

Fire Levels B. & B. Engineers Building

Cause of the fire which early Saturday morning destroyed the Bull Creek office and maintenance structure of B. & B. Engineers had not been determined as of Monday, according to Allen Fire Chief Ruben Stephens.

Stephens said by the time the Allen firefighters arrived at the scene of the blaze shortly after receiving a call at 5:30 a.m., Saturday, "the fire had been burning for two or three hours" and there was no chance of saving the 50 x 70-ft. metal structure. Stephens said the squad was able to help save a large tandem truck by spraying from their pumper in the area of the truck while a local resident moved the vehicle to a safe distance from the blaze.

The fire completely levelled the building which contained three offices and a large work area relating to the company's pipeline operations, and destroyed a Chevrolet Blazer as well as a Ford four-wheel-drive truck.

Stephens said the fire may have started in the structure's work area which contained several pieces of electric-powered equipment as well as cleaning fluids and other flammable liquids.

Group Formed Against Threat Of Stamps Loss

A small group of civic and governmental leaders has been meeting privately since May to discuss the impact of the loss of food stamp allocations for Floyd County, should that occur. Led by County Judge Executive Bill Wells, and with the assistance of Ronald Wright and Frank Salyers, of the Bureau for Social Services, the group has explored possible ways that the community can respond to such a crisis.

Although Congress recently averted a cutoff of food stamp allocations, many experts believe that the emergency allocation voted may not be sufficient to cover the costs of the program until the next fiscal year. Floyd county is faced with the possibility of having no food stamps in September.

The Floyd County Food Stamp Crisis Task Force is an attempt to meet that emergency, should it arise. Representatives from Big Sandy CAP, the Department of Human Resources, Eastern Kentucky Comprehensive Employment program, the Social Security Administration, the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund, civic and religious leaders have been involved in the meetings. Present plans include identifying resources in

Official Area Tour Arranged by Bailey

Senator Benny Ray Bailey has arranged a tour of Southeastern Kentucky by Deputy Development Secretary Bruce Lunsford and Human Resources Secretary Grady Stumbo.

The tour will begin at Jenny Wiley State Park, Friday at 9 a.m. Mr. Lunsford and Dr. Stumbo will arrive by helicopter and meet with Floyd County leaders. Following that meeting, they will leave with Senator Bailey.

"Secretary Stumbo and Secretary Lunsford's visit to Southeastern Kentucky demonstrates Governor John Y. Brown's continuing interest in the area," said Senator Bailey. "They are particularly looking into concerns about lack of housing, waste disposal systems, and economic issues, as well as a possible site for a free-standing, family practice health clinic."

Also on the schedule for the tour is a trip to Carr Fork Lake to examine the possibility for further development there.

Franchisees Say Court Ordinance Ad Was Faulty

A circuit court suit filed here last Thursday could, if the plaintiffs are successful, at least temporarily remove all control of the cable television industry in this county.

The action, naming the Floyd fiscal court as defendant, was filed by the Burton Antenna Co., Inc., et al, firms which have had their troubles with the Television Commission established under the ordinance adopted by the court in 1978. It asks that the ordinance be declared void on the ground that the ordinance adopted by the fiscal court was not published in its completeness.

The plaintiffs asked circuit court to issue a temporary injunction to prevent the fiscal court from enforcing the ordinance. In their petition they allege that the ordinance enacted by the fiscal court differs from the ordinance as published in The Floyd County Times in "very significant details" and that 13 articles of the court's ordinance did not appear in the newspaper advertisement.

The Burton Antennae Company is headed by Mike Little. Joining it as a plaintiff in the suit was Paul Butcher, holder of a television franchise in the northern section of this county. Franchise holders have been involved in disputes over rates and service with the television commission named under authority of the ordinance.

One court official commented to the effect that if the plaintiffs should succeed in voiding the ordinance, whether by full trial of the case or by the court's offering no defense, the result would be chaos in the television transmission industry in the county. Such a situation, it was pointed out, would leave the county open to any transmission firm or group, with no control of rates or quality of service.

Dinner To Benefit Animal Shelter

A soup bean dinner will be held at the Prestonsburg high school cafeteria from noon until 7 p.m., Saturday, the Floyd County Humane Society announced this week.

Carry-out orders will be welcomed, a spokesman said, adding, "It's not fancy, but it's good."

All proceeds will go to finance the animal shelter which is located on the old Middle Creek Road (KY 114).

Council Gets Report After Parking Study

The final draft of a $12,000 parking study for downtown Prestonsburg was received by the city council this week without comment or formal recognition.

