State Agency, EKCEP Would Get Welfare Recipients Jobs

The Department for Human Resources last Friday signed an agreement with the Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program (EKCEP) to work together in a demonstration project designed to get welfare recipients off government subsidy and into jobs.

The project, called the Employment Opportunities Pilot Program, is designed to train welfare recipients in various skills so they can get meaningful jobs in the private sector, said David Lollis of the department's Bureau for Manpower Services.

The Hazard-based Eastern Kentucky Concentrated Employment Program is the prime sponsor for federal Employment and Training Administration activities in 23 eastern Kentucky counties, including Floyd, and is one of 15 prime sponsors around the nation chosen to test the pilot project, says Lollis.

The agreement, says Lollis, will insure that low-income persons and families who participate in the program do not become ineligible for other forms of assistance to which they are entitled.

"It is very important to the Department for Human Resources that we help people get off the welfare rolls and into meaningful jobs," Lollis said.

Local businesses and local officials will be lending support as the job opportunities portion of the program gets under way, he predicted.

Columbja Gas Ordered To Refund $2,230,000

The Kentucky Energy Regulatory Commission has approved a $2.23 million refund to customers of Columbia Gas of Kentucky. The refund comes from repayments made to Columbia by its supplier, Columbia Gas Transmission Corp.

The bulk of the refund, more than $1.63 million, will be credited on the monthly bills of residential and small industrial and commercial customers. The remaining $597,000 will be refunded by check to large commercial and industrial customers.

The first sit-down strike was by Pittsburgh puddlers and boilermakers who seized a mill during a strike in 1842, according to the U.S. Labor Department booklet, "Labor Firsts In America".

The first states to have equal pay legislation for women were Michigan and Montana in 1919, according to the U.S. Labor Department booklet "Labor Firsts In America".

Woman's World

Room For Improvement

Giving birth doesn't have to mean stirrups or harsh delivery room lights. In an effort to make the expectant mother feel more at home, more than 1,000 of the nation's 65,000 hospitals have given birth to a new concept in childbirth: the birthing room. The number of such rooms is expected to double or triple within the next few years.

Designed to combine the familiarity and informality of home with all the advantages of a fully-equipped hospital, birthing rooms came about in response to the demands of expectant parents that delivery be treated as a normal process instead of an illness.

Many birthing rooms—in many cases, refurbished labor rooms—feature patterned wallpaper, curtains, and lounge chairs. Medical equipment may be hidden. The woman usually wears her own nightgown, may bring her own food to the hospital, and gives birth on a narrow hospital bed on wheels.

In some cases, the new parents can remain with their newborn for up to two hours after delivery. Some hospitals even permit the woman's husband, children, parents, and relatives to observe the happy event; and the father may even spend that first night with his wife and child.

Birthing rooms help the new parents to economize: an average three-day maternity stay in a regular hospital costs about $1,000, excluding the physician's fee. Birthing rooms discharge mother and child within 24 hours of delivery, with costs hovering around the $600 mark, depending upon the facility.

As Natural As Mother's Milk

There are few tried and true formulas for caring for newborn babies, but one thing is certain: Breastfeeding your infant is about the safest and nicest thing you could do for both baby and yourself.

Women nursed their children long before formulas and baby bottles came about. And for good reason: Breastfeeding is the most natural conclusion to pregnancy and birth, and breast milk is better for your newborn than man-made equivalents. Here are some further pluses:

- In addition to being economical, breast milk is always fresh and warm. Babies fed it have a natural protection against infections and diarrhea because of the anti-infective elements contained in the milk.

- Breastfed babies smell better and are less likely to experience constipation. Also, the breastfed baby is less likely to overeat compared with its bottle fed peers who may be encouraged to finish every last drop.

- Breastfeeding pays off for mother as well. Nursing a baby is a physically and emotionally satisfying experience which promotes a closer relationship between mother and child. Nursing mothers usually lose the extra weight gained through pregnancy more quickly than their non-nursing peers. Also, the hormones produced when a woman nurses help control bleeding after delivery, forestall the resumption of the menstrual period, and enable the uterus to shrink back to its normal size much sooner.

New Rules For The Dating Game

When liberation comes, must love fly out the door? Not on your life! Today's woman has much more of a say in how she spends her Saturday nights—and every other night of the week. Here are some tips on being a liberated Juliet:

- Persevere. Meeting men is a matter of chance. Juliet might have disagreed, but there is no one star-crossed lover for you. Your chances of finding the man of your dreams increase as you meet and date more men.

- Build your self-confidence and put your ego on hold. If you want to meet men you have to risk rejection. Don't fall back on the old cliché: "If only I were prettier." Attractiveness is important but so are energy and personality.

- If you can't abide bars, swallow your pride, telephone that nice man you met at last week's party, and ask him to the movies. If he refuses but asks for a raincheck, take him up on it and call him back at a later date. If he is less than enthusiastic, forget him.

- Try forming a "party circle": 10-15 women hold a monthly party to which they each invite two available and desirable men. (Once a man attends, he's off the list for future parties.) You can locate eligible men at classes, offices, club meetings. And don't be shy: A tradition like this could enable you to meet 20-30 eligible men per month. Juliet—and Romeo—never had it so good!

