W'wright Purchase Near, Titles Checked

Since August 3, when the board of directors of the Kentucky Housing Corporation voted to buy most of Wheelwright from Mountain Investments, Inc., attorneys conducting title searches of the property have run into some unexpected questions of ownership, according to a recent report.

The problems have arisen, according to the report published in this month's Kentucky Business Ledger, because some Wheelwright residents believed they had purchased their homes from prior owners of the town but apparently had never had the deeds recorded.

Prior to its purchase by Mountain Investments 12 years ago, the town had been owned by Inland Steel Co., Island Creek Coal Co., and various individuals.

Despite the questions of title, the purchase of the town is proceeding according to plan, Wheelwright's Board Chairman Ella Jane Hall said this week. KHC has set a September 15 target date for completing the $1.275 million deal, she confirmed, and Mountain Investments is due to vacate the town on September 18.

"It will be a happy day for us," Mrs. Hall commented. "I've been here all my life. I've seen the town at its worst; and the worst is now." The transfer of ownership, she added, promises the town a new lease on life.

Attorneys are said to be still exploring the possibility that interest on the three-year loan obtained by KHC from Citizens

Fidelity Bank and Trust Co., of Louisville, which is chiefly financing the Wheelwright purchase, might be exempt from taxes, since KHC is a state agency. Because of this possibility, the agency is hoping to be able to obtain financing at below the prime rate.

KHC plans plans to rehabilitate and sell the properties to individual buyers. The renovation is to be financed by a $3 million grant which the Floyd County Community Development and Urban Renewal Agency expects to receive from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. Families whose incomes fall within KHC guidelines will be eligible for low-interest loans to purchase homes.

Ninety single-family homes are included in the properties being purchased by KHC, 79 of which are currently occupied by renters who will be given first option to buy them. Also included in the package are the sorely run-down water, sewer and gas systems, which will be operated by the town.

Private investors will be sought for 120 vacant lots, which are prospective housing sites, 20 vacant commercial structures, and 32 acres of land that were once a golf course.

Almost $1 million of the total purchase price will reportedly go to settle outstanding liabilities against Mountain Investments, including liens, mortgages, back taxes, and unsecured loans.

District Miners Hold Labor Day Rally at Park

At the annual United Mine Workers' Labor Day celebration at Archer Park Monday, District 30 officials predicted a possible strike in 1981 and warned of the possibility of coal companies trying to negotiate individually with the union.

International Executive Board member J. B. Trout told the gathering of miners and their families, "You are being misled if you think we are going to get a contract without a strike."

Fears of the coal companies' attempting to bargain individually with the union have been prompted by the recent decision of Consolidated Coal Inc. to withdraw from the Bituminous Coal Operators' Association, the coal companies' traditional bargaining unit.

"We don't know what this means yet," Labor Day Committee Chairman George Vaughan said this week. "But if it means they're going to ask us to negotiate contracts with individual companies, this is something we want to avoid by all means."

Bobby Ray Justice, District 30 secretary-treasurer, complained of lack of union-organizing support from the national UMWA office. "They want to control it," he told Monday's audience, "but they don't do anything about it." Justice urged that organizing responsibility be returned to the district level, "where we can get on with the job."

"Organizing the unorganized," he said, "is the biggest thing we've got to do."

Labor Day Gathering Hears Perkins, Brown

The final campaign push began here in earnest Monday at the United Mine Workers' Labor Day celebration at Archer Park, with Congressman Carl D. Perkins on the stump for the Democratic candidates for governor and county judge, and the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, John Y. Brown, Jr., promising the crowd of about 500 miners and their families that he would be "the best voice eastern Kentucky has ever had."

Introduced by Perkins as a man who has earned his wealth "fairly and legitimately," and by his father, John Y. Brown, Sr., as a man "who has talked to kings but not lost the common touch," Brown told the crowd that, except for former governor Bert Combs, "Eastern Kentucky really hasn't had a voice."

"I want you to know that, as your governor, I'm going to be the voice of the mountains," he said.

When Floyd county endorsed him in the primary ballot, Brown said, he felt confident of victory in November. Brown, whose appearance at the celebration was delayed for some hours when fog prevented his plane from landing at the Combs airport, was accompanied by State Auditor George Atkins. Brown and Perkins were on the first leg of a six-county swing through eastern Kentucky.

Brown pledged changes in state government, the promotion of tourism in this part of the state, and strong support for the coal industry here.

Stressing the need for vigorous coal production, he told the audience of his personal efforts to attract German

Former 'Shoeshine Boy,' Now 59, Took His Place Early as a Man

"Now you make it clear, when you write this, that I didn't ask you to do it," he insisted at the end of his interview with The Times last week. "I don't want it to sound like I'm blowing my own trumpet."

It's true. Dan Goble didn't call us; we called him. What manner of father, we were curious to know, could have prompted his daughter to take out the advertisement (in last week's edition) paying glowing tribute to her father on his 59th birthday?

An uncommonly strict father, it turns out, especially as far as his four daughters were concerned. "He was so strict," said Karla, who wrote the ad, "we were even afraid to date."

There would be no shorts, no slacks and no bathing suits. Boy-friends were scrutinized like hostile microbes on the pathologist's slide. And when there was any dating, the couple would be home by 10.

The Goble household was a model of order and its rules, even for the '40's, sound positively draconian.

Dan Goble professes some embarrassment at the recollection. "Yes, I have some regrets," he admits. "I was too strict." And he endured what now seems to him a deserved judgment on his discipline: all six children, at one time or another, rebelled against it.

Time seems also to have brought with it a measure of vindication, however. "They all thank me now for being strict," he notes; and Karla agrees. He points with no little pride, moreover, to the pristine finish of the walls and furniture, much of it older than the children, that belies the fact that four girls and two boys were raised here.

Dan Goble is, in fact, intensely proud of them. Proud of the fact that, raised in poverty himself, he was able to provide his family with amenities he had never enjoyed. Proud of the fact that, though he dropped out of school in the third grade and is unable, to this day, to read or write much more than his own name, all of his children were properly schooled and four of them went to college.

Say what you like about the lowly status of shoeshining as a calling, or the condescension of referring to a grown man as a boy, Prestonsburg's "shoeshine boy" is an achiever. And if he has come a long way from shining shoes, he will tell you he is not about to repudiate the (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

This Town...That World

If this week's newspaper fails to satisfy and you can't resist saying so, first remember that its production meant for us all work on Labor Day, which to most means surcease from labor: a day when news sources literally dried up, the courthouse and postoffice closed, offices were deserted, leaving us poor galley slaves almost buzzing around in a void.

The passing of Henry P. Scalf reminds us that the list of our former associates on this newspaper who have died grows sadly longer.

"Buck" Scalf was Eastern Kentucky's No. 1 genealogist, and during the years he spent in this office he contributed historical features which now, even years later, claim the public interest. He stepped into newspaper work without an hour of journalistic training, but a native ability to put down words on paper, plus a sensitivity to news (they call it "a nose for news"), made him peculiarly fitted for the work.

Now that he is gone, and as I mourn my personal loss, I take comfort in the knowledge that he and all those others who worked with me and now rest from their labors remained my friends.

We return now with September to the eight months in a row which have an r in their spelling—Quick, now—name the month which has two r's.

Roof Collapse Fatal to Miner

A roof-fall in the Wagner Brothers Coal Company mine at Grethel last Friday night claimed the life of Sandy Bray, 28, of Fords Branch, Pikeville.

The fall occurred, state police said, at 7:21 p.m. The body was not recovered by mineworker rescuers till more than two hours later.

Three others working inside the mine at the time were injured. It was said that a slab of rock measuring about four by six feet broke from the roof and fell directly upon Bray.

State police cordoned off the entrance to the mine while the rescue part was reaching the victim. Bray was pronounced dead at Methodist Hospital, Pikeville.

State and federal mine inspectors continued their investigation of the tragedy over the week-end.

Bray is survived by his widow, Peggy Adkins Bray, and one son, Randy, both of Fords Branch; his parents, Orville and Delphia Burchfield Bray, of Island Creek, and seven brothers.

Funeral services were conducted Monday at 11 a.m. from the Island Creek Free Will Baptist Church, and burial was made in the Adkins cemetery at Fords Branch under direction of the Justice Funeral Home.

For Both Fair and Festival . . .

Variety Is the Word

Interested in various displays of livestock, farm and homemakers' exhibits and the carnival rides that are a traditional part of county fair week? Or maybe you'd prefer listening to good, old mountain music and tale-telling under the stars. Whatever your choice, all these activities will be available to area residents through the coming week-end as part of the Floyd County Fair, which begins Wednesday at Archer Park, and the 14th annual Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival, set to begin Friday evening.

The fair, which will begin Wednesday and run through the following Saturday, will feature, besides the usual wide variety of exhibits and rides, special entertainment, drawings and contests.

On the opening night Ron and Ellen Daniels, country-rock singers, will perform at 7 p.m. in a free show as part of family night. A special ticket for unlimited rides will also be offered Wednesday. The following night, a free gospel sing will be presented at the park's exhibit building. Kids' Day will be held Friday until 3 p.m. and will feature drawings for two bicycles.

A special treat at this year's fair will be a greased pig chase on Saturday. Registration for the contest, which will pit children, ages 8-12, against a greasy Duroc pig, will be held from 2:30-3 p.m. Only the first 40 children to register will compete. The youngster turning in the best performance will win the porker.

Three days of music, dancing, crafts displays and other activities relating to the folkways of the southern mountains will make up the Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival which will begin Friday at the Jenny Wiley State Park Amphitheatre at 6:30 p.m. Most styles of traditional mountain music will be represented as well as a variety of folk dance demonstrations. Craft displays from the Appalachian Guild of Artists and Craftsmen, David Craft Center and other exhibitors will be featured Saturday as well as a dulcimer workshop which will be held at 2 p.m. the same day. An added attraction Saturday will be the Appalachian Mobile Book Store from Berea College.

The folk festival association and the Prestonsburg Woman's Club will give a reception, Saturday at 3 p.m., to honor festival founder, Edith F. James, of Prestonsburg. The public is invited to attend the reception which will be held at May Lodge.

Bail of $50,000 Asked of Craft After Shooting

Robert Craft, Sr., 63-year-old West Prestonsburg man, remained in jail here this week in lieu of $50,000 bond asked for his release from custody after he had been charged with first degree assault in the shooting last Tuesday night at his home of Capt. Keith Lawson, 32, of the Prestonsburg police force.

Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen said Craft, the only person to be arrested after the shooting, has admitted firing the shot which has paralyzed the officer. Craft also was booked on a charge of possessing alcoholic beverages on the statement of police that 57 cans of beer were found on his premises during the search which apparently precipitated the shooting.

Floyd County's 'Junkers' Drive Officially Begins

The attack on the county's ugly array of abandoned junk automobiles began in earnest last week, with all 12 of the county's volunteer fire departments and at least two other organizations participating.

Dick Leslie, county planner, said a concentrated effort will be made over a comparatively brief period, possibly two weeks, for the location of junkers. Then the state Department for Natural Resources will move in, providing the means of hauling the vehicles to a central area to which junk dealers will be summoned to offer bids.

Leslie explained that local participating groups are expected only to locate the vehicles and procure from their owners or from the owners of land on which the junkers have been left releases of ownership. After the junk dealers' bids are received and accepted, these groups are paid the full amount paid for the cars.

"The more cars we can get together, the more dealers we will have to offer bids, and that will result in higher bids," Leslie said. He said junk cars average about $25 each.

Up to 1000 cars may be hauled away as scrap for recycling from this county, he added.

During a similar drive staged in Harlan county four clubs derived $20,000 from 6,000 vehicles. Leslie said later figures from that county show that the sale of cars there has realized $30,000.

The Prestonsburg High School Athletic Association already had procured releases on 100 junk cars this week, and the Little Mud Community Development Club had 25.

The pickup of junkers by Natural Resources personnel will be done in October.

New Foundation Intended To Promote Growth of Area

The newly-formed Greater Appalachian Cultural and Economic Development Foundation will serve as a "broad vehicle" for promoting economic growth in eastern Kentucky, says Chairman G. B. Johnson, Jr.

Articles of incorporation and bylaws for the foundation were approved by the Appalachian Development Council last Monday in Berea. The council is attached to the Governor's Economic Development Commission.

The foundation will be in operation as soon as papers of incorporation are filed with the Kentucky secretary of state.

The non-profit foundation is being organized to encourage charitable, cultural, educational, scientific and economic activities for the benefit of the 49-county area designated as Appalachia.

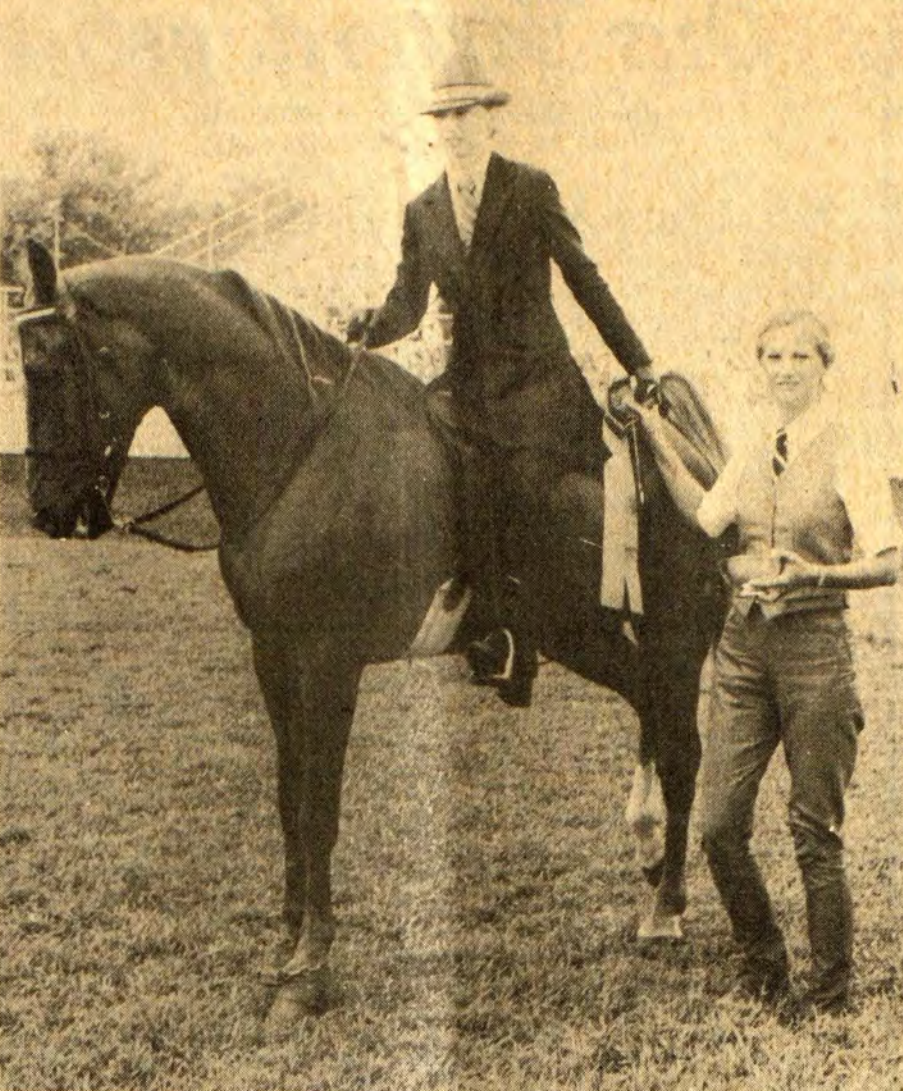

"We envision working with individuals making large donations to various projects," said Dr. Morris Norfleet, secretary-treasurer of the foundation. Individuals, corporations, the federal government and even other foundations could donate to the foundation, he said.

The foundation temporarily will be operated at Morehead State University so it can use the staff and research assistance of Morehead's Appalachian Development Center.

Johnson said there will be no affiliation with the university, but the location will enable the foundation to "develop an independent organization."

Johnson and Norfleet will serve as officers through 1979. Pikeville Mayor W. C. Hambley was elected vice chairman, and James Witten, Paintsville, was elected second vice-chairman.

SSI Is There To Help

By James D. Kelly

There are still quite a number of people in the Floyd County area who are not aware that the supplemental security income (SSI) program makes monthly payments to needy people who are 65 or over, or disabled, Jim Kelly, social security Director for the Big Sandy District, said recently.

The idea behind SSI is to provide a monthly income, when it is needed, so that people who are eligible have a basic cash income, Kelly said. Starting July 1979, the basic Federal payment is $208.20 for an eligible individual and $312.30 for an eligible couple. Not everyone gets this amount. Some get less because they have other income. The amount of your other income will determine if you are eligible. If you come eligible for SSI payments, you will also receive a medical card, Kelly said.

People who have little or no regular income and who do not own much property or other items that can be turned into cash may be eligible for SSI payments. In addition, eligibility for checks based on blindness or disability depends on the severity of the person's condition, as determined by their medical records.

The age of a blind or disabled person is not a factor. Even disabled or blind children can get SSI checks, although a parent's income and assets are considered in deciding a child's eligibility. A home the applicant lives in, has no bearing on eligibility. Neither does a car of reasonable value nor personal effects or household goods.

Floyd countians can get more information about SSI payments or eligibility at the Prestonsburg social security office, located on U.S. 23, near the northern entrance to Jenny Wiley State Park.

Interested persons are asked to call first so they can be advised of the proofs and records that will be needed for their claim. The toll free number for Floyd county residents is 886-8525.

A Few Years May Make A Big Difference

Of 18 states which at the termination of the Vietnam War lowered the minimum legal age for drinking alcoholic beverages, nine already have switched back to an older age and others are preparing to follow suit.

When that useless war was over it was argued that if 18-year-olds were old enough to fight, the law should permit them to drink.

Age 18 is too young for either. Exposure of youngsters barely out of high school to military life, to drugs, to training for the grisly business of killing other human beings, has brought a bitter and continuing harvest.

Lowering the age for legalized consumption of alcohol, hand- maiden to drugs, in effect "compounded the felony." It was not recognition of those who served their country; they already were past 18 when the law became effective. Instead, it was blanket permissiveness applying to all who were, or later became, 18—the physically unfit, the draft evaders, among them.

