

State May Scrap Inez-Auxier Road

"It may be postponed. It may even be cancelled."

That is all state highway officials are saying this week about the proposed new Auxier-to-Inez road. And they're saying that about most highway construction plans, statewide.

A transportation department staffer confirmed reports that work has been halted on the plan, which calls for construction of a four-lane highway to replace existing KY 3, along Johns Creek and Daniels Creek. However, most state highway projects are in the same holding pattern, he said, pending a review by Transportation Department Secretary Frank Metts.

Paintsville Herald Editor Alan "Bud" Perry reported last week that the Route 3 project "has gone on the scrap heap," following a decision to halt design on the road and to plow remaining design monies back into a pool for other projects.

But Jim Clarke, an administrative assistant in Secretary Metts' office, said this week no decision has been made on the project and that none is expected until a current review of state road projects is completed "in 60 to 90 days."

The present dearth of road dollars in state coffers is expected to result in cancellation of at least some of the projects. While Gov. John Y. Brown's new gas tax formula will yield increased funds for road-building, these will be partly offset by the loss of $35-$39 million in federal matching monies which the state had hoped to receive between now and September, Clarke noted.

About $3.5 million for design of the 16-mile stretch between Auxier and Inez had been included in a resource recovery road bond issue. A special grant of about $750,000 for preliminary engineering, authorized by former Governor Julian Carroll in late 1978, has already been spent, according to the Paintsville Herald report.

Carroll's authorization of preliminary engineering on the road came after an earlier decision to build a highway from Inez to Ulysses, in Lawrence county, drew strong opposition from Floyd and Johnson counties. A 1977 engineering study of alternatives for an east-west connector to link U.S. 23 with Kermit, W.Va., had recommended the Auxier-Inez-Kermit route. Reconstruction of KY 40, from Paintsville to Inez, was the engineer's second choice for the connector, while the Ulysses-Inez route was given as a third alternative.

TRILLIUM, one of the prettiest of spring wildflowers, is to be enjoyed now in secluded hollows and along the edges of small branches.

Water District Post and Bank Choice Argued

A site near Garth has been given preliminary approval by state environmental officials for construction of a landfill, following an agreement by officials of Turner Elkhorn Mining Co., owners of mineral rights there, not to mine within a specified distance of the proposed dump.

The 50-acre site is located in the head of Osborn Branch of Left Beaver Creek, two miles south of Martin, on a 450-acre tract owned by Glenn C. and Dora Spradlin. It is one of half a dozen locations evaluated for the county by a Lexington engineering firm. If design and construction plans are approved, it will be the county's only legal landfill.

The county intends to negotiate with Floyd County Sanitation Co. and District Four Sanitation Co., holders of franchises for garbage collection here, to buy back the franchises in preparation for establishment of a county-operated service. Judge-Executive Bill Wells told a meeting of the fiscal court last Wednesday.

In the meantime, a monthly rate increase from $4 to $6 was approved for the present franchise holders, contingent on their providing a regular weekly pickup. Adrian Lafferty, owner of Floyd County Sanitation, had requested a $7.50 fee. A maximum of $6 was recommended to the court by Robert McAninch, chairman of Floyd County Solid Waste, Inc., the non-profit corporation which will manage the proposed countywide operation.

Transportation Department officials informed the court that $101,121 remains in the energy road fund for this year. The money is part of the 40 percent of the energy road fund allocated for distribution by the court. Judge Wells said it would be shared by the four magisterial districts for blacktopping roads. (Road resurfacing currently costs about $25,000 per mile). Projects previously approved under the fund this year include resurfacing of parts of the Left Toler Creek, Frasure's Creek, Corn Fork, and Little Abbott Creek roads.

In the course of discussion of the road fund, former state senator Jim Hammond criticized the recent reorganization by the state legislature of the machinery by which coal severance tax monies are returned to this county, largely for roadwork.

The reorganization, initiated by Gov. John Y. Brown and enjoying the support of Sen. Benny Ray Bailey and Rep. Greg Stumbo, means the county will forego

Crowned Mountain Dew Festival Queen

Prestonsburg Community College freshman, Jonda Lou Blackburn (right) was crowned 1980 Mountain Dew Festival Queen Friday. Vera Barnard (center), of Somerset Community College, placed second and Carol Sue Yaden (left), of Lexington Technical Institute, placed third.

Somerset Community College was the overall winner of the 16th Annual Mountain Dew Festival with total points of 510; Prestonsburg Community College was second with 420 points; and Ashland Community College was third with 300 points.

Covering for Trucks Still Uncertain Here

Covering coal trucks was the issue his constituents favored most singlemindedly. Rep. Greg Stumbo said this week, referring to a poll he conducted during the recent legislative session. An amendment he sponsored which would have required covering coal loads was challenged, he said, largely on the argument that county governments themselves had power to enact ordinances to the same effect.

Stumbo's amendment, accepted by the House but rejected by the Senate, was watered down in a conference committee, applying in its final version only to trucks on limited-access highways.

One of those challenging the amendment on the "home rule" argument was Sen. John Doug Hays, whose district includes Pike county, where an ordinance requiring that coal trucks be covered has been on the books since last summer.

Asked about the possibility of a similar ordinance being enacted in this county, Floyd Judge-Executive Bill Wells said this week that, while he favored such a provision, the county has no jurisdiction over state highways and an ordinance governing county road traffic would likely be ruled unconstitutional.

County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. said he believes an attorney-general's opinion on the matter was sought by the county in 1978, according to which the county was said to have the necessary authority with respect to county roads, though not with respect to state highways.

Assistant Pike County Attorney Pam Robinette said yesterday (Tuesday) that a challenge to the Pike county ordinance, on grounds that the county lacked jurisdiction in the matter and could not enact an ordinance more strict than state statute, was turned down in district court there. A district court conviction under the ordinance had been appealed to Pike Circuit Court, where a decision is still pending, she added.

State police and officers of the Pike county sheriff's department have been issuing citations under the county ordinance or a state regulation governing "escaping contents," and most truck drivers in that county are complying with the law, she said.

An official of the Division of Air Pollution of the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection said last week that a "fugitive dust" regulation applicable to coal trucks and promulgated some years ago is rarely enforced by the division due to a shortage of inspection personnel. Responsibility for enforcing the regulation necessarily falls upon county judge-executives, he said.

This Town...That World

EDT
Again Clifford Wright makes it official. "Fast time," Eastern Daylight Time, begins around midnight Saturday. It's simple, the matter of setting your clock ahead one hour, but I suspect complications will come when some of us who move slowly at best try to rise, shine and get to work an hour earlier.

DISTURBING REPORT
Just keep on reading all these reports from researchers, government labs and others, and you'll wind up not only in a quandary about what to eat but also doubting, maybe, if you should eat at all.

Now comes a government report which shakes one to the tips of his copper-toed boots. It says they've found a cancer-causing agent in—of all things!—sassafras. To which I, a sassafras tea addict, reply with Lum 'n' Abner's favorite retort to tomfoolery: "Sassafras...Sass-E-fras!"

I'M ELIGIBLE
April has moved on to within a week of its end, the rebuds have bloomed, the dogwoods are white—and I haven't wet a line. Wonder if there's any way a fisherman can collect retirement pay.

UNDATED WEATHER REPORT
This hour last week, I indited a jeremiad about the weather, which at the moment was most discouraging. I neglected to state that that was the picture as of Tuesday afternoon. So it followed that if anybody read the piece, next morning, with its blue skies and bright sunshine, they must have wondered what had caused me to do the flip. But give me credit: Ever since I expounded on the gloom, we've had perfect weather.

THE BANQUETTERS
The bird population around our feeders appears to grow daily. There are cardinals, jays, flickers, pine siskins, towhees, chickadees, woodpeckers, finches, warblers, titmice, catbirds, sparrows in variety, those blackbird interlopers, and perhaps a few others that dropped by.

No robins. Those rugged individuals refuse to patronize the "public trough."

Wells Urges Profits Invested Where Made

Eastern Kentucky needs to encourage local entrepreneurs who are willing to invest their profits in this area, directors of the Big Sandy Area Development District were told this week. Addressing a meeting of the group at Cliff Hagan's Restaurant in Pikeville Monday was John P. Wells, commissioner of the Bureau for Manpower Services and a native of this county.

"For too long, outside interests have owned the wealth of eastern Kentucky, exploited it, and carted off the profits, without investing locally," said Wells, who several years ago authored a study of minerals ownership in this area.

Wells also called on the ADD board to plan for a diversified economy, suggesting that timber and related industries should be developed here. While the hills of eastern Kentucky are timbered with fine hardwoods, he noted, area residents continue to import furniture from other states.

In a reference to the current controversy surrounding the plans to move the town of Beauty out of the flood plain there, Pike County Judge-Executive Wayne T. Rutherford, chairman of the ADD board, warned the group that the ADD's ability to attract federal dollars to this region could be jeopardized by in-fighting among local residents. Residents of the Martin county town have been locked in a bitter dispute with the Martin County Housing Agency and planning consultant Will Linder over the planned relocation.

Rutherford said that a grant of almost $4 million from the federal Department for Housing and Urban Development could be lost if the problem is not soon resolved. Acknowledging that there has been a "lack of early communication" between housing officials and local residents, Rutherford said this should not be allowed to "stalemate" the project. Not only Martin county but other counties in the district would be hurt if the Beauty grant is lost, he said.

Rutherford urged ADD officials to act as guarantors of citizens' rights and to work to create a climate of trust between

Tour Brings Ambassadors Here

Twenty-seven foreign diplomats, including nine United Nations ambassadors, gathered for a banquet Sunday night, a ritual not uncommon in diplomatic circles. But instead of dining in a grand hall bedecked with silk and linen and glittering with crystal chandeliers, these foreign emissaries were treated to a mountain-style feast at the high school cafeteria here and the atmosphere and decor were strictly Appalachian.

The dinner of dishes like soup beans, baked ham, salad greens, squirrel and gravy, homemade preserves and a host of other examples of Eastern Kentucky cuisine was one of the highlights of the group's weekend in Floyd county, one leg of a tour of several sections of rural America sponsored by the Department of State's Executive Council on Foreign Diplomats.

Similar tours have been conducted since the council's formation in 1962 and are designed to give foreign diplomats the opportunity to gain a more complete understanding of America and her people, or, as stated by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, to make it possible "that foreign diplomats stationed in this country, and Americans from all works of life, have opportunities to meet and talk with one another, beyond the everyday contacts of official diplomatic life." This weekend, for the first time, foreign ambassadors and residents of this section of Appalachia were able to meet, and talk.

Arrangements for the trip here were made a month ago, according to Dorothy Clark, executive director of the David Community Development Corporation, between offices in Washington and New York, Pikeville College, the town of David, and Jenny Wiley State Park, and the group arrived here Saturday after a tour of western Kentucky and the Bluegrass section.

Following Saturday's dinner at the high school here the group was returned to May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park where they listened to mountain music of the Ray Slone Family Band from Hindman and were instructed and participated in traditional Appalachian square dancing.

Sunday afternoon, the delegates toured the David community following a reception.

Pike Co. Firm Seeks Approval To Leave Experimental Highwall

A Pikeville mining company is seeking approval of a post-mining land use proposal that would allow the firm to leave a terraced highwall in conjunction with its plan to build a mobile home park.

The proposal, published in the Federal Register on April 16, 1980, was submitted by the Diamond Coal Company of Pikeville under the experimental practices provision of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977.

"The Act specifically prohibits highwalls to be left after the mining operation ceases," said Walter N. Heine, Director of the Interior Department's Office of Surface Mining (OSM). "However, the Act also allows experimental practices to encourage advances in mining and reclamation practices provided they meet specific conditions."

Diamond's proposal would leave an 85-foot highwall with eight-foot terraces while removing coal from its Elkhorn Number 2 and 3 mines near Pikeville to build a mobile home park for 200 homes on the 13,000 foot site. Road and drainage facilities would be constructed at the highwall's base to provide access to the park and as a buffer zone for safety from falling rocks.

The project would also involve the construction of such support facilities as water supply distribution systems, sewage collection and treatment systems, and electrical service systems.

The conditions noted by Heine include requirements:

- That the experimental practice is potentially more or at least as environmentally protective during and after mining operations;
- That the experiment's scope is not larger than necessary to determine its effectiveness and economic feasibility, and
- That the practice does not reduce the protection to the health and safety of the public that is provided by the OSM standards.

Comments on the proposal should be received by 5 p.m., May 16, 1980 by OSM's Region II Office at 530 Gay Street, S.W., Suite 500, Knoxville, Tenn. 37902. For further information, contact William R. Thomas at (615) 637-8060, Ext. 200.

Harness racing is an old sport in Kentucky. A "trotting" meet was held in Lexington in 1850, and during the Civil War harness racing was conducted on the grounds of the present day University of Kentucky campus.

Terry Twins Accorded Honors

Pat and Pam Terry, identical twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Quentin Terry, of Van Lear, are shown as they received Kentucky Colonelcy from State Representative W.D. "Doc" Blair at last week's Paintsville Kiwanis meeting.