Plan To Study Early Testing

A 12-member citizens committee to study the early entrance testing program was proposed last week by the Subcommittee on Program Implementation Oversight.

The subcommittee, chaired by Sen. Kenneth Gibson (D-Madisonville), moved to establish the committee after hearing from education representatives about the problems caused by the implementation of the early entrance program to kindergarten and first grade this year.

Part of the problem incurred this first year was, according to Kentucky Department of Education officials, the varying cut-off points allowed by the local school systems. A standardized testing procedure and standardized cut-off points were proposed to the subcommittee as a means of correcting current problems.

Carol Banks, elementary education supervisor in Franklin county, asked the subcommittee to consider the "fantastic problem" for local school districts created by the program. Neither additional staff time or money for testing materials was allocated by the legislature, she noted.

The subcommittee discussed possible changes in the testing procedure. The logistical problems of money and staff time were also placed on the agenda for the meeting of the citizens committee.

The citizens committee will be composed of two officials from the Kentucky Department of Education, an early childhood education specialist, two elementary school supervisors, a kindergarten teacher, a first grade teacher, a superintendent of education, a representative of the state PTA and a member of the Kentucky Association of Children Under Six.

Calling the meeting an informal work session, Gibson asked the educators to help the subcommittee find solutions to the problems caused by the testing program. The educators were asked to help avoid the "stigma of failure" which many parents complained was attached to failure to gain early admission to Kentucky kindergartens and first grades.

Community Chorus To Meet Sept. 17

The Prestonsburg Community Chorus will have its first rehearsal Monday, September 17, at 7 p.m. at Prestonsburg Community College, Johnson Administration Building, Room J155. The chorus will begin work on Handel's "The Messiah", which will be performed, December 2.

The chorus, which has been in existence 14 years, is composed mostly of lay musicians. Any person interested in singing good choral literature is eligible and is invited to join the group.

According to Gus M. Kalos, director of the group, the chorus will need to add many new voices this semester, and those interested in joining the group should attend the first meeting, Monday evening. The course may be taken for college credit.

Columbia Gas Gets 1-Cent Rate Boost

The Kentucky Energy Regulatory Commission has approved a rate increase for Columbia Gas of Kentucky because of the increased cost of wholesale natural gas to the company.

Customers will pay an additional 1 cent per 1,000 cubic feet of gas used.

Columbia's annual revenue is estimated to increase by a little more than $366,000 because of the rate hike.

Residential customers will pay a minimum monthly bill of $3.79. Commercial and industrial customers will pay a minimum monthly bill of $3.79. Commercial and industrial customers will pay $4.01 for a minimum monthly bill. The cost per 1,000 cubic feet decreases as more gas is used.

The increase reflects one passed on to Columbia Gas by its supplier, Columbia Gas Transmission Corp.

CARD OF THANKS

The family of Henry P. Scalf wishes to express in some measure our deep appreciation to all who were so kind to us during his illness and upon his death. We would especially thank those who sent food and flowers, neighbors and friends who comforted us, the ministers for their words of solace, and Hall Funeral Home for its kind and courteous service. We cannot fully express how much all the words and deeds of kindness mean to us, but we will never forget them.

Loss of Interest on Coal Fund Could Cost Floyd, Other Counties

Floyd and other coal counties stand to lose heavily if last week's opinion by the attorney general's office stands.

The opinion held that an estimated $4.4 million in interest earned by a coal tax rebate fund should revert to the state instead of being distributed among the coal counties.

The opinion, which has no force of law, may prompt a review of the whole situation by the 1980 Legislature.

The issue arose when Robert Warren, assistant auditor of public accounts, conducted a routine check required by the Legislature and turned up doubts as to whether the interest was being spent legally in being allotted to the coal fund.

Warren asked the attorney general's office if interest received from investments of idle money should accrue to the coal fund, which is used for various projects in some 40 coal-producing counties.

Assistant Attorney General Charles Runyan said no, that the interest from the Coal Producing County Development Fund should go to the state's general fund, which finances most operations and services in the commonwealth and is shared by all 120 counties.

Warren noted there is an administrative regulation that authorizes the interest to go to the coal counties.

"It is our opinion that the regulation in question exceeds statutory authority and it is invalid or unenforceable," Runyan said.

That opinion put Warren in the middle, and he asked the state Finance Department why the interest had been handled in the apparently illegal way.

Warren said finance officials defended their arrangement.

"First, we've recommended legislative clarification in the whole area in the use of interest income. The issue is larger than just the coal counties," Warren said.

"Secondly, we have asked finance's counsel to consider the attorney general's opinion and assess its impact on the current status of the coal fund. That's pretty much all we can do."

The coal fund—rebates to affected counties from the state's coal severance tax—was established by the General Assembly in 1974 and eventually a total of almost $34 million was allotted.

The whole system was replaced by the 1978 Legislature with the Economic Aid Fund, but about $8.2 million, including the interest in question, remains unspent from the original coal-fund legislation.