The cost of the study, commissioned by the previous city council last October and prepared by Wilbur Smith and Associates, of Columbia, S.C., could theoretically be recouped by a bond issue if the plan were ever to be acted on. There appears at this stage to be little likelihood of that, however.

According to the study, the city lacks 125 parking spaces which, it is suggested, could be made up by opening a surface parking facility at the corner of Goble and Front Streets and by construction of a multi-tiered parking facility on the site of the present municipal parking lot in the southeast quadrant of Lake Drive and Court Street.

The report also recommends modifications to the traffic signal and intersection at Lake and Court, improved traffic circulation in the downtown area, and the establishment of a city parking authority.

The present council has already ruled out as unfeasible the construction of a vertical facility at Lake and Court—which would have cost an estimated $2.3 million—and the vacant lot at the corner of Goble and Front Streets was sold to a housing contractor several weeks ago.

A proposal currently being advanced by the council, to make Third Avenue (South Central Avenue) one way in a southerly direction, is not consistent with the traffic pattern recommended by the commissioned study.

The one recommendation contained in the study on which the council is acting is the installation of a more sophisticated traffic light at Lake and Court, said to be capable of improving traffic flow on Lake Drive.

The city received approval last week for a $3332 grant from the Department for Housing and Urban Development to update the city zoning map. The grant is to be matched with $1666 in local monies.

Word of a $200 annual levy on the city by the Floyd County Planning Commission was received somewhat coolly by council members, some of whom questioned whether the city is appropriately represented on the commission. The current city representatives are H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr. and George C. Brown.

Brown, a member of the previous city council whose term on the commission expired early this year, was apparently reappointed to that position by the commission without consultation of the present council.

Mayor Harold Cooley said the city would consider the proposed levy when it is learned how the money is to be spent and whether the county and other municipalities intend to contribute their share toward financing the commission's activities.

In the looming dispute between city and county authorities over disposal of city garbage, the council chose to ignore a proposal by Bob McAninch, chairman of the county solid waste

This Town...That World

QUESTION

The weather took a back seat this week to Sunday's earthquake which rolled down from its Mt. Olivet-Maysville epicenter to a tremor that roused many the Kentuckian from the usual Sunday afternoon state of post-prandial stupor. Since the scientific community is puzzled about this quake because, they say, it occurred where there is no known fault, The Times' Jim Goble rightly inquires, "Then whose fault was it?"

WE LOSE AGAIN

At least some of the best things in life are free, and that is not referring only to air, the sound of birds or the blessing of nature's beauties. Some of the finest columns this newspaper has ever published have been as freely given as beautifully written.

Years ago, there was "Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore," week after week, nostalgic but filled with the truth and beauty of old things and old ways. Then there was our old friend Rufus M. Reed's "Nature Trails," which reflected not only the man's great knowledge of nature but his love for all living things. The attrition of the years has robbed us of Mr. Reed's contributions.

And now comes word that those columns of Neville Shackelford will come our way no more. The Sage of Mulberry Hill (at Beattyville) has reached the age of mandatory retirement from his work with the Cooperative Extension Service, and, if he can shed the writing habit, will no longer be enriching this and other newspapers with his columns which so pleasantly melded the nostalgia and philosophy of "Tidbits of Kentucky Folklore" with

Former Floyd Woman One of 3 Killed in Pike Plane Crash

A family of three, including a former Floyd county woman, died Saturday in the crash of their light plane on the approach to the Pikeville airport at Ratliff's Creek.

The victims, John Newsome, 40, his wife, Virginia Faye, 41, and their 16-year-old daughter, Melody, all of Union, O., died in the flaming wreckage of the plane.

The single-engine Piper Cherokee hit a power line on the approach to the landing strip, state police were quoted as saying. The craft hit the ground, burst into flame and exploded.

A crash occurred in the same area in 1977 and earlier this year Arlie E. Hayes was killed when his plane hit a power line near Coal Run after taking off from the airport.

The Newsomes were said to have been en route to Mr. Newsome's birthplace in the Virgie area of Pike county.

Mrs. Newsome was a native of this county, a daughter of Liza Little Cook and the late John Martin Cook. Her husband was a son of the late John Freeman Newsome and Etta Little Newsome. The victims were buried Tuesday in the Newsome family cemetery on Indian Creek, Pike county.

Raid Nets Drugs, Paraphernalia

Sheriff Doug Lewis and deputies hit pay-dirt in a drug raid at Teaberry last Friday afternoon, arresting one man and confiscating drugs and paraphernalia, but he was quick to say that that success was "only a drop in the bucket."

He referred to the widespread traffic in narcotics and the use of drugs even by grade-school children.