Formerly of Prestonsburg, both girls attended Prestonsburg Grade School, High School and Prestonsburg Community College where they were chosen for Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges. At the University of Kentucky they received their BA degrees in elementary education. At U.K. Pat gained her Master's in diagnostic reading; Pam, her Master's degree in educational psychology and counseling.

They began their teaching careers at Winchester, Ky., during which time they spent their summer vacations on tour in Europe with the American Youth Symphony and Chorus. This tour was repeated three summers and practically every European country was visited. They went on the tours as assistant personnel directors and accompanists with the chorus.

Another summer, they entertained at all the Kentucky State Parks. At present they are teachers in the Fort Thomas independent schools. There they also have a private practice in teaching piano.

Pat is a member of Phi Delta Kappa. They are graduates of the John Robert Powers School of Modeling in Cincinnati and have done modeling in and around that city.

They are presently furthering their music careers by studying at the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, where Pat is studying the violin and Pam, the flute.

This coming summer will be a busy time again for the twins. They will be leaving in June on the Bob Braun Hawaiian Holiday Tour. (They have entertained on the Bob Braun TV show several times). This tour will visit at several of the various islands.

Researchers Study Heart Attack Victims

"Can heart attacks be prevented by lowering cholesterol?" is the question facing a team of University of Arkansas doctors, in cooperation with the University of Minnesota, conducting a study of the relation between cholesterol and heart disease.

Heart disease is the leading cause of death and disability in the United States. Most heart trouble results from atherosclerosis, or "hardening of the arteries." The arteries of the body are tubes which must constantly supply blood containing life-giving oxygen and nourishment to the heart and other organs. Atherosclerosis can gradually thicken and narrow arteries until blood can no longer flow through them causing acute illness such as heart attack.

According to Dr. Malcolm Pearce and Dr. Gilbert Campbell, who head the Arkansas study, a clue to the cause of atherosclerosis may be that cholesterol, a fatty substance, is found in the diseased arteries. Also, the amount of cholesterol found in our blood can predict, somewhat, how likely we are to have heart attacks.

To find out, the University of Arkansas research team is now attempting to locate persons in this area who are between the ages of 25 thru 64, who have had one heart attack within the past five years. Such persons, if interested in this study, are urged to discuss it with their doctors who are now receiving details about the program, or to call the Arkansas Clinical Center at (501) 661-5291 or 661-5813 collect.

Tourism Funds Voted

"People traveling I-75 South don't stay long enough in Kentucky to buy a pack of gum," said Jack Gray, marketing specialist from the University of Wisconsin. Gray was speaking at this week before nearly 250 participants at the state's conference on tourism.

The gas crunch, Gray said, should be turned around to Kentucky's advantage.

Tourism Commissioner Tommy Kron reported the 1980 General Assembly has budgeted $10 million over the next two years for tourism. The largest increase will go to advertising, Kron said.

Specific activities at the new center will include:

- Up-to-date specialized laboratories and equipment essential to the continuation of the McDowell Cancer Network's and university of Kentucky's cancer research program.

- Clinical research units where medically appropriate patients can undergo the latest in chemical/radiation therapy, in order to translate the research findings of today into practical therapy and treatment for tomorrow.
- Quarters for education, including classrooms, a cancer library, computerized information retrieval services, and the Cancer Hopeline.

Administrative offices of the McDowell Cancer Network's Hospice and outreach programs of education, information, and service.

Land for the new center will be donated by the University of Kentucky. A fund raising campaign is being conducted by McDowell to raise the necessary money to build and equip the new center.

P-burg Kiwanis Club To Sponsor Blood Drive Here, May 1

Now that winter weather seems to have left us for good, Floyd countians seem to be getting out and starting up some of the activities they were unable to do in the winter months. And, as spring is a time of increased activities, it is also a time for greater accidents and injury.

Hospitals, at this time of year, see a need for double the amount of blood used during the winter months. They have more motorcycle accidents, car wrecks, and injuries requiring the use of blood than at any other time of year.

Should you or a member of your family need blood now it may be difficult to get. And in a life and death situation you want to make sure that blood will be available.

The Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club wants to make sure blood will be available for any Floyd countian who may need it in the coming months. They are doing so by sponsoring a blood drive on Thursday, May 1 at the Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church. The hours will be from 12 to 3:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Without your donation, blood may not be available for you and your family. Please help the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club see that your family is protected by donating May 1.

INVITATION TO BID

The Floyd County Health Department will be accepting bids on the repair of the roof on the health department building.

Full details of the work to be completed may be obtained by contacting: Earl Compton, Administrator, Floyd County Health Department, phone 886-2788.

All bids must be received by midnight, April 30, 1980.

Elementary Guidance and Counseling Incentive Act of 1979, was the sponsor of the landmark Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, as well as the Vocational Education Act of 1963, and essential legislation on adult education, library services, and school nutrition. He also wrote and secured passage of the Career Education Act of 1976. In 1978, he engineered passage of the Middle Income Student Assistance Act (P.L. 95-566), which, for the first time, extended federal assistance benefits to students from middle income families. He was chairman of the Senate and House Conference on the Higher Education Amendments of 1972 and again in 1976.

Perkins was first elected to the Congress in 1948 and assumed the position of Chairman of the House Committee on Education and Labor in 1967.

"Education is by far the most important element to maintaining the great freedom we in the United States hold dear," Perkins said. "Democracy carries with it great responsibilities as well as great rewards. The greatest gift we can give our children is to provide them with the means to acquire a good education. Our democracy holds for us the right to choose—education develops within us the wisdom to make the right choices."

If you've ever had a fish and wildlife employee approach you while you were out fishing and ask a bunch of questions about how long you've been on the lake, what you're fishing for, what and how many you've caught, then you've participated in something called a "non-uniform probability creel survey."

These surveys, which are designed to measure angling pressure, fisherman success and a variety of other factors, are important parts of Kentucky's total fishery management efforts, according to Assistant Fisheries Director Pete Pfeiffer.

In some cases, these surveys are conducted by creel clerks whose only duty is gathering information from fisherman, Pfeiffer says. But on most bodies of water, law enforcement conservation officers conduct the surveys.

"If an officer should question you and skip the next four fishermen, it doesn't mean that he thinks you're a suspicious character," Pfeiffer says. "Each survey must be completed within a certain time limit and if there are many fishermen on the lake, the officer must select a representative sample, since he doesn't have time to interview them all."

The surveys are conducted under strict controls, according to Pfeiffer, so the results will be statistically valid. After a season of sampling, the raw data are mathematically expanded to give biologists a picture of the total fishery for each body of water.

There are several ways to express these results, none of which mean very much to anyone except a fisheries biologist. Fishing pressure, for example, is measured in man-acres/hour—one man fishing one hour on one surface acre of water. Harvest is expressed in fish/hour, fish/acre or pounds of fish/acre.

In isolation, these figures don't mean much even to the biologists. But when data from different lakes (or from different years on the same lake) are compared, trends and patterns begin to emerge. Creel surveys, for example, have documented the rapid rise in popularity of bass fishing in the past 10 years and have shown biologists how much and in what ways angling pressures have increased or decreased.

Other data, such as the number of men and women anglers, the percentage of resident and non-resident fishermen, the proportion of bank and boat fishermen and enumeration of fishing methods (casting, trolling, still fishing, etc.) also help both biologists and administrators with long- and short-range planning.

This year, creel surveys will be conducted on the Markland Pool and below the Meldahl and Greenup dams of the Ohio River, at Cumberland, Herrington, Barren, Green and Dewey lakes, in the headwaters and tailwaters of Lake Cumberland and in the Cumberland River near Burkesville.

Since most are comparatively small samples, your chances of being interviewed are slim. But if an officer or creel clerk does start asking you questions, remember that your answers are helping biologists find ways to improve fishing in the future.

Plant To Convert Coal to Gas Planned for Western Ky. Site

A major commercial synthetic fuel plant which will convert coal into gasoline is planned for a site in western Kentucky, Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. announced at a press conference in Lexington last week.

The plant, which is slated to be built on the Ohio River, would use a coal to synthetic fuel technology which has been successfully used in South Africa since 1955, the governor said. The South African plant is the only commercially sized operating plant in the world producing gasoline from coal, he added. Texas Eastern Corp. is negotiating an agreement whereby Texas Gas Transmission Corp., headquartered in Owensboro, will join in the project.

Brown said construction of the plant will involve about 15,000 jobs with about 3,000 jobs planned after the plant begins operation.

Keith Dickinson, vice president of Texas Eastern, said the plant will produce an equivalent of 50,000 barrels of fuel daily and will use about 28,000 tons of coal a day. Completion of the plant is predicted for late 1986 or early 1987, he added.

The site would be about 1,500 acres or more, he said. He would not make an estimate of the cost of the facility because studies are now under way. He did say, however, a similar plant cost about $3.4 billion.

The press conference was held in conjunction with a visit to Kentucky by Dr.

John Sawhill, federal deputy secretary of Energy. Sawhill said he is very impressed "with what I've seen in Kentucky" and by the fact that Kentucky is willing to take the initiative in instigating alternative fuel projects.

Gov. Brown said synthetic fuels are "an important aspect" in the marketing of Kentucky coal and are needed to insure "long-term continuity to sell our product."

"The most important thing we can do is to put a cap on world oil prices and develop competing industries" as an alternative to the use of oil, Sawhill said. He said he feels strongly the U.S. has to replace oil and gas with coal and other sources.

Earlier in the day, Sawhill, state Energy Secretary William Sturgill and U.S. Sen. Wendell Ford toured the Ashland Oil Co.'s H-Coal demonstration project at Catlettburg (Boyd County). That plant will convert coal to boiler fuel and synthetic crude. This evening the group of state and federal energy officials will visit sites in Breckinridge, Henderson and Daviess counties where commercial coal to synthetic fuel plants are planned.

Energy-Saving Class At MSU, May 12-23

Morehead State University's School of Applied Sciences and Technology is offering a new course entitled "Energy Conservation Technology" during intersession May 12-23.

Offered as part of MSU's mining technology program, the course will give instruction in applied techniques in energy conservation technology for businesses, factories, homes, schools and other structures that are heated or cooled by various energy sources. The importance of energy conservation to society will be emphasized.

In addition to instruction for private and public facilities, the course will offer energy conservation instruction in transportation, administration and legislation.

"As energy reserves deplete, energy conservation becomes more important," says Ken Darling, course instructor. "A tremendous savings in energy can be accomplished if citizens are educated in energy conservation and put this knowledge to work."

He continued: "Through this course, we hope to make people knowledgeable about energy savings for their personal use and in the position to teach others the benefits of energy savings."

Turning to the Wind for Power

LOOKING LIKE AN EGGBEATER but really a modern windmill, this 55-foot Darrieus wind turbine is being tested at Sandia Laboratories in Albuquerque, N.M. These experimental turbines are pumping irrigation water in a number of locations. More expensive than conventional windmills, they are expected to be easier to erect and maintain.

When the warm spring breezes blow, the young and young-at-heart think about kites a-flying. And this spring, influenced by the high price of oil, lots of people are thinking about windmills a-turning. Although the number of windmills still is small, farmers, rural homeowners, some businessmen, and especially utility executives today are deeply interested in the prospects for using sleek, modern wind turbines to generate electricity.

Darrieus wind turbines, which look something like eggbeaters turned upside down, generate electricity to refrigerate milk at a dairy farm in Ft. Collins, Colorado and pump water on farms near Bushland, Texas and Garden City, Kansas. Trim but conventional three-bladed turbines provide power for isolated homes where utility lines are distant, and at other experimental locations.

A big brother to the single-family three-bladed models—this one with blades 80 feet in diameter—has been built by a private company to serve the 50 residents of Cutty Hunk Island, Mass.; another, larger three-bladed is under construction near Palm Springs, Calif., for the Southern California Edison Company.

Other large machines are being bought by the Bureau of Reclamation at Medicine Bow, Wyoming, and by the California Department of Water Resources.

A metal manufacturer near Redding, Penn., is buying a 2,000 kilowatt wind turbine to help reduce its $50,000 annual electric bills. Built with six 60-foot blades, it is designed to generate 1,250,000 kilowatt hours per year in nine-miles-per-hour average winds—a very moderate wind speed that is characteristic of Pennsylvania.

The world's largest wind turbine that is presently operating sits on a 150-foot tower on a North Carolina mountain top at Boone, serving customers of the Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corp. Built by General Electric for the Department of Energy, it uses wing-shaped blades 200 feet in diameter to generate up to 2,000 kilowatts of electricity. It requires an 11 mph wind to begin operating and reaches its peak at 25 mph, provides enough electric power for about 500 homes. Late this year, the first of three even-larger wind turbines will be completed near Goldendale, Washington in another Department of Energy experiment. These turbines, with two blades 300 feet in diameter, start generating in 10 mph winds and reach their 2,500-kilowatt peak at 20 mph. They will supplement hydroelectric power to serve customers of the Bonneville Power Administration. Much more ambitious is a plan by a group of businessmen men in California to build 30 large wind turbines in Hawaii and sell 80 million watts of power to the Hawaiian Electric Company. The turbines will require an investment of about $200 million.

Such plans are based on confidence that the cost of the large turbines will come down when they are built in quantity. Small turbines, too, are expected to become cheap enough for farm and other rural use within the next four or five years.

