comfort.

During this past winter, a heating element on KET's Morehead antenna malfunctioned. With below-freezing temperatures, the heated side of the antenna expanded while the unheated side contracted, causing the tower to lean at a precarious angle. After members of KET's engineering department investigated the antenna and tower from a helicopter and made certain it was not going to topple, Bunting scaled it and replaced the faulty element.

The network's Murray/Mayfield transmitter was damaged during the 1973 tornadoes. A bent tower member left the structure vibrating during normal winds. Bob climbed it and braced the bent spot, restoring the tower to normal stability and perhaps saving it.

Bob was born in Prestonsburg "up in the mountains of Floyd County." He currently lives in Lexington with his wife, Betty, and three sons. After 23 years of marriage, Betty has never failed to remind her husband to take care on the towers.

Bunting has only had one accident—a 35-foot fall. He comments that he "didn't learn a thing. I kept on climbing with a brace on my back."

Bob is an unusual man with an unusual job. "There's nothing dull about it," he says in closing. "Maybe that's why I like it. I plan to continue as long as I can stand it."

Historic Buildings
Exhibit on Display

Visitors to Frankfort's Old Capitol can see an exhibit depicting some of Kentucky's outstanding architectural heritage through Sunday, June 12.

Now on display in the Changing Arts Gallery are 40 measured drawings, 25 photographs and six plaster models from the Historic American Buildings Survey (HABS). Entitled "A Perspective of Kentucky Architecture: The HABS in the Commonwealth," the exhibit is sponsored by the state Historical Society and the state Heritage Commission.

The plaster models are of Liberty Hall, the Green County Courthouse (oldest in the state), a Shakertown building, the Ephraim McDowell House, Castlewood, and the Cross Keys Tavern.

HABS began in 1933 as an effort of the National Park Service to document the nation's most important historical and architectural resources. To maintain the survey's uniformity and other high qualities, the National Park Service, the Library of Congress and the American Institute of Architects established HABS in June 1934.

HABS has since been the nation's official program for gathering historic architectural records. Recording is now done largely by summer field teams of architectural students who work under the direct supervision of university professors.

Southern Educators View School Finance

Despite the strides made in Kentucky's educational system since the implementation of the Minimum Foundation Program in 1954, much remains to be done to fully equalize school finance, Gov. Julian M. Carroll recently told school administrators attending the 10-state Southeastern Conference on School Finance and Equalization.

"It is the responsibility of the state, through education, to provide equality of opportunity to develop children's talents to the greatest extent possible," Gov. Carroll said.

The three-day conference brought together school administrators from 10 southern states as well as administrators from Kentucky's local school districts and the state Department of Education to discuss school finance equalization and its status in the southeastern states.

Educators from Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina and Tennessee attended the conference which was coordinated by the Kentucky Department of Education.

A highlight of the conference was the appearance of the newly-appointed U.S. Commissioner of Education, Dr. Ernest L. Boyer. Dr. Boyer shared with the group his plans for the federal role in education.

Dr. Boyer said he wants control of the schools to remain at the local level and feels that federal funds should be used to enhance or enrich the local programs.

"I believe in control at the local level, coordination at the state level, and enrichment at the federal level," he said.

U.S. Rep. Carl D. Perkins (D-Kentucky) discussed current federal legislation concerning education and expressed a desire to reduce paperwork in the federal bureaucracy. Perkins said, "I view this period (the upcoming legislative session) as a tremendous opportunity to improve elementary and secondary programs, and at the same time make these programs for you people at the state and local level less burdensome to administer."

Fairness to both the children in the schools and the taxpayers should be considered during the process of equalizing educational programs and the fiscal resources to support them, said Dr. Thomas L. Johns, school finance consultant for the U. S. Office of Education.

According to Raymond Barber, Kentucky deputy superintendent of public instruction, "There is a wide disparity in the ability of the various political subdivisions in this state to support an educational program."