It didn't work, the states are learning. The schools report cases of classroom drunkenness; some tell of 18-years-olds procuring intoxicants for children. And safety officials have attributed the increased number of highway deaths and injuries to this lowered drinking age.

Massachusetts, one of the states that has repented, has found, officials say, that the raising of the minimum drinking age has, with the 55-mile speed limit, already reduced the number of traffic accidents.

Now, if the states really want to conserve gasoline and further reduce the number of highway tragedies, they would do well to consider raising the minimum age of drivers from 16 to not less than 18.

technology to Kentucky to assist in the conversion of coal to oil. Such a conversion, he said, could generate "tens of thousands of jobs for the miners of eastern Kentucky."

Congressman Perkins also urged the construction of plants to convert coal to synthetic fuels. To oversee the conversion, he advocated the establishment of an independent government corporation to bypass the federal Department of Energy, which he described as "run by environmentalists."

Borrowing a phrase from former Vice-President Spiro Agnew, Perkins said that "a lot of nervous nellys" in Washington were frustrating the manufacture of synthetic fuels from coal. The United States, he said, lacks an energy policy capable of ending the country's dependence on foreign oil.

Perkins predicted that Brown would have "no problem at all" in carrying the Seventh Congressional District in the November ballot. Officials of the UMWA, which has already endorsed him, also predicted that Brown would enjoy solid support among District 30 members.

A single bullet fired from a .38-caliber revolver entered the officer's back and lodged in the spinal area. The wounded man underwent surgery at Highlands Medical Center, the night of the shooting, but the bullet was not removed because of its close proximity to the spine. Lawson is expected to be removed to the UK Medical Center within the next few days. His condition this week was described as "stable."

Defense counsel for Craft had not asked an examining trial as of last Saturday, and County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. said none will be held unless the defense requests it.

Police Chief Dick Campbell last week reviewed circumstances surrounding the shooting. He said he, Lawson and other city officers went to the Craft home, armed with a search warrant. He and Lawson entered the house, which, he said, was lighted by one small electric bulb. Several persons were outside the building, and they began the search, thinking nobody was inside. He added that Lawson was unarmed.

"I turned to the left, Keith to the right. He turned to say something to me when I heard a sound like a .22-caliber weapon, and Keith said 'I've been shot,'" the police chief said.

"There was no movement in the house, not a sound, and we thought the shot had been fired from the outside and began questioning the people who were out there," Campbell said. Then they learned that Craft was inside.

He said that Policemen John Wright and David Cooley, with Fire Chief Tom Blackburn, forced Craft to emerge from the house, Craft's son, Eddie, also was in the house but has not been implicated in the shooting.

memory of it; and neither, if it comes to that, is he above taking it up again some day.

"I never got above my raising," is the way he explains it. "It doesn't bother me to be a servant. Anyway, I was a professional, same as the doctors and lawyers," whose shoes he buffed to perfection.

For Dan Goble, already in the shoeshine business at age 6, school was an intolerable bore. For three years he was the bane of the truant officer's life, until one of those practical arrangements was made that modern bureaucracies—to their loss, some would argue—have made obsolete. The county judge decreed the boy exempt from further schooling.

County Judge Walk Stumbo decided that the youngster's parents, who ran a store across from the courthouse, needed him. The judge, who regularly had the boy shine his leggings after the dusty ride to town, found him useful, too.

There was always steady business to be had around the courthouse, among judges, jailers and jurors, in the days when Bill Buck Dingus was jailer and John Caudill and C. B. Wheeler sat on the circuit court bench. Then there was Tom Moore's barber shop, where the municipal parking lot is now. As daughter Karla pointed out in last week's tribute, her father took his place early in a man's world.

After the day's last customer—usually Dr. Davidson, Goble recalls, who would ride in from his rounds with "mud in his knees"—the shoeshine boy sold popcorn, first at the old Abigail Theater, later at the Strand.

In the latter years of World War II, he helped build B-24's and B-29's in Michigan. He worked hard; there was plenty of overtime and, if you were careful, you could even save some money. Dan Goble was nothing if not careful. He returned to Prestonsburg with $1000 sewn to the inside of his jacket.

In the years that followed there would be some state jobs, at Jenny Wiley and on the highways, depending on the political fortunes of a string of governors—Combs, Breathitt, and Nunn among them—and a five-year stint as night watchman at Maloney's.

A couple of times he even ran for office himself—narrowly losing the race for jailer to Lawrence Hale, in a disputed election.

For 20 years, however, he would shine shoes for Tom Moore's customers, and for 15 years, after Lawrence Keathley bought the theater from John Allen, he worked at the Strand.

He was back at Maloney's when Jack Absher, who had bought the Strand from the Keathley estate, asked him to take over as manager. "I warned him that I didn't have much education," Goble says, "but he told me, 'If I didn't think you were qualified for the job, I wouldn't ask you to take it.'"

As Goble tells it, he has thrown himself into theater management with the same fierce, professional pride with which he once shined shoes. But, for a "God-fearing Christian," he discovered, the movie business raises moral dilemmas of which the shoeshine business was innocent.

People ought to be free, he acknowledges, to see what they choose to see. "The Bible itself tells us not to judge," he points out. He takes pains to see that a "restricted" movie is prominently advertised as such. And he's a stickler for the law when it comes to children being accompanied by an adult.

Not all his patrons are Christians, he understands, and not all who call themselves Christians are offended by his movies. But some are, and Goble can hardly disguise the fact that he is hurt by their judgment.

What of his own convictions? At first he musters a bold defense: "A man knows when he's doing right. And, God knows, people can see more ungodly stuff on their TV sets than in the theater." But then an apology intrudes. There are movies, sure, that he would not want to see. And sometimes keeping order in a movie house brings you into conflict with your neighbor, though the Bible says to "turn the other cheek."

A sigh betrays the inner conflict. "Perhaps I would be a better Christian," he concedes, "outside the theater."

Is that his own opinion, or just the opinion of others? Dan Goble shakes his head helplessly. How do you answer a question like that? How do you draw the line, after all, between your own convictions and the opinions of those who matter to you?

There is no question, at any rate, about what he will do, should the moral burden or physical incapacity drive him from the movie business. "I still have my shoe brushes," he says. "Professional brushes."

The man who began his career as the shoeshine boy, it is clear, would be more than content to end it the same way—head high, proud that he has since childhood "made his own way" by hard work, never asking or receiving the dole upon which so many have depended.

Circuit Court Slates Trials

After a lull following adjournment of the grand jury, Floyd circuit court activities are scheduled to pick up later this month.

One murder trial, that of Stephen Wright for the slaying of his brother, is docketed for Sept. 19. The prosecution of the case will be handled by the office of the attorney general, Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen having disqualified himself because of kinship to the principals in the case.

All defendants named in indictments by the recent grand jury will be arraigned, Sept. 20.

The first trial of the month is scheduled today (Wednesday), with Garrell Compton facing a wanton endangerment charge. Three other cases set for trial this month are:

Earl Ray Slone, burglary, trial set Sept. 17; Joe Martin, wanton endangerment, Sept. 18; Frankie Newsome, first degree assault, Sept. 24.

LETTERS To the Editor

'Bye—for Now

"Home is where the heart is—" and I would like to thank the people of Floyd county and especially those of Wheelwright for helping me make this county my home. Due to the budget cuts at the Floyd County Board of Education my position as teacher coach at Wheelwright high school was eliminated and I was "excessed." Many people in the county helped me during my two years at the high school and I would like to say thank you to them for opening their hearts and homes to me.

Even though I am now forced to leave the town of Wheelwright to take a position elsewhere, my spirit will still reside in Trojan Country. I assure all that I eagerly await an opportunity to return when a teaching position becomes available.

From a Rest Home . . .

I would appreciate it if you could put a letter in the paper for me.

Dear Friends and Loved Ones,
I'm at a rest home in Lackey, Ky. I've been here for six years. I have met a lot of friends. Some have died and a lot of people I like. When I die I'll leave many friends but we all have to die sometime. I'm an Old Regular Baptist since April of 1975. I am handicapped, in a wheelchair and don't get to church like I would like to. One of the good friends here is Raymond Johnson and another is Mrs. Snider. This is a poem I wrote about my feelings:
I would rather have one little rose
From the garden of a friend
Than to have the choicest flowers
When mystery on earth must end.
I would rather have one pleasant word
In kindness said to me
Than flattery when my heart is still
And life has ceased to be.

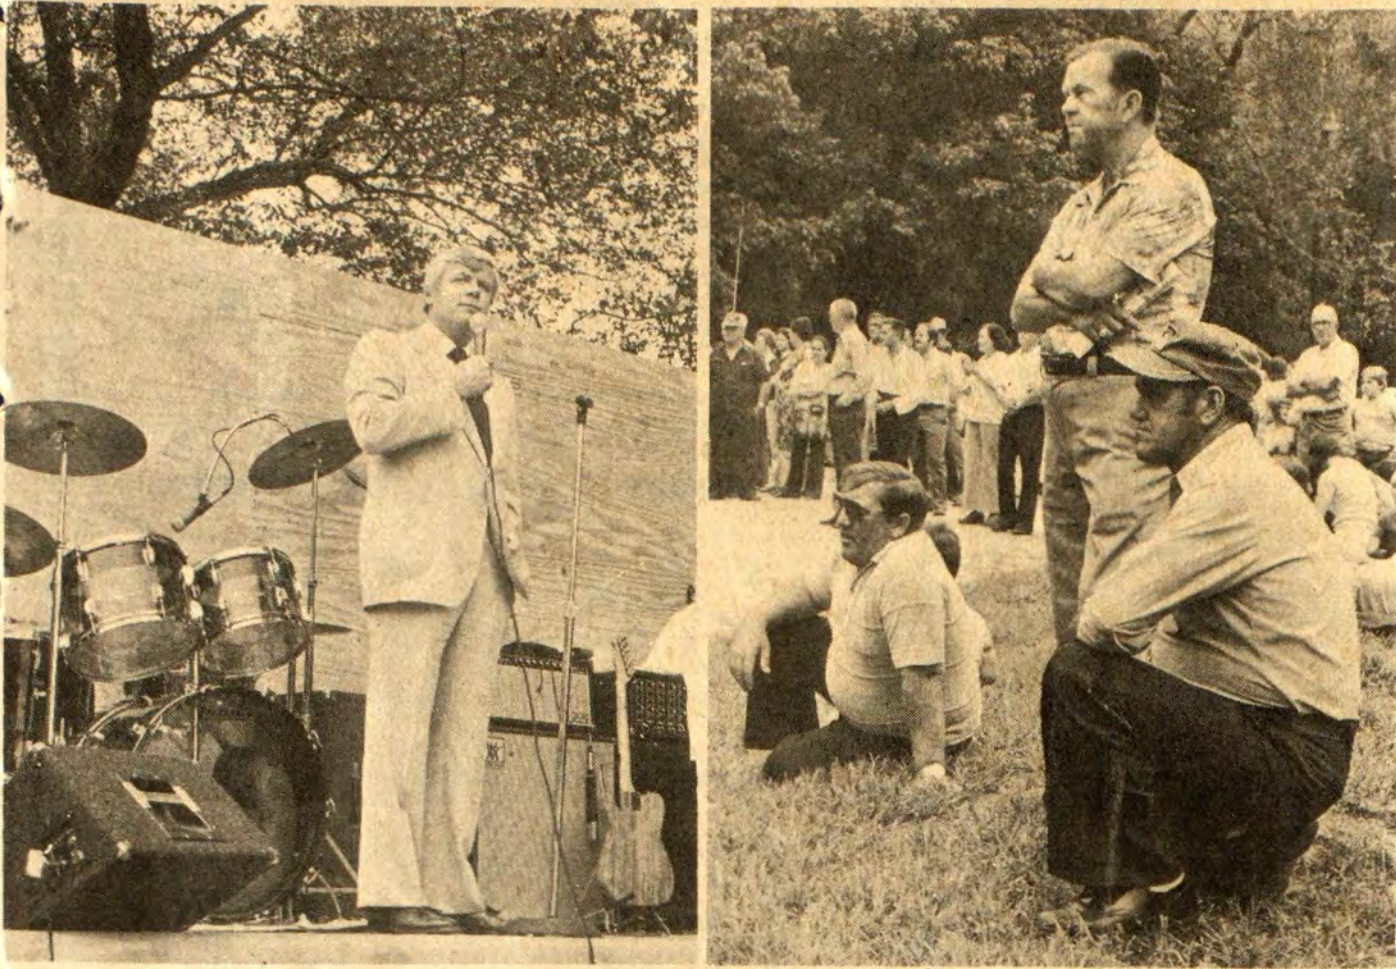

I would rather have a loving smile from a friend I know is true
Than tears shed around my casket
When the world I bid adieu.

Blossoms bring to me today
Whether pink, white, or red,
I'd rather have one blossom now,
Than a truckload when I'm dead.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Susan Compton, of Martin, and Mr. Doug Smith, of Allen, presented a program of wedding music with Miss Renee Vanucci and Miss Kathy Barnett, both of Martin, assisting. Miss Kathy Barnett, cousin of the bride, also presided at the guest book and welcomed guests to the church.

They wore identical floor-length gowns of peach polyester knit with draped blouson bodice with bow trim at shoulders. They carried identical bouquets of silk spring flowers with peach as the dominant color accented with baby's breath and tied with peach streamers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length white silk organza gown, lined with acetate taffeta. Exquisite venise lace and seed pearls enhanced the bodice, with the high neckline and sheer bishop sleeves cuffed in lace. The full flowing skirt with flounced hemline and train were edged with matching lace. Her veil was two layers of silk illusion veiling with seed pearls and matching lace applique trim. She carried a bouquet of all white silk cascade centered with camellias, accented with rosebuds and lily of the valley with two entwined pearl hearts held by satin and lace streamers tied in with love knots. Included in her bouquet were two white rosebuds tied with lace ribbons. On entering, she presented one to her mother, and after the ceremony as she was leaving, she presented one to the groom's mother.

The bride's mother wore a floor-length A-line gown of sky blue polyester knit with a chiffon collar. Her corsage was of pink silk rosebuds. The groom's mother wore a floor-length gown of light green polyester knit, and her corsage was yellow silk rosebuds.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride's parents were hosts to a reception held in the Martin Grade School cafeteria. The bride's table was highlighted with a four-tier wedding cake with a fountain on the bottom tier and topped with a miniature bride and groom. Assisting at the reception were Misses Connie Pelphrey, of Prestonsburg, Vickie Steele, Mrs. Anna Allen, Jean Watson and Jean Johnson, all of Martin.

Following a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S. C., the couple will be moving to Morehead, to enter college.

WSAZ Television 3 Wins 6 News Awards

WSAZ television 3 News swept the West Virginia Associated Press Awards competition for the third consecutive year, receiving awards for "best regularly scheduled newscast" in the state and "the best regularly scheduled sportscast." It also won the Associated Press award for "best enterprise reporting" for a series of news stories produced and reported by regional reporter Jerry Sander, titled "Myths, Monsters and Legends." The News Center was also cited for "best spot news coverage" by the Associated Press for its efforts in covering the heavy flooding in early 1978.

WSAZ TV 3 News also became the only television station in the past 15 years to capture its second national "Golden Mike" award from the American Legion Auxiliary. The award was presented to News Director Bob Brunner at the legion's national convention in Houston, Texas. The Golden Mike Award is given each year to the local television station that, in the opinion of the American Legion, does the most for the interests of youth. WSAZ was selected for the award because of an investigative series by News Director Bob Brunner on conditions inside juvenile penal institutions throughout the state, titled, "Our Children, Our Criminals."

Dave Collins, WSAZ-TV's farm director, has also won a prestigious award. The Heath Cooper Rigdon Conservation Newscaster award was presented to him at the annual Soil Conservation Society of America's 1979 annual meeting in Ontario, Canada.

Women Leaders in Pottery Guild

Orella McGuire is shown preparing to load a kiln with pots to be fired.

Anne Lee places newly made pottery on a shelf at Prestonsburg Community College where it is displayed.

Few people today attach much significance to potters or pottery, but when you stop to consider that archeologists have judged whole civilizations by their pottery remains, maybe the pottery produced today warrants a more respectful examination. Certainly the potters in our eastern Kentucky area are an enthusiastic group of artists, always on the look-out for new ideas and techniques.

Orella McGuire and Anne Lee are both very much a part of the flourishing Potters Guild at Prestonsburg Community College.

Mrs. McGuire is first and foremost a teacher. She doesn't limit her teaching to her fourth grade classroom, but also enjoys occasionally teaching pottery classes at the Prestonsburg Community College. Although she has a limited amount of time to devote to her hobby of pottery, she does turn out a substantial number of jugs, mugs, pots and bowls.

Anne Lee first discovered pottery about two and a half years ago when she was looking for something to help her through the tensions of raising two very small children. Born in England, raised in Australia, and married to a Texas mining engineer, Anne settled in eastern Kentucky and eastern Kentucky taught her pottery. She took a pottery course at the Prestonsburg Community College and was hooked. Her work is much in demand and she rarely has a collection of it on hand. She makes whole sets of dinnerware to order, in addition to animal wind chimes that are very popular. She makes almost any kind of bowl or vase imaginable, but curiously enough, she prefers making ordinary casserole dishes.

Besides belonging to the Potters Guild, the two potters also belong to the Appalachian Guild of Artists and Craftsmen and their pottery is displayed in the Bush Art Gallery in Prestonsburg. This organization is dedicated to the preservation and promotion of the crafts indigenous to the Appalachian Mountain area.

The Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival also is dedicated to the preservation of our mountain heritage in crafts and song. On September 8, 1979, the Folk Festival is sponsoring an Arts and Crafts Show and Sale at the Jenny Wiley State Park amphitheater parking lot. Orella McGuire and Anne Lee will be demonstrating with their pottery wheels along with other co-members of the Potters Guild.

A good representation of Kentucky's artists, both amateur and professional, will be at the show. The public is invited to enjoy the wide range of crafts including wood carving, broom making, leather crafts, knitting, crocheting, beautiful quilts and ceramics. An old-fashioned grist mill will grind fresh corn meal for sale. The show begins at 10 a.m. and lasts until dark.