People interested in small wind turbines may obtain a list of manufacturers and a guide to the economics of wind power free from Wind Systems Program, Rockwell International, P.O. Box 464, Golden, CO 80401. A free pamphlet, "Energy from the Winds," is available from the Department of Energy's Technical Information Center, P.O. Box 62, Oak Ridge, TN 37830.

Marigold Most Commonly Planted Annual

Marigolds, petunias and geraniums are the most popular annual flowers in Kentucky as well as the rest of the country. Home gardeners can always count on these annuals to produce a good show in their gardens, but each does have some drawbacks.

Bob Anderson, Extension horticulturist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, reports that these plants always do well in trials at the college's Landscape Garden Center. "But they are not the best plants we have trialed," he adds.

Marigolds are the most commonly planted annual flower in the home landscape, according to Anderson. The tall, medium-sized and dwarf types of marigolds can be purchased as transplants or they are easily grown from seed.

"The production of many bright yellow, orange or bronze colored flowers makes marigolds very popular," says the specialist. He reports that the new white marigold has attractive flowers, but garden center trials have shown that the plant producing the white flowers is inferior to other large marigold types.

Marigolds do not flower consistently through Kentucky summers. The dwarf marigolds flower heavily in May, June and into July, then few flowers are produced in July and August. More flowers occur in September and October until frost. Anderson says these annuals also are susceptible to damage from mites during hot, rainless periods of summer. If they become infested, pesticides must be used weekly or the garden will be damaged severely, warns the specialist.

Another popular annual is the petunia, the No. 1 plant produced by greenhouses around the country. All colors are available in various flower types and sizes and plants are vigorous and quickly fill in a garden, says Anderson.

However, without maintenance, petunias remain colorful only two and one-half to three months. "When planted in early May, the plants begin to deteriorate in August, leaving a rather ugly flower bed until fall," notes Anderson. For petunias to flower from frost to frost, considerable maintenance is required. According to the horticulturist, some flowering stems of petunias should be pruned every two or three weeks and plants should be fertilized once a month from June through September.

Anderson says most varieties of petunias perform equally well except for the yellow flowered varieties which are inferior.

Geraniums, which are more expensive than petunias, are almost as popular. "Many home gardeners appreciate the vigorous growth and bright red, pink, salmon or white flowers of geraniums," says Anderson. Trials show these plants perform equally well in ground beds, in containers on the patio or in window boxes.

Geraniums sold in the spring can be those produced from cuttings and those produced from seed. "The plants may appear somewhat different when they are offered for sale, but generally perform equally outdoors," says Anderson. Seed geraniums generally have very vigorous plants with only one or two small flowers while cutting geraniums have less foliage and branches but two to three large flowers.

"Geraniums from cuttings out-perform the others in early summer, but the seed geraniums are vigorous and produce many more flowers in late summer until frost," notes Anderson.

A major drawback of geraniums concerns the flowers. They are easily damaged and rain or water from the sprinkler shortens flower life. Dead flowerheads must be removed regularly throughout the summer, advises the specialist. Continued rainy and cloudy weather also accentuates disease problems in geranium plantings.

Anderson says that while petunias, geraniums and marigolds are the most popular annuals in Kentucky, gardeners might want to try a few begonias or vincas this year.

Begonia, vinca or periwinkle and ornamental pepper plants produce a consistent display of color without the maintenance required for petunias or geraniums and without the absence of flowers in midsummer shown by marigolds, garden center trials have shown.

Citations Increase

During the first week of April, Kentucky State Police troopers wrote nearly 10 percent more speeding citations than during the last week in March.

April 1 marked the beginning of the state police anti-speeding program "55-PLEASE."

A state police spokesman said that to date state police troopers have issued 57 percent more speeding tickets than for the same period last year. The spokesman said traffic fatalities this year are down 28 percent from the number reported for the same period last year.

ARSON, A GROWING CRIME

Arson is a growing crime in Kentucky. According to figures released by the arson unit of the Kentucky State Police, the number of reported arson cases in Kentucky rose by 15 percent last year. State police made 372 arrests in connection with these cases.

Revenge and spite are common motives for arson. Recently a Boone County man was convicted of second-degree arson after he confessed to burning his house which had been awarded to his wife in their divorce settlement.

"We had another case recently where three men were arrested for burning a chicken coop after they were refused permission to groundhog hunt on the property," said Lowell Hamilton, investigative supervisor for the state police arson unit.

Arson is not confined to urban areas. Hamilton stressed. Arson has been on the rise in western and eastern Kentucky in the past years.

The exact figures for losses resulting from arson are not known, Hamilton said. In the 1,334 cases handled by the arson unit, insurance losses amounted to nearly $34 million. In most cases, Hamilton said, the property was underinsured.

Nationwide, he said, arson losses total more than $5 billion annually. About 1,000 people die each year as a result of arson.

A growing concern to arson investigators in Kentucky is the increase in economic arson. Economic arson is the crime of setting fires with the intention of making money by defrauding the insurance companies.

Hamilton said recent economic conditions have been a major factor.

"Mobile home fires have been on the increase," he said. "People get too deep in debt and try to get the insurance money. We've had a number of construction fires also. Someone starts to build a house, materials go up to where they can't afford to finish it and then the place burns down."

The most serious form of economic arson, Hamilton stated, occurs when a phony business is set up, is overinsured and then is burned down to collect on the insurance.

Hamilton noted one such case that occurred in 1972. That year a number of stores in a discount chain in Kentucky began to burn. Hamilton and two other investigators went to the scene of one of the fires and spent weeks probing the debris. They discovered evidence of arson.

After more work, they determined the store had contained car loads of rejected products. Two weeks before the fire, the owner had increased the insurance on the property from $75,000 to $1 million.

The owner was brought to trial in 1977 and convicted of fraud and sentenced to 11 years in the federal penitentiary. With the owner's cooperation, investigators made eight more arrests in connection with the case. Among the arrests was a professional arsonist, a "torch."

"Every person is the victim in arson cases like this," Hamilton said. "We all pay for arson through increased insurance rates."

Hamilton said many other fires are set each year by vandals and burglars, many of them juveniles, who try to hide their crimes by burning the evidence.

Plan Your Own Social Security System

By Don Egan

People are increasingly vocal about their concerns regarding Social Security. The big questions: How much will be there when we need it? What can we do to insure a satisfactory income after retirement?

A survey by Louis Harris & Associates underscores both concerns. Some 80% of active employees, the survey found, fear that Social Security will be unable to continue paying full benefits — and one-third would opt out of the system if given the opportunity.

Meanwhile, the individual's annual contribution to Social Security has risen dramatically. The maximum Social Security tax paid is now $1,403.77 per year, 31% more than in 1978 and 250% more than in 1971. Self-employed individuals pay up to $1,854.90 annually. And the Social Security payroll tax at all income levels is scheduled to rise further through 1981 to keep the system in the black.

or live pretty much as I do now with most of the frills of a good life? • How many years should I plan on enjoying retirement? (It's wise to plan expenses for at least 20 years.)

A Variety of Plans

"Preserving principal, increasing income, decreasing taxable income and looking for low risk are major considerations," says Mr. Underwood.

"The old saw about putting money safely into a savings bank and letting the interest compound has fallen prey to inflation. Other investments yield higher interest income — some are tax-exempt."

For more productive ways of saving and still keeping a portion of your savings liquid, Mr. Underwood offers this sampling:

• Tax-Deferred Annuities are a relatively new kind of insurance plan. They offer consumers a high yield (about 7-9%), as well as liquidity and little risk in a tax-deferred package. Your investment can range from $1,500 to $50,000 in size. No matter when you surrender the annuity, you never receive less than 100% of your original investment. Policies may have a fronted or surrender fee or they may bear no sales charge at all. Based on current income rates, the value of most accounts would double in about 10 years.

• Investing in Common Stock is still one of the most liquid and convenient vehicles for growth of principal. According to a study made by the University of Chicago Center for Research in Security Prices, the rate of return on common stocks between 1926 and 1974 averaged 8.5%, considerably in excess of the past average inflation rate of 2.2% and well above the previous average return on Government bonds, corporate bonds or treasury bills. Barring an anticipated upswing in inflation, the Center also projects that common stocks will continue to outperform those same securities and will provide a return of about double the rate of inflation through the year 2000. It is possible to buy stocks on the installment plan and through mutual funds.

• Municipal Bonds yield from 4 1/2% - 7 1/2% depending on maturity and quality, with interest exempt from federal income taxes. When compared to the equivalent taxable bonds, the rates would be closer to 8-12%, depending on your income bracket. Mr. Underwood cites as an example a couple making a combined taxable income of $39,200 who would get the same return on a tax-free 5.5% as on a 9.5% return from a taxable investment. Municipal bonds can generally be bought in $5,000 denominations and are available through your broker. For those who can't afford the $5,000 initial investment, Municipal Bond Funds are available for as little as $1,000. The funds allow the individual to buy shares in a portfolio of different bonds chosen and managed by professionals.

• IRA (Individual Retirement Account), for workers without pensions, allows you to contribute up to 15% of your annual earnings or $1,500, whichever is less, into an account that is tax deferred until withdrawal (normally at retirement). Strict rules govern when it may be withdrawn — in monthly payments or in total. Generally, amounts may not be withdrawn from an IRA before age 59 1/2; distribution must commence no later than the year in which the participant attains age 70 1/2. But the presumption is that when you withdraw the money, you'll be in a much lower tax bracket.

• Keogh Plan is a tax-deferred retirement plan that you may establish if you are self-employed. It allows you to contribute the lesser of 15% of your annual earned income or $7,500. If you are in a partnership, you are also eligible for a Keogh. If you have employees who have been with you three years or more, you must contribute the same percentage of their annual compensation to a Keogh as you contribute to your own plan. You are also eligible to establish a Keogh Plan for income you receive from freelancing, consulting or working from home in a side-line business, even if you have a full-time job.

"There are many other options for investing, including Treasury bills, notes and bonds, and Money Market Funds, such as Merrill Lynch's Ready Assets," says Mr. Underwood.

Thus, while government leaders cope with ways to meet the rising demands on Social Security, you can map out your own future security system. But remember, investment is not a do-it-yourself activity. See a professional before investing on your retirement.

Older Population Grows

At the same time, our rapidly expanding older population will increasingly test Social Security in the years ahead. In 1935, there were nine workers contributing for every person over age 65 drawing benefits, according to the Social Security Administration. By 1977, the ratio had fallen to four-to-one; and by 1985, the ratio will be well below three-to-one. At present, it takes five workers contributing to Social Security to provide for one retired person.

While economists and government leaders wrestle with various solutions to the Social Security crunch, employed Americans ought to take command of planning their retirement needs. For whatever the Social Security payment will be, it will probably not be enough.

Other Investments Needed

According to Don Underwood, Manager and Director of Retirement Planning at Merrill Lynch, you will need 165% more income 20 years from now to maintain your present standard of living, almost three times what you now live on. Undoubtedly, you will need income from investments over and above Social Security and company pension plan payments.

"Before putting together any portfolio for retirement, determine where you are in your life," Mr. Underwood advises. "Obviously someone 5-10 years from retirement has a different perspective than someone just starting out." Mr. Underwood suggests that individuals ask themselves the following questions and answer them with the help of a professional financial planner:

- Where will I retire? Relocation costs money, but staying in your hometown may mean more desire to travel.
- How much will I need? Don't assume that your cost of living will necessarily be greatly reduced after retirement.
- How can I achieve that income with the greatest safety?
- Should I be afraid to risk new investments? Should I shift cash flow, reduce life insurance?
- How can I get the best tax savings and benefits for my heirs?
- Do I just want to make ends meet

Basketball Tourney At Betsy Layne, Sat.

Basketball hasn't given its last gasp yet. An independent basketball tournament will be held at Betsy Layne's High School gymnasium beginning Saturday evening at 7 o'clock and continuing through May 4.

The men's single elimination basketball tourney is open to industrial teams of any company in the area who through their participation may stand to gain financially and also help make it possible for the Betsy Layne High School girls' basketball team to attend summer camp.

Winner of the tournament will be awarded $400 and a trophy, and the runner-up will be awarded $100 and a trophy.

For further information, those interested may contact Donnie Williams, Betsy Layne girls' basketball coach, at 874-9733.

Wins Scholastic Honor

McDowell's Geri Grigsby is transferring from the University of Kentucky to Western Kentucky University next year, but she's leaving UK as a result of her own decision, certainly not because of scholastic difficulties.

On the contrary, she was honored by the K-Men Association at last week's UK athletic banquet for scholastic excellence. She was awarded a plaque for maintaining a 3.88 standing out of a possible 4.0 during her three years at the university.

Betsy Layne Stands 4 and 2 in Baseball

The Betsy Layne High School baseball team enjoys a 4 and 2 record following recent play. After losing 6-7 to Prestonsburg, April 17, the team went on to win over Millard, 13-9, the following day. The winning pitcher, Greg Conn, had 13 strike-outs for the day.

Betsy Layne won both games of a doubleheader against McDowell, April 19, the first game by 12 points to 2, the second by 10 points to 4. Winning pitchers were Dwayne Jarrell and Mike Hall.