"There are some big dealers in this county. We can only hope this will scare them a little," Lewis said.

He and Deputy Sheriffs Randall Lewis and Phillip Neeley searched the trailer of Ishmael Glenn Hamilton, 23, of Teaberry, on authority of a search warrant. The haul included 25 pieces of hashish, 60 pills described as hallucinogens which later were taken to a laboratory for definite identification, barbiturates popularly known as "black beauties," five hypodermic syringes and marijuana seed.

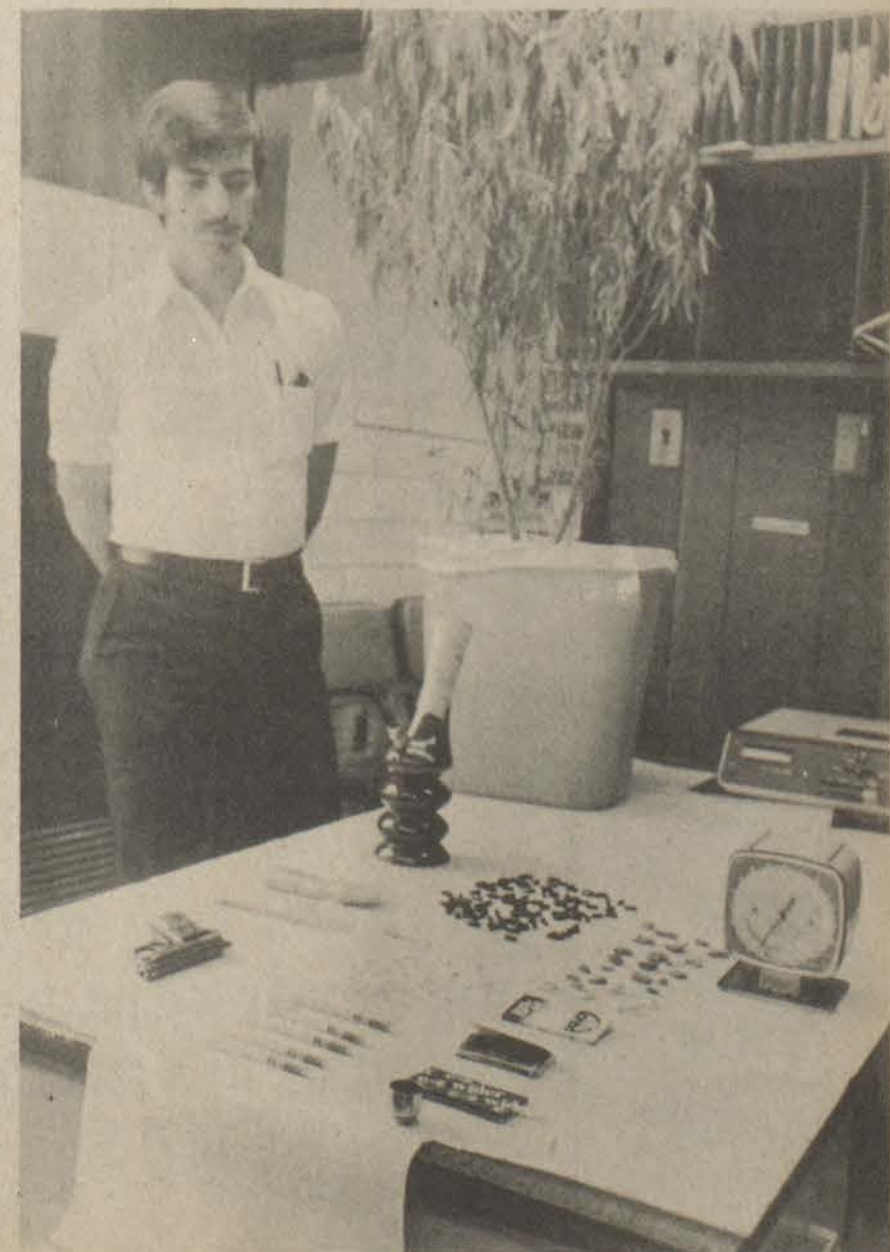

The officers said they also took a .25-calibre pistol which Hamilton was allegedly carrying concealed. Three other handguns and $3600 in cash were also found in the Hamilton trailer.

Hamilton has been charged on three counts, possession of marijuana, possession of Class III narcotics and carrying concealed a deadly weapon. He was booked to district court but the narcotics charge will probably go to the next grand jury for possible felony indictment, it was said.

Recognizing the seriousness of the drug situation in the county, officials point to the need for state assistance in uncovering dealers. Sheriff Lewis said it avails little for a known officer, or one in uniform, to undertake the unmasking of sellers.