Any artist or craftsman who has not yet been contacted and would like to exhibit his work should write to Judith E. Carr, Flat Gap, Ky. 41219, or phone 265-3245.

Ceremony Opens Johns Creek Rail Line

John T. Collinson, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio and Baltimore and Ohio railroads, cuts a ribbon that officially opened Chessie's Johns Creek reroute project in Pike county, built to serve coal mines in that section of Eastern Kentucky. Construction on the $13 million project began in October, 1977, and was completed last month. The new reroute replaces nearly nine miles of an existing 14.8-mile branch with the new line following a more favorable route. In top photo, from left, are: Kenneth C. Morriss, Chessie vice-president—maintenance and engineering; Nell Burk, president of Johns Creek-Elkhorn Coal Company, holding the ribbon; Mr. Collinson; Noah Howard, Johns Creek Enterprises, and Jeff Heath, Chessie Coal Department.

Counties May Change Gov't Form in Nov.

Counties desiring a change from the county commission form of government to the magisterial form can put the matter to a vote as early as the November election, according to an attorney general's opinion.

Kentucky Revised Statutes requires that a petition of at least 100 legal voters be entered on the order book of the judge-executive before an election to change the form of government can be held.

The order must be entered at a regular term of court after the petition is filed. The election can then be held at the next regular election date. However, at least 60 days must pass between the time of petition's filing and the next regular election, the opinion said.

The opinion was requested by Hobert Sublett, of Sitka in Johnson county.

Floyd County Health Notes

By JANETE E. HICKS
Health Educator

The key to effective weight control is keeping food intake and physical exercise in balance. However, lack of exercise is more often the cause of overweight. Exercise can be fun, provide recreation, and offer opportunity for companionship. The man or woman who exercises will maintain a better state of physical fitness and active and healthier longer.

The Floyd County Health Department is resuming weight control classes each Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. in the basement of the health department beginning September 11. These classes include a program of exercise and diet for the overweight. There will be a fee of ten cents per weekly visit.

CLINICS FOR THE COMING WEEK

Wednesday, September 5, the regular scheduled Martin Outpost Clinic will be conducted at the Beaver Valley Clinic in Martin. Immunizations, TB skin tests, diabetes screening, blood pressures, and Pap tests will be available from 10 to 12 and 1 to 2.

Friday, September 7, there will be a glaucoma clinic conducted at the Floyd County Health Department from 10 to 12 and 1 to 3.

All persons age 35 and older are invited to come to the health department to be screened, free of charge, for glaucoma, a disease that slowly and painlessly cause blindness.

Monday, September 10, the regularly scheduled Wayland Outpost Clinic will be conducted in the basement of the Wayland Methodist Church from 10 to 12 and 1 to 2. Immunizations, TB skin tests, diabetes screening, and blood pressures will be available at this clinic free of charge.

The public is invited to attend these free clinics.

All Floyd countians should visit the health department's exhibit at the Floyd County Fair, September 5 through 7, where the health department will be offering obesity and blood pressure screenings free of charge.

FOOTNOTES

People who are accustomed to wearing shoes with very high heels should not shift from stilettos to flats all at once. "Come down to earth" gradually, using two-inch heels as transition shoes. Shoes with high heels should have a strong shank; that's the "backbone" of the shoe located between the heel and the ball of the foot. The shank should be of such stiffness that the shoe does not bend in the middle or the heel does not shift to the rear when you press the shoe down firmly with your fingers.

CHILDREN'S BEDROOMS

If your home includes children's bedrooms, decorate the rooms with bright colors, whimsical accessories and original design shapes geared toward the child's age and interests.

It's important that a parent tries to see the decor through the child's eyes. Hang pictures, mirrors, murals, chalkboards and storage shelves at the toddler's eye level and raise them as he or she grows. A child whose world is mostly people's knees and chair and table legs will enjoy colorful objects or perhaps a mirror hung where he can see it.

Consider the floor covering in a child's room. Long shag or deep napped carpeting may make it difficult for a toddler to navigate, and it certainly will hinder play with pull toys or small cars and trucks. Area rugs or rooms that are partially carpeted and partially tiled might be good compromise between the attractiveness of rugs and the practicality of hard floors.

Children enjoy bright colors, but don't overdo a color scheme. If four, bright red walls seem jarring to you, they will jolt children too. Select colors you can live with.

Color researchers say that children associate red with carefree feelings, yellow with dependence on adults, green with steady emotions and simple, uncomplicated situations. In a child's mind, mothers are associated with pastel colors, and fathers are normally darker colors. Studies show that pale blue is calming and that it lessens activity and crying in an infant's room. The cliché "blue for boys, pink for girls" no longer applies to nursery color schemes.

Vinyl wall coverings will resist a young artist's crayon attacks and smudgy fingerprints. Select simple, well-built furniture that can withstand abuse and won't be resented as too babyish when the child approaches the teen years. Couches that form beds and benches that provide storage are practical dual-purpose items for any child's room. And don't forget a comfortable desk and chair for hobbies and homework.

Senator Ford Commends Police

The police officer is the single most important weapon in the fight against crime, U.S. Senator Wendell H. Ford told a graduating class of law enforcement officers in Richmond last Friday.

Ford addressed the 100th police basic training class of the Kentucky Department of Justice, Bureau of Training. Officers from throughout the state take the 10-week intensive basic training course as part of the state's police pay incentive program.

The police pay incentive program was established during Ford's administration as governor of Kentucky.

"In this era of sophisticated crime fighting, training at all levels becomes paramount. Specialized tools and equipment are totally ineffective unless policemen are trained and retrained," Sen. Ford said. "That is why I am determined to see that our police officers are prepared to meet their awesome responsibilities."

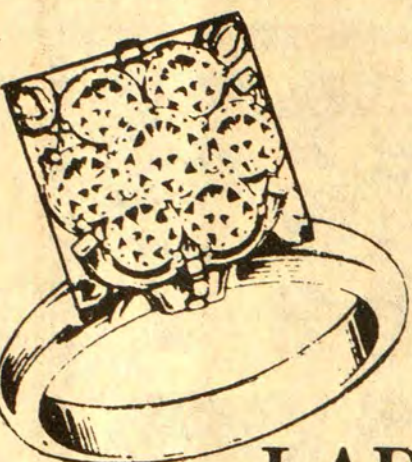

"This isn't the time to relax in our fight against crime," he added. "The warped intelligence of the criminal element surely will not let down its guard. You and I cannot and must not be satisfied until the problem with crime is no longer a threat to the American society."

IN MEMORIAM
In loving memory of Joe Wallen, who passed away May 18, 1979:

God saw you getting weary,
He did what he knew best,
He came and stood beside you,
and said, "come and rest."

You bade no one fare well;
you didn't say, goodbye,
You were gone before we knew it,
God only knows why.

Sadly missed by wife, GERTRUDE, son, JOE FRANK, and sister, REBECCA ARNETT.

Square Dance At Jenny Wiley

Jenny Wiley State Park and the Johnson County Rainbow Ramblers are co-sponsoring a class in western square dance. ARC Grant To Fund Children's Project

Julian Carroll has announced that the Appalachian Regional Commission has approved a $175,000 grant for the second-year funding of a state-wide children's services and child-development planning project.

Development Secretary William Short said the purpose of the project is to develop a state plan for children's services, with special emphasis on the needs of Kentucky Appalachia. The plan is aimed at coordinating existing services, identifying needs and expanding preventive services to meet those needs, he explained.

The total project cost is $250,229. The remaining funds will be provided by the state. The Department for Human Resources and the Department of Education are conducting the project. A special task force, which includes direct providers of children's services and agency representatives, will assist in the project.

The statewide plan is expected to be ready for implementation by early 1980, Short said.

The 1920's To Roar Again

American lifestyles changed drastically during the 1920's from quiet farm life to big city speakeasies, flappers, automobiles and jazz. Using rare newsreels, private movies, Hollywood films and archive photographs, "The American Documents: The Age of Ballyhoo" tells the story of the turbulent twenties on Monday, September 10 at 9:00 p.m. (ET), 8:00 p.m. (CT), on KET.

Gloria Swanson narrates the one-hour program that includes many one-of-a-kind photos and film clips from Swanson's private collection. Swanson is seen in clips from "Manhandled" (1924) and "The Love of Sunya" (1927) as well as scenes from "Mark of Zorro" (1920) with Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., and "St. Louis Blues" with singer Bessie Smith.

"The Age of Ballyhoo" also features two U.S. presidents on the campaign trail: Calvin Coolidge down on the farm and Warren G. Harding conducting his "back porch" campaign.

The Twenties had its hero, as well as its politicians. Charles Lindberg's epic flight to Paris is documented with footage of the take-off, his landing at Orly Airport in Paris, and New York City's triumphant welcome home, including portions of the first sound newsreel ever made.

Fetal Alcohol Syndrome A Major Cause Of Infant Abnormalities

Women consuming alcohol during pregnancy run a greater risk of bearing children with fetal alcohol syndrome—mental and physical handicaps—according to Charles Wallner of the Kentucky Alcoholism Council.

Wallner was one of 50 persons conducting workshop sessions during the recent Kentucky Conference on Children, sponsored by the Department for Human Resources, Bureau for Health Services. More than 500 persons, representing Kentucky's social workers, public health officials, nurses and teachers, attended the three-day conference.

When mothers drink during pregnancy, the infants may be born with physical or mental abnormalities, Wallner said. Infants affected by fetal alcohol syndrome generally have smaller eyes and brains than normal children. Their heads are disproportionately smaller than their bodies, the face is smaller and often the cardiovascular system is not closed. Most suffer some degree of mental retardation and grow physically at a much slower pace than normal infants, he said.

Wallner said 33 percent of alcoholic mothers run the risk of having an infant with fetal alcohol syndrome, while 50 percent risk having babies who are mentally below average. Fetal alcohol syndrome is the third largest cause of infant mental retardation in the United States, he added.

"The important thing about this disorder is that it is preventable," Wallner said. "The sad thing about it is that many women didn't realize this in the past."

Wallner says major research into the syndrome has only been in progress in the last 10 years. "Researchers are hesitant to say how much alcohol consumption by pregnant mothers is OK, if any," he said.

Wallner cited studies indicating that 12 percent of the babies born to mothers with a moderate alcohol consumption (two ounces of pure alcohol per week) had malformities similar to those of babies born to mothers who are chronic drinkers (two ounces of pure alcohol per day).

Wallner said the blood alcohol level of a pregnant woman is a significant factor in determining the amount of alcohol she can consume without endangering the fetus. "If an expectant mother is a moderate drinker, meaning she consumes two ounces of pure alcohol or one six-pack of beer a week, and doesn't know her blood alcohol level, damage may be done to the fetus during the first trimester," he said.

Wallner explained that alcohol permeates the placenta, the organ surrounding the fetus during pregnancy. Traces of alcohol are often found in the body systems of infants born to mothers who are heavy drinkers.

The Kentucky Alcoholism Council and the Kentucky March of Dimes have joined in a massive public information campaign to warn mothers of the effects drinking during pregnancy could have on the fetus, Wallner said. Also, workshops are planned in the state to inform obstetric and prenatal professionals of the dangers of fetal alcohol syndrome.

"It's not looked down upon to drink heavily or to be alcoholic in American society," Wallner said. "People don't realize that alcohol is a drug. It is addictive. It depresses the central nervous system. It stimulates the heart. It affects the pancreas. It is best not to consume any alcohol during pregnancy."

...about your Social Security

By JOHN FAULKNER
Manager of the Prestonsburg
Social Security Office

Q—My daughter told me that the premium for my Medicare medical insurance may go up this month. Has it?

A—Yes. The basic medical insurance premium increased from $8.20 to $8.70 a month for the 12-month period starting July 1, 1979. The increase is necessary because medical insurance costs have risen as a result of higher charges for medical services. By law, however, the premium increase cannot be more than the percentage increase in Social Security cash benefits during the previous years.

Q—My boss told me that more of my earnings will be subject to social security taxes this year. Exactly how much of my salary will be taxed?

A—The maximum amount of yearly earnings subject to social security taxes—the wage base—increases from $17,700 for 1978 to $22,900 for 1979. The social security law calls for additional increases in the wage base in future years in order to keep the social security system on a sound financial footing.

Q—I didn't work long enough under social security to be entitled to Medicare hospital insurance, so I'm thinking of buying it. How much is the monthly hospital premium now?

A—The basic hospital insurance premium is $69 a month (up from $63) for the 12-month period starting July 1, 1979. This premium represents the current cost of Medicare hospital insurance protection. Under the law, the hospital insurance premium cannot be changed more often than once a year.

Senate Urged To Take Stand Against Tellico

The National Wildlife Federation has sounded a warning that the nation's Endangered Species Act is again in danger.

Unless the U.S. Senate takes a firm stand against politically-inspired exemptions to the act when Congress reconvenes in September, the 1973 law protecting endangered wildlife "will be so weakened that it will be practically worthless," according to Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the NWF.

The fate of the endangered species program will be in the balance, Kimball said, when the Senate votes on a House-passed appropriations bill that would exempt from the act TVA's Tellico Dam on the Little Tennessee River.

The U.S. Supreme Court stopped construction of Tellico in June, 1978, on grounds that it would destroy the only known habitat of the snail darter, an endangered minnow-sized fish. Seven months later, in January, 1979, an Endangered Species Committee created by Congress also ruled against completion of the dam, holding that the Tellico project was economically unsound.

"Now the proponents of dam development are asking Congress to overturn a Supreme Court decision and nullify a finding made by a committee that the Congress itself created," said Kimball. "The Endangered Species Committee's decision should have ended the matter for all time, but last June a few disgruntled proponents of Tellico slipped into a House appropriations bill an amendment that would exempt Tellico from any hindering laws."

Such an exemption, said Kimball, could "trigger a wave of exemptions for every pet project that comes before the Congress. Then we would have no protection against the destruction of critical wildlife habitat."

Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus, who has called Tellico "ill-conceived and uneconomic," has indicated that he will urge President Carter to veto the appropriations bill if the Tellico amendment is not defeated.

ROADSIGNS, which serve mainly to clutter the countryside and irritate motorists along major highways and turnpikes, take on a much different and more pleasing character on backroads and infrequently travelled routes. This obviously hand-lettered plaque erected along a Floyd county byway advertises the fact that, nearby, there are "coon dogs for sale."

Wild Creatures Do Strange Things; Scientists Are Now Learning Why

No one knows why a huge fin whale beaches itself. Is it committing suicide? No one knows why an 8-ton killer whale jumps completely out of the sea. Is it just being playful?

Animals perform hundreds of acts that humans don't understand. But the science of animal behavior is now finding explanations for wildlife antics that have puzzled man since Aristotle first studied birds and bees in the fourth century B.C., according to the current issue of International Wildlife magazine.

The study of wildlife is also becoming more closely linked with the study of human behavior, the National Wildlife Federation publication says, and "as scientists continue to study the lives of animals, their findings will throw new light on the nature of man himself."

Reports on recent studies are contained in a special issue of International Wildlife devoted entirely to animal behavior. Here are some of the questions about wildlife to which researchers have found answers:

Why Do Wolves Howl? Contrary to popular belief, it's not because they're lonely. Wolves are highly social creatures with one of the most complex communications systems in the animal kingdom and the howling is a pack's way of keeping in touch at night or when visibility is poor.

Howling also serves as a mechanism for keeping different packs away from each other. Rather than fight other packs, they howl. If a neighboring group is nearby, it will know that both packs are too close for comfort. "This kind of 'distancing' is the major reason why lions roar and gibbons hoot," explains International Wildlife.

Why Do Birds Sing? A bird's "song" is a succession of musical notes repeated in a recognizable pattern. Of the world's 8,600 or so bird species, nearly half are songbirds, and it's usually the male of a species that does the singing.

Their songs, which young birds must learn from adults, are closely connected to nesting and mating. Birds use their melodies—some species have a repertoire of half a dozen—to define their nesting territories and woo their mates. Aside from all these practical reasons, some researchers now believe that birds, like people, sing just for the "sheer joy of it."

Why Do Monkeys Make Faces? The "faces" are an important part of the monkeys' communications with each other, but people have wrongly interpreted those expressions as if they were human. What looks like a monkey "yawn" may be a warning to another monkey to keep away, or it may be an expression of frustration. A monkey "grin" or "smile" is a signal of fear or submission.

Why Do Raccoons 'Wash' Their Food? They don't, really. Raccoons have fingerlike paws that are as nimble and sensitive as human hands. The animals use them to probe and sift a stream bed with what looks like a scrubbing motion. Once a raccoon locates a crayfish, snail, or mussel, the tidbit is popped directly into its mouth without so much as a rub or rinse.

Why Do Cranes Dance? If they didn't there would be no crane chicks every year. For young cranes that have never mated, dancing reinforces the union. Their courting ballets "synchronize the male and female sexually." Incidentally, all 15 species of cranes in the world dance to the same steps.

Why Do Animals Fight? Mates or territory are usually at stake when two creatures of the same species fight. What's surprising is the fact that these encounters seldom end in a fatality. "Over millions of years, animal weapons and ritualized fighting methods have evolved so that one creature can usually escape from another without major injury," says the magazine.

Why Do Vampire Bats Suck Blood? "Unlike its fictional counterpart," explains International Wildlife, "this common flying mammal of the southwestern U.S., and Central and South America is not a ruthless and terrifying mankiller." Actually, the tiny vampire bat doesn't suck blood, but laps it up "like a kitten with a saucer of milk."

It is true that the vampire bat may partake of human blood—a foot protruding from a blanket is a tempting target—but no one has ever perished from the bite of a healthy vampire. The bats prefer wild animals or cows, swine, and goats. After alighting on its victim, the bat slices a shallow cut with its razor-sharp teeth and laps up the flowing blood. It needs about an ounce of blood a day.

No one knows how the vampire bat got started on its unique diet, but now its system is so specialized that it can't eat anything else.

Why Do Fireflies Flash? Fireflies, which are actually beetles, produce light with a complex chemical reaction that takes place within their abdominal cells. The luminescence is reflected out through their transparent skin. Researchers have found that almost all of the 1,000 or so species of fireflies have distinctive light patterns. A male of one species blinks its pattern of flashes and waits for a female to flash back. If she does so, he recognizes her as one of his own kind, and flies off toward her.