Pike county is due the largest share, $2.8 million, followed by Perry county $827,000; Hopkins county, $700,000, and Harlan county, slightly more than $500,000.

Wells Dismissed From Mine Post

Nevard Wells, 57, chief stripmine reclamation inspector at the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection office here, has been fired.

In his letter of dismissal, DNREP Secretary Frank Harscher wrote Wells that he had "failed to enforce the rules and regulations governing stripmining, while also failing to adequately lead and supervise employees in said enforcement."

Wells' ouster comes four months after he and Gene Stewart, former acting regional engineer at the DNREP office here, were cited for allegedly overlooking stripmine violations for favored mine operators. On May 9, Wells was suspended without pay, Stewart went on leave with pay, and a departmental investigation of the charges was conducted.

Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement Commissioner Gene Brandenburg exonerated the two men, July 27, but subsequently reopened the investigation at the direction of Harscher, who had recently succeeded Eugene Mooney as DNREP secretary.

In dismissing the inspector, Harscher charged Wells with instructing inspectors under him not to cite mine companies for obvious and numerous stripmining violations; ordering an inspector to sign a release of reclamation bonds at two mining sites, though the areas had not been adequately reclaimed; and failing to see that he or his inspectors regularly monitored stripmine sites.

Wells maintains his innocence of any wrongdoing and reportedly plans to appeal his dismissal before the state personnel board. Stewart, who resigned his position to go into private industry, has been replaced by Gene So, acting regional engineer at DNREP's Pikeville office.

Sunshine on Energy

By DAVID COHEN

David Cohen is President of Common Cause, a non-partisan citizens' lobby.

Oil company executives openly acknowledge that the public doesn't believe them about fuel shortages. Consumers are angered by rising prices. The Carter Administration has moved back and forth with uncertain direction on the energy issue, alternately attacking Congress, consumers, and the oil industry. Congress has refused to deal with the energy problem in any serious way. And the newly-formed Department of Energy completed its first year behind "closed doors."

The DOE leads all federal agencies in the number of freedom of information requests it denies. Sixty percent of all requests for information the DOE received in its first year of operation were partially or fully denied, according to a recent Common Cause study. Seventy-five per cent of those denials that were appealed were reversed at least to some extent. If a judge's decisions were reversed three-quarters of the time, that judge would be viewed as being ignorant of the law. The Energy Department is plainly flouting the freedom of information law. DOE has other bad secret habits. It withholds from the public almost three-quarters of the raw data it collects from energy reports.

Some special interests do get inside access to information that is refused the public. In a recent investigation of the Energy Department, the newly created independent Inspector General (IG)—the DOE office that blows the whistle on department fraud and abuse—found that the Energy Department provided confidential information to an oil industry trade association lobbyist before releasing this information to the public. The IG concluded that the Energy Department had "maintained a double standard of access to information" that favored the American Petroleum Institute.

President Carter and the Congress ought to take the IG report seriously by insisting on adequate staff for the Inspector General so that the large scale fraud and abuse that the IG says is "now undetected, unprevented, and unpunished" stops immediately.

How can policies be sensibly evaluated or issues fairly discussed if vital information is locked up or oil and gas interests get favored treatment by the Department?

How do we reduce our growing dependence on foreign oil imports, increase our supplies, accept conservation practices and develop alternative energy resources? How do we muster the kind of public support and national commitment required to give serious solutions a chance? The answers are not easy. But one thing is certain. The Department of Energy must end its pro-secrecy policy. What cannot be done administratively should be done by Congressional action. Whether it is crude oil stocks, uranium resources, or other matters, the public, Congress and other sectors of the federal government have a right to know what is behind the information and to make sure fraud is stopped.

Americans are historically selfless in times of crisis. But no one is going to sacrifice in ignorance.

Getting a Proper Tune-Up for Your Car

By Edward Julian

An automobile mechanic is a lot like your family physician. If you're not feeling well you go to the doctor and tell him the symptoms of your illness. He runs a series of tests to diagnose your problem and then he prescribes a course of treatment which hopefully will cure your woes. A good mechanic does the same thing for your car when you take it in for a tune-up.

You'll know it's time for a tune-up if your car displays any of the following symptoms:

- a drop in fuel economy or "pep"
 - rough idling or hard starting
 - excessive stalling during warm-up, or continued stalling once you're underway
 - a persistent delay or hesitation on acceleration
 - any gasoline or exhaust odors, or excessive exhaust smoke
- A car seldom driven at highway speeds or used only for short trips will often display these symptoms even if it is properly maintained. So before taking your car in for a tune-up, take it for a sustained highway-speed cruise. This could clear up the problem. In any event, a typical engine should be tuned at least once a year or every 12,000 miles.

The Checkup

There are four basic systems which should be checked in a complete tune-up—fuel system, the compression system, the ignition system and the starting and charging system.

Most garages which advertise tune-up specials check only part of the ignition system. They will usually replace only the spark plugs, points and condenser. However, your car can still be out of tune because of problems in the other three systems, or because proper adjustments weren't made. A rough idle, for example, may have nothing whatsoever to do with the spark plugs.