Education is more a national concern now than ever before, Barber said, because children who are educated in one area may live and work in another area as adults. "Minimum educational opportunities are the responsibility of the nation as a whole."

Don W. Stephens, executive director of the Governor's Task Force on Education, said the problems of financing education are among the concerns of the task force study.

HOUSE SPARROWS are a sociable sort, preferring the presence of people around their nests instead of seeking more private locations.

Lawrence, Magoffin Contracts Awarded

Road surfacing contracts accounted for all but one of the contracts recently approved by State Transportation Secretary Calvin G. Grayson following a bid-letting May 5.
Twenty-one contracts, amounting to more than $1.6 million, were awarded. The largest approved — for $229,040 — called for paving 8.5 miles of roads in Lawrence county and was awarded to Ashland Asphalt Paving Co., Inc., of Ashland.
The only energy road fund project awarded provides for surfacing 2.8 miles of roads in Magoffin county. East Kentucky Paving Company of Grayson bid $126,194 for the contract.

Consumer Comment

By ROBERT F. STEPHENS
Attorney General

If you are thinking of buying any product, be sure to examine the warranty so that you can compare warranties and get the best buy possible. It may be worth it to pay more for a product with a better warranty. The extra money is like insurance—it protects you against the chance of a big repair bill. Comparing warranties now can save you money and headaches later.

Since January of this year, the Magnuson-Moss Warranty act has helped consumers with warranty problems. On any product costing over $15 which has warranty coverage, the warranty must be available for you to examine, before you buy the product. The warranty must be easy to read and understand and fine print is not allowed. Every term and condition of the warranty must be spelled out in writing. If it isn't there, it isn't part of the warranty. Consumers should beware of spoken explanations of the warranty, since these verbal promises won't count when it comes time for warranty service.

There are two types of written warranties: FULL and LIMITED. These words have been given special meanings by the Warranty Act.

Rail Car Shortage Perennial Problem

Agriculture Commissioner Thomas O. Harris said he is moving to cope with the perennial problem of rail car shortages to transport grain produced in Kentucky.

"I want to emphasize the great importance I attach to the rail car shortage and its effect on the people of Kentucky. It depresses farm prices, thereby taking millions of dollars out of our economy. It often results in cancelled contracts, lost sales to elevator operators and lost markets to our farmers," Harris said.

"It can also mean higher prices to consumers when the normal flow of grain is impeded," he added.

Harris said a survey conducted by his office revealed that grain elevators were short between 500 and 600 hopper cars for the month of March and between 1,200 and 1,500 hopper cars for the first quarter of 1977.

"Many elevator operators complained the situation was no better than during the harvest last fall. Others said it was worse," Harris said.

"We are faced with strong possibility that not enough of the old crop will be moved out in time to make room for the small grain harvest this spring. The same thing could be true in the fall when corn and soybean crops mature," the commissioner explained.

In an effort to solve the problem, Harris said he has requested immediate assistance from the Interstate Commerce Commission in obtaining additional rail cars.

"I believe this course of action — working closely with Sen. Walter (Dee) Huddleston's office — met with some degree of success when we tried it last fall," Harris said.

In addition, Harris recommends that the ICC investigate the present system of each railroad operating in Kentucky to see that the state is getting its fair share of hopper cars; investigate allegations that railroads discriminate against new and small elevators; determine to what extent railroads are assigning cars for the exclusive use of certain shippers and what effect the practice is having on other shippers; permit railroads to lease or borrow as many hopper cars as possible; permanently station an employee in Kentucky to handle complaints against the railroads.

Harris also asked that the highway commissioner review the state's primary road system with a view toward raising weight limits and truck dimension limits on certain two-lane highways, and the General Assembly consider removing the sales tax from grain storage bins and all appurtenant handling and drying equipment to stimulate the proliferation of both commercial and on-farm grain storage.

