Water District To Readvertise As Bids Too High

Lowest of two bids offered on construction of the Water Gap-Bull Creek Water District's water distribution center overran the amount for which the project was funded by approximately $22,000, and the work will be readvertised for a new bid-opening date. Including engineering fees and other costs, the bid left the district about $125,000 short of the funds needed for the awarding of a contract, it was said.

The bids were opened last Thursday. Petrey Bros. Construction Co., of Corbin, submitted the lowest bid of $899,900. But funding for the project, which includes ARC and FmHA grants and a loan, totals only $876,500. The other bid submitted, that of C. & C. Contracting Corp. Williamsburg, Ky., asked $1,290,797.

After the opening of bids the water district commissioners met with their attorney, Greg Stumbo, Joe Sisler, of Kenco Associates, Inc., Ashland engineering firm, and Vernon Brown, FmHA representative, in a study of the problem posed by the higher-than-expected bids.

A Greenhouse—'Where People Grow'

Tropical foliage plants receive loving care at the Mountain Comprehensive Care Center's greenhouses at Auxier.

They ran afoul of federal labor laws. They fell behind as farming became big business. They were frequently ridiculed as "funny farms." They became rapidly obsolete as the industry became more highly mechanized. They fell by the wayside with the trend toward greater centralization. After an era in which many institutions—mental hospitals, prisons, homes for the retarded, and the like—raised their own produce, it long looked as if the institutional farm was a relic of the past.

That may not be the case much longer, according to David Gillespie, director of horticultural therapy and training programs at Mountain Comprehensive Care's greenhouses at Auxier and Salyersville. In fact, the institutional farm may be the wave of the future.

Granted special variances from federal minimum-wage laws, greenhouses have proved capable of providing useful work-oriented therapy programs for the handicapped. The Auxier project, for example, employs 40 handicapped adults who grow bedding plants, tropical foliage plants, and vegetables in several greenhouses and in a two-acre garden.

While some have criticized the piece-work rates offered by sheltered workshops as potentially exploitative of handicapped laborers, defenders of the arrangement see it as a practical alternative to enforced idleness on the part of the handicapped, and to their otherwise total dependence on government benefits.

A sign out front of the Auxier greenhouse—"Where People Grow"—is consciously double-meaning. For people, as well as plants, grow there. "Before we began here seven years ago," Gillespie said recently, "we had activity programs and day care for handicapped people, but then they reached a plateau. If they were not to regress, they would need something more challenging."

Horticulture, he says, fosters in the mentally handicapped a sense of their own worth. "They see that, if they care

$1,200,000 Loan Seen For Area TV System

Floyd county stands to gain enhanced TV services as the result of a $1.2 million loan conditionally committed by the U.S. Department of Agriculture for construction of a microwave TV receiving and distribution system to serve this area.

The proposed system, which would be managed by a non-profit corporation including Paul Gearheart, owner of the Harold-based TV system, Tel-Com, Inc., could bring to the area channels specializing in sports, news, religious broadcasting, and first-run and family movies.

With construction of the new system, a project expected to take two years to complete, signals from channels 18, 27 and 62 in Lexington will be received in Jackson and transmitted by microwave to the existing Tel-Com tower at Martin. Signals from the satellite stations will be received in a "dish" antenna to be built at Martin, and will be relayed from there to receivers at Wayland, Betsy Layne, Wheelwright, and points in Pike, Knott and Letcher counties.

According to a Tel-Com representative, the Agriculture Department has conditionally committed a further $2.3 million loan for the upgrading of Tel-Com to a broadband system airing 12 channels initially, but having a 40-channel capability. The expansion of the system which, according to Tel-Com, comes in response to public demand for better TV services, is expected to begin next spring.

Among the stations frequently mentioned as likely popular choices, when satellite reception makes them available, are WTCG, channel 17, in Atlanta, Ga., which carries all Atlanta Braves baseball games, the Christian Broadcasting Network, the Home Theater Network, which carries only G- and PG-rated movies, and Home Box Office, which carries first-run movies.

According to present plans, cable system customers would pay an additional $1 per month for the expanded service. In addition, the home movies would be offered on a pay-TV basis.

This Town...That World

MOVE OVER, VILLON

Maybe we've become too "civilized" to celebrate and enjoy the Fourth of July.

Time was, when we were a lustier breed, we went out, determined to "make the Eagle scream," and if the national bird was a bit coy about the matter we did the screaming for it. Those were the days when a spellbinder mounted the platform and held in thrall his hearers, who were numerous; when greased poles were caught, squealing, and greasy pigs were climbed, and sack races run, and the veterans marched and bands played, and children got lost in the crowd; the days when the flag was waved and nobody dared challenge your right to wave it, when a glass of lemonade was a treat, and you went home surfeited, tired, maybe a little sick, but thrilled with the privilege of having had a part in it all.

Those were the days when families travelled by horse, or buggy, or train to the county-seat from the nether parts of the county, determined to let neither distance nor time nor hardship nor circumstance stay them from this annual appointment with their fellows in plain, unadulterated, even uncivilized, celebration.

Civilization is a great thing, it must be conceded, but it has dulled our appetites for a bit of derring-do. Tom Paine in-

Scott Convicted, Penned 20 Years In Motel Holdup

A circuit court jury here last Thursday deliberated only 10 minutes before holding Richard Scott guilty of armed robbery in the holdup last January of the Alpique Motel, near Allen, and setting his sentence at 20 years—the maximum provided for that offense.

An effective witness for the Commonwealth was State Trooper Don Weedman, who told of the arrest of Scott and his nephew, Ralph Keller, in Pike county by Trooper Ernie Stepp as a result of the description given by Weedman and Greg Hall, son of Cecil Hall, owner of the motel, of the car which left the scene after the holdup: of the seven-inch tire tread at the scene matching that of the car occupied by the two men, and of a cigarette being found at the robbery scene being the same brand (Camel) that was found in quantity in the car.

During his questioning of the defendant Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen asked Scott if he had smoked on the day of the trial. Told that he had, Allen asked Scott if he would show him his cigarettes. He drew from his pocket a pack of Camels.

School Board Hires 438 Teachers

The Floyd County Board of Education in a special meeting employed 438 teachers last Wednesday, leaving few teaching spots unfilled.

Supt. of Schools Pete Grigsby, Jr. said the hiring represented a "cut across the board." The personnel reduction amounted to about 12 units and extended, he said, to administrative personnel, physical education, music, art, driver's education and librarians.

"This," Grigsby commented, "gets us down to the bare minimum and still retain accreditation and to what the state asks."

The major teaching staff shakeup came in Prestonsburg High School. John Wayne Shepherd, of West Prestonsburg, is the new principal, succeeding William Hughes, of Martin, who becomes principal of Martin Elementary. Gene Wright, assistant principal here, resigned recently to accept a post with the Paris (Ky.) city schools, and Bert Layne, of the Allen Central High faculty, was named to the Martin post after Bobby Jones had resigned the principalship there.

Among the positions left vacant is that of basketball coach at Wheelwright High School.

In addition to teachers, administrative personnel were hired. These included: Ned Bush as health coordinator; Wayne W. Ratliff, transportation director; John Campbell, Jr., assistant transportation director; Gordon Moore, Roberta Davidson, Anna Sue Stumbo, and Ulysses Horne, supervisors; Audrey Pratt, special education consultant;

Larry Jervis, counselor in charge of testing evaluation of exceptional children; Blanche Dings, food service director; Phillip Dings and Estill Hall, directors of pupil personnel; Mildred Kendrick and Denzil Halbert, visiting teachers; Denzil Halbert, county athletic director; James F. Francis, Title IV p.e. consultant; Eloise A. Hall, NYC director.

Teachers were hired subject to their meeting certification requirements. Loss of enrollment could also affect teachers named where such loss occurs.

The list of teachers follows:
ALLEN CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL—J. O. Dings, principal; Adrian Bentley, ass't. principal; Nancy Dings, home ec.; Judy M. Eversole, p.e. Coach, Lois E. Frasure, athletic director and social studies; Stephen Halbert, spec. vocational; Judy Looney, music; Marie Mullins, home ec.; Patricia Murphy, health-social studies; Carolita O'Quinn, Art-English; Rondal Prater, p.e. ## Perkins To Speak Saturday At City Building Dedication Congressman Carl D. Perkins will be the speaker at the dedication Saturday morning of Prestonsburg's new Municipal Building which was recently completed at a total cost of $766,288.

The dedicatory exercises will begin at 10 a.m. Gov. Julian Carroll and U.S. Senators Wendell H. Ford and Walter D. Huddleston have been invited to join city, county and federal funding agency officials for the occasion. Mayor Harold Cooley will preside.

Dedication of the huge, new structure on North Lake Drive will be in the nature of a city holiday, with all vehicle parking free for the day.

The building, which houses all departments of city government, has been occupied since May 1, and earlier than that by the fire department.

Its funding was by a $716,288 grant, plus $50,000 invested by the city in improvement of the second floor of the structure. The first floor provides space for the fire and police departments, council room and offices for city officials. The second floor houses the governor's regional office and the Prestonsburg-Floyd County Community Development Agency.

Stumbo Order Views Penalty For Overloads

Although expressing doubt as to the constitutionality of the overweight truck statute, District Judge Harold J. Stumbo has indicated in a recent order that his court will penalize drivers of such vehicles until relief is afforded them either by special permit from the Department of Transportation or by legislative action.

He said he has asked the county attorney for a memorandum as to constitutionality of the law and, having received none, must presume that it is constitutional.

At the same time, Judge Stumbo called on peace officers to bring before the court drivers of trucks spilling coal on highways and also those who exceed the speed limit. His order directed citations for drivers whose trucks are loaded above the bed. "This court will not tolerate this...this type of violation is dangerous to the public," the order said. "This court," Judge Stumbo wrote, "does not like the overweight truck statutes and is of the opinion that a special permit should be issued to people owning coal trucks." He added, however, that this is a matter for the Department of Transportation to consider.

Two drivers of overweight trucks were recently fined $500 each by Stumbo.

Burning Locomotive Moved to Spot Where Fire Dept. Can Help

A C. & O. railroad engine caught fire near Prestonsburg, Sunday evening, when a generator short circuit apparently ignited the 2200 gallons of diesel fuel in its tanks.

The fire was first discovered when the train was at a point across the river from the Kentucky Motel, and was inaccessible to firefighters. Prestonsburg Fire Chief Tom Blackburn persuaded the crew to move the engine forward as far as the mouth of Bull Creek, near the Lancer-Water Gap road, where the fire was smothered with carbon dioxide.

Prestonsburg firemen were called Saturday to the residence of Albert Robertson, of Spurlock Fork of Middle Creek, when fire broke out in a car parked in a carport, threatening the house.

Last Tuesday, lightning struck the house of Jerry Music, on the left fork of Bull Creek, damaging the kitchen area.

Cindy Manuel, manager of the new Floyd county animal shelter, comforts Angel, a new resident at the shelter. Belying her name, Angel is no pure spirit. Grossly overweight, the poodle will receive a special diet and exercise in an effort to correct her problem.

veighed, in the early days of the nation, against "sunshine patriots" who lost their fervor when the going became rough. Our trouble, these days, is, we are armchair patriots, content to milt, to keep our eyes focussed on a television set and get our kicks, if any, out of a parade taking place a thousand miles away.

But who am I to talk? If the weather is right, I'll probably make it to a shady corner to watch the parade and maybe I'll stay up for the fireworks.

Yet, like Yellon, I can cry for "the snows of yesteryear."

Just for the record: the temperature was at 50 (above) Monday morning, and for a while there I was undecided on the issue of donning the old straw skimmer or digging out the earmuffs.

QUESTION

Why does a bird sing or whistle or otherwise make glad the heart? Some say it's their nature, a matter of instinct. Then tell me how a mockingbird can "instinctively" remember and imitate the calls and songs of as many as 35 other birds?

Cecil Hall, who was held at gunpoint and bound, and his son, Greg, were other witnesses.

Six rifles taken from the motel were found in the trunk of the car occupied by Scott and Keller when it was intercepted in Pike county, shortly after the robbery.

Scott testified that he was not at the motel on the night of the robbery, that he had loaned his car to Keller and had later joined Keller to go to a Pike county bootlegging place. His wife testified that she and her husband had gone rabbit-hunting that day (Jan. 15), but the Commonwealth pointed out that that date was not in the legal hunting season.

A handgun and shotgun found inside the auto were pointed to by the Commonwealth as weapons used in the holdup. Scott had cartridges for both in his pockets, it was testified. The motel owner, however, could not identify the weapons. Neither could he identify the holdup men, since both wore ski masks. The masks and Hall's billfold were found near the Tram bridge.

Keller, Scott's alleged accomplice, recently escaped from the Johnson county jail and has not been recaptured.

The trial of Kenneth Robinson, charged with selling LSD, was continued to July 24 after his attorney, Gary Johnson, had requested that an independent laboratory treat the substance confiscated to identify it. The state lab had already identified it as LSD, Commonwealth's Attorney Allen said.

Trial of Tony Baril, charged with the knife slaying near here of Earl Chester Porter, is scheduled July 16. Baril remains in jail here, unable to execute $10,000 cash bond. He and his father, recent converts of Way of the Cross Outreach here, were baptized at the Allen United Methodist Church last Sunday night. Young Baril was taken there under a deputy sheriff's guard.

A civil case of wide interest is scheduled to begin today (Wednesday), with the trial of the damage suit filed by Everett Akers, et al vs. Triple Elkhorn Mining Company and RD & K. The plaintiff seeks to recover more than $2 million damages allegedly caused by the company's stripmining operation. Reed Anderson, of Pike county, will preside as special judge, and the case will be decided by a jury.

"We had no other choice but to delay the job until we get new bids within our allocated budget of funds," Curtis Hatfield, chairman of the district water commission, said.

The basic work on which bids were submitted includes construction of 15 miles of eight-inch and three-inch water lines, a 150,000-gallon water tank and a water booster station. The system is designed to serve the area along KY 3 from Lancer to Water Gap, from Water Gap to upper Bull Creek and the section along new US 23 at Water Gap. Initially, the district will have 225 customers.

for these seedlings properly, they yield something beautiful and productive," he explained, "and something valued by the community."

The exchange between the handicapped and the wider community at the roadside produce stand on U.S. 23 is an important part of the program, Gillespie points out, teaching their clients important social skills—and teaching the public that those who are handicapped have a productive role to play in the community.