A proper tune-up begins with a visual inspection of all systems. The mechanic should look for such things as loose battery connections, a loose fan belt, brittle wires and a dirty air filter. In fact, a new air filter is probably the best investment you can make for your car. It prevents major problems by keeping dirt out of your engine, yet it only costs a few dollars. You can also install it yourself.

After the visual check, a good tune-up then proceeds through an instrument check of all systems. A knowledgeable mechanic will use only quality electronic diagnostic equipment because such equipment will tell him if your car is capable of being tuned. Sometimes the problem is "organic"—inside the engine—like a burned valve or a worn piston ring. In these cases, major repair work is required, and a tune-up would be a waste of time and money until the internal problem is corrected.

A check of the compression system usually reveals any organic problems. But such problems are rare if a car is kept in shape. In fact, a typical American six-or-eight-cylinder engine will run well for about 10,000 miles if it is properly maintained.

Trouble in the starting and charging system usually doesn't directly affect the engine's operation, but of course any breakdown there means that sooner or later the engine won't start in the first place. Therefore, checking this system should be an integral part of the tune-up.

Finally, you should have the fuel system checked. The most common problem here is usually a dirty carburetor which seldom needs to be removed and which can be satisfactorily cleaned on the car. However, some mechanics want to remove the carburetor the minute you pull into the garage. This is often an indication that the repair shop is little more than a "fast buck" operation.

Many things do need adjustment, however, and this is the key to a proper tune-up. An automobile's engine is similar to a piano. It requires everything to be in harmonic relationship and exact pitch.

The major ignition adjustments are spark timing and spark advance, to insure that the spark plugs fire at the precise time under different operating modes (idle, acceleration, cruising), and breaker-point dwell, to insure that the points are in contact for the exact amount of time in order to send ample charge to the spark plugs.

When these and other adjustments are performed adequately, a car should function like new—and in fact often does. There's also not much difference between setting an engine for overall performance and setting it for minimum exhaust emissions.

Pollution standards have helped to decrease the margin of error in making the necessary adjustments. That's why it's important that a mechanic uses quality electronic diagnostic equipment. While it's possible to tune an engine so that it meets emission standards while providing both power and fuel economy, it can't be done properly by just listening to an engine until it "sounds right."

Finally, of course, a proper tune-up will improve your fuel economy. And with today's high gas prices, you should get the most mileage you can out of every gallon.

Folk Fest—a Weekend of Things "Old Timey"

Edith Fitzpatrick James, founder of the Highlands Folk Festival, provides accompaniment for the Jenny Wiley Chantresses during Friday's program.

Outstanding fiddler J. P. Fraley, of Greenup county (center) joins with Dave Sizemore and group for an oldtime dance tune during Friday's show. On bass is Clifford Branham, of Dwale.

Master wood sculptor Roy May, of Langley demonstrates his craft at the festival craft show.

George Tucker, popular banjo picker and songwriter, of Beaver, relaxes backstage between performances.

From a rollicking George Tucker banjo tune to the mournful strains of a mountain hymn, Kentucky mountain music was well represented at the 14th annual Kentucky Highlands Folk Festival held over the weekend at Jenny Wiley State Park.

Traditional dance also played a major role in the two evening performances of secular music with a number of groups demonstrating the intricacies of square dancing and mountain "clogging." But it was the festival's craft display, Saturday which showed greatest signs of growth from years past as artists and craftsmen from Floyd and several other counties as well exhibited their wares.

Blessed by near perfect weather, the three-day outdoor event recorded one of the best attendance records in its history. "I really think this festival was the biggest and the best," said festival director Katherine Frazier.

Edith F. James, folk festival founder, was honored at Friday's performance as she was presented the keys to the city by Prestonsburg Mayor Harold Cooley who also dedicated the festival to Mrs. James. A Kentucky Colonelcy was also presented Mrs. James by Chalmer Frazier in recognition of her achievements in preserving the folk legacy of the area.

Participation by a student in physical education activities under the guidance of well-prepared leaders contributes significantly to health through the development of organic fitness as well as psychological strengths. It provides experience in democratic citizenship, skills, and appreciation for leisure time pursuits. Such experiences are vital for both sexes. Every student's life should be enriched through participation in physical education activities for an appreciation of, and a feeling of responsibility for, a healthy body and an understanding of his own capacities.

Although the possum is America's oldest wild animal, it is far from being the brightest. Many have believed it clever because of its ability to play dead—indeed, "playing possum" is part of our language. Not so, says the September Reader's Digest. Far from faking, one expert believes the creature faints in the face of danger.

Changes in the Food Stamp Program

By Caroline Barnes

The Food Stamp Program has helped many low-income people buy the food they need for good nutrition since it was launched in 1964. Now, thanks to major changes in the program, food stamps are more available to those who really need them, and less available to certain higher-income people who received benefits in the past. The new regulations were made possible by the Food Stamp Act of 1977. As a result, the process of applying for and receiving food stamps has been simplified, administrative costs have been cut, and the entire program has been tightened to prevent fraud and serve the neediest cases. The following are some important changes in the Food Stamp Program:

person over 60 years of age. In the past the household asset limit was $1,500. Household assets include cash, checking and savings accounts, stocks and bonds, and land and buildings other than a person's home and lot. Household assets not counted include household goods and personal belongings, a home and surrounding lot, and life insurance policies.

