

Grand Jury Names One In Slaying

Three Are Indicted As State Troopers Say Drugs Bought

One murder indictment and 27 others alleging lesser offenses were reported Friday by the grand jury at its adjournment.

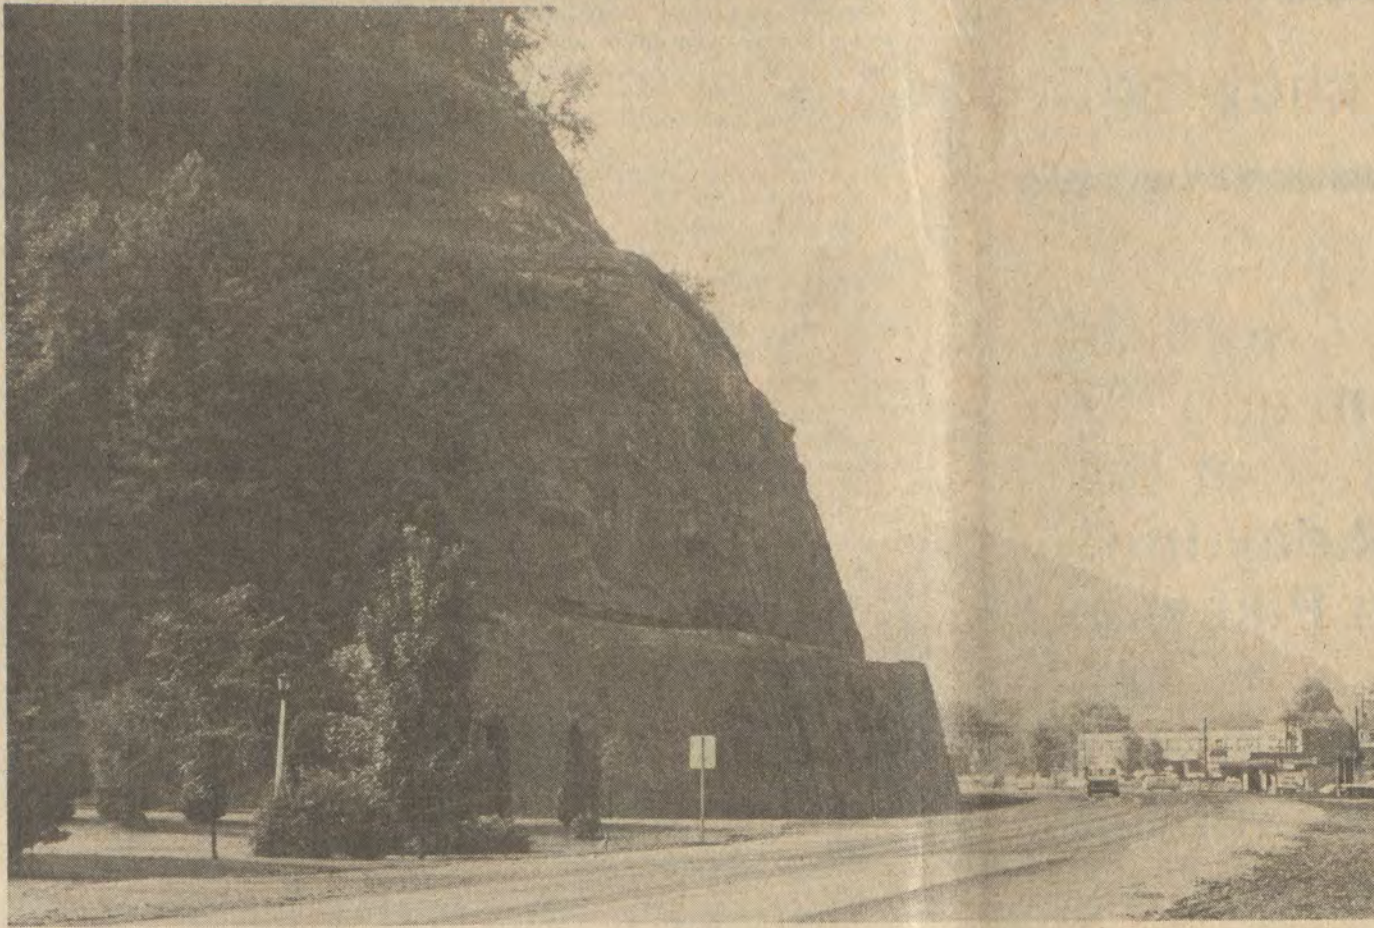

Stevie Stumbo was named in the murder bill for the July 28 gunshot slaying near West Prestonsburg of Larry O. Johnson. His trial date had not been set as of Monday.

Three indictments were the result of undercover work done in the county by State Police officers. Named on charges of trafficking in a controlled substance are:

Doug Neeley, charged with selling six foil packets to James A. Tipton, of the State Police, for $55; Ronnie Neeley, also charged by Tipton of selling 20 LSD tablets for $80; Kenneth Robinson, accused of selling two slips of PCP to Arnold Weddington, of the KSP, for $10.

Work was completed recently on the cliff excavation on U.S. 23, at the northern end of the city. The project became necessary when rock falls from the highwall posed a threat to passing traffic.

Jury Says Kelly Blasted Schools

The grand jury in its final report last Friday to Circuit Judge Hollie Conley reported that during its investigation of school properties in the county an official of the state fire marshal's office had made a sweeping indictment of the condition of school buildings.

The report, signed by James Bailey, foreman, quoted Morgan Kelly, who was identified as superintendent of the state fire marshal's office, as saying that "the facilities in Floyd county are the worst in the Commonwealth of Kentucky" and that "the buildings are unsafe, and an imminent threat to human life may exist."

The reference was not to the structural soundness of the school buildings in question but to fire code violations, The Times later was told. Buildings referred to by Kelly, it also was learned apart from the grand jury report, are the Garrett Elementary building and gym, Allen Elementary, Maytown Elementary, the Betsy Layne complex, the Wayland gym, Bonanza Elementary, and the elementary schools of Wheelwright and Auxier.

Superintendent of Schools Pete Grigsby, Jr. reacted sharply to the statement imputed to Kelly. "No such statement from Fire Marshal Estep's office has ever been sent to me, and to my knowledge the only time Mr. Kelly was in a Floyd county school was when he was here July 30 and 31 while inspection of the structural condition of the schools was being made," Grigsby said. "I don't understand how he could make such a statement."

The full grand jury proceedings are being transcribed and the testimony pertaining to the school situation will be an open record, it was said.

The report quoted Supt. Grigsby in his testimony before the grand jury as saying he is doing everything possible to remedy the fire code violations and any other types of problems that exist in the school facilities. It also noted that he told the grand jury he had worked out with fire marshal's office a program to correct violations, a work which will require two years for completion.

"I also told the grand jury that I would close any school the fire marshal's office asked me to close," Grigsby told The Times. "I do not want any child to be endangered."

Job Corps, Its Effect Here Further Aired in Talks

What is the Job Corps? How would a Job Corps center located near Lancer affect that community, Prestonsburg and the county? These were the questions that a Job Corps official and representatives of a firm managing a center came here to answer during the past week.

Red, White and Blue Days Set, Oct. 21-23

In response to numerous inquiries, Mrs. Marcella Bailey, of Langley, founder of Floyd county's Red, White and Blue Day, announced that the annual event will be held here this year on three days, beginning Oct. 21.

The first day, Friday, will feature the Red, White and Blue pageant sponsored by the Allen Woman's Club. The colorful Red, White and Blue parade will be held Saturday, and on Sunday Marlow Tackett and his Southern Comfort Band will again perform in a free concert at the municipal parking area here.

Mrs. Bailey said further details of plans for the event will be announced later.

associate administrator of the U.S. Department of Labor's Job Corps, spent two days in the area last week. Gerald Oettle, director of the Breckinridge Job Corps center, Morganfield, and Robert R. Hale, community relations officer for the Singer Company, which operates the Breckinridge center under contract with the Department of Labor, spent Monday here. They met with city and county officials and with some of those who have expressed opposition to locating the training facility here.

In an interview last week, Watkins emphasized what the Job Corps is not.

It is not a penal or correctional institution established for the purpose of confining or penalizing youths for violation of the law, he said. Instead, it is for school dropouts; a work-learning program which they voluntarily enter.

At the center proposed for location in the former US Shoe Company building enrollees would be taught the building trades, comprising skills in brick and cement, masonry, carpentry, plumbing and electrical work.

The program, he said, has three aims: 1. To teach the enrollees employable skills; 2. to enable the enrollee to earn a GED certificate; 3. cultivate an attitude of willingness to get up mornings, and go to work.

Mr. Watkins turned to fears expressed locally about the crime potential of Job Corpsmen.

First of all, he said, those trained at the center will come from Eastern Kentucky counties, within a 50-mile radius of Prestonsburg, and if there are not enough applicants from this area to fill the 165 "slots" available at the center, the remainder will come from Tennessee. He added that he expects the Eastern Kentucky counties to supply the 165 places open at the center.

Continuing, he pointed out that:

1. Nationally, only one of 10 enrollees has some type of disciplinary problem, and he does not envision a percentage that high for the center here.

2. If a boy has had a court record before enrollment, a behavioral review is made and the enrollee is not eligible if his record is not clear for a period of at least six months. In the event that an applicant has a court record pertaining to a more serious offense, a 12-month "clear" record is required.

Referring to those who would be enrolled at the center here, the Department (See Story No. 2, Page 3)

Report Says Schools Are Generally Sound

Although the grand jury's final report quotes the superintendent of the state fire marshal's office as testifying that school facilities in Floyd county "are the worst in the Commonwealth of Kentucky...that the buildings are unsafe and an imminent threat to human life may exist," the schools are generally structurally sound, according to an engineer from the same office.

The engineer, with representatives of the Floyd County Health Department and the county school system inspected on July 30 and 31 six schools "that had conditions that were suspicious," according to Earl Compton, health department administrator.

Although the Garrett Elementary School building was most strongly suspect, Poage Engineers and Associates, of Lexington, in a subsequent inspection found the foundation, exterior walls, floors and joists in good condition, although the firm noted that the second floor "seems to have some sag." It concluded that the building can be used for classroom purposes while minor repairs are being made.

Mr. Compton explained the discrepancy between the statement made to the grand jury and the findings made during the July inspections by saying that the grand jury testimony pertained to fire hazards while the inspections which he arranged were confined to structural soundness.

The other schools inspected to determine their structural condition are Allen Elementary, McDowell High, Maytown Elementary, Prestonsburg High and the new Allen Central High School. Their inspection was at the direction of the Floyd County Board of Health at its May 15 meeting after it had received complaints or statements from concerned parents about the structural stability of various schools. The board directed Compton to find a structural engineer, and, finding none at the state Bureau for Health Services or the state Department of Education, he turned to the state fire marshal's office.

The reports which Mr. Compton said he received on the other schools follow: Allen Elementary: The horizontal separation in the rear exterior wall could be looking into, but the engineer expressed the belief that it is not of major consequence.

McDowell High School: The restraining bars holding the outer walls are basically good engineering practice and should be acceptable.

Maytown Elementary: The exterior cracks do not appear to affect the foundation or superstructure to any degree.

Prestonsburg High School: The wall in question appears to be adequately supported laterally for continued use.

Allen Central: The numerous cracks found are merely a result of consolidation of the subsoil due to variable applied weight limits. It would be hard to state that the building would not have great internal stresses upon application of the various types of supportive materials.

The six schools were selected during a preliminary inspection tour during the week of July 9.

Highlands Folk Fest To Feature Heritage

The cultural heritage of the Eastern Kentucky mountains will be featured at the 14th annual Highlands Folk Festival at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, Sept. 7-9.

Folk musicians and craftsmen who are helping to keep alive the heritage passed from generation to generation since the first settlers came to Kentucky Appalachia will present workshops, crafts demonstrations and three special concerts of traditional mountain music.

The participants will include singers, dancers, banjo-pickers, dulcimer players, fiddlers, story-tellers, writers, painters and other artists. Workshops and demonstrations will feature pottery, dulcimer building, broom making, quilting and other crafts.

The festival director, Kathryn Frazier, of Prestonsburg, said nearly all performers are natives of Eastern Kentucky, although some now live in other areas. They will present "the old Appalachian music" in concerts at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Sept. 7 and 8, and in a concert of religious music at 5 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 9, she added.

A new feature of this year's festival will be a "writers' corner" set up by Dr. Leonard Roberts of the Appalachian studies department at Pikeville College. Appalachian writers who have invited to participate include Lillie Chaffin, of Lexington, a Pikeville native who recently won a national writing award for her poetry.

Roberts will conduct a children's story hour, featuring "Jack tales" and Appalachian folklore at 2 p.m. Saturday

Persons attending the festival will have an opportunity to meet the performers at a reception at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Homer Ledford, of Winchester, who makes dulcimers and other mountain instruments, will play and demonstrate dulcimer building. Dulcimer-builder John Tignor, of Frankfort and fiddler Dave Sizemore, of Prestonsburg, who makes fiddles and other instruments, will also take part in the festival.

Other musicians who will participate include "Fiddlin' Dewey" Shepherd, of David; Marie Bailey, a Magoffin county native who now lives in Ohio; champion fiddlers Buddy Ratliff, of Martin and Alfred Bailey, of Flemingsburg; James O'Day, a Morehead fiddler; J. P. and Annadeene Fraley, of Rush, who sing and play various instruments; John Skaggs, a Greenup singer, and Diana Donoho, of Ashland, and a capella singer of old English ballads brought to the mountains by early settlers.

Groups taking part in the festival include the Kentucky Heritage Square Dancers from Lexington; the Hillbilly Square Dancers from Elkhorn City; the Highland Kids Square Dancers from Prestonsburg; a dulcimer group led by Curtiss Vickers, of Frankfort, the Lexington Pipe and Drum Band and the Branham family singers, of Pikeville.

Edith James, of Prestonsburg founded the festival and continues to assist in planning and organizing the annual event. The festival is sponsored by the Jenny Wiley Drama Association in cooperation with the park staff and other community groups.

A CITY WORK CREW shovelled and hosed tons of mud from Court Street here Monday, after heavy rain Sunday night had washed it from the hills above the city. After clogging the drain at the intersection of Court Street and Lake Drive, mud and water backed up, entering several business premises nearby. A construction site for a new house at the crest of Court Street was cited as the source of much of the mud. City Manager Jack Clark Hyden said that the city should consider requiring a retaining wall before issuing a building permit in such cases.

This Town...That World

BUZZING ALONG

To start matters off on a sedate note, I quote from an anonymous communique directed in the general direction of this desk:

"You have told us about the birds. Now, don't you think we young people should be told something, too, about the bees?"

THE SAMPLE SPOILED

"Snow" White tells of the time he gave a friend from Pennsylvania a generous sampling of one of his favorite dishes, namely, pickled corn. Time passed, and no comment from the recipient. Finally, Snow asked him how he liked the corn. "Know what?" the man answered. "That durned stuff had soured by the time I got around to eating it."

I am guilty of saying it, and at the same time I know it's silly. Ever say it?—"I dread to see winter." If you have, just think where you'll be if you don't see it.

HIS ARMOR HAD A CHINK

The man, according to the report at hand, was an individual of probity, dignified and inclined to pontificate.

Ask him about the business future, and he would, after due reflection, go into an exhaustive discussion of the subject. Turn to the weather, and he would confidently predict. Period. He did not hazard any guesses; he gave with his "considered" opinions and spoke categorically, so to speak.

Council Plans Dog Leash Act; Worker Resigns

In two to three weeks the city council hopes to enact a dog leash law, Prestonsburg Mayor Harold W. Cooley said at a meeting of the council last week. The mayor was responding to complaints by Floyd Health Department Administrator Earl Compton that a pack of 12-14 dogs was running loose in the Mayo Addition, strewing garbage, making a commotion at night, leaving fecal waste in the yards of local residents, and threatening the welfare of area children.

Mayor Cooley added that the recently-appointed dog warden had resigned the previous Friday, and that the Floyd fiscal court was attempting to hire a replacement.

Compton also told the council of "numerous complaints" to the Health Department by Town Branch residents concerning sewage disposal in that area. County and state health departments have found that the soil composition on Town Branch makes the use of septic tanks and drain fields impracticable there, he said.

Pointing out that Town Branch lies outside the Prestonsburg city limits, Mayor Cooley said that the city would consider annexing the area if local residents so desired.

Compton further asked the council about the possibility of draining the

Floyd Native's Tornado Experience
Is Subject of Okla. News Article

A headline in the April 15, 1979 issue of the Elk City (Oklahoma) Daily News read: "Elk City Woman Escapes Death in Texas Twister." The subject of the accompanying story was Margery Monahan, daughter of the late Frank and Minti McGuire Marshall, originally of the Johns Creek section of Floyd county.

Mrs. Monahan's adventure began after a trip to Wichita Falls, Texas a few days before the story appeared—the same day that a deadly tornado demolished much of the East Texas city.

Mrs. Monahan had gone to Wichita Falls to be with her son, Dr. Forrest Monahan, Jr., a professor of history at Midwestern University who was to undergo surgery. After leaving the hospital where her son had been admitted and running some shopping errands, she stopped at a mall cafeteria for some lunch and a rest. It was then she noticed "it was getting dark, and the clouds were swirling around."

Then, suddenly, according to Mrs. Monahan, "it struck."

"Windows in the cafeteria rattled and glass was shattering," she recalled, "and a large dome in the center of the building came shattering down." She said everyone in the cafeteria huddled against a wall in a hallway and listened to the twister which sounded "like a fast-moving freight train."

Luckily, damage to the section of the mall where the cafeteria was located was relatively slight although nearby cars were overturned and debris was scattered over a wide area.

Mrs. Monahan later learned of the intensity of the tornado and the resulting death and destruction to Wichita Falls. The storm's path was four blocks wide and six miles long and it is estimated that 20,000 people were left homeless. Hundreds of people were injured in the disaster and 44 were reported killed.

Mrs. Monahan, who said she really didn't become that frightened until after the storm had passed, said "I'm very, very thankful to be here."

Honored on 50th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Don Boyd, of Martin, were honored on their 50th wedding anniversary at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, June 30.

A reception and dinner was given for them by their six daughters and son-in-laws, Burns and Nova Workman, of Satsuma, Fla.; Luther and Pauline Woods, of Willis, Mich.; Jack and Joann Promo, of Detroit, Mich.; John and Wanda Jurus, of Flint, Mich.; Jack and Barbara Wiggins, of Bryson City, N.C.; Glenn and Linda Marshall, of Sterling Heights, Michigan.

Sharing in the occasion were 16 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren along with many other relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Boyd received many gifts which they graciously acknowledged.

ment of Labor representative said, "These, basically, would be local youths trained for local jobs, and they would be working on public projects for the benefit of the county and its towns."