While the mental health agency is primarily interested in its therapeutic benefits, there may, however, be sound economic reasons also for a return to institutional and other local farming. "Our heavy dependence on extractive industries is a weakness," says Gillespie, who was for 12 years a horticulture specialist with the county extension service. "We have a potential for horticulture in this area that has been bypassed, written-off," he adds.

"There is no point in our importing bedding plants from Georgia, lettuce from California, and tomatoes from Mexico," Gillespie argues, "when we could be growing these things locally, for the local market."

"We need to move beyond our assumption that bigger is better," Gillespie contends. Mechanical harvesting, he adds, has forced us to breed vegetables with tough skins, artificially managed to ripen all at one time. He foresees a return to smaller local farms, with the consumers doing more of the harvesting themselves.

In this respect, even the growing costs and scarcity of gasoline may have its bright side. As far as local farming is concerned, Gillespie believes, the escalation in the cost of transporting produce over large distances "might just put us over the hill."

also voted $4200 annually toward the salary of a county dog warden. Burke said that he hopes that other communities in the county will offer assistance also.

The shelter, which is located on the site of a former city landfill on the Sally Stephens branch, off the old Middle Creek road near West Prestonsburg, contains 19 dog kennels, a puppy bay, and a bay for cats and kittens. In its first week of operation, it has become home to eight adult dogs and 28 puppies, eight of them from a single litter found abandoned on a dump atop David mountain.

"I hope that, from now on, people who don't want their pets will bring them here rather than leave them on a dump somewhere," said Cindy Manuel, manager of the new shelter.

The facility will hold unwanted pets without charge and, after seven days, offer them for sale at nominal prices. Beginning next month, the shelter will also be responsible for the sale of dog licenses. "We are going to enforce the state license law," said Terry Manuel, who was named county dog warden and livestock inspector by the fiscal court this week.

Animals without tags, he said, would be subject to be picked up. Their owners will be charged a pick-up and boarding fee, and also a license fee if the animal is unlicensed, Manuel added.

When it is fully operational, it is hoped that the shelter will offer immunizations for pets, a neutering clinic, and, if space is available, a boarding service.

The Floyd County Humane Society meets to elect new officers tomorrow (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. at the Medi-Home Care office on the Auxier road. Outgoing president Burke said that the society needs members, contributions, volunteer workers, dog food, a refrigerator and a deep freeze. The mailing address for the Humane Society and the animal shelter is Star Route 4, Middle Creek Rd., Prestonsburg, Ky., 41653. The telephone number is 886-1042.

MOLDY CHEESE—IS IT SAFE?

When mold appears on the surface of cheese, many consumers simply trim the mold and eat the remaining cheese. Now, USDA scientists recommend moldy cheese be discarded because of the possible presence of toxins.

With cheese costing over $2 per pound, consumers who find mold on cheese are understandably reluctant to discard it. But if cheese has been refrigerated properly—below 40 degrees F—chances are that no toxin is present even if mold has developed on the surface.

Many types of mold, including the types that grow on cheese, produce toxins, and some toxins are known to cause cancer. But research has shown that toxins do not form in cheese if they are kept below 45 degrees F. At warmer temperatures, there is a definite risk of toxins.

According to a recent report by Dr. Norman F. Olson of the Department of Food Science at the University of Wisconsin, a refrigerator which will keep milk a week without souring is cold enough to prevent the formation of toxins. But if mold develops on properly refrigerated cheese, it can be trimmed 1/2 to 1 inch and consumed.

Extremely moldy pieces, especially small ones, should be discarded since they probably will have an off-flavor and the cost is minimal.

The best advice for consumers is to shop carefully and store cheese properly so that it does not get moldy. Follow these tips:

—Examine cheese carefully at the store and make certain no mold is present when you buy it. Check the freshness date on the package.

—Buy an amount that you can use in a week or two.

—After opening a package of cheese, rewrap tightly in plastic film.

—Keep refrigerator temperature below 40 degrees F. and always refrigerate cheese.

—Grate and freeze extra cheese for use in recipes for toppings, sauces, etc.

ATTEND D.A.R. MEET

Members of John Graham Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, who attended the board of management meeting, of the Kentucky Society, D.A.R., Saturday, at the Springs Motel in Lexington were Mesdames Sallye Clark, Mae Kendrick, Opal May and Virginia Goble. They were accompanied to Lexington by Miss Jane Ann Kendrick. It was announced during this meeting that John Graham Chapter, which was organized in 1924, has more 50-year members than any chapter in Kentucky, and that most of these are charter members.

'Moonies' Work Area

In response to the picture of June 6, showing the girl selling American flags, I went to a wedding in Lexington, and on the way back we were stopped at a couple of intersections by people with flowers and flags. There was no time to talk, but a couple of days later, I was stopped by another girl at the intersection of 404 and Mountain Parkway, and this girl told me she was a missionary, collecting funds to do missionary work in Kentucky.

Being a missionary myself at that time, I questioned her, with no satisfaction. Later, at the Dairy Cheer, I noticed a van with these same kids, and I asked what church they were from. They hummed and hawed around, and after a couple of minutes they said they were from the Unification Church. I scratched my head for a couple of seconds, and asked if that wasn't the one they called "Moonies" and they answered that it was. It was quite upsetting to me to see people from Floyd county financially supporting the Moonies and the Unification Church several states away, knowing that our local churches, could always use the support.

So I did some research on the Unification Church, and the following are facts compiled by the Christian Research Institute:

The National Council of Korean Churches Yearbook in 1972 states that the Korean Christian Community does not consider "Rev." Moon as Christian, and says he misrepresents his claims, and the Unification Church has a double face—a pseudo-religion.

—Secret teachings of the Unification Church:

1. Sun Myung Moon is himself Christ returned.
2. The execution of Jesus did not take place according to God's plan. The Crucifixion represented failure of Jesus' mission on earth.
3. Jesus, on earth, was a man no different from us except he did not have original sin.
4. Another messiah must come to complete Jesus' incomplete work. The new messiah is, of course, "Rev." Moon. The Marriage of the Lamb spoken of the Revelations 19 is supposed to have taken place in 1960 when Moon married his second wife. (His first wife, not able to understand his spiritual "mission," left him in 1954.)
5. Man is the visible form of God. Man is incarnate God. (New Hope, p. 5)
6. Jesus' body was invaded by Satan and he was killed. (Divine Principles pp. 147-148)
7. The Holy Spirit is female, and mother, with God as father, and Jesus as son. (Divine Principles, p. 215)
8. Hell is on earth. (New Hope, p. 90) (New Hope and Divine Principles are two books which contain the beliefs of the Unification Church.)

As a missionary who has worked in Eastern Kentucky for years, I feel it my duty to acquaint our people with these facts. The next time you are stopped by a "Moonie," tell them you will pray for them, and then put your money in your own church.

JERRY B. HERRMANN

Prestonsburg, Ky.

ATTEND MISS KENTUCKY PAGEANT IN LOUISVILLE

Miss Floyd County, 1979, Elizabeth Ann Martin, represented the area in the Miss Kentucky Pageant, June 21-23, at the Macauley Theatre in Louisville. She was sponsored by Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club and Sharon Watson, president, of the club and official hostess for the Miss Ky. Pageant program, accompanied her to Louisville Tuesday, June 19.

Those attending the pageant were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Earl Martin, and Miss Susan Martin, club-women, Danette Fannin, Karen Bingham, Debbie Biliter, Regina Laferty, Nora Hicks, Earlene Lawson. Others attending were Miss Floyd County, 1978, Sandra Dee Goble, Mrs. John G. Goble, Angela Goble, Mrs. James D. Adams, April Lynn Adams, Kathy Leslie, all of Prestonsburg, and Julie Riley, Lexington.

HONORS HUSBAND

Mrs. Luther James, of Pikeville, honored her husband, with a surprise birthday party, Sunday, June 17. Attending were their six children and nine grandchildren; several of their neighbors and friends, and Mrs. Edith James of Prestonsburg.

The Black Lung 'Mess'

The national, state, and local black lung associations have found conditions with the Labor Department's handling of black lung claims intolerable. Over a period of years we have been promised that the Labor Department would improve their backlog of cases, but still they have gotten further and further behind, the backlog currently reaching 160,000 for Social Security and 152,804 for the Labor Department. Assuming Social Security Administration turns down 50 percent of the cases and they go to Labor Department, that will put the backlogs of cases at the Department of Labor to over 200,000 claims pending.

The medical cards program is a disaster. There are miners waiting for medical cards who should have received them months ago, and even when they finally do receive their cards, doctors, clinics and pharmacists are confused about payments and re-imbursments, sometimes taking the cards, sometimes not. And, as always, the miner is caught in the middle, having to pay for his own medication, and wait and hope and hope and wait on re-imbursment from the Department of Labor.

The field offices have not been properly staffed. One person sits in an office, without a typewriter or xerox machine, answering telephones and greeting customers, writing letters, all without any of the usual office machinery.

The respiratory clinics are going to be a political football used to pay off political debts. There is $7 1/2 million waiting to be handed out to the governors of coal mining states or to bail the ARH hospitals out of their financial mess. We know that miners will not benefit from the money if it is handled in the same manner that it was in 1974. The National Black Lung Association must get a handle on this money and dispense it for everyone's benefit.

Since these conditions are intolerable and not remediable by talking with the Department of Labor, we will be going to Washington, D.C. to personally discuss these matters with DOL officials. We need your financial support and also your commitment to participate in any action taken against DOL. We need to raise money fast because we intend to confront DOL in June. Please send your contributions to Daniel Mullins, Chairman, Floyd County Black Lung Association, Drift, Ky. 41619, or Chester Mosley, Vice-Chairman, Melvin, Ky. 41650.

Remembered Gift

As Mrs. Owens and Mrs. Williams remember their children's childhood gifts, I, too, fondly remembered.

When October comes and the pokeberries ripen, I remembered my five-year-old holding out to me the most beautiful cluster of pokeberries I'll ever see. He must have thought so, too, for his words were, "Mommy, I don't think you eat them, but they were so pretty, I wanted to bring them to you." That was nearly 40 years ago and he now has two boys of his own, but memories of his childhood, to me, are sweet and fresh. He is still the same kind, thoughtful son.

LACKEY NEWS

Lawsey Wicker was honored with a dinner at his home Sunday, June 10, the occasion being his birthday. Members of his family attending were Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wicker and daughters, Missy and Heather, Mr. and Mrs. Terry R. Stallard and daughter, Tracey, all of Prestonsburg, Mrs. Laura Conley and Mrs. Wicker.

Bicarb of soda may have an unusual and effective application in helping smokers cut down on their nicotine consumption, the July Reader's Digest reveals. Psychologists have found that people with high levels of acid in their urine tended to smoke more than those with lower levels, probably because highly acidic urine excretes more unmetabolized nicotine. When the acid level is lowered with bicarbonate, smokers are like to cut down on their consumption. Caution: some people should not take bicarb—high blood pressure types, for one.

Rain, Cold, Mud Hit Dewey Lake At Vacationtime

Miners on annual vacation found conditions at one of their favorite recreation spots not up to par this week.

Dewey Lake rose 8½ feet above its normal summer stage Saturday after two days of steady, sometimes heavy, rainfall, and the German camping area was evacuated. Besides, the swollen lake was uninvitingly muddy, and Monday morning the temperature was a chilly 50 degrees.

Although the water will be a week or two from returning to a summertime hue, it is expected to recede by today (Wednesday) to the point that the camping area can be used, according to Dean Murray, Dewey Reservoir manager, U.S. Corps of Engineers.

The heaviest reported rainfall for the period, June 17-23, fell in the Freeburn area of Pike county, with 5½ inches recorded. Dewey Lake began to rise rapidly Friday night while the dam was at maximum discharge and the Big Sandy remained near normal. The lake crested at 7 p.m. Saturday at 658.58 feet.

Tornado-like winds uprooted trees and blocked KY 194 from the upper lake section into Pike county, also damaged KY 3 and caused electric power outages.

Rainfall reported: Dewey Dam, 4.12 inches; Paintsville, 3.19; Louisa, 1.94; Salyersville, 1.86; Meta, 3.86; Ivel, 2.52.

Tests, Immunizations Required For Children Entering School

By JANET E. HICKS
Health Educator

The Floyd County Health Department and the Floyd County Board of Education have joined in reminding all parents having children entering school for the first time (this includes kindergarten students, first-graders and transfer students) that their children must have a

TB skin test, a physical examination and an immunization certificate in accordance with state law before they can enter school this year.

The health department is urging parents to begin preparing their children now for their first year of school. Immunizations and TB skin tests, as well as blood counts and urinalyses, can be obtained at the health department on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday each week from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. These services may also be obtained at any of the regularly scheduled outpost clinics at Martin, Wayland, Bypro and Mud Creek. The scheduled outpost clinics for the month of July follow:

Monday, July 2.—Beaver Valley Clinic, Martin; Monday, July 9.—Wayland Methodist Church basement; Monday, July 16.—Ethel Osborne's store at Bypro.

A glaucoma clinic will be held Friday at the Floyd County Health Department from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. All persons age 35 and older are invited to attend this clinic to be screened, free of charge, for glaucoma, a disease that slowly and painlessly cause blindness.

Effective June 26, the Weight Control Class held at the Floyd County Health Department basement on Tuesday evenings will be discontinued until Tuesday, September 4.

The Floyd County Health Department will be closed Wednesday, July 4, in observance of Independence Day. Business hours will resume on the following Thursday at 8 a.m.

The earliest public library was the Zaluski Library, which opened in Warsaw, Poland in 1747.

Guest-speaker, Bill Burnette, state director of the Farmers Home Administration, spoke on "What's Happening in Rural Development."

John Sparks, county agent, presented University of Kentucky Achievement Certificates to the following development club presidents: Clinton Akers, Peggy Bradford, Ashland "Hawk" Howard, James R. Shepherd, Otelia Smiley and Walter Spears.

Tom Hereford presented special plaques to the First National Bank, the Big Sandy R.E.C.C. and the Prestonsburg-Floyd County Chamber of Commerce.

Chalmer Frazier presented plaques to these county winners: David, in the village category; Weeksbury, rural non-farm category, and Abbott Creek, farm category. He also presented certificates to Endicott, West Prestonsburg and Prater Creek for participating in the N.E.K.R.C.D.A. program.

Achievements cited for participating communities:

FARM CATEGORY

ENDICOTT—Painted the roof and interior of school building; was able to get guard rails in front of the grade school; they conducted activities to raise money for playground equipment and for school improvement projects.

ABBOTT CREEK—A community that is undergoing changes from a rural farming community to a small town.