In the second game, Richie Reynolds and Ronnie Akers both had home runs. Akers' was his third for the season.

Rice's Crispies . . .

Betsy Layne, W'wright Baseball

By KENNY RICE

Betsy Layne has all the baseball players together now and for third-year coach Jim Cecil it couldn't have come at a better time.

"The basketball team went to the state tournament and so our practice was pushed back a week and then there was the senior trip the first week of April so we've not been together as a team very long. We still have a couple of weeks left before the district tournament and I think we'll be ready. We have experience this season and these kids have been playing together for three years now," Cecil said.

With most of his seniors gone, Cecil had a makeshift lineup for a week and a half into the season but now things are back to normal and the key players are back at their old positions.

The infield is sound with veterans Ronnie Akers at first, Dwayne Jarrell at second, Mike Hall at short, Todd Tackett at third and Ricky Conn behind the plate. This talented group supplies sure fielding and the bulk of the Bobcats' hitting power. Wayne Morris is back in left field with Greg Conn in right and Keith Coleman seeing most of the action in center. Paul Jarvis has also seen a lot of playing time in the outfield.

The infield has fine reserve strength with Darrell Castle, Dwight Newsome, Mark Westfall, Kenny Adkins and Albert King. Each has filled in for the vacationing seniors and they are capable of playing anywhere in the infield.

The pitching staff is thin. Hall, Ricky Conn and Greg Conn are proven pitchers. Jarvis has given needed help on the mound and Cecil is hoping their arms remain strong as the post season approaches.

"We have to avoid arm problems. Our hitting is coming along now that we're practicing together and barring any injuries I think we'll be right in the thick of things," Cecil said.

WHEELWRIGHT SOLID

A successful baseball team needs strength up the middle, and Coach Danny Dawson's Wheelwright Trojans have a quartet of All-District performers in Monroe Jones at short, Strawn Berger at second, Tony Hall in center and Alan Tackett catching.

"We are strong up the middle and we have good hitting," Dawson added, "We have four seniors for leadership and most of these guys have been playing together for three or four years."

Jones, Berger, Hall and first baseman Donnie Daniels were freshmen on the 1977 Wheelwright club that advanced to the finals of the regional before losing to Paintsville. They want to atone for losing in the district tourney last season after being favored going into the tourney.

"I think we'll do better in the district this season. We didn't play good ball near the end of last season. We have some veterans who know what it takes to get into the regional."

Berger anchors the mound staff again this season. Getting two or three pitchers behind him is important for Wheelwright to make a run at the regional crown.

Jones has been a fixture at short for four years. Daniels is returning to first after sitting out last season with an illness. Hall was one of the region's top hitters and better base runners last year. Little is back for a second season of catching.

These five veterans are the keys to the Wheelwright success this season. They are complemented by Alan Tackett, who sees duty in left and at third base, Anthony Rhea, an infielder, and Jeff Justice, who can play several positions.

Dawson is counting on some grade school players to help out down the stretch. He knows it is vital to keep his eight proven players healthy. The seniors are trying to regain the form they lost near the end of the last season.

SEEDING

The baseball district will be seeded this year after the Floyd County Conference did not do so last season. Last year not every county team played the other county teams because the games were rained out and not rescheduled prior to the district tournament. This season all county games have to be completed at least two weeks before the district to allow time for rescheduling if needed.

HOME RUN LEADER AT MOREHEAD

Bridget Clay, an All-State basketball player at Prestonsburg High in 1977, is leading the Morehead State women's softball team in home runs this season. A gifted athlete, Bridget is attending Morehead State on a basketball scholarship and is recognized as one of the state's outstanding woman softball players.

SLONE HONORED AGAIN

Allen Central's career scoring leader, Phil Slone, received another honor two weeks ago when he was picked by coaches, state-wide, for the Courier-Journal All-State second team. Slone, a senior who averaged 24 points per game this season, was chosen on the Lexington Herald-Leader's All-State second team earlier. Phil is regarded as one of the state's ten best guards.

Receiving honorable mention honors in the Courier-Journal's All-State poll were Ronnie Akers of Betsy Layne, Monroe Jones of Wheelwright, Paul Layne of Betsy Layne, Mark Martin of Allen Central and David Pitts of Prestonsburg.

Phelps' Ervin Stepp was named captain of the All State team, becoming the third 15th Region player selected and the first from this region since Kelly Coleman of Wayland in 1956. Dickie Prater of Pikeville in 1950 is the other player from this region to captain the Courier-Journal All-State team.

REGIONAL BASEBALL TOURNEY

The 15th Regional baseball tournament is set for May 12-16 at the Johnson Central High Park.

Buying a large ham or roast can be a good way of stretching food dollars, according to Extension food and nutrition specialists with UK's College of Agriculture. You can get 12 to 16 servings of freshly cooked meat with such a purchase.

The body's greatest demand for protein comes during periods of the most rapid growth. During the first year of life, the protein requirement per kilogram of body weight is greater than at any other time. Don't forget, however, the maintenance requirements for protein which persist throughout our lives. Even when one ceases to grow, there is still a need for protein to repair or replace tissues. Gelatin is the only animal protein which is incomplete, although many vegetable proteins are incomplete as well. Ask your health specialist to recommend a good protein supplement if needed.

Whether or not you're currently in your period of most rapid growth, you're sure to need our services from time to time at COOLEY APOTHECARY, No. 2 Town Center Bldg. (886-8106). Alcohol-Drug Meet Features Grigsby

Supt. Grigsby speaks at recent meeting of the Floyd Co. Alcohol and Drug Awareness Committee.

Pete Grigsby, superintendent of Floyd County Schools, addressed an open meeting of the Floyd County Alcohol and Drug Awareness Committee, April 15 at the Floyd County Library.

The meeting began with the election of the following officers: Bob Sloan, chairman; Taylor Biggs, vice-chairman; and Kathy Harris, secretary-treasurer. Don Goble, Drug Program Coordinator of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, introduced Mr. Grigsby who began by outlining the school board's policies concerning alcohol and drug education. He then explained the ways in which his administration has attempted to have these policies implemented.

The members of the committee then introduced Superintendent Grigsby to the K-12 Curriculum Guides which were prepared for drug and alcohol education in Kentucky school systems by the Department for Human Resources in cooperation with The Department for Education. Drug and alcohol education is required in the schools by state mandate, and the curriculum guides for kindergarten through grade twelve is the most comprehensive and up-to-date material available.

Mr. Grigsby expressed his intentions of further examining the curriculum guides, and of recommending that school officials use members of this committee as resource persons in dealing with drug and alcohol problems that arise in the schools. Grigsby suggested that representatives from Mountain Comprehensive Care Center and the Floyd County Ministerial Association attend the next principals' meeting to discuss the possibility of developing and implementing a peer counseling program within the Floyd school system.

The next open meeting of the Floyd County Alcohol and Drug Awareness Committee will be Tuesday, May 20.

Getting Lawn Mowing Off To A Fast Start

A sure sign of spring is green grass inching its way up to mowing height. Of course, this signals the need to haul out the lawn mower and trim the lawn—if the mower will start.

A mower that refuses to start or which starts with difficulty indicates the need for some maintenance or repair, according to Larry Piercy, Extension specialist in agricultural engineering with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"It's a good idea to look at the owner's manual for safety tips on using the mower and for maintenance steps to perform," says the safety specialist. He adds, "Each owner's manual is a little different, so people should check manuals, especially if they have a new mower."

Easy, fast starting is very important, emphasizes Piercy. Besides being frustrating for the operator, a slow starting mower tends to encourage people to leave the engine running while refueling or when disconnecting the grass catcher bag, both potentially dangerous situations.

There are some general steps to take to facilitate starting a mower. For instance, the oil should be changed if it wasn't changed last fall, says Piercy. The oil should reach the full mark but not go over it.

Refer to the owner's manual to see what should be done about the air cleaner. "A dirty air cleaner can make an engine run poorly and cause it to be difficult to start, besides increasing wear and tear," explains the specialist.

The spark plug can be the reason for a stubborn start. Clean and reset the gap, advises Piercy. If a spark doesn't jump when the plug is out, then it should be replaced, he says.

Also the carburetor might need cleaning if the mower was stored last fall in a warm place with gas in the tank. The gas could have vaporized and left a gummy residue on the carburetor. Normally, however, the carburetor does not need adjustment, according to Piercy.

If these maintenance steps don't solve the starting problem, he suggests taking the mower to a shop for a tuneup or repair.

Besides the engine, the blade also should be checked to make sure it's sharp and balanced for a good, even cut. When working with the blade, Piercy says to be sure to disconnect the spark plug wire to avoid accidental starting. He urges caution when handling or removing a blade since lacerations could result from careless handling. The blade should be removed for sharpening with both ends filed equally so balance is not lost. If the blade is out of balance, however, file only the heavy end.

Piercy urges caution if a grinder is being used on the blade. "Don't overheat and lose the temper of the blade," he warns. The blades should be checked for signs of wear or stress cracks, especially at the "sail" of the blade, and it should be replaced if these signs are present, according to the specialist. He notes that a loose blade can be the reason for difficulty in starting a mower. If you detect a severe vibration, check the blade for tightness, suggests Piercy.

Finally, check safety shields, the grass discharge chute deflector and the shield between the rear wheels to see that they are clear of obstructions and functioning properly, says Piercy. He adds that it's a good idea to rake the yard before mowing to reduce the chance of objects being thrown by the mower.

Rate Testimony Heard

The Utility Regulatory Commission has taken testimony in rate increase hearings for the state's two largest telephone companies, General Telephone of Lexington and South Central Bell Telephone Co., Louisville.

South Central Bell is requesting an increase that would raise a one-party monthly residential bill by $4.73 in places such as Louisville and $3.17 in less-populated areas.

General is seeking an 18.5 percent increase that would raise the average customer bill by 19 cents per day.

Who's Who in Music Lists 6 from P'burg

The 1979-80 edition of Who's Who in Music will carry the names of six students from Prestonsburg High School who have been selected as being among the country's outstanding high school music students.

Wallace Ratliff, band director, who is head of the school's nominating committee, and the editors of the annual directory have included the names of these students, based on their music ability, academic achievement, service to the community, leadership in extracurricular activities and future potential.

You and Your Car

When Your Car Calls It Quits

It can be a terrible, sinking feeling when your car won't start—or worse yet, when it gets stuck or stops dead. Unfortunately, these things happen all too often in the winter.

First, you can be prepared for it by carrying an emergency kit at all times. The kit should contain:

- Extra clothing (such as snowmobile suits and parkas), heavy woolen hats with ear and neck protection, and extra woolen socks, as well as extra medicine if you need it. Pack a blanket, too.
- Fire starting materials, a pan to melt snow, and half a dozen dehydrated meals, which can be bought at skiing and camping shops.
- A CB radio, to keep you in contact with the outside world. First, it can keep you informed of weather conditions; and second, if you do get stuck you can call for help. It's a small investment to make, and it could really pay off when you need it.
- A cheap crescent or other wrench to remove battery clamps and repair a jerry-rigged fan belt.
- A box of fuses (check and see which kind your car uses) and nail files to remove the burned out fuses.
- A can of tire inflator, "instant air," which will pressurize a deflated tire enough to hold it until the next gas station (if you drive slowly, and it's less than 50 miles away). Store this instant air in the passenger compartment or it may freeze.
- A can of WD40, an aerosol drying agent, available from parts stores and supermarkets. Since a mid-ride breakdown may be the result of wet ignition parts, WD40 applied to the distributor and to the inside of the distributor cap could solve the problem.
- Duct tape, a screwdriver, a few flares, and a flashlight.

If, despite your precautions, your car won't start, it probably means battery problems. A surprisingly high number of these problems can be caused by corroded terminals, which interrupt the flow of electricity.

If possible, use a tire iron to remove the clamps surrounding the terminals and file the terminals clean. Then carefully pound the clamps back down. A temporary solution would be to short circuit the system by jamming a metal nail file in between the clamp and the terminal.

If this doesn't work, it's jumper cable time. Find some friendly passerby with a car and a good battery. Park the cars close to each other, but not touching, and set the cars in park or neutral. Set the parking brake. If the two batteries have vent caps, remove them and lay a cloth over the open holes.

Now attach one end of the first cable to the positive, (red, "P," or "+") terminal of the good battery; then attach the other end of that cable to the positive terminal of the dead battery. Then attach one end of the second cable to the negative (black, "N," or "-") end of the booster battery and attach the other end of that cable to any metal part of the dead car's engine. The engine of the other car should be running. Start your engine in the normal manner; after your engine is running, remove everything in the reverse manner of installation.

If your car stops dead, and WD40 doesn't do the trick, the problem may be a broken fan belt. While it's a good idea to carry an extra fan belt, a necktie or leather belt will work temporarily. Tie the belt or necktie around the pulley at the bottom of the engine (attached to the crankshaft) and the one near the top of the engine, and get to a service station quickly.

If your car gets stuck in the snow, rock the car by shifting it from reverse to drive. However, if this does not work in three or four minutes, stop! You don't want to burn out the transmission (as well as $200-$1,000 in repair bills). Take to the snow shovels.