Youths who would be eligible for enrollment are boys, ages 16-21, who have dropped out of school and are economically disadvantaged.

At a meeting Monday, at which Prestonsburg city council and a handful of area residents heard Breckinridge Director Oettle describe the Morganfield facility, Goble-Roberts resident Clyde McGuire questioned Watkins' assertion that Job Corps enrollees here would be recruited locally. He had been told by Job Corps officials, he said, that it was not the practice of the corps to recruit within a 300-mile radius of a given center, owing to the problem of the recruits becoming homesick and leaving the program.

In response, Oettle confirmed that homesickness was a problem and that the 2700 enrollees at Breckinridge were recruited from eight different states.

"There are no guarantees that we won't have to recruit from outside the area?" asked Mrs. Jewell Bays.

"That's right," Oettle replied. Watkins was not present at Monday's meeting.

"In the 15 years the Job Corps has been in operation," Watkins said during last week's interview, "92 percent of the enrollees have been placed in jobs, have returned to school, or have been placed with the military."

In his experience at Breckinridge, Oettle said Monday, 2-4 percent of the enrollees have to be weeded out on entry, about 13 percent leave within the first 30 days, and about 30 percent leave within 90 days. After that, he said, the dropout rate is very small.

Enrollees will be given four hours' basic education and four hours of vocational training per day. If a trainee's record is excellent, he would be permitted to go home on week-ends. If, say, six to eight want to attend a downtown show, they would be bused to and from the show and would be accompanied by a supervisory staff member.

Mr. Watkins was asked, specifically, about drug abuse and increased crime as a result of Job Corps concentration of youths who are school dropouts and may have had earlier brushes with the law. "We are concerned," he replied, "about our enrollees being exposed to drugs and alcohol from sources outside the center, as might be the case in some localities. If a boy smokes marijuana on the center, that is conduct that is unacceptable and he is subject to termination and being sent home."

He pointed to the experience of another center in a town approximately the size of Prestonsburg and with an enrollment approximating the number planned here. The Job Corps, he said, has been in Crystal Springs, Miss., three years, located in the main section of the community and within two blocks of the high school. During that time, he asserted, not one Corps member has been arrested. He suggested that any interested person might call Mayor Lang, of Crystal Springs.

Asked about the Charleston, W. Va. center, where trouble has been experienced, Watkins said West Virginia is not in his area but that he knows this center is a large one, entirely different in concept to the center proposed here, and that its enrollees are from metropolitan areas.

The center here will be operated, as are most others, by a private firm with experience in Job Corps administration, under contract with the Labor Department, he added. Working with the firm would be a local council to meet regularly, hear complaints, receive requests for help or work from Corps members, and serve as a liaison body.

The Job Corps staff locally would number between 55 and 60, with a payroll of $1,250,000 a year, according to Watkins.

"The trouble," commented Councilman Hansel Cooley at Monday's meeting, "is that we are not prepared for growing pains, but not the hardships." Oettle added that "a commonsense approach" can make manageable any adverse effect of the Job Corps on the local community.

For their part, McGuire and Mrs. Bays remained unconvinced. "There is no way they can whitewash this," said Mrs. Bays. "Given the background of these kids, there are going to be problems."

McGuire said that his attitude hadn't softened. "I've heard too much about the Charleston center," he said. "We don't know who is going to run the show here. But it will all be political. And we know what that means."

Scalf's 'History of Big Sandy' Reprinted by College Press

"Kentucky's Last Frontier," the history of the Big Sandy River region, written and first published in 1972 by Henry P. Scalf, of Stanville, is now back in print. It has been very popular for its coverage of the 12 counties of "old Floyd county."

"Kentucky's Last Frontier," printed in hardcover only, has a foreword by Thomas D. Clark of the University of Kentucky, a working bibliography and full index. It is published by the Pikeville College Press at $12 a copy, and may be found at book stores in the region.

The book is indispensable for its detailed treatment of the settlement of the region, from the first pioneers in the various counties to the present decade. A series of chapters deals with the Indian, a fully covered and documented treatment of the first explorers, from Gabriel Arthur's wanderings to the marks of Boone, Gist, Swift, and even the possibility that George Washington surveyed on the lower river.

Other sections cover Harman's Station, the captivity of Jenny Wiley, early settlements, land titles, harvest of coal and timber, educational progress, religious growth, the Civil War, roads, the Depression, migration, floods and recent events.

Grandma Julie

A person once said that the very second we breathe our first breath in this world we begin to die. For many of us we never give that any thought until we lose someone we care about very much. We often take for granted life and those we love.

When I was just a little fellow I can remember being at my Grandma Julie's house and playing on the old treadle sewing machine. I can remember the two big beds in the middle room and how nice it was to stay at Grandma Julie's and sleep in those beds and watch the fire in the fireplace.

You could always count on Grandma Julie to spoil all the grandchildren. One time when my brothers and I were here for a while, she bought English walnuts and let us eat all we wanted. Naturally, we got sick. When my brother broke his arm and was in the hospital at Huntington for a long time, Grandma Julie was the one person who understood when I would be lonely and cry. When my Mom was in the hospital she would come and stay with us. She always wanted to make sure her son (my Dad) got something to eat. I still remember her juicy soup beans, and she could make the best ginger bread in the world.

My Grandma Julie was an elite member of a society that this world is slowly losing.

She had no reason to fear death. She had already defeated death. Back sometime longer than I can remember, she gave her heart to God. Perhaps that was the difference I was seeing all those years. Perhaps that is why I look forward to seeing her again.

Sure, it hurts because she is gone, but I am sure my grandfather is glad she has finally come to be with him.

I took for granted my Grandma Julie and didn't go see her when I could have. But that didn't change the love I had for her and I am positive it didn't change the love she had for me.

New Dept. Head Reopening Probe Of Office Here

The state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection (DNREP) investigation of its stripmine reclamation office here has been reopened, it was reported last week.

Only last month, Gene Stewart, head of the Prestonsburg office, and Nevard Wells, its chief reclamation inspector, had been cleared of charges of taking gifts from coal operators whose mines they were inspecting, of overlooking stripmine violations in some instances, and of ignoring citizens' complaints about some strip operations.

At that time, Gene Brandenburg, commissioner of the Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, reinstated Stewart, who had been on leave with pay since May 9, and Wells, who had been suspended without pay from that date.

DNREP Secretary Frank Harscher, who took office earlier this month following the resignation of Eugene Mooney, is reported to have said that he had directed Brandenburg to reopen investigation of the two men because he was unwilling to reinstate Wells before satisfying himself that Brandenburg's original decision was correct, and because of reports of low morale at the Prestonsburg office.

Stewart is said to have tendered his resignation, effective later this month.

Unidentified DNREP sources are said to have suspected that coal industry pressure had been brought to bear on the department or on Gov. Julian Carroll to exonerate the two men. However, Carroll's office had told him the governor was not involved in the matter, Harscher said, and Brandenburg has denied being pressured by anyone.

Stewart is said to have maintained last week that neither he nor Wells is guilty of any wrongdoing.

Say Many Not Landowners

In a front page article in the August 15th edition of the Floyd County Times it was stated that a gentleman presented a petition to the Fiscal Court claiming to represent the landowners of Cliff for a proposed road and housing project.

We would like for it to be known at this time that many of the people that signed the petition were not landowners but renters and that none of the people living adjacent to the proposed road and housing site were asked to sign or even know of the petition's existence.

JOAN GEORGE, BETTY LAF-FERTY, (and 10 other Cliff residents signed this letter).

The Big Question

It is not who but how many are guilty in the death of Orville Clifton.

He did not have the money to tithe to a church or to carry burial insurance, but he could always get something to drink.

Who would want to murder a beautiful, young girl such as was killed here, several years ago?

Spiritually or physically, thou shalt not kill.

The jury investigated alleged jury tampering in the murder case against Lee Hamilton and recommended that a warrant be issued by the Floyd district court for Bill "Crush" Dings, adding: "The Kentucky Revised Statutes make this type of incident a misdemeanor, which disturbs this grand jury very much. It is our recommendation that the Legislature take immediate action to change the law, designating any type of contact with a juror a felony, so that this court has jurisdiction over those matters."

The incident referred to pertained to a reported visit by Dings to the home at Allen of a prospective juror in the Hamilton case and his alleged statement to her that he wanted a fair trial. Dings was reported to have admitted later that he was the man who talked with the woman but denied that any threat was implied.

The jury heard testimony from various witnesses which related to complaints about the treatment of prisoners in the county jail. It recommended that any person who has evidence that prisoners were abused should contact the office of the commonwealth's attorney and make an appointment to testify at the next grand jury session.

After the jury had heard testimony on the operation of the Eagles Club here, it was notified by Chief of Police William R. Campbell that the entertainment license of the club had been revoked for failure to obey the provisions of the city ordinance governing such places. The grand jury report quoted Prestonsburg police officers as telling the jury that "it was their feeling that action should also be taken to close the Fun Place located in Prestonsburg, as the use of alcohol and drugs is a serious problem."

The city also has jurisdiction over the Fun Place, Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen said.

After its interview of all election commissioners about the election officer problem at the last election the jury recommended that the pay of poll officials be raised to at least $25, that the commissioners become more familiar with the law and acquaint all election officers with their responsibilities and duties. The jury also recommended a fine of up to $500 for any individual chosen as an election officer and failing to serve, except in case of severe illness.

The jury investigated the death of Orville Clifton (Harris) and promised that the probe will continue. "In particular, the grand jury is interested in obtaining a copy of the autopsy report in regard to his death," the jury report said.

It was the death of Clifton, who was picked up outside the Eagles Club, that precipitated the action against the club.

County Planner Dick Leslie discussed with the jury the county's garbage problems and the program instituted to remove old automobile bodies abandoned along roadsides. He was quoted by the jury as saying the county has already begun the take-over of the garbage collection system, and that the fiscal court plans to find adequate landfill sites and operate the system.

A Matter of National Defence

In an editorial reprinted on this page, the Lexington Herald discusses acid rain and passes on a disturbing statement to the effect that Kentucky rainfall is among the heaviest in acidity in the nation.

Coal is the culprit, we are told. Sixty-five percent of the sulfur dioxide which enters the atmosphere to return as acid rain, it is claimed, emanates from coal-burning electric power plants.

The results could be catastrophic: great areas denuded of vegetation, turned into desert, water supplies affected, even aquatic life destroyed.

Then what shall we do? Acid rain will not go away, simply because official heads are buried in the sand and the issue ignored.

Shall the use of coal be prohibited? Do we conclude that packaged goods should be banned because they add to the clutter?

Coal is an absolute necessity, unless the nation is willing to stake its future, including the safety of its people, on nuclear power. An answer to the problem can be found, perhaps has already been found, wanting only action.

Scrubbers which reduce the sulfur to acceptable standards are already in use. They are costly, but apparently the only known solution. Certainly high smokestacks aren't the answer, since they merely remove the pollutants from the immediate locale of the power plants and disperse them into the air to be carried elsewhere, eventually to return as acid rain.

It is obvious that the United States cannot depend upon Arabian oil for its needs. Conversion of coal into gas or oil could be attended by pollution approaching that of electric power generating plants. Other known alternative sources of fuel or energy are the sun and the tides, but these belong to the more distant future. Even gasohol is mixed with gasoline, a product of the oil that is so uncertain.

The need for coal, then, being what it is, and the threat its use poses to the environment hanging like a Damoclean sword over the nation, coal becomes a matter of national security and defense.

The nation, as a consequence, must make heavy financial investment in getting all the coal into use that is needed and in doing so with safety. We would never favor the nationalization of electric power production, but it would seem that in the name of national defense, the nation should move positively and quickly toward making it possible, through financial assistance or otherwise, for power companies to get scrubbers into use at the earliest possible date.

Damage from Acid Rain

(An editorial in the Lexington Herald)

Sulfur dioxide is a principal pollutant emitted from burning coal. Combining with water in the air, it forms sulfuric acid.

The combination falls in the form of rain, acid rain. Scientists are uncertain exactly how harmful acid rain is, but there is growing evidence that it can devastate wildlife, fish, forest and crops.

Americans can't ignore this evidence as they consider lowering air pollution standards drastically to increase the amount of electricity produced with coal rather than natural gas or oil.

Kentuckians experience some of the strongest acid rain in the nation, according to Sunday's New York Times. The acidity of Kentucky's rain increased about sevenfold between 1955 and 1972.

The average acidity in the state is between 4.3 and 4.4 on the acid-alkaline scale, which runs from 0, the most acid, to 14, the most alkali, with 7 being neutral. Each unit represents a tenfold increase. A reading of 4 is 10 times as acidic as a reading of 5, a reading of 3 is 100 times as acidic.

In other words, Kentucky's soft summer rains contain one of the most corrosive substances known.

Furthermore, rain over Kentucky and much of the rest of the nation is likely to become more acidic. More than 32 million metric tons of sulfur dioxide are spewed into the air annually in the U.S. Five times that much may be going into the air in 20 years.

Much of it will fall back to earth simply as sulfur dioxide, which is in itself harmful. Each year the Tennessee Valley Authority pays farmers for crops damaged by sulfur dioxide. Since 1970, for example, the TVA has paid about $420,000 to farmers in McCracken County in Western Kentucky.

Much of the sulfur dioxide, however, will fall back as acid rain, something whose exact effects are still unknown.

Acid rain is suspected of killing off fish populations in some Canadian and New York lakes. It may have caused a significant decrease in fish populations in the North Atlantic, where commercial fishermen work.

It may also decrease farm and forest yields, deplete nutrients from soils and water systems, disrupt the natural acid or alkaline quality in soils, inactivate important microorganisms and corrode many materials.

President Carter has initiated a 10-year program to study acid rain and its effects. Already, however, there is enough information to suggest that there are real costs associated with sending sulfur dioxide into the air.

These costs increase as environmental standards drop. The cost of air pollution standards, therefore, can't be calculated in terms of the cost of scrubbers and other equipment alone. The cost of not controlling sulfur dioxide must also be included.

swamp area bordering Earl Street and South Lake Drive. City Utilities Commission Superintendent Bill H. Howard questioned whether the State Highways Department storm sewers would be able to handle the extra volume of water from the swamp, and whether the elevation of the existing sewers in relation to the swamp would permit drainage from that area.

Howard said that he would confer with state highway engineers in an attempt to resolve the questions, and that he would seek the cooperation of local property owners if drainage of the area proved feasible.

DAYS TO REMEMBER

The air-conditioning is working again, but for all that I'm not satisfied. I'm honing, as they say, for more weather of the sort we had last week. Nothing compares with the cool breezes of such halcyon days when even the smog is blown away.

If everybody was as forbearing when I fumble the ball, trying to help, as young Sharon Martin was with me last week, I would be a howling success.

Named U.S. National Skating Champions

Martha Ann Blevins, 12, and John Middaugh, 13, captured the first place gold medal in elementary dance at the SAC United States National Roller Skating Championships which were held August 3 through 11 at the Will Rodgers Coliseum in Fort Worth, Texas.

Miss Blevins and Mr. Middaugh took first place at the Ohio State Championships and second place at the regional championships. They went on to capture their first place title at the National Championships.

Miss Blevins is the daughter of John and Dorothy Blevins, of Toledo, Ohio, and the granddaughter of the late Elzie and June Bowling, of Prestonsburg, and Mr. and Mrs. Delmer Blevins, of Langley.

The young skaters are members of the Ohio Skate Club of Toledo, Ohio.

Jobless Rate Is Virtually Unchanged

Total employment rose in July and unemployment was virtually unchanged, the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported. The Nation's overall unemployment rate was 5.7 percent, little different from the June rate of 5.6 percent and similar to those which have prevailed since August 1978. The overall unemployment situation for blacks and whites was unchanged from June.

Total employment—as measured by the monthly survey of households—rose by 450,000 to 97.2 million. In contrast, nonfarm payroll employment—as measured by the monthly survey of establishments—was about unchanged over the month at 88.8 million. Over the past year and also since March, however, the two surveys have registered comparable net growth in nonagricultural employment.

Both the unemployment rate, 5.7 percent, and the number of unemployed, 5.8 million, were about the same as in June, and have remained near these levels since last August. An increase in the rate of joblessness for adult men (to 4.1 percent) was about offset by a slight decrease in the rate for adult women (to 5.5 percent). Married women and women who head families both experienced slight declines in their unemployment rate, while the rate for married men increased. The jobless teenagers, which had declined 1-1/2 percentage points in June to 15.3 percent, was unchanged in July.

Among the unemployed, the number who had lost their last job rose by 175,000 in July, while those seeking their first job declined by over 90,000. The median duration of unemployment edged up above 6 weeks, as increases were registered in the number of persons unemployed between 5 and 14 weeks.

The civilian labor force grew by 530,000 over the month to 103.1 million, 2.4 million above its year-earlier level. Most of this labor force growth occurred before March. At 63.8 percent, the civilian labor force participation rate was a half point above a year earlier. Adult women accounted for most of the over-the-year increase in labor force participation; their participation rate in July was a record 50.7 percent.

The Secretary of Labor, nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate, is the President's chief advisor on labor matters.

2 Complete Fish Dinners For $3.49

Offer Expires Wednesday, August 29, 1979
Good at these participating restaurants.

North Lake Drive
Prestonsburg, Kentucky

Not good with any other offer.

Does $97.50 seem like a bargain?

That depends on what it buys. At Pikeville College it buys one semester's tuition in the Mining Technology Program.

Of course, books and materials are extra, but the fact remains that you could have a two-year associate degree for under $500.

Yes, that's a bargain.

All business projections point to a boom period for the coal industry in the eighties. Coal is the only alternative energy source with rich reserves to be tapped now, and with the technology at hand to make it practical.

There is still time to arrange for fall registration at Pikeville College, and day or evening classes are available. Remember, in many cases scholarship money is possible, or other sources of financial aid for those who qualify.

All the more reason to put your plans into action now!

Call us today—it could be your future that is at stake.

Tackett-Hinton Vows Exchanged

Miss Jonell Tackett and Mr. Gary Mark Hinton exchanged wedding vows in a double-ring ceremony solemnized at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, June 16, at the First Presbyterian Church in Prestonsburg.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Tackett, of Prestonsburg, and Mr. Hinton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Paul Hinton, of Russell, Ky.