- It is no longer necessary to purchase food stamps. In the past people participating in the program had to buy a certain number of food stamps in order to get a supply of free or bonus stamps. Unfortunately, this purchase requirement kept many low-income people out of the program because they did not have the cash to buy the stamps in the first place. Under the new regulations, those accepted into the program will simply receive the bonus stamps, with no cash outlay required. For example, a family which used to pay $50 for $150 worth of food stamps will now pay nothing and get $100 in food stamps.

- New lower income limits have been set, based on Federal poverty guidelines. In the past, income limits were set by the Secretary of Agriculture. They were higher than the new limits, and anyone whose only income consisted of public assistance or Supplemental Security Income was automatically eligible. The new lower income limits will eliminate many people from higher-income households who had been participating in the program. No one will be considered automatically eligible to receive food stamps anymore.

- A new system of limited, standardized deductions has been created. In the past, people could claim numerous deductions from their income. This allowed many higher-income families and individuals to be eligible for the program. Now there are only three allowable deductions: a standard deduction that all households may take to cover their basic expenses; an earned income deduction to cover work-related expenses and payroll taxes; and a deduction, up to the maximum allowed, to cover dependent care or high shelter costs. With only these three deductions allowed, the program is tremendously simplified and benefits are redirected to those who need them the most.
- The new household asset limit is $1,750, with a $3,000 limit allowed for households with one

- In determining a household's assets under the new program, any vehicle with a Blue Book value of more than $4,500 must be counted, but only the value of the car over $4,500 need be applied. In the past, one licensed vehicle used for household transportation was not counted as a household asset, regardless of its value. If the car is used to produce income, it is exempt from this ruling.

- It is no longer necessary for a household to have cooking facilities in order to receive food stamps.

- Students 18 or older are not eligible for food stamps if they are or could be claimed as tax dependents by ineligible households. Most students accepted by the program will be required to register for 20 hours of work per week.

- A single in-person interview will determine a person's eligibility for food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children. In the past, separate interviews were required to determine eligibility for various government benefits.

- There are now tougher penalties for fraud required by Federal law. If you are found guilty of either lying on your application for food stamps, or using the stamps for ineligible items like liquor or cigarettes, you can be barred from getting stamps for up to 24 months.

- If you would like further information regarding the new Food Stamp Program, write to: The Food and Nutrition Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Tots Talk about Learning

Some members of the journalism class at Wheelwright High School were asked recently to visit some of the local grade schools and learn how school was going this year. The students visited the class of kindergarten students at Osborne Elementary, taught by Mrs. Hughes.

"After being in school for almost three weeks, we thought most of the kids would have school sized up. What we didn't suspect was that they might have something to teach us," commented one of the interviewers.

"You wouldn't expect to see faces that young in school," said Sabrina Couch, "but there they were—learning, learning about all sorts of things."

"Kevin Hall gave us one of our best interviews," Kim Bailey said. "When I asked him how he liked school, he grinned and shrugged his shoulders and said, 'Fine! He told us proudly that he had not been nervous about starting school.'"

"Would you like me to show you how? You have to do this in your imagination," he cautioned. His excitement was contagious as he proceeded to describe the sounds we would have to make as we crossed mythical creeks and crushed non-existent leaves, and encountered imaginary animals.

"We asked Kevin to tell us about school" Kim said, and with a bit more excitement in his voice he told us: "We go to the playground two times a day (which happens to be his favorite thing to do), we stay at school until 3, we work all the time we are here. It was then that Kevin raced off to play with his friends at the playground," Kim said.

Consider the price of a gallon of gasoline.

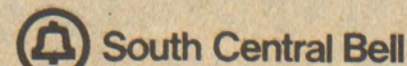

Now consider the price of a long distance call.

For 56¢ or less you can talk one minute across the country from 8 A.M. to 5 P.M. Additional minutes cost even less. So do calls after 5 P.M. and on weekends. That's for any out-of-state call dialed the 1+ way.*

At home, long distance sends greetings, visits relatives, and helps you handle personal business.

In business, long distance makes sales calls, attends meetings in other cities, and helps solve important problems.

Long distance gets you from point to point a lot cheaper than gasoline.

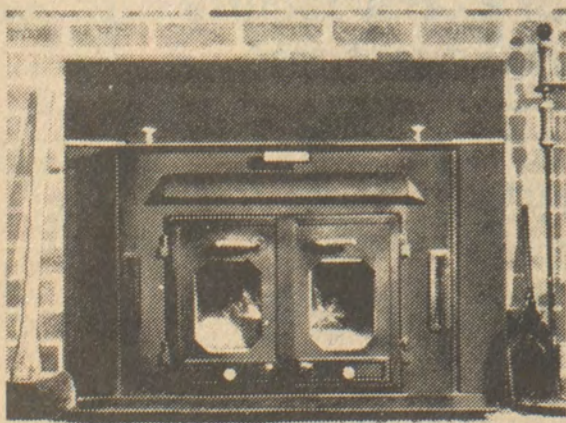

Long distance. Best mileage for your money.