Last year, while 77 were being arrested in this county for bootlegging, 410 for drunk driving and 787 for public drunkenness, only 72 were arrested for

So Resigns Surface Mine Post After He Was Replaced Here

When Gene So, 34, was named acting regional engineer at the Bureau of Surface Mining's Prestonsburg office last August, he pledged a "more vigorous, more conscientious and fairer enforcement (of stripmining laws) than there has been under the previous administration."

At that time, former Regional Engineer Gene Stewart and Nevard Wells, chief reclamation inspector, had been relieved of their duties in the wake of alleged irregularities in their dealings with local mine operators, charges of which they were subsequently cleared.

Now So has himself been replaced at the Prestonsburg office by Bureau of Surface Mining Commissioner Elmore C. Grim and has resigned his position at the bureau's Pikeville office, under circumstances that suggest to some observers that his enforcement practices may have been too vigorous for some mining interests here.

According to an alternative theory, however, So may have resigned in view of allegations that he was himself involved in questionable business relationships with some operators whose mining activities fell within the jurisdiction of the surface mining office here.

A deputy commissioner of the Bureau of Surface Mining said this week, however, that he knows of nothing that would substantiate either theory.

John Thacker, formerly chief reclamation engineer in the bureau's Pikeville office, was named regional administrator of the Prestonsburg and Grayson offices late last month, and shortly after that So tendered his resignation as regional engineer at Pikeville, effective July 15. He has been replaced there by Tom Bow, formerly assistant engineer in that office.

While So this week denied any improper business ties with coal operators, he did not dispute the claim that such charges may have figured in his dismissal and resignation. And, while he would not comment on speculation that his removal was politically motivated, he asserted that his administration had been scrupulously fair and that he had managed to "walk the thin line" between satisfying coal operators on the one hand and environmentalists on the other.

One mining site that claimed So's attention for the length of his administration is a 323-acre strip mine in Johnson county, a little north of the Floyd county line. The site has been mined since late 1978 by Mountaineer Resources, of Prestonsburg, for Addington Brothers Mining company, of Paintsville.

The mine has been cited repeatedly for non-compliance with stripmining regulations almost since the inception

Kentucky's Yesterdays...

What Did the County Seat Look Like Years Ago?

By STUART SEELY SPRAGUE
Morehead State University

"It is not like the old days," you are told. But what was the town really like? Perhaps you are lucky and uncover a photograph or a postcard or two of the town. That still leaves a number of unanswered questions such as "What did the rest of the seat town look like and when was that picture taken in the first place?"

By knowing when key buildings were constructed (usually churches and public edifices), when gas or electricity came in, whether or not automobiles are in view and of what vintage, you may be able to date the picture. With a magnifying glass one may be able to read the year on the license plate of one of the cars. But often there is no telltale sign to help date the picture at hand.

Fortunately there are other alternatives. During the 1930's the Soil and Conservation Service flew over most of Eastern Kentucky and took aerial photographs. The most striking things one notices when comparing those images with similar shots taken recently is the greater amount of land in crops during those depressed times and the poorer quality of those photographs taken a third of a century ago. Regrettably, the quality is too poor for duplication for newspaper publication. Those copies we had made from the original negatives in the National Archives, Washington, D. C., are filed in the Camden-Carroll Library's Appalachian Collection. If you are curious and would like to examine them, you are welcome to look at them the next time you are on the campus of Morehead State University. A number of counties, primarily Eastern, were not photographed. The counties not photographed in the 30's are Floyd, Harlan, Johnson, Knott, Lawrence, Leslie, Letcher, Martin, Perry and Pike in the east; Crittenden, Livingston and Lyon in the west.

Despite the poor quality of the photographs, or in some cases the lack of aerial shots, there is still another way to see your town in many cases. The Sanborn Map Company produced its first Eastern Kentucky insurance map in 1884.

The "new" Floyd county courthouse, perhaps being inspected by a group of townspeople. The newness is attested by the lumber not yet cleared from the grounds. (Pictures by Crandall of the Kentucky Geological Survey. Courtesy of the Filson Club.)

Towns in the "Kentucky Yesterdays" region that were first surveyed in the late 1880's include Vanceburg, 1884; Owingsville, 1886; Catlettsburg, 1885; Flemingsburg, 1886; Mount Sterling, 1886; and Maysville, 1886.