One of its long range projects now almost completed is a new water system. It held its annual Christmas supper which was sponsored by the Homemakers Club; garbage bags were distributed to those who were interested in picking up litter in front of their homes; hosted the quarterly board meeting of N.E.K.R.C.D.A.; the women collected clothes for the children in Rhodesia; sponsored a garden meeting on butternut squash.

VILLAGE CATEGORY

WEST PRESTONSBURG—Members have been very busy making quilts and other items; Senior Citizen Songsters kick the Floyd County Fair off by performing on opening night.

DAVID—The people were able to initiate the first solar energy house which is under construction in David now; new homes being constructed in the Schoolhouse Hollow subdivision; completed a small mini-park in Official Hollow giving small children a chance to play off the streets; installed basketball court equipment, swings and slides; women pour the concrete; held the fourth annual Birthday Celebration which gave residents outside of our community and those who left a chance to come back and celebrate with local townspeople; has just completed a sewage treatment plant which will serve 26 families; scheduled town cleanup and beautification program; trying to organize a volunteer fire department; raised money for community projects by raffling a stereo and holding a disco dance.

RURAL NON-FARM CATEGORY

PRATER CREEK—One of the highlights of the club is the increase in enthusiasm; multi-purpose building has brought the residents closer together; raised around $4,000 through suppers, sold food on election day and raffled a quilt; renewed the Community Park; working for additional playground equipment; contributed money to the Little League program; distributed 220 garbage bags to take part in the county cleanup; homemakers raised $1,015 by selling tickets on a quilt, also fed 300 people, local dignitaries, Senator Ford and Governor Carroll; donated money to three families whose homes were destroyed by fire.

Task Force Agrees Rules May Not Make Sense for East Ky.

Some are seeing a set of recommendations recently proposed by a task force of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development as the first sign of recognition on the part of federal agencies that regulations suited to other parts of the country do not necessarily make sense in Eastern Kentucky.

The recommendations, which are addressed to state, federal, and local agencies, are aimed at meeting this area's urgent need for housing. According to a recent University of Louisville study commissioned by the Kentucky Housing Corporation, 48,746 additional housing units are needed in the Big Sandy, Cumberland Valley and Kentucky River Area Development districts.

Among the recommendations taking account of topological conditions peculiar to Eastern Kentucky are those calling for development of hillside home designs, the reclamation of orphan mined land suitable for housing sites, consolidation of existing water and sewer systems, and the development of new regional water systems.

The expansion of water and sewerage systems would be a boon to private housing developers who are often unable to bear the cost of extending these services in hilly terrain to sites that would be otherwise suitable for development.

Other proposals include the creation of a central Appalachian land bank—where the state buys land and holds it for future sale to developers, tax incentives for housing production in housing-poor areas, a special KHC bond issue for Eastern Kentucky, the raising of KHC mortgage limits from $40,000 to $60,000, state insurance for construction loans made by private institutions, the depositing of state funds in lending institutions making home mortgages to low and moderate income families, and the allocation of state funds for loans and grants to individuals for rehabilitating their homes.

An encouraging aspect of the recommendations, Anna Jean Tackett, coordinator of the Floyd County Community Development agency, said this week, is their emphasis on individual home ownership. There was a time, she said, when KHC seemed to be pressing for public housing as the solution to this area's housing problem.

"Public housing is part of the answer," she added, "but it is not the whole answer, especially in an area where the individual traditionally takes pride in putting a roof over his family's heads."

The price of gold eased after last week's record trading high in Zurich of $282.875 an ounce to close at $278.125 an ounce in Zurich yesterday. The London price dropped $2 to $278 an ounce. In New York the price was also $278 an ounce.

CHURCH WOMEN MEET

The St. James Episcopal Church was hostess to local church women on June 15th at 10 a.m. The meeting opened with devotional by Eleanor Robinson. A letter from Jack Absher was read in response to an inquiry to him for better movies to be shown in Prestonsburg. Reports were made about nursing home visitations for March and April by St. James Episcopal and First Christian Church; for May and June by the First Baptist Church and Presbyterian Church; for the months of July and August, the First United Methodist and Community Methodist. The member churches take turns visiting patients at the nursing homes. The group discussed how we could help in the clean-up of our city. It was decided to write a letter to the city manager advising him of the interest of the group and asking in what way we could help. An updated report on the David Wilkerson crusade was given by Eleanor Robinson. There were 4,000 in attendance the second night, and 200 cards of decision received. The 200 who signed cards were personally contacted within 48 hours. The following were present: Opal Dingus, Lucy Regan, Christine Spradlin, Mable Brown, Beckey Short, Julia Curtis, Eleanor Robinson, Vera Ford, Pearl Crum, Jean Burke, Garnett Fairchild. The women of all local churches are welcome and urged to attend. The next meeting will be in August, the church and time will be announced later.

Over Easy

By Hugh Downs

An old proverb says that those who do not find time for exercise will have to find time for illness. There is truth in that, I suppose, especially for people over 40. After we leave high school or college, we tend to let the years slip by without staying in condition. When the middle-aged man or woman decides to do something about it, often he or she goes about it the wrong way. A common fault is trying to make up for lost time by over exertion.

Check With Doctor

"If a person has any question about his heart, he must check with his doctor," said Buster. "The entire conditioning bit is centered around the heart; it's the most important of the body's 140 muscles."

"When a heart attack does occur, the person who is physically active is more likely to recover. One possible reason is that exercise may promote development of supplementary blood vessels. These vessels can take over the burden of nourishing the heart muscle when a coronary artery is blocked by a heart attack."

"As I noted in 'Energistics,' almost anyone can start exercising at any time, but the level of the program's intensity varies from person to person. A young non-smoker who has been relatively inactive for five or 10 years but who is within normal weight limits and in good health can handle any reasonable exercise."

"But a 50-year-old who hasn't exercised in 30 years, smokes heavily and is overweight should have a medical examination first. There may be other complicating factors that would prevent them from exercising too strenuously, such as high blood pressure or high levels of cholesterol in the blood. Anybody in such poor shape should begin with a severely limited program, mostly walking to improve circulation and rhythmic stretching exercises to increase flexibility. I'm talking about an hour or so of brisk walking spread over the day."

"For out-of-training adults over 40, a hurry-up approach to exercise is dangerous. They shouldn't overlook the warm-up and cooling-down stages. Unless attention is paid to warming up the body to accelerate blood circulation, stretch ligaments and stimulate the heart and lungs, anyone who has been inactive may feel strain and pain."

Diet Alone Doesn't Work

"Some people delude themselves. They think diet without exercise will keep them fit. But I know a lot of thin people who are always tired. It's because their bodies are gradually deteriorating from lack of sufficient vigorous activity. Continual inactivity produces muscular atrophy, and the individual soon becomes undermuscled for his weight. He lacks the strength and endurance to do his daily work comfortably."

"I mentioned brisk walking. You don't have to lift barbells to keep in shape. You can develop a more vigorous style of living in all of your daily activities. Begin by checking your mattress. A good night's sleep is a prerequisite for a good day's activity. A firm mattress not only helps you sleep, it takes care of your back while you rest."

"Other suggestions: Always stand up when dressing or undressing. If you drive to work, park your car a half-mile and walk the rest of the way. Get off the elevator two floors too soon and climb the stairs the rest of the way. When you have to stand at the kitchen counter or wash dishes, rise up and down on your toes. This will strengthen ankle and calf muscles."

"And we can't forget common sense. How much progress you make depends on many factors—age, weight, sleep habits, diet, general health and motivation. Some people should walk while others will have to run. A well-designed program allows for variations and permits you to respond in your own way at your own rate."

One look at Buster Crabbe and one knows he speaks with authority. Our thanks to a fine—and certainly well-preserved—gentleman. See you on "Over Easy" on PBS.

Hugh Downs, for more than 25 years, one of television's best-known personalities, is host of "Over Easy," the PBS daily TV show about aging that is one of the most widely aired shows in TV history. Downs also is the author of "Thirty Dirty Lies About Old," a book that exposes some of the wide-spread myths about growing older.

Leisure Time

Planning Your Pedaling

If you're like most bicycle riders, you enjoy spur of the moment meanderings that evolve as you go along. A right turn here, a coast down that hill over there—it doesn't really matter so long as you're out in the fresh air and getting your share of exercise. But planning has virtues too, as any serious bicycle rider can tell you. If you like the idea of knowing your route and destination before you leave, consider these tips:

- Plan your route by looking at maps available from the Chamber of Commerce, county or state agencies, or the U.S. Geological Survey. These are far superior to highway maps, which tend to ignore scenic—and relatively car-free—back roads.

- Don't overextend yourself. Experts say that if you're not used to riding long distances, your first tour should be no more than 10 or 15 miles round trip. As your muscles toughen, you can work yourself up to more ambitious expeditions.

- Travel light. An unobtrusive backpack stocked with your map, a small first aid kit, a windbreaker, and basic bike supplies—an inner tube and patch kit, an air pump, a screwdriver, and a wrench—should enable you to cope with any emergency.

In Search of an Outboard?

The first decision you have to make when you're looking for an outboard motor is whether to buy a new one or a used one. New motors are more expensive, but they usually offer a one-year warranty on parts and labor. Used outboards vary widely in price and quality, so it's important to know exactly what you're looking for.

- New motors. Compare prices on new motors at several dealers before you buy. It's also a good idea to find out what the discount mail order houses are charging. The warranty on your new motor will be issued by the manufacturer; it should be honored by any dealer, no matter where you happen to be.

- Used motors. Most dealers offer 30- to 90-day warranties on used outboards, depending on age. Since a motor is a sizable investment, it may be well worth the ten or fifteen dollars it will cost to have a reputable mechanic check out a promising prospect for you. Beware of motors that have fallen overboard, especially into salt water. Check the serial number: if it's been tampered with, it means the motor was stolen. Once you've bought a used motor, it's wise to change the sparkplugs and lower-unit oil immediately. Also install new ignition cables, and check the propeller from time to time to make sure it isn't becoming worn.

Bring It To Life With Dye

You can transform a drab undershirt into a fashionable polo shirt, or revive a faded tablecloth or pillow case. The secret is to add color by hand-dyeing the fabric. A veritable rainbow of colors is available at dime stores and discount chains. Once you see how easy it is, you may wonder why you've been buying all those new clothes. Here are the basics:

- Fill a pot or sink with hot tap water and add a few capsful of dishwashing liquid. Saturate the garment, then remove it and set it aside.

- Fill a separate container with hot tap water, and pour the dye powder in. Make sure all the particles dissolve. Then add the diluted dye to the pot or sink, stirring vigorously.

- Immerse the garment loosely in the dye-bath and let it stay there for about a half hour. Stir continuously. Then rinse the garment under cool tap water until the water runs clear. Dry the garment in your dryer or on a line.

Rice's Crispiess . . . By KENNY RICE

Billy Ray Brings Color, Order, Respect to Archer Park Softball

Billy Ray Collins has not had enough free time on week-ends to go fishing or watch the Reds at Riverfront or just relax for the past eight years.

What Collins has been doing on week-ends and week days during this time is organizing the Amateur Softball Association District 40 into the best league in Eastern Kentucky and one of the most respected leagues in Kentucky. Softball at Archer Park has excitement, class and great competition.

It is not just a coincidence that the Archer Park Softball League (ASA District 40) started growing rapidly in attendance and participation when Collins became district softball commissioner eight years ago.

The league started out as a seven-team city league, became a nine-team county league, then a 14 team county loop, with players from other counties participating, and then grew to a 20-team league five years ago, and this season expanded to a 24-team league. Now District 40 includes Floyd, Magoffin and Martin counties. Businesses from each of these counties sponsor teams and players from these counties plus Knott, Johnson and Pike counties play at Archer.

There are three basic reasons for the league's growth—Collins' flair, organization and rules. The personable Billy Ray is a rare breed in today's world of almost everyone looking for payment of every deed. Collins receives no money for running the league, he truly loves the game of softball, and his work and personality have attracted others to one of America's most popular sports.

"When I came here they were playing games in cutoff shorts and sweat suits and old football jerseys," Collins says. "But again this year all managers voted to require each team to have their players in full uniforms. Being dressed to look organized reflects in the play, I feel. Uniforms added a dignity to the league."

Organizing an equal schedule and setting up rules to be followed all season were other steps toward a solid league.

"Some of the teams in our leagues are real strong and have gained statewide respect, some are average and some fair. But they are all competitive and they all play an equal number of games and play by the same rules. That's important to remember, everyone on every team is a vital part of the league. We have rules printed and distributed at the beginning of the season and they aren't changed to please anyone during the season. This way, everyone knows what to expect. I let the managers know they are counted on to keep their teams in order. We have never had a fight since I've been in the league, although we've come close; we've always kept discipline and organization."

Billy Ray is happy with the increased number of fans at Archer Park and about the interest in slow pitch. He says, "People like to watch and play it because with only one or two weeks' practice any individual of any age can compete. In fast pitch there are basically seven people standing on the field watching the pitcher throw to the catcher and no one scores over five runs a game. In slow pitch everyone can hit the ball, there is no standing around on defense and the teams score runs."

Collins is also commissioner of the Archer Park women's league which is also in District 40. The women's league has grown from three or four teams to a present total of 12 with players from Floyd, Martin, Johnson, Magoffin, Knott and Pike counties.

"With only two fields the men and women's league can't expand anymore.

They have grown as much as they can," Collins said.

With Archer Park having lighted fields, the Region 13 Tournament for men and women have been held there over the past seven years. The lights have also provided for more games to be played during the season.

"I want to thank the Floyd County fiscal court for paying the bills on the use of lights for both fields each summer. They have been wonderful in their support of our league," Collins said.

Five years ago Collins helped Pike County organize a softball league. He served as commissioner for a year before turning over the duties to James Balsar who was assistant for the Archer Park League next season to relieve him of some of his many jobs, from keeping the grass cut to making sure there's enough popcorn at the concession stand, and to give him some time to enjoy his week-ends again.

On July 1 the annual Archer Park Fourth of July tournament starts, with games all day Sunday, evening games on Monday and Tuesday, games all day Wednesday, and the finals on Thursday evening. The tourney is limited to the top 18 teams from Ohio and West Virginia, in addition to the teams in Kentucky, have competed in the tourney. This season, because of the Fourth falling in the middle of the week, teams from outside the area were not invited. Collins thought it "would put the other teams at a driving disadvantage by not having a long weekend."

BIG WEEK FOR NEWSOME

Chester Newsome, of the McDowell Babe Ruth team, had a dream week two weeks ago by pitching a no-hitter and a one-hitter in successive starts. Newsome's record is 7-1.

