David Strip Permit Protest Blocked

A bid by the David Community Development Corporation to overturn a permit issued to Branham and Baker Coal Company for stripmining on the western end of that town was blocked in Franklin Circuit Court Monday.

Judge Henry Meigs dismissed the suit on grounds that the coal company was not a party to it. The suit was filed last week against the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, which issued the stripmining permit to the company.

David Rubenstein, an attorney for the town, contended at a brief hearing Monday that the permit should be revoked since the coal company had not advertised its intent to mine the tract—which includes four knobs on the Floyd-Magoffin line—in Floyd county, as required by law.

Rubenstein said the town knew nothing about the permit until early June—nearly two months after it was granted.

DNREP attorney Steve Blanton said the department will conduct an administrative hearing on the matter August 13, at which time David can present any arguments as to why the permit should be revoked.

Rubenstein said after the hearing that he would confer with David's board of directors to determine whether another suit will be filed.

Kentucky's Yesterdays... Eastern Kentucky Coal

By STUART SEELY SPRAGUE
Morehead State University

"Coal is Kentucky's ace in the hole," goes the saying; and, though Kentucky has two coal fields, Kentucky coal—particularly in a year in which "Coal Miner's Daughter" is a smash hit in the nation's theaters—brings to mind Eastern Kentucky. Though coal was known in Kentucky since 1750, it has only been in the Twentieth Century that Kentucky's coal industry has been centered in the mountains.

In an age of wood (not until 1880 did coal outdistance wood as the chief source of fuel) the market for Kentucky coal was relatively small, and the Western coalfield was more accessible to that market. The primitive nature of the early diggings is clearly indicated by descriptions such as the following:

"The coal was carried out and measured in a tub and grape vines used for cables."

The standard measurement was the bushel, not the ton. Transportation was not much better. Coal barges—sixty to seventy feet in length, eight feet wide, and fourteen feet deep—plyed navigable rivers. And then only when the stage of the river was sufficiently high for the barge to make it to market.

The terrain of Eastern Kentucky and the difficulties of getting mined coal to the urban markets acted as such a deterrent that, despite the glowing descriptions by travelers, scientists, and the Kentucky Geological Survey previous to the War Between the States, little interest was shown in Eastern Kentucky coal. A visitor to Prestonsburg wrote that "for miles above and below the town... coal banks of superior quality, easily worked and great thickness" abound.

The 1840 Federal Census indicated that Kentucky's top coal counties were Hancock, Muhlenburg, Estill, Clay, Pulaski, Livingston, and Wayne, in that order. An 1887 map indicated 31 coal mines in Eastern Kentucky—17 in Laurel, 10 in western Boyd and eastern Carter, and two each in Johnson and Lawrence counties.

Only later would Bell, Harlan, Pike, Perry, Letcher, and Martin counties become important. As a matter of fact the first time that an Eastern Kentucky county appeared among the top three producers was in 1905 when Bell ranked third. Rail lines reached into a good portion of Southeastern Kentucky from 1910-1920, especially with the increased demand for coal occasioned by the war effort during World War I. By 1915 Pike and Letcher counties became the state's top two producers. Statistics for 1920 indicated that Eastern Kentucky's seven top producers were in order, Pike, Harlan, Letcher, Perry, Bell, Floyd and Johnson. Clearly, old producers such as Lawrence, Boyd, and Carter counties, whose geographical situations had been more favorable, were being shoved out of the limelight, once the iron horse reached the rich coalfields that had formerly been too isolated to be important producers. This was an old pattern that had been repeated over and over in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and elsewhere. Indeed one can determine the year the railroad reached a county in many instances by looking for the year in which coal production jumped fourfold or more. The expense of running a rail line to an undeveloped field may be a contributory cause leading to the influx of big money and out-of-state money into these coal fields.

With the exception of a sharp, short recession that followed on the heels of the armistice that ended World War I, the coal business boomed until the disastrous flooding of mid-1927 in Eastern Kentucky. When the 1930 Census was taken, a number of Eastern Kentucky coal-related towns joined what the Atlas of Kentucky calls the Urban Hierarchy—Paintsville, Van Lear, Prestonsburg, Wayland, Pikeville, Elkhorn City, Hazard, Jenkins, and Harlan. Not only was the population increasing, but in some of the faster growing coal counties, there was a large influx of foreign-born miners—Hungarians, Italians, and other ethnic groups. It is believed that this population peaked before the census of 1930 was taken. Where they went to is one of Appalachian history's many mysteries, though it would be logical to assume that they left for urban centers where some of their compatriots lived.

In many cases the increased population was housed in company housing that varied from shoddy to excellent. As I went through the old photographs of company housing, I was struck by the changes over time. Reflecting the ready availability of wood in the early days, the earliest such towns, commissaries, tipples, etc. appear to be constructed of heavy timbers. Some of the structures of the '20's seem to reflect the popular bungalow style of the time.

And Wheelwright does not at all resemble the popular image of what company towns were supposed to look like. Living in 1980, it is easy to forget that for rural America, electricity for the average farm family came in the 1930s or later. The company house often had electricity, even if it be a single bare bulb. It can be argued that Kentucky Utilities would today be a minor company in the state were it not for their decision to produce electricity for the coal mines of Southeastern Kentucky. The coal operators needed the miners and thus the company town. Gary Cox, professor of geography at Morehead State University, has argued that the modern-day equivalent of the company town is the trailer and the company parking lot.