New additions by 1910 included Jackson, 1897; Paintsville, 1910; Louisa, 1907; Pikeville, 1910, and Morehead, 1908. Later still were the first insurance maps for Grayson, 1929; Olive Hill, 1920; Prestonsburg, 1926; Hazard, 1920; and Whitesburg, 1927. Especially for towns whose first Sanborn map is of an early vintage, there tends to be a series of maps before 1930, each showing individual structures. This is an extremely valuable tool for dating buildings or photographs. Because the shape of the buildings are shown, you can tell when grandma Myrna was able to get her husband to add that porch or to put a wing on the house, perhaps within five years or so.

Copies of the pre-1930's maps have been donated to the University of Kentucky's map collection.

Except for the names of businesses and giving you an idea as to the physical shape of the town, the maps do little to populate your towns. Here there is another source—directories. In a few cases there are Nineteenth Century city directories—Maysville beginning in 1861 and Ashland in 1891—but for the most part one is dependent upon Kentucky State Directories. These tend to list perhaps twenty percent of the town's adult male population, emphasizing lawyers and store owners. The first state directory for Kentucky was published just before the outbreak of the War Between the States. Many of the family names may still be familiar today. Such directories by various publishers were produced quite regularly (every few years) between then and 1906. Maps and directories are a few of the sources from which local history can be recovered.

The "Kentucky Yesterdays" project covers a 23-county area. Part of the concept of this Kentucky Humanities Council supported program is the desire to bring home to the county of origin information relating to its history so that local individuals and institutions interested in its heritage might carry forward research into their past for the benefit of us all.

all types of drug offenses, including mere marijuana possession, County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. said.

"It has become so casual and there's so little pressure," he said, "that they're downright surprised and get real indignant if they're arrested."

Sixty-eight of last year's arrests were made for possession of marijuana; four for "hard" drugs.

Besides Hamilton, the case of one accused of selling drugs is pending in court.

of mining there. Addington Brothers have twice been fined for mining infractions at the site, and so at one point recommended that the company's mining permit be revoked.

The company was cited for hollow-fill violations, failure to maintain proper silt control, and placing spoil downslope of the mining operation. According to one inspector's report, "Spoil has been allowed down over the outcrops, covering trees and brush on almost the entire length of the permit."

Last December the inspector, Phillip Slone, reported that Mountaineer Resources had almost completed mining at the site and apparently intended to reclaim the area but that Addington Brothers themselves were going to take over the reclamation. The inspector opined that Mountaineer Resources had been the cause of problems at the site and that Addington Brothers could be expected to reclaim the area.

A few days before his ouster, So became involved in another Addington Brothers permit application, for a site near Van Lear, which is being opposed by James Witten, one of the surface owners there. In a June 24 memo to James Baker, director of the Bureau of Surface Mining's permit division, So noted that he was withholding the preliminary permit review pending further instructions from Baker.

Warning him of "the ticklish situation the Department may find itself in," So wrote Baker that "To prevent any adverse publicity as well as meeting our mandated obligation to protect the public, I recommend that the Division of Permits require Addington Brothers to submit reasonable proof that they have the right to mine on the James Witten property prior to issuance of that permit."

"I strongly recommend that this matter be given careful consideration. An informal hearing between the company, the Division of Permits and the property owner may be advisable," So added.

Addington Brothers Mining Company is a subsidiary of Ashland Oil Company, which is now said to employ former Secretary of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Robert D. Bell. Those who question the circumstances of So's removal claim that several of those presently holding influential positions in the department owe their appointments to Bell's influence.

Bureau of Surface Mining Deputy Commissioner Larry Grasch said this week that So had been replaced at the Prestonsburg office because administering both the Prestonsburg and Pikeville offices was considered "too much for one person to handle." His resignation from the Pikeville office was So's own decision, Grasch said.

Grasch said he was not aware of any allegations of impropriety against So or of any pressure on the bureau to have the former administrator removed. He added that both he and Commissioner Grim had been in office less than two months.

agency, that the city pay about $20,800 annually for use of the new county landfill. The city presently contracts with a private hauler, Adrian Lafferty, for disposal of city and Highlands hospital garbage for $14,000 annually.

The city contends that its long-term contract with Lafferty, who has enjoyed until now a county franchise for hauling garbage here, remains valid. After October 1, however, it is anticipated that the county solid waste agency will control access to the county's only approved landfill site.

The 1981 property tax rate will remain unchanged, at 30 cents per $100 of assessed value. City Administrator David Evans told the council that the rate could remain the same without having receipts exceed the four percent annual increase permitted by state law.

Councilmen Estill Lee Carter and Paul Phillip Hughes announced that Music-Carter-Hughes Chevrolet-Buick, Inc., in which they have an interest, will not do business with the city while they are in office. The two men had sought an opinion on the matter from the attorney-general, who advised that the firm should not bid on city contracts for autos, trucks, repairs or parts.