Despite progress that has been made since Charles Darwin published "The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals" in 1872, International Wildlife concludes, the science of animal behavior is still an infant discipline. Within another ten years, it may answer baffling questions about the whales and other animals. In the meantime, says the magazine, we have much to learn from "our fellow creatures."

Things To Look For When Purchasing a C.B.

By HOMER DOBSON
Being a C.B.'er and a serviceman, I thought I'd jot down a few hints to help C.B.'ers when purchasing their C.B. radios.

Everyone likes an attractive and impressive looking C.B. That is the first thing that catches a prospective customer's eye. You will have to use and look at the unit until it is worn out or you sell it.

The first thing I look for when purchasing a C.B. is a good receiver. By this I mean the tonal quality of the unit which determines the clearness of the person's voice being heard. A tone control helps insure proper tone.

A mike gain control is a feature of major importance. It serves the same purpose as a power mike and saves the customer the expense of replacing the stock mike with a power mike. A C.B. unit with a dynamic mike offers improved performance modulation-wise over the regular stock mike.

A noise limiter or noise blanker is also an important feature especially in mobile units. It helps eliminate ignition noise caused by an automobile's electrical system.

L.E.D. channel indicator tells a motorist at a glance which channel he is receiving or transmitting on. A modulation indicator will tell if the mike is working properly.

An antenna warning light will show the operating condition of the antenna. The more expensive base units containing a standing wave meter save space and eliminate the need and cost of purchasing a separate standing wave meter to monitor the antenna system.

Most models have signal and RF meter, squelch, PA, CB switch, and some models have an external speaker jack which permits the use of an extension speaker.

I hope this information will make your next C.B. purchase more useful and enjoyable.
Happy C.B.ing.

Wheelwright's Rhea on ECU Team

'Growing' Cats Face Pikeville Friday in First District Game

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON
After showing signs of growing power in their 18-15 loss to a strong Greenup County high team last Friday night, the Prestonsburg Black Cats this week were prepping for their encounter this coming Friday evening at Pikeville with the Pikeville High School Panthers. The game will be the first district contest of the season for the Cats.

The Panthers have won over Lawrence County and Whitesburg, both Class AA, while the Black Cats have faced two strong teams, the Belfry Pirates (AAA, 2-0) and Greenup County (Class AAAA, 2-0) and have lost each.

Against the Greenup County Musketeers at Greenup County, the Cats rolled to a 7-6 halftime lead, but in the third quarter the heat and Greenup County manpower made the difference. Coach John Younce used his 40-man team in and out of the lineup, while Coach Haywood was forced to use his Cats with few substitutions. In fact, in the third quarter, Greenup County had 21 offensive plays while the Cats had only 10.

Prestonsburg jumped out to a 7-0 lead, taking the kick-off and going 78 yards in 11 plays, with quarterback Jack Wells leading the way. Wells, who can run the option about as well, or better than, any high school player, carried the ball himself for 34 yards in the drive and connected with Danny Daniels on a 45-yard pass play which moved the ball deep into Musketeer territory. Wells later scored, Wayne Rodebaugh's kick was good and that lead was good until 3:58 was left in the first half. Greenup county scored on an 85-yard, 16-play drive, but the kick failed. The Cats led at halftime, 7-6.

In the fourth quarter the Cats scored on a 14-yard pass play from Wells to Daniels, and Wells' run for extra points was successful. Wells led the Cats' rushing with 94 yards in 17 tries, a really tremendous total in view of the fact that he was dropped nine times behind the line of scrimmage, six times while trying to pass for a total of minus 29 yards in 11 carries, and Rodebaugh had 4 in one try.

In passing Wells completed two of three for 59 yards and had one intercepted. Rodebaugh had no completion in two tries. Danny Daniels received for 59 yards in two receptions.

Greenup County will face Lexington Tates Creek this week-end.

LAST WEEK'S RESULTS

Daniels Brings Pride to Betsy Layne

By KENNY RICE
Betsy Layne's football program was gasping, trying to keep from going under for a third time when Don Daniels threw out the lifeline. Now, instead of ending the football program as was proposed a little over a week ago, Daniels has assumed the role as head football coach and the Bobcats will play a five-game schedule.

"I hated to see the kids not have an opportunity to play. I knew that if Betsy Layne dropped football they would never get it started back. I just wanted to see Betsy Layne's football program have a chance," Daniels explained his decision to return to coaching.

After a summer of having 10 or 12 boys out for practice, around 40 showed up for Betsy Layne's first practice under Daniels. He was impressed with the enthusiasm of the youngsters and feels that if cramming two months of practice into three weeks can be done anywhere, it can be done at Betsy Layne.

"I think now people realize this is another chance at keeping football. We have the support of the superintendent, Pete Grigsby, Jr., and the board member of this area, John M. Stumbo. The band director (Billie Jean Osborne) has told me the band will be at our first game and the kids know they can help keep football here. If Betsy Layne wants football, it's there. It's just a matter of working on a lot of things in a short period of time. The kids have a good attitude and they have shown quite a bit of interest," Daniels said.

Daniels is encouraging some of the eighth graders at Betsy Layne's feeder schools to come out for the team in an effort to establish a firm foundation to build a football future on.

"If I have 40 kids out for the team, I'll play 40. If I have 50 out for the team I'll play 50. That's the only way they can learn about football I'll play them on offense and defense because shifting them around is a good way to find out the position they can play best, plus it teaches them to learn about each phase of the game. I only have about six or seven seniors out for the team and they will all play because after playing for three previous seasons they deserve that chance. I want to get a good turnout of eighth graders and freshmen and sophomores out to build for upcoming seasons," Daniels noted.

Betsy Layne had to cancel all district games this season, in addition to two other regular season games. The schools involved in cancelling the games have been cooperative, according to Daniels.

He is glad to be playing a five game schedule and the ever-optimistic coach who brought Wheelwright top ten rankings in Class A is planning on a winning season at Betsy Layne this year. This is bold forecasting for a team with only one win in three years, but Daniels is counting on pride and determination to bring three or four victories.

Betsy Layne opens its season September 29 against Hurley, Virginia at Prestonsburg. That game is followed by away games with Mullins on October 5 and Johns Creek on October 12. Betsy Layne returns "home" on October 19 to play Lawrence County at Prestonsburg and then closes out the season on October 26 at Knott County Central.

"I think the first game is very important as to how our season will go. We need a big turnout for the game against Hurley to give the kids a boost. I honestly feel if we can get a big turnout for the first game and get a win under our belts, this program could really grow rapidly," Daniels commented.

SEASON TICKET SALES UP

Prestonsburg High Athletic Director Bert Layne is pleased with the way Prestonsburg's season football tickets have been going. Layne reports a "considerable number" of student season tickets sold just after school started back in session. The student sales coupled with a "large number" of adult tickets being sold in July and August, has given Prestonsburg a better season ticket sale than originally expected, according to Layne.

ALL STARS

Five members of the Paintsville-Tri-County Yankees have been named to the Appalachian League all star unit. Voting was conducted among team managers and one media representative from each city in which a league team is located.

Out of eleven members on the team, the Yanks were represented by pitchers Frank Ricci (7-1 with a 2.35 ERA) and Pete Filson (9-0, 1.64 plus the league's only no hitter this season). Right fielder Rob Teegarden (.330, 14 home runs, 73 runs batted in), first baseman Randy Guerra (.286, 9 h.r., 57 rbis) and third baseman Otis Nixon (.295) were also picked for the squad.

Teegarden finished second in the balloting for Player of the Year honors. Ricci has moved up in the New York farm system, going to Fort Lauderdale in the Florida State League.

Paintsville won the Appalachian League title this season after finishing third in the six-team league last year.

A wind takes its name from the direction of its source: westerlies blow from west to east.

Fox Slated for Simms' Job

Morehead, Ky.—A standard sports trivia question, "Who replaced Babe Ruth?"

Around Morehead State University, a better question might be "Who's going to replace Phil Simms?"

The answer to the second question should be Tommy Fox, a senior from Jefferson High School in Louisville. "Should," because Fox is running first team in pre-season drills for the Eagles.

First-year Head Coach Tom Lichtenberg says Fox will be the starter in the season opener against Kentucky State.

"Tommy is an outstanding leader and a good athlete," Lichtenberg stated. "He runs the option very well and is an above average passer."

A starting quarterback is always going to feel pressure, but for Fox there is the added spectre of Phil Simms, MSU's quarterback for the past three seasons, who was the seventh player selected in the spring National Football League draft.

According to Fox, there really isn't any added pressure. "I don't think I have to perform like Phil for us to win," he stated. "We've changed our offense and defense to fit the abilities of the players we have, and it should make us a much better team."

Fox understudied Simms for the past three seasons and sees that experience as both positive and negative.

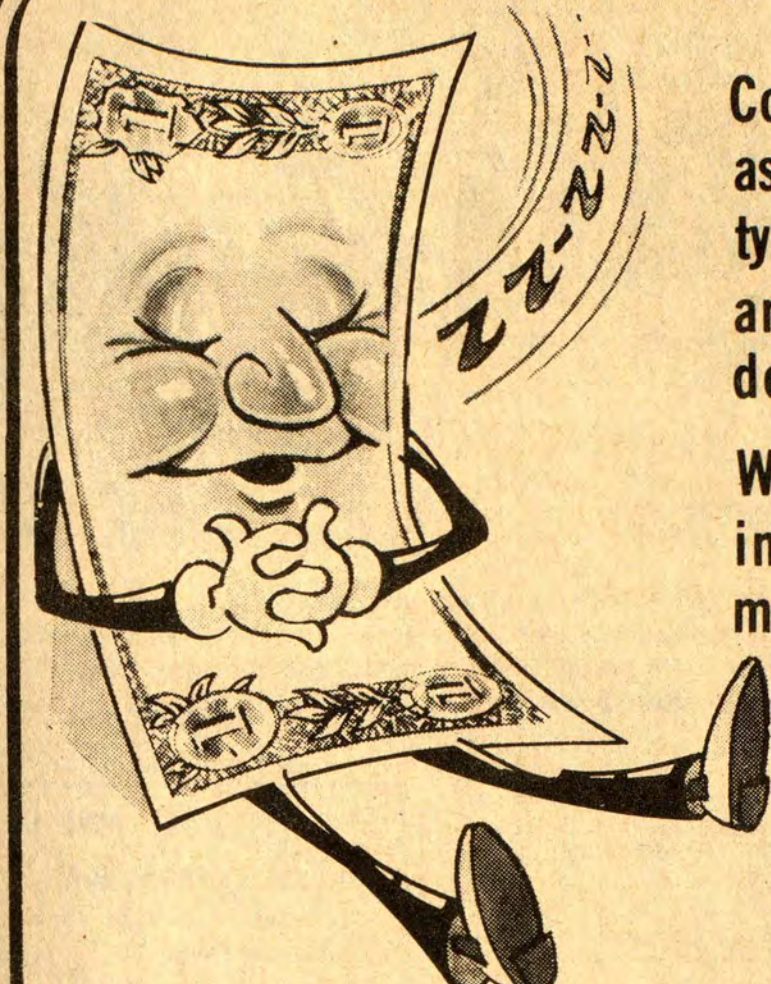

"After sitting out three years, I might be a little rusty from lack of game experience," he said. "I snapped the ball on punts and placekicks, but that isn't the same as playing quarterback."

Parks Head Says Cave Run Needs Park; New U.S. Park Seen

State Parks Commissioner Ewart Johnson told an audience of about 200 at Morehead last week that "it is obvious we need a new state park at Cave Run," but ownership of the land surrounding the reservoir by the U.S. Forest Service and the Army Corps of Engineers is seen as a barrier to park plans there.

Meanwhile, an Army Corps of Engineers official has been quoted as predicting that a new national park to be located on the Kentucky-Tennessee border, mainly in McCreary county, Ky., could by 1995 become the "Yellowstone of the East."

The Morehead meeting was the 14th of a series held there on park development in the state.

"If you folks," State Rep. Woody May, of West Liberty, told the gathering, "can provide the leadership to get some land leased from the U.S. Forest Service as a site, I think we can get the money at the next session of the legislature."

The site most often mentioned for a possible Cave Run state park is Caney Creek, near the dam, on the west side of the lake and in Bath county.

Col. Robert Tener, head of the Nashville district, Corps of Engineers, made the prediction of a national park after the corps paid $16.5 million to Stearns Coal and Lumber Co. for about 53,000 acres of forest land, which will become part of the Big South Fork National River and Recreation Area.

Preliminary plans call for the construction of a lodge with tennis courts and swimming pool to be built in McCreary near the Big South Fork River.

An old McCreary county mining community, Blue Heron, will be partially restored and indoor and outdoor museums will be built at the site. A boat launching ramp will be constructed at Yamacraw.

Recommend Agency For Flood-Control

The Appalachian Development Council recommended legislation creating an agency to coordinate flood control activities at a meeting here today in the Boone Tavern Hotel.

The council, which is attached to the Governor's Economic Development Commission, also recommended the legislature remove the referendum requirement for the county occupational tax.

Dr. W.C. Hambley, mayor of Pikeville and chairman of the intergovernmental relations relations committee, said an occupational tax is badly needed in some counties.

Another suggestion from the council was to modify liquor options.

The council also recommended a regional transportation plan for eastern Kentucky and a study by the Legislative Research Commission of the feasibility of providing tax incentives to wood industries and woodland owners.

The recommendations from the council and two other councils studying rural and urban economic development will be submitted to the EDC for review and study September 7, and three councils and the commission will present their proposed legislative package to Gov. Julian Carroll at a joint meeting October 5.

"Famous Kentuckians"

Irvin Cobb: Paducah's Gift of Humor

by Lynn Evans

Novelist, poet, reporter, playwright, movie star, after-dinner speaker and radio personality, Irvin Shrewsbury Cobb was a favorite son of Paducah, Kentucky. His hometown named a cigar, a bridge, a hotel, a park and a drink after him. Though he spent most of his life outside Kentucky, he never forgot his roots and returned to Paducah twice a year to renew acquaintances.

Born June 23, 1876, Cobb had an ambition to be a cartoonist. His father suffered financial losses so Cobb quit school and went to work driving an ice wagon at the age of 16. Shortly thereafter he started as a cub reporter on the Paducah Daily News. Three years later he became its managing editor. Leaving his beloved western Kentucky, Cobb went to work on the Louisville Evening Post as a general reporter and humorist.

In 1901 Cobb returned to Paducah as managing editor of the new Paducah Democrat. Even then the call of the "big time" beckoned him.

His father-in-law loaned him money to seek his fortune in New York City, but Cobb could not get anyone to hire him. He finally wrote a letter to the managing editors of all the papers in town.

"I told them that I was probably the liveliest reporter and the best writer and the ablest editor that had ever come to New York to uplift its journalism to the highest possible level, and yet nobody had jumped at the unparalleled opportunity of hiring me," he recounted.

He got the job the next day with the New York Sun. In 1905 he went to the Evening World as one of the highest-paid reporters in the country. For several years he covered almost every big story that broke, and still saved time for his humorous writing.

Irvin S. Cobb

He moved next to The Saturday Evening Post, where his Judge Priest stories made him even more famous. These tales were based on the life of a Paducah judge, William Bishop, with characteristics of Cobb's father and uncle put in for good measure. During the days with the Post he became a war correspondent.

From 1923 on, he worked for Cosmopolitan magazine. It was during this period that he became a "personality," being in demand as a lecturer, after-dinner speaker and radio performer.

"In what I write with intent to be humorous, I try to avoid giving offense to any individual," he wrote. "To my way of thinking, a joke that hurts the feelings of someone or that leaves a sore spot on another's pelt, or that deals with physical deformities of men and women, is not such a very good joke at all."

A prolific writer, Cobb, in 1936, declared that he had written 300 short stories, 60 books and about 5,000 articles for magazines and newspapers.

He worked hard and filled his leisure hours playing poker, smoking big, black cigars and partaking, in moderation, of alcoholic beverages.

"Speaking of Operations," "Red Likker" and, of course, Judge Priest were his best-known contributions to American literature. Humorously writing out his funeral arrangements, he asked that his cremated ashes be buried under a dogwood tree in Paducah and that "if anybody tries to insert me into one of those dismal numbers run up by the undertaker's dressmaking department, I'll come back and ha'nt 'em. I'll be done with after-dinner speaking forever so why dispatch me hence in the regalia of the craft?"

He suggested as pallbearers, friends who "cuddle to their bosoms three of a kind in a dollar limit game." His wishes were carried out in early March, 1944.

THE LAPLAND BRIDE IS WED IN DARK BLUE, with many shawls tied over her shoulders. The top shawl is usually white. Women guests at the wedding ceremony also wear white shawls (the traditional garb for all solemn occasions). The number of shawls worn by the bride is somewhat of a status symbol. Paralleling the American custom of wearing "something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue," the Finnish Lapp girls must wear "one bought, one got, one stolen, the rest borrowed."

Lapland bride has last-minute chance!

Least known among the peoples of the world are the inhabitants of Northern Finland at the Arctic Circle. It is believed that the Finnish Lapps roamed as nomads across Russia and Finland as far back as the last Ice Age, 10 millenniums ago.

Their origin, actually, is not known. There is some thought that they are an ancient sub-arctic race. The Finns only know that they found the Lapps in the North of their country about 2,000 years ago.

Though time has wrought its changes among these quiet people as it has with other inhabitants throughout the world, some of the traditions of the deep past are still retained by the quiet, shy Laplanders. Among these are the customs that continue to be practiced at Lapp weddings, both by bride and groom.

Unlike the nuptial event in America, where both parties participating in a marriage arrive at the church separately, in Lapland the bride and groom are escorted to the house of worship on foot, in a procession from the bride's home.

Accompanying the bridal pair, and first in line of march, are the bride's nearest family. The groom's relatives follow, with the betrothed couple next.

Behind them are young marrieds and the singles. The procession often consists of several dozen people.

The traditional Lapp bridal dress is always dark blue, with many shawls tied over the bride's shoulders. Usually the top one is white, taking the place of a veil.

Women guests at the wedding ceremony wear white shawls, also, as is customary on all solemn occasions. The number of shawls worn by the bride is kind of a status symbol.

Lapp custom gives the bride a chance to change her mind about her intended husband, right up to the last minute, practically, before she says "I do."