"Chester is one of the finest pitchers in the league and a good all around athlete. He plays a fine shortstop for us when he isn't pitching and he has hit four home runs this season," said McDowell manager Elisah Branham.

MAYTOWN GOLF TOURNAY

Johnny Turner shot a 10 under par 36-hole total of 128 to win the fifth annual Maytown Volunteer Fire Department golf tournament's championship flight. Jim Estes, who won the medalist trophy, shot a 132 and nipped Birchell Duff in a sudden death playoff for second place.

Mark McGuire (128) won the first flight with Kenneth Auton (132) second. Terry Sizemore (143) finished first in the second flight ahead of Everett Patton (146). Ben Spradlin shot a 155 to win the third flight by four strokes over Earl Mulkey. Hobert Webb edged Jeff Check, 160-161, to capture the fourth flight. Larry Robinson (162) beat Chuck Johnson (163) in sudden death to win the fifth flight.

"We had 48 entries this year, which is about average," said tournament director George Gray, "and once again there was some very good golf. In the championship flight I believe only one man shot over par. We also had some new faces in addition to the regulars in the tourney this year."

Blackcat Gridders Getting in Shape

If you see any 220 lb. huskies jogging along the highway, or down the streets of Prestonsburg, don't be alarmed. It's only some of the Blackcat football players getting into condition for the upcoming season. When asked about the importance of pre-season conditioning, assistant coach Tony Burchett said, "It can make all the difference in the world. When a player reports to fall practice in excellent physical condition, he can immediately begin to develop the skills necessary to play. When out of shape, a player is usually too tired to get a good stance, let alone develop his skills, and is more prone to injury. It is not possible to get in good enough shape in one month of practice time to be able to play your best in the opening game. It may be a month into the season before a player is in good enough condition to play his best football. The same holds true for the team. If everyone reports in top condition, then we should be ready to play by the opening game. If not,..."

The Blackcat coaches have the weight room open two nights a week, and sometimes more, for the players to continue their power weight training program. Because the playing field is presently being crowned by the Boosters Club, many of the players have been getting their sprints and conditioning in along the streets and outlying areas of Prestonsburg. None of this is mandatory, but the coaches encourage it. Head football coach Philip Haywood said, "It's hard to say just how many of our athletes are really working out on a steady basis. We know of a few as we see them regularly, but there are too many that we haven't seen all summer. Some of them may be doing some running at home. Of course, everyone needs a vacation and many of our players are working. It seems, though, as if a few of our players may be taking a two month vacation, and this will hurt, not only them, but our football team as the type of physical condition in which our team reports will be a big factor in determining what kind of success we will have."

Coach Haywood said that for the Cats to be successful they must accomplish three things this summer. He said, "we must maintain our strength and, in some cases, get stronger; we must improve our quickness and we must drastically improve our speed. Last year we had to be the slowest team in the world. We must accomplish these things this summer, and it is entirely up to the players. We can encourage them, and work with them, but this is something that must be done on their own." He added, concerning the physical condition of the players, "All I can say is that we had better be in great physical condition with the schedule we have this year."

The Blackcats open up with Belfry, at home, followed by Pikeville, Johnson Central, Breathitt Co., Elkhorn City, Lawrence Co., Maysville, Morgan Co., Hazard, and Raceland. The Blackcats have six home games this year (Belfry, Johnson Central, Breathitt Co., Elkhorn City, Maysville, and Hazard) and according to the local experts, these games should be "dandies." Season tickets will go on sale at a substantial savings the last week of July.

As Tick Population Grows, Precautions Are Advised

The state's tick population appears to be greater than usual this year. However, state health officials say Kentuckians can take simple precautions to avoid disease borne by ticks.

Dr. Joseph Skaggs of the Department for Human Resources, Bureau for Health Services, says the department is starting to receive reports of Rocky Mountain spotted fever and tularemia (rabbit fever) as vacationing Kentuckians head for the wooded areas where ticks thrive. Reports from county health departments indicate this year's tick population may be greater than the usually high population in 1978.

So far this year, five cases of spotted fever have been reported to the Human Resources Department, Skaggs said. Last year, 43 cases were reported. Incidence of the diseases tends to climb throughout the summer, then declines in the fall and winter.

Only a couple of cases of rabbit fever have been reported so far this year, Skaggs said.

But Skaggs said he believes both tick-borne diseases are "under-reported." The actual numbers may be higher, he added.

Rocky Mountain spotted fever is transmitted to humans mostly by the common American dog tick, which can carry the tiny disease-causing organism.

A victim commonly suffers a sudden, high fever, a headache and lack of energy, Skaggs said. About three days later a spreading skin rash develops. The rash spreads over the body including the palms and the soles of the feet.

Several antibiotics can be used to effectively treat the disease, Skaggs said.

Similar early symptoms are seen in rabbit fever, he added. There is no rash, but a victim may experience an inflammation at the site of the tick bite and enlargement of lymph nodes closest to the bite area.

Rabbit fever also is transmitted through direct contact with rabbits and bites of other insects such as deer flies, Skaggs said. It also can be treated with antibiotics.

Skaggs noted suffering a tick bite is no reason for undue concern, since most ticks do not carry the disease-causing organisms. He suggested a few simple precautions to reduce even the slight chance of illness from ticks.

First, persons walking through heavy brush should wear long pants and long socks. Insect repellent should be applied before venturing into the woods. Children playing in wooded areas should be checked several times a day for ticks, Skaggs said.

When a tick is found, remove it from the skin as soon as possible. Skaggs said a person should avoid touching a tick bare-handed because carrier ticks can transmit disease through contamination of small scratches.

Some people advise removing a tick by applying an irritant such as alcohol to the insect. Another method is lighting a match, extinguishing it, then touching the match head to the tick.

Regardless of the method, persons should make sure the tick head is not left in the skin when the tick body is removed, Skaggs said.

Early Entrance Test Is Termed Traumatic

One child may benefit by entering school early and might be damaged if held back. Another equally bright child of the same age might benefit by waiting a year.

Most people can agree with this concept. But testing to determine who enters first grade or kindergarten early in Kentucky has resulted in confusion and anger among parents, educators and the children themselves, according to witnesses at a legislative hearing last week.

Under a Senate bill which established state-funded kindergarten, children must be five years old by Sept. 1 to enter kindergarten. Children entering first grade must either be six by that date or have completed a state-approved kindergarten.

Exemptions to the September 1 cut-off were provided under an amendment authored by Sen. Kenneth Gibson (D-Madisonville), chairman of the Subcommittee on Program Implementation Oversight which conducted last week's hearing.

To enter school early, a child must pass a test which determines physical, social and mental readiness.

Gibson said early childhood education experts have estimated only about 10 percent should be allowed to enter school early. There has been a breakdown in the mechanics of allowing exceptions; some school systems pass all those tested, he said.

Because of problems with early entrance testing, the Central Kentucky Superintendents Council recommends there be no exception to the September 1 deadline, said council president William Royalty.

Royalty, Burgin Independent superintendent, said it is a good idea to start Kentucky children in school at a later date. Material is written for the older child, based on the older national average and the drop-out rate is often related to early starting age, he said.

It is also bad that a child's first contact with school has such a potential for failure, he said, referring to early entrance testing.

Dr. Kathy Thornburg, with the University of Kentucky, suggested a committee meet this summer to find a better way of deciding which children should be admitted early. Thornburg said one teacher with more than the ideal 15-member classroom cannot deal with a wide range of ages and abilities.

Many educators speaking at the hearing said the early entrance testing had been the most "traumatic and unpleasant" experience of their careers.

A Franklin county administrator said her school system had made a special effort to explain to parents it is not necessarily a negative thing if a child does not qualify for early entry.

But in private conferences with parents, Carol Banks said she heard statements like, "I didn't know I was raising a dummy."

Gary Griesser, assistant superintendent for Boone County Schools, said following failure of a child to pass the entrance test some parents had asked private psychologists to test the child for mental retardation.

A father told the subcommittee his daughter hid under the bed and cried four hours after she did not qualify for early entrance.

Famous Last Words . . .

A collection of deathbed utterances is not as morbid as you might think. While some are sad, and some banal, others are simply hilarious.

Here are some comments from a collection in the July Reader's Digest.

Marie Antoinette stepped on her executioner's toe on her way to the guillotine. "Monsieur, I beg your pardon," were her final words.

Sir Walter Raleigh had this to say about the axe poised above his neck: "This is a sharp medicine, but a sure remedy for all evils."

John Holmes, uncle of Oliver Wendell Holmes, lay dying when a nurse reached under the covers to feel his feet. "Nobody ever died with their feet warm," she whispered to a relative. "John Rogers did," Holmes retorted with his last breath. John Rogers was burned at the stake as a heretic in 1555.

There are those who are all business right to the end. Financial editor and publisher Clarence Walker Barron's last words were: "What's the news?" and physician Joseph Henry Green's last word, after feeling his own pulse: "Stopped."

When the doctor told Lord Palmerston of the severity of his situation, the nobleman replied: "Die, my dear doctor! That is the last thing I shall do," and it was. Douglas Fairbanks, game to the end, uttered these last words: "Never felt better."

To Present Plays in County

Ken Baldrige and his Appalachian Summer Theatre troupe (consisting primarily of Alice Lloyd College students) will be presenting three plays in Floyd and surrounding counties during the next six weeks. The plays are free and open to the public. The plays to be presented are: "The Incredible Journey of Feda Maria," a children's play; a Neil Simon comedy, "The Star Spangled Girl" (on the ALC campus July 6, 12, 27 at 7:30) and a Jack Tale that will begin touring Floyd and Knott Counties June 25.

(Contact Ron Daley at Alice Lloyd College if you wish to have one of these plays presented in your community.)

OUTDOOR LORE

by Nevyle Shackelford

UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY • COLLEGE OF AGRICULTURE

One of the most memorable of country sounds is the "potterack, potterack" of the quarrelsome, free-wheeling guinea. Although unforgettable it may be, this guinea song is not very pretty, but in times past served as a warning that a visitor or intruder of some sort was on the premises. In this respect it complemented the services of the watch dog. As a sentinel many a chicken hawk, skunk and owl missed a meal because this bird was on duty. As can be recalled from our days on the farm, let a stranger set foot near the barnyard or chicken lot and the guineas would set up a din like you wouldn't believe.

for eating. Only trouble is that being semi-wild, a guinea hen always hides her nest out somewhere and when found, the eggs are rarely fresh enough for human consumption. Not if she can possibly help it will a guinea hen of the kind we used to know lay an egg in a poultry house or henyard.

A guinea hen will lay anywhere from 16 to 24 eggs before starting to brood. In about 28 days the eggs hatch and almost immediately the chicks are able to depart the nest and run with their mother. The mother, however, is usually a poor caretaker and only a few of the "settin'" survive to adulthood. Young guineas used to die by the dozens from a disease called "the spraddles," a type of ailment supposedly caused by wading in the dew.

At one time just about every farm had a flock of guineas running around over the fields and woods. These fowls were kept for guard duty against hawks and other chicken predators and because they were "easy to raise."

Guineas lived mostly on insects and weed seed gleaned from the wild and were not only little trouble to raise, but also cost little to feed. They were rarely raised for swapping for merchandise at the country store, as were chickens and turkeys, because being more than half wild, they were extremely difficult to pen up and catch. Nevertheless the guinea is a good old bird and an interesting little critter to have around the farm.

The guinea originated in the area of the Sambia and Gabon rivers in West Africa and was brought to Europe during the Middle Ages by Portuguese explorers, who discovered it running wild in flocks numbering in the hundreds. Early Romans developed a great fondness for its dark, rich-tasting flesh and favored it for their feasts. Closely allied to the pheasant, its flesh actually tastes like that of a game bird and when it takes the notion, it can raise and fly with all the skill and speed of a ruffed grouse. Guinea eggs, which are small, yellow, brown and white spotted, with strong thick shells, are also delicious

Gardening Tips from Extension Specialists at the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture

"There was a little robin, whose head was always bobbin', who remarked as he gobbled up a worm; I have eaten all his brothers and ninety-seven others, but, Golly! how they tickle when they squirm."

It would be very nice, indeed, if robins and the other birds around the plantation could take care of all our plant pests, but unfortunately this is not the case. Birds help in the control of some insects, but other controls, namely insecticides, must be utilized to do a good job.

The subject of insect control is often bewildering, especially to the amateur gardener. The multiplicity of sprays, dusts and other remedies seem endless and which to use to keep beetles from eating up the beans, worms from perforating the cabbage, aphids from sucking all the juice from the mustard, and such, is almost enough to drive a person mad. But, according to Rudy Scheibner, Extension entomologist with UK's College of Agriculture, such shouldn't be the case. When practiced as a preventive measure, insect control is relatively simple. Identification and an understanding of the insect or insects causing the problem will make easy the selection of the controls.

Insect injury to plants results mostly from the critter's attempt to secure food. Some insects are most destructive in adult stages, others in larval, or worm stages. Feeding habits generally determine the type of insecticide to use. Chewing or biting insects, which get their nourishment by eating plant, flower or fruit, can be controlled with stomach poisons dusted or sprayed on the foliage. The pests are killed when they eat the poison. In this class of insects are beetles, caterpillars, cutworms, and bagworms.

Sucking insects such as plant lice, lace bugs, mealy bugs, red spiders, scale, thrips and white flies, must be killed by contact insecticides that clog breathing pores or penetrate vital organs.

Insects like ants, grubworms, soil aphids, wireworms and soil web worms must be controlled with soil insecticides, insect disease organisms and other types of poisons. Actually, says Scheibner, the best thing a gardener can do when confronted by an insect problem is to contact his county Extension agent.

This professional can assure identification of the insect causing the trouble and make recommendations for the type of insecticide to be used and the correct way to use it.

Aside from the utilization of birds, natural controls and "bug medicines" in the war against garden pests, another good weapon is garden sanitation. Keep the garden clean, don't let it grow over with weeds. Gather up and burn all diseased plants and stalks of last year's crop. This will clobber any insect or disease germ that may be hiding therein.

Perkins Proposes Crash Program For Synthetic Production of Oil

A bill sponsored by Congressman Carl D. Perkins, of Kentucky, to move the nation into full-scale, commercial synthetic fuel production from coal has cleared a major hurdle.

It was approved unanimously last week by a House of Representatives subcommittee, and Congressman Perkins said that he "fully expects" it to move through the Education and Labor Committee. He is chairman of that committee.

The amendment offered by Perkins sets up a wholly-owned government corporation to produce, or provide assistance in the production of, synthetic fuel equivalent to 5 million barrels of crude oil a day. That is about a third of the nation's present consumption of liquid fuels.