If all else fails, and you are stuck without a solution, be careful. You may have to stay in the car for a while. If you have to run the engine to get warm, do so for no more than 10 minutes per hour; leave a window open about 1" while running the engine. Then turn off everything until you are so cold that you have to get warm again. Be careful of the telltale signs of carbon monoxide—as soon as you are warm enough to feel drowsy, shut off the engine!

The Electric Car Club Circuit

As the world's energy problems become more apparent, and as gasoline becomes a dirty word, engineers and laymen are banding together in clubs to promote the electric car as a feasible mode of transportation.

The club's membership typically consists of engineers and scientists, some of whom are already converting or building their own electric cars. Electric car clubs have essentially two purposes:

- Sharing information. Electric car clubs meet regularly, sponsoring guest speakers, some of whom represent corporations in the electric vehicle industry. Members also share their experiences and work on conversions or construction. Finally, organizations often publish newsletters to keep members apprised of technical breakthroughs, funding programs, and new laws and regulations.
- Education. Many clubs exist to educate the public about electric vehicles and their potential as second cars. The electric car has an average battery limitation of 50 miles per day, and most car club members feel that the biggest chore is to convince the public that second cars are not usually driven over 50 miles daily. Shopping mall exhibits are a common method of education, but members frequently discuss new methods of promoting their product.

Goodbye Carburetor?

It won't be long now until the carburetor becomes obsolete—replaced by a new fuel injection system, the throttle body fuel injection.

The TBFI is a slightly simplified and less costly version of traditional fuel injection. Today, most fuel injection systems inject a precise amount of fuel into each cylinder.

With TBFI, the fuel is electronically injected into a rather conventional manifold by two injectors located in a throttle body that looks something like a carburetor. Air is mixed with this atomized gasoline as it runs through a venturi, or reverse funnel, in the throttle body.

The fuel bowl, the fuel channel, and the metering rods are removed with this system of fuel injection. However, the basic throttle body is similar to the carburetor in performing its basic function.

TBFI is controlled by a microprocessor or electronic control unit which receives signals from sensors that report engine speed and load, and the kind of pollutants in the exhaust.

Starting this year, the Cadillac Eldorado and a few other key General Motors cars have TBFI; GM is hoping to install it in many cars by 1981.

GM and Ford will probably combine their new injection systems with closed-loop three-way catalytic emission systems which are now being field tested in California.

Spotlight on Fuel Economy

Those new halogen sealed-beam headlamps that you've been hearing about are not only brighter than what you're normally used to, but they also improve your car's fuel economy.

These headlamps, in which the normal tungsten filaments are contained in a halogen gas environment, use about five amps less on low beam than do conventional tungsten lamps. This can help reduce the amount of fuel needed to power an automobile's headlamp system.

Car and Van Pools Really Work

By Lynn Varacalli

At first mention, car pooling may get an unenthusiastic "I'll think about it" reply, but more and more people are thinking about it—enthusiastically. Car pooling has become a business of its own during the last decade.

Not only are people pooling in cars, but in vans as well. Van pooling is becoming increasingly popular across the country, especially with large corporations, because of the substantial savings in parking space. More importantly, though, an employee can save on gas, oil, maintenance and insurance—or even sell his car.

How does a van pool system work? A company buys a van, finds a volunteer driver plus, up to 11 passengers, and arranges for parking. Each driver is responsible for picking up those riders each and every day and for keeping records on the pool. In return for this, the driver has access to the van on nights and weekends and rides free to work. The riders pay a fee based on the distance traveled. They either pay the driver who, in turn, pays the company, or the fee is deducted from their paychecks.

The 3M Company in St. Paul, Minnesota is probably the first company to dip into the van pool system. Faced with the need to expand its parking facilities and also to reduce traffic congestion, 3M started a van pool program with six vans in 1973. The company now has more than 110 vans and needs less parking space than it did before the program began.

Well over 200 companies have since followed 3M's lead. Not only major corporations, but smaller companies as well have been caught by the van pooling bug. Smaller companies are more dependent on their employees to function as a business, so a van pool system is beneficial to them, especially during the winter months when an employee might be snowbound or dead battery-bound.

Car pool programs work in much the same way as van pool programs, except the company does not provide the vehicle. Employees make their own arrangements for sharing rides and deciding on fees.

Car pooling is thought of mainly for commuters getting to work each day but there is another aspect of it. The National Car Pool Association provides a car pooling service for travelers who wish to share a ride somewhere across the country. Membership is $25 for six months, $40 for a year and $125 for a lifetime membership. A non-member can use the service for a one-way trip fee of $15.

This is how it works. A person decides to take a trip but would like to share the ride to cut down on expenses. He calls a toll-free number and tells the operator the point of origin, destination and desired date. In a few seconds, a computer will provide names and phone numbers of people planning a similar trip. The parties then get together to agree on expenses and a desirable date of departure.

The Association set up 100,000 referrals in 1978 and it boasts that it has never had a crime. With all the shared rides, it has saved about 1.5 billion gallons of gasoline since it began in 1972.

Gasoline savings has definitely been a factor in car pooling's increasing popularity. With prices soaring to unthinkable amounts, the consumer has been forced to give car pooling serious consideration. Approximately 6,000 van pools across the country are now carrying some 60,000 people to work each day. The number of people is sure to increase, just as gasoline prices are sure to increase.

About one-third of all private automobile mileage is for commuting to and from work. If the average passenger load (1.3 people per commuter car) were increased by just one person, each individual's expenses for commuting would, no doubt, be cut and the nationwide gasoline savings would be more than 700,000 barrels per day (enough for 67,000 cars to travel across the country and back).

If you would like to get on the bandwagon, here are some sources of information:

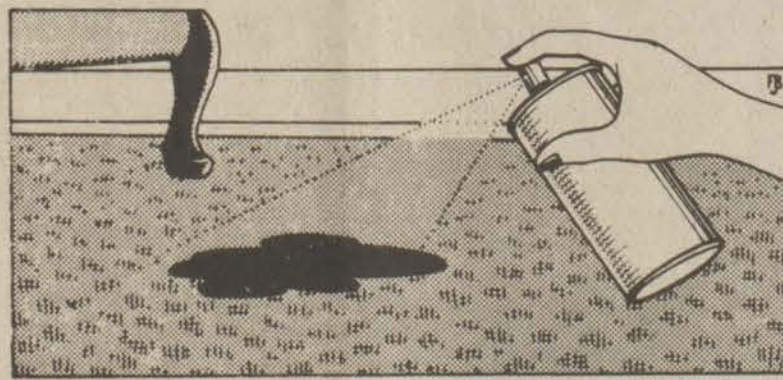

- The National Association of Van Pool Operators will supply basic information about van pooling. They are located at 610 Ivy Stone Lane, Cinnaminson, New Jersey 08077.
- If you would like to become a driver-operator of a van pool, contact the Department of Energy, Transportation Programs, 2221 C, 20 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20585. Ask for the How to Put Together a Van Pool booklet.
- There is a "starter kit" you can obtain to get started with car pooling in your community or where you work. Send $1.00 and a self-addressed stamped business envelope to Reymont Associates, 29 Reymont Avenue, Rye, New York 10580.
- If you are interested in the long haul car pooling operated by the National Car Pool Association, contact them at Box 40303, Portland, Oregon 97240 or call (800) 547-0933.

Apartment Living

Getting Down To Carpet Cleaning

Thoughts of the coming holidays are beginning to surface. Good friends, good food, good wine. But unless all your friends are Felix Unger stereotypes, the holidays will include a good stain on your carpet, too. What do you do? Relax for a minute, and read this.

- Always take immediate action. Almost all spills can be satisfactorily removed if given immediate attention. For liquids, blot up as much as possible with an absorbent material. For pastes, scrape excess from the edge of the stain to the center. For powders, vacuum.
- If you know what the spot is, use a carpet shampoo on water-soluble spots such as soda or candy, and a cleaning fluid for solvent-soluble spots such as grease or tar. Always test cleaners on an inconspicuous area of your carpet first to make sure there is no color change.
- If you do not know what the spot is, first try a liquid carpet shampoo. If that doesn't work, let the stain dry completely and try a dry cleaning fluid such as trichloroethylene.
- Never apply shampoo or cleaning fluid directly onto the carpet. This may cause a "ring." Apply the cleaner to a clean absorbent cloth and lift the spot with a twisting motion. Be sure not to overwet the carpet. Once the stain is removed, let the area dry completely, and then vacuum.
- If neither shampoo nor a dry cleaning fluid do the job, try a commercial spot removal kit or call a professional.
- If nothing works, it may be just the time to do some furniture rearranging.

Assure Yourself About Insurance

Renter's insurance—maybe if you ignore it for a while, it will disappear. Not likely. But what may disappear are your stereo and your TV set. Like death and taxes, insurance is not high on our priority list. The old nothing-will-happen-to-me syndrome seems to prevail, even though renter's insurance is fairly inexpensive. At any rate, here are some basic facts regarding tenant insurance:

- Rates depend upon the type of building—its resistance to fire, whether there's access to the apartment through a fire escape, whether the apartment is generally unoccupied or is in a high crime neighborhood.
- Before you decide which policy to obtain, make an assessment of your property. Figure out exactly how much it would cost to replace all that you own.
- A standard tenant's insurance policy insures everything valuable in your apartment against fire, theft and vandalism. Items of a purely personal nature, however valuable to you, can not be insured. (Try Lloyds of London for your precious love letters.)
- Insurance companies set rather strict limits on certain items. For instance, cash and other negotiables are only insured to $100. Passports, securities, and other vital documents are usually insured to a $500 maximum. Also, furs and jewelry have a $500 limit.
- If you wish to insure a highly valuable item, you may add floaters to your policy. These are low cost riders that insure a specific item. The item must be professionally assessed.
- In areas of high crime, you may have to turn to Federal Crime Insurance. It is administered through the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Unfortunately, this type of policy only insures you for robbery and burglary. In the case of a robbery, proof that your apartment was forcibly entered is required.
- If you would like help in finding the right insurance for you, contact the Insurance Information Institute at 110 William Street, New York, N.Y. 10038. All insurance policies are not the same. Shop around.

Woman's World

Drug-Free Pregnancy is Best

Pregnancy is no time to take unnecessary chances with your health or with the health of your unborn child. According to the Food and Drug Administration (FDA), drugs—from aspirin to alcohol—pose threats to the well-being of your child. Here are the facts:

- Don't try to conceive a child until at least three months after you stop taking oral contraceptives. Avoid amphetamines frequently taken to aid in weight loss. A fetus conceived immediately after you stop taking the pill or while you are taking amphetamines is especially vulnerable to birth defects.
- Pregnant women who drink even as little as three ounces of alcohol per day have a greater chance of having a child with birth defects. Even drinking one to three ounces of alcohol daily is risky.
- Heavy smoking by a woman during pregnancy increases her chances of having an infant who weighs less than usual.
- Ingesting tetracycline antibiotics during pregnancy can discolor children's teeth. Pregnant women who consume large amounts of barbiturates during the last trimester of their pregnancy may give birth to addicted infants.
- Even such minor tranquilizers as Valium, Librium or Miltown taken during early pregnancy can cause a cleft lip or palate.
- Aspirin or other drugs containing salicylate taken during the last trimester can prolong pregnancy and labor and cause excessive bleeding both before and after delivery.
- Finally, live vaccines such as rubella, measles, mumps, smallpox, yellow fever and oral polio vaccines should be avoided if at all possible, since their effects on the health of your unborn child are still unknown. It's better to be safe than sorry.

Dry Up Your Dry Skin Problems

Taking care of your dry skin problems could turn your medicine chest into a small pharmacy. According to recent reports, the only surefire way to soften and moisturize the skin is through water.

Water? Surprised? You always thought that water dried the skin, right? Well, it's a common ingredient in most beauty preparations—up to 75% of many cosmetic lotions are water. Just how effective are all those other ingredients in the lotions, creams, sticks and bath oils that cram store aisles? Here are some guidelines:

- Non-emulsified products. These are clear or translucent products such as petrolatum (Vaseline) or mineral oil solutions. They are considered to be the most effective dry skin products, since they spread well when applied to the skin, form a continuous layer of protection, and retard moisture loss.
- Chapped lip preparations. Usually non-emulsified, these products frequently contain petrolatum or mineral oil. Some may also contain so-called "healing agents." If applied to dry, cracked lips throughout the day, most chapsticks will do the trick.
- Lotions and creams. Most cold creams and night creams are rich in petrolatum and mineral oil. A sprinkling of such exotic solutions as mink oil or persic oil have little proven value. As far as effectiveness goes, no one cream or lotion has it over another, except in price.
- Day creams, moisturizing creams, and hand and body lotions are close relatives to the above. They contain a smaller percentage of petrolatum and mineral oil, also known as oleaginous materials. Most of these vanish when rubbed into the skin. Though your skin may feel silky after applying them, don't be fooled. These solutions may form layers on the skin through which moisture can leak, or they may contain humectants such as glycerin which can actually draw water from the outermost layer of the skin.

Driver Escapes Injury in Mays Branch Mishap

Charles Webb, driver of this Big Sandy Ready Mix truck, escaped injury when the vehicle overturned last Friday on a dirt drive in the Mays Branch section where he was delivering to a construction site. The mishap apparently occurred when the road's shoulder gave way upsetting the truck. Two wreckers were required to remove the heavy vehicle.