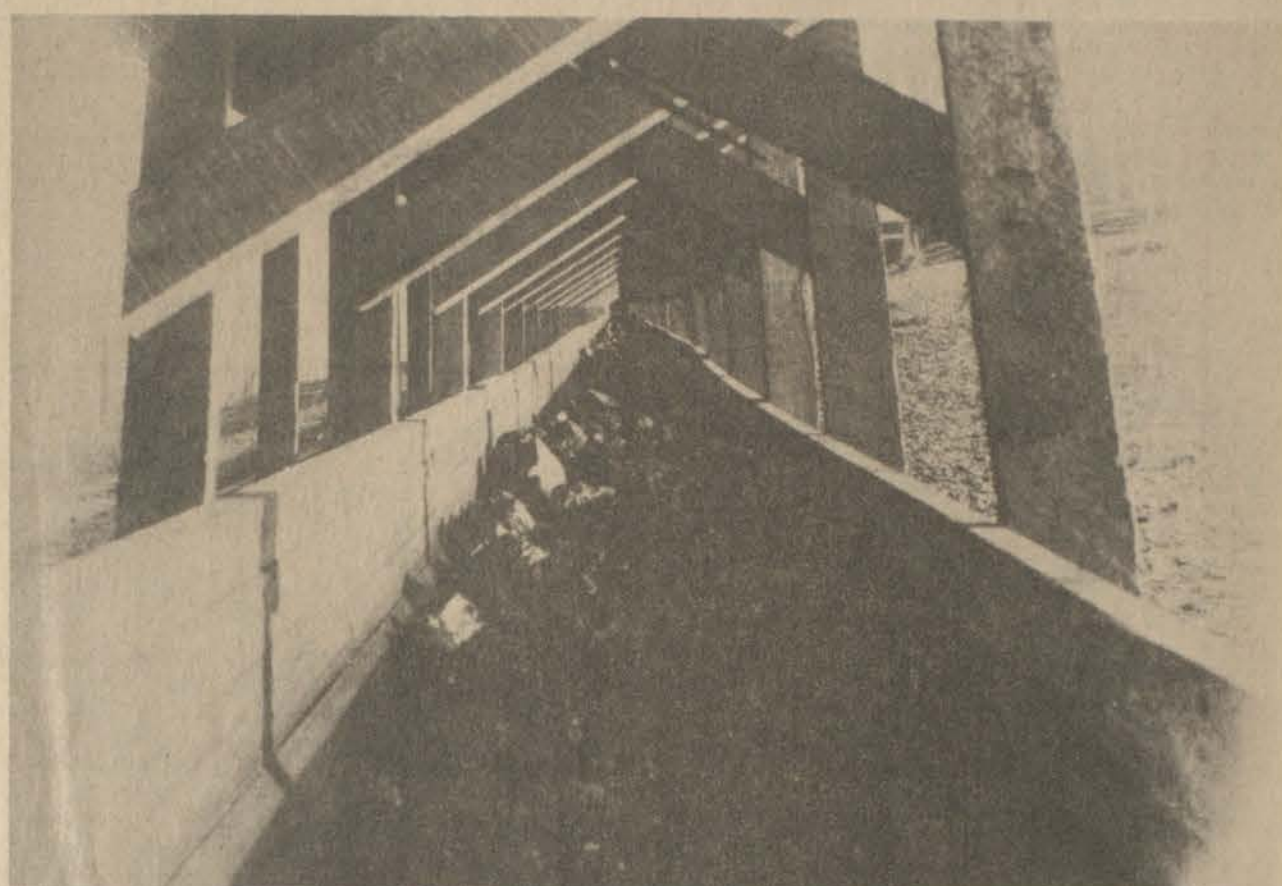

KENTUCKY YESTERDAYS covers a twenty-three county area and not all of the counties contain coal. In an attempt to individualize these articles, to bring it down to the local level, there follows a listing of coal mines extracted from Gordon Dodrill's book, "20,000 Coal Company Stores." Dodrill, who is interested in scrip, coal tokens, flickers, whatever you wish to call company coinage used in lieu of United States currency on pay day, went through coalfield directories from the first decade of the Twentieth Century down to 1958 and carded every company that was listed to have a company store. Obviously, not all of the company stores used scrip. Dodrill's volume is not only useful to the growing number of individuals who are collecting such tokens that now have a minimal value of 50 cents each, but can be used to provide a skeleton upon which to hang the history of the coal industry in your county. Most of the major mines should be here. The dates of the beginning or closing of a mine may reflect market conditions in this boom and bust industry: the slump from 1927 through the 1930's, the World War II and after boom, the mechanization of the '50's that not only closed mines but sent a younger generation to northern cities in search of work.

I am confident that many readers have the type of knowledge that out-of-county residents lack concerning coal tokens and the mines they represent. In some cases the mine may even be in another county, the organization merely having its headquarters in your county. Local history is your history and there lies much of its fascination.