*Low 1+ rates do not apply to operator-assisted or coin telephone calls.

Kennedy To Speak On Steamboating

The regular fall meeting of the Big Sandy Valley Historical Society will be held at Johnson Central High School, Paintsville, September 22 at noon, according to Edward Hazelett, society president.

The main speaker, Robert E. Kennedy, of Kenova, W. Va., will speak about "Big Sandy Steamboating." Kennedy, who has written weekly columns for regional newspapers for several years, is one of the foremost authorities on Big Sandy River history. Selections of Appalachian folk music will also be presented. Other features of the program will be a display of regional publications for sale and the election of society officers. The society board of directors will meet at 11 a.m.

Persons planning to attend the program should notify the society president by September 17 by writing to 1215 Stafford Avenue, Paintsville, Kentucky 41240, or calling 789-3416 after 5 p.m.

Deaths of Two Children Spur Efforts To Protect Pupils

The recent deaths of two children in Clinton and Breathitt counties, killed while crossing the road to board school buses near their homes have resulted in an urgent call here for greater emphasis on school bus safety.

Lt. Ernest Bivens, director of Public Affairs and Safety Education for the Kentucky State Police, said that KSP safety education officers already have been directed to begin soliciting the help of the local news media, school officials and police in all of Kentucky's 120 counties "to prevent any more of these tragic accidents."

Bivens said although the school buses in each of the two fatalities reportedly were stopped—with caution lights flashing—neither motorist involved in either accident apparently was able to stop in time to avoid hitting the children.

State police and the Division of Pupil Transportation in the Kentucky Department of Education were especially alarmed by the two deaths. "With eight full months of school still ahead of us, we're already in danger of exceeding the total number of children killed in school bus-related accidents during the entire past school year," Bivens said.

During the 1978-79 school year, which ended last June, only four children were killed in school bus-related accidents. Each, however, died after being hit while attempting to board or exit a school bus.

Accordingly, Bivens said, the upcoming safety education effort will include the publication of "strong" reminders through radio, television and the newspapers calling attention to a state law which prohibits drivers from passing a school bus when it has stopped to load or unload children.

Among other specifics which state police will propose in meetings with local officials are:

Publicizing school bus time and route schedules so local drivers "are put on notice" as to when they should be especially alert to school bus traffic.

Encouraging participation by school bus drivers in short but regularly scheduled school bus safety training sessions.

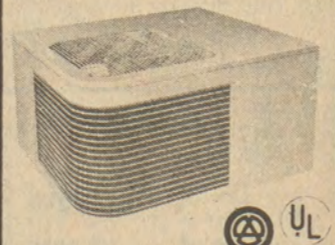

Educating students in safe procedures for boarding and departing from school buses.

Miss Blackburn-Mr. Anderson Wed

Grace Baptist Church of East Shalbiana was the scene of the marriage ceremony which united Lita Kim Blackburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Blackburn, and Charles Dwain Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Anderson. The ceremony, solemnized at 2:30 p.m., Saturday, July 28, was performed by Melvin R. Cooke.

A program of contemporary wedding music was presented prior to the ceremony by Jerry Weddell, organist. Diana Moore, soloist and guitarist, performed "Annie's Song" and "Til There Was You" after the groom's mother and the bride's mother were seated.

Doric columns and pedestals were silhouetted by an array of Guatemalan parlor palms and lighted by a pair of candelabra. Near the center of the setting was a pair of Grecian pedestals topped with baskets of flowers in shades of mauve, and another pair of pedestals holding baskets of Swedish ivy enclosed the setting.

Following the ringing of the church bells, Wagner's "Wedding March" was rendered as the bride was escorted to the altar by her father. The bride's gown was fashioned of bridal organza styled with a fitted bodice and a sweetheart neckline, and styled with an attached chapel train. The flounced hemline of the gown was caught in seed pearls, encircled in embroidered lace. The mantilla was of imported illusion bordered in lace, falling from a crown of lace. Her cascade bouquet was of sweetheart roses, stephanotis, baby's breath, and one baby orchid enlaced with spregeri fern.

After the giving of the bride by her father, "Sunrise, Sunset" was performed by Nancy and Larry Jones. During the trinity candle lighting, they sang "The Twelfth of Never", and as a finale to the pastoral prayer, Diana Moore, self-accompanied on the guitar, sang "The Wedding Song". As the couple exchanged rings, "If" was sung by Mr. and Mrs. Jones.

Nancy Blackburn, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Jody Blackburn and Monie Sue Blackburn, sisters-in-law of the bride; Cathy and Kim Nichols, cousins of the groom; Becky Venters, sister of the groom; and Teresa Witten. Junior bridesmaids were Melanie and Melita

FEWER POLIO CASES IN 1977

A worldwide decrease of about 15 percent in the incidence of poliomyelitis took place during 1977, according to the World Health Organization. It says 24,784 cases were reported that year, compared with 29,454 in 1976.