City Attorney Paul P. Burchett told the council he had written Donald L. "Dootney" Horn, advising him that the city would take steps to halt his proposed mining operation at the Ball Alley curve of old U.S. 23 here. Horn, who is presently building a fan house to provide ventilation to the mine, is expected to challenge the validity of the city zoning ordinance if action is taken to stop his operation.

Melvin Goins, operator of a bluegrass music festival at Archer Park last weekend, accused city police of being overly aggressive in conducting liquor searches at the festival. Goins said that several festival patrons, annoyed by the police activities, left the festival, vowing never to return to this area. He understood that 22 liquor-related arrests had been made Friday and 27 on Saturday, he said. Arrest records at the county jail indicate, however, that five persons were booked for public drunkenness at the festival Friday and another four on Saturday.

the lore of Rufus Reed's "Nature Trails" and added the charm of his own personality to delight readers of my ilk.

As Dean C. Wolf, a contemporary of his, wrote upon Mr. Shackelford's retirement, "...no attempt will be made to replace columnist Nevyle Shackelford. The position may be filled, but never will the man be replaced."

53 YEARS LATER

On another page of this edition appears an imperfect reproduction of the very first Floyd County Times—something which we had despaired of until a friend, Mack Bolen, found an unexpected cache of several early copies of the newspaper. A fire which wiped us out, lock, stock and barrel, in 1928 took all our files of those early editions.

Now the physical proof that we did publish that first Floyd County Times on June 17, 1927 exists, and it brings with it recollections.

I recall, for example, that I wrote all the copy for that newspaper with a lead pencil. Ballpoint pens were not made at the time, and I seem not to have had a typewriter just then. And without benefit of a desk, too. The top of a stout box served my purpose.

Then there is the memory of those who worked with me—"Printer" Goble, who set the type, made up the forms and saw the paper "to bed" in the early morning hours 53 years ago...his son, John Henry, who helped him... "Preacher" Alex Allen, who helped install the old Babcock press on which the Bowling Green Journal had at one time been printed, and who stayed with us till the last paper was printed.

There are a lot of recollections about that old paper, and I am the only one of all those connected with it who is yet hanging around to remember.

Two Injured in Cycle Mishap

THEIR MOTORCYCLE BURNS as Clifton Boyd and Jerry Osborne receive first aid from bystanders, following an accident on U.S. 23 near Dwale last Thursday afternoon.

Two men were injured and the motorcycle they were riding burst into flames following an accident on U.S. 23 near Dwale last Thursday.

According to police reports of the incident, the driver apparently lost control after the motorcycle "hit a dip" in the road. The vehicle struck a guardrail before coming to rest on the pavement and exploded in flames.

Gilis Conn, until recently a deputy sheriff in this county, said he was traveling north on U.S. 23 about 4:30 p.m. Thursday when he heard an explosion behind him, looked in his rear-view mirror, and saw the cycle engulfed in fire. Conn was able to halt oncoming traffic and attend the injured men. A truck driver quickly doused the blaze with a portable extinguisher.

Clifton Boyd, 31, of Harold, driver of the 1976 Kawasaki cycle, was taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center, suffering unspecified injuries to the arms, and was subsequently transferred to UK Medical Center in Lexington. His passenger, Jerry Osborne, 31, of Dana, was treated at Highlands for multiple bruises and abrasions and released.

State Trooper Ernie Duleson investigated the accident, to which the Allen Volunteer Fire Department also responded.

Letters to the Editor

Cliff's Troubled Road

As I was reading the Floyd County Times, as of July 16, I noticed the front page in which the City Council discussed the so-called troubled road at Cliff, where the Church Housing Project is under construction. They also voted to help condemn property for a right-of-way.

If the city has such a problem with a housing project, why wasn't it built in the city to begin with? If they have a problem, the community of Cliff really has a problem. Our community got this project in our back door, and it was built in a flood zone, in which it took thousands of tons of rock to make a fill. By making this fill it has raised the flood level on the residents by ten feet. And not to think the City voted to help condemn property of residents who have worked hard and bought their property, and have lived here all their lives!

I recall, as one of our new City Council stated in the Floyd County times Oct. 3, 1979, it's time for a change, change to someone who helps all the people, not someone who just helps one special group. Our new City Council surely doesn't know why this Housing Project was built in this area. Well, this very special group needs a new road. They own property here, too. We have a good road, if the Housing Project would fix it back like they found it.

I think we have a nice group of City Council, and I think they should take a second look.