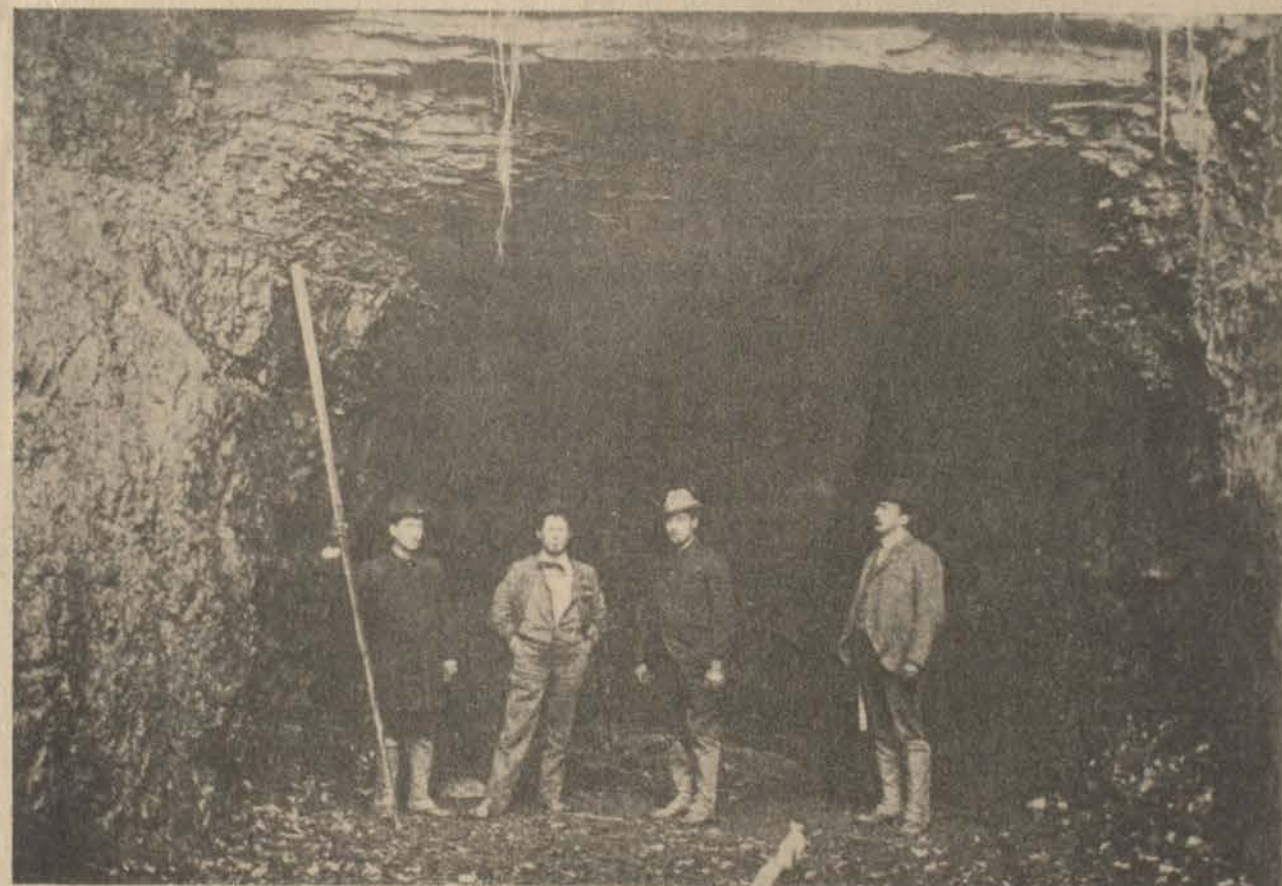

The coming of men and mules often preceded the railroad track. Once the trains rolled, production rose dramatically. This Pike county view is courtesy of the Alice Lloyd Photographic Archives.

The abundance of lumber is obvious not only in the style of housing in coal camps, but also in the form coal chutes took as evidenced in this 1914 Eastern Ky. photo.

Byron, it's been a year ago today, Since I've seen your smiling face.

McDowell Stars Win Championship

The McDowell Stars won the double elimination tournament held at Allen Park, June 27. The Stars advanced to the finals by defeating the Martin Pirates, the East McDowell Orioles, and the Martin Reds. In each of these games the Stars had good hitting and sound pitching by Brian Hall, the winning pitcher in each of the four games that his team won.

McDowell entered the finals against Garrett with no losses and Garrett had one. In the first game, Garrett won, 13-3. The following night the Stars battled Garrett again in one of the best played and most exciting games of the tournament. Although he had pitched three other games, Brian Hall limited Garrett to one run. In the second inning Keith Moore homered and Jerry Elliott doubled and later was walked home with what proved to be the winning run. From that point on the Stars played excellent defense. Brad Tackett, Jerry Kidd, and Mark Case all made excellent catches in the outfield. The infielders, Julian Slone at first, Darrell Goble at shortstop, Stan Stegall at second and Jerry Elliott at first, tightened up on defense and played errorless baseball during the game. The Stars went on to a 2-1 victory over Garrett.

Carl Ray Tuttle, Wade Tackett, and Eddie Patton, who spent many hours with the team were delighted with the championship. After the game the team went to Burger Queen in Martin for their victory celebration. Mr. and Mrs. Carson Akers, who have two players, Kim and Derrick, on the team, treated the boys and girls to a post-game meal.

The boys and girls will be treated to a picnic at Jenny Wiley State Park on July 12. At that time trophies and awards will be presented to individual players.

State Police Watch For Boating Perils

Boating and water-related deaths are up 35 percent this year and the Kentucky State Police intends to do something about it.

Doug Shoulders, director of the Water Safety Section, says that over the Fourth of July weekend—probably the busiest weekend on Kentucky's lakes and rivers—all the officers in the section will be out working long hours.

Last year, three persons died in Fourth of July boating accidents.

About half of the accidents are alcohol-related, Shoulders said. "In many instances, the operator has had enough to impair his ability to handle the boat," he said. For that reason, the officers will concentrate on indications that an operator has been drinking and on watching for violations of boating regulations.

"If boaters would use plain common sense, we could eliminate 75 to 80 percent of the fatalities," he said. "I urge people to follow the rules of the water and watch out for the other guy."

Accidents related to water skiing and falling out of the boat account for many of the fatalities. Shoulders advises water skiers that there should be two people in the tow boat—one to operate the boat and the second to watch the skier. Skiers must wear approved flotation gear.

Shoulders also advises boaters not to overload the boat, to see that everyone sits on seats and not on the seatbacks, bow or gunnels, and to make sure that non-swimmers and children are wearing life jackets. "It's a good idea for everyone in the boat to have life jackets, especially in adverse weather," he added.

And if an accident should occur, stay with the boat, it will float, providing support for people. While the temptation to swim to shore is strong, distances over the water can be deceiving. It's better to stick with the boat until help comes.

While I'm In A Baseball Mood...

By KENNY RICE
Over the winter, Lowell Conley added Channel 17 from Atlanta to our cable at Eastern. Since I came home from college in May, I think I have seen about 70 percent of the Atlanta Braves' games. With national TV coverage on Saturdays and Mondays, and with the Reds' games on the tube from time to time, I can watch a baseball game just about every night. Recently there were 12 games within a 5-day span. I have been to Riverfront Stadium twice this season to watch two doubleheaders and I have traveled to Paintsville to watch the Yankees in action. Right now I'm in a baseball mood.

had seven hitters over .300 this season. Lanny Gibson led the team with a .685 average, followed by Arnold Prater (.541), Bobby Shepherd (.516), Paul Rice (.500), Todd Duff (.410), Kevin Moore (.400) and Pat Banks (.308). Paul Rice led the club in homers with 11 and Gibson followed with nine. Other members of the team are Jerry Allen, Chris Prater, Rondell Martin, Billy Owens, John Gibson and Bill Hackworth.