Chessie System Aids Flood-Hit Workers

Pikeville—Paul E. Kelly, road foreman of engines for the West Virginia division of the Chessie System, said the Chessie System has donated $75,000 to aid employees who were victims of the recent flood. About 120 families in the Paintsville, Martin, Pikeville, and Shelby areas received the grants, ranging from $300 to $700, depending upon the extent of the damage.

Ohio Police Promote Pennington to Lieut.

Sgt. Herman Darrel Pennington, 33, was sworn in as a lieutenant of the Ohio police department, May 13. Pennington, a 11-year veteran, is currently assigned to the patrol bureau.

Formerly a resident of Ligon, Pennington was graduated from McDowell High School, Alice Lloyd College and Ohio State University. He is married to the former Elsie Triplett, and they and their two daughters reside at Whitehall, Ohio. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Hubert W. Pennington, of Ligon.

By LARRY BURKE

The story is told of the great Dutch artist who was commissioned to paint the portrait of a famous man of his country.

After weeks of work the artist completed the painting. It was beautifully executed. Wonderful in detail—vibrant in color.

In the foreground of the picture the artist had painted some tulips. The flowers were so beautiful and colorful that those who viewed the painting never saw the portrait of the subject—they could not take their eyes beyond the tulips.

Sometimes we all tend to major in minors. In doing so we place importance on trivial matters and fail to see the entire picture. It is difficult in many instances to see beyond the "tulips."

OUR THOUGHT TO REMEMBER: Those who look beyond small things—see more of the world.

Work Program Slated June 20

Operation of a summer job program in Floyd, Johnson, Martin, Pike, and Magoffin counties beginning June 20 has been announced by the Big Sandy Area Community Action Program, Inc.

The program will afford area disadvantaged youth the opportunity to contribute to needed community services while earning a wage and acquiring valuable work experience. Non-profit public and private agencies are urged to utilize these young employees.

An hourly wage will be paid through funds made available through the E.K.-C.E.P. in Hazard.

High school graduates and college students who meet the poverty guidelines and plan to resume their education this fall should contact the local Community Action Program office in Prestonsburg, phone 886-3697, or the Manpower Office on the third floor of the courthouse in Paintsville.

Bill Would Reduce SBA Interest Rate

U.S. Senator Wendell H. Ford wrote H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr., president of The Bank Josephine, recently, agreeing that the interest on SBA disaster loans is too high.

"I am . . . co-sponsoring a bill which would reduce such SBA loans," he wrote. The bill would set the interest rate at 1 per cent for the first $5,000 for replacement of damage to primary residential or personal property; 2 per cent on the next $5,000, and 3 per cent for all above $10,000.

The legislation, if enacted, will provide some measure of assistance to Eastern Kentuckians who suffered recent flood losses.

They Teamed Up on This One

Although he is pictured with the trophy, Gary McCoy, of Prestonsburg, says the landing of this eight-pound largemouth while fishing last Saturday on Norris Lake out of Kilgore's dock was a cooperative effort, with Jim Wallen the other half of the team. The bass, which measured 23½ inches, hit a Bushwhacker.

CHILD KILLED BY AUTO

Kandi Rose Puckett, 18-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Puckett, of Salyersville, was killed Saturday when she was run over by an auto.

Kentucky State Police said the child was in the driveway at her parents' home and was hit by a car driven by her great-uncle, Phillip Puckett, who was backing the auto out of the driveway.

Right Beaver REACT Plans Safety Break To Cut Accidents

Right Beaver REACT team 3520 will operate a "safety break" station for weary travelers, Memorial Day weekend as a part of the national REACT effort against highway accidents, sponsored by the American Trucking Associations.

"More than 47,100 people died on the nation's highways in 1976," Marion Huff, activity chairman, of Garrett, said. "Our aim is to get travelers off the highways long enough to wake them up with a coffee break. We will serve free coffee, and refreshments."

The Safety Break will be located at Lackey, at the junction of KY 7 and KY 80 and operate from Friday, May 27, starting at noon, and run through Saturday midnight. It will be closed Sunday and will reopen Monday and stay open until midnight.