Cooke, nieces of the bride. Their gowns were of mauve, crepebacked satin with boleros of floral voile. The bridesmaids carried cascade bouquets of white roses, mauve button poms, baby's breath, and sprenger fern.

Miss Deneice Marie Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ike Hall, was flower girl. Her white floor-length dress was edged in mauve ribbon and lace.

Cody and Shannon Blackburn, nephews of the bride, were ringbearers. Cody is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Curt Blackburn and Shannon is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Blackburn.

Serving as best man was Curt Blackburn, brother of the bride. Groomsmen and ushers were Don F. Blackburn, Gerald Blackburn, Randall Blackburn, and Tim Blackburn, brothers of the bride; Johnny B. Owens, and John B. Venters, brother-in-law of the groom.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride's parents entertained with a reception in the church social hall. The serving table was centered with a four-tiered cake, topped with a floral crown; the tiers were separated by miniature Grecian columns. On either side of the cake were silver candelabra capped with the matching floral and color scheme. Receptionists were Mrs. Marcheta Blackburn, Mrs. Anne Nichols, Mrs. Rusby Owens, Mrs. Maureen Ratliff, Mrs. Stella B. Reynolds, and Mrs. Ruth Rowe. Mrs. Carol Cooke, sister of the bride directed the wedding. Presiding at the guest registry was Miss Jennifer Ann Clark.

Following a wedding trip to Palm Beach and Fort Lauderdale, the couple is making their home at North Mayo Trail, Pikeville.

Mrs. Blackburn chose a teal blue dress with three-quarter length dolman sleeves for her daughter's wedding. Mrs. Anderson was attired in an aqua green dress with matching jacket.

On the eve of the wedding, following the rehearsal, the groom's parents entertained the wedding party and out-of-town guests with a dinner at the Top of the Holiday Inn.

The bride is a graduate of Betsy Layne High School and is presently attending the University of Kentucky, Prestonsburg Campus, where she is majoring in elementary education. Mr. Anderson is a graduate of Elkhorn City High School and Centre College of Kentucky at Danville. He is co-owner and manager of Blackburn's Landscaping.

Consumer Ed. Offered in High Schools

Consumer education in Kentucky's high schools is a part of every home economics course, said Mrs. Audrey Carr, director of the home economics unit in the Bureau of Vocational Education. Schools also offer semester and year-long courses in consumer education.

In clothing and textile classes, consumerism means information on buying sewing tools, patterns, fabrics and notions. In addition, the students learn how to shop for ready-made clothes and to judge the quality of those clothes. In food and nutrition classes, time is devoted to learning how to purchase and store food products and use the information contained on food labels.

The child care courses cover a wide range of consumer education: selecting and shopping for toys and clothes for small children, the costs and types of baby-sitting services and consideration of items which young people buy for themselves (records and play equipment, for example).

The family living course has a section on how much it costs to have a baby—the physician's charges, hospital costs, purchase of layette and equipment for the baby and the fact that most medical insurance policies do not pay maternity benefits until they have been in effect for a certain period of time. "This is usually an eyeopener for the students," Mrs. Carr said.

The consumer education courses emphasize the use of resources, including time, money and energy. "We are a society of consumers; we buy more from others than we make for ourselves," Mrs. Carr said. "We expect the consumer education courses to be relevant to the students' lives and to their communities."

Consumer behavior, budgeting, credit, consumer aids and information, consumer protection and financial security take up about half the class periods. The other half is spent teaching how to be a wise shopper for specific types of goods and services, Mrs. Carr said.

"There is a great deal of interest in the section on purchasing and maintaining cars, accessories and automobile service," she added. Other areas studied include the buying of clothes and grooming aids, types of and costs for housing, home furnishings and appliances and how to get the most out of recreation dollars.

"We encourage teachers to make use of people in their communities—a car dealer, a banker, an insurance agent, furniture and appliance dealers, a realtor, she said. Most students do projects outside the classroom, and many teachers arrange class visits to local firms.

The question of ready-made or do-it-yourself is also part of consumer education classes. "Most students learn very quickly about what to look for and how to use their resources to the best advantage," Mrs. Carr said. "However, they are usually surprised to learn hidden costs such as insurance, credit card interest rates, service fees or utilities."

The high price of living has also caused several students to rearrange their plans for the future, she added. "We have heard of students who say they had intended to get married right after graduation, but have decided to wait until they can save some money first."

Two Floyd Students Members of MSU Band

Two students from Floyd County are among the 1979-80 members of the Morehead State University "Big Band from Daniel Boone Land." They are Stephen Rice, of Banner, and Tim Webb, of Prestonsburg.

The MSU marching band will make its home football season debut Saturday, Sept. 22, when the Eagles host Middle Tennessee at 1:30 p.m. at Jayne Stadium.

Our Appalachia Day To Be Held Saturday

In addition to a full day of mountain music performed by local musicians, there will be craft displays, a baking contest, folk dancing, and a soup bean supper at Our Appalachia Day, Saturday on the campus of Alice Lloyd College.

Approximately 30 crafts persons are expected to bring their wares for displays, selling and demonstrations at the annual festival, the eighth to be held at the college campus at Pippa Passes.