Duff will be coaching the Beaver Creek All Stars in the district Little League Tournament at Salyersville. The All Stars are chosen from the eight teams in the league and are in the 11-12-year-old age group. This season's All Star team is comprised of Lanny Gibson, Paul Rice, Bobby Shepherd, Arnold Prater, Kip Kidd, Gary Castle, Ken Hamilton, Gary Kilburn, Stanley Conn, Kelly Nichols, Kenny Meade, Billy Stumbo, Brian Hall and Gary McCoy. Jerry Allen and Brad Hall are alternates.

The Beaver Creek Stars play Wheelwright at 6 p.m. on July 14 at Salyersville. The winner plays Allen. In the other bracket, Paintsville plays Martin County and Prestonsburg plays Magoffin County. The winner of the district moves on to the regional at Paintsville.

COME ON HIGH SCHOOL BASEBALL

After Hazard High's runner-up finish to Lexington Tates Creek in the state high school baseball tournament this season, and after Paintsville's consecutive trips to the final four in the state tournament in 1978 and '79, it looks as if baseball is the only open (that is, not set up in classes) team sport where a mountain high school has a legitimate shot at winning a state title or coming reasonably close.

Hazard and Paintsville should serve as inspirations to other mountain high school baseball programs, especially here in Floyd county. It is time to place more emphasis on baseball in our high schools rather than considering it just a sport to fill the void between the end of the basketball season and the end of the school semester.

Two phases of the game that Floyd county high schools need to improve in are winter training programs and the scheduling of games. These can be accomplished with a little effort.

Most baseball players don't seriously think about the sport until the week practice starts, which is usually a few days before the first game of the season. Paintsville High sends their team to Florida each March to prepare for the upcoming season. The fact that Paintsville High stresses winter and early spring training programs is the major reason they are the cream of 15th Region baseball. This is not to say every county school should send their team to Florida, but all the county gyms have enough room for winter training programs of calisthenics and eye-hand drills for batting—and, of course, there is plenty of room for throwing. A lot of the fundamentals—hitting the cutoff man, etc.—can be discussed and taught indoors and will make it that much easier when the team begins outdoor practice.

A team is going to have a hard time winning the region with only 12 or 14 games under its belt. Why not schedule games every day of the week with a doubleheader or two thrown in? On weekends, play Saturday doubleheaders and take off Sunday to rest up for another full week. Getting teams on the schedule from the Lexington area and the Ashland-Morehead area would be good competition and a nice road trip for the team.

If the county teams could play around 15 home games and try to create interest in baseball, I think baseball could become a money-maker for the schools.

No one person is to blame for the lack of baseball interest in the county high schools and no one person can rectify the situation. It takes a group effort on the part of the school administrators and the communities in the county.

The Little League and Babe Ruth programs are improving and, if high school baseball gets on the ball in Floyd county, sometime in this decade, a Floyd county school might be in the final four of the state tournament.

First of New Wheelwright Businesses Opens

Among the first customers at the T. & C. Grocery, at Wheelwright, on its opening day recently were Arlene and Larry Smith and family. At the cash register is Zalie Combs who, with her husband, James Combs, of Kite, and Earl and Thelma Thornsby, of Topmost, have opened the supermarket in a building which housed a dry-cleaning store in the days of the "old" Wheelwright.

The two couples bought the building from the Kentucky Housing Corporation last year, the first commercial sale under the government-funded program to rehabilitate the town.

New CATV Project Launched Here

C. J. Fuller, Lexington consulting engineers, as sub-contractor for Central Associated Engineers, Versailles, began construction mapping Monday for a 40-channel CATV system by Tel-Com, Inc., of Harold.

This marks the beginning of outside plant route selection and makes ready for construction of a 70-mile segment of the undertaking. Tel-Com plans to let a construction contract on this portion by October 1, 1980.

The entire project consists of some 356 miles of CATV facilities in Pike and Floyd counties, and Mingo county, West Virginia.

Another part of the planned construction is a master head end at Martin. The central location receives and processes TV signals and distributes them via microwave to several other locations in the two-county area and Knott county.

The project is the first of its kind in the United States and is sponsored by the Rural Electrification Administration (REA). The entire program should be completed within two years.

Pike Tennis Tourney Set July 30-Aug. 3

The Pikeville College Alumni Association is sponsoring the Kenneth Huffman Memorial Scholarship Tennis Tournament July 30 through August 3. The tournament will be held at Pikeville College on the Huffman tennis courts next to the college gym on Bank Street in Pikeville.

The events will include men and women's singles, men and women's doubles, and mixed doubles. Each event entered will be $3 donation plus a can of tennis balls. United States Tennis Association rules will be observed during the tournament. There will be trophies given to the first and second place players in each event. Entry deadline will be 6 p.m., Sunday, July 27. Entry forms may be obtained from area merchants or at Pikeville College.

Perry Cline, president of the alumni association, explained that the purpose of the tournament is to encourage area players to compete and to raise money for the scholarship fund established in 1973 in memory of Kenneth Huffman.

"The alumni association is supporting the Huffman scholarship fund because we are interested in increasing opportunities for young people to get a college education. We hope to raise money for the fund and to award some scholarships to eligible winners of the tournament to attend Pikeville College. It is a great opportunity. I hope that the community and alumni will really come out and support this event. Any gifts to the scholarship fund are tax deductible," says Cline.

Before his death in 1973, Kenneth Huffman, who had played varsity tennis at Pikeville College while a student, was instrumental in organizing and promoting area tennis competition. Huffman was especially interested in encouraging young players to compete, and coached a number of players who were just learning the sport.