Hayes' Widow Sues Power Co. For $3 Million

Mrs. June Hayes, widow of Arlie E. Hayes, filed in the Pike circuit court Monday a $3 million-plus damage suit against Kentucky Power Co. in connection with an airplane accident which last May 10 killed her husband, the owner of Hayes Metal Co.

The petition claims that Hayes was killed when his airplane struck a static, non-electric line maintained by the power company within the navigable airspace near the Pikeville airport. "The static (non-electric) line that the airplane struck was unmarked and consisted of a single strand of metal wire," the suit said, also alleging that Kentucky power "owed a duty to Arlie Edward Hayes and other pilots to so make the location of the static, non-electric line known to Arlie Edward Hayes and other pilots."

The failure of the utility to make known the location of the line was the approximate cause of the airplane accident which killed Hayes, the suit charges.

The plaintiff seeks $1 million for the destruction of Hayes' earning power, $7,500 for the destruction of the aircraft and not less than $2,500 for funeral expenses.

In addition, the suit charges the plaintiff is entitled to recover $2 million in punitive damages from Kentucky Power.

The suit also says that as an approximate result of the company's negligence, Mrs. Hayes is entitled to $100,000 damages for the loss of the services, assistance and companionship of her husband.

(A damage suit does not present both sides of the issue in question.)

Bootlegging, No Small Offense

To the Editor:

This is in answer to an inquiry made by Mr. Gary Johnson, of Pikeville, some time ago, concerning bootleggers being given very small fines for their crimes, and in my book, they are criminals, because they are pushing a drug. Since alcohol is a drug, I for one feel they should have to pay for their crimes as any drug (pusher) seller, not to be shown any more consideration than the common drug pusher.

I have seen too much sorrow and unhappiness caused by the direct or indirect use of alcoholic beverages. As with all drugs, alcohol can be a very sneaky acting drug! Not knowing what manner of form it will take, to the yet untried person who might be encountering it for the first time.

There have been times I have been surprised to find that there are those who don't know alcohol is a drug, so I tell them to ask their doctor about it. And it's a shame too many do not seem as if they know that mixing other drugs with alcohol can be quite deadly!

Maybe some of those who have voiced similar feelings will send in a note about it to you. Hope they will.

In Praise of Whitman

The Slim Whitman Appreciation Society of the United States (West, Thurber St., Tucson, Ariz. 85705) requests that its members (of whom I am one) make "know Slim's coming engagement at the Wheeling Jamboree in Wheeling, W. Va.

I wholeheartedly and in all honesty recommend all who read this letter to make it a "must" to hear Slim sing at this Jamboree. During a long life in which I have been blessed to hear some of the great singers, I can truly say that no one anywhere can hold Whitman a light for sheer vocal beauty. God gave him the most beautiful voice He ever gave a human! His record, "All My Best," is pure, deep joy—while his 8-track stereo of hymns brings God so very, very near. It should certainly be in every Christian home and church.

Please do try and go to hear the man with the most beautiful voice in American—Slim Whitman.

Floyd Vehicles Hit By Car Near Louisa

In Which One Killed

Vehicles driven by two Floyd county men were struck by cars in which a Lawrence county man died July 17 on US 23, south of Louisa.

Donald Ray Diamond, 32, of Rt. 1, Louisa, was the victim of the wreck. State Trooper Dennis Paige was quoted as saying the Diamond car crossed into the northbound lane of US 23, bounced off the right rear of a vehicle driven by Darrell Campbell, 26, of Prestonsburg, then smashed the right side of a truck driven by David Goble, 39, of Auxier.

Neither of the Floyd county drivers was seriously hurt. Frank Diamond, a brother of Donald Ray Diamond and a passenger in his car, was treated at Louisa Community Hospital for minor hurts.

Jury To Probe Calhoun Death

A special prosecutor designated by Attorney General Steven L. Beshear will lead the Johnson county grand jury next week in the investigation of the June 7 slaying at Thealka of Chester Calhoun, Prestonsburg man, by State Trooper Phillip Nickles.

Designation of a special prosecutor was ordered by Circuit Judge William B. Hazelrigg after he had issued an order disqualifying Commonwealth's Attorney Paul Deaton for the investigation of the case, on the grounds that Deaton is related by marriage to a son of Calhoun and that Deputy Sheriff Guy Dozier, who accompanied the trooper in the arrest of Calhoun, had earlier arrested Deaton on a public intoxication charge which has not come to hearing.

Capt. Morgan Elkins, commander of the Pikeville post of the State Police, had requested of Judge Hazelrigg a special grand jury to investigate the Calhoun shooting, but Hazelrigg denied this because of the nearness of the regular grand jury session and the cost of a special panel.