Mark Special Events with April Tree Planting

April is a busy month in Kentucky! It is Arbor Day month. It is cleanup and beautification time and Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. has proclaimed April 22 as Earth Day '80. What better time to plant a Kentucky coffeetree or other tree variety to mark these special events. The U.S. Forest Service is asking everyone to "Plant a Birthday Tree" during 1980 to commemorate the service's 75th birthday.

Trees, people and Kentucky go together. Much history was made when pioneers chose Kentucky for their home and planted special trees to make it seem more homey.

Maybe it was Peter Sullivan who was responsible for Kentucky coffeetrees.

In the years before the Revolutionary War, Sullivan was a tenant farmer on a titled estate in England. When he, needing a spur for his horse, hastily broke a limb from his master's prized coffeetree, it proved Kentucky's gain—perhaps in settlers as well as in coffeetrees.

Sullivan's master was so enraged because his tree was mutilated that he banished the Sullivan family from England. They sailed to America where a son Peter married Catherine Ayrehart and fought in the Revolutionary War. A daughter Susanna married Eastern Kentucky pioneer John Sellards, who was a brother to the famed Jenny Wiley.

Could it be that Sullivan brought coffeetree seeds with him to America and his granddaughter Susanna Sellards might have continued the "family tree" when she and her husband settled in Floyd county?

A seed from a Kentucky coffeetree was valuable to George Rogers Clark. He sent seeds to Thomas Jefferson at Monticello, Va., and gave some to his sister to plant at Locust Grove (Jefferson County).

A Kentucky coffeetree growing at White Hall, historic home of Cassius Marcellus Clay in Madison County, is thought to be more than 135 years old. A grove of trees stands in Morgan County and others at Harrodsburg—all attesting to the strength and beauty of this Kentucky state tree.

William Swango's descendants or other pioneers might have planted weeping willows in Kentucky.

The English poet Alexander Pope is said to have found a strange seed or plant in a box of figs sent to him in Egypt. He planted it at his home Twickenham on the Thames, and it grew into a beautiful weeping willow.

During the Revolutionary War a British soldier carried a twig from the tree with him to America to plant. Instead he gave it to John Custis, stepson and aid of Gen. George Washington, and Custis planted the twig at his home "Abingdon on the Potomac."

Swango, a German worker for Gen. Washington, tended and cultivated the land and took care of trees on Washington's property. Swango's descendants could have given a weeping willow twig to William King to plant at his saltworks near Abingdon. After the Swangos moved to Morgan and later Wolfe county in Kentucky, they and other early settlers made regular trips back to Virginia to buy salt at King Saltworks. Near the saltworks grew a graceful weeping willow, some distance from the handsome tree that grew on the Custis state, Abingdon. It is said the King tree flourished despite the many twigs broken off by settlers.

Indians taught settlers how to fry elder tree blossoms in bear grease to make a tasty food. Settlers learned how to make wine, hockcakes and medicine from elder blossoms, and women cooked elder blossoms into a complexion balm.

Pioneers made salve from sap beneath the bark of white oaks, from slippery elm and other trees. Sugar was taken from maples, and fermented drinks were made from persimmon, peach, and apple trees.

The U.S. Forest Service says trees can make meaningful memorials to loved ones or can be planted to mark anniversaries, or special events such as graduations, reunions or even retirements.

Tree seedlings are available from state nurseries. A phone call or visit to a District Forest Service office, extension office, Soil Conservation Service or other such agencies will help with decisions as to what type tree to plant.

Everyone has a fried chicken recipe. Only the Colonel has the Original Recipe.™

What can you get at Kentucky Fried Chicken that you can't get from any other fried chicken store?

The Colonel's Original Recipe.

This is the way Colonel Sanders himself first started making fried chicken. And no one's topped him yet.

No wonder. His Original Recipe chicken is made with a secret blend of 11 herbs and spices. Then pressure fried (not deep fried) tender and juicy. All the way through.

Of course, some of our customers take a fancy to our Extra Crispy chicken. So crisp on the outside. Tender on the inside.

Which is your favorite? The Original Recipe or Extra Crispy? Take these money saving coupons to a participating store and try 'em both.

ASCS Cost-Sharing Programs Available

With today's economic uncertainty, many people are beginning to wake up to the fact that right at our feet lies one of our most precious resources, the land itself. One of the ways that people can do something about preserving this resource is through the Agricultural Conservation Program. Administered by USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, ACP is a program of cost-sharing. That means ASCS and the landowner share the cost of certain erosion control and/or pollution abatement practices. Some of the measures available through the AC Program are establishment of permanent vegetative cover; improvement of permanent vegetative cover; diversions; grazing land protection; permanent vegetative cover on critical areas; water impoundment reservoirs; stream protection; sod waterways; permanent wildlife habitat; planting trees; improving a stand of forest trees. For further information on this and other programs offered through ASCS, phone 886-2802 or drop by at 105 Court St. ASCS programs are available to all eligible persons regardless of color, race, creed, national origin, sex, religion, age or handicap.

★ Consumer Comments

By STEVEN L. BESHEAR
Attorney General

When you borrow money from a bank or other lending institution, you usually arrange to repay the loan with interest by a certain date in a specified number of equal payments.

If you decide to repay the loan earlier than originally planned, you may find the balance due is higher than you anticipated. Perhaps you thought the interest on the amount borrowed was divided evenly over the number of payments you agreed to make. This is not the way creditors compute interest, however.

The creditor normally views the transaction on an investment which will earn him a return in the form of interest. Obviously this investment is largest at the beginning of the debt and gradually decreases as you pay the agreed installments.

Suppose you agree to repay a loan in 12 monthly installments. Since the outstanding debt is 12 times greater in the first month than in the final month, the creditor earns 12 times as much interest in the first month as in the final month; 11 times as much interest as in the final month; 10 times as much in the third month and so on.

This is known as "The Rule of 78s". It got its name from adding the digits representing the 12 months of the year. The sum, 78, is the total number of interest parts in a 12-month installment.

The Truth in Lending Law requires creditors to disclose how interest will be computed if you pay the debt in full before maturity. You should look for the prepayment disclosure before you sign a loan agreement. Ask for an explanation of anything you do not understand.

If you want to know how the Rule of 78s is calculated, just contact the Consumer Protection Division at 209 St. Clair Street in Frankfort and you will be sent a formula you can apply to your installment agreement.

CHARITABLE SOLICITATIONS BY TELEPHONE

Americans give more than $43 billion each year to charitable organizations. However, the amount of money that actually goes to the charities is much less than that.

Charitable solicitors may contact you in a variety of ways: through the mail, door-to-door, personal contact in parking lots, shopping malls or airports, and, of course, by telephone.

Telephone solicitation has become quite prominent recently and can be a means of fraudulent solicitations. An individual may claim to represent some charity or group but in reality is not.

Before giving money to charity, you may want to find out more about it. The first thing you need to determine is if your local government requires charitable and civic organizations to be registered with the city.

While there is no state law requiring registration, there are a few local ordinances that do. The cities of Louisville and Henderson issue permits to groups wishing to solicit charitable funds, if they meet the standards set forth in the respective city ordinances.

You should also be concerned with exactly how the organization distributes its funds. If the organization is a reputable one, you should have no problem receiving such information.

Many charitable groups hire professional fund raisers to procure money for them. In most instances, these fund raisers simply take a percentage of the solicited money in return for their services.

Before making a contribution, find out all the facts about the organization and how the funds will be utilized. You should always remember to avoid high-pressure solicitations. Reputable organizations frown upon such tactics.

Here are some ways you can learn more about a particular charity or civic organization: (1) Write directly to the national office of the charity requesting financial reports and other data. (2) Consult your local Better Business Bureau or the Council of Better Business Bureau in Washington, D.C. They keep files on more than 5,000 agencies and can supply you with information which may enable you to better judge the charity. (3) Check with the attorney general's office, division of consumer protection to see if complaints have been received on the charity in question.

If you have a complaint or desire more information on this or other consumer matters, please write to the Division of Consumer Protection, 209 St. Clair Street, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Buoys Serve as Fishing Guides

Kerry Prather, fisheries biologist, exhibits one of buoys used to designate Dewey Lake fish attractor sites.

There are fish in Dewey Lake, and Division of Fisheries personnel and two Floyd fish and game clubs have cooperated this spring in trying to afford cover for the fish as well as likely spots for anglers to try their luck.

They have to date established four one-tenth-acre sites, each of which is comprised of four fish attractors. The attractors are sunken brush, weighted by concrete blocks. Each site is marked by a white-and-orange buoy which is located in the center, with the four attractors extending in all four directions.

A map, published by the Department of Fish and Wildlife, will be available later to guide fisherman to these sites as well as others later to be constructed.

The Dewey Lake Fish & Game Club and the Highlands Bass Club provided concrete blocks for weighting down the brush cover.

Kerry Prather, fisheries biologist assigned to a group of Eastern Kentucky lakes, said this week that, although the water quality at Dewey is poor, the fish poundage per acre at the lake has increased and that game fish there are doing "as well as may be expected." Mountain lakes, he added, are infertile.

There was a good black bass spawn last year, he said, and tiger muskie stocked in the impoundment are doing well. "There's a large crop of 26 to 29-inch muskie, and I'm sure there are larger muskie in the lake," he added.

He said electro-fishing studies in shallow waters within sight of May Lodge recently turned up half a dozen 27-inch muskie.

The white bass population is light, with spawning conditions poor. The threadfin shad stocked there did not endure the cold weather when the lake was frozen from shore to shore, but gizzard shad is not of such size that they are no longer food for black bass and other predators. Some good crappie already have been caught this spring.

The rockfish which were stocked at Dewey within recent years apparently failed to survive, Prater said.

PREHISTORIC SITE GETS MARKER

Edmonson County has received a highway marker from the Kentucky Historical Society to designate Mill Hole Farm, a prehistoric archaeological site. Marker No. 1669 is located on US 31-W, four miles south of Park City.

This archaeological site is located about 200 yards southeast of the Federal style house which was built in the early 1800s. The variety of stone implements found on this five-acre site indicates a long span of occupation, according to Dianne Wells, chairman of the Historical Highway Markers program.

These artifacts have provided evidence of hunting, stone tool manufacturing and domestic activities. Wells said that Mill Hole Farm is the earliest non-cave site in the region. It was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1978.

The historical markers program, first included in the Kentucky Historical Society's budget in 1964, now consists of more than 1,350 markers. Of this total, 271 are related to the Civil War, according to Wells. Some 35 concern Daniel Boone and a large number identify Indian raids and Revolutionary War information.

In addition to archaeological sites, markers also identify early forts, stations and settlements, iron furnaces, salt works, tanneries and Kentucky Derby winning horses and jockeys.

In 1969 the society published "Guide to Kentucky Highway Markers" which is available to society members for $1.50 and to non-members for $2. In 1973 a supplement to the original guide was published. It is available to members for $2 and to non-members for $2.25. These publications contain the exact locations and wording on all the markers in the state.

More information about the program can be obtained by calling Dianne Wells, program chairman at (502) 564-3016.

Five programs authorized by the Youth Employment and Demonstration Projects Act of 1977 provided some 400,000 new job and training opportunities for economically disadvantaged youths during the 1979 fiscal year, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

Under the Youth Employment and Demonstration Projects Act of 1977, disadvantaged youths receive job and training opportunities in urban and rural areas, working on community improvement, natural resources conservation, and combined work and education programs.

Royal Ambassadors in Action

The Tak Owe Chapter of the Royal Ambassadors, First Baptist Church, of Allen, participated in a car wash March 29, raising nearly $120 for the Annie Armstrong Easter offering, an annual Southern Baptist Convention offering for home mission work. The car wash, which lasted from noon until 4 p.m., became a combined effort with the members of the Baptist Men's program aiding in the car washing and members of the Baptist Women's program providing refreshments. The Royal Ambassadors presented the money to Pearl Watts, Baptist Women's president, and Rosemary Frasure, W.M.V. director, during the Sunday morning service, March 30.

Participating in the car wash and the presentation of the money to the church were Brent Turner, Lee Boyd, Barry Davis, Roger Barnette, Herby Lemaster, Johnny Bevins, Bill Smith, David Allen Layne, Steven Parsons, and Keith Parsons. Baptist men helping the boys were Gene Davis, David May, Chris Waugh, Ken Leslie, Brett Davis and Roger Barnette. Pearl Watts, Ruby Imes, Mary Ann Hall and Rosemary Frasure provided and served refreshments during the day.

Royal Ambassadors is a Southern Baptist missions education organization for boys in grades 1-12. It seeks to lead boys to learn about missions, participate in missions activities, pray for and give to missions, develop and use their own personal skills and to learn about and support the work of their church and denomination. The program seeks to help boys become aware of the needs of Christ at home and around the world and to respond to those needs.

Announce Provisions Of Grain Program

Anyone growing corn in Floyd county in 1980 should add to their list of "things to do" a visit by the ASCS Office to discuss the 1980 Feed Grain Program.

Some provisions of the program are: The disaster payment program has been extended for low yields or prevented planting; target prices have been increased; no set-aside will be required, and there will be no offsetting compliance provision.