The corporation would be operated by a board of five members appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate, and the board would appoint the officers and employees of the corporation.

To carry out the function assigned to it, the board would be authorized to issue negotiable bonds and other forms of obligation up to a limit of $200 billion. The principal and interest on the corporation's obligations would be exempt from all state or local taxation, and interest income would be excludable from gross income for purposes of federal income taxation.

The corporation is authorized to produce synthetic fuels from plants it builds and operates itself, or to build plants and permit other persons to operate them.

It may make direct loans to persons or entities to assist in the building or operating of plants to produce synthetic fuel.

It may guarantee loans on behalf of persons or entities to assist in the building or operation of synthetic fuel production facilities.

The federal government would acquire any synthetic fuel produced by the corporation or by any of its contractees that remains unsold three months after production.

Under the amendment, three would be authorized the appropriation of $5-billion for each fiscal year to assist in carrying out the purposes of the act.

The amendment also provides that the corporation study and recommend to the President and the Congress tax incentives for private entities to encourage the production of synthetic fuels. The amendment would require annual reports to the President and Congress, including a detailed listing and explanation of every grant, loan, or loan guarantee into which it has entered.

One section provides that the United States reserves the right to take possession of any corporation property during war or national emergency declared by Congress.

"This, we all recognize," Congressman Perkins said, "is not a modest proposal. It probably is unequalled in scope in the history of Congressional action. But these are times that require boldness from the Congress and the President."

In his remarks to the subcommittee considering his synthetic fuels bill Congressman Perkins said, in part:

"We propose to lay before the Congress and the country a specific proposal for solving our energy problems, and for raising this grave threat to the national security and the economy. We believe that the way out of our energy crisis is by developing a whole new industry to produce liquid and gaseous fuels synthetically from the natural resources that are abundant within our borders.

"Since the day we began relying upon foreign producers for a substantial portion of our liquid energy fuels, we have been vulnerable to the whim and caprice of those suppliers. Some of them are potentially hostile to us.

"Now that we depend upon foreign sources for at least half and possibly more of our liquid fuels, our jeopardy is even greater. I think this is intolerable...

"Economic independence will cost a great deal of money. But who among us would care to put a dollar mark on national security?"

"The outflow of upwards of $50-billion a year for foreign petroleum purchases is expensive, too. But with the expenditure of the equivalent of just four years or less of overseas purchases at the present rate, we could stanch the drain of petrodollars forever."

Selecting Strawberries

Summer's warm earth yields many culinary delights, but one of the all-time fruit family favorites is this month's crop of fresh, sweet and succulent strawberries. Not only are strawberries a delight to the palate and the eye, they are also part of the answer to today's quest for a healthy diet. Strawberries are low in calories (one cup equals 55 calories) and sodium, and high in Vitamin C (15 medium strawberries provide 100 percent of the recommended daily allowance of Vitamin C). In addition, strawberries provide 10% of the recommended daily allowance (RDA) of iron for a man and 6.7% of the RDA for a woman.

Unfortunately, though strawberries are available year round, they are worth eating only from April through June. The best strawberries are fresh, dry, clean and bright with a fully red skin. The insides should have a reddish tint. They should be free from moisture (which causes mold) and the caps should be bright green and firmly attached to the berry.

Avoid very small and very large strawberries. They are less flavorful than the well-shaped medium-sized berries. Don't buy strawberries packaged in stained containers. This is an indication of overripe leaky berries.

Strawberries should be stored in a cool dry place and used as soon as possible since they are highly perishable. To clean the berries, always rinse them before hulling. If rinsed after hulling, they will become water logged and they'll spoil rapidly.

Fresh peak season strawberries are perfect at any meal, served by themselves, mounted in cream on a shortcake, sprinkled with powdered sugar, or macerated in a fruity white wine or punch, just to name a few.

Wake Up To Good Nutrition

If you're a confirmed black coffee breakfaster, or an eater of the 20th century's instant breakfasts, or an "I can't possibly look at food before noon" type, here's some sound reasoning to change your "non-eating" breakfast habits.

Recent scientific studies have proven that a balanced breakfast will go a long way toward preventing mid-morning fatigue. To do this, a breakfast must consist of a balanced mix of the necessary food groups; breads and cereals, fruits and vegetables, fish, meats and poultry and dairy products. If eggs, a great source of protein, are limited on your diet, switch to your favorite cheese as a breakfast protein source several mornings a week. Dieters need not worry about caloric intake, as the protein ingested at breakfast will be utilized much quicker than protein eaten later in the day.

Fresh fruit juices are a great source of the much needed vitamins A, C and D. Unfortunately, with today's trend towards convenience, frozen concentrated fruit juices are almost as commonplace as sliced bread. If treated with care in their preparation, however, these juices can provide as many vitamins as the real thing. To maintain their peak vitamin level, do not defrost frozen juices prior to service. Take the concentrate directly from your freezer compartment to your blender or hand masher, add the necessary water, blend and serve immediately.

A breakfast doesn't have to be big to be good. Juice, milk, eggs or cheese and toast spread with margarine and jam will prevent mid-morning fatigue. Dieters will find that a sound breakfast will curb their appetite for the remainder of the day, especially at lunchtime. Mid-morning fatigue will be a thing of the past, once you start the balanced breakfast habit.

THE ART AND SCIENCE OF SKIN CARE

By Helen Mahari

Your skin may be talking about you! It can tell of your age, your health and the climate in which you live, as well as how well you know how to take care of yourself.

Some people are able to transform their skin into looking better, healthier and younger. Many women who want to achieve this have turned to a scientifically developed line of skin-care products manufactured with a special natural mineral and magnesium-rich artesian water improved from Hungary, where women are known for their flawless complexions.

Until now, this scientific facts about natural minerals and magnesium were not utilized in making cosmetics in America. The use of this special water, along with the finest natural preparation of ingredients, contributes to the scientific, and what has been called the spectacular, effectiveness of the Ilona of Hungry skin-care treatment products.

These formulations are individually designed to suit the differing needs of different people: men, teenagers, mature women, people with dry, oily, mixed or blemished skin, and people in different climates. Proper skin care requires using various cosmetics in the proper sequence. Each of the products has been developed with a specific purpose. Following the right daily beauty ritual for your skin type allows the preparation to work. A beautiful skin does not happen overnight.

To look its best, skin should be cleansed thoroughly.

Your first step towards skin beauty is to properly analyze your skin. There is no "all-purpose" cosmetic, just as there is no "all-purpose" medication for illnesses.

To analyze your skin, cleanse it thoroughly the night before. In the morning, check it section by section with a magnifying mirror in sunlight or with a very bright light.

The four basic classifications for skin are dry, normal, oily and blemished. Dry skin is characterized as fine-grained with a parchment-like texture. Normal has compact connective tissues, suppleness and a velvety feel. Oily skin has enlarged pores, blackheads, a sallow color and a thick feel. Blemished skin contains whiteheads and blackheads that don't go away in a few days.

A change of make-up may be all some people need to look better than ever.

View your complexion objectively. The two basic elements to a lovely complexion are health and cleanliness. To help you get them, carefully created cosmetics are available at the two Ilona of Hungry Skin Care Institutes in Denver, Colorado, and Houston, Texas, or can be purchased by mail.

For free information about these cosmetics and skin treatments, and how they may make a difference for you, write to Ilona of Hungry, European Skin Care and Human Improvement Center, Department M, 3201 East Second Avenue, Denver, Colorado 80206.

A Consumer Tip from Extension Specialists at the UK College of Agriculture

You'll save energy and dollars if you always turn off a television set, radio or record player when you leave a room. Teach children how to turn off such equipment, too, suggests the Extension energy conservation specialist with UK's College of Agriculture.

Boiling root and tuber vegetables (carrots, sweet potatoes, potatoes) in their skins retains more vitamins and minerals than cooking these vegetables pared and cut, say Extension food and nutrition specialists with UK's College of Agriculture.

State Leaders Laud Carter Coal Stand

Embattled Jimmy Carter is getting some kind words from Kentucky, particularly from leaders who opposed the closing of the Ohio Coal Market, Eastern Kentucky Coal.

President Carter acted responsibly in refusing to invoke the section of the Clean Air Act that would block the use of low-sulfur Appalachian coal by certain Ohio utilities according to Kentucky Senators Walter (Dee) Huddleston and Wendell Ford, Congressman Carl D. Perkins and Gov. Julian C. Carroll.

"The President's decision reflects a great deal of study and concern," the Senators said in a joint statement. "The decision shows that he understands the complexity of the situation, and he has recommended a workable and an acceptable solution."

The President had been asked to invoke the Clean Air Act provision, known as Section 125, as a result of the loss of Southeastern Ohio mining jobs due to depressed markets conditions. The provision allows the Environmental Protection Agency to require utilities to burn high-sulfur coal if the President makes a determination that switching to low-sulfur coal would cause severe local economic disruption to the region.

Huddleston and Ford successfully argued that the provision could not be so narrowly construed to define a state as a region.

"A dangerous precedent would have been established if the President had invoked Section 125 in this instance," the Senators said. "By not invoking this provision, the President has agreed with our long-held position that Section 125 cannot and should not be used to restrict the sale of coal by establishing an artificial border between Ohio and the other Appalachian states."

"Under the President's decision, Kentucky coal can continue to compete on the open market with other coal from the Appalachian region, and all of that coal can be purchased by users in Ohio. This has been the basis for our position since Ohio first raised the specter of invoking Section 125 last year."

Said Congressman Perkins: "I am glad that the President has followed this wise and statesmanlike course of action. I have been in constant contact with the White House ever since this irrational proposal came to my attention. I hope that we have seen the end of efforts to prevent the free movement of coal into the marketplace."

In his fight against the proposal to curtail Kentucky coal sale to Ohio Power firms, Perkins had intervened in a lawsuit and had introduced legislation to correct this abuse.

Gov. Julian Carroll called President Carter's decision not to invoke Section 125 of the Clean Air Act in Ohio "realistic and responsible."

"Kentucky has been a leader in the fight against Section 125," Gov. Carroll said, noting that the provision "is not in the best interest of traditional coal markets, nor is it of particular benefit environmentally."

Gov. Carroll said Kentucky has filed a motion with the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals to become a part of Elkhorn Coal Company's litigation concerning the overall validity of Section 125.

Widescale Child Abuse Told At Workshop Here Recently

A darker side of American family life, so under-reported that a "conspiracy of silence" has been said to surround it, was at least partially exposed to the light at a meeting in Prestonsburg recently. A workshop, entitled "Violence Within the Family" and sponsored by Mountain Comprehensive Care, aired the problem of the physical and sexual abuse of children in the home.

One fact to emerge is that the problem is widespread. Among the figures cited by Lane J. Veltkamp, associate professor of clinical social work at the University of Kentucky and the workshop's principal speaker, were the following:

—Up to 4 million children annually in the U.S. are victims of abuse.

—An estimated three-quarters of these are sexually abused.

—Up to 11 percent of all physically abused children die of their injuries.

—50 percent suffer skull fractures.

—43 percent suffer permanent damage to the nervous system.

Perhaps even harder to swallow than these grim statistics is the fact that, according to Veltkamp, any parent is capable of child abuse. Contrary to a common perception of the abusing parent as a psychotic misfit, the problem is pervasive. "All of us have abused the people we care about most," Veltkamp told his audience of health, social work, and legal professionals, "including our children, in many cases." He added that the problem affects parents at every social and economical level.

While evidence was presented of the more graphic instances of child abuse—burnings, beatings, scaldings, neglect, and incest—the more commonly tolerated practices of spanking and humiliating children were included in the term. "What a child learns from a spanking," Veltkamp said, "is that, if you're angry, it is all right to hurt someone."

Even the more serious instances of abuse, however, were said to warrant understanding and compassion for the abuser. "No matter what a parent does to a child," Veltkamp said, "there is always a psychological reason for it." The reason, in general terms, is that one or both parents have unmet emotional needs, needs that are not fulfilled by the other spouse or other adults. Abuse begins when the adults call on their children to meet these psychological needs, he said.

Taking issue with some policies of the Department of Human Resources and the courts, Veltkamp said that separating the child from the family is not usually the best solution to a problem of abuse, although it is the action frequently taken by the courts in such cases. Because even an abusing family is bound by important psychological bonds, he explained, "disruption can be worse than the abuse." Rather, he said, a support system needs to be established that can supply the needs of the abusing parent without the parent's having to depend on the child.

It was suggested that a chapter of Parents Anonymous—an organization of parents with child-abuse problems—be established in Floyd county. Efforts are already being made by a local group called DASH (Domestic Abuse Support and Housing) to establish a support network and shelter for domestic abuse victims.

Child abuse is closely related to spouse abuse, said Eula Hall, social worker at the Mud Creek Health Project, during an interview at Wednesday's workshop. "Before you get a battered child," she said, "you usually have a battered woman."

Mrs. Hall attributed the problem to the need of some men to boost their egos. "It's part of the culture," she said, adding, "Some men think they own their wives." Economic conditions in poorer communities—such as unemployment, crowded living conditions, and lack of opportunities for women to get out of the home—contribute to the pressures that result in wife-beating and child-beating, she said.

Alfreda Akers, a nurse at the Mud Creek clinic, added that even religious teachings can foster a climate of domestic abuse. She cited as examples the Biblical injunctions, "Spare the rod and spoil the child" and "Wives, be subject to your husbands."

Both women claimed that a tradition of male domination has been passed on from generation to generation. Organizations like DASH could be helpful, Mrs. Hall said, "as long as it is the victims themselves who are doing the organizing."

NO GAS NEEDED

Concerned over the cost and availability of gasoline during the summer, 20 county inns in Vermont have organized hiking, biking and canoeing tours that allow vacationers to leave their cars home.

The longest of the walking trips is the inn-to-inn hike, a week-long walk between seven inns.

Accepts Texas Position

James L. Ousley, son of Cephus and Rhoda Ousley, of Risner, and a 1962 graduate of Prestonsburg High School, recently received a degree with honors from Indiana Vocational-Technical College. His major was Industrial Electronics Technology. He has accepted a position with Texas Instruments in Houston, Texas.

Williams Says Russians Locked Visiting Net Players in Hotel

A three-week tour of Europe and the Mediterranean area has given University of Kentucky senior basketball player LaVon Williams a more appreciative outlook for the United States after seeing the difference of living styles in the two continents.

Travelling as a member of the USA National Team in the Third Intercontinental Cup series, Williams and 11 other collegians under the tutelage of University of Cincinnati coach Ed Badger made stops in France, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Israel, Yugoslavia and Greece before returning to America May 20.