The program has the support of enforcement officers who will work with REACT. "We need other groups to help us with this and any help, such as donations, will be greatly appreciated. Since the refreshments will be free, we can use some help with coffee, sugar, cups, and soft drinks. If any one would like to help us, call 447-2376," a spokesman said. In addition, the REACT teams will monitor Channel 9 on Citizens Band radio, and will assist in any emergency calls from motorists.

The local REACT team is one of more than 1,700 volunteer groups affiliated with REACT International which sponsors the National Safety Break program with the support of the American Trucking Associations.

In June, the World's in Tune

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
UK College of Agriculture

Summer in all its glory begins in June and in all nature no month is of greater activity. It is the favorite month of poets, barefoot boys, butterflies, honey bees and mother birds who brood over their eggs in the hope of perpetuating the avian race.

And no less is June the month of young lovers. This is no modern idea. Rather, the superstition dates back to most ancient times when romantic Romans, who actually named the month, thought it the luckiest time of the year in which to marry. They chose that time of the month in which the moon is full. The beauty of the month and the profusion of its flowers do indeed fit it well for nuptial festivities and honeymoon activities.

As indicated before, no month has more to interest young children or to draw them outdoors. With this being the case, there is no better time to take them outside and teach them about the bee and the butterfly, the bird and the flower, and the air and the water, and to instill in them a love for nature and the vital necessity of conserving it as one means for future survival.

Among other important things to do in June is cultivate the garden. This too, will help assure survival by putting wholesome food on the table. Cultivation is often as important as watering. Work the soil thoroughly and often enough to keep down weeds and crabgrass. Be careful not to cultivate too deeply and injure plant roots.

Something else—June is the month in which to mulch your acid-loving plants. Your azaleas and blueberry bushes do best in slightly acid soil. Sawdust, oak leaves, or needles from beneath your evergreens make good mulch. Horticulturists say that mulching acid-loving plants and shrubs early in the summer with these materials helps get them in shape for next year's blooming.

June is a good time to prune spring flowering shrubs. As soon as the shrubs have finished blooming, cut out all unnecessary wood. Break or cut all seed pods from azaleas and lilacs, but be careful with the lilacs. Buds for next year's blooming are already being formed.

Sow seeds of perennials such as hollyhock, windflower, Canterbury bells, Shasta daisy, sweet william, candytuft, poppy and others for next year's garden. Sow the seed late in June. It will help to soak the seed for a couple of hours in water before planting. For soft-wood cuttings take the first shoots that appear when they are three inches high. Cut them with a heel and place them in sand.

Keep in touch with your county extension agent in June and use him to help identify and control any new plant disease or insect pest that may show up in the garden, flowerbed, or strawberry patch, and to return again to the romantic aspects of this month, it was the Romans who named it.

As it is recorded in history, the name June stems from Juno, the great and lovely Roman queen of the gods and the patron saint of that profound and universal institution of marriage.

"And what is so rare as a day in June? Then, if ever, come perfect days. Wherever we look and wherever we listen, we hear life murmur and we see it glisten."

Martin County Road Surfacing To Cost $500,000

Two contracts totaling more than $500,000 in road surfacing projects for Martin county have been announced by State Transportation Secretary Calvin G. Grayson.

Both of the Martin county surfacing projects were awarded to the Ashland Asphalt Paving Company, Inc., of Ashland. The larger project ($330,024) is for the blacktopping of two roads—the Inez-Louisia road (KY 3) from KY 1884, east of Milo, northeast for 5.8 miles to the Lawrence county line, and the Inez-Turkey Creek road (KY 908) south from KY 292, near Turkey Creek school, for a distance of 1.9 miles.

The second project ($170,441) also is for the Inez-Louisia road, from KY 40 northwest and north for four miles to KY 1884.

An $83,684 contract for blacktopping two roads in Breathitt county was awarded to Hinkle Corporation, of Paris.