All farmers will be asked to report their acreages planted and land uses to the ASCS Office as soon as possible after planting but no later than July 15.

For further information, contact the Floyd County ASCS Office, 886-2802.

Bell's Prestonsburg System Meeting High Expectations

This telephone electronic testing center has "everything under control" when it comes to checking the reliability of the Prestonsburg office, which handles more than 80,000 telephone number connections on the average business day.

Roger T. Watkins of East Point, a switching equipment technician for South Central Bell, views a meter indicating a circuit is in good working order.

South Central Bell's new telephone electronic switching system (ESS), which has been in operation here since last June 30, has met the company's high expectations. Phill Scott, South Central Bell's local manager, said last week.

The giant, computer-like system, which routes the calls which customers make, is located in South Central Bell's new building on Lafferty Lane here.

According to Scott, "It has been doing everything it was expected to do. And, many customers are using the optional custom calling features it provides."

They include:
—Call forwarding, which automatically forwards calls from number to another.

—Call waiting, which provides a beeping signal that tells someone on the phone that another call is coming in.

—Three-way calling, which allows a third party to be added to an existing conversation.

—Speed calling, which allows a telephone subscriber to use a one- or two-digit code to dial frequently called numbers.

Scott said those interested may visit the PhoneCenter Store at 13 N. Lake Drive, Town and Country Shopping Center, for a demonstration.

Some Annuals Popular But Have Problems

Many plants can be grown as annual flowers in Kentucky gardens.

Some, such as petunias, geraniums and marigolds are so popular that home gardeners think they are best for flower gardens. Others, such as begonias, periwinkles, impatiens, coleus and ornamental peppers have demonstrated in trials that they perform better than all others.

Plants in still another category of annuals chosen by some gardeners produce flower colors or plant textures not available in the more popular or better annual flowers.

"Some people simply prefer these plants, even though they have exhibited problems some years during trials at the Landscape Garden Center," says Bob Anderson, Extension horticulturist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Examples of these plants are ageratum (floss flower), celosia (cockscomb), dahlia, nicotiana (flowering tobacco) and zinnia.

"These plants are generally as good as the popular annuals—petunias, geraniums and marigolds. However, some years, problems do exist for all of them," warns Anderson.

Zinnias are common annual flowers throughout the country. Plant breeders recently developed many new cultivars which produce many flowers with red, orange, yellow, cream or white colors. But in Kentucky, zinnias simply cannot tolerate the disease problems accentuated by the weather, according to Anderson.

The specialist says three separate diseases attack zinnias, so plants rarely flower more than eight weeks. "If you truly love zinnias, select one of the Ruffles series to grow in your garden," advises Anderson, adding they are somewhat tolerant of diseases.

He notes a spray program normally used for roses may extend the life of zinnias.

Ageratum, celosia, dahlias and flowering tobacco offer different appearances to the flower garden. "These plants perform as well as begonias and periwinkle during hot, dry summers, but are not as impressive during cloudy, rainy years," says Anderson.

Ageratum may require regular maintenance, such as removing dead blossoms and pruning. The plants produce a soft blue flossy or fuzzy flower, one of the few sources of blue for the summer flower garden, besides the petunias and blue salvia. Anderson suggests that yellow marigolds and ageratum make a good combination in the garden.

Only two or three cultivars of celosia perform well regularly out of all cultivars commonly sold, according to the specialist. And it is uncommon to find celosia labeled by cultivar name.

The flowers of celosia appear as large, thick colored feathers. "The bright yellow-orange, red and scarlet colors of Golden Triumph, Crusader and Red Fox will certainly impress you," says Anderson. Crested or cockscomb type celosia are unique in color and form, but the flower head is so large that the stems fall over or break during rainstorms.

Annual dahlias form compact plants 12 to 20 inches tall. Small, double dahlia flowers of white, yellow, orange or red are borne above the foliage. Trials at the Landscape Garden Center show dahlias are generally good annual flowers, but are so susceptible to spider mites that they may require pesticide applications.

New cultivars of flowering tobacco have won awards from All America Selections and performed admirably in Landscape Garden Center trials in 1977 and 1978. However, these plants showed little vigor during the cloudy, rainy summer of 1979, according to Anderson.

The vigorous, well-branched plants of flowering tobacco produce white, pink, red or soft green flowers. Anderson suggests choosing one of the colors of the Nicki series or the taller Lime Sherbert when selecting flowering tobacco for your garden.

OSM Approves Work on Slide In Pike County

The Federal Office of Surface Mining (OSM) awarded a contract last Wednesday to correct a slide threatening a Pike county home, just two days after the threat was reported.

OSM's Region II Office in Knoxville awarded a $14,400 emergency contract to Fleetwood Johnson Construction Co., Myra, Kentucky.

OSM's Pikeville Field Office reported to the Knoxville Office Monday that a slide containing approximately 2,500 cubic yards of earth and rock was moving downslope and already was touching the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Reynolds near Dorton, 28 miles south of Pikeville.

Employees from OSM's Abandoned Mine Land Division in Knoxville who went to the scene Monday determined the slide apparently was triggered by the saturation of soil from water seeping from several abandoned underground mines in the area.

Remedial work will include removing most of the slide material, installing drainage facilities and revegetating the area.

Funds for the work will come from reclamation fees levied on current coal production under the 1977 Federal Surface Mining Act to reclaim abandoned mine land. The area was mined in the late 1940's and 1950's.

The Consumer Price Index (CPI) issued by the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics, is the principal source of information concerning trends in consumer prices in the United States.

KET To Air 'Law Day' Quizzes

How much do you really know about the law? About your rights within the law? Two programs on KET, "The Kentucky Law Day Quiz" and "The National Law Survival Quiz," can help you find out on Law Day, Thursday, May 1.

"The Kentucky Law Day Quiz," a 60-minute program Thursday morning at 9:30 (ET) gives students and adults an opportunity to test their knowledge of the laws that affect their daily lives and of the Kentucky court system.

"We can't breathe without running into some aspect of the law," says Larry Holden, producer of the program. "We can't exist without bumping into the law many times each hour."

Through the cooperation of the Kentucky Bar Auxiliary students at selected Kentucky high schools received written versions of the Kentucky Law Quiz. Their answers have been gathered and compiled for comparative use in the program produced by KET.

Examples of the way laws affect typical everyday experiences are provided in "The Kentucky Law Day Quiz" through open-ended sketches performed by actual high school students—members of the Walden Theatre Group of Louisville directed by Nancy Niles Sexton.

Following each dramatization, moderator Jonas Chaney asks viewers about the law: would the actions be legal or illegal? Three distinguished Kentucky jurists provide legal background on each subject area before Chaney explains the answer, and KET's Donna Moore reports the results of the statewide student survey.

"These situations matter very much to junior and senior high school students," says Holden, "because they are just getting into the world of consumerism, family law, personal liability and perhaps criminal law."

"At the same time," he continues, "often the only way they find out that they're wrong is from a policeman. You have to know about the law, and when you do, there are a lot of ways the law can help you. People forget about that," Holden concludes.

John Palmore, chief justice of the Kentucky Supreme Court; Steven Beshear, attorney general of Kentucky; and Julia Tackett, district court judge for the fifth division of the 22nd Judicial District, provide legal insights for viewers throughout "The Kentucky Law Day Quiz."

Thursday, May 1 at 9 p.m. (ET), KET airs "The National Law Survival Quiz." In a question-and-answer format, Newton Minow, former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission; James D. St. Clair of Boston, former counsel to President Richard Nixon; Ruth Bader Ginsburg, professor of constitutional law at the Columbia University Law School in New York; and David Weiner of Cleveland, president of the Young Lawyers Division of the American Bar Association, answer legal questions faced by many Americans.

During and after "The National Law Survival Quiz," the Young Lawyers Section of the Kentucky Bar Association will be available in the studio at KET to answer legal questions phoned in by the viewing audience. To ask a question, call (606) 233-7750 collect. Although the lawyers will be in the studio, questions and answers will not be relayed on air.

Ten city and three rural public transportation systems operate in Kentucky, using 177 vehicles which traveled 13,498,587 miles and carried 28,577,316 passengers in 1979.

Women's Issues Addressed by Bills Passed, Rejected by 1980 Assembly

Concerns which are common to women because of their gender were addressed in several new laws approved or rejected by the 1980 General Assembly. The state legislators recessed the morning of April 2 but will return April 14 to consider over-riding any bills vetoed by Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr.

Some of the women's issue bills were part of a package put together by the Kentucky Commission on Women and sent to the governor for his support. The commission's "grocery list" included bills based on ideas originating with the commission.

Bills supported by the Kentucky Commission on Women were initially selected by a legislative task force that met before the session and studied ways of improving the lives of Bluegrass women.

During the legislative session, the commission staff could not directly enter the legislative process by lobbying for or against bills. But staff members could and did observe the bill's progress and testify before legislative committees.

Two key pieces of legislation which won approval by the House and Senate were related bills aimed at ending domestic violence, abuse inflicted by family members. The bills are awaiting action by the governor.

House Bill 86 creates new state law establishing the crime of domestic violence and makes it a class A misdemeanor. The new law will allow a peace officer to make a warrantless arrest if the officer has probable cause to believe intentional, wanton physical abuse has occurred.

In the past, an officer could not make an arrest without a warrant until he had actually witnessed the abuse. In many cases, the abused person, often the wife, was afraid to or unable to obtain a warrant.

The bill was amended to require the peace officer to return to the home within 12 hours of the arrest and get a signed, written complaint from the abused person. If the victim does not sign a complaint, the alleged offender must be released from jail.

It is hoped that the 12 hours will serve as a cooling-off period so further violence will not be inflicted. In addition, the bill supporters feel removing the abuser from the home will give the victim courage to take legal action to end the violence.

House Bill 87, which has been signed by Gov. Brown, sets up a civil procedure so a husband or wife can file for protective orders for himself and any children or stepchildren. The abused spouse could also obtain child custody payments and support under this new law.

The law was needed because protection and support for a spouse now can only be obtained through a divorce or separation proceeding, said Jill Robinson, executive officer for the commission. The abused partner may not want to take that large a step but is in need of some immediate legal protection, she added.

These bills should serve to quickly defuse a dangerous situation created when family member attacks family member. Temporary separation of the warring husband-wife can prevent further violence and to any bystanders, she said.

Robinson pointed out a child can often be injured if the parents fight. In 1978 there were 360 cases of child abuse in Kentucky directly related to spouse abuse, she said.

The domestic abuse bills were a product of an interim subcommittee headed by Rep. Gerta Bendl (D-Louisville).

Two commission-supported bills aimed at ending another type of violence—rape—passed the Senate but did not pass the House.

Senate Bill 326 would have amended state law to establish a rehabilitation program for sex offenders who had not used deadly force against their victims. The program would have been conducted by the state Bureau of Corrections. Convicted offenders could have entered the 30-day program but would have also completed their full sentence. SB 326 was defeated in the House.

Senate Bill 177 would have shielded the names of sex offense victims contained in initial law enforcement records and in counseling agency records. The names would only be open upon order of the court or by waiver of the victim. The bill was aimed at increased reporting of rape cases by easing victims' fear of publicity. SB 177 did not get off committee in the House. Both SB 326 and SB 177 were filed by Sen. Michael Moloney (D-Lexington).

A third bill dealing with rape, HB 200, was also unsuccessful. The bill increasing penalties for rape passed the House but did not get out of committee in the Senate.

This bill was not supported by the commission because it was felt increased penalties would further reduce the chances for a rape conviction. HB 200 was sponsored by Rep. Ward Burnette (D-Fulton) and two other representatives.

Two anti-discrimination bills filed by Sen. Georgia Powers (D-Louisville) and supported by the commission were passed by the House and Senate and sent to the governor. Senate Bill 14 will prohibit wage discrimination on the basis of sex if an employer has two or more workers. Current law bars sex discrimination if the employer has eight or more workers.

Senate Bill 79 prohibits discrimination in several categories. It extends the protection for age discrimination from 65 years up to 70 in line with new federal law. The bill ensures that women affected by pregnancy, childbirth or related medical conditions will receive the same benefits as other workers similar in their ability or inability to work.

This new law also prohibits housing discrimination with some exceptions which were added through bill amendments. The exceptions include college dormitories, housing with no more than four renters or units in an owner-occupied building, and rental units where tenants would share common bath or kitchen facilities.

Another commission-supported bill, HB 591 would have allowed a married woman

"Don't destroy your ideals! Don't tear down your dreams!"

These are words of advice that we have heard throughout our lives. They are still excellent bits of wisdom that could well be passed on to our young people today. We read of sit-ins, demonstrations, walk-outs, and many other forms of revolt and rebellion. "We fight for our ideals," they say. It is a noble thing to have ideals. But, if in our haste to obtain our own rights, we over-lap and take away the rights of others, we can easily be tearing down, rather than building up.

We all have dreams and ideals, and they were not easily obtained. Usually when we destroy these ideals and dreams, we end up breaking our own hearts.

OUR THOUGHT TO REMEMBER: Only your attitude builds your dreams and ideals. Only you can destroy them.