A rejected suitor may appear and approach her before the ceremony, while she is seated, sit down beside her and lightly press her foot with his. He hopes she will return the gesture. For, if she does, this will signal that she would rather marry him.

This foot-pressing method gives the near-bride the right to switch fiances even before the priest says his Amen.

Though this might call for smelling salts by the bride's and the groom's families and friends in America, in Lapland no one gives it a second thought. In fact, the girl's behavior would be regarded as something quite correct. The shunned groom, then, must accept the rebuff gallantly.

Wedding receptions in Lapland have changed little over the centuries. Guests attend a party at the bride's home, at which they are offered reindeer meat and salmon sandwiches—the delicacies of the Far North—and coffee and home-made pastry.

The one ancient Lapp custom that surely would have little or no appeal even to adventurous North Americans is one that is still followed by newlyweds at the Arctic Circle. The bridal couple is required to spend their wedding night outside their hut. This isn't difficult to take in the summer, when the weather is balmy, clear and delightful. But, in the winter, this means the nuptial night is spent in the bare snow.

The Finnish Lapps, nevertheless, are otherwise becoming more educated and assuming the ways of the very literate and progressive Finnish people. They have adapted themselves to the modern social and economic conditions.

But, like many other people in other lands, they continue to cling to some of the traditions of their forefathers. The marriage rites and its ancient customs are among those that are destined to be preserved for some time to come.

Solemnity and quietude of the Japanese wedding

In contrast to the wedding ceremony as it is known in the United States, with its manifest ebullience and gaiety, solemnity and quietude set the tone of the traditional Japanese wedding. And rightly so, in particular for the bride whose demeanor throughout the ceremony is one of a downward gaze showing little emotion.

In fact, one of the accessories of the traditional wedding attire was a small dagger which symbolized the bride's determination to succeed in her marriage or, if not, to be prepared to end her life!

In Japan it is commonly said that one marries in the Shinto faith and is buried in the Buddhist one, and it is not unusual for couples who are Buddhists by religion to choose the Shinto ceremony with which to be married.

The ceremony itself is performed by the priest and not witnessed by a large group, but limited to the immediate family of the couple.

A wedding reception to which the couples' friends and relatives are invited usually follows the ceremony. The reception can take place anywhere from a hotel banquet room to a restaurant and the occasion is one of gaiety and celebration much like the Western counterpart.

The traditional bridal attire is very beautiful and extravagant, representing upwards of thousands of dollars in cost.

Traditionally, the bride is heavily powdered so that she has a white almost mask-like appearance.

In olden days, a young woman wore her hair long and uncurled, and it was done up in the traditional elaborate high hair do. Nowadays a wig takes care of that tedious chore.

One of the concessions that has not been made is the wearing of the white silk

TRADITIONAL JAPANESE BRIDAL ATTIRE consists of a very ornate kimono with flowing sleeves that reach down to the floor. Often the gown is made of rich silk brocade with a great deal of embroidery using gold and silver threads. The obi or sash is also of silver and gold brocade, very elaborately tied in back. The bride wears the traditional hairdo, elaborately arranged, lacquered and piled high.

cloth around the hair do which is called a tsunokakushi symbolizing the young woman's total devotion to her husband. The bridal costume entails several layers of undergarments, and the gown itself is often a very exquisite silk brocade embroidered with silver and gold threads and is in many beautiful colors.

very heavy brocade often woven with much silver and gold threading. This is tied very elaborately and high in back.

The sheer weight of the completed costume is enormous and maybe there is reason for the bride's downcast look, because it's not an easy task to move with that kind of weight on one's head and shoulders!

Bride and groom of India take around a sacred fire their vows

From exotic India comes one of the most beautifully spiritual marriage ceremonies of all, that of the Hindu wedding around the sacred fire.

The marriage ceremony in India is of ancient origin, compiled from the Vedas, the Hindu sacred books, about 5,000 years ago.

The Hindu marriage takes place in the house of the bride. Before the actual ceremony, the groom arrives at the house with his family and friends, and he and the bride exchange garlands of flowers.

Then the bride is led to the sacred fire—the place of the marriage ceremony—by her mother's brother.

The bride and groom sit in front of the fire, while the priest chants the mantras, or sacred hymns, invoking the gods to witness and bless the union.

The ceremony before the fire is known as the Vivaha-Homa. Apart from the personal responsibilities towards each other, the Hindu marriage ceremony calls upon the couple to accept wider responsibilities of life towards the human community in general and towards the universe at large.

The couple then begin the Homa-Pradakshina and Sapta-Padi, making seven rounds of the sacred fire. They both take one oath for each round, these oaths being very similar to the Christian marriage vows.

THE BRIDE OF INDIA is wed in her own home, exchanging vows with her husband-to-be in front of a sacred fire, the symbol of Light and Power in the Hindu faith. The typical bridal costume in India consists of a beautiful ghagra (skirt), with blouse and the ornhi, or mantle, worn gracefully on the head.

After the seven rounds, they are declared man and wife by the priest.

so it can be the first day of somebody else's, too.

THIS COULD BE THE START OF SOMETHING BIG.

One man. One match. One small trash fire. It all seems harmless enough.

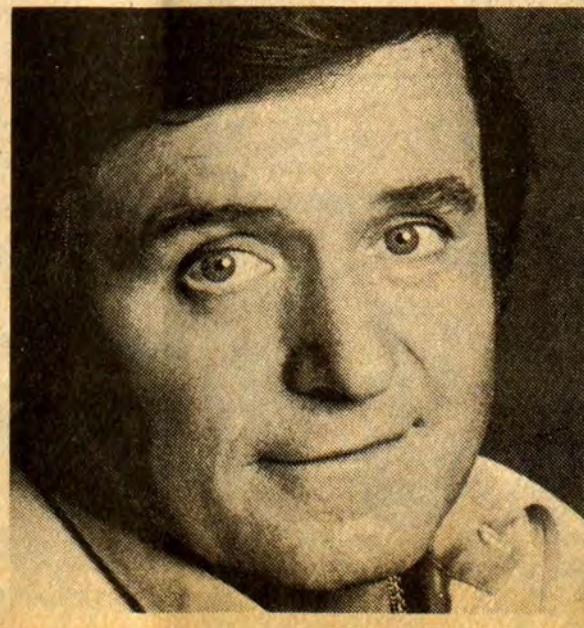

Yet, add to this a light wind. A flying spark. A dry forest ready to explode. And you've got all the makings of one raging Wildfire.

For this reason, unauthorized trash burning is illegal. And dangerous.

If you plan to burn trash or debris, call your local forestry agent for permission. Before you start something too big to handle.

Occupations—even hobbies—all have their peculiar illnesses and afflictions, the September Reader's Digest reveals. Plunkett's Folk Name and Trade Diseases lists Desk Neck, a posture problem, as well as Typist's Cramp and Label Licker's Tongue. Then there are Carpet Layer's Knee, Baker's Itch and Singer's Knots. Road Rash is a skateboarder's complaint, and you know who comes down with Jogger's Heel. Even relaxing has its pitfalls. Beer Drinker's Finger and Television Neck, to name two.

Who Are These People... Called Nazarenes?

This question is asked quite frequently in my course of calling.

First of all; We believe that cross of Christ is central in the redemption of mankind.

We believe that it takes the power of the Holy Spirit to convict men of their sins.

We believe that all have sinned, but can have a personal relationship with God through the blood of Jesus Christ.

We believe in the trinity; the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit.

We believe that it is possible to live above sin, but only through the presence of the Holy Spirit in our hearts and lives.

We believe in divine healing through faith.

We believe in unity with Christ as the head of the church.

We observe the sacrament of the Lords Supper and water baptism.

More Federal Aid
Not the Answer

More federal aid is not the answer to improving the academic performance of American students, according to the head of a blue-ribbon panel that spent months studying test score declines. Instead of federal intervention, says former Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz, more community involvement is needed. Wirtz chaired a College Entrance Examination Board panel that studied the decade-long decline in Scholastic Aptitude Test scores.

"I think the future lies in stimulating local community initiative, not just in local communities carrying out programs with federal funds," Wirtz told a Senate Education Subcommittee hearing on basic skills. A. Bartlett Giamatti, president of Yale University, placed the blame for the decline in test scores on "the decline in our attitude toward language...If the attitude toward language disintegrates, motivation disintegrates." Giamatti also blamed the "open curriculum" of the past decade for not giving students needed guidance. "Open curriculum" is a contradiction in terms, anyway, Giamatti said, since "curriculum" means structure. "To the ancients, a 'curriculum' meant a race course, a laid out and defined path, not an open field without boundaries. Because without boundaries, there are no expectations, and without expectations there is no real possibility of satisfaction for the runner. There's got to be definition, or there's no sense of achievement."

Pharmacy
by Harold Cooley
The term "epilepsy" is applied to a chronic nervous disorder usually characterized by convulsions. Most authorities agree that epilepsy is not inherited directly, but that a tendency or susceptibility to epilepsy is inherited. This condition does not develop unless there is a weakness or defect in the brain or nervous system and, in addition, a stimulus, such as some accident or injury, an infectious disease, or a metabolic disorder. Two factors are necessary, then, for epilepsy to assert itself: a constitutional tendency or susceptibility, and an environmental stimulus.

White House Invites Bailey to Briefing

Benny Ray Bailey has been invited to join President Jimmy Carter, HEW Secretary Patricia Harris, Domestic Affairs Advisor Stuart Eizenstat and others for a briefing on hospital cost containment legislation which will be introduced by the administration in the coming weeks.

President Carter will speak at the briefing, which is scheduled for the East Room of the White House, September 4, at 2:00 p.m. A reception in the state dining room of the White House will follow the briefing.

Dr. Bailey, a nationally recognized leader in the field of health care financing and management, is executive director of the East Kentucky Health Services Center, Inc., which operates medical clinics at Mallie and Kite. He is also the democratic nominee for state senator from Floyd, Knott, Perry and Martin counties.

Hammond To Profile Bills On Workmen's Compensation

The chairman of the subcommittee on Workmen's Compensation plans to profile five bills in his own name so study can begin by the full Labor and Industry Committee.

Sen. Jim Hammond (D-Prestonsburg) said the profiling is a "vehicle" so study can continue simultaneously by both the subcommittee and committee.

Proposals under Hammond's bills include establishment of a state workmen's compensation insurance provider financed with start-up money from bonds sold by a public service corporation rather than from the General Fund. He said these bonds would be attractive since money return would be non-taxable.

Another prefiled bill would restructure the Kentucky Insurance Regulatory Board, which sets premium rates for workmen's compensation. Under the proposed change the attorney general must challenge rate change filings. Presently the board must act both as challenger and decision maker in rate cases, said Hammond.

Other bills would make re-insurance by private companies of employers acting as self-insurers more available by having the state supervise amounts needed and the cost; include employer's past work experience in ratemaking so rates would be lower for "safe shops;" and bring special fund payments by self-insurers and group self-insurers more in line with payments by private companies.

Hammond said self-insurers and group self-insurers now have to make higher payments into the special fund. The fund is established to help finance benefits to an injured worker when more than one employer or a pre-existing condition is involved.

In other business, the subcommittee today heard testimony from the Insurance Regulatory Board from Jim Carigan, actuary for the Property and Casualty Division, Kentucky Department of Insurance; and on the Workmen's Compensation Board by Ken Hollis, general counsel for the state Department of Labor. The boards are attached to the respective departments for administrative purposes.

Carigan said the regulatory board has decided not to seek an outside actuary study of a rate filing in Dec. 1978 by the National Council on Compensation Insurance. This outside study was requested by resolution of the Committee on Banking and Insurance.

Apparently the committee felt the intent of 1978 legislation was that an independent actuary study filing and supporting information rather than in-house board staff, said Carigan.

The board rejected the subcommittee resolution because it felt no funds were provided for outside study, and a staff actuary would have specific criticism and be more useful, he said. An outside study would be limited to either approving or disapproving a rate filing, said Carigan.

The National Council computes premium rates and files them with the department. The Insurance Regulatory Board, which handles all casualty and property lines, approves or disapproves such rates.

In a related matter, Hammond asked Carigan to determine the insurance interests of the chairman and seven regulatory board members. Kentucky law provides the board will include: an insurance consumer and three representatives of noncommercial consumers.

Operation of the Workmen's Compensation Board was outlined by Hollis. He said field work on compensation claims is done by hearing officers. The five board members then make decisions concerning the claims.

Hollis said he feels a state insurance provider may lower premium rates as much as 10-20 percent but not 30 percent as some believe. Savings would be gained through elimination of sales commissions on private policies.

Presently, a Kentucky employer may insure liability through three methods, private insurance, qualifying as self-insured if fiscally able, or pooling liabilities with other employers through group-self insurance. Workmen's compensation has been a legislative issue since 1972 due to high premium rates and low benefits compared to other states.

Unemployment Up Last Month in Ky.

The number of Kentuckians unemployed in July was 87,600, almost 13,000 more than in June but 2,800 less than during July of last year.

The July unemployment rate rose to 5.6 percent of the labor force, an increase of 0.8 percentage points more than the June rate. The national unemployment rate for July was 5.8 percent.

According to Robert MacDonald, chief labor market analyst with the state Department for Human Resources, the increase in unemployment in Kentucky was due to job lay-offs throughout most industry groups, primarily in manufacturing and trade.

The total number of Kentuckians working in July was 1,472,700, about the same as in June.

Gasoline Prices At New High

Sunday operating hours for service stations in central and eastern Kentucky increased again last week, according to the Blue Grass Automobile Club's (AAA) weekly fuel gauge report.

So did the price of gasoline. After a slight price per gallon increase the previous week, the current averages show a considerable jump. The average cost per gallon at full-service pumps was $1.01, almost two cents more than the preceding week and the cost at self-service stations was 96.2 cents, which was more than three cents higher.

The average cost at full-service pumps was 97.5 cents for regular; $1.02 for premium; $1.01 for no-lead, and 98.4 cents for diesel. Self-service prices were 91.9 cents for regular; 99.9 cents for premium, and 96.9 cents for no-lead.

The survey also shows increases in all categories concerning operating hours. Twenty-nine percent of the stations contacted will be open past 8 p.m. during the week; 62 percent will be open past 6 p.m. on Saturday, and 29 percent will be open Sunday.

Seventy-two percent of the stations were expected to be open Labor Day, in comparison to the 63 percent open for the Fourth of July holiday.

KET SHOWCASES SCHOOL PROGRAMS

The Instructional Television (ITV) division of KET airs programs daily during school hours, beginning September 10. Clips from some of these programs are highlighted for general public viewing on "ITV Showcase," on the next three Saturdays, beginning September 15, at 7:00 p.m. (ET), 6:00 p.m. (CT).

Three series for schools in the "Primary Language Arts" area are highlighted in the September 15 program.

"Animal Alphabet," narrated by an owl, introduces the concepts of upper and lower case letters while teaching the alphabet, and also deals with vocabulary expansion for those who already know their letters.

"Rhyming Dictionary" mingles fact and fun in a tour of a zoo in song and rhyme.

"Word Feathers," a KET-produced series, presents a series of different characters who play with tongue-twisting words, creating verbal havoc and fun while familiarizing students with the sounds of various letter combinations.

"Math," September 22, explores the value of math in daily life and the teaching of the metric system. KET's "Math Country" is a dramatic tale of how everyday math affects the lives and fortunes of a young widow, her too children and a young millionaire cousin. The metric system will soon be with us, and "Measure Metric" shows how children will be taught this new system of measurement.

The final program, "Secondary Language Arts," airing September 29, highlights two of several available series for junior and senior high students. The KET-produced series "Contract!" uses

One Year Old

Jill Regenia Hamilton celebrated her first birthday, Sept. 1, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Hamilton, of Columbus, Ohio. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Martin, of Columbus, Ohio.

Now September . . .

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
 UK College of Agriculture

Now comes September which in the words of the late naturalist, Hal Borland, is a "time of pause and slow transition," a transition period between summer and autumn—a situation partaking of the characteristics of both seasons. It is a time neither old nor new when the earth is "beautiful as if new-born with nameless splendor everywhere, and wild exhilaration in the air."

In the southern part of the United States, September is one of the warmest months, and even farther north, hot days are frequent. The nights, however, are likely to be cool and there is often than a touch of that nostalgic blue haze that is so remindful of the campfires of the Indians.

September is always a very busy time in rural sections for it is the harvest period for many crops—the harvesting of corn, digging of potatoes, gathering apples, and the storing away of many items of produce for the dark days of winter. As another poet said, the "tilled earth naked and yellow from the harvest lies, the tanned farmers labor without slack," to store away the rich fruits of the fields, gardens, and meadows.

Historians record that in the calendar of Charlemagne, that great Frankish soldier, conqueror of the Saxons and Lombards, and later Emperor of Rome, September was the "harvest month," and it still bears that name in Switzerland. The Anglo-Saxons were more specific in their choice of a name. They called September the "barley month."

Reading back into history it is to be found that down through the ages many of the months have undergone changes in their number of days, but not September. Since old Roman times it has always had 30 days but it hasn't always been the ninth month as it is today. Before Julius Caesar revised the calendar, it was the seventh month and its name comes from the Latin word "septem" meaning seven. When the month was shifted in the Julian calendar from the seventh to the ninth month, the name was not changed.

September is the month in which another summer officially comes to an end—the autumnal equinox which falls around or between the 21st and 22nd days and wherein for a brief moment of time the days and nights are of equal duration. At this time of the year there are usually some turbulent weather conditions, not because of the equinox itself as some old folks used to believe, but because the earth in the Northern Hemisphere is beginning to cool off and there is a change in the movement of the air. The storms, according to meteorologists, are the result of the changes in atmospheric conditions and not of astronomical relationships.

September is the first of the "ember" months when livestock feeding time comes earlier; when shadows lengthen earlier across the land; and when lamplight shines out sooner at evenings. It is, indeed, as Helen Hunt Jackson wrote long ago: "With summer's best of weather and autumn's best of cheer."

Seven in Pike Co. Cited for Illegal Campaign Donations

Pike Circuit Court has ruled seven co-signers of a loan for a former candidate for the lieutenant governor post violated the state's campaign contributions law by signing the loan.