The Rev. William Poole, who was assisted by Evangelist Gary Phelps, read the vows before an altar decorated with arched candelabra holding lighted tapers and basket arrangements of spring flowers. Preceding the ceremony, a program of nuptial music was presented by Miss Brenda Music, of Prestonsburg, at the organ, and Mr. Jeffrey Miller Wells, who sang "We've Only Just Begun." The bridegroom played the guitar and sang "Wedding Song."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire silhouette gown of chiffon and Chantilly lace fashioned with a Queen Anne neckline enhanced with seed pearls, double bishop sleeves, and a princess skirt which extended into a chapel train. A bandeau of matching lace and seed pearls secured her lace-edged veil of silk illusion, and she carried a bouquet of white silk roses with blue baby's breath and miniature carnations.

Mrs. Jeffrey Miller Wells, of Auxier, was her sister's matron of honor and Miss Kemberly Tolliver, of Wilmington, O., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Ann Keene, of Bardstown, Miss Pamela Burger, of Erlanger, and Miss Pamela Brown, of Newark, New Jersey. Their gowns of blue organza were fashioned with off-the-shoulder necklines and crystal pleated skirts with flounced hemlines. They wore necklaces of silk flowers and carried fans adorned with matching flowers.

Andy Hinton served his brother as best man, and ushers were Dave Kjelly, of Monroe, O., Chuck Gibson, of Delano, Tenn., Scott Adams, of Louisville, and Robert Timothy Tackett, of Prestonsburg, brother of the bride.

Miss Lisa Johnson, of Bevinville, cousin of the bride, was flower girl, and the guest register and rice bags were attended to by Miss Mary Ann Hinton, sister of the groom.

Assisting at the reception at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, were Mrs. Jon Mitts, of Cincinnati, Mrs. Mike Hall, of Morehead, Mrs. Jeffrey Miller Wells, of Auxier, and Miss Kimberly Tolliver, of Wilmington, Ohio. The bride's table was covered with a lace cloth and held a three-tiered cake, lighted tapers in candelabra and an arrangement of spring flowers. Other parties given in honor of the bride included a miscellaneous shower and the rehearsal dinner, June 15.

Following a wedding trip to Cincinnati, the couple is residing in Russell.

The bride is a graduate of Prestonsburg High School and received her B. S. degree from Eastern Kentucky University, where she was a member of Phi Mu sorority, Phi Upsilon Omicron honorary and the American Home Economics Association. She is employed with the First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Ashland.

Home Equity Fraud Defaulters Warned

Inflation has created the opportunity for a new "rip-off" against poor homeowners.

The "home equity rip-off" relies upon the fact that people do not know the value of their home. They know what they paid for it, and they know how much of the mortgage they have paid off. On a 30-year mortgage, the amount paid off at ten years isn't very much, so the homeowner does not think there is much equity in the house. In fact, because of inflation the house may be worth $10,000 or $20,000 more than the homeowner thinks it is worth. It is this equity created by inflation that is the object of the unscrupulous land speculator.

The scheme works like this. When a notice of default comes to the attention of the land speculator through business journals or public records, he gets in touch with the distressed homeowner. The speculator may claim to be a mortgage counsellor, a credit counsellor, a real estate expert, or almost anything else. A variety of approaches are used.

He may tell the family he will help them protect their credit rating by buying the property from them, and even pay them a few thousand dollars for moving expenses and a deposit on a new place to live. Or he may say he can solve their problem so they don't have to give up their house. He will buy the property from them, and then rent it back to them with the option to purchase.

Thus, the homeowner thinks the sale is only temporary, to solve this financial difficulty, and as soon as times are better, the family will own their own home again. However, since the family couldn't afford to pay the mortgage, they can't afford to pay the rent, which is usually greater than the original mortgage payment. They quickly fall behind on rental payments. Failure to pay the rent cancels the option to purchase, and the family gets evicted.

Whatever the method used, the end result is the same. The land speculator ends up with title to the property, and the family ends up on the street, having lost thousands of dollars of equity in the home.

According to the consumer protection office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, homeowners in default who receive a call or letter promising help for nothing should be suspicious. Their house is probably worth more than they think it is. HUD suggests that people in this situation seek advice from the people who gave the mortgage, a HUD-approved housing counseling agency, or a reputable realtor.

Roberts Says Garbage Collection Temporary

Magistrate Kenneth Roberts, of District 2, said this week he is advising all persons who are being served by Floyd Sanitation to continue with this service, since he does not propose to use a truck for pickup service.

Roberts explained that the service offered by the fiscal court is only temporary and that discontinuance of a regular service, if it is satisfactory, is not advisable.

"I have too many roads in this district that need repair for me to put our equipment to hauling garbage," he said.

A son of the late Jar and Alice Poe Meade, he was born December 10, 1916 and was a disabled veteran of World War II. He was a member of the Full Gospel Church of God of Abbott Creek.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lillie Mae Meade; one daughter, Mary Magadiene Meade; two brothers, Henry Mayberry Meade, of Huntington, Ind., and O. C. Meade, in Ohio.

Funeral services were conducted at 11 a.m. Sunday at the Full Gospel Church of God on Abbott Creek by the Revs. Fred Garrett and Floyd Tackett. Burial was made in the Meade cemetery on Abbott under direction of Jones-Preston Funeral Home.

RATE OF GERMAN MEASLES HAS RISEN IN YOUNG ADULTS

ATLANTA—Public health officials say they are concerned because the rate of German measles, which has been linked to birth defects, has increased among those aged 20 to 24.

The national Center for Disease Control said the disease rate rose 36.7 percent from 1977 to 1978 among people in their early 20s, while the risk of the disease declined in all other age groups.

Mrs. Dorothea McGinnis

Mrs. Dorothea Ellen Kauffman McGinnis, 69, who for 46 years served in this area with her husband, the Rev. Fred H. McGinnis, of Banner, as a home missionary, died Thursday at the Highlands Regional Medical Center here after a short illness.

She and her husband were affiliated with the Southern Highland Evangel. Two of their daughters Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Barkley, of Sao Paulo, Brazil and Mrs. Sharon Rice, of Prince Albert, Saskatchewan, Canada—are missionaries.

Mrs. McGinnis was a native of Altoona, Pa., the daughter of the late Charles W. and Elizabeth Rolls Kauffman.

Besides her husband and two daughters, Mrs. Barkley and Mrs. Dice, she is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Carol Hall, of Salyersville; a brother, J. Harry Kauffman, Altoona, Pa.; three sisters, Mrs. Ethel Eckert, Mrs. Nora Stump and Mrs. Hazel Hoover, all of Altoona, and four grandchildren.

Funeral services were conducted at 2 p.m. Sunday from the First Baptist Church of Allen, the Revs. Carl Tegeler, Robert Martin and Dan Heintzleman officiating. Burial was made in Davidson Memorial Gardens under direction of the Hall Brothers Funeral Home.

Pharmacy Footnotes

by Harold Cooley

Since the very beginning of time, the mysterious healing effects of drugs and herbs on the illnesses of mankind have never ceased to amaze us. Ironically enough, here in the 20th Century, the most learned men of medicine have discovered positive proof that remedies centuries old are in fact the most potent in combating various illnesses. Ancient brethren were able to secure relief from pains and ills by plucking a curative from mother nature's bountiful blessings. In the weeks and months to follow, we will bring you many fascinating topics relating to pharmacy and medicine.

"Clifted" Hound, Rescued From Water Gap Roadcut

It began like an episode from "Emergency 1" or maybe "S.W.A.T.," as a team of Prestonsburg firemen equipped with special rappelling and rock climbing gear arrived on the scene at a steep roadcut at Water Gap last Monday. The object of their mission—RESCUE! The victim—a Walker (coonhound, that is).

The hapless hound's enthusiasm for the chase had apparently led it to a narrow terrace high above the Lancer-Water Gap road when it was either stricken with "swim head" or just plain decided it was time to sit still.

When the fire department received a call telling of the dog's plight, the critter was already into its second day of being stranded.

As it turned out, the risky rescue techniques which the firemen were ready to employ proved unnecessary as access was gained to the ledge by a narrow path. It became clear, however, that subtle, psychological persuasion would have to come into play before the skeptical pup would accept that his ordeal could be ended with a nary a stonebrise.

After about 10 minutes of friendly gesturing, falsetto "baby talk" and even the offer of a can of Jo-Bo at the bottom of the hill by Fireman Paul Chaffins, the hound literally inched his way toward his rescuer and reluctantly submitted to another several minutes of head-scratching and back-rubbing. Finally, gaining the doubting dog's confidence, (despite cries of onlookers at the bottom of the hill to "Jump!") Chaffins picked up the long-legged hound and carefully scooted down the steep path.

The tense drama ended happily as the hungry hound was reunited with his owner, a Goble-Roberts Addition hunter.

McDowell Jaycees News

The McDowell Jaycees announce that they have received much support from the surrounding community.

For the month of August, the Jaycees have received three new members—Halis Hall, Donnie Meade and James Tackett.

Saturday, August 11, the Jaycees held their first roadblock at the McDowell intersection on behalf of the drive for Muscular Distrophy. The roadblock lasted approximately four hours and a total of $396 was collected.

The McDowell Jayceettes also have been formed this month. The officers of the Jayceettes for the fiscal year are Libby Hall, Linda Turner, Debbie Carter, Betty Tackett and Shirley Reed.

Over the past three weeks the Jaycees have been selling tickets on a Remington shotgun which was given away Friday evening. The winner was Dale Stumbo, of McDowell.

The Jaycee banquet was held at the home of Jimmy and Shirley Reed O'Dell, Friday evening. Present at the banquet were charter members and wives, prospective members and wives, and special guests. Among the special guests were Mike Fisher, president of the Kentucky Jaycees; Ted Adams, regional director of the Southeast region; Ron Charles, district director of District D, Southeast region; Ed Gambill, editor of the Jaycee magazine; and Mrs. Ed Gambill, president of the Kentucky Jayceettes. Tables and chairs for the banquet were provided by the Drift Woman's Club.

Past Week's Raids Net Large Haul Of Beer, Liquor

Four raids within the past five days have netted law enforcement officers in this county 1,404 cans and bottles of beer and a large quantity of "hard" liquor as well.

In the first of the actions Sheriff Doug Lewis confiscated 83 pints of liquor after a search of a car here. Ashland Joseph was arrested for illegal possession following the investigation.

A raid Monday at the home of Merle May netted Deputy Sheriffs Randall Lewis and Phillip Neeley and ABC Agent Ted H. Salisbury 10 cases of beer and a case of whiskey and resulted in May's arrest. A second raid the same day resulted in the arrest of William R. Wells, Jr. after Sheriff Lewis and State Troopers Stephens and Sizemore recovered 348 cans of beer and six pints of liquor from Wells' home on the Auxier road.

Largest haul of the week resulted from a raid on the Cool Water Fork of Salt Lick Creek near Hueysville Tuesday by Sheriff Lewis, Deputy Sheriff Phillip Neeley and State Troopers Stephens and Sizemore. Taken in the raid were 816 cans of beer and 44 half-pints of whiskey. Jasper Hicks was arrested in connection with the raid.

In the women's division, first round winners were Nancy Martin, Winkey New and Lynn Bales, and Kaye Willis.

In the semi-finals, Winkey New defeated Nancy Martin 6-2, 6-0, and Lynn Bales defeated Kaye Willis 6-3, 6-4. The finals saw New defeat Bales 6-4, 6-3 for the women's title.

In the consolation game for women, Shirley Combs defeated Lois Crum and Annette Adams.

In men's consolation play, Gordon Johnson defeated Danny W. Johnson, Tommy Carpenter, David Adams, and Willie Elliott.

Observe 83rd Birthday

Hattie McCurry, former Floyd county resident who now resides on Rt. 1, near Louisa, observed her 83rd birthday at her home on August 7.

Among those who joined her and wished her a happy birthday, were Mr. and Mrs. John E. Johnson, of Louisa, Mr. and Mrs. Rousie Collins, of Price, and Mr. and Mrs. David Brown, of McDowell.

VIENNA, Austria—Czechoslovak Communist authorities apparently are delaying the trial of 10 human-rights activists so it will not coincide with the anniversary Tuesday of the 1968 Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia, dissident sources said yesterday.

DAVID RESIDENTS, complaining that they were tired of the uncollected garbage in their town, decided to pick it up themselves Saturday. Evelyn Meadows, Betty Cavins, Gloria Shepherd, and Dorothy Clark formed the crew pictured above. The sign on the pickup reads, "This Time To The Dump—Next Time To Adrian's," a reference to Adrian Lafferty, of Floyd County Sanitation, garbage franchise-holder for the area.

LOCAL RESIDENTS complain that this creek, which crosses the roadway at Blue River, is polluted by the county garbage dump nearby, and creates a winter traffic hazard.

IN RE: The Incorporation of a City of the Sixth Class Known as Dwale, Kentucky NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that a Petition seeking the incorporation of a sixth class city to be known as Dwale, located on the waters of the Big Sandy River, Floyd County, Kentucky, has been filed in the Floyd Circuit Court, designated as CR No. 79-CI-375, by Jack Nelson and others. The exact boundaries of the proposed corporation are as follows:

Beginning at a Railroad Valuation station 4380 50, thence northwest to a point on the top of a knob. Thence with the meander of the ridge westward to a point on the dividing ridge between Levisa Fork of Big Sandy River and its tributary Bull Creek. Thence with this dividing ridge northwesterly 1000' more or less to a high knob of the aforesaid ridge. Thence leaving said ridge a northeasterly bearing following the meander of the watershed divide between the communities of Dwale and Water Gap to a point on the center line of US 23, survey station 237 58. Thence leaving the survey of US 23 continuing to follow the watershed divide between the communities of Dwale and Water Gap to a knob, thence turning in an eastward direction and following the ridge dividing the watersheds of Dwale and an unnamed hollow immediately north of Dwale, to a point, said point being opposite C&O Railway valuation station 4328 00, and on the watershed divide, thence to C&O Railway valuation station 4328 00. Thence radially to the Railway a southeasterly course to the low water mark of the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River, thence with the low water mark of the River southwestward to a point perpendicular to C&O valuation station 4380 50, thence from said point to point of beginning.

The purpose of this notice is to advise all affected residents of the pending of the same. Said notice to run two (2) consecutive weeks in this publication.

Moped Drivers Must Obey Traffic Laws

Soaring fuel costs and gas shortages have broadened the market of the newest street machine—the moped. But what many moped owners don't realize is that they must have a valid operator's license to drive a moped in Kentucky.

According to Bennie Maffet, transportation, state law requires that a driver have a valid license to operate a moped. This means the driver must be at least 16 years old. However, the owner does not have to register the moped, have it insured or wear safety equipment, he said.

Although safety equipment is optional, Maffet encourages all moped riders, or bicyclists, to wear a helmet. Mopeds are classified as motor vehicles and as such must obey the same laws and be given the same courtesies as full-sized vehicles, Maffet said.

He explained that mopeds must obey all rules of the road, they can't be ridden two abreast in one lane of traffic. Other vehicles must give them one full lane just as if they were a full-sized vehicle.

Warm weather and an enthusiastic audience helped make last week's Miss Jenny Wiley Pageant a success, according to the pageant organizer, Peggy Arnett.

In all, 39 young women from Floyd, Pike, Johnson and Knott counties competed for the four categories of Miss Jenny Wiley in sportswear and dress competition.

Carol Crider, 16, of Pikeville, was crowned Miss Jenny Wiley. Miss Crider the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Crider, attends Pikeville High School. The runner-up Miss Jenny Wiley was Cherie Ramey, 15, of Nippa. She is a sophomore at Johnson Central High School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ramey. In the Junior Miss Jenny Wiley competition, for girls in the fifth through eighth grades, Sha Stumbo, 13, was selected as the winner. Miss Stumbo, the daughter of Mrs. Linda Stumbo, of Wayland, is an eighth grader at Wayland Elementary School. The runner-up Junior Miss Jenny Wiley was Jeanne Hamilton, 9, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Hamilton, of Whittensville. Miss Hamilton is a fifth grader at W. R. Castle Memorial School.

Linda Kay Mullins was crowned Little Miss Jenny Wiley. Miss Mullins, seven, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Mullins, of Meally, and attends the second grade at Central Elementary School. The runner-up Little Miss Jenny Wiley was Kathy Jo Slone, six, of Blue River. Miss Slone, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Slone, attends the first grade at the Clark Elementary School.

Mamata Majmudar, age five, was crowned Tiny Miss Jenny Wiley. She is the daughter of Dr. Gopal and Dr. Mina Majmudar, of Martin. The runner-up Tiny Miss Jenny Wiley was Nikki Lynn Ratliff, age five, of Estill. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ratliff.

The goal of the pageant was to raise money to help the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre, which has been experiencing financial difficulties because of poor attendance due to the rainy weather throughout the summer. Although the theatre is far from being out of trouble financially, the Miss Jenny Wiley Pageant helped raise about $1,300, according to Miss Arnett.

Thoughts for the Week

By Dr. Richard D. Howard

WEDNESDAY: The burden becomes light which is cheerfully born—Ovid
THURSDAY: If you talk about your troubles and tell them o'er and o'er, The world will think you like them and proceed to give you more.
FRIDAY: It must take a lot of time and effort to be always disagreeable.
SATURDAY: Contentment consists not in great wealth but in few wants—Epictetus
SUNDAY: To go on cheerfully with a petty round of little duties, to smile for the joy of others when the heart is aching, Who does this, his works will follow. He may not be a hero to the world, but he is one of God's heroes.
MONDAY: The way some people keep a secret is to keep it going.
TUESDAY: There is no fun in medicine but much medicine in fun.

Young hunters will find the gates at three of Kentucky's best deer hunting areas closed to them this fall unless they can show a valid safety certificate.

Both Ft. Campbell and Ft. Knox will join Land Between the Lakes in requiring safe hunter certification for young hunters this fall. At Ft. Campbell, all hunters between the ages of 12 and 16 must be certified (children under 12 may not hunt on the post). Ft. Knox will require all deer hunters under 16 to be certified, but post authorities indicate that this requirement could be extended to all hunters for the 1980 hunting season.

Land Between the Lakes will again require all participants in its special youth hunt to possess a valid hunter safety card. This hunt is open to boys and girls between 10 and 16 years old. Those chosen in the drawing for this hunt will receive information from LBL about the certificate requirements.

All three installations require certification from the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources or from another state's fish and game agency. Those who pass Kentucky's course will be issued certification cards which will also be recognized in all of the 26 states with mandatory certification programs.

The fish and wildlife department's hunter education courses will be held at various locations throughout the state beginning Aug. 23. These 10-hour courses include six hours of classroom instruction and a four-hour session of range work with rifles, shotguns and archery equipment.

"I feel that Kentucky's program is one of the best in the nation," says Marion Mattingly, the hunter safety coordinator for fish and wildlife's conservation education division. "Our course isn't just for young people—anybody who hunts can learn something from it."