For the second year, there will be a baking contest. Entries will be judged in several divisions, including cobblers, pies, cakes, old fashioned cakes, cookies, candies and breads. Entries should be in the hands of judges by 2 p.m. on Our Appalachia Day, and they will be served as part of the supper provided by the college. Persons are invited to bring a dessert to enter into the contest or just to share with the crowd. Certificates will be provided to all entrants.

The music starts at 10:00 a.m. and continues through the day. WKCB, of Hindman, will broadcast several hours of the music. At 4:30 p.m. the college will provide its traditional and free soup bean supper. There will be folk dancing after supper from 6:30 to 8 p.m. All activities are free and open to the public. In case of rain, the festivities will be held in the college gymnasium.

A Look at the Trojans

By KENNY RICE

"We're going to enjoy the season, work hard and let the win-loss record take care of itself," Wilbur "Shorty" Jamerson said before Wheelwright's football season began.

Jamerson is counting on this club to use the power of positive thinking to compensate for lack of size, experience and depth.

Wheelwright's offensive line does not have the 245 pounds of Vic Rhea nor the 235 pounds of Tommy Hunter, each of whom signed college football scholarships after graduation last spring.

"I shifted the tackle over (to the unbalanced line) for the simple reason it might take the defense by surprise a little bit and they may have some trouble adjusting, which could lead to an early break for us," Jamerson added.

Six of Wheelwright's starters on offense also start on defense. Vic Tackett and Isaac are defensive ends, Timmy Tackett is an inside linebacker, Bartley is an outside linebacker and Hall and Alan Tackett are the safeties.

"Our offense has been coming along better than the defense so far," Jamerson points out, "I'm hoping the defense will start coming around as the season progresses."

The focal point for the success or failure of the Wheelwright squad is the defense. A lack of depth is evident here with freshman David Tackett, a safety, being the top reserve meaning the line is in the game most of the time.

Wheelwright this season does not have depth, size or experience but they do have that determination that Coaches Daniels and Jamerson have been instilling in Trojans for two decades.

REITZ NEW COACH AT MMI Mike Reitz is leaving his native Floyd county to return to the 10th Region where he began his coaching career as an assistant at Bourbon County.

Reitz, who was assistant coach at Allen Central last season, is the new head basketball coach at Millersburg Military Institute. He will also be head baseball coach and assistant football coach at MMI.

"I grew up in this area, went to school here (where he was all-district basketball and baseball at Martin High) and have family and friends here."

Alan Tackett and Tony Hall are two dandies. Our backfield is smaller than it's been in a long time, but there has been good competition at the fullback spot and Eddie Johnson has a strong arm and a lot of football savvy, which means we can throw quite a bit this season," Jamerson noted.

Tennis Court Opens At Weeksbury Park

By CRAIG HUFF (Wheelwright High School journalism class)

In the spring of 1968, the community of Weeksbury dreamed of building a park for the children as well as the adults in the area.

Through the years many things have been added to the park. Just this summer, a tennis court was built through the help of $6,000 coal severance tax funds.

In building the tennis court, men of the community helped. The park gets no help outside coal severance funds. Those who work do so without pay.

If you like to play tennis go to Weeksbury, "the town that would not die."

Cats' Grade Gridders Blank Pikeville, 6-0

The Prestonsburg Elementary seventh-eighth grades football team shut out the Pikeville Panther grades team at Pikeville last Thursday night, 6-0, in the season's opening game.

Early in the first half the Blackcats moved inside the five-yard line on power runs by Brian Pace, John DeRossett, James Blackburn and John Anderson, but a strong Pikeville defensive unit halted the Blackcat threat.

Early in the second half the speedy DeRossett reeled off a 55-yard touchdown effort that gave Prestonsburg a 6-0 lead. The extra point failed.

In the fourth quarter Pikeville mounted an offensive drive, moving to the Prestonsburg 40-yard line when defensive tackle Todd Daniels blocked, then intercepted, a Pikeville pass halting the drive.

The win over Pikeville was a good team effort. The Blackcats displayed a strong defensive team as the Panthers were unable to mount a sustained scoring threat.

The Blackcat team, coached by Head Coach Gordie Johnson, Assistant Coach Gay Hatfield, Line Coach Warren Clark, Running Backs Coaches, John Heinze and Paul Fauri and Quarterback Coach Jim Blackburn travelled to Johns Creek last night (Tuesday) and will host the John M. Stumbo 7th-8th grades team tomorrow night (Thursday) at about 6:30 at the high school football field.

Take a Ford Pickup with a standard 19.2-gallon tank, add Ford's optional 20.2-gallon auxiliary tank: total 39.4 gallons. With a 15 mpg EPA estimate, you can figure 591 miles estimated range and 867 miles estimated highway range.†

GREAT BUYS • GREAT CHOICE • GREAT TRADES

†Compare these estimates to the estimated mpg of other cars. Your mileage and range may differ depending on speed, distance and weather. California estimates lower. Actual highway mileage and range will probably be lower than estimate.

Also included in Clearance Offer: Mustang Pace Car Replicas, Ford Vans, Broncos, V-8 Rancheros, V-8 Club Wagons.