Entry forms may be obtained at Pikeville College by contacting Chloeteel Woolfer at 432-9394.

McCauley Is Winner In Bluegrass 10,000

Joseph L. (Joe) McCauley, of Prestonsburg, executive director of Big Sandy ADD, runs more than an area development district.

He runs, literally races, and sometimes for long distances—as in the Bluegrass 10,000 at Lexington, July 4. That's 6.2 miles, and he won his age division, 60 and over, in 49 minutes, 18 seconds, ending the 10,000 meters 834th among the 1647 who competed. Of the 2103 who began the marathon, 456 failed to finish.

During the last two years Mr. McCauley has run in nine events and has won his age division in six. Other area runners who participated in the Bluegrass 10,000 included Libby Ratcliff and John Mann, of Prestonsburg; Denny Dorton, Rick Roberts, John Wells, III, and Bill Averell, all of Paintsville.

Archeologists have discovered that the Greeks, not the Romans, were the first to construct the arch.

July, Month of Opulence

By NEVYLE SHACKELFORD
 UK College of Agriculture
 July, according to the "old people," is the month "when a body can again begin to live like they ought to."
 Corn is laid by and gardens are full of succulent green beans just waiting to be picked and cooked with a piece of lard for seasoning. There are tomatoes and cucumbers to be sliced and roasting ears to be boiled, sprinkled with salt, and spread with fresh-churned cow butter. There are all these things and more in the garden and enough leisure time at last to cook and eat them without the pressures of the corn and hayfield.

But July is much more than just a season of fresh vegetables and good food. It is a state of mind and a time of memory—a time of hot days and warm nights often fraught with violent thunderstorms. It is the cool splash of flowing water and the joyous shouts of carefree country boys skinny-dipping in secluded swimming holes.

The high-pitched song of the jarfly is also a part of July along with purple martins darting through the air, teaching their youngsters how to fly and catch insects on the wing. Mourning doves slice through the skies on whistling wings and further enchant the softness of the twilight with their sweet sad notes of midsummers gone by. Rain crows warn of approaching storms and Junebugs whiz around the tassels of corn, wheat, ripens in golden waves across the landscape and gladiolus put color in the flower bed.

Speaking of the jarfly, entomologists call it cicada. It is also known as the harvest fly. It sings in blackberry time and into September. It lives on sap, but mostly it just makes noise. The only other insect that can compete with the jarfly when it comes to making noise is the katydid which will be along presently to forecast the date of the first frost of autumn. The jarfly sings of a day; katydids at night and it has been said that the jarfly's mission in life is to warn of the katydid's coming. Anyway, the jarfly is a nostalgic thing of July.

Among other things common in July are June apples. There are red Junes and striped Junes, each good to eat raw or to fry and eat with bacon and eggs.

The name implies that June apples ripen in July, but this is not to say they are not eaten in June. Country boys risking tummyache start in on June apples long before the sun has started changing the acid to sugar and touching up the rind with stripes of red. June apples have a tang and a flavor that once tasted in July can never be forgotten.

For all its heat and humidity, gloomy rain crows and crashing thunderstorms, July is a wonderful, glorious month and lift a phrase from Proverbs and change it just a little, "He who tills his land will (in July) have plenty of bread, but he who follows worthless pursuits will have plenty of poverty."

She Makes Cooking Child's Play

By Catherine Winters

Ask most people, "What's cooking?" and you just may hear a bland description of the latest TV dinner. Ask Julia Child, however, and she's bound to rattle off a list of such selectable dishes as rock cornish hens, lobster souffle, wine poached pears in chocolate cups and celery remoulade.

Whether you crave the varied cuisine of the Mediterranean or the Orient or simply yearn for plain old American apple pie, Ms. Child has a dish to suit your tastebuds—and your patience. Probably the most popular, and certainly the most eccentric and even-tempered chef around, Ms. Child is testament to the fact that it may not be so distasteful to be tied in apron strings. Time spent in the kitchen need not be drudgery or nerve-racking; it can turn out to be quite enjoyable.

Born Julia McWilliams, in Pasadena, California, Ms. Child graduated from Smith College in 1934 and joined the O.S.S. during World War II.

In Ceylon, while on her first overseas assignment, she met the man who was to become her husband, Paul Child. From Ceylon, they traveled to China and, after the war, they returned to the States and were married. Later, Mr. Child joined the State Department and served six years in the Paris Embassy as Exhibits Officer for the U.S. Information Agency.

During this time, Ms. Child—not overly fond of cooking but eager to please her husband's palate—enrolled in cooking school. After attending classes for six months, she studied privately with such noted chefs as Max Bugnard, Claude Thilmond and Pierre Mangelatte. Her acquaintance with another chef, Simone Beck, led to her membership with Le Cercle des Gourmets, a French women's gastronomical society. Later, they joined forces with a third woman, Louise Bertholle, and the three chefs opened their own cooking school, L'Ecole des Trois Gourmandes. The trio went on to collaborate on the book, Mastering the Art of French Cooking, which was published in 1961.

That same year, Mr. Child retired from the State Department and the couple settled in Cambridge, Massachusetts. In conjunction with the release of her book, Ms. Child appeared on WGBH, Boston's public television station. During the course of her interview, she spiced up her delivery by beating a few egg whites in a copper bowl, using her now famous balloon whip. Obviously she did something right: In the summer of 1962, she was invited back and did three shows. On February 11, 1963, her show, The French Chef, went on the air and has been on ever since.

A familiar face to her many television fans, Ms. Child is also admired internationally by fellow chefs. The winner of two prestigious television awards—the Emmy and the George Foster Peabody Award—Ms. Child also has the Ordre de Merite Agricole, awarded by the French government. Throughout all this, she has managed to publish The French Chef Cookbook, and Mastering the Art of French Cooking, Volume II (containing the only definitive treatment of French bread ever published in this country).