Although firearm safety is a major part of the program, the course also deals with a variety of other topics. These include hunter-landowner relations, sportsmanship, hunter ethics, first aid and outdoor survival.

The course will be offered just about anywhere a minimum of 20 people interested in taking it can be found, Mattingly says. Most of the lessons are conducted by one of the conservation education division's three full-time hunter training officers. Some sessions are conducted by trained volunteer instructors.

To find the location and dates of a course near you or to get details about having a course in your area, call the local fish and wildlife conservation officer or get in touch with Marion Mattingly, Division of Conservation Education, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, 529 E. Main, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601 (phone 502-564-4762).

While deer hunters are starting to make preparations for this fall, another group of folks are finding deer right now. Game Division Director Joe Bruna says there have been a lot of cases recently of people trying to "rescue" an "orphaned" fawn.

Generally, Bruna says, such fawns aren't orphaned at all. A doe will customarily leave its fawn alone for long periods of time—and she isn't about to come back and claim her baby with a bunch of humans nearby.

Juveniles Arrested In Recent Martin Store Burglaries

A series of breaks into two Martin businesses which netted burglars $5-6,000 in merchandise within the past two weeks may have ended Tuesday with the arrest of three Martin juveniles by State Police Detective Danny Stumbo.

First of the burglaries occurred Aug. 9 when merchandise, primarily knives and guns, valued at approximately $1,700, was stolen from Jewel Hardware, owned by Clyde Allen. The burglars then hit Clyde Hogsd's Western Auto Store on consecutive nights over the weekend taking $1,000 in merchandise, Saturday, and about $3,000 in knives, guns and ammo, Sunday evening. Hogsd who said his store had been broken into four times since December, commented that attempts had also been made to enter several other Martin stores.

Det. Stumbo said he had recovered "95-99 percent" of the stolen merchandise from both stores after arresting the juveniles on charges of burglary in the first degree.

Growing Up Gifted

By Abigail Schade

Tommy is the same size as the other kids in his neighborhood, and he plays softball and soccer with them after school. But in the hours before the 3:30 bell, his world is entirely different from that of the other 8-year-olds on the block.

Tommy reads the same books that his 10th grade sister reads. His speaking vocabulary is larger than that of the average adult. He can spell words that stump his parents, words such as "onomatopoeia." When he's not reading in the school library, he amuses himself by constructing elaborate crossword puzzles. He's learned enough words to beat his teacher at Scrabble, but perhaps that's not so surprising—he's been reading since the age of two.

Tommy is a gifted child. His quest for knowledge about words began when he was still in diapers and has accelerated at a speed that amazes his parents (neither of whom has a college education), his teacher, and his principal. There are more children like Tommy than many people realize. Recent estimates place the number of gifted children in the U.S. at 2.5 million. Awareness of their special needs has increased so dramatically in recent years that the federal government established the Office of the Gifted and Talented in 1972.

The Definition of Giftedness

What exactly is a gifted child? In general terms, they are children capable of high performance with demonstrated intellectual ability, aptitude for creative or productive thinking, leadership ability, talent in visual and performing arts, or outstanding psycho-motor ability. This broad definition means that gifted children are not just the ones with extraordinary mathematical aptitude or a precocious ease with reading, although these are the easiest to identify.

These days the term "gifted" also applies to children who have tremendous talent for leadership, who automatically organize the rest of the class for projects or who enjoy teaching their peers. A gifted child may be one who has great artistic ability, with a passion for, say, sculpting in clay. Also included are kids with extraordinary coordination, the kind that leads to a career as a champion gymnast or a surgeon. Lastly are those with a great hunger for knowledge and a burning curiosity about the world.

Interestingly, the line between bright kids and gifted kids is more a matter of degree than kind, so that the former often turn into the latter with the right encouragement and challenge. These children are the potential leaders of tomorrow, but today the only quality they share is the need for help to develop this tremendous potential.

Until recently, the needs of gifted children went largely unrecognized. Attention was focused primarily on the problems of below-average and disadvantaged youngsters. Parents of the gifted hesitated to press for special services for children who already seemed to possess so much, and even many school psychologists figured that the gifted had a head start.

In reality, children with more than their share of ability probably need as much help to develop to full potential as do those who are learning disabled. For one thing, schools in poor neighborhoods may have no special facilities to deal with extra-bright minds. For another, kids who are so different often suffer abuse from their classmates, causing them to feel frustrated and isolated. For such a child to join a class of others like himself is to be assured that he is not a freak.

Another problem is that gifted children are not always so easy to identify. Sometimes the very qualities that signify extra intelligence—curiosity, extrovertedness, the demand for answers to difficult questions—are also the ones that can be mistaken for behavior problems. Or a shy child may not allow his talents to flourish. Or a child may be so bored by the "slow" progress of his peers that he simply turns off in class, earning poor grades and losing interest in the very place that should stimulate him.

Unfortunately, frustrated or bored gifted youngsters frequently turn their talents in antisocial directions, dropping out or dealing drugs as a substitute for intellectual challenge. Obviously, the earlier their ability is detected and constructively channeled, the better.

How to Identify a Gifted Child

Many parents assume that I.Q. or an outstanding talent in one academic area, such as mathematics, is the sole measure of giftedness. But there are other signs. Here are the qualities to look for according to the Office of the Gifted and Talented:

- Early use of advanced vocabulary. A gifted child usually begins talking at a surprisingly early age and quickly learns to make complex sentences. Older children are increasingly articulate, often using imaginative and colorful figures of speech.

- Keen observation and curiosity. Very intelligent children often demonstrate their gifts simply in the way they take stock of the world around them; they recognize and wonder about things far earlier than their contemporaries. The gifted child is likely to exhibit great curiosity and to ask probing questions, like "How does the moon stay up in the sky?"

- Quick and easy retention of information. These kids remember details and minor events that others forget or hardly notice. When presented with interesting new information, they usually absorb it right away.

- Periods of intense concentration. The attention span of a gifted child is far longer than normal, even at a very young age. Older ones (7-10) can become so wrapped up in their projects that they seemingly block out the rest of the world.

- Wide and eclectic range of interests. Gifted children often go through phases of concentrated interest in one particular subject, which they may explore in surprising depth. This interest may give way to another just as quickly.

- Ability to understand complex concepts and relationships. While most young children are only able to understand relatively concrete examples, their gifted peers have a marked potential for abstract reasoning. This means that they will extend their understanding far beyond the obvious. For instance, while most of a fifth grade class learns about the first printing press, the gifted member of the class will grasp by himself the implications of the resulting spread of printed matter. Such children will also tolerate complexity and ambiguity, allowing for "grey" areas in problems that their friends can only see in far simpler terms.

- Acute analytical skills and a tendency to self-criticism. Kids of extraordinary ability are often severe critics, both of themselves and of others. They have an objective viewpoint that allows them to challenge authorities that other children take for granted. Their high level of motivation frequently makes them impatient with their own progress.

- Nonconformity, a sense of playfulness, independence, and acute sensitivity. Children whose talents lie in the arts or athletics often exhibit a sensitivity and drive in their particular specialty. Budding actors, for example, can usually mimic parents and teachers accurately at an early age. Young musicians will compose melodies on their own. Many possess an independence and a creativity that even the intellectually gifted kids don't have.

What the School Can Offer

If you suspect you are harboring a young Einstein at home, seek help from your child's school. First you must verify that your youngster is indeed gifted. Talk to his teacher or principal, bringing with you any proof—artwork, notes about accomplishments—of his talent. Ask that the school psychologist give your youngster an intelligence test and perhaps a creativity test. If the school is unprepared to cope with such special children, look for a local psychologist or specialist in childhood learning; many colleges have facilities for the gifted in their departments of education or psychology. Only a fraction of the country's school systems are adequately equipped to deal with gifted students, so be patient with the people who ultimately can help your child the most: the school psychologist, the principal, and most of all, his teacher.

The school may handle your child's educational needs in one of several ways. The most common options are:

- Self-contained classes. If your child enters a special class for the gifted, he will be learning with other exceptional kids and a teacher trained to handle their needs. Children in these situations are permitted to work at their own pace regardless of their normal grade level.

- Resource rooms. These are equipped with selected materials to aid gifted children in exploring and advancing beyond regular lessons. Children return to their normal classes after their daily period in the resource room.

- Independent study. In this approach, the teacher simply guides the child, who is allowed to work on his own and to develop his particular interests.

- Acceleration. Allowing a child to skip several grades or even to advance to high school or college level is a controversial policy. Many parents and teachers feel that putting young children who are mentally but not emotionally or physically mature into classes with older students is detrimental to their social development. Others believe that holding them back is far more damaging to their abilities.

- Mentorships. Children can also be assigned for extra work to someone in the community who can concentrate on their special interests. A budding mathematician might "apprentice" to a local banker, or a young artist could meet regularly with a potter, for example, under the school's auspices.

Named CF Chairman For Minnie Campaign

The 1979 "Breath of Life" chairman for Minnie was announced today by the Bluegrass Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation.

Mrs. Edith Hopkins, who has conducted a previous campaign for the Foundation, will again lead local volunteers in conducting a door-to-door campaign in Minnie.

"Because of the continuing support and concern shown by people like Mrs. Hopkins, thousands of CF children everywhere are able to breathe a little easier," said Charles Thayer, President of the Bluegrass Chapter of the Foundation.

Since 1955, research sponsored by the foundation has increased the average life expectancy of a CF child from infancy into young adulthood.

Two Named Chairmen For CF Fund Drive

Charles Thayer, president of the Bluegrass Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, announced today the following "Breath of Life" chairmen for two communities—Connie Scott, Wayland, and Mrs. Pamela Stumbo, of Weeksbury.

These chairmen, with the help of local volunteers, will conduct a door-to-door campaign in their communities during September or October. Funds raised during this annual event will help support research and care programs benefiting children affected by cystic fibrosis.

Through the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, many CF victims and their families have gained hope for the future. To date, research and improved patient care have increased the average life expectancy of a CF patient from infancy to young adulthood.

1st ASSEMBLY OF GOD

MARTIN, KY.

Ron Young can't walk on water or pull an apostle out of his hat.

He can't make sinners repent at a wave of a wand. Nonetheless, Young is a magician for the Magi, a puppeteer for Paul and Peter, a ventriloquist of the vespers.

He has distilled the best of Blackstone, the Muppets and Edgar Bergen and concocted a creation that has kids chasing Christianity as though it were made of chocolate.

"I'm on the same terms as Billy Graham, except with kids," said Young, 35, a Missouri native who lives in New Albany.

Young is the children's minister at Calvary Assembly of God in southern Louisville.

Before coming to New Albany last fall, he spent three years on the road with his puppets, dummies and magic. He appeared in the United States and abroad, with stops in such places as Australia and Japan.

"I even worked a Buddhist temple in Honolulu," the stocky, bearded man said.

Children's attendance at Calvary is up, and the kids are bringing the parents, said the Rev. Earl Moore, pastor at Calvary. "Children flock after him."

A large crowd gathered at the New Albany-Floyd County Library Thursday night to see Young perform on behalf of the county's Humane Society.

Young, dressed in a bright green suit, appeared with a big yellow duck over his right arm.

"Look at those turkeys out there," said Danny the Duck, peering into the audience of giggling young ones.

It had to be Danny. Young's lips didn't move. Anyway, Danny soon learned the difference between turkeys and children. And the children learned the difference between kindness and cruelty to animals.

And the Humane Society folks beamed.

"Kids don't want lectures," said Young. "We deal in lightheartedness. We don't water it down, we just put it into modern-day techniques. If kids can see it, say it, touch it, they'll retain it a lot longer."

He says children are sick of a lot of things. When he ties his message together with lightheartedness, it seems to work. He thinks he's found a good technique, good and unique. Young stays booked.

On Sundays, Young will bake a loaf of bread or start a fire in his palms and relate it all to a Bible verse or an event in Jesus' life.

Puppets and dummies do the talking, and this is one congregation where no one snoozes through the sermon.

"All of my puppets teach major themes, and, as you can see, everywhere you turn around I've got puppets," said Young. "Yesterday's Bible is today's puppetry and magic."

Many of his puppets are bears. They're Young's favorites.

He wears a bear pin on his lapel, and his calling cards read, "Ronald L. Young, Great Teddy Bear of Magic."

Young's wife, Debbie, makes all of the puppets. She performs with her husband, and 7-year-old daughter Shauna takes the puppet when needed, too.

Young takes out a scrapbook and points to a picture of two clowns in full gawdy garb.

"This is what I do to them," said Young of his family, belly laughing.

Young grew up as a Lutheran, but the older he got, the less religion played in his life.

He went through the smorgasbord of denominations and found them all foul-tasting, he said.

"My only religion was to be the bar, girls and dancing," he said. "When I ran amuck, I ran amuck. I was running into a lot of problems, and I didn't know where to turn."

All the while, Young was an engineer, a consultant for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and pulling in a lot of loot.

Then a friend talked to him about "accepting Jesus as my personal saviour."

It at least made him think. But the sacrifice would have to be total.

"He said I would have to give 100 percent of my life," Young said. "Everything didn't turn rosy right at that point, but I started depending on Christ. I physically prayed, 'Lord, you said you would take care of us (he and his family); well, here we go.'"

He put his engineering degree in mothballs and set off on the road. He did his best to mimic top-flight magicians and puppeteers, but had little experience.

"I strictly attribute my skills to the Lord," Young said. "These are skills some people work for years to master, but I just started doing them. We fell into everything so easily."

He free-lanced for a couple of years, then latched onto an Assembly of God program to start children's churches across the country.

His Calvary children's church is almost self-sufficient. It has its own song leaders, users, program.

"We don't kill time while the pastor is preaching," he said.

Irma Moore, day-care director at Morton Memorial United Methodist Church in Clarksville, had Young perform there recently.

"He's really very, very good," she said. "He knows children and really keeps their attention."

Mrs. Moore said churches everywhere seem to be having problems luring children.

So maybe a little show biz is the solution. If so, Young may be a pioneer in something big.

"My long-range goal is to have a children's church with 1,000 members," said Young.

An Investment That Puts Your Money In Banks

By Catherine Winters

Photography by David Gooley

With prices for antique toy banks what they are today, some would-be collectors might find it necessary to rob a bank before they can buy one. According to collector John Bentley, banks made of cast iron automatically begin at $50 and go up—way up—from there. "Average" prices can run from $400 to $2,000-$3,000. Bentley likes to cite the example of one rare bank that recently went at auction for $15,000.

Bentley is one of the lucky ones who broke into banks a number of years back before the boom really began. Nine years ago he already owned 100 of them and had his eye on a collection of about 600 belonging to a gentleman from the East Coast, who often brought them to California for exhibitions. The man, who assured Bentley he'd undoubtedly part with the collection someday, called him up about seven years ago to see if he was still interested. Bentley was, of course, and was able to purchase all of the banks, plus some dolls and cast iron toys, for about $3,000.

In the ensuing years, Bentley has more than doubled the collection to well over 1500 banks of every conceivable shape and variety. He says the problem now is finding something he doesn't have...and being able to afford it. His interest in banks has enlarged to include other toys, as well—cap guns, tin toys, glass candy containers—so that at toy shows he now finds himself looking at everything. Says Bentley, "You walk into one of those places and wonder how far your wallet will take you around the room."

Works of Art and Ingenious Machines

The earliest banks were intended as children's toys and were sold as such in toy stores and five-and-tens. Originally cast in tin, then iron, and later made in pottery, glass and papier mache, early banks were skillfully executed and finely detailed works of art. They came in an endless assortment of shapes, although comic strip characters and animals—particularly the now legendary pig—were especially popular.

Unlike some frivolous toys, banks were considered educational because they taught children thrift and aided them in learning to count and add. To this end some banks even had registering devices that added up the money as it was fed in, and some cash register banks required ringing up the correct amount before depositing.

Around 1880, the whimsical and ingenious mechanical banks began to Still banks were modeled after human figures of all types. From left, Buster Brown and his dog Tige, baseball player, WWI sailor, and boy scout. Circa 1920-1923, they held only about 20 pennies and then had to be taken apart and emptied.

Glass banks like this clown were popular in the '20s, '30s and '40s. Many of them came with honey or syrup inside; when the bottle was empty, a cardboard liner was removed from the cap and coins could be inserted through the pre-cut slot.

appear and were produced in some 280 varieties over the years. They continue to delight today and are in such demand—and short supply—that many of them are now being reproduced. Copies are so authentic that some unscrupulous sellers who attempt to pass these off as originals have fooled more than one expert.

Current events and subjects of topical interest often influenced the subjects of these banks, which would perform amazing feats as an immediate reward for saving money. Among the most sought-after mechanical banks are Punch and Judy (1882), Teddy and the Bear (1907), Uncle Remus (1890), and the very rare Harlequin and Columbine. The most common antique mechanical is "Always Did 'Spise Dat Mule," which features a bucking mule that knocks its jockey on his head.

This cast iron dog called "Bee on my Bottom" was 7 inches tall and manufactured by Arcade, 1925.

The cast iron "still" banks (those that didn't move), also depicted timely characters and events. Made in more than 3000 kinds, they were not really very practical in that they usually held only about 20 or 30 pennies. For this reason they were also called "penny" banks. They usually had to be dismantled for emptying.

Glass banks came into vogue during the '20s and stayed around for several decades. Of course, many of them are still made today. Originally they came in some animal or character shape and were filled with honey, syrup or some other sweet and sticky substance. During the '50s, one famous variety came with fruit-flavored soft drink syrup inside. Conversion to a bank required nothing more than flipping a cardboard disc out of the pre-slotted cap...and, of course, a good washing.

Modern Banks

So-called "modern" banks are those produced from 1935 on. Both still and mechanical, they often took the shape of common objects: planes, ships, TV sets, jukeboxes, Jack Benny's vault, and many more. Both World Wars were responsible for their share of tanks, soldiers and other items.

Banks (the institution variety) often gave away savings banks as premiums to new customers. Their motives were other than totally generous, however, as they usually kept the keys so that savers had to bring the banks in to be opened and deposit the contents. Needless to say, most such banks were pried open over the years and ruined. Stores often gave away banks in the shape of things purchased (refrigerators, etc.), so that customers could use them to save up money for the time payments.

During the '40s, Disney characters began to predominate, and today we have the Peanuts Gang. These days banks still appear in every conceivable form, but not all of them will live on to become tomorrow's collectibles. Considering again the exorbitant prices of antique banks, beginning collectors, rather than looking back, might do better to look ahead.

In their book, "Collecting Tomorrow's Antiques Today," Norman Flayderman and Edna Lagerwall suggest that if you're going to begin collecting modern banks with an eye to future value, look for the following:

1. anything to do with space travel;
2. current comic strip characters;
3. well-known figures;
4. new inventions (computers, robots, etc.)
5. automobiles.