Retired Teacher Benefits Boosted by Assembly Action

Changes are in store for members of the Kentucky Teachers' Retirement System as a result of several bills approved by the 1980 General Assembly.

"Three legislative revisions are the result of coordinated efforts by the Kentucky Retired Teachers Association, the Kentucky Teachers' Retirement System Board of Trustees, Gov. Brown and members of the General Assembly," Retirement System Deputy Executive Billy Hunt said. "Needed improvements have been provided."

Most of the changes involve retired members of the system, Hunt said. Bills of special interest to these individuals include:

—An annual one percent cost-of-living increase which will become effective July 1. This increase will be based on the member's current monthly annuity, with no restrictions.

—Special-cost-of-living adjustments for 1980 and 1981, to become effective on July 1, 1980, and on July 1, 1981. Members who retired at least one year ago will receive a 3 percent increase in monthly annuity payments in 1980 and another 3 percent increase in 1981. Members who retired at least five years ago will have their monthly annuity increased by an additional 2 percent increase in 1980 and an additional 2 percent in 1981.

—An increase in value of service performed prior to 1941, to become effective July 1. The value of each year of prior service will be increased from $88 to $100. The 1976 limitation of 15 years maximum will be removed and the $40 value of each year will be increased to $100.

—Minimum monthly allowance of $300 for persons retired on disability retirement on or after July 1, 1964.

—An increase in death benefits for retired members from $2,000 to $2,500.

—A lifetime monthly payment of $75 to persons who taught at least 20 years in Kentucky public schools prior to July 1, 1940. The recipients will not, however, qualify for medical insurance, the death benefit or other retirement benefits.

—Payments to survivors of members who died while in active service will be increased by 5 percent effective July.

—Retired teachers may substitute teach up to a maximum of 100 days during a school year without affecting their continued eligibility for retirement annuity. The current maximum is 75 days.

"Members do not have to apply for these benefit increases," Hunt said. "All of these mandated increases will be computed by the retirement system office and added to July retirement checks mailed the last of July."

The Kentucky Teachers' Retirement System, created by the 1930 Kentucky General Assembly, has 49,000 active members and between 12,000 and 13,000 retired members.

Retirement system funds come from members' mandatory contributions of 7.84 percent of their contract salary, state matching and "overmatching" funds, and revenue from the system's investment program. More than $800 million is currently invested by the system. Invested funds are expected to exceed $1 billion by 1983.

A four-person investment staff is responsible for overseeing the system's holdings in treasury notes, bonds, "blue chip" stocks and other securities. In 1978-79 an overall investment yield of nearly 8 percent was realized by the system.

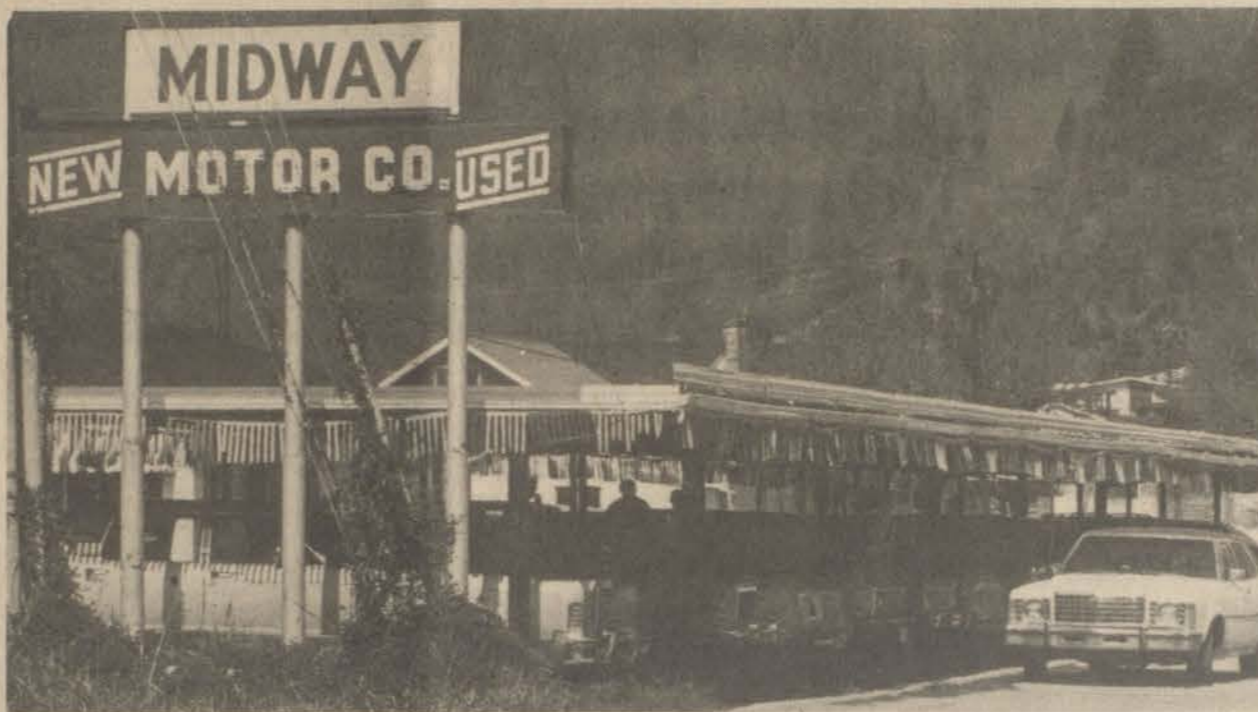

Retirement system members may retire with full benefits after 30 years of service, or at age 55 with reduced annuity. The five highest earning years of service are used to compute a member's annuity. System officials estimate the average "service retiree" receives a monthly annuity of $435.

to use her birth name on her drivers license. The bill was defeated then reconsidered and passed in the House. But the bill was then sent to the Senate where it was not reported out of committee for action on the floor.

The defeated bill would have allowed a married woman to use her birth name, former name or hyphenated name on her license if it was not used for fraudulent purposes. Under existing law a woman must use her husband's surname unless she legally restores her original name. The bill was sponsored by Rep. Bob Jones (D-Crestwood) and four other representatives.

A drivers license is the only document on which a Kentucky woman may not retain her birth name or use a hyphenated surname. She can use whichever name she chooses on bank records, insurance papers or credit accounts.

Of two abortion bills opposed by the Commission on Women, one passed and one failed to get out of a House committee. House Bill 125 passed both houses and became law April 7 without the signature of the governor. The law prohibits any use of public money for abortions. It was amended in the Senate to allow public funding of an abortion if the procedure was needed to save the woman's life. The bill was sponsored by Rep. Dexter Wright (R-Louisville) and 22 other representatives.

House Bill 90, which did not get out of committee, would have established requirements surrounding performance of abortion, including informed consent of certain persons and record keeping. The bill was sponsored by Rep. William Donnermeyer (D-Bellevue) and six other representatives.

The commission opposed HB 125 because it felt the bill discriminated against poor women and because the bill in its original form would not allow abortions to save a woman's life. House Bill 90 was opposed because the commission believed the proposed legislation was unconstitutional.

A third abortion bill, House Bill 364, also became law April 7 without signature of the governor. This measure was introduced after the commission package was completed. HB 364 amends current law to prohibit publicly owned hospitals and health facilities from performing abortions. This bill was sponsored by Rep. Donnermeyer and 17 other representatives.

In addition to legislation supported or opposed by the Kentucky Commission on Women, the commission supported a line item in the governor's budget providing replacement of federal funding of six spouse abuse shelters, and funding under the state attorney general's budget to provide money for rape victim medical examinations.

More Hearing Time
On 4-Day Work Week

The Department of Energy has extended for one month—until May 7, 1980—the period in which the public may comment on a proposed rule related to a compressed workweek during severe energy shortages.

The measure is one of nine proposals in the standby federal emergency energy conservation plan. The public comment period, including public hearings, on the other eight measures in the plan ended April 7.

DOE is extending the comment period only on the compressed workweek proposal so that it can receive additional views on possible legal, economic, administrative and technological consequences of the measure, in addition to the potential fuel savings.

In its present form, the compressed workweek proposal would require all but exempted government and business activities, in the event of a severe energy shortage, to reduce their workweek by one day—preferably a Friday or Monday. Businesses would be expected to work the same number of hours, but not days, each week.

This is a proposed measure, and would have no legal effect until the comment period ends, revisions have been made, and the final measure is published. This and other measures in the standby federal plan would then be available for use by the President in any severe interruption to the nation's energy supplies.

The April 10, 1980, Federal Register notice of the extended period for comments on this measure lists seven issues which DOE believes require more extensive analysis before a final decision is made on the proposal.

Comments on the proposal should be sent to: Ms. Carol Snipes, Hearings & Dockets, Conservation and Solar Energy, Department of Energy, Mail Stop 6B-025, Washington, D.C. 20585.

A revised standby federal plan, containing final regulations originally proposed in the February 7, 1980, Federal Register, is scheduled for publication in late May. The compressed workweek measure, if adopted, would be published at a later date, following analysis of the additional comments.

PCC GROUP TO ATTEND EDUCATION CONFERENCE

A Prestonsburg Community College contingent will attend the 16th International Conference for Cooperative Education and the 6th Annual Meeting of the Cooperative Education Association of Kentucky April 20-25, in Louisville.

The Conference theme, "The Dynamics of Development," was selected to focus attention on the role of Cooperative Education with respect to the business world, government and the international community as we consider human resource development needs for the '80's. Employers and educators have joined forces to provide a well-balanced program which will be of interest to all attendees.

The following staff from Prestonsburg Community College will attend: Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., Robert R. Allen, Ron Carter, Ron Chaffins, Mazola Salmons, and Brenda Castle.

FORMER STATE WORKERS MAY HAVE UNEMPLOYMENT COMP.

Most state employees are covered by Kentucky's unemployment insurance program, so workers who are separated from state government may be eligible for benefits, a Department for Human Resources official says. State workers in general have been covered by unemployment insurance since Jan. 1, 1979.

When a worker files a benefit claim, the unemployment division determines whether the employee is covered, then examines the employee's individual situation to see if he qualifies for benefits. Eligibility is based on the circumstances of a worker's departure from state employment, length of service, amount of wages and other factors.

LOOK FOR THE TENTH ANNUAL OLEIKA SHRINE CIRCUS IN THE SPRING, 1981!

Catch the Wind With Surfboard and Sail

By Jerry Yates

Surfing has been a popular sport for many years, but it has always suffered one major limitation. You need a wave.

Well, they may be selling a lot of Beach Boys records in Iowa this year if the latest innovation catches on. It is called wind surfing, and it combines the attraction of traditional surfing with the excitement of a totally new sport.

Wind surfing is what you do with a sail attached to an oversized surfboard by a flexible mast. The sail, besides catching the wind, is used to steer the surfboard. Your body acts as a counterbalance to the sail.

The sport is still something of a novelty, but it has enjoyed growing popularity. Almost 100,000 people took up wind surfing last year. Most of this growth occurred in Europe, but the market over here is beginning to grow as more people become aware of wind surfing.

Speed is usually an attraction for sports enthusiasts, and it may be responsible for much of this sport's growing popularity. Once you get the hang of it, you can achieve 20 miles per hour with a strong wind behind you.

The greatest attraction of wind surfing is that you can do it just about anywhere. There is some limitation—just as you need a wave to go surfing, you need a wind to go wind surfing. However, you will probably find wind in more places than you will find waves. You can also combine the two, sailing on top of a wave, though this is certainly not recommended for beginners.

Wind surfing requires a board, mast, boom, sail and daggerboard. The whole unit weighs about 60 pounds, which makes storage and transportation relatively easy. The 12-foot board is made of double-layered fiberglass. The sail is dacron and the mast and boom are made of anodized aluminum. There is a total of 56 square feet of sail area, and the mast stands 14 feet tall.

The cost of the entire unit is slightly more than $600, which certainly is not cheap; but you will probably find it well worth the money—if you take the time to learn how to use it properly and overcome the initial frustration you may experience.

You can learn the basics in one afternoon, but it will take you a few days to get comfortable on the board. Even if you have surfed or sailed before, it will take some time for you to get accustomed to what is essentially a combination of those two sports.

A basic understanding of sailing principles and techniques is a big help. Before you start wind surfing, you should make the effort to learn at least basic sailing principles if you are not already familiar with them. Most sailboat shops have a good selection of books on the subject.

Take proper safety precautions the first time you try wind surfing. You should start on a day when the wind is very light (less than seven miles per hour), wear a Coast Guard approved life jacket, and stay close to the shore. Never wind surf alone (a precaution for any water sport), regardless of your ability.

Be especially careful when strong offshore winds are blowing. This is where some knowledge of sailing techniques is particularly helpful. You do not have to go wherever the wind decides to take you, but beginners usually take longer to learn to sail into the wind. You may have to paddle back to shore if you are not careful.

Once you have grasped the basics of wind surfing, a whole new set of challenges is open to you, including "hot dogging" and racing. Last year the North American Wind Surfing Council sponsored dozens of district races, leading up to eight regional championships and culminating in the North American championship race.

A detailed instruction manual is available from Sailrider, as is any other information concerning wind surfing. Their address is R R 2, Box 50, South Salem, N.Y. 10590.