Her most recent book, Julia Child and More Company, published by Alfred A. Knopf, accompanies her thirteen program television series of the same name and contains all of the recipes shown on the program and then some—complimented by descriptive color photographs and down-to-earth text sure to lure even the most reluctant cook into the kitchen.

With her knack for making the difficult look as easy as one-two-three, Ms. Child's new book gives cooks the lowdown on preparing such mouth-watering dishes as butterflied pork, Gateau Mont-Saint-Michel (a mound of crepes layered with apples and burnt-almond cream), leek and rabbit pie complete with a buttermilk biscuit crust, cassoulet (the famous French casserole consisting of beans baked with sausage, goose, braised lamb, garlic and herbs) and Bombe aux Trois Chocolats (also known as a "triple threat chocolate cake," it consists of chocolate mousse molded inside a fudge cake, topped with chocolate sauce). In addition, Ms. Child is brimming over with tips on cooking for two or a crowd, including budgeting your workload over several days.

In Ms. Child's capable hands, even the most complicated dish becomes nothing more than child's play: Not bad for a woman who, once upon a time, wasn't all that crazy about cooking!

Pike Seminar Set August 7th On Post-Mine Land Use

A one-day seminar on the problems and practices of post-mining land uses, sponsored by CITAC, IMMR, and Pikeville College, will be held at Pikeville College, August 7.

The morning session, "The Status of Litigations," is designed to bring all concerned people up to date on legislation affecting post-mining lands and the permitting procedure. Two experts in the legal field, Dr. James P. Ramsey and Dr. John Leathers, will discuss past decisions and pending cases. Chris Barton, who has worked on permit review and the development of regulations, will discuss these subjects in relation to post-mining land uses.

The afternoon session will focus on one of the 11 state-accepted post-mining land uses, the Wildlife Option. This option has rarely been used since its acceptability was established by the state of Kentucky. Dr. Wayne Rosso supervised the first surface mining project to carry out a wildlife option, from the planning and permitting stages through implementation and bond release. He will discuss this project in detail and offer advice on the subject. Dr. Pierre Allaire will present the mechanics of planning and implementing the physical layout of the land, as well as the types of vegetation recommended and the wildlife species available. This will be followed by a discussion and question and answer session.

C.E.U. credits will be awarded for the seminar.

Literature and music were the most important subjects taught in ancient Greek schools.

Tracking Down The Silent Killer

By Catherine Winters

High blood pressure—normally dubbed "the silent killer"—afflicts an estimated 35 million adults in America today—one out of every six persons. An additional 25 million individuals are borderline cases.

The complications that can occur as a result of the disease—coronary, kidney diseases and stroke—have made hypertension the nation's number one killer, taking one and a half million lives annually. Those who battle the disease do so to the tune of some $20 billion annually in lost wages and medical bills. One and a half million people are crippled or disabled by the disease.

Everyone has blood pressure—the force exerted by blood flowing against the walls of arteries or blood vessels as it travels from the heart to the various parts of the body and back again. The pumping action of the heart creates the force. Usually blood circulates so quickly through the body that the entire journey takes less than a minute.

When your heart beats, your blood pressure increases. When your heart takes a well-deserved rest between beats, your pressure decreases.

Your blood pressure is measured in terms of "upper" or systolic pressure—which occurs during your heart's contractions—and "lower" or diastolic pressure, which occurs when your heart rests between beats. These names stem from the two parts of the heart cycle known as the systole and the diastole.

Blood pressure varies from individual to individual and, in the same person, can change during the course of a day as he or she sleeps, exercises, becomes angry or excited. A so-called "normal" blood pressure is 120/80. But, an occasionally higher reading is nothing to get panic-stricken about. It's when your pressure shoots to 140/90 or higher that you need medical attention.

Primary and Secondary Hypertension

About ninety percent of those people suffering from high blood pressure have what is called "primary" or essential hypertension. Those with this affliction have a heart that pumps a too generous supply of blood; or, they may have a normal heart output but excessive narrowing of the small arteries—arterioles—which slows down the flow of blood.

"Secondary" hypertension can be related to hardening of the arteries and kidney disease, to name a few. Severe hypertension occurs when pressure readings go as high as 200/115. In accelerating hypertension, the readings may skyrocket to 240/140-150. If treated, however, a person afflicted with the latter has a better than fifty percent chance of living for 10 or more years after it has been brought under control.

Most of the time, hypertension is painless, producing few discernible symptoms. Occasionally, a recurring headache, a pain in the back of the head or the upper part of the neck—all happening in the early morning when blood pressure is low—may be telltale signs. People with more severe forms of hypertension have reported dizziness, shortness of breath, excessive flushing of the face, fatigue or insomnia, nosebleeds, frequent urination and cramps in the legs and feet during the night.

Don't assume, however, that because you have not experienced any of these symptoms that you are free of the disease. Often, the symptoms of hypertension manifest themselves only after the disease has harmed other bodily organs—the kidneys or the heart, for instance—over a period of five, ten or twenty years. In fact, prolonged hypertension can cause angina pectoris—which comes about as a result of an inadequate supply of oxygen to the heart—and can cause heart attack.

Who Can Get Hypertension?

Anyone can develop high blood pressure. Too much stress in everyday life can bring it on, as can old age. In fact, blood pressure levels increase as we grow older. Hypertension in women can develop during pregnancy. Also, about seven percent of those women using oral contraceptives may develop the disease within six months of starting the Pill. Generally, it subsides within six months after stopping the Pill. Here is a breakdown of other possible causes:

- Heredity. If both parents have essential hypertension, fifty percent of their offspring will develop it. If only one parent has it, one-fourth of the children will come down with it.

- Blacks are much more prone to the affliction. In fact, high blood pressure is the major disease hitting the black population. One survey reveals that 21.1 percent of urban blacks, compared with 13.5 percent of urban whites, experience hypertension.