All such things help define our times and will therefore be of interest to tomorrow's collectors.

Miss Jones-Hill-Mr. Camp Wed

Miss Tommie Annette Jones-Hill became the bride of George Brinton Camp, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Howard Camp, of Russell, Ky., Saturday, June 23.

The ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. William Garda, of the Bellefont Presbyterian Church of Russell, in a garden setting at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Hill, on the Abbott Road. The altar arrangement and decorations conformed to the natural beauty of the landscape, with white lattice side panels intertwined with palm and native fern. The wedding arch was hung with white doves and bells. White urns filled with native fern and white chrysanthemums lined the enclosure which was flanked by a flowing brook and the green hillsides. The setting was completed by candelabra holding three evergreen scented candles, symbolizing faith, love and unity. The candles of faith and love were lit by bestman, John Avila, before the ceremony began. A program of nuptial music was performed on the piano by David Banner Leslie from a balcony overlooking the wedding scene. The soloist, Rebecca Haywood, also accompanied by Mr. Leslie, sang "The Lord's Prayer".

The mothers of the bride and groom were escorted to their seats by junior usher, John Thomas Hill, II, brother of the bride. The maid of honor and the bridesmaids entered the altar enclosure wearing identical formal gowns of apricot tinaseta, softly draped from a trapunto inset and mantle capes of apricot printed sheer fashioned with wedding ring collars. Each carried a single carnation with lace streamers. Flower girl, Susan Ross, niece of the groom, wore ivory sheer organza with a beige lace overlay trimmed in apricot with headpiece to match.

Miss Jones-Hill approached the altar on the arm of her father. Her traditional formal gown of delicate ivory organza was styled in A-line silhouette. Re-embroidered alencon lace traced with pearls sculpturing the illusion-effect yoke and empire waistline, accented the bodice created with tiny cap sleeves and high crown collar of petalled venise. Removable gauntlets heavily encrusted with pearled alencon appliques ended in bridal points over the wrists. The slender skirt, strewn with jewelled alencon medallions, and scalloped by venise at the hemline, extended into a chapel train. Designed for her, the bridal hat was crowned in matching ivory re-embroidered alencon lace, enriched by a cluster of silken roses, and overlaid with organza on the wateau brim. Wide streamers of gossamer handrolled ivory silk illusion drifted to her elbows from a french pouff in the back. She carried a cascade of white roses with apricot streamers and two crimson roses, which she presented to Mrs. Hill and Mrs. Camp.

Following the ceremony, the bride's parents held a reception in their honor. For the wedding ceremony and the reception, the bride's mother chose a formal-length peach silk gown styled with a Grecian draped neckline and wore white carnations on her shoulder. The groom's mother chose a formal-length green quiana gown and wore a wrist corsage.

Attendants to the bride were Marsha Lynn Skiff, of Ogdensburg, N.Y., maid of honor; Jennifer and Sherry Jones, sisters of the bride; Susie Wright and Paula M. Ousley, both of Prestonsburg, bridesmaids; Johanna Elizabeth Hill, sister of the bride, junior bridesmaid.

The groomsmen were Wendell Overcash and Mark Brown, both of Russell, Syd Knight, Cincinnati, Ohio, Mike Wallen, of Paintsville, and ringbearer was Stewart Andrew Ross, nephew of the groom, of Russell, Ky.

LEAVES HOSPITAL

Mrs. Lucretia O. Wicker, of Eastern, was released from the Lutheran Hospital, Ft. Wayne, Ind., Sunday, and is recuperating at the home of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Hicks, Mendon, Ohio.

Heavy Rains Increase Mosquitoes

If you are particularly susceptible to mosquitoes and spend much of your summer treating the effects of their vicious bites, then read on for some bad news.

Recent heavy rains in Kentucky, and in some areas widespread flooding, have encouraged the proliferation of mosquitoes in the state.

These insects are not only a nuisance because of their biting, but also because some species can transmit diseases such as St. Louis Encephalitis, says Chris Christensen, Extension entomologist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

According to Christensen, there are two groups of mosquitoes in Kentucky that could become a problem as a result of the wet weather. "The biology of these two groups is somewhat different, and thus, control measures are different," notes the specialist.

The Culex group is widely represented by the northern house mosquito. The females lay their eggs in water in rain barrels, bird baths, tin cans, old tires, car bodies, cisterns, eave troughs, catchment basins and any other small collections of water. Their lifecycle is short, 10-14 days.

"These mosquitoes are vicious biters and often invade homes to feed on humans," Christensen says, adding, "They are also bird feeders which provides the opportunity for them to transmit St. Louis Encephalitis from the bird reservoir to humans."

The other group of mosquitoes, the Aedes group, is represented by the flood water mosquito and the saltmarsh mosquito. The adult females of both types lay their eggs in the mud along streams or pools. Flooding triggers egg hatching and the larvae develop rapidly, becoming adults in eight to 10 days.

"Both these species are fierce day biters and can be a tremendous nuisance," says Christensen. They also are strong fliers and can be found many miles from their breeding sites.

As for control, the entomologist emphasizes, "If good widespread control of mosquitoes is to be successful, control should be a community-wide activity."

Populations should be evaluated to determine the species present, the breeding areas in the community should be catalogued, mapped and regularly monitored. A control program involving breeding site and larvae control supplemented by adulticiding can result in good mosquito control, according to the specialist.

"Obviously, it will be impossible to eliminate or change all breeding areas to prevent successful mosquito breeding," observes Christensen. Therefore, insecticides may be needed in the breeding areas. County agricultural Extension agents have information on insecticides labeled for mosquito larvae control.

Mosquito control around the home and farm can be partially successful through the use of good larvae control and selective adulticiding, according to the specialist.

To try to prevent mosquitoes from ever becoming adults, he advises eliminating breeding places around the home and farm by:

—Destroying or disposing of tin cans, old tires or other artificial water containers.

—Cleaning gutters and removing any standing water under or around structures.

—Changing water in bird baths at least twice a week and stocking ornamental pools with top feeding predacious fish.

—Filling or draining puddles; being sure ditches are not seeping and clearing vegetation to facilitate drainage.

—Clearing vegetation from pond edges to allow fish to eat mosquito larvae.

—Filling holes or draining them.

If adult mosquitoes are already a problem, controls can help greatly in reducing the pests. "Use barriers such as screening to prevent them from entering the house or other buildings," advises the entomologist. Aerosol insecticides can be used to control the mosquitoes that do get into the house.

Finally, repellents are very useful personal protection for people working or playing outdoors in mosquito infested areas. Several of these products are commercially available.

County Extension agents for agriculture have additional information on mosquito control measures and insecticides and their proper use.

INVITATION FOR BIDS

Sealed proposals will be received by the City of Wheelwright, Wheelwright, Ky., (Floyd County) on Thursday, August 30, 1979 at 7 p.m., at which time and place they will be publicly opened and read aloud for the furnishing of all materials and labor and performing all work as set forth by this Invitation for Bids, the Instructions to Bidders, the General Conditions of the Contract and the Specifications, prepared by the City of Wheelwright, Wheelwright, Kentucky.

THE WORK TO BE BID UPON: VARIOUS STREETS IN WHEELWRIGHT, KENTUCKY.

Contract documents may be examined at the following place: City Hall, City of Wheelwright, Wheelwright, Kentucky 41669.

Copies of the Documents, not to exceed two (2) sets, for the General Contractor, and his Major Sub-contractors may be secured from the City of Wheelwright, Wheelwright, Kentucky 41669 upon return of the Plans, Specifications, and other Documents, in good condition, within ten (10) days after the date of Bid Opening.

Bids received after the scheduled closing time for the reception of the Bids, will be returned unopened to the bidders.

In the event an award is made, and the successful bidder fails to furnish a satisfactory Performance Bond within fifteen (15) days after written notification of acceptance of the Proposal, and fails to execute a Contract for the construction of the work under the award, the City of Wheelwright shall have the right to forfeit such contracts.

DOT Asks for Comments On Citizen Participation Transportation Planning

The Department of Transportation is examining the need to improve citizen participation in planning of transportation projects backed by federal funds.

The first step was publication in the Aug. 9 Federal Register of an "Advance Notice of Proposed Policy on Citizen Participation in Transportation Planning," asking for comments and opinions.

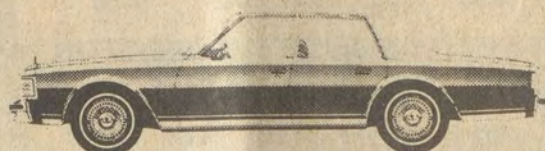

After a period of 60 days for public comment, DOT will review the comments and suggestions. The department plans to develop an expanded and strengthened policy if responses indicate one is needed.

DOT officials will also consult with national, state and local citizens' groups and individuals, as well as state and local officials. These consultations will take place around the United States, as well as in Washington.

Salyersville Changes Name For Founder's Day Observance

By HELEN PRICE STACY

If you are going to Salyersville just before or during Labor Day weekend, you will be going to Adamsville.

"Salyersville is to be proclaimed Adamsville the week before and during Labor Day weekend," says Connie Arnett Wireman, of the Magoffin County Historical Society.

The name change and many program activities are a part of homage to William "Uncle Billie" Adams during the society's first Founder's Day.

"In his time, Uncle Billie owned all the land where Salyersville now stands and donated part of the land to the county for public buildings."

Uncle Billie was the founder of Adamsville. The city was later named Salyersville in honor of Samuel Salyer, who was area representative to legislature when Magoffin county was formed in 1859-60.

The program on Saturday, Sept. 1, includes a parade at noon, directed by Magoffin Jaycees. The unveiling of a founder's market at Hall Community Center will follow about 2 p.m. Uncle Billie Adams' name will be the first to be engraved on the marker which is an Impala black granite pyramid imported from Africa. There are only two other markers like it in the world.

A street dance is scheduled at 9 that night and other events will fill the day. All activities are sponsored by the historical society, Jaycees, Kiwanis, Woman's Club and other groups.

An important guest will be Dorothy Amburgey Griffith, editor of the Adams Addenda and widely-known genealogist. A resident of St. Louis, Mo., Mrs. Griffith knows more about the Adams family than many people who have the name, says Mrs. Wireman.

A portrait of Uncle Billie is being donated to the historical society by Joe Mason. His wife Yvona is a great-granddaughter of Adams through Uncle Billie's daughter Jennessee's marriage to W. C. Kendall, of Morgan county. The Masons live in Oklahoma City, Okla.

"We plan to have Adamsville road markers on all roads leading to Salyersville," says Mrs. Wireman, "plus a banner across the street. An art show featuring area artists is one of our special features and displays of old photos, documents, tools, household and other items are planned for store windows and the library."

An Adams booklet containing Adams family history, deed records, Bible records, old letters and other related material will be on sale. There also will be souvenirs—knives, trays and wooden coins—with "Uncle Billie" logo.

This is expected to be one of the largest clan gatherings in the history of Magoffin county. Everyone, members of the Adams family or not, is invited to attend the first Founder's Day celebration at Salyersville. For further information, contact Mrs. Wireman, (606) 884-5825 or Todd Preston (606) 349-2527.

KET To Carry Live Special for Parents

Whether playschool or nursery school, kindergarten or first grade, starting school can be a child's first big experience away from home and parents. Misconceptions come easily to a young child, but if parents receive reassurances and have some of their own questions answered, they in turn can give reassurances and answer their child's questions. So feels Fred Rogers of "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood."

In a one-hour special, "Mr. Rogers Talks To Parents About School," airing Monday, August 27, at 9:00 p.m. (ET) on KET, Mr. Rogers attempts to provide those reassurances and answers for parents.

The program is broadcast live, and includes a section during which parents can phone a special studio number and ask their questions directly of Mr. Rogers while he's on the air.

Broadcaster Sandy Hill and educator Ellen Galinsky join this special.

MASTER COMMISSIONER'S SALE

FLOYD CIRCUIT COURT
CIVIL ACTION NO. 78-CI-741
The First National Bank of Prestonsburg, Ky. Plf.

VS. NOTICE OF SALE
Cola Vance and Judy Vance, Beaver, Ky. Defts.

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Floyd Circuit Court rendered at the June 14 term, 1979 in the above styled cause I shall proceed to offer for sale at the courthouse door in Prestonsburg, Kentucky, to the highest and best bidder, at public auction, on the 24th day of August, 1979 at 10:30 o'clock a.m., same being a day of the regular term of the Floyd Circuit Court, for cash or upon a credit of six months, the following described property to-wit:

That certain tract or parcel of land, lying and being on the waters of Clear Creek in Floyd County, Kentucky, and being the same property conveyed Cola Vance and Judy Vance by deed from James Tackett and Elma Tackett, dated May 29, 1976, and recorded in Deed Book 225, page 443, Floyd County Court Clerk's Office, and more particularly described as follows, viz:

Beginning at the creek at Bill Hunt's line; thence up the hill to twin poplars; thence up the hill with Bill Hunt's line to the top of the hill; thence down the hill with said line to Lee Mathew's line; thence down the hill with Mathew's line to Odus Miller's line; thence around the hill with said line to a sugar tree marked; thence down the hill to an Elm and Clear Creek; thence down the creek to the beginning, so as to include all land in said boundary.

The amount of money to be raised by this sale shall be in the principal sum of $4,557.54 with interest thereon at 8 1/2 percent annually from the 29th day of January, 1978 until date of judgment and interest at 8 percent per annum from the 14th day of June, 1979 until satisfied and the costs of this action, including costs of advertising of this sale and the fees and commissions for conducting this sale.

For the purchase price the purchaser must execute bond with approved surety or sureties, bearing legal interest from the day of sale until paid and having the force and effect of a judgment with a lien retained upon said property as a further security. Bidders will be prepared to comply with these terms.

Given under my hand, this 6th day of August, 1979.

Ky. Firefighters Draw Praise

The Kentucky Division of Forestry's firefighters who are battling blazes now in Montana have received commendations from the U.S. Forestry Service, according to Gov. Julian M. Carroll and Frank Harscher, secretary of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection.

Harscher said Kentucky's contingent of 38 firefighters, including finished extinguishing their second forest fire Sunday night at Grant's Creek, 10 miles north of Missoula, Mont.

The crews flew out of Knoxville nine days ago for Butte, Mont., where they fought a fire in the Deer Lodge National Forest. Harscher said the firefighters had that blaze extinguished last Wednesday night.

According to Forestry Division Director Elmore Grim, the firefighters were then sent to the fire near Missoula, which they finished fighting Sunday night. They are currently awaiting assignment to still another fire in the Missoula area, Grim said.

The Kentucky crews have been putting in 14-hour days in the rough, canyon country, according to Grim. He said the fires they have been fighting have been at very high elevations in remote areas where there are no roads.

Grim said the awards by the U.S. Forestry Service were for outstanding firefighting ability and service. He said the state forestry division also has certificates to award the firefighters.

Harscher said he and Grim plan to meet the crews when they return to Kentucky to present them with personal commendations.

"We're very proud of these people," Gov. Carroll said. "They have been working 14-hour days on the fire lines at the head of these fires. They are very tired, but they're staying on to help fight additional fires. They are a true credit to the Commonwealth of Kentucky."

MARTIN NAMED FALCON POSTMASTER

Mrs. Pearl Gore Martin, of Estill, was appointed postmaster at Falcon, Kentucky in Magoffin county, June 29, of this year.

Mrs. Martin has been an employee of the U.S. Postal Service for 23 years serving as Postal Clerk at Estill and Lackey, in Floyd county.

Mrs. Martin and her husband, Joe Martin, are making plans to move to Salyersville, Ky. early this fall.

Named to Who's Who

Gregory Arthur Isaac, a recent graduate of Wheelwright High School, has been nominated for the second year for National recognition in Who's Who Among American High School Students. He has also been awarded a presidential scholarship to Pikeville College, the highest academic scholarship provided by the college.

Greg is the son of Mrs. Betty Lee Isaac and the late Arthur Isaac, of Wheelwright. He will enter college this fall majoring in pre-law.

D.A.V. TO MEET AT AUXIER FRIDAY

Potential of Herbs, Spices Expanded on Overseas Trip

Five hundred years ago, Christopher Columbus crossed an ocean in search of spices and herbs. Last month, two Kentuckians also crossed the Atlantic to learn about European production of the prized plants—ranging from the chamomile flower to ginseng—so they can explore the plants' commercial potential.

Tom Ray, executive director of the Governor's Council on Agriculture, and Dr. C. R. Roberts, a professor of horticulture at the University of Kentucky, attended the second International Congress Symposium on Spices and Medicinal Plants in Budapest, Hungary.

Roberts presented a paper on ginseng at the conference, which was sponsored by the international Society for Horticultural Science.

Ray hopes improved production of the spices and herbs will add some zest to Kentucky agriculture.

Currently, American companies such as Helene Curtis Industries and McCormick & Co. Inc. must import most of the herbs and spices they use. America just isn't producing much in this area, Roberts said.

The herb and spice market may be profitable. Kentucky is already earning between $5 million and $6 million annually from ginseng sales. Ginseng, which grows wild in mountain areas, is selling for $130 per pound, Roberts said. It would be easy to find more markets if production were increased, he said.

Roberts observed several other plants in Europe he thinks can adapt to Kentucky's climate.

They include Gentiana lutea, a flavoring ingredient used in liqueurs; Pasiflora incarnata, which is used in soft drinks, and Salvia sclarea, an oil used in wine. Several herbs are said to have medical benefits, such as Digitalis lanata, which is supposed to be good for heart troubles, and Silybum marianum, recommended for liver diseases. The chamomile flower is also valued for its therapeutic effects, although it can be used for tea.

After identifying the plants most likely to thrive in Kentucky's climate, Roberts will test them for their adaptability to the soil, temperatures and growing season in plots.

The next step is to determine if the plants can be grown economically, Ray explained.

During the conference, both men met herb and spice buyers. The council will work to promote production of the spices and herbs and will try to find markets for the plants.

There is definitely a trend toward use of organic materials in products, Roberts said. The United States has used more synthesized or artificial flavorings in the past, but it seems to be buying more organic products, he said.

A secondary objective of the three-week trip was to observe vegetable production methods in western Europe and Scandinavia. The men saw large cucumber pickers and a fluid gel seeding technique that helps tomatoes grow faster.

Roberts said observing vegetable greenhouse production gave him some ideas for reducing energy loss in the winter.

It will take research to develop the ideas and adapt them to Kentucky, Roberts said.

"Kentucky's economy is moving toward a $4 billion agricultural economy," Ray said. "For our agriculture to achieve, we need to find new ways to develop it."