Besides a 1.4 mile part of Athol-Guerrant-Schouderblade road which is not presently blacktopped, the other road to be surfaced is Frozen Creek-Sky Post Office-Magoffin county line road (KY 378) from KY 1094 east to the Magoffin county line.

Awards Mark 25 Years' Service

John F. Anderson, left, 1311 Maplegrove Drive, Fairborn, O., is presented a certificate and pin commemorating his completion of 25 years in government service by Air Force Brigadier General George K. Patterson, commander of the Defense Electronics Supply Center, where Anderson is chief of the inventory office.

Anderson, brother of Mary Anderson and Leonard Anderson, both of McDowell, and Mrs. Rose Floyd, of Martin, is a 1951 graduate of McDowell High School. He served on active duty with the U.S. Air Force from 1951 to 1955.

Currently serving as chief of the inventory office, in DESC's Directorate of Storage and Transportation, Anderson began his tenure in federal civilian service at DESC in 1956, as a warehouseman. All his civilian service has been at the Center except for four years (1962 to 1966) when he worked as a warehouse leader and foreman at Robbins AFB, Ga.

The veteran employee has been cited on numerous occasions for outstanding and superior performance and earned a quality salary increase in 1973.

He is married to the former Miss Florence Billiter, whose mother, Mrs. Martha C. Williams, resides in Winchester, Ky. The couple has two children, Teresa, 17, and Johnnda, 8.

P'burg Woman Who Offered Housing Sites Asks Questions

While almost everybody, from members of Congress to the man whose family is living in a tent after the April flood, were castigating HUD and asking why the delay in supplying housing for flood-sufferers, a Prestonsburg woman went directly to the White House.

Betty Galliher read of the situation while she was a patient last week in a Lexington hospital. She picked up her bedside telephone and called the White House. She was referred to HUD's Washington headquarters, and what she told them reportedly created a stir that rippled all the way back to Pike county.

In substance she told HUD: "The flood crested on Wednesday, April 6. The following Monday, I went to the Corps of Engineers and told them I had 150 acres of land — 37 acres level, high and dry — that I would let them have for mobile home sites for $1 a year for two years, and even for a third, if needed."

The offer was never accepted. She said the site is 12 to 15 minutes from Pikeville, that it has electricity, safe water from a well and natural gas on the property.

She wonders why HUD is getting "all the heat" when the trouble may lie elsewhere.

There is no shortage of mobile homes, but they're swathed in red tape. One rule requires that they be placed where utilities are available. Another discourages their location on flood plains. Senator "Dee" Huddleston said Monday that perhaps as many as 15,000 persons routed from their homes by the flood are yet living with relatives or friends.

18 Mobile Homes Delivered in Pike

Jack Ingram, director of HUD's Disaster Field Office headquartered in London, announced last week that Belfry HUD personnel, with assistance from the U. S. Army Corps of Engineers, local officials and contractors, have devised a plan to deliver 18 mobile homes to the isolated community of Johnson's Bottom, Pike county.

Corps of Engineers personnel first cleared debris from an existing road and constructed two ramps on opposite sides of a creek that had to be forded.

HUD towing contractors then brought the mobile homes to a nearby temporary holding area, and, one by one, the units were lowered down the 70-foot ramp, towed across the creek and pulled up the other side and onto the sites. All that remains to be done is to finish leveling and installing utilities.

Other families in the area affected by the flood are now applying for assistance.

CANCER Answerline

American Cancer Society

A college student asks: "When you smoke a cigarette, just where in your body does the smoke go?"

ANSWER line: In tests done on smokers, some 33-66 percent of cigarette tars found in smoke stayed in the mouth. When inhaled, even for as little as two seconds, almost 90 percent of the smoke stayed in the mouth, bronchial tubes or air sacs of the lungs. It is alarming to realize that when smoke is retained for 30 seconds, almost none is exhaled. It is hard to tell you where it goes beyond the lungs because of the difficulty in doing research in humans.