Williams, who could be classified as a world traveler (he toured Japan last June as a member of the Kentucky Wildcats), felt the tour was an enriching experience sociologically as well as sharpening his skill as a basketball player.

"The things we witnessed in the European countries and their lifestyle made a great impression on all of us," he said. "The strangest thing to become accustomed to there is seeing people walking down the streets carrying big machine guns. Every place had soldiers sitting out front as if to stop trouble, and in Israel soldiers patrolled the beaches and were stationed in the streets outside restaurants."

The U.S. team won only two of six games, but that was not too important, since the main series will be played in South America later this summer.

"I felt it helped me a lot individually playing with different people and against some of the best competition in the world," he said. "I thought I played real well and was selected as captain for two of the games. The teams we played had an advantage of playing together for a long time, while we just had a few days. Their teamwork proved to be their strong point. But I don't think they are as tough a competition as we have in America."

The American team suffered a bit of Russian red tape when they were detained more than 10 hours in Moscow on their way to play at Kiev.

There was some dispute over us owing more money for our baggage," said Williams. "There really was no big problem and payment was made in time for us to catch the plane, but they took off without us and it cost us a day's practice."

"Then when we got to Kiev, we went to practice and the Russians gave us only two basketballs to use. Coach Badger told them that if we couldn't have more balls, that we would not practice and would not play the game and instructed us to get dressed."

The Russians told us, 'I advise you to do so, I advise you to play.' So we got dressed and when we came out to leave, the Russians went over in a corner and got two bags of balls and rolled them out on the court. We went back and had a good practice."

The Russians won the game by 12-points, but the young U.S. team cut the margin down to six before a game-ending rally by the Soviets ran it back to the final margin.

But Williams enjoyed the rest of his Russian stay.

"We were locked in our hotel at night—I understand tourists can't be out on the street after a certain hour, but I didn't want to go out anyway," he said. "Just seeing the Russian people and the way of life they lead was pretty interesting. They have no movies, TV or entertainment like we have. We were well received by the common people as long as there were no VIP's around. When the VIP's showed up, the Russian people treated us strict and firm and were on a non-communicative basis. When we were in the streets, the Russians who spoke English said they were very pleased to see us. They asked a lot about America and wanted to know if we had American magazines and chewing gum to trade. Some people wanted American money, and one man offered two and even three rubles for one American dollar."

And what was the team's favorite stop on the tour?

"We had a good time everywhere we stopped because it was a nice experience, but I suppose everyone enjoyed Israel most," replied Williams. "It was very warm and the people were very, very friendly. There were people from all nationalities, just like here in America. And the people who spoke English would really communicate with you. Tel Aviv was really a nice city—it's just on the edge of the Mediterranean and the people just loved to swim."

Williams was the only player from the Southeastern Conference, but he had an interesting roommate.

"Butch Carter of Big 10 rival Indiana was my roomie on the trip," he said. "We got along really well. We've known each other since high school and he is just a real nice person."

Williams, who will be Kentucky's only frontline senior next season (the other seniors are guards Kyle Macy and Jay Shidler) is looking forward to 1980 and with the super group of recruits coming in, he had this advice.

"The best advice I can give our freshmen is to listen closely to what Coach Hall says and the faster they can pick up Kentucky's style, the easier it will be to adjust," he said.

That and to just concentrate on what their priorities are—and if they can keep outside distractions out of their minds, it'll be a lot easier."

Williams, an articulate speaker and dresser who designs clothing, is making up some lost school time in summer school and along with classes in math and sociology is his specialty—tailoring. And he has some goals to meet on the basketball court as well as graduating on time next May.

"I've been here four years now, and I'm looking forward to a good year personally and team wise too," he said. "As for post-graduation plans, I haven't been thinking too much about it. My mother told me to take my time on deciding about my future and not to put too much pressure on myself."

Williams led the Wildcats in rebounding with 6.9 per game and scored an average of 11.5 points. He started all 31 games and was second to Macy in time played on last year's 19-12 team.

One thing is for sure. Whether LaVon Williams is cramming a basketball in a basket or sewing and designing clothing, he will be a credit to himself, his family and the University of Kentucky.

Homemakers' Quilt Nets $1,000

Susan Akers, president of the Prater Creek Homemakers Club, is shown presenting a $1,000 check to Clinton Akers, president of the Prater Creek Community Development Club. The check represents the proceeds from sale of the quilt by tickets. The check will be used towards the projected multi-purpose room and other community projects. Loretta Conn (extreme right) is shown holding the quilt, which was made by club members. The community club's next meeting is July 5 at 7 p.m. at the Prater school. All residents of the community are welcomed to attend and join in trying to make a better community.

THANKS VOTERS

Kathy and I would like to thank the people of this community for their wonderful support, interest, and kindness during my campaign for Governor. Our opportunity to come to know so many of you was a rare privilege.

Many good things have been said about our campaign, and everyone who was involved shares the credit.

We will return, often I hope, to visit you again, but meanwhile I will carry the knowledge of your support far past this primary. It means a great deal to me and my family.

Again, thanks for everything.
HARVEY I. SLOANE, M.D.

Talk Is Cheap Except

The talk has been good for Kentucky's coal industry. Presidents Nixon, Ford and Carter have all called for the United States to increase the use of coal, our most abundant natural energy resource. The talk has been good for Kentucky, but the actions have not. Rather than see dramatic increases in coal production to offset the need to import more expensive oil, we have seen little in the way of leadership from Washington.

America needs a national energy policy, a policy that will give our nation a sense of energy direction. In this time of renewed energy concern, we need action and not talk.

Washington's inability to move on the question of a national energy policy, coupled with new laws and regulations that further restrict the mining and use of coal, is being felt in Kentucky in terms of coal people out of work, coal people working short weeks and coal people concerned about their future.

And as coal's ability to grow in Kentucky diminishes, the growth of the tax contribution made by coal through the severance, sales and income taxes slows.

The Kentucky Coal Association feels it is time for Washington to bite the bullet and make some solid decisions about America's energy future. America must turn to coal and use this natural energy resource wisely. When this happens, it will be good for America and good for Kentucky. But the KCA wonders how long it will be before Washington awakens to the fact that coal can also be America's Ace in the Hole.

Pack Up Your Sorrows

By Mary Schantz

Tired of the hustle of hurrying crowds, the bustle of business as usual? Worn by the worries of everyday life? Want to get away from it all?

Well, then, come on! Put a pack on your back and head for the hills! Become one of the increasing number of solace seekers who are discovering just how refreshing it can be to get off the beaten track for a day or a week, with nothing but pack on back and miles of beautiful wilderness underfoot. It's the great escape.

Gearing Up

Rule Number 1 for enjoying any hiking trip is this: don't overdo it. Obviously, the better your physical condition when you start out, the easier backpacking will be for you and the further you'll be able to go.

Unless you're in excellent shape, don't set your sights for the highest hills first. While some experienced packers think nothing of hoisting 40 pounds on their backs and hiking hundreds of miles for weeks at a stretch, if this is to be your first time out (even for the season), get yourself in shape by taking a few day hikes into nearby woods. Besides exercising some muscles you probably never even knew you had, you'll have a chance to break in and test your equipment—and yourself.

Once you've passed this "fitness test," you should have no trouble on overnight hikes. Just choose gradually graded, well marked trails for starters.

Trails

An easy way to locate nearby trails is to join an outdoor club in your area. Most clubs organize hikes throughout the year and rate them according to trail difficulty. If you're not aware of any clubs in your area, write to your state's Parks Department or Department of Conservation for information, or contact an organization such as The Sierra Club (Mills Tower, 220 Bush St., San Francisco, Ca. 94104) and ask about their local chapters.

If you'd rather go it alone, request maps and trail guidebooks from your state's Recreation and Tourist Bureau or Chamber of Commerce, or write to any of the National Parks for their marked trail maps.

The best known of the carefully maintained trails are the Appalachian Trail, which runs from Maine to Georgia, and the Pacific Crest National Scenic Trail, which extends from Canada to Mexico. Most camping goods stores carry guidebooks that will tell you which parts of these trails would be right for you.

Equipment

If the first requirement for happy hiking is to take it easy on the trail, the second is to go lightly. Remember, when you're thumbing through those enticing camp equipment catalogs, almost everything you purchase and pack goes on your back. Don't buy anything you don't really need. Fortunately, the new lightweight metals and materials can help you keep pack weight down.

Prices are on their way up, so if you're a beginning backpacker, you should beg, borrow or rent some of your gear until you're sure you like the sport and want to continue with your own equipment. Then consider the following before making your major purchases:

Backpack: On day hikes, a small rucksack is fine for carrying rain parka, lunch, first aid kit, and camera. For overnight hiking, you'll need a larger pack with a frame to help you carry the additional weight of tent, stove and sleeping bag.

One of the best ways to determine whether a particular pack is right for you is to try it on at the store, preferably stuffed with about 25 pounds of gear. Are the shoulder straps well padded? Can they be adjusted to fit more comfortably? Is there an attached hip belt, padded and adjustable, to help shift the weight from your shoulders and upper back to your stronger pelvic area? Is the frame sturdy? Is the pack material durable? Yes, yes, and yes again? That may be the pack for you.

Tent: Unless you intend to sleep under a tarp, in the open or in trail shelters, your best bet is a lightweight (5-8 lb.) rip-stop nylon tent with a rain fly and a waterproof floor, and adequate screened ventilation front and rear.

Sleeping bag: You have several insulating materials to consider when buying a bag. The lightest, warmest, most compactible (but also the most expensive) bags use goose down for insulation. One great disadvantage of down is that it loses its loft (thus its warmth) when wet. The bulkier synthetic fiber-filled bags don't provide as much warmth per pound, but are less expensive and warmer when wet.

Stove: Wood fires aren't allowed along many trails today, and are nearly impossible when you're above tree-line anyway, so you'll probably need a compact, lightweight stove. The liquid fuel stoves (white gas or kerosene) require priming but heat faster than the less messy gas cartridge stoves (propane or butane).

Boots: A good pair of sturdy, lug-soled, properly padded hiking boots is your most important purchase. Have your boots fitted while you're wearing two pairs of socks (two pairs increases padding and decreases blister-forming friction on your heels). Break them in before you begin backpacking! Remember, your tender feet are your "sole" means of transportation on the trail. Blisters and bruises have wrecked many an otherwise perfect trip.

Packing

You can't wake up to that steaming cup of coffee if you forget to pack the instant, nor can you ward off the rain if your parka is still hanging in the hall closet, so plan first—then pack!

How much and what kinds of food to pack depends on personal preference, but remember that calorie requirements are much greater when hiking than sitting. Lightweight freeze-dried and dehydrated foods that are simple to prepare are your best bet. You can buy complete, just-add-boiling-water meals at a camping store, or you can buy less expensive dehydrated foods at any grocery store.

Remember to pack utensils for preparing and eating your meals: spoon, cup, bowl, jackknife, and lightweight pot. You'll also need water purification tablets, canteen, collapsible water jug, pot holder, stove fuel, waterproof matches, and food bag for your camp kitchen.

Clothing is your next concern: pack several extra pairs of socks, sneakers for around-camp wear, a full change of clothes, hat and sunglasses for sun protection, a heavy sweater or parka for chill nights, and raingear—a poncho or parka for you, and a few big plastic garbage bags for your pack!

What else? Don't forget a flashlight, map and compass, extra shoelaces, insect repellent, sun cream, at least 25 feet of nylon rope (you'll discover plenty of uses) and a first aid kit.

There's an art to proper packing. You want to carry most of the weight close to your center of gravity, so pack the heaviest items highest. Keep constant-use items in outside pockets. Once you've found a system that works for you, always use it, so that you can find things in the dark easily.

On Your Way

You've chosen your trail and gathered your gear. You're all packed and ready to go—almost. Before you head for the hills, leave a trip plan with a friend or neighbors, and tell them when to expect your return. You shouldn't have any trouble if you use your common sense.

Don't try to cram too much hiking into one day. Set up camp, complete your cooking, clean up before dark, and then relax. Talk with your fellow travelers over a last cup of hot chocolate. Sit still and watch the setting sun, or curl up in your sleeping bag and let the sounds and smells of the woods lull you to sleep. At daybreak you'll wake up feeling fresh and alive. Your muscles may feel a little sore, but you'll know that, at long last, you really got away from it all!

Engagement Announced

Mrs. Esta Jones, of Ripley, W. Va., and Mr. Willis Hall, of Martin, wish to announce the engagement and forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Rhoda Renee Hall, to Loren D. Crisp, son of Rev. and Mrs. Donald Crisp, of Grethel, formerly of Martin.

Miss Hall is a 1979 graduate of Allen Central high school and will be attending Prestonsburg Community College this fall.

Mr. Crisp is a 1975 graduate of Willard High School, Willard, Ohio, and is an employee of South Central Bell Telephone Company.

The wedding will be solemnized Saturday, July 14, at 6:30 p.m. at the Faith Bible Church in Martin.

The gracious custom of open church will be observed.

Mud Creek Fire Dept. Gets Funds

Magistrate Hershell Hamilton is shown above with County Judge-Executive Yvonne Jones who presented him with a check for $8,888 which he accepted on behalf of the Mud Creek Volunteer Fire Department. The money is from coal severance tax and is being used for the construction of a new fire station which will serve residents of Mud Creek, Branham's Creek or Toler Creek. A membership drive is now being conducted.

Says OSM Uncooperative

At a Senate oversight hearing on the Federal Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act held in Washington last week a top state environmental official criticized the federal Office of Surface Mining (OSM) for being uncooperative with state officials.

Frank Harscher, deputy secretary of the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, told the Senate's Subcommittee on Energy Resources and Materials Production there are "grave implications" for Kentucky if the deadline for submitting its permanent program for the surface mining is not extended. (President Carter later asked an extension.)

Speaking on behalf of Gov. Julian Carroll, Harscher said the Aug. 3, 1979 deadline should be extended at least the same amount of time that was granted to OSM for developing the permanent program regulations. The deadline for OSM to develop the regulations was extended from Aug. 3, 1978 to Mar. 13, 1979.

Harscher said this delay has "drastically cut into the time states have had to develop their program submissions under stringent deadlines already set forth in the act."

Because a permanent program must be achieved before state agencies can be funded for their abandoned land programs, Harscher said this provision causes "some extreme discomfort to a major producer like Kentucky." Coal producers in Kentucky have already paid approximately $40 million in a federal tax for orphan land reclamation.

"If we stumble only slightly, we could possibly lose our control and management leverage over this vital program—both economically and environmentally," said Harscher.