EKCEP Asks
$22.55 Million

The Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program, Inc. (EKCEP), with central offices in Hazard, is applying for $22,553,430 under various titles of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

EKCEP is the prime sponsor for U.S. Department of Labor employment and training administration activities in 23 Eastern Kentucky counties, including Floyd. If approved, the funds will be used to continue the employment program in these 23 counties during Fiscal Year 1980.

It is estimated that these funds will be used to provide services to approximately 11,000 persons in the area served by EKCEP. Specific activities will include classroom training, on-the-job training, and work experience under Title IIB, public service employment under Titles IID and VI, youth activities under Title IV, and increased private sector involvement under Title IVV.

The complete grant application package, which constitutes the Comprehensive Employment and Training Plan, and a comparison of performance against the prior year's plan through the most recent quarter, may be reviewed at the central office of EKCEP at 625 Memorial Drive in Hazard between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Questions and comments may be directed to Virgil Osborne, EKCEP Executive Director, at the same address, or by calling 436-5751.

Earnings for Many Near Limit

By JAMES D. KELLY
Area Social Security Director

This is the time of year when the earnings of many working people who receive social security benefits are approaching the point where their benefits may be affected.

Once a person's earnings exceed the annual limit, $1 in benefits is generally withheld for each $2 of earnings. The 1979 annual limits are $3,480 for people under 65 and $4,500 for people 65 or over.

Many people getting benefits plan to earn no more than the limit but for one reason or another, their earnings exceed it and they have to repay benefits that were incorrectly paid.

That is the reason, Kelly said, people should take a little time to review their earnings for the first part of 1979 and make sure of where they stand.

One thing people should keep in mind is that gross earnings, not just take home pay, count towards the annual limit. Remembering this point will keep many people from going over the limit, Kelly said.

Another important point is that it is when wages are earned, not paid, that decides whether they should be counted. These earnings allowances do not apply to persons drawing Disability Insurance Benefits or Supplemental Security Income Benefits. Earnings of any amount must be reported in those cases, cautioned Kelly.

More information about how earnings affect social security benefits can be found in the leaflet, "If you work after you retire." Copies can be obtained at the Prestonsburg social security office, located on U.S. 23, near the entrance to Jenny Wiley State Park. The telephone number is listed in your local directory.

Older Workers Owed $14 m. for Job Bias

A record $14 million was found due to 4,111 individuals in the 40 to 65 age group who suffered discrimination in employment during fiscal 1978 because of their age, the Labor Department reported.

Income acutely restored to persons who suffered age discrimination in employment was $4.8 million. This amount, also a record high, was paid to 1,363 older workers and job applicants.

These findings are among highlights of the department's annual report to Congress on the administration of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) of 1967.

The act prohibits discrimination because of age in hiring, job retention, compensation, and other terms, conditions, or privileges of employment. On January 1, 1979, the upper age limit of protected individuals was raised from 65 to 70 years of age.

"While it cannot be said that age discrimination has been wiped out, many of the objectives aimed at minimizing this form of discrimination have been achieved as a result of 11 years of enforcement efforts," noted Secretary of Labor, Ray Marshall. "A major purpose of the act has been effectively implemented—to promote employment of older persons based on their ability rather than age."

Marshall's annual report listed some of the achievements accomplished since the act became effective in June 1968:

- a much greater awareness on the part of employers, employees and applicants of their rights and responsibilities under the act;
- a vast reduction in the most obvious types of prohibited practices, particularly illegal advertising;
- evolution of effective administration and enforcement mechanisms in a new field of antidiscrimination law;
- the handling of an increased enforcement workload, for example:

- the number of complaints received by the Department of Labor increased from 1,000 in fiscal year 1969 to almost 4,300 in fiscal year 1978;
- from fiscal year 1969 through fiscal year 1978, enforcement activity disclosed over 15,000 employees and applicants for employment who had been discriminated against and who were due over $51 million in damages, and
- income restored to individuals exceeded over $16 million.

—precedent setting interpretations developing from over 450 court actions instituted by the department between June 1968 and the end of 1978, of which 305 were concluded with 267 wholly or partially in favor of the department; and

—an increase—influenced by the federal statute, its enforcement and court actions—in the number of state age discrimination laws from a total of 23 (21 states, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands) in May 1965 to 44 at the end of 1978, out of a potential 58 jurisdictions covered by the Federal statute.

Many workers benefited from additional job opportunities, reemployment, on-the-job gains such as improved future wages and pensions, as well as the receipt of back wages and damages, it was reported.

FLOYD CIRCUIT COURT First Federal Savings and Loan of Paintsville, Ky. Plaintiff

Against...NOTICE OF SALE. CR13,388 Phillip Flannery and Willa Sue Flannery, his wife, and Floyd County... Defendants

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Floyd Circuit Court rendered at the May 18 term, 1979 in the above styled cause I shall proceed to offer for sale at the Courthouse door in Prestonsburg, Kentucky, to the highest and best bidder, at public auction, on the 31st day of August 1979 at 10:00 o'clock a.m. same being a day of the regular term of the Floyd Circuit Court, for cash or upon a credit of six months, the following described property to-wit:

That certain tract or parcel of land lying and being on the waters of Little Paint Creek in Floyd County, Kentucky, and being the same property conveyed to Phillip Flannery and Willa Sue Flannery, his wife, by deed from Otto Spencer, et ux, dated March 5, 1973, recorded in Deed Book 211, page 500, records of Floyd County Court Clerk's Office, and being more particularly described as follows:

Beginning at a walnut tree a little above Cooledge Collins house, going West following branch up to the corner of the garden where the old house used to set; following a wire fence on the right of the branch and a mulberry tree; thence with a wire fence; thence to a white oak tree near the branch; thence making a right turn following the wire fence to the cemetery; thence joining Golda Collins and G. C. Whitaker on top of the ridge; thence going northwest following the ridge to Tommy Snips line; thence to a marked rock to a low gap in the head of the branch; thence following Tommy Snips line on top of the ridge to a water oak marked to B. W. Watkins line straight to another marked water oak to Mack Leake line down the point to a marked chestnut oak following the wire fence back to the walnut tree at Cooledge Collins house.

The amount of money to be raised by this sale shall be in the principal sum of $17,725.23 with interest thereon at 8 percent annually from the 18 day of May 1979 until satisfied and the costs of this action, including costs of advertising of this sale and the fees and commissions for conducting this sale.

For the purchase price the purchaser must execute bond with approved surety or sureties, bearing legal interest from the day of sale until paid and having the force and effect of a judgment with a lien retained upon said property as a further security. Bidders will be prepared to comply with these terms.

Given under my hand, this 9 day of August 1979.

LIFE GUARDS, SPECIAL GUESTS OF ALLEN WOMAN'S CLUB

The Allen Woman's Club held its August meeting at the home of Mrs. Paul Spencer. A devotion was read by Fern Ankrom. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Vice-President Mary Hinchman and the treasurer's report by Pat DeRossett.

Special guests of the evening were Phillip Elliott and Kenny Crisp, both life guards at Archer Park. The two, who are also Red Cross certified and have been life guards for five years, talked about water safety and rescue and demonstrated various rescues in the Spencer's pool. The program was very informative and appreciated by the members.

The club members are selling coupons for family pictures to be taken at the fire department Aug. 25. Part of the money will go to the fire department. Any family interested in having a picture taken, can call Fern Ankrom, Chairman, 874-2525 or any other woman's club member.

The president, Anita Lafferty, reported on the district president's workshop at the Floyd County Library. She announced the dates of the fall board meeting, Sept. 24-26, and the fall district meeting Oct. 20, 1979.

Co-chairman for the talent program are Lois Marshall and Nancy Marcum. Co-chairmen for the Red, White, and Blue Pageant are Bonita Porter and Diana Reed.

A special meeting will be at the clubhouse Aug. 21, to discuss the picture and talent programs.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Bonnie Spencer and Carol Jo Collins, to Hollie Blanton, Diana Reed, Anita Lafferty, Pat DeRossett, Joan Adams, Mary Hinchman, Belle Conn, Fern Ankrom, and guests, Carolyn Branham and Paula Spencer.

Producer Price Indexes

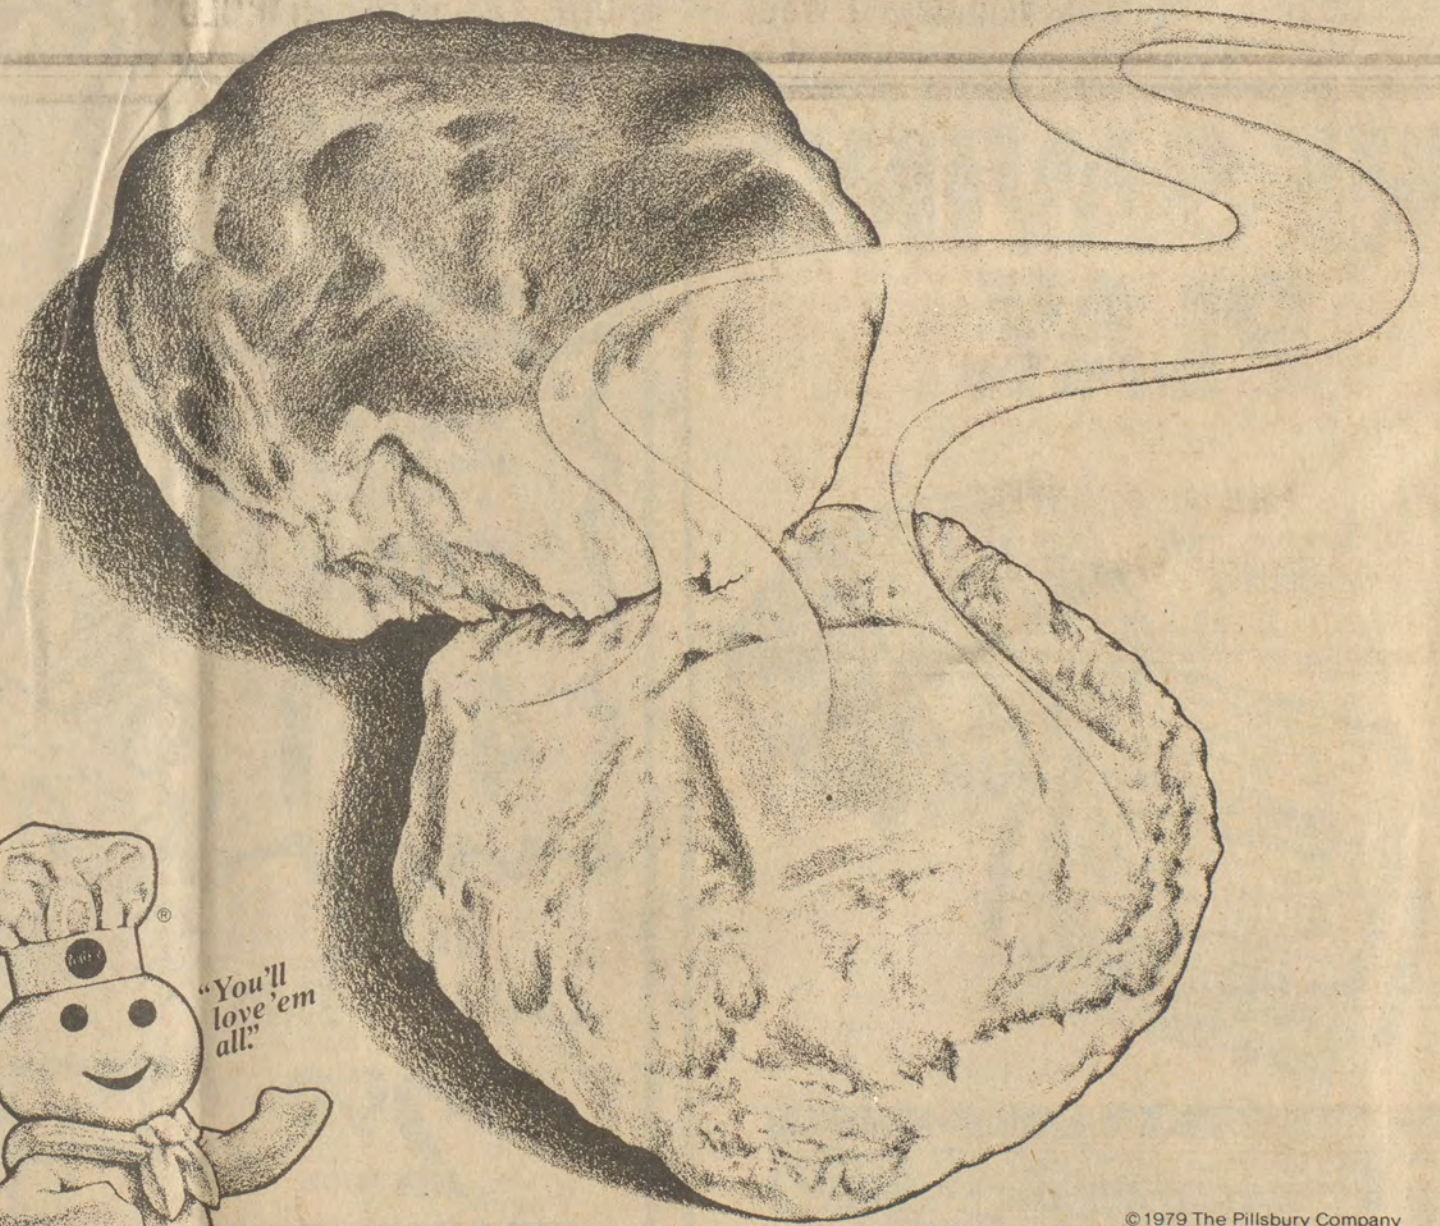

—July 1979

Washington—The Producer Price Index for Finished Goods rose 1.1 percent from June to July on a seasonally adjusted basis, the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported. The July advance was considerably larger than the increases in either May or June. Price increases for intermediate (semifinished) goods and crude materials also accelerated.

Among finished goods, prices for consumer goods rose much more than in June. Food prices were unchanged following 3 consecutive months of falling prices, and prices for finished goods excluding foods rose even more than in recent months. The increase in capital equipment prices also accelerated.

Before seasonal adjustment, the Producer Price Index for Finished Goods rose 1.1 percent to 215.8 percent (1967-100). Over the year, the Finished Goods Price Index increased 10.1 percent. The finished consumer foods index was up 6.7 percent from July 1978 to July 1979, the index for finished consumer goods excluding foods rose 12.8 percent, and capital equipment prices were 8.9 percent higher than a year ago. The Producer Price Index for intermediate goods increased 13.1 percent over the year, and prices for crude materials advanced 17.1 percent.

Wedding Anniversary

Miles and Alma Thomas, of Dwale, recently observed their 50th wedding anniversary.

They were married August 21, 1929 in Prestonsburg by Judge Edd Hill. Mr. Thomas is the son of the late John J. and Margaret Compton Thomas. Mrs. Thomas is the daughter of the late William Callison and Emma Roberts Callison Scalf, of Betsy Layne. They have resided in Floyd county all of their married life and have six children—three daughters and three sons. They also have 18 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Mr. Thomas retired from the C & O Railway August 31, 1971 where he worked for 47 years.

On August 18, in celebration of their anniversary, a buffet dinner was served at their home for many of their friends and family. Later in the evening cake and punch were served. They received many lovely gifts and those of their family and friends who could not attend showed their affection by sending cards, flowers, and calling.

Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Harold V. Thomas, of Flatwoods; Mr. and Mrs. Dean Thomas, Mike and Jeff, of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. Bill McGuire, Billy, Tony, Pat and Mark, of Louisa; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Nelson, John and Kevin, of Prestonsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Rice and Angela, of Dwale; Mr. and Mrs. William P. Stevens, Tina and Lesa, of Ashland; Mrs. Deborah Stevens and Amy, Miss Juanita Stevens, of Catlettsburg; Mr. and Mrs. Hobert Francis, of Ashland; Mr. and Mrs. Larry Crawford and children, of Ashland; Mrs. Edna Callison, of Allen, Mrs. Delores Bradley, of Eastern; Mr. and Mrs. George Nelson, Jr., and Lee Ann, of Van Lear; Mrs. Sabra Akers, Mrs. Bell Derossert, Mrs. Verna Sword, Mrs. Ida Pritchard, Miss Iris Calhoun, all of Dwale.

National Geographic's 'Treasure' Returns to KET

Hurricane winds struck the Florida Keys September 6, 1622, sinking the treasure-laden galleon Atocha. Now, three and a half centuries later, an ex-diver shop owner, Mel Fisher, is bringing her millions of dollars in treasure to the surface, piece by precious piece. The story of Fisher's quest for Atocha and her lucrative cargo—now worth perhaps $100 million—is the subject of "Treasure," the "National Geographic Special," returning to KET Thursday, August 30 at 8 p.m. (ET). The hour-long documentary is repeated Sunday, September 2 at 12 noon (ET). Fisher's quest for the Atocha has taken six years. Working off the Florida Keys with a treasure salvage company, his search has been marked by frustration, the tragic loss of his wife and teenage son, and discovery of the galleon's location. Although Fisher and his crew have salvaged a small fortune in archeological relics and gold and silver, the whereabouts of yet undiscovered millions in treasure keep both the mystery and the search alive. And each day as he searches, Fisher vows, "Today's the day."

Rice's Crispies . . .

Belfry Squad Worries Haywood

By KENNY RICE
The little girl's voice answered, "Hello." I identified myself and asked her if her dad was busy, that I wanted to talk to him about the upcoming football season.

She said her dad wasn't busy and she would call him to the phone. In the background I could hear her telling her dad I was calling. Five minutes passed and there was no response at the other end of the line.

Finally, Prestonsburg football coach Phillip Haywood picked up the receiver. "I hope I haven't bothered you, Phillip," I halfway apologized.

"No, Kenny you didn't. Actually I can't bear to talk about the upcoming season. Every time I turn around I hear about another one of our opponents having everybody back and being better than ever, I'm afraid we're going to be embarrassed in front of the home fans this Friday. Belfry is picked by some to win the Class AAA title this year, and we open with them," he sighed. "We'll have to play hard to win two games this year."

After some persuading, Haywood agreed that his duty was to let the public know about this year's edition of the Blackcats. With that thought in mind, he began to tell me about his fifth team at Prestonsburg.

"Our line has more depth than any other year since I've been here. But they haven't been getting off the ball like they should. The key to our success this season is how well we can control the line of scrimmage. Our offensive line needs to get off the ball and block and our defensive line must pursue better. We need to be quicker on the line," Haywood noted.

Haywood had just learned that a key lineman, Keith Colvin (6-3, 180) who played tight end and defensive end, would be lost for a month because of illness. That made him even bluer. He then regained composure to talk about the rest of the offensive line.