In a July 26 ruling, the court concluded the seven violated the law when they co-signed a $125,000 loan for Wayne T. Rutherford, an unsuccessful candidate for lieutenant governor in the May 1975 Democratic primary. Rutherford presently holds office as Pike County judge-executive.

Robert Holcomb, Terrill Coleman, Hobert E. Potter, William M. Deskins, John Jack Adkins, F. M. Burke and Marris Allen May were the co-signers of the May 14, 1975 loan from Citizens Bank of Pikeville.

The court found the loan was intended for and used as funds for Rutherford's campaign.

It concluded that endorsement of such a loan constitutes a contribution as defined by state law. It further concluded that such an endorsement, where the endorser becomes liable for sums in excess of $3,000, is a violation of state law. Contributions are limited to a maximum of $3,000 by an individual to one particular candidate in an election.

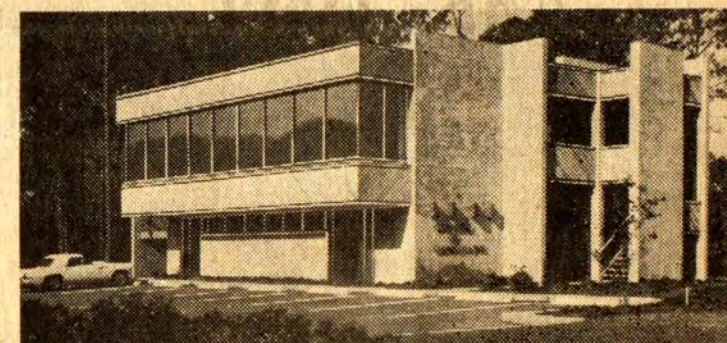

Some of the co-signers have paid a sum in excess of $24,000 on the loan to the bank.

The court made no finding on whether or not the seven willfully violated the law.

The suit was brought by the Kentucky Registry of Election Finance, the state agency charged with enforcing state election laws.

Make Mine Metric

By Bruce Foster

You've probably never heard of him, and it's questionable whether you'll remember him beyond this article. He's Metric Man. The name doesn't quite have the recognition and punch of Macho Man, but the Village People never cut a hard-driving disco single about him either.

Who Wants to be a Metric Man?

You may not be aware of it, but the United States is trying to convert to the metric system of weights and measures. The rest of the world mostly has. Metric Man is the cartoon creation of a Los Angeles filmmaker who has the unenviable task of educating the American public about meters, liters and kilograms. So far he's waging a losing battle.

Here's the story: In 1975, Congress created the U.S. Metric Board to "coordinate the voluntary conversion of the metric system." More than two years went by before the board gained Senate approval and they had a quorum to decide what the 1975 law meant. Still, the board was given no power of enforcement by Congress; the lawmakers shrank from setting a deadline for conversion, or even declaring a forthright national commitment to metric conversion.

President Carter is vague on the subject. "It is the intent of the Metric Act," he said, "that the rate of metrication be governed by the marketplace, with the U.S. Metric Board playing but a facilitating part in the process."

The board's chairman, Louis Polk, originally predicted that conversion would take 10 to 12 years, but after observing its progress, upped his estimate to 50 years. To expedite the situation, Mr. Polk believes, "I think you're going to have to strengthen that legislation."

For the immediate future of metrication, the American National Metric Council (ANMC), a Washington-based group, feels that through 1980, the pace will be determined largely by two factors: the strength of the economy, and business and government's ability to garner public acceptance. According to the ANMC, since conversion is not a high priority item with corporate management, one or more of the following conditions must exist before action will be taken:

- It is economical to convert.
- It simplifies the product line.
- A marketing advantage is perceived.
- Customers require a metric product.
- There is a consensus of all interests.
- International operations make it necessary.
- It can be accomplished as part of the normal product life cycle.

The Opposition's Complaints

In an age when most of the world is happily using the metric system, why such vehement opposition in the United States? Is it a built-in inertia, that people are inherently adverse to change? Is it a belief that what's good enough for 200 years is still good enough now? Could it be just plain mental laziness on the part of the American public?

In business, the main complaints against conversion are these:

- It's costly. Businesses would spend billions of dollars to convert tools or buy new ones, maintain double inventories, adjust equipment, set new standards and retrain employees. This is an extensive, nonproductive investment which, in turn, spells inflation.
- In trade with foreign countries, our current measurement system is not a significant factor; those industries which need metric to export already use it. A new policy for them is unnecessary.
- Our current system works, and Americans understand it.

On the other hand, metric proponents claim:

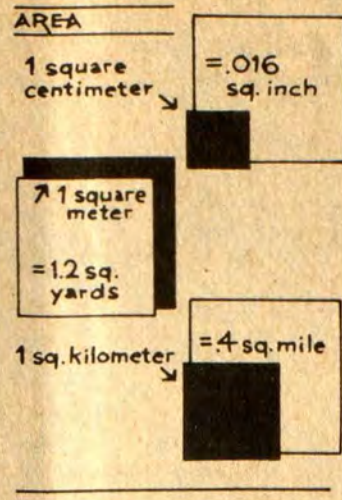

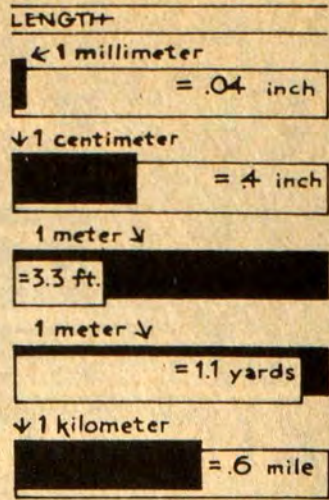

- The U.S. position in the world market would improve, as a common measurement language would make communication with foreign firms and markets easier. Without conversion, the U.S. could find itself with a shrinking share of the world market in coming years.
- Since everything's based on multiples of 10, the metric system is simpler and more rational than our present system. It is easier to teach, learn and use.
- As most of the world already uses this system, conversion here is inevitable.

What has the government already done to expedite metrication, and what is coming?

Presently, the National Weather Service is distributing temperatures in degrees Celsius as well as Fahrenheit, and plans to use only Celsius starting in September. Other metric data to be phased in includes snowfall predictions made in centimeters instead of inches starting this December; in March 1980, windspeed will be reported in kilometers instead of miles per hour; and next June, barometric pressure will be measured in kilopascals instead of inches of mercury.

In 1977, the Transportation Department ordered highway signs to show distances in kilometers instead of miles. This plan was soon canceled after some protest and probably won't be revived unless prompted by the U.S. Metric Board. A final ruling by the department has been issued requiring speedometers to be marked in both miles and kilometers starting with the 1980 models.

Maps are being produced by the U.S. Geological Survey with contour lines and elevations designated in meters instead of feet.

Good-by to the Fifth

After January 1, 1980, liquor bottles will be in six standard metric sizes, ranging from 1.75 liters—somewhat less than a half-gallon—to 50 milliliters, the new equivalent of a "miniature." The standard fifth will be reduced by two teaspoons to 750 milliliters. Conversion will cost the industry $10 million, estimates the U.S. Distilled Spirits Council, which will affect the price you pay. It's believed, however, that conversion eventually will help stabilize costs. The industry hopes for a bigger export market and expects cost savings from cutting the proliferation of bottle sizes.

Other areas of direct relevance to you the consumer, according to the American National Metric Council, include:

- The supermarket—items measured by volume will be marked in milliliters and liters. Items sold by weight will be marked in grams and kilograms.
- Clothing—sizes will be based on body dimensions measured in centimeters. It's hoped that new sizing will be more uniform and more closely related to actual body sizes than the present system.
- Textiles—cloth will probably be sold in even metric widths, similar to the old standard widths of 36", 45" and 60". Sewing patterns will have dual sizing for a time, giving metric first and then customary measurements.
- Household furnishings—furniture dimensions will be given in centimeters; carpeting will be sold by the square meter.
- Appliances—television screens will be measured in centimeters; coffee pots may be marked in liters

1 kiloliter - 1,000 liters	1 kilogram - 1,000 grams
1 gallon - 3.79 liters	1 gram - 1,000 milligrams
1 quart - .95 liters (or 950 milliliters)	1 milligram - 1,000 micrograms
1 pint - .48 liters (or 480 milliliters)	1 kilogram - 2.2 pounds
1 cup - .24 liters (or 240 milliliters)	1 pound - 454 grams
1 tablespoon - 15 milliliters	1 ounce - 28 grams
1 teaspoon - 5 milliliters	1 liter - 1,000 milliliters

Still don't understand? Metric Man, where are you?

and milliliters.

- Leisure—gardening: grams will be used for seeds, kilograms for fertilizers. Camping: tent dimensions will be centimeters; sleeping bag labels will indicate temperature limits in °C.
- Health—you will be weighed in kilograms; temperatures will be measured in °C; height will be measured in centimeters.
- Postal rates—mail rates will be based on grams rather than ounces.
- Cooking—customary recipes, measures and utensils need not be discarded. New metric-marked utensils will be available for new metric recipes. New recipe measurements will be largely by volume, as in the past, as opposed to weight for dry ingredients, as in Europe. Oven temperatures will be in °C.
- Lumber and building modules—will definitely be affected but no decision has been made yet on sizes.

Since it appears that metrics are indeed on the way, slowly but surely, you would do well to familiarize yourself with the system.

Here are some approximate equivalencies:

- One ounce - 28 grams
- Eight ounces - 227 grams
- Three and a half ounces - 100 grams
- One pound - 454 grams

Once the basic unit is determined, whether grams or liters, other multiples are built on it with suitable prefixes. Whenever the prefix "kilo" precedes a unit, it is 1,000 times that unit. One kilogram equals 1,000 grams, for example. Similarly the prefix "milli" indicates one-thousandth and "micro" one-millionth of the basic unit. A milligram is one-thousandth of a gram.

Harvest Festival in Morehead

"A doing festival, where every one gets into the activities," is how Mary Levee, chairman of the Rowan County Harvest Festival, describes this year's event in Morehead, Sept. 21-23.

"We're having a quilt and afghan contest, someone to show how to make pottery and let you try your hand and someone to show you how to weave. Sybil Clark from England will teach you how to folk dance," Levee said.

Some activities are continuous throughout festival hours 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Friday and Saturday and noon until 9 p.m. on Sunday. Bluegrass music, country music, food booths, arts and crafts exhibits, a dunk tank and farmers' market are featured all day. Most events are scheduled in downtown Morehead.

All downtown store windows will be decorated with quilts and afghans entered in the contest. "Regular judges will make their choice for prizes on Friday, then on Saturday the people's choice will be made. When selections are combined, the overall winners will be determined," Levee explained. "We had 198 handmade quilts last year. This year we will have well over 200."

Friday's events include an arts and crafts fair, all-day entertainment and Crazy Game Olympics for county school students at City Park. Friday night Rowan County High School plays the annual Harvest Bowl football game. The new Harvest Queen will be crowned at halftime.

Also on Friday at 8 p.m., the Sweet Adelines will present a concert at Baird Music Hall on Morehead State University campus, after which Rowan County High School seniors are sponsoring a street dance.

Highlighting Saturday morning's program is the big parade at 11:30. At 2 p.m., Morehead State University Eagles will have a special Parents Day salute during its home football game.

The Bluegrass Railroad Museum of Lexington will sponsor round trip train rides Saturday from Morehead to Clearfield on tracks of the old Morehead & North Fork Railroad. The Morehead Kiwanis Club will be conducting what it calls "the biggest garage sale in history," offering everything from reusable junk to rediscovered treasures.

Area Jaycees are sponsoring an all-day Bluegrass music festival Saturday at the Jaycee farm near town. At 9 p.m. in Button Auditorium on the MSU campus the Louisville Ballet will perform. (The ballet company is conducting a children's workshop on Friday.)

After the ballet, the annual Harvest Ball will be in Adron Doran University Center on campus.

Special activities Sunday include an old-fashioned get-together at a local church, performances by the Creek Bank Singers, a children's group, plus the Bell Ringers. At 3 p.m. will be the three-mile Harvest Run for joggers. That evening an outdoor theater will be performed at a downtown location.

CARD OF THANKS

The Charley Mosley family wishes to take this means of conveying their thanks to the many neighbors, relatives and friends for flowers, sympathy and other help during the funeral of our loved one. We especially want to thank Dr. Mary A. Hall and all of the people at the McDowell Hospital for their fine service and attention during his many stays at the hospital; the Left Beaver Rescue Ambulance Service, and the Hall Brothers' Funeral Home for their fine service. Thanks to the ministers and singers, and especially to Elders Mitchell Chafins and Hershel Huff who officiated at the funeral.

THE FAMILY

life program similar to college life. This program involved meeting and living with new friends from the six county area served by the Upward Bound Program. Dorm meetings, planning, and counseling sessions were built around dormitory life.

All of the students were involved in at least three trips away from campus. All students went to Eastern Kentucky University for a week-end trip of competition with Upward Bound programs from Berea College and Eastern. All students also participated in a three-day trip to Tennessee and North Carolina. The third trip of the summer involved small groups of students going bowling, canoeing, visiting the Capitol at Frankfort, to Cumberland Gap, a college tour or frog-gigging.

The group will meet again September 15 for the program's first follow-up meeting of the year and to participate in the seventh annual "Our Appalachia Day" on the Alice Lloyd campus.

God's Word Says It—And That Settles It

By Town Hall, 5433 Ruby Place, Sarasota, Fla. 33581

1. In the beginning was God. Nobody knows where He came from; He was always there. He had an infinite mind, and He created the Heaven and the Earth. In reality our Great God "spoke" the Heaven and the Earth into existence — as well as the stars, sun, and moon, planets, galaxies, and everything else that was created.

But on the sixth day, God said, "LET US MAKE MAN, IN OUR IMAGE, AFTER OUR LIKENESS" and let them have dominion over all the earth. Male and female created He them." Please note that God said, "Let us make man." This plainly tells us that Jesus, God's Son, and the Holy Spirit, were there with God in the Beginning; and that all three — GOD THE FATHER — GOD THE SON, AND GOD THE HOLY SPIRIT, were all three involved in all creation. Thus we have a TRIUNE GOD, omniscient, omnipresent, and omnipotent, (Gen. Ch. 1 & 2).

And yet, there are people in our world WHO DENY THERE IS A GOD. But when we can look out our windows and see the trees, the grass and the growing crops, the sun and moon, the clouds and sky; when we can see the sun come up in the East every morning, and set in the West every evening, and when we have experienced winter, spring, summer and fall — God's Handiwork, we can dismiss all such spurious, atheistic denials, and pray that our God will show them the Light.

Moreover, let's not forget that God also created a Hell for the atheists, who do not repent before they die; for the Devil and his angels; including non-believers in Jesus, God's Son; and all those who reject, neglect, or ignore Jesus, Our Only Saviour and Lord. Furthermore, this Hell we have just mentioned BURNS WITH FIRE AND BRIMSTONE, WHERE THEIR WORM DIETH NOT, AND THE FIRE IS NOT QUENCHED, (Mark 9:43-48); (Rev. 14:10) God's Word — The Bible — says it, and that settles it!

2. God also created a Heaven, where all is peace, rest and happiness. Jesus, God's Son, and God Himself are in charge of Heaven. The Bible tells us that after Jesus was crucified, buried, and raised by God, His Father, on the third day; and after He appeared unto His disciples for forty days, He was received up into Heaven, and sat on the Right Hand of God, where He makes intercession for us, (Mark 16:19, 20). Jesus talking to His disciples said, "I will come again and receive you unto Myself, that where I am, there you may be also, (John 14:3). This scripture embraces all believers in Jesus.

After Adam & Eve sinned in the Garden of Eden, their offspring, including you and me, inherited their sin nature. God looked down through time and saw you, and you, and you, and me, and He knew all about us, even our names, altho we were born nearly two thousand years after Jesus rose from the grave, and went back to Heaven. God saw the whole world full of people — whites, blacks, reds, yellows, and mongoloids — all lost and with no chance to get to Heaven. GOD WAS SORRY FOR US ALL, AND HE WAS UNHAPPY

BECAUSE OF OUR SIN PLIGHT.

So, God sent us a Saviour and Lord — Jesus Himself, God's Only Begotten Son, who brought us God's Grace Covenant. In fact Jesus was God's Grace (Love) for us. God's plan of Salvation DID NOT force Jesus upon us, but God loved us, and He gave every individual in the whole world the ABSOLUTE CHOICE to ACCEPT this Saviour, Jesus, and repent of his sins, and go to Heaven where Jesus is; or to reject Jesus, or neglect Jesus, or ignore Jesus, and go to Hell, which burns with Fire and Brimstone. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever Believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life, (John 3:16).

3. In the beginning was the Word (Jesus), and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made. (John 1:1-5).

There is no conflict between this scripture which says "All things were made by Jesus" and the Genesis account of Creation where God said, "Let us make man." Jesus Our Saviour was there with God, and was God from the beginning, Jesus became the God-Man, or God and man, when God sent Him to be born of the Virgin Mary in the Manger, God being His Father. On Calvary's Cross it was really God Himself Incarnate hanging there and dying for you and me. God's Word — The Bible — says it, and that settles it.

4. Why is Jesus so important to you and me today?

(a) All Have sinned and come short of the Glory of God, and we desperately need Jesus and His Blood to redeem us, (Romans 3:23, 24). While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us, (Romans 5:8). God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself, (II Cor. 5:19-21).

(b) Jesus, God's Son, is the Chief Cornerstone upon which Salvation rests and upon whom the Church itself is built, (Luke 20:17, 18). Peter, the Apostle who had healed an impotent man told his accusers that he had healed the man thru Jesus Christ, whom ye crucified, and whom God had raised from the dead, and who was set at naught by you builders, BUT WHO HAS NOW BECOME THE HEAD OF THE CORNER. Continuing, Peter said, "Neither is there Salvation in any other, for there is none other name under Heaven, given among men whereby we must be saved," (Acts 4:9-14).

(c) Jesus Himself speaking in John 14:6 says boldly, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life. No man cometh to the Father but by me." This plainly tells us that the only way to stay out of Hell and get to Heaven is through Jesus, God's Son. Good deeds and good works won't get you there; being honest and helping the Red Cross is fine, but it won't get you into Heaven. "For By Grace (God's Love and Mercy) are ye saved through Faith (In Jesus) and that not of yourselves: It is the Gift of God, not of works lest any man should boast, (Ephesians 2:8, 9).