He also pointed out the so-called "state window" (the prerogative of a state to adapt certain criteria to a specific case) does not provide "substantial areas for variation from the stringent OSM permanent rules." He specifically noted that some Appalachian mines must have approximate original contour variances so strip mined land can be left level for development purposes.

He called for "meaningful and sophisticated state-federal cooperation" in implementing state programs. He said the Senate committee "can play a unique and helpful role in providing clarification, consistency and communication on the part of OSM."

"OSM appears to have already become a bureaucratic jungle," said Harscher and added, "they have neither clarified, been consistent nor responsive to the states which are attempting in good faith to submit permanent program proposals."

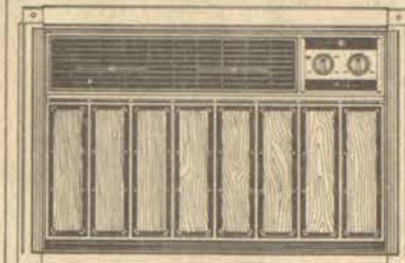

Harscher urged OSM, with advice from the committee, to "reciprocate with the states and enter into a truly mutual, cooperative approach required by the act."

The earliest authenticated strike of workers in the United States in a single trade occurred in 1786 when Philadelphia printers gained a minimum wage of $6 a week, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Investing in the Home of Your Dreams

By Ruth Gerchick

With the cost of buying a house at an all-time high and still climbing, is now the time to invest in a new house?

Many economists say "yes, do it now." A well-built house in a desirable neighborhood is rising in value at a faster pace than inflation. Prices of new homes today average $64,000, and prices have been increasing at the rate of 1% a month. In five years, if there are no unexpected changes in the economy, the $64,000 house should sell for $100,000. Of course you can't use the profit if you haven't sold the house, but your equity builds each year as you pay for the mortgage.

A house may be the best investment you can get today. And you don't need a manager or employees to watch over it for you. Also, if you sell it, you pay taxes on any profit at the lower capital gains rate instead of at your regular income tax rate. If you are over 55, you can choose once in your lifetime to exclude up to $100,000 in profits from your taxes.

Of course, investment in real estate is like all other investments. Quality counts. A poorly-built house in a rundown neighborhood will almost certainly depreciate, while a well-constructed building in a good area is likely to continue soaring in value.

The Search Begins

Falling in love with a wonderful place is not a bad way to begin shopping for a house. But be prepared to love it and leave it if it doesn't fill your family's needs.

Think first and then look. A written checklist comes in handy before you venture out into the real estate market. Number one on your agenda will probably be location.

Ask yourself: must you live near your job? Do you mind commuting? How many miles are you willing to travel each day? Do you prefer the city or town to a suburb or rural area?

Ask yourself if you are willing to pay out more than the recommended 20-25% of your yearly earnings on the costs of home ownership like taxes, mortgage payments and repair. You should also look into the reliability of such services as garbage removal, road repair and police and fire protection in your neighborhood. And who will your neighbors be?

Is the house of your choice near public transportation, or will you need a second car? Will playgrounds or swimming pools in the vicinity provide ample recreation for your family? And how about zoning? What's the minimum land requirement for each house? Will zoning laws allow a factory to be built next door?

If religion or community life is important to you, check out the whereabouts of local churches or synagogues. If you have children, will they find companions their own age? Many charming communities attract a large number of retired people—not exactly suitable for the junior high crowd.

You'll also want to judge the quality of the schools. Even if you are childless, good schools help sell houses, and this will protect your investment. Ask the school principal for the ratio of students to teachers and how much the school spends on each student. Find out how many students are accepted at good colleges and technical schools.

Don't stay in the dark about electricity and water costs either, or the frequency of mail delivery. Local government offices can answer many of these kinds of questions. And for a real feel of the neighborhood, try talking to a druggist or owner of a hardware store, or a bartender, for that matter.

When you've zoomed in on your preferred community, there are several ways to proceed. Read ads, ask friends if they've heard of a house for sale, or, as most people do, choose a real estate broker in the vicinity.

Using A Broker

Your broker should be licensed, by the National Association of Realtors. He should know the area you're interested in like the proverbial back of his hand. Of course you don't have to stick with the first agent you meet, but it's advisable, eventually, to deal with one agent exclusively. The broker who understands your needs won't waste your valuable weekends trekking you through unsuitable houses. A word of caution: don't inspect the same house with different brokers. Arguments about who deserves the fee, (paid by the seller) may interfere with the sale. Frequently house closings are delayed for months until brokers claims are settled.

At times it pays to buy directly from the seller. But a good realtor may, in fact, get you a better bargain. Negotiation is their specialty, and though they represent the seller first and foremost, they will do everything possible to make the sale.

Some families search for years for the right house; others stumble onto the house of their dreams on their first shopping expedition. Psychologists often say you find what you want when you are ready to find it. When making your final decision to buy, try not to be carried away by a beautiful view of a sunset when you were in the home, or the thick carpeting in the house, which the owner will probably take with him when he moves.

New house or old? Take your choice. Old houses have thick walls, high ceilings and established lawns. However, they may also require expensive repairs, have unusable dust-catching spaces and termites. New houses, which are easier to maintain and have shiny, gadget-filled kitchens, sometimes have paper thin walls and fragile construction which may buckle under ordinary pressure.

Inspecting The House

Old or young, many houses are not what they seem to be. A fresh coat of paint can cover up a multitude of defects, so it is important that you check out any house you're thinking of buying with the utmost care.

For instance, can the electrical system carry at least 100 amperes, or 150 if the house is air-conditioned? If not, be prepared to stagger the use of every electrical appliance in the house, from the coffee pot and the toaster to the washing machine.

Be wary, too, of other possible problems. Termites are not a happy sight, but more often you'll uncover the damage they've done before you see the critters themselves. A good way to check for infestation is to jab at some of the basement lumber. If a knife sinks in about an inch or more without special effort on your part, there's still time to get into your car and back out of the deal.

Inside the house, there are numerous other places that you should investigate. Is the thermostat working properly? Do ceilings under bathrooms show signs of leaky pipes? What's the condition of the roof?

If, like most people, you are not an expert on houses, why not take your search one step further. Ask your real estate broker or lawyer for the name of a professional inspector who will make a complete assessment of the structure. For a fee of a couple of hundred dollars, you may save yourself tens of thousands—and a very bad headache.

Home Warranties

Under several new plans, homeowners may be protected against such tragedies. Workmanship, structure and mechanical systems, such as heating, plumbing and air conditioning can now be guaranteed according to a new concept in insurance—a warranty for homeowners.

Today, a number of companies offer such warranties, but conditions and benefits vary.

For example, warranties offered by the National Association of Home Builders provide ten year coverage against structural defects and mechanical breakdowns of heating, air-conditioning, plumbing and appliances. In the first two years, the builder does the repairs. In the following eight years, major problems will be covered by insurance.

The National Home Inspection Service, offers a similar warranty for either a new or old home. An inspector is sent to the house to report on its condition. Then either the owner or buyer may purchase a warranty. This pays up to $25,000 for repair or replacement of building elements which have broken down, but which were found to be in good shape at the time of the inspection.

Wall Street Panel To Present Review

"Wall Street Week's" semi-annual self-analysis, "Mid-Year Review," airs Friday, July 6 at 8:30 p.m. (ET) on KET.

Host Lois Rukeyser gathers together the four panelists from the first program of 1979 to make sense out of the current economic picture.

"It's a look back and a look ahead," explained Robert Harrison of the Maryland Center for Public Broadcasting, producer for the "Wall Street Week" series. The panelists, Frank Cappiello, Robert Nurock, Carter Randall and Robert Stovall, will look at the statistics and compare what they predicted would happen with what actually occurred, according to Harrison.

"Mid-Year Review" will be assessment too," continued Harrison. "With Rukeyser riding herd, the panelists will indicate where the country is going—economically speaking; the state of the economy; and the impact of energy problems on the market."

"Wall Street Week" is repeated on Sundays at 1:30 p.m. (ET).

Robber Bridegroom, Next at JW

The 15th anniversary season of the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre continues this week with the opening of "The Robber Bridegroom," a fanciful folktale filled with music and laughter.

The play, based on a novella by southern writer Eudora Welty, tells the story of Jamie Lockhart, a gentleman of the Old South who feels driven to steal whenever and whatever he can. Ever the southern gentleman, he always steals with style, even when he decides to try to steal the love of a young lady.

"The Robber Bridegroom" is a new show, having opened on Broadway on Oct. 9, 1976. Its roots reach much farther back, though, starting with a fairy tale written by the Brothers Grimm. Welty liked the story and wrote her novella in 1942. Later, a version of it popped up as a part of Paul Sill's "Story Theatre" on Broadway. It first appeared as a full stage production in 1975 when John Housemen's City Center Acting Company presented it.

In addition to its regular cast, the production at the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre will include the talents of Buddy and Angie Ratcliff, of Martin, who will provide the fiddle music for the show. Bill Campbell, general manager, said that at one time he was really worried about finding a fiddler for the show. "Buddy's being here has helped us out a lot," Campbell said. "We're really glad to have him and Angie this summer."

"The Robber Bridegroom" will be presented at the theatre Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday nights through July 15. On Friday evenings, "Starting Here, Starting Now", a new musical revue, will be presented. Ticket information may be obtained by calling 886-9274 or writing Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre, Box 22, Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653. Curtain for all performances is 8:30.

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS OF SMITH CABLE T.V.

Due to a ruling of the Federal Communication Commission, it is illegal to "trap-out" channel seventeen, Atlanta, for those who do not desire its service. Therefore, the franchise authority has granted permission to Smith Cable T.V. to charge one uniform rate of $7.50 dollars. The agency regrets its inability to allow those few who do not desire channel 17 that option, but the only alternative would be to deny all customers that service. A vast majority of the Smith Cable T.V. system have indicated their desire for said channel 17, consequently, the majority interest is best served by this action.

1979 Acreage Reports Deadline Is July 15

All Floyd county farmers are reminded that they need to report their 1979 acreages of spring-seeded crops (corn) to the county ASCS office by July 15.

Farmers who are participating in the 1979 feed grain program must report their acreages of set-aside and corn in order to be eligible for payment or program benefits.

It is important that all farmers growing grain crops report since the crop acreage for their farm will be considered zero if they do not report, ASCS said.

PBS Protests School Board Closed Session

PBS (Parents for Better Schools) protested the closed session of the special meeting of the Floyd County Board of Education last Wednesday evening when teachers for the coming school year were employed, and will go a step farther today (Wednesday) by conferring with the Attorney General's office about the legality of the proceedings.

The PBS representatives—Ruby Catherine Clifton, Ann Latta, Carl Castle and Dr. Jerry Nelson—will also discuss with the Attorney General's office the board of education budget. The board itself talked with the office last week about the budget, its deficit and plans to eliminate the deficit.

The so-called "Sunshine Law" is at issue between PBS and the board. PBS contends that the board may not legally have a closed, or executive, session without prior notice of such meeting, including a statement of matters to be discussed in the closed meeting.

Supt. of Schools Pete Grigsby, Jr. said he feels that the contention arises from PBS' misunderstanding of the law. He quoted Board Chairman John M. Stumbo as saying the board had a legal right to go into executive session for a discussion of teacher appointments, transfers and dismissals. No official decision was made during the closed session, he said, but the decision was announced in the open session part of the meeting.

TO THE PEOPLE OF FLOYD COUNTY

I, T. P. "Tim" Reynolds, would like to thank all of my voters for their help and support. I hold no ill feeling toward anyone who voted against me. And I will support the Democratic Party this November.

Your friend,
T. P. "TIM" REYNOLDS

Q. I'm confused about the different kinds of dinnerware and glassware. For instance, what's the difference between earthenware and stoneware? Between china and porcelain? C.O., Arlington, Va.

A. It's true that within the industry there aren't rigid standards which are accepted by everyone, but certain broad definitions are pretty well agreed upon.

Dinnerware
• Fine china is translucent, light in weight and surprisingly strong.

• Porcelain is very similar to fine china, but has a lower first firing temperature and a higher second firing temperature. As a result, porcelain has a hard glaze, and is often warped slightly.

• Bone china is fine china with ash from cattle bones in the body, which gives it its stark white color.

(One thing to remember when shopping is that not all china is fine. Some is thick and not translucent, such as that found in some restaurants.)

• Pottery is ceramic dinnerware in its crudest form, being opaque and easily chipped or broken.

• Earthenware is fired at a higher temperature and contains better clays than pottery, making it somewhat stronger.

• Stoneware is fired even higher and comes close to being china.

Glassware

• Handblown crystal is blown, trumpetlike, by artisans from the end of a blowpipe. Each piece is created individually. Because it is an original work of art, it is valued highly.

• Handmolded crystal is formed in a hand-sculptured mold. Its process is similar to handblown crystal, except handmolded glass is pressed, rather than blown, into shape. It's a heavier, more durable piece of glass, usually less formal, and fine for everyday use.

• Machine-made glass is automatically blown or molded in mass production by machine. It costs less, but lacks the finesse of crystal.

• Lead crystal is used in handblown ware and contains lead oxide. It can be distinguished by its clarity, brilliance and resonant ring when tapped.

• Lime crystal tends to be heavier and is used in handmolded ware. Its high proportion of lime processed with soda or other alkalis produces a clear, fast-setting glass.

Q. I'm 17, and I just bought my first car. Since it's not a new one and I can't afford any major breakdowns, I want to concentrate on preventive maintenance. Can you offer any guidelines? B.Y., Mesa, Ar.

A. Follow this guide and you will keep your maintenance costs down.

• Brake fluid—Check it at six month intervals, because it gradually evaporates.

• Automatic transmission—Check its fluid level and change it when needed, or approximately every 24,000 miles. Regularly adjust the front bands.

• Engine oil—One of the most important maintenance tasks. Occasionally check its level when buying gas. Your owners manual will recommend how often the oil and oil filter should be changed.

• Radiator—Add water when needed to keep coolant at proper strength. Change coolant once a year. Check the radiator hose for cracks and weak spots every 12,000 miles.

• Air filter—Oil-bath filters should be cleaned with every lubrication or every six months. Dry-air filters should be vacuumed twice a year.

• Fuel filter—Change it every year.

• Tires—Check the tire pressure at least once a month for normal driving. Rotate them at recommended intervals to equalize wear.

• Fan belt—Test tension periodically for wear.

Q. I've come across more and more service stations charging money to fill my car's tires with air. This is an outrage. How can they get away with this? What action can I take? S.G., Baldwin, N.Y.