"Lee Carter (6 ft., 225) is our tight side tackle. He's done a pretty good job so far in the preseason. We're still waiting on the split side tackle. We have five men who might play the position but no one has quite satisfied us yet. Ray Marcum (5-11, 220), Terry Click (6-2, 235), Raymond Gibson (6-1, 255), Alan Frazier (5-10, 200) and John Burchett (5-11, 220) are trying to decide who'll start at the other tackle.

"At the guards, Bill Greer (6-2, 220) has an inside track at one position. Lonnie May (5-11, 175), Joe Frazier (5-11, 185) and Mark McKenzie (5-10, 175) are being counted on at guards, also. Bobby Wells (5-8, 200) is at center. Marcum has seen action in scrimmages at the center spot and Sam Huffman (5-10, 160) and B. J. Sturgill (5-10, 160) give us depth at center," Haywood said.

With Colvin out for at least three games, the tight end spot is open with Jody Collins (6-1, 165), Danny Daniels (5-10, 170) and Gerald DeRossett (6-1, 180) vying for the position. Greg Haywood (6 ft., 155) is the leader at the split end side of the line. He has been improving daily, according to Coach Haywood. Richard Burchett (5-11, 155) and Michael Flanagan (5-11, 140) provide back up strength.

In the backfield, last year's quarterback Daniels may become a receiver. Jack Wells (6-1, 175) has improved "150 percent from last year," Haywood said. The coach would not say who will get the starting nod at quarterback Friday night. Bonafide all-state candidate, Dewey Layne (6-1, 215), opens at fullback. He is backed up by Desi Whitt (5-8, 180) and John Gilliam (5-10, 180). Returning starter Tom Hastings (5-11, 175) is one halfback and Dwayne Rodebaugh (5-10, 190) is a tentative starter at the other half of the wishbone. Rodebaugh is recovering from an injury and may not start Friday. Randy Tincher (6 ft., 175) is being counted on to see action in the backfield along with Andrew McClanahan (5-9, 160) and Greg Slone (5-9, 150).

While Prestonsburg looks pretty solid on paper, Haywood points out, "Most of the offense is back from last year but we are still a young team. We have some juniors and sophomores playing important positions for us. How well they come along is a key."

On defense, Layne and Rodebaugh are among the best linebackers in the state. Layne is being looked at by several colleges, as is Rodebaugh. Rodebaugh, however, has not played defense in either of Prestonsburg's two scrimmages because of injury. Two youngsters, Marcum and Gilliam, are "playing very aggressive," and they boost the linebacking corps.

Greer has the starting assignment at nose guard but he is receiving pressure from Whitt. Tommy Dillon (5-6, 200) will help out in the middle of the line. Daniels will see action at end. Although he did not play the position last year, he did start there as a sophomore. May, Frazier, Collins and McKenzie will play at ends this year. There is the same depth at tackle as there is at end. Click and Burchett appear to be starting at tackles with Gibson, Frazier and Carter supporting them.

In the secondary, the depth is not so available. Ralph Gilliam (6ft., 160) is returning to the quick cornerback spot. Richard Burchett is expected to see action there also. McClanahan, Tincher and Mark Baldridge (5-9, 160) are vying for the strong corner slot. At safeties, Haywood and Jack Wells return to the positions they played so well as sophomores.

The kicking game is strong with Rodebaugh handling point-after and field goals. Haywood wants to improve on punt and kickoff returns. He also wants better coverage on kicks.

As for the schedule, Haywood says, "I'm not even looking past the first three games (Belfry, Pikeville and Johnson Central). Every game is tough. Our team needs to be more aggressive for us to win even two games against this schedule. Our trouble is our players are too nice. I just hope they don't get arrested for impersonating cheerleaders this season. We got to get off the ball faster and be more aggressive."

I thanked Haywood for his time and wished him luck this season. He closed by saying, "I'm glad to get this off my chest. I just hope we are aggressive and don't get embarrassed."

Kickoff time is 8 p.m. Friday. Prestonsburg fans, don't pull out the hankerchiefs just yet.

TOURNEY WINNERS
National Mines defeated Pety's Furniture, 13-11, to win the Class A Regional tournament at Archer Park. Each team advanced to the Class A state tourney held at Paducah over the weekend.

The softball season isn't over now, however, Archer Park will be the site for the annual Eastern Kentucky Labor Day tourney which officially ends the softball season locally.

Floyd Team Wins Pike Golf Tourney

James Turner, of Hueysville, and team members, Burt Duff, Buddy Mahan, and Darrell Johnson, won the Walter Hagen Sectional Golf Tourney held Tuesday, August 14, at Green Meadows Country Club near Pikeville. They will compete in the state finals to be held in Lexington, September 25.

The tourney was sponsored by the American Cancer Society, Floyd County Chapter, and all proceeds will go to further work of the society.

BABE RUTH OFFICERS ELECTED

At the July meeting of the Floyd County Babe Ruth Association the following officers were elected:

Lee Frazier, president; Harold Case, vice-president; Elisha Branham, vice president; treasurer, Nancy Slone; secretary, Arlene Cecil.

Win Awards at Cheerleaders Clinic

McDowell varsity cheerleaders who recently attended the NCA cheerleaders' clinic, held on the campus of the University of Kentucky. The cheerleaders participated in a week of activity under the direction of the National Cheerleader Association staff. While there they won the Spirit Stick, Super Squad Award, three superior ribbons, and one excellent ribbon.

The group includes Renee Stumbo, Jackie Stumbo, Betty Moore, Liz Hamilton, Pam Akers, Rhoda Hall, Terri Tackett, Patty Akers.

Betsy Layne Majorettes

The Betsy Layne Majorettes recently traveled to The University of Tennessee in Knoxville to enter competition. They once again were awarded the second place trophy. They are, from left to right, standing: Cathy Johnson, Jonnie Syck, Missy Reynolds, Melody Conn, Lisa Meade. Kneeling are Lisa Williams, Shelia Watson and Anita Smith.

Fish Fry Tourney, Prizewinners Named

The team of Sam and John Huffman, of Prestonsburg, won what was hailed as the Floyd county horseshoe pitching championship last Sunday at the annual fish fry staged by the Dewey Lake Fish & Game Club at its Stratton Branch grounds. Second place went to Sam and Tim Goble, of Auxier.

In the bait-casting tournament Stuart E. Stephens, of Prestonsburg, edged Bill Ray Collins, also of Prestonsburg, 92 to 91, for the title. The women's division was won by Zeta Martin, of Langley.

Winners of prizes given by the club: First prize, Zenith color TV, Bill Gullett, Cannel City; second, Remington shotgun, M. C. Ousley, Martin; third, black powder Kentucky long rifle, Eli Schoolcraft, Prestonsburg; fourth, Garcia Ambassador reel, Carl Little, McDowell; fifth, Igloo cooler, Eric Herrin, Prestonsburg; sixth, Coleman propane stove, Darcus Howard, David; seventh, Stanley thermos, Larry Harris, Ypsilanti, Mich.; eighth, Buck folding hunting knife, Joey Hyden, Martin.

Gary May, of Prestonsburg, was awarded a Remington shotgun for selling the winning first place ticket on the color TV.

Prestonsburg, Belfry Open Season, Friday

The Belfry Pirates will be coming to Prestonsburg Friday night, boasting a strong football team that many are predicting to win the state in Class AAA.

Prestonsburg's Head Football Coach Phillip Haywood agrees. He said, "They are going to be awfully tough. They have everybody back from last year, including two potential all-staters in Childers, running back, and Allen, tackle. They have good size, they're quick, they have an explosive offense and a tough defense. They could beat us by 40. I just hope we can stay on the field with them."

Vintage pessimism from Coach Haywood? Not so, he says. "Really, this is supposed to be the best team Belfry has ever had," he said.

But what of the Blackcats? Prestonsburg last only two seniors from last year's squad and word is spreading that the Blackcats may be able to play pretty tough themselves. Coach Haywood said, "Our players have been working hard and have a good attitude, but, basically, we're still a young team. We don't have that many seniors, and we'll be playing an awful lot of juniors and sophomores."

The thing Coach Haywood is concerned about is quickness and aggressiveness. "We're just not very quick off the ball and I'm not sure if we will hit anybody or not. We've improved in these areas somewhat, but I don't know if we've improved enough to even get on the same field with Belfry," he said.

Prestonsburg and Belfry will square off at 8 p.m. in the opening game of the season for the two rivals.

Travel Line

That Travel Brochure-A Big If

The photographer's job is to idealize the resort. A sunset light may hide peeling paint defects of older buildings. The room with the best beach view and newest furnishings obviously will be the one photographed. If the swimming pool is tiny, perhaps the photographer will take only a close-up of a bikini-clad beauty on a diving board.

It's usually the extremely low price featured on the cover of a travel brochure that lures you into buying a travel package. But it is rare when that figure is anything more than a base onto which you must add the so-called "extras" which turn out to be necessities.

Your best protection is to study brochures very carefully. Don't judge an offer by the pictures or the purple prose. Read the section entitled "General Conditions." It usually contains the finer print and more candidly spells out what is and is not included on the trip.

You're probably going to put down money in advance for a destination or resort you've never seen, so select folders from a travel agent's rack that convey information.

Misrepresentations or actual frauds are rare. They do occur, however. Tired old travel phrases such as "our courteous staff caters to your every dream" or "spacious, superbly furnished rooms," or "distinguished cuisine for the most discriminating taste" don't give you any useful facts. Almost any hotel, dude ranch or sea-worthy vessel could use these phrases.

Prices can be confusing, too. To avoid costly surprises, add up all charges in the brochure that are applicable to a particular trip. The low price on the cover may seem like quite a bargain, but look for the footnotes. For example:

PLUS TAX AND SERVICES: This could add $30 or more to a price up to $250.

DOUBLE OCCUPANCY: Most resort and tour prices are based on two people in a room. You'll pay more if you're traveling alone.

PLUS AIR FARE: This means that a major cost of your vacation is not included in that low price on the pretty cover.

NATIONAL HOLIDAY SUPPLEMENT: You'll pay an additional premium for vacationing on one of the new three-day weekends.

SUMMER SUPPLEMENT: You will pay an extra fee if you travel from June through September. This also applies for the Winter Supplement at fashionable winter ski resorts.

How do you find a tour bargain? When you've at last decided which area you want to visit, gather all the folders from your local travel agent or write to several competitive tour companies. Check exactly what's included in the price. Three meals a day or a roll and instant coffee? What kind of sightseeing excursions? Bus or walking? What about admission to museums, theaters, special events? All transfers, tips, and service charges?

With all the information before you, you can begin to make meaningful comparisons among the tours. Some tour prices are exceptionally low for one reason: they've been "stripped down" to sell for that low price. There's nothing wrong with buying one of these tours, as long as you know what you're getting—and not getting.

Make careful comparisons. More expensive tours that cover most of your traveling costs may turn out to be the best bargains.

And if you have to cancel? Read the "Conditions" or "General Information" page of the folder to see if you have to pay a cancellation fee if you don't take the tour you've purchased. Check if you get a refund if you skip certain places on the tour such as some fancy dinners or a nightclub show.

These "conditions" may be set in small type, but it pays to read them carefully for your own protection.

Students should be aware of any charter program advertised as "a formal academic study course abroad" with courses "equivalent to" a half credit or for which "many schools will allow" a half credit. Teachers should guard against soliciting for these affairs in return for a free trip. Study group charters are authorized only to year-round colleges and schools empowered to grant degrees or diplomas.

In checking vacation ads, remember that the Consumer Protection Law states that the highest AND lowest prices must be given in equal type size. If you think you are being gypped, contact your nearest Department of Consumer Affairs, and ask for one of their consumer fraud investigators.

Overall, keep in mind that resolving any questions you may have about the operations of a tour will make your trip more pleasant and prevent disappointment.

Governor's Garden Produces Vegetables for the Elderly

An idea of Gov. Julian Carroll's has borne fruit, so to speak.

The governor's garden at the Frankfort Career Development Center has been producing vegetables for the county's senior citizens for three years.

Inmates at the minimum-security facility grow vegetables on a five-acre plot and deliver them to the Frankfort Senior Citizens Center, which is located in the basement of the Southern Hotel on Second Street in Frankfort.

Carroll had the idea for the garden while the Career Development Center was still under construction, according to Gordon O'Banion, administrative assistant in the Department of Justice. O'Banion first coordinated the project for the governor's office. The garden has since become one of the operations of the farm services division of the Bureau of Corrections.

Garden plots at the Career Development Center also are made available to senior citizens in the county who are able to maintain a garden. Five people have their own gardens there this summer.

Viola Brawner, director of the Franklin County Council on Aging, praised the project highly. "It's just wonderful," she said. "We use a part of the vegetables at the Senior Citizens Center in our free lunch program."

"We feed from 225 to 250 people a day. Our cook picks out what she needs, and the rest is distributed to the senior citizens who can use it."

From 150 to 200 senior citizens turn out each Wednesday at 11:30 a.m. behind the Southern Hotel to pick through the produce. Within an hour, nothing is left but empty bushel baskets.

Nora Hungate, correctional officer at the Career Development Center, supervises the inmates who work the garden. Two inmates work fulltime in the garden, and two more assist in harvesting the produce.

"It's the best part of my job," Hungate said. "I love doing it. So far this year we have delivered 401 bushels of vegetables to the senior citizens. We raise 13 different kinds—eggplants, tomatoes, potatoes, squash—you name it."

"I wish they could do this in every county."

Receives Plaque

Lloyd Wells, chairman of the Floyd County Conservation District, presented L. R. Johnson with a distinguished service plaque for his outstanding service to the Floyd County Conservation District.

Mr. Johnson graduated from Berea College and did one year of graduate work at the University of Kentucky.

He started his career with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in July, 1935. He also worked at Dixon, Morganfield and Flemingsburg, Ky. before transferring to Prestonsburg in 1951. Johnson retired from the Soil Conservation Service in 1965 after a distinguished career.

Mr. Johnson was elected Chairman of the Floyd County Conservation District in May, 1972 and resigned from that position in April, 1979.

Johnson married Edith Forester in 1929. They have four children: Cloyd Johnson, pharmacist in Prestonsburg; Larry Johnson, chemical engineer, in Indonesia; Mrs. Carol Hicks and Mrs. Linda Marshall, both of Richmond, Kentucky. They have three grandchildren.

Farmers To Report '79 Crop, Land Use

Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Very shortly, the (ASCS) office will be mailing out double-postcards to a number of farmers in the county asking for a report of their crops in 1979 and the uses of their land, such as pasture and hay.

The card will have a detachable portion on which the farmer will list his crops and land uses and the number of acres he has of each. It will be self-addressed and postage paid. All he has to do is fill in the information and return the detachable part to the ASCS Office.

It is very important for future programs that ASCS have this information. Anyone who receives a card is asked to fill it in and return it to the ASCS Office.

If anyone has any question about this, or any other ASCS Program, he can call 886-2802 between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

Sports Television Series To Honor Two Kentuckians

Two Kentuckians, Dr. Roger W. Barbour, University of Kentucky zoology professor, and James O. Moynahan, resident manager of the state Ballard County Wildlife Management Area, have been nominated to be honored on the nationally syndicated Sports Afield television series which last season was seen on 75 stations across the nation.

Barbour, nominated along with Moynahan by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, was born at Morehead in 1919 and began his teaching career at what is now Morehead State University in 1939. He joined the faculty of the University of Kentucky in 1950 as an instructor in the Department of Zoology and since that time has risen through the ranks to professor.

Author or coauthor of seven books, Dr. Barbour has also written 87 research articles in various professional journals and well over 100 articles in other publications. He has been active in many conservation and environmental movements in Kentucky, including efforts to preserve Murphy's Pond in Western Kentucky and the Red River Gorge in Eastern Kentucky.

Moynahan, also a native Kentuckian, was born in 1922 and graduated from the University of Kentucky with a degree in agriculture. After serving in the U.S. Army Corps from 1942-'45, he was briefly employed by the university as an extension agent before joining what was then the Division of Game and Fish and wildlife biologist. Since 1959 he has been resident manager of the Ballard area where, under his direction, the goose flock has increased from a few thousand birds to a peak of about 140,000.

To Conduct Festival Workshop

Club Committees Meet

A series of meetings have been held recently by the chairmen of various committees of the Prestonsburg Woman's Club, to formulate plans for the club year, 1979-'80.

Thursday, August 9, Mrs. Dorothy Stover, chairman of the Program committee, held a meeting with her committee, at the Floyd County Regional Library. Others attending were Mrs. Nancy Martin, Mrs. Susan Johnson, Mrs. Betsy Rennick, Mrs. Helen Ankrom, and Miss Carolyn Hay.

Mrs. Julia Curtis, chairman of the Spiritual Life committee, held a meeting at her home on the Middle Creek road, Monday evening, August 6. Devotionals for the ensuing club year were planned at this time, and two new members, Mrs. Virginia Jeffries and Mrs. Fannie Runnels, were added to the committee. Those in attendance were Mrs. Maxine Bierman, President, Mrs. Gertrude Bradbury, Mrs. Grace L. Burke, and Mrs. Dorothy Stover. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Curtis to her guests.

Mrs. Kathryn Frazier, chairman of the music committee, held a meeting of this group at the Floyd County Regional Library, last Thursday evening. Plans for the 14th Annual Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival, to be held at Jenny Wiley State Park Amphitheatre, September 7-9 were discussed. Added to this committee were Mrs. Betty Porter, Miss Betty Rowland and Miss Carolyn Hay. Present were Mrs. Frazier, Mrs. Garnett Fairchild, Mrs. Helen Ankrom, Mrs. Maxine Bierman, Mrs. Dorothy Stover and Miss Betty Rowland.

Thursday evening, November 9, Mrs. Martha Johnson, chairman of the Yearbook committee, met with Mrs. Wonnell Godsey, a member of this group, at the library. The printing and distribution of Yearbooks for the club year, 1979-'80, was discussed, and it has been announced that these books will, hopefully be ready when the club holds its first meeting of the year, Thursday, September 6.

Mrs. Dorothy Stover, acting on behalf of the chairman of the Finance committee, Mrs. Nancy Martin, held a meeting at the library for the purpose of discussing the proposed budget for the club year. Attending were Mrs. Stover, Mrs. Maxine Bierman, Mrs. Martha Johnson, Mrs. Helen Ankrom and Mrs. Betsy Rennick.

A meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Joanne Johnson, chairman of the Education committee, Tuesday evening, August 14. The main discussion during this meeting was the availability of scholarships offered college students by the club. Mrs. Johnson served refreshments to committee members, Mrs. Lois George, Mrs. Martha Johnson and Mrs. Joyce Allen.