- Deaths from hypertension among young adult and middle-aged blacks are three to twelve times greater than deaths among whites in the same age brackets. Thirty percent of adult blacks, compared with 15 to 20 percent of white adults, develop high blood pressure.

- Across the board, men are more susceptible to hypertension than are women. And, surprising as it may seem, even children can be victims of the disease.

- Stress. Stress caused by fear, insecurity, frustration, anger, and pressures on the job ups your blood pressure. Even the process of having your blood pressure taken by your doctor can create enough stress to raise your pressure reading. About ten percent of the nation's population with supposedly normal blood pressure readings develop occasional hypertension, during times of emotional or physical stress or physical exertion. About one-fourth of those individuals with this tendency eventually do develop essential hypertension.

- Salt. When eaten in large quantities, salt can contribute to hypertension. Northern Japanese (who consume two to three times more salt than do Americans) are extremely susceptible to the disease, suffering strokes at a very early age as a result. Because salt increases fluid retention, it can cause arterioles to thicken and narrow, resulting in increased pressure. If your doctor suspects that salt is the culprit, he or she may advise you to curb your sodium intake. The most common form of sodium is everyday table salt. Many commercially sold foods are already rich in sodium, complements of food manufacturers.

- Obesity. The heart of an overweight individual must pump blood through a much larger system of blood vessels than does the heart of a thinner person. Obesity places an added burden on your heart since blood volume increases with body weight and the body's fat reserves must be supplied with blood. Interestingly, half of all hypertensive children are fat. Often, weight loss, along with a reduced salt intake can help lower blood pressure.

- Smoking. Nicotine has been known to contribute to a raised blood pressure so, frequently, cigarettes are the villains.

Other causes include arteriosclerosis, excess pumping of the heart brought about by an overactive thyroid gland or high fever, and kidney damage.

Check Up Before It Sneaks Up

To be on the safe side, you should have your blood pressure checked regularly by your doctor. Home or coin-operated machines can give you a rough estimate of your pressure but such methods may not be completely dependable.

To test your blood pressure, your doctor will use a machine called a sphygmomanometer, which contains a glass tube of mercury, like a thermometer, for purposes of recording the pressure. The doctor places an inflatable cuff around your upper arm and squeezes a rubber bulb attached to the machine. This puffs air into the cuff and drives the column of mercury up the gauge while compressing a large artery in your arm, temporarily cutting off the flow of blood.

As the doctor gradually lets air out of the cuff, the mercury in the tube slowly drops. While this is happening, your physician will place a stethoscope on your arm and listen.

When the air pressure in the cuff is a bit lower than the pressure in your arm, the blood will again begin to flow through the artery with each beat of your heart. This causes a thudding sound which your doctor hears through the stethoscope and, at this point, systolic pressure is noted. Then, your doctor releases air from the cuff until he can no longer hear the thud and records the reading on the gauge when he last heard the sound. This is known as diastolic pressure.

Depending upon the seriousness of your affliction, your doctor may recommend one of a number of different medications and treatments. Often, reducing salt intake and losing those excess pounds may do the trick. If your doctor suspects oral contraceptives, stopping the Pill may be necessary. Perhaps a daily regimen of moderate physical activity may be called for.

It may well be that your physician will prescribe some sort of medication to treat your hypertension. The potency of most drugs ranges from mild to strong. Some can be costly. Some drugs produce side effects such as rashes, dizziness, potassium loss and nasal congestion. And, some people have reported feelings of fatigue when they first start taking their medication, but this feeling usually disappears with one to two weeks. But, taken faithfully, such medicines can help reduce your blood pressure and enable you to live a normal and healthy life.

Mike Little Gas Wins Rate Increase

The state Energy Regulatory Commission has approved a natural gas rate increase for the Mike Little Gas Co., of Melvin.

The rate hike will not become effective until the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission approves a rate increase request from the company's wholesale supplier, the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Co. That request is now before the FERC.

When the increase starts, customers will pay $2.71 per 1,000 cubic feet of gas for the first 2,000 cu. ft. A rate of $2.51 per 1,000 cu. ft. will be charged for the next 28,000 cu. ft. and $2.46 per 1,000 cu. ft. will be charged for amounts over 30,000. The increase is approximately 2 cents per 1,000 cu. ft.

The minimum monthly bill will be increased from $4.20 to $4.30.

Coal Permit Group Visits E. Kentucky

Just six days after officially taking over as the head of the permits division of the state Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, Jim Baker was on the road to Eastern Kentucky.

"We're trying to make ourselves more accessible to the coal industry," Baker said.

"It was educational," he explained. "It's something that we need to do more often."

The party toured a coal preparation plant and four mines owned by the Falcon Coal Co. "The trip gave us a chance to see all the aspects of mountain top removal mining," Baker said.

"This let our reviewers get out and take a look at some of the things that the industry has come up with. It's hard for them to get out often, having anywhere from 8 to 16 permit applications to work on at any given time, but it gave them a chance to see on-site some of the things which might come up in applications," Baker said.

Beginning with a slide presentation by Falcon, the field trip included tours of post-mining areas used as hayfields and vineyards, permanent water impoundments and haul roads.

The group saw, and discussed with engineers, a 25-million cubic yard hollow-fill. "One of the areas that we review is hollow-fills, so this was very helpful for us," Baker explained.

Feedback from staff members on the field trip will help division officials decide about other trips to mining sites. "We're going to ask if they felt it was a productive trip. We may institute individual trips to sites to help reviewers familiarize themselves with new techniques and problems. These fieldtrips will help us understand the problems faced by the coal industry," Baker said.

A trip to surface mining sites in Western Kentucky may come as early as July, according to division officials.

"Since our permit reviewers work on a statewide basis, they need to be able to see techniques and conditions found in the two different coal mining areas of the state," Baker said.

Kentucky issued 2,039 surface mining permits in 1979. The total number issued for 1980 is expected by division officials to be even larger.

The most popular variety of garnet is the ruby-red pyrope mined in Bohemia, South Africa and Arizona. It is sold as the Cape ruby and Arizona ruby.