A reader wants to know: "What happened to that big jump in the nation's cancer death rate that I read about not long ago?"

ANSWER line: You are referring to an apparent unusual increase of 5.2 percent in cancer deaths reported for the first seven months of 1975. However, when all the data for the year has been accumulated, adjusted, and studied, it is probable that the 1975 cancer death rate will be the same as 1974, or perhaps just slightly higher. It is possible that a 1975 flu epidemic may have been partially responsible for the "jump" you mention, because flu often increases deaths among those very ill with cancer or heart disease.

A career woman writes: "Recently I had thermography as part of a breast examination and I was amazed to notice air conditioning in the room. The examination was quick and simple and I have no questions about that. But I do want to know about the cool air!"

ANSWER line: Thermography is a technique which enables experts to see a heat pattern of the breast by visualizing skin temperatures. Possible tumors show up as "hot spots." That air conditioning merely insured an accurate image of your bodily heat. As you noted, the room was cool but not unpleasantly so, and the test was very quick.

A grocer writes: "My father will be coming home soon from the hospital after abdominal cancer surgery. We may need some special equipment like a hospital-type bed. What should we do?"

ANSWER line: Please call your local American Cancer Society Unit which has sickroom supplies available on a loan basis. American Cancer Society people can give you some practical and important information about how to help your father. Hopefully, he'll soon be able to take care of himself and return to active life. You also can help by showing confidence in him.

Question: "What is Laetrile?"

ANSWER line: Laetrile is a derivative of apricot pits which is of no proven use in cancer treatment. It is an illegal drug in this country. A cancer patient who turns to Laetrile instead of to a scientifically-proven treatment is gambling with his or her life, because it is a useless remedy that can waste very precious time.

Community Action In Action

"Assistance is still available for Eastern Kentucky's flood victims," reports Jesse L. Amburgey, Executive Secretary of the Kentucky Association of Community Action Agencies.

Seven community action agencies situated in the 15-county designated disaster area were able to respond to immediate needs of housing, food clothing, transportation, and other emergencies.

For these agencies' use in working cooperatively with other federal, state, and local efforts, an additional $175,000 was appropriated by the National Community Services Administration.

Amburgey said, "After intensive emergency operations cease, there is a tendency to think all the problems have been solved."

"It is the mandate of community action agencies such as Big Sandy, Bell-Whitley, Harlan, Knox, Letcher, Knott, Leslie, and Perry, Northeast and Middle Kentucky River, to be consistent in assisting those in need."

"As community-based organizations community action agencies are continuing to offer their services to families, children, the ill, and the elderly," Amburgey said.

MOBILE MUSEUM

Standing in front of the Kentucky Historical Society Historymobile are Robert K. Guiman, assistant curator, left, Tom Gatewood, curator, center, and Dan Zwyer, assistant curator, right. Gatewood and his assistants drive the 40-foot, air-conditioned mobile museum throughout the state. It contains an exhibit depicting the first decade of settlement of the Commonwealth from 1774 to 1784. Visitors can see a life-size log cabin surrounded by artifacts of the pioneer era such as iron kettles and a spinning wheel. Log benches provide seats for visitors to watch a 10-minute slide presentation shown on a screen pulled down from the ceiling of the cabin. In addition to the cabin, the exhibit includes colorful wall panels and amps, scale models of a flatboat and a pioneer station. When the Historymobile visits an area, members of the Junior Historical Society can become the curators of the traveling exhibit. They learn about museum work and catalog artifacts.

The Historymobile is available seven days a week from March through November to clubs, civic organizations, nursing homes, prisons, parks, community festivals and county fairs. "Not only does the Historymobile stimulate an awareness of our heritage, but it reaches many Kentuckians who never have the opportunity to visit a museum," said Gatewood.

For scheduling or more information, contact either Gatewood or General William Buster, executive director, Kentucky Historical Society, (502) 564-3016.