Mrs. Dorothy Burke, chairman of the Arts and Crafts committee, held a meeting of this group at the Arts and Crafts Center, Archer Park, Tuesday, August 7. It was decided to ask club members for their preferences in the choice of crafts to be offered by the club during the coming year. Plans were made for a booth, displaying arts and crafts of the Prestonsburg Woman's Club at the forthcoming Folk Festival. Members are being asked to contact Mrs. Eileen Burchett by Friday, September 7, (Telephone number 886-2412) regarding items they may wish to add to this display. Present at this meeting were Mrs. Burke, Mrs. Eileen Burchett, Mrs. Maxine Bierman, Mrs. Phyllis Herrick and Mrs. Pauline Burchett.

A meeting of the Garden committee, with Miss Ethel Burke as chairman, was held last Thursday at the Arts and Crafts Center. Plans were made for the planting of trees at Archer Park, honoring those persons who have served as President of the club from the year of its beginning, 1919, until the present time. The group urges all members to enter flowers in the club's exhibit, at the forthcoming Floyd County Fair. Attending the meeting were Miss Burke, Mrs. Maxine Bierman, Mrs. Thelma Wallen, Mrs. Garnett Fairchild and Mrs. Susan Johnson.

NOTICE OF BLASTING SCHEDULE

In accordance with the provisions of 405 KAR 1:090, Blackhawk Mining Company, Prestonsburg, Ky. announces the following Blasting Schedule. The blasting sites are located in Floyd Co., Ky. as follows:

1. Southwest of Harold on Little Mud Creek at latitude 37 d. 29' 22", longitude 82 d. 41' 18". Approximately 114 acres.
2. Southwest of Harold on Little Mud Creek at latitude 37 d. 28' 57", longitude 82 d. 41' 15". Approximately 38 acres.

Blasting of overburden is conducted on a daily basis, 6 days per week (Mon.-Sat.). Designated blasting time is between 12:00 p.m. - 1:00 p.m. and 4:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m.

Access to the blasting area will be marked with a sign "Blasting Area". Authorized personnel will patrol the blasting area to restrict unauthorized access into this zone.

A minimum of 10 minutes prior to blasting, all access roads to the blasting area will be barricaded and the following signal given: two (2) thirty (30) second soundings of a horn with a thirty (30) second pause between.

After blasting, an all clear signal consisting of one (1) thirty second sounding of a horn will be given.

Blasting may occur at times other than those outlined in the blasting schedule in the event that explosives are loaded and rain, lightning, atmospheric conditions, management problems, or safety to the operator or public deem it necessary to blast otherwise. Nearby residents will be notified by the most appropriate means prior to detonation. All personnel in the blasting area shall be notified and blasting conducted in a safe and controlled manner as described above. 11.

Prestonsburg Firemen Fight Paintsville Fire

The Prestonsburg Fire Department joined Paintsville firefighters in quelling a clothing factory fire there Sunday night.

The two-story wood-and-brick structure housing the Paintsville Outerwear Manufacturing Co., on the southern end of Paintsville, was destroyed in the blaze.

The fire apparently broke out about the time that a heavy thunderstorm caused lightning in the area. Authorities said, however, that the cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

No estimate of damage was available early this week. The plant employed about 100 persons.

No injuries were reported.

For almost 200 years a festival called the Fiesta of the Radishes has been held each December 23 in Oaxaca, Mexico.

Farm Bureau Scholarships Awarded

Arnold Lowe (left), Eastern Kentucky chairman of the Farm Bureau scholarship committee, and Troy Hackworth (far right), president of the Floyd County Farm Bureau, are pictured with recipients of scholarships awarded recently by the Floyd County Farm Bureau. The three include, from left to right—Sharon Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clem Martin, of Langley, first year award; Brenda Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Green, of Prestonsburg, second year award, and Tonia Blevins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Blevins, of Prestonsburg, second year award.

State Economists Predict 'Soft Landing' Recession

Tighten your belts and prepare for a "soft landing." "Soft landing" implies little or no economic growth and reduced inflation rates coupled with moderate increases in unemployment rates.

The forecast, prepared by the Kentucky Council of Economic Advisors, indicates a lessened business growth or mild recession for 1979-'80. Contributing factors in this forecast include increased consumer installment debt, a predicted decline in new housing starts and higher unemployment rates.

Consumers borrow more money for current expenditures, anticipating future price increases. This increased spending tends initially to compensate for losses due to reduced housing starts and related unemployment. However, this reaction may increase the probability of a recession later, Council staff members say.

Collecting and forecasting economic data for Kentucky are primary functions of the Council, created in 1970 by the Governor's Executive Order and later ratified by the Kentucky General Assembly. Located at the University of Kentucky in Lexington, the Council staff researches, analyzes and disperses pertinent economic information for state government.

An integral part of the Council's function is the Kentucky Economic Information System, a public computer-based data retrieval system. The system incorporates data banks and computer software and can be reached by interested users through University of Kentucky and Frankfort computers, through statewide installations or by telephone using a telecommunications terminal.

Information collected and disseminated by the Council includes personal income, such as salaries, interest and transfer payments; labor, such as employment, unemployment rates and insurance coverage; and population, which includes breakdowns according to sex, race and age. There are annual, quarterly and monthly data banks for statewide statistics.

These myriad figures are then plugged into a specially developed series of equations to predict economic conditions in the state. The econometric model contains about 350 equations and is linked to the Wharton Econometric Model of the United States.

Dr. Charles Renfro, acting executive director of the Council, said the model has provided good results. "Over the past five years, our errors on the average have been less than 5 percent for personal income predictions and less than 3 percent for employment predictions," he explained.

In addition to supplying information to the various branches of state government, the Council will undertake two studies on tax issues which will be published this fall. One study will consider the feasibility of an automatic inflation adjustment for income taxes. Another will investigate property tax reform. Both subjects are expected to be important issues with the 1980 legislature, according to Charles W. Hultman, Council chairman.

More aid to the policy makers in the future is one of the Council's goals, according to Hultman. "We would like to identify major economic problems in the coming years and analyze them before the legislature and state agencies have to act on them," he said.

The Council then would not only predict economic situations, but it would determine ways of dealing economic problems—before they reach crisis proportion, he added.

Council members appointed by the governor advise and direct the Council on staff research projects. Present members include: William L. Short, ex officio, Secretary of the state Development Cabinet; Willis W. Watherford, president of Berea College; H. Clyde Reeves, consultant, Frankfort; John S. Swift, First Security National Bank and Trust Company, Lexington; John Clarke, General Electric Company, Louisville; and Dr. Renfro and Chairman Hultman, both of University of Kentucky.

OSHA Strengthens Worker Protection

The U.S. Department of Labor has strengthened worker protection against job hazards through improved procedures for handling worker safety and health complaints. The improvements will concentrate inspection resources on the gravest workplace danger areas.

"For the past two years, OSHA's goal has been to focus agency resources on the most hazardous workplaces and the most serious hazards," Assistant Secretary of Labor for Occupational Safety and Health Eula Bingham said.

"These new procedures, which are being implemented nationwide, are an important addition to our earlier 'common sense' initiatives against on-the-job risks and will enable the agency to maximize worker protection through improved evaluation of complaints and better management of its inspection resources."

Under the new procedures, effective September 1, "a more effective and expeditious investigation high hazard complaints" will take place based on "effective, professional screening and evaluation...to determine the nature and severity of the alleged hazard," Dr. Bingham said.

At the same time she emphasized that OSHA not only continues its strong belief in a worker's right to file a complaint about workplace hazards but also sees no decrease in the importance of a worker complaints as a major source of information on such hazards.

Better management of inspection resources not only will provide improved worker protection by targeting inspections at workplaces with serious hazards but also will help business—especially small businesses—by relieving them of most inspections on complaints of less serious nature.

The new directive replaces OSHA's program directive of December 1, 1977, which established a policy of conducting inspections in response to substantially all formal and non-formal complaints. The policy resulted in a backlog of complaints, many of which were not dealing with serious hazards, often diverting scarce OSHA resources from inspection sites with such hazards.

The new directive also addresses the same issues brought out in a General Accounting Office report to Congress April 9, which said that comparatively few complained of hazards resulted in findings of serious violations of OSHA standards and that a balancing of OSHA's priorities was needed.

All complaints will be thoroughly evaluated regardless of their sources, the method of receipt, or whether they are formal (written by employee or representative) or non-formal. The screening mechanism will enable the agency to respond promptly to serious hazards and to eliminate many less serious hazards without inspection.

The new directive also stresses that the anonymity of the complainant will remain protected if requested.

★ Kentucky Afield ★

By JOHN WILSON
More than 151,000 "new" fish have been stocked in two Kentucky lakes in an experiment to see if these fish will do better than their mothers.

The mother of this hybrid is the rockfish, a salt-water striped bass transplanted to fresh waters. Although Kentucky has stocked rockfish since 1958, the catch rate hasn't been what biologists hoped it would be.

So enter the hybrid, a cross between a rockfish and a male white bass. Other states, notably Florida, Texas and Tennessee, have established better fisheries for hybrids than for rockfish, so Kentucky has decided to give the hybrid a try.

The fish is hardier, easier to raise and transport and perhaps more adaptable than the rockfish, according to Charlie Bowers, the director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife's Fisheries Division. It grows significantly larger than the white bass—the current world's record is around 26 pounds—but it hasn't been on the scene long enough for us to know exactly how big it will get.

The two lakes which were stocked with hybrids are Herrington and Barren. Since 1974, Herrington has received approximately 20 rockfish per acre (stocking began there in the '50s) and while there have been several thousand fish caught from the lake, Bowers says, he feels that the rockfish population should be much higher. If the hybrids show a higher survival rate, more emphasis will probably be given them in the future, Bowers says.

Barren has been stocked with rockfish at 20 per acre for a shorter period but a catchable population never developed. Bowers feels that the fish might not have liked the lake and moved out. "Rockfish have a history of being real travelers," Bowers says. "There have been cases of them being stocked in one impoundment and showing up three lakes down the river system. They apparently can go right over a spillway or through the outlet tower and just keep moving until they find conditions they like."

Bowers hopes that the hybrids will be homebodies, although they could inherit a tendency to travel from both parents since white bass have been known to desert a lake also, but not as often as rockfish. White bass definitely like Herrington and Barren Lakes so there would seem to be an advantage there.

The hybrid is shaped something like a white bass, only a little thinner. The primary distinguishing characteristic is a series of very dark and distinct stripes down its sides. A white bass will have very faint stripes.

The stripes on a purebred rockfish are solid, but the hybrid's are broken. They look like someone started to draw a line, lifted the pencil, then couldn't get it down exactly on the line again.

These hybrids can reproduce (although they aren't expected to) and they can also cross with either white bass or rockfish. Bowers says that a Tennessee angler recently caught what appeared to be a 16-pound white bass (the world's record is 5 pounds, 5 ounces) and it took detailed internal examination by an expert to determine that the fish was actually a second generation hybrid.

So one thing's for sure—if these fish catch on in Kentucky waters, "striped" bass fishing's going to be a lot more exciting than it is now.

Carroll Names Two To Fish, Wildlife

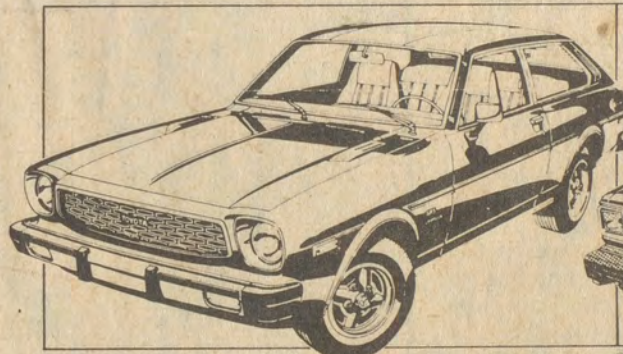

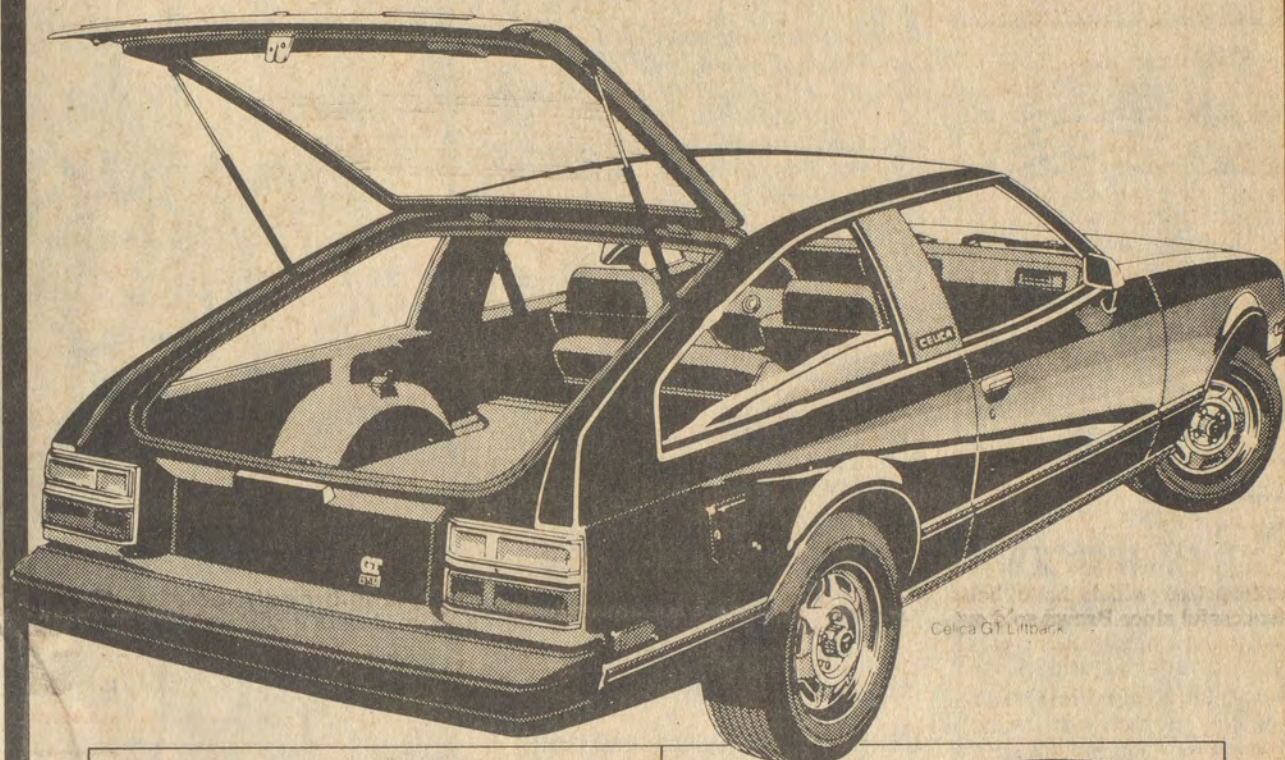

Danny K. Coffey, of Jamestown, and Tim Dasit, of Jenkins, have been named by Governor Julian M. Carroll to serve four-year terms on the state Fish and Wildlife Commission.

Coffey, an insurance agent, will represent sportsmen in the Ninth Wildlife District, replacing Pershing Hayes, of Tyner, whose term expired in August. Dash, a self-employed plumber, replaces Dr. W. W. Campbell, of Tyner, whose term on the nine-man commission also expired this month.

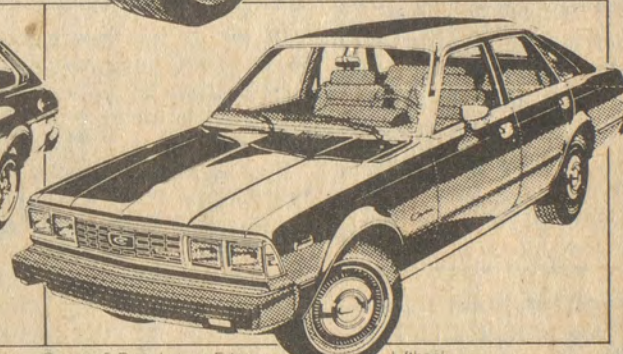

The appointments were made after licensed sportsmen in each district met and elected five persons whose names were then submitted to the governor who made the final selections.

China May Buy Ky. Coal Equipment

After leading a 13-member trade delegation to China for 17 days, Commerce Commissioner Carroll Knicely believes Kentucky is in an ideal position to do business with the People's Republic.

The delegation left July 26 for China in an attempt to sell coal-mining equipment. Four Kentucky firms sent two representatives each to meet with the Chinese coal officials.

"We made the right contacts with the right people," Knicely said. "They assured me that all four of the Kentucky companies would be placed on their list for consideration and that's the first step."

The four firms were American Mine and Tool Co., Madisonville; National Mine Inc., Ashland; Ortner Freight Car Co., Covington; and Thompson Bit Services, Henderson.

Two representatives from the University of Kentucky also accompanied Knicely and Commerce Department officials Bill Savage and Cary Blankenship on the trip.

"This is a culmination of arrangements initiated by Governor Carroll when he met with Chinese Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping earlier this year," Commissioner Knicely said.

Gov. Carroll will return to China in October and will follow up on the contacts made during this trip.

Knicely said the four Chinese researchers will work in the Lexington facility on coal liquefaction, petrography, gasification and pipeline transport of coal.

Although no contracts were signed during the visit, Knicely said he is confident the Chinese will do business with Kentucky.

"I'm as sure as I'm here that we'll sell some coal mining equipment to the Chinese because we did what we wanted to do, and that was to open the door," Knicely said.

Kentucky is only the third state invited to China since formal diplomatic ties between the United States and China were restored in January. The first state was California, followed by Ohio.

Knicely said the Chinese Coal Ministry has goals for major mining increase in the next few years.

"They want to go from 685 million tons of coal mined annually to 900 million tons by 1985," Knicely said. "That will be quite a jump, and they need our equipment to meet that goal."

He said the Chinese get most of their coal by deep mining as opposed to surface mining.

The Commerce Department officials also showed their Chinese hosts a 30-minute slide show about Kentucky which had been translated to their language.

Knicely said the slide show and the delegation "were extremely well received everywhere we went."

We generate over 100 billion kilowatthours of electricity a year

...99.7% without oil!

These days, depending upon foreign oil can be uncertain and costly. To say the least.

At A.E.P. oil is not our fuel for power generation.

Coal... abundant American coal... is our main fuel.

We burn over 37 million tons a year. And we burn it in conformance with current Clean Air regulations.

We also operate our own extensive coal transportation fleet. We have available 3,200 rail hopper cars, 510 barges and 26 towboats.

The coal we burn is the equivalent of saving 140,000,000 barrels of oil.

That helps our country, our customers and our shareholders.