Molly, Too, Was a Coal Miner's Daughter

Molly, too, was a coal miner's daughter. She was born at McVeigh, Pike county, and grew up listening to country music that was as much a part of life as eating breakfast, dinner and supper.

Molly O'Day sang "Don't Sell Daddy Any More Whiskey," and across the state people who had their radios tuned to Renfro Valley could visualize young Molly or other youngsters trying to help Daddy home.

When she sang "Six More Miles to the Graveyard" these same devoted followers saw the sad miles go by, the coffin quite likely making a last trip in a farm wagon, dozens of relatives and friends behind.

When she wasn't singing, Molly was picking a five-string banjo, a little like her daddy taught her to play but more like Molly taught herself.

In Pike county where she was born she will be remembered as Laverne Williamson. When she first started making it big in country music, she was Dixie Lee, but as Molly O'Day she became unforgettable.

Molly was 17 when she went to Bluefield, W. Va., not far from her home, to try for a job. Lynn Davis at the radio station heard her sing, liked her voice, like her good looks and big smile—and a short time later married her.

Molly and her husband began throughout the South on radio and in personal appearances. The late Hank Williams appeared with them. Molly liked his songs and started recording some of them. "Tramp on the Street" was one of the songs Hank sang that Molly felt she had to record.

Molly's husband, always on the lookout for talent, told young Williams to head for Nashville and try his luck with a song publishing company. He, too, made it big.

Named Planning Director At Central Baptist Hospital

Miss Sharon Stumbo has been named director of planning at Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington. For the past four years, she has been a health planner with the Bluegrass Health Council of the East Kentucky Health Systems Agency. She is a graduate of Berea College, and also received a master of arts degree from Western Kentucky University.

Miss Stumbo is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stumbo, former residents of this county.

While World War II was going on, Molly and Lynn were with Renfro Valley. But as busy as those days with the barn dance were they were not as wearisome as most of the 1940's when they traveled from town to town, eating a sandwich where they could, singing their way into the hearts of communities and radioland.

Molly, a cheerful, unassuming individual, knew her style and sang it as melodramatic and emotional as did Hank Williams. She termed herself a "straight from the heart" singer and melted her audiences to tears.

Molly and Lynn had always included church music in their programs, but later in their career sang more and more gospel.

When she sang "Going Down the Valley, One by One," she made her radio audience stop and consider their sinful ways. When she sang "Maple on the Hill" or "No Love Letters Today," they saw mental pictures of the beautiful, sweet Mollys the world over tortured by love.

She always felt a need to get across to her audience and did this by making her singing an emotional experience. All the same, she was not without her competitive spirit and once entered a banjo-picking contest with an aspiring musician, Earl Scruggs. She won, and captivated her London, Ky. audience.

During the '40's Molly knew and performed with the top country-western music stars and helped many a younger performer on the way, remembering that she herself started at age 15.

She is the "Unforgettable Molly O'Day" who gained national fame, and she was a coal miner's daughter from Pike county.

QUESTION:

"What's the point of 'estimating' our natural gas bills every other month?"

ANSWER:

"By doing that, Columbia's customers save over $4 million a year."

Your monthly "gas bill" includes more than the cost of natural gas. It covers many services, including what it costs for Columbia meter readers to make their rounds.

So to hold down the meter reading costs, we started a number of years ago to read your meter every other month. In alternate months, you get a calculated bill, prepared by computer to be within 2% of actual costs. Any difference is evened out the next month with the regular meter reading.

If you'd prefer an alternative to estimated bills, Columbia has two options to suggest. Our Budget Plan evens out your bills so you pay the same amount every month. Or you can mark and mail special meter reading postcards, available at the Columbia Gas office.

Estimated bills are one way Columbia has found to hold down our service costs—in this instance, by $4 million a year—and keep your total natural gas bill as low as possible.

For conservation tips which can also contribute to savings on your energy costs, ask your Columbia Gas office for a copy of our free booklet, "The Everyday Energy Saver's Guide."

COLUMBIA GAS
Still your best energy value.
And we want to keep it that way.

ENERGY-SAVER SWITCHES HELP
An increasing concern for energy use has prompted manufacturers to include energy-saving features on their appliances. For example, when shopping for a refrigerator you may see a power saver or energy saver switch on them.

These switches save energy on the operation of the refrigerator by turning on and off the heaters in the outside walls of the refrigerator.

During normal operation of a refrigerator, the exterior walls are cooler than normal room temperature. This causes moisture from condensation to form on the exterior surfaces of the refrigerator cabinet—this is the same thing that happens on the outside of a cold glass of iced tea. The heaters warm the walls to prevent condensation.

These heaters are commonly found on all refrigerators, but until the last few years, they ran continuously. These switches act to reduce energy by turning them off when they're not needed.

Humidity in the kitchen is an important factor in knowing when to turn the switch to the "off" position. When the humidity is high, as in summer, the condensation problem is severe, and the heaters are needed. At other times, when the humidity is low, condensation is less likely to occur, and the wall heaters are not needed. They then can be turned off to save energy.

Prolonged moisture condensation on the cabinet walls can deteriorate the finish. And if enough condensation occurs, water can drip onto adjacent cupboards and on the floor, causing damage, such as wood rot and mildew.

The off setting may be marked as "off" or "dry" or "normal," depending on the refrigerator. If your home is air-conditioned or well ventilated in summer, you may not need to turn the wall heaters on at all. But if moisture forms on the walls of the refrigerator, turn the switch to the "on" or "humid" setting for summer. When fall comes, try turning the switch off. You probably will not need the wall heaters during the fall, winter or spring.

It is recommended that you wax or polish the exterior cabinet several times a year with a product suitable for appliances. This helps protect the cabinet from small amounts of moisture and allows you to leave the power or energy saver switch at off for most of the time.

Wasps may be divided into two groups, solitary and social insects such as the hornet and the yellow jacket.