(d) Many church songs proclaim Jesus, God's Son, Our Only Saviour and Lord. A few words from some of these songs follow: His Blood can make the Foulest Clean — Amazing Grace How Sweet the Sound, That Saved a Wretch like me — What Can Wash Away My Sins? Nothing but The Blood of Jesus — There is a Fountain Filled with Blood, drawn from Immanuel's Veins — On Christ the Solid Rock I Stand — Jesus Himself says, "Behold I stand at the Door (of your heart) and Knock, If any man hear My Voice, and open the door, I will come in" (Rev. 3:20).

(e) It has been estimated that for every CHRISTIAN in our country today, there are possibly twenty-five persons lost, and on the Broad Road to Hell. Bro. Fran Picker, Pastor of Southside Baptist, said in a recent sermon, "God does not put a person's Soul in Hell. Man puts himself in Hell because he will not accept Jesus, God's Remedy for our Sins. At this point man leaves God no other choice." And the writer agrees with the preacher. "God sent NOT His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world through Him might be saved." (John 3:17)

What will you do with Jesus, Friend? (1) Play it God's way, and receive Jesus into your heart, Believe on Him, and go to Heaven where Jesus is waiting; or (2) Reject Jesus, and neglect and ignore Jesus and send your own soul to Hell which burns with Fire and Brimstone. The choice is yours to make. Jesus is ready to save you today, if you will ask Him!! It's up to you!! It's your soul!!

God's Word — The Bible — says it, and that settles it!

Fighting for the Consumer

by Caroline Barnes

In 1976, a number of community groups in the state of Illinois wanted to prevent special interest groups from controlling the fates of their communities. They formed the Illinois Public Action Council, which now consists of 61 organizations from every part of Illinois.

Community organizations from ethnic neighborhoods, senior citizen and consumer organizations, farmers' organizations, organizations from poor and minority communities, and coalitions of groups from small towns banded together to conduct statewide campaigns to protect the average consumer. The Council, for example, is battling utility rate increases in every utility service area of the state, and they have also worked to stop rising property taxes. Their property tax relief legislation would mean savings for 65% of all households in the state.

Professional Help At A Reasonable Cost

In October, 1978, the Council created the Consumer Services Organization to provide consumers and taxpayers with legal, financial and consumer services at a reasonable cost.

The legal services program is geared for those middle-income people who need legal advice but can't pay the high fees of private attorneys and do not qualify for the legal aid programs available to the poor.

Although this kind of program has been a benefit in certain union contracts for several years, this is the first time it has been offered to the general public. (Right now, this service is available to Illinois residents in the Chicago metropolitan area only, but it is quickly becoming a successful prototype for other, similar plans.)

The Three Membership Plans

Of the three membership plans available, the most popular one is the Pre-Paid Plan. For an annual membership fee of $175, this plan provides non-criminal legal services and unlimited consultation with attorneys at no extra cost. Members can get help with tenant/landlord problems, credit problems, real estate closings, divorces, simple wills, adoptions, bankruptcies and other problems that require legal assistance.

In addition, members have access to a consumer complaint hotline. This hotline provides experts who give advice on how to pursue a complaint. Typical problems handled by the hotline service include: auto service repair, unfair billing, mail order purchases, unfair contract practices, consumer credit, warranties, deceptive selling and faulty merchandise. Furthermore, members have access to an income tax preparation service that handles both federal and state income tax forms.

The Fixed Fee Plan is slightly different. This plan costs $60 to join. For this initial fee, a member is entitled to 2 hours of consultation with an attorney. If a member has a problem that requires more than 2 hours of consultation, further legal help is available at fixed fees considerably lower than those rates prevailing outside the plan. Members of the Fixed Fee Plan are also allowed to use the consumer hotline service and the income tax preparation service at no additional cost.

The Small Business Plan makes low-cost legal services available to small businessmen in the greater Chicago metropolitan area. To join this plan, a $75 registration fee is required, and after that legal services are available for only $35 an hour. Typical legal problems handled under this plan are: business sales and purchases, commercial transactions, contracts and leases, financial proceedings, organizing a business, evictions, real estate problems, and trademark and copyright procedures. The drafting of partnership agreements, contracts, and Articles of Incorporation should be particularly popular, said Karl Rubesh, an attorney with CSO. This plan provides "preventive counsel," allowing members to consult an attorney before they sign contracts and documents. This way, members can ward off problems before they develop. Because of the high failure rate of small businesses, this service is especially important.

"You Get What You Pay For"

The response of the legal community to CSO's cost-cutting program has been mixed, according to Steven Blutz, Director of CSO.

"There's a group of attorneys who support the concept of CSO, there's a group that's indifferent to us, there's a group that wants to work for us, there's a group that is watching what we are doing so they can do it too, there's a group that hates us because we are doing things differently," he said.

A common comment voiced by critics of CSO is "You get what you pay for." This is not the case, according to Blutz.

"With the typical lawyer, you're getting less than what you pay for because the lawyer's prices are inflated," he said. "With us, you're getting more than what you pay for."

Obviously some members of the legal community believe that CSO is offering a valuable service. Representatives of all 6 of Chicago's law schools are members of the CSO advisory board. The board also has community leaders in CSO's other service areas, and serves in an advisory capacity to the developing program and as a professional review board in the event a member has a grievance against CSO.

Complaint Hot Line

The consumer complaint hot-line, which is open from 9 to 5 Monday through Friday, is available to all individual members to assist with consumer problems and educate consumers. Consumer advisors help members handle their consumer problems by instructing them of their rights and advising them on steps they can take. If the member needs assistance, the advisors will also intervene on behalf of the member. They will investigate the complaint and attempt to mediate the problem.

If the consumer advisors are not able to resolve the problem, they may refer the member to an attorney for further consultation. CSO feels that the link between the consumer complaint hot-line and the legal department is an important asset of the program.

Difficult problems which cannot be resolved by consumer advisors may also be referred to small claims court or to a government agency, the state's attorney's office, or a state agency.

"The way the marketplace is structured now, consumers cannot possibly know everything they need to know to make decisions. They do not have complete information, and they often don't have time to investigate goods and services offered by companies," said Wilma Selzer, consumer advisor for CSO. "Not only do they not know if a company is reliable, for example, but they don't know their rights."

Dick Wilson, another consumer advisor, said the majority of calls coming in on the hot-line require some investigation and follow-up. He added that most of the people calling in felt the hot-line was helpful in either answering questions or resolving consumer problems.

As the program develops, CSO may offer yet more benefits for consumers. For example, it is currently considering adding dental services and a consumer credit union to its program.

Help for the Middle Class

According to a 1975 study sponsored by the U.S. Office of Education, about 30 million Americans are not aware of their legal rights. Many people will wait until a problem has turned into a disaster before they will seek legal help.

"People often don't realize they need a lawyer," said Dr. Steven Jay Blutz, CSO director. "But whenever they sign a lease for an apartment or a contract for a loan or a bill of sale, they're signing a document prepared by lawyers for the benefit of bankers, merchants or landlords. People ought to have their own lawyers to protect their interests."

There are several reasons why middle-income people avoid seeking legal help. To hire a private attorney can be very expensive, and many people feel they cannot afford the fees. Also, many people distrust the legal profession and don't know how to go about finding a competent attorney. They may not even recognize their problems as legitimate legal problems.

"The group of people sandwiched between the rich and the poor have many legal needs, such as legal assistance in real estate matters, tax problems, wills and trust, divorces, adoptions and court cases," said Charles Purcell, professor of law and former dean of Loyola University School of Law and CSO advisory board member. "That is why the services provided by Public Action's Consumer Services Organization are so important."

Remind Farmers Of Soil Tests

The ASCS office reminds farmers who have applied or are planning to apply for seeding this fall under the 1979 Agricultural Conservation Program that a soil test is required for seeding practices.

A sample of the soil from each field the farmer plans to seed should be taken to the County Extension Service located in the Courthouse Annex Building.

September 30 is the final date to report completion of seeding practices, and those who plan to participate in this program should bring soil samples to the extension service as soon as possible.

You know the story. The mild weather lulls some of us into a sense of security. Then, before we know it, winter blasts in to find us unprepared.

If you're an ant, you've assessed your heating situation and your budget situation. If you're a smart ant, you've already ordered your Buck Stove. (The genius ants got their Buck Stoves last year.) Smart ants face the winter season with confidence, a supply of hardwoods stacked nearby and a pocket full of money that they won't have to spend on high heating bills.

You grasshoppers, however depend totally on last winter's expensive and limited methods—or you don't wise up and order your Buck Stove until after the pond freezes over. By then, of course, you may have to wait for the supply to catch up with the demand. You may even have to hock your fiddle to pay the heating bills.

Don't hang with the grasshoppers unless you need problems this winter. See us for wood-burning wisdom that can keep you snug. As a bug.

College Credit Without College

Hundreds of Kentuckians are enrolling in college courses this fall, but they won't be traveling to campus.

They are part of an ever-growing number of adults who have signed up for television courses for college credit to be offered by the Council on Higher Education and 23 participating schools over KET channels this fall.

In all, seven courses will be broadcast on subjects ranging from Shakespeare to the social sciences and including business, education, composition, history and even inventions. Individual schools decide which of the seven they will offer, how many credit hours to grant per course and what tuition fees and registration deadlines will be.

Four of KET's college telecourses begin during the first week in September.

"Values and Morality in Education" begins its run on Monday, September 3 at 3:30 p.m. (ET) with a repeat showing on Friday, September 7 at 6:00 p.m. (ET). Designed for teachers, the course demonstrates the importance of society's values to the educational process.

"It's Everybody's Business," a beginning business course, airs Mondays and Wednesdays at 6:00 p.m. (ET), beginning September 3. Viewers will have a second chance to watch the two programs consecutively on Saturdays, beginning at 12:00 noon (ET).

"The American Story," a history telecourse, airs Mondays and Wednesdays at 6:30 p.m. (ET), immediately following "It's Everybody's Business." Repeats of "The American Story" can be seen Saturdays at 3:00 p.m. (ET), and 3:30 p.m. (ET).

"Writing For a Reason," an introductory English course, airs Tuesdays and Thursdays at 6:00 p.m. (ET), beginning September 4, with Saturday repeats at 2:00 and 2:30 p.m. (ET).

The other three college telecourses, "The Ascent of Man," "Connections: Technology And Change" and "The Shakespeare Plays," premiere later this fall.

In addition to the television lessons, most courses include a textbook and study guide and, like their on-campus counterparts, consist of assignments and tests.

According to statistics there are great numbers of what educators call non-traditional students—housewives, the handicapped, the elderly, and men or women who work part or full-time—who are unable or unwilling to attend classes on college campuses. This fall, thanks to TV courses for college credit, it's the start of another school year for hundreds who otherwise would have found it impossible.

For more information about TV college courses contact your local college or university or write: Robert Carter, Council on Higher Education, West Frankfort Office Complex, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Mrs. Ratliff Named Martin CF Chairman, Dance Coordinator

Mrs. Roy Ratliff has been named Martin Chairman for the "Breath of Life" Super Dance for Cystic Fibrosis. According to Mr. Charles Thayer, Bluegrass Chapter president of the CF Foundation, Mrs. Ratliff will coordinate the Super Dance to raise funds for research and care programs for children affected by Cystic Fibrosis and other lung-damaging diseases.

The Super Dance will be held during September or October. In order to continue the fight against CF, everyone's help will be needed, "so please give generously of your time and money when you are contacted," said Mr. Thayer.

Cystic Fibrosis is the number one genetic killer of children, occurring in one of every 1,500 births. An inherited, incurable disease, CF destroys lungs and it destroys life.

Little more than a decade ago, most CF babies died in pre-school age. Thanks to improved therapy and expanded research, increasing numbers of individuals with CF are surviving into adolescence and adulthood with the ability to lead more active lives than ever before.

Even with this program, Cystic Fibrosis and other lung-damaging diseases still threaten the lives of millions of helpless children. "Your participation in Martin's Super Dance will help them all breath a little easier," Mr. Thayer said.

To Perform at 8th Our Appalachia Day

VISITORS at a past "Our Appalachia Day" kick up their heels while listening to a band practice before going on stage. The eighth annual "Our Appalachia Day" will be held Saturday, September 15, on the Alice Lloyd College meadow. There will be music, crafts, baking contest and a soup-bean supper available at the festival. The event is free and open to the public.

Four musical groups and three individuals from Floyd county are among area musicians who have indicated they will perform at the eighth annual Our Appalachia Day, Sept. 15, at Alice Lloyd College. They are "The Big Sandy Valley Boys" of East McDowell, "The Ratliff Family Band," of Martin; "The Green Mountain Boys," of Hi Hat; Clifton Johnson, of Bevinsville; Perry Ward, of Buckingham, and George Tucker of Ligon, and the Floyd County Ramblers, from Teaberry.

The music will start at 10 a.m. and continue through the day. WKCB, of Hindman, will broadcast several hours of the music. An arts and crafts exhibit will open at 10 a.m. and continue through 6:30 p.m. At 4:30 p.m. the college will provide the traditional soup-bean supper. There will be folk dancing after supper from 6:30 to 8 p.m. All activities are free and open to the public.

Again this year there will be a baking contest. Entries will be judged in seven divisions including cobblers, pies, cakes, old fashioned cakes, cookies, candies and breads. Entries should be in the hands of the judges by 2 p.m. on Our Appalachia Day. All entries will be served as part of the supper provided by the college. All are invited to bring a dessert to enter in the contest or just to share with the crowd. Persons are encouraged to bring an old-fashion dessert, along with information about the recipe.

Other musicians already scheduled to perform at Our Appalachia Day include: From Knott county—"The Stone Family," of Hindman; "The Lonesome Mountain Boys," of Topmost; "The Knott Central Stringed Instrument Club,"; "The Bluegrass Kin"; the "Pine Top Ramblers,"; "The Midnight Travelers," of Pippa Passes; Bennie Moore and Doug Hutchens, of Pippa Passes; and Johnny Handshoe, of Leburn. Also planning to attend is Frank Majority of Whitesburg, a harmonica player, and Warren May, of Berea, a dulcimer player.

There is a new ocean aborning in the southwest corner of the Arabian Peninsula, called the Rift Valley. Its progress, according to the September Reader's Digest, is slow—not yet equaling the relatively rapid widening of the Red Sea, now two centimeters in width a year.

The New Most-Wanted List: House Swapping

With double digit inflation chewing great chunks from your vacation dollar, you may be ready to join the vacation home exchangers. Thousands of money-wise travelers have already discovered this low-cost way to see the world. By registering with a home exchange agency, you, too, can holiday anywhere on the face of the globe for just the cost of your transportation.

To get started, contact one or more of the agencies listed below. Although none of them can guarantee you a free stay in a chateau overlooking Nice or Cannes, they will provide you with lists of potential exchangers, worldwide, which well may include that luxurious villa.

A large percentage of the listings will be right here in the United States, concentrated heavily in California, Florida and Hawaii. A substantial number of the home-swappers are retired persons with plenty of time and a flexible vacation schedule. This flexibility makes for easier scheduling on both sides.

The lists also include the names of exchangers in foreign countries, though not the most ardent world traveler. One retired Detroit couple has swapped homes with residents of fourteen foreign nations on six continents.

The typical agency will charge you about $20 if you want your home to be listed in their directory of home-swappers. If you don't want to be listed (or if you're applying too late to be listed in the yearly edition) you can receive a copy of the directory for about half that price. Although some are updated on a monthly basis, most of the home-swapper listings are published on a yearly basis, and you have to apply early to be included in one of them.

Each prospective exchanger includes a brief description of his home (including number of baths, bedrooms, view and location, as well as swimming pool or other special features). Many of the listings also offer autos, boats, and temporary club memberships as part of the swap. Domestic offerings, including apartments and condominiums, generally fall into the middle or upper-middle class category. Foreign listings, especially those in Latin America, are often luxurious, and can include a retinue of domestics. Generally, the listing will also indicate areas the homeowner would be interested in visiting.

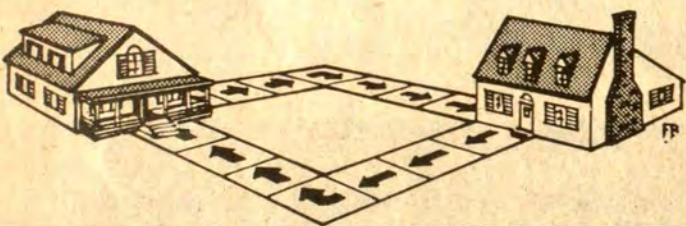

Armed with your atlas and writing materials you are ready to begin. Once you settle on a destination, write to several persons listed in that area. In addition to describing your own home and whatever extras go with it, you should include a brief sketch of your personal background and family. Also indicate the desired dates and duration of your proposed stay.

A few swappers exchange references; most do not. Few complaints have surfaced, leading to the assumption home exchangers are a unique and honest breed.

Once your letters are posted, all you have to do is wait. When the responses arrive, you can do whatever screening is still necessary (phone calls or an exchange of photographs or references) and then proceed with the final arrangements. Finally, you are off to your free accommodations.

Incidentally, your name and personal listing will appear in your agency's first revised directory issued after your enrollment. Then you will begin to receive inquiries from many of those faraway places.

Committee Proposed for Study Of Entrance Tests for Tots

A 12-member citizens committee to study the early entrance testing program was proposed last week by the Subcommittee on Program Implementation Oversight.

The subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Kenneth Gibson (D-Madisonville), moved to establish the committee after hearing from education representatives about the problems caused by the implementation of the early entrance program to kindergarten and first grade this year.

Part of the problem incurred this first year was, according to Kentucky Department of Education officials, the varying cut-off points allowed by the local school systems. A standardized testing procedure and standardized cut-off points were proposed to the subcommittee as a means of correcting current problems.

Carol Banks, elementary education supervisor in Franklin county, asked the subcommittee to consider the "fantastic problem" for local school districts created by the program. Neither additional staff time or money for testing materials was allocated by the legislator, she noted.

The subcommittee discussed possible changes in the testing procedure. The logistical problems of money and staff time were also placed on the agenda for the meeting of the citizens committee.