A. You can write city hall—at least one city has threatened to outlaw the coin-operated meters which, for two bits, will allow your tires a few shots of the same stuff you breathe for free. Station operators say metered air is justified because it costs $500 a year to run and maintain their air compressor. If you live west of the Mississippi, chances are you'll seldom have to pay for pumping up your tires, but to the east it's a different story.

Q. My family and I have just moved to a coastal town from an inland city. I love fresh seafood, but am quite naive when it comes to shopping for it. Do you have any tips on what to look for when buying fresh seafood? P.T., Mobile, Al.

A. Fresh fish have a pleasant aroma, with bright and transparent eyes. They have shiny skin, red gills, firm and elastic meat and good color. Lobsters should be active, scallops creamy pink, and crabs should move and smell sea-fresh. Mussels, clams and oysters should have tightly closed shells. Shrimp should be meaty, firm and have a mild odor.

Q. Is there added salt (not occurring naturally) in these commercial products: sharp cheese (hard type, not processed), dry skim milk, and cottage cheese? Also, what is pot cheese and farmer's cheese? F.H., Preston, Md.

A. Of the first three products, only sharp cheddar cheese has added salt.

Pot cheese is a type of cottage cheese, but one with a larger curd. Check the label also, as pot cheese is sometimes higher in fat content.

Farmer's cheese is a cottage or whey cheese that comes in a compressed brick form. It's drier than normal cottage cheese, with a firmer texture.

Q. I hired a patent attorney in New York to handle an invention I created. He told me my idea had never been patented. I later found out that it had been. How can I get back the large sum of money that I paid him? H.G., Alexandria, La.

A. We assume you've discussed the patent attorney's error with him and he refused to refund your fee. If you haven't, talk to him and try to arrive at some mutually satisfying settlement before pursuing legal action. If this fails, your only recourse is to hire another attorney (hopefully one who doesn't golf with the first) to initiate proper legal proceedings. Since we're sure your trust in lawyers has been shaken somewhat, choose one who you or a close associate knows to be honest and fair.

Q. I've had my car stolen twice—once some kids took it for a joy ride, and the second time it was taken for keeps. It seems that cars are designed to offer even the novice car thief a variety of ways to get in and get away with one's wheels. Why aren't cars designed with more security in mind? L.A., Jackson Hole, Wyo.

A. They soon will be. By 1981, says the Department of Transportation, all passenger cars must have these features:

• Door lock buttons will be redesigned to eliminate lifting from the outside.

• The hood latch will be released only from the inside.

• To reduce "hot wiring," the ignition wires will be protected.

• The door and trunk keys will be different from the ignition key.

• When the ignition lock is removed, the ignition system will not function.

• Steering columns will not lock when the vehicle is moving.

Q. Which diseases should children be immunized against, and when? R.M., Seattle, Wa.

A. There are seven major diseases against which children should be immunized. (Smallpox vaccination is no longer considered necessary, as it apparently has been completely eradicated.) The following vaccination schedule is recommended by the American Medical Association:

• Polio (oral vaccine), diphtheria, tetanus, whooping cough—four doses, at ages 2, 4, 6 and 18 months, with a booster at age 4 to 6 years, before entering school.

• Rubella, measles, mumps—one vaccination at age one to 12 years, with no booster.

Also a first test for tuberculosis may be recommended at one year. Keep a record of all vaccinations, with dates.

In Loving Memory of my dear brother Bobby H. Ward who passed away December 21, 1978. Six months have passed since they laid your young body in the ground. The smile that shone upon your face Showed us you were Heaven-bound.

More homelike seems the vast unknown Since you have entered there; To follow you would not be hard— No more tears, not a care

Memories are all I have now, How precious they seem to be. But memories cannot replace The brother I long to see.

You brightened all the joy of life, You could soften any frown, You are one of the dearest brothers In this world that could be found.

I'll live my life the best I can Until we meet again. My dear, sweet brother, I love you. Goodbye until then. So sadly missed by everyone. BILLIE JEAN WARD

In Loving Memory of father, Maryland Conn. Daddy, it has been three years the 17th day of June. Since God called you home, To never more roam. It really has grieved my heart. But someday, Dad we will meet, and nevermore part. Sadly missed by daughter, ALBERTA BLACKBURN

SAFELY HOME I am home in Heaven, dear ones, Oh, so happy and so bright, There is perfect joy and beauty In this everlasting light.

All the pain and grief is over, Every restless tossing passed, I am now at peace forever, Safely home in Heaven at last.

Then you must not grieve so sorely, For I love you dearly still Try to look beyond earth's shadows, Pray to trust our Father's Will.

There is work still waiting for you, So you must not idly stand, Do it now, while life remaineth— You shall rest in Jesus' land. When that work is all completed He will gently call you home, Oh, the rapture of that meeting. Oh, the joy to see you come. SADLY MISSED—CHARLIE, ANN, GLADYS, PHYLLIS AND JACK

The Mexican pyramids rival those of Egypt. But the July Reader's Digest points out that there is a fundamental difference between the two: while Egyptian pyramids were built away from population centers to be used as tombs for royalty, the Mexican pyramids were built in the center of a civilization and were used as places of worship, sacrifice and astrological observation.

Americans today eat about 150 pounds of food less than their ancestors did around the turn of the century. Yet obesity is still a problem, the July Reader's Digest observes—probably because we let machines do most of our strenuous work and we get less exercise.

Property Tax Ceiling Poses School Problem

The recently adopted clamp on property tax revenues has led Kentucky legislators to consider other methods for raising local school district revenues.

The Subcommittee on Education and the Arts has heard testimony from educational representatives and a Legislative Research Commission staff member which suggested other revenue-raising taxes that would maintain local tax support for the school system.

HB 44, which was passed by the extraordinary session of the Kentucky General Assembly earlier this year, limits property tax revenues. School districts depended on property taxes for 74 percent of all locally generated funds in 1977-78, according to LRC statistics.

"It's going to be extremely difficult to ever replace the property tax as funding for secondary and elementary education," according to Jim Melton of the School Boards Association.

Melton suggested repealing a section of HB 44 so that districts with low tax rates wouldn't be prohibited from raising the rates. Allowing school districts to levy an additional permissive tax would also raise revenue, he said. Public opposition to property taxes might be lessened if an installment payment plan was adopted, according to Melton.

Gilmore Dutton, LRC staff administrator, said "We've got a very serious problem of taxpayer confidence in the property tax." The unpopularity of the tax has limited school districts' abilities to generate additional revenues, he said.

LRC research seems to indicate that a district by district sales or income surtax could provide a suitable source of alternative funding, according to Dutton. An income tax would have the advantage of being deductible for federal income taxes, Dutton said.

Problems with the surtax system are that the surtax rate for income taxes would vary from one district to another, according to Dutton. A solution would be to adopt a uniform countywide rate and allocate the revenue according to the taxpayer's residence, Dutton suggested. This method would come closer to previous revenues from property taxes, he said.

Prepared legislation on school taxes was not discussed by the subcommittee.

WHY CABBAGE "BOLT"

More than one gardener has become upset when their cabbages go to seed before they are ready to harvest. He remembers they were growing fine during cool weather and wonders what happened.

Experienced gardeners know that spring-planted cabbage will head up and burst and shoot up flower stalks in midsummer if not harvested fairly promptly. This premature flowering is called "bolting" and is caused by prolonged exposure to cold weather. If you garden early or use large transplants, and they are exposed to continuous 40 to 50 degree weather for 30 to 60 days, some or all of the plants will bolt.

Research shows that the best way to avoid bolting is to start with small plants. Transplants should have leaves no more than 1 1/2 inches wide.

Bolting is much more likely where mild winters allow early planting or where fall-planted cabbage overwinters. Some varieties of cabbage have been especially selected to resist bolting.

STRAWBERRIES DON'T CLIMB

A number of mail order firms have engaged in a national advertising campaign to market climbing strawberries. "It's a skyrocketing pillar of fruit. Man-high strawberries. As big as plums—in just 60 days," the ads exclaim. They are meant to appeal to people who like strawberries, have a limited space for growing them and possess little knowledge of plants.

Strawberries don't climb. The ads are false and misleading. The Postal Service and Better Business Bureau have named six companies in complaints. One has agreed to return orders and offer refunds.

These companies are receiving thousands of orders a day. People should be warned before wasting their money on a worthless product.

Cave Run Lake Has Much To Offer

You walk slowly along the path to the water's edge, not wanting to miss the sight of a squirrel playing in a tree or the pattern sunlight makes as it filters through the woodland. The world is quiet except for the twitter of birds and the far-off hum of a boat.

The campground at Cave Run Lake's Twin Knobs is crowded with tents and campers. It is twilight time, and everything seems at peace with the world.

Most campsites in national forests or well-managed parks are located to take advantage of the outdoors. There are trees, native shrubs and wildflowers, a creek, river or lake to enjoy.

Cave Run Lake is one of the state's newest and already a popular place for campers, hikers, boaters, those who fish and those who ask nothing more than a few hours away from the routine.

"There's something curative about water," said a camper from western Kentucky. "I enjoy our Land Between the Lakes and decided to see what Cave Run was like."

Cave Run Lake is located near Morehead and its 8,270 surface acres provide shoreline in Rowan, Bath, Menifee and Morgan counties. Located within Daniel Boone National Forest and accessible from Interstate-64 or U.S. 60, the area has 237 campsites at Twin Knobs. The campground will be open through deer-hunting season. There is a large beach with bathhouse.

A boat-in campground was opened this year off Clay Lick boat ramp on Ky. 1274. Campers using this site arrive by boat only. No charge is made to camp at Clay Lick, but other campsites are available at $4 a day for one-family units and $7 for two-family units. Near the Primitive Weapons area, Clear Creek Furnace offers 24 camping sites and a rifle range.

Among new features at Cave Run Lake this season is an outdoor theater. The first presentation, "South Pacific," will open June 29.

Producer Dr. William Joe Layne of Morehead State University said if successful, the pioneering theater venture could become a permanent part of the lake program. "South Pacific" will run two nights the weekend of June 29. Off following weekends during July, the musical will be presented one night, followed the next night by another Broadway production, "Pippin."

The Twin Knobs beach area, with the lake and nearby woodlands as background, is the setting for the debut of the Cave Run Outdoor Theater.

A recreation facility is to be developed just off Ky. 826 in the future at Cave Run. This site will have a boat ramp, fishing platforms, comfort station and shelter house.

A major project to be completed in the future will be an extensive recreation facility in the Zilpo section of the lake, Zilpo, in Menifee County, will be similar to Twin Knobs in size and offerings.

A wildlife viewing area with special trails and blinds for duck hunters is to open next spring.

Target of many visitors to Cave Run is a visit to the Minor E. Clark Fish Hatchery. The hatchery is operated by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife.

A popular sport on the lake is water skiing, according to Reuel Buchanan, chairman of Morehead's Tourism Commission. He says the entire lake is a paradise of the outdoor-oriented family. Cave Run Lake was formed by a dam across Licking River near Farmers in Bath County. A highway atop the dam leads travelers from Bath to Rowan County. Buchanan said plans are under way to clear the upper river channel to provide access down river to the lake.

Already a popular place with tourists from all states and some from foreign countries, the lake area is destined to attract thousands of tourists in the years ahead.

Allen Says Coal Severance Too Long a 'Political Football'

Coal severance tax monies have been kicked around as a political football too long, State Representative James "Jitter" Allen said in an interview this week. "I'm tired of hearing about how we don't get our severance taxes back," Allen said, referring to a complaint made most commonly in connection with the sorry state of many Floyd County roads.

Figures supplied by the state Legislative Research Commission appear to bear out Allen's contention that Floyd county at least has little to complain about in regard to the return of coal severance taxes to the county. According to a recent commission memorandum, the total amount of coal severance tax allocated to Floyd County through various state revenue-sharing programs during the past 5 years is $51,268,754.

The amount of coal severance tax paid by Floyd County taxpayers (coal producers) during the same period is listed as $18,866,310. This means that the amount of severance tax returned to this county is 272 percent greater than the amount collected here.

These figures put Floyd countians in a relatively weak position to argue on the basis of their not getting back their severance taxes, Allen said, especially in view of the fact that Jefferson county, for example, might as reasonably argue for a return to that county of the sales taxes collected there, or Fayette County for a return of their taxes on tobacco.

What some people don't understand, Allen continued, is that a representative has one vote in a legislature in which all other representatives are arguing as strongly for their own sectional interests. "I am aggravated when people say that (Governor) Julian Carroll never did anything for Floyd County," the lame-duck state legislator said, adding, "I doubt seriously whether any other governor has spent as much on Floyd county as he has."

Concerning the availability of severance taxes for local road construction, the Research Commission memorandum makes it clear that not all of this money is earmarked for road construction, and considerably less of it is available for the repair of county roads.

While nearly $47 million has been set aside over the 5-year period for the energy resource recovery road program—the new KY 80 and the projected KY 3, from Inez to Prestonsburg—only $914,613 has been allocated in the same period to the energy road fund and, of this amount, only 40 percent comes under the purview of the fiscal court for the maintenance of county roads, the remaining 60 percent being distributed by the state for state roads.

Funds for purposes other than road construction benefiting from severance taxes include the economic aid fund (which has financed, among other projects, a number of local fire departments, mini parks, and the Wheelwright swimming pool), the area development fund (which goes to the Big Sandy AD District), and the district power equalization fund (which goes to the Board of Education).

Funds for road construction within the county which do not come from severance tax monies include the rural secondary roads program, financed by a 9 cents a gallon gas tax, for state roads, and the county road aid fund, financed by a nine-tenths of a cent per gallon gas tax, for county roads.

Floyd County's share of the county road aid fund amounted this year to around $102,000. With the cost of road construction now approaching $61,000 a mile, it becomes clearer why maintenance of the so-called farm-to-market roads remains the problem it is.

Returning to his theme of the restraints on the individual legislator, Allen said that it is impossible to convince legislators from other parts of the state that more coal is hauled over county roads than over state roads. "What we need around here is for a true census to be taken," Allen said, apparently implying that this would be Eastern Kentucky's only hope of securing adequate representation in Frankfort.

FIVE DIE IN FLOOD
 Five people drowned when heavy rain flooded Walbrzych, a western Polish city, the Polish news agency reported. The news agency said the rain swept sand and slime into the city, clogging the sewage system. In some parts of Walbrzych, a city of 140,000, the water was more than three feet deep.

RECORD SOYBEAN CROP SEEN
 Another record soybean harvest is expected this fall. Farmers once again have boosted their soybean plantings and, given the favorable moisture conditions, chances appear good that the crop will produce at least average yields, say Agriculture Department experts.