The citizens committee will be composed of two officials from the Kentucky Department of Education, an early childhood education specialist, two elementary school supervisors, a kindergarten teacher, a first grade teacher, a superintendent of education, a representative of private kindergartens or day care centers, an educational testing authority, a representative of the state PTA and a member of the Kentucky Association of Children Under Six.

Calling the meeting an informal work session, Gibson asked the educators to help the subcommittee find solutions to the problems caused by the testing program. The educators were asked to help the legislators come up with ways to help avoid the "stigma of failure" which many parents complained was attached to failure to gain early admission to Kentucky kindergartens and first grades.

House Bill 92, passed by the 1978 General Assembly, stated that Kentucky children entering first grade must either be six years old by Sept. 1 or have completed a state-approved kindergarten. The early entrance testing program was an amendment to that bill designed to allow exceptions to the age and previous schooling requirement.

Educators told the subcommittee the testing conducted last spring was traumatic for the children involved and left many with a "stigma of failure."

Dr. Kathy Thornburg, of the Early Childhood Education Department of the University of Kentucky, told the subcommittee children are flexible and with the right adult support a testing situation will not damage a child. She suggested the testing be conducted individually, or in small groups, and might be supplemented by game playing or observation of the children tested.

Dr. Thornburg stressed the need for parent education. More information and explanation of the testing procedure must be given to parents, she said.

Dr. Adam Matheny, of the University of Louisville, told the subcommittee "Nothing is wrong with the intent of the law, the problem is with how it is being carried out." He asked that the behavior of the children during testing be given more consideration and that tests not be "machine graded" with no additional review.

Gibson asked the committee be charged to find "positive approaches to the task of improving the implementation of the law."

The committee will give its recommendations to the subcommittee for inclusion in the final subcommittee report.

Caesarean Seminar Set at PCC, Sept. 6, 7

The Big Sandy Family and Childbirth Education Association and the Community Service Program of Prestonsburg Community College are jointly sponsoring a public two-day seminar entitled "Coping with the Caesarean Birth Experience." The leader for the seminar will be Candice Phillips, of Lexington.

Mrs. Phillips holds a BSN degree in nursing from the University of Kentucky and has been teaching Lamaze childbirth in Lexington for seven years. As an A.S.P.O. certified childbirth educator and a Caesarean birth mother herself, Mrs. Phillips was instrumental in founding the Lexington Association for Parent Education's Caesarean support group and she continues to serve as its advisor. Mrs. Phillips will soon be teaching the first parent Caesarean birth classes to be held in Lexington under the auspices of L.A.P.E. She is currently in private practice as a childbirth educator associated with Physicians for Women in Lexington and the nursing staff of St. Joseph's Hospital.

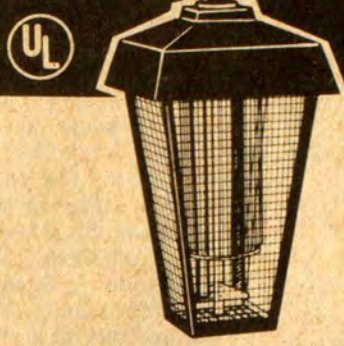

The seminar will be held September 6 and 7 in room P-216 of Prestonsburg Community College.

This seminar will be open and free to the public. Babysitting will be provided for all sessions. For further information contact the Community Service Program of Prestonsburg Community College, 886-3863, ext 215.

A WELL-PLANNED LANDSCAPE IS A WISE INVESTMENT

By placing trees, shrubs, vines and landscape structures properly, homeowners can conserve energy.

Good landscaping practices offer one of the most practical methods of reducing home energy consumption. With carefully planned landscaping, the home and surrounding areas will remain comfortable year-round.

For example, shading the house's roof with large trees can reduce inside temperatures by as much as 10 degrees. When trees drop their leaves in fall, sunlight can reach the roof and help warm the home.

Plant evergreen trees on the northern and western sides of the home to serve as windbreaks and thus reduce heating costs in winter.

Also, smaller trees and shrubs can shade walls and windows in summer. During winter, sunlight can reach these areas and warm them.

Landscape specialist suggests protecting walls from heat and cold by planting vines, shrubs and certain trees trained to grow flat against them. Such plants can also reduce noise and dust pollution.

Arbors and slatted wooden overhead structures are effective cooling devices when attached to the home since they shade walls and windows.

Ground cover plants between homes and paved areas will help to reduce summer temperatures. The temperature above ground covers is about degrees lower than above concrete.

To help conserve energy, provide shade for the outdoor portion of a split system air conditioner. But, don't obstruct air flow or access for needed service.

Take time to plan a landscape that will work to reduce heating costs. A well-planned landscape is one of the best investments a homeowner can make.

PREVENT MILDEW

Pesky molds that cause mildew are a problem in areas of high humidity and flooding. Mildew leaves a musty odor, causes discoloration and sometimes rotting, most often on cotton, linen, rayon, silk, wool, leather, wood and paper.

The spread of mildew in a moist environment can be prevented or remedied with water-proofing, ventilation and suds-and-water care.

Molds that cause mildew are always in the air but need moisture to grow. Damp, dark, warm and poorly aired cellars, crawl spaces, clothes closets, basements, shower stalls and bathtubs, and damp and dirty clothes are all perfect environments for mildew growth.

PREVENTION

You can prevent mildew by controlling causes of dampness. Replace cracked or defective mortar around a house. Check for adequate drainage. Consider waterproofing concrete and other masonry walls above ground. Seal absorbent brick and other surfaces by spreading a layer of moisture-barrier material over the soil under the building.

Good ventilation helps remove moisture. When outside air is drier than inside air, it absorbs excess moisture. Use an electric fan to circulate air, if natural breezes are not sufficient. Air conditioners take up warm air, cool it, and circulate the cool air back into a room. A dehumidifier helps control humidity. When using an air conditioner or dehumidifier, keep windows and doors closed.

Store garments and furnishings only when clean and dry to prevent mildew growth. Man-made fibers which resist mildew must be kept clean; soil on them, under the right conditions, can start mildew growth on other fabrics.

Water-repellant sprays, mildew inhibitors, fungicides and chemicals to absorb moisture help keep fabrics and surfaces moisture and mold free. These are sold under various trade names in department, drug or building supply stores. Always use according to directions and keep out of the reach of children and pets.

IF MILDEW IS ALREADY A PROBLEM

If there is mildew on clothing or household fabrics, remove spots as soon as discovered before mold can weaken materials. Begin by brushing off mold outdoors so mildew spores do not scatter in the house. On washable fabrics, pretreat by rubbing detergent into the dampened stain. Then, launder the items in hot water and chlorine bleach, if safe for fabric, and detergent or soap.

Should the stain remain, sponge with hydrogen peroxide. Rinse and launder. If not bleach safe, soak items in an oxygen bleach according to directions. Then wash. Take non-washable to the dry cleaner; identify the stain.

Upholstered pieces, mattresses, rugs and carpets need to be treated differently since mildew can penetrate deeply. When possible, start by taking the mildewed item outside and brushing mold away with a broom. Using the upholstery attachment of a vacuum cleaner, run it over the surface to draw out more mold. Remember, mold spores are going into the vacuum, so dispose of bag or sweepings outside to avoid scattering mold spores.

If the article is still damp, dry it with an electric heater or fan. Sun and air thoroughly to stop mold growth. If mildew remains on upholstered furniture, wipe it with a cloth dampened with a diluted alcohol solution (1 cup denatured or rubbing alcohol to 1 cup water). Dry the article thoroughly.

Sponge mildewed rugs and carpets with rug shampoo, or use an electric shampoo machine. If possible, let the article dry in the sun.

Wipe mildew from leather with a cloth dipped in a dilute alcohol solution. Dry in a current of air; use a fan for better circulation. If mildew remains, wash with saddle soap. Wipe with a damp cloth and dry in an airy place.

UK training technicians for wood-forest industry

By AVERY JENKINS

The town of Quicksand in the Kentucky foothills of the Appalachian mountains is the home of a unique program where students learn the technology of wood—from tree planting to finished commercial product.

Most of the students at the University of Kentucky's Wood Utilization Center, Quicksand, are not the rural, outdoors, brought-up-on-the-farm youths one might expect. The lure of a lifestyle that places the school's graduates in the open air appeals to many students who grew up in cities.

There are other similar schools in Virginia, Florida and North Carolina, but the UK Community College System's Forest and Wood Technology Program is the only one known to take the students all the way through the growth and uses of wood as a part of their training, says Bob Howard, the superintendent at Quicksand.

Students earn a two-year associate degree in forestry and wood technology through the UK Community College System. Although they are enrolled in UK's Hazard Community College, their campus is a beautiful wooded plain in a bend of the North Fork of the Kentucky River in Breathitt County. The center of teaching is a large building that houses the Wood Utilization Center. Here the students learn to saw, drill, plane, sand and shape wood in many different ways and for various purposes. But the goal of all this training is to learn how furniture is mass produced, says Howard.

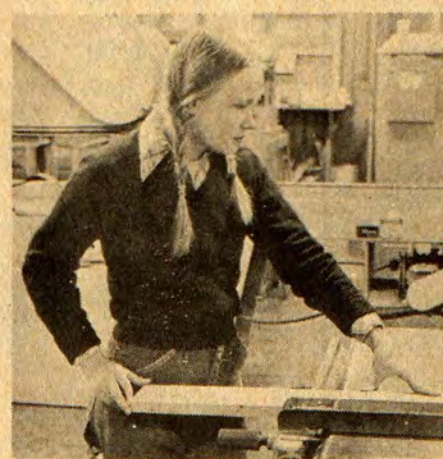

He said the forest and wood technician program is designed to train an individual for employment as a forest technician or wood technician. This is a person competent to occupy a responsible position in the line of authority between the skilled forest worker and the professional forester or between the labor force in a wood plant and the plant manager.

"Craftsmanship is not the primary goal in the school," Howard said. "We are interested in our students learning mass production procedures."

In addition to the wood utilization facilities, the campus also includes dormitories, dining halls and classrooms. The first year of the two-year program can be acquired at one of UK's community colleges or at any other college or university. In that first year of study, students get basic requirements in such subjects as chemistry, English composition, math, plant science, biology and accounting.

Transferring to Hazard Community College for the second year, students live and learn at the University's Wood Utilization Center at Quicksand. Among the subjects studied are tree identification, forest surveying, logging, sawmill operations, wood identification, assembly and finishing of wood products, reading aerial photographs, lumber seasoning, producing nursery stock, log scaling rules and various methods of cruising and estimating timber volumes.

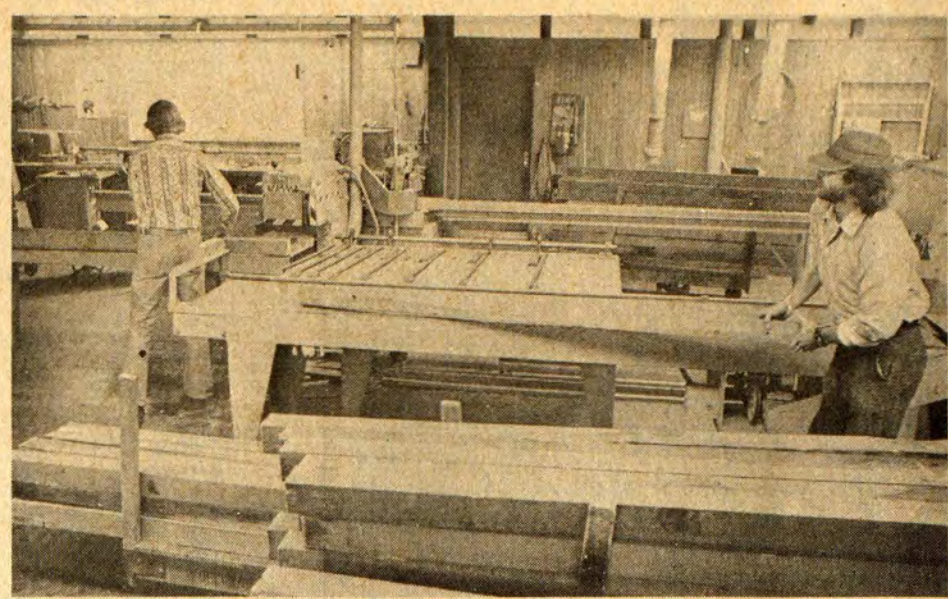

Howard said the program appeals to students who like an active lifestyle and the out-of-doors. Financial assistance is available for eligible students with limited resources to spend for an education.

Denise Blanton of Jackson uses a planer at the Quicksand center.

Learning how to use large wood-working equipment is an important part of training for these Hazard Community College students at the Quicksand center.

"After being out of school for a few years, some of our graduates are making up to $28,000 a year, depending upon the individual and the kind of job that he or she has," Howard said.

"We estimate the starting salary for our graduates to be about $12,000 annually, although some of them are making up to $18,000 after a few years of experience," Howard said. "It's accurate to say that the person who demonstrates exceptional dedication and achievement will command a top salary in a good working environment."

The wood industry is one where unemployment rates are exceptionally low, according to Howard. "Insofar as we know here at the Center, not one of our graduates is unemployed."

New professorship spurs UK study of schizophrenia

Dr. Arnold M. Ludwig, chairman of the department of psychiatry in the University of Kentucky College of Medicine, is uniquely qualified to hold the recently-established E. A. Edwards Professorship for teaching and research into schizophrenia and other related disorders.

Ludwig, who has been at UK since 1970, published his first research paper on schizophrenia in 1961.

The E. A. Edwards Professorship was created in January by the UK Board of Trustees in response to a bequest under the will of Evalyn A. Edwards of Pueblo, Colo.

Among other functions, Ludwig, as E. A. Edwards Professor, is to do research in schizophrenia and related disorders "for the purpose of clarifying cause, nature, prevention and/or cure of schizophrenia."

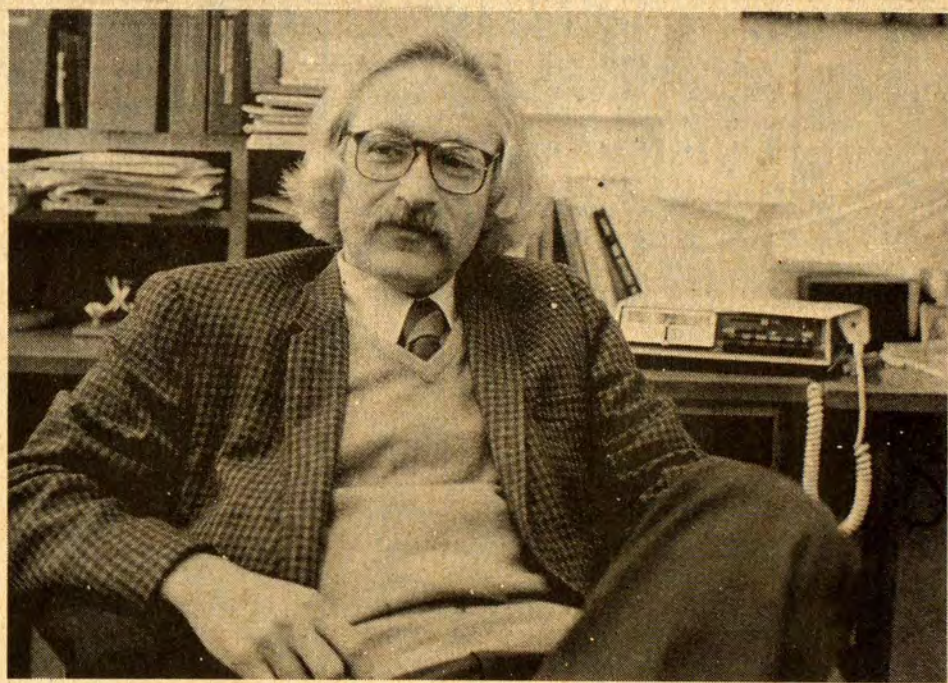

Schizophrenia, in Ludwig's judgment, is "the most malignant, and creates the most long-term disability, of all the psychiatric disorders. Twenty-five percent or more of all mental hospital admissions probably carry that diagnosis."

"In its extreme form," Ludwig added, "schizophrenia is the psychological equivalent of cancer. It is the classical portrayal of insanity or madness, in which disorganized thinking, delusions, hallucinations and bizarre behavior can be seen."

Ludwig says he's "delighted" at being named the first E. A. Edwards Professor. He'll continue with his present research, publishing and teaching duties, but with "additional resources to pursue some long-standing research interests in the area of schizophrenia."

Among these potential research interests is a longitudinal study of schizophrenia, to "understand the vicissitudes that people with this disorder go through over time, compared with other psychological disorders."

UK project helps dentists communicate with deaf patients

By BETTY TEVIS

A spare time venture by a dental student and a young administrator at the University of Kentucky has resulted in a valuable and unusual service to dentists and the deaf.

Third-year dental student Kathy Mueller and Dave Gantt of the department of educational resources in the College of Dentistry, with one small grant from the state Department of Human Resources and another from the College of Dentistry, have produced a 24-page booklet, "Clinical Sign Language."

Illustrated by UK medical illustrator Bob Herndon, the booklet has been mailed to the state's 1,500 dentists.

The publication evolved from Ms. Mueller's knowledge of the need to both reassure and instruct deaf dental patients, and the average dentist's difficulty in doing either.

The booklet contains drawings illustrating the American manual alphabet as well as drawings of signs for such needed phrases as "sit here," "keep mouth open," "if hurts, raise hand," and the like.

Requests have come from dentists outside of Kentucky as the result of a presentation made last fall by Ms. Mueller to the Anaheim, Calif., meeting of the American Dental Association (ADA), and the publication of an article on communicating with deaf patients in "The Journal of Dentistry for the Handicapped" last year.

The ADA Journal has added the booklet to its list of publications, and a textbook company has expressed interest in it.

Dr. Jose Lucente, professor of restorative dentistry at UK and director of special patient care, says UK will make an educational film for deaf children based upon the Mueller-Gantt work.

Gantt, a native of Atlanta, has a bachelor's degree in education for the deaf from MacMurray College in Illinois; while at UK studying for a master's degree in library science he taught a spare time class in sign language.

Ms. Mueller, then a first-year UK dental student, enrolled in Gantt's class because she thought knowledge of sign language might one day help her treat handicapped patients.

Ms. Mueller is a UK graduate who holds a master's degree in biology from