The trooper involved claimed at a coroner's inquest, shortly after the shooting, that he fired in self-defense when Calhoun attempted to take possession of his police revolver. The inquest jury ruled that the shooting was "justifiable homicide by reason of self-defense."

Firm Purchases Station WPRT, Plans Changes

The purchase of Radio Station WPRT AM-FM was completed in the office of William R. Kendrick, of Francis, Kazee & Francis, July 19. With F.C.C. approval and all final contracts signed, American Signal Corporation assumed operation of the station, July 21.

"Minor changes have already taken place with major changes to come in the near future," Ric Darby, president of American Signal, general manager of WPRT, said this week. "We will have a satellite-earth station for the national news, therefore we will have the fastest news service possible," Darby said. "Along with this, we have a professional news staff to cover the local news events as they happen."

One of the major changes will be the move of the station. American Signal has leased the building beside the Strand Theater from the Bank Josephine. "We have the blueprints for the offices and construction should start very soon," according to Darby. "There will be showroom-style control rooms for both AM and FM."

In all, the corporation has spent around half a million dollars for the purchase, new equipment, and the hiring of a professional staff. "It was well worth it," Darby said. "I feel Floyd county is ready for a big city sound and operation while at the same time keeping local programs to keep the community informed." To announce the new owners of the station there will be a non-stop weekend of commercial free music beginning Saturday, Aug. 2, at 6 a.m. and continuing until Sunday, Aug. 3, at midnight.

Tragedy Mars Family Outing

A Sunday afternoon outing for a Martin county family ended in tragedy when 15-year-old Mary Maynard, of Inez, drowned in Johns Creek, a short distance downstream from the spillway of Dewey Dam.

It was the third drowning to occur in the county within the month. The two earlier drownings were in Dewey Lake.

Coroner James J. Carter said he was told that the girl, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Riley Maynard, and two other children of the family were wading or swimming in the comparatively shallow water of Johns Creek, below the dam, and that suddenly Mary Maynard was missing. The alarm spread to the nearby recreation area below the dam, and six men—Paul Hunt Thompson, of Prestonsburg, Paul Morman, of Paintsville, Donald Adkins, of Warfield, Mitchell Williamson, of Inez, Ernest Williamson, of Tomahawk, and Jack Music, of Boonecamp—recovered the body by wading within about 15 minutes. Time of the drowning was placed at 4:15 p.m. The body was taken to the Richmond-Callahan Funeral Home at Inez.

Court Plans Road Aid For Other Sections Of County

MAY SUE COMPANIES

Contact for between five and six miles of highway construction on Big Mud Creek, this county, was awarded by the Floyd County Fiscal Court, in session here Friday to T. H. Banner, of Prestonsburg, on his bid of $37,500, the lowest of eight bids filed.

This section of road, which is a part of the proposed Harold-Ligon Highway, will lead from the Mayo Trail at the mouth of Branham's construction will consist of standard road and drain, with stone masonry sidewalks and rubble stone masonry culverts.

When completed, this route for which a portion was contracted Friday, will have Ligon and surrounding territory connected with Harold and the Mayo Trail. The contractor, Mr. Banner, is expected to carry out this project as soon as possible.

Roads and Bridges Planned. Plans are being laid, it is announced, for the construction of similar roads up Middle Creek, Left Beaver, Johns Creek and the building of steel bridge at Auxier. Contracts for these projects may be ready in July.

At Friday's session of Fiscal Court sale of bonds was ordered for construction of roads to the amount of $50,000 on Johns Creek, $50,000 for Left Beaver, and $37,500 for Middle Creek. The Johns Creek route will lead from the Mayo Trail at the mouth of Brandy Keg toward the mouth of Brushy; the Beaver Creek road from the county road near Martha and extending toward Weeksburg; and on Middle Creek from Prestonsburg toward Ivyton.

The bridge at Auxier will span the Big Sandy, giving Johns Creek an outlet to Auxier and access thence to Prestonsburg.

To Build Court Addition. Work was begun Monday on a two-story addition to the courthouse here by W. B. Westbrook, who was awarded the contract some time ago on his bid of $5,000. The addition is to be constructed of brick, and will be 40 feet long by 28 feet in width. The lower story adjoining the county clerk's office will be used as the county court room, and the upper story adjacent to the sheriff's office as office rooms of the county judge, the county attorney and the county engineer.

Grading of roads is now in progress on Abner Fork, connecting with Mayo Trail which joins the Mayo Trail in Pike County.

Require Road Repairs. An order was made by the Fiscal Court that all companies or individuals using Floyd County roads excessively and damaging them, unless the roads were repaired by those responsible for such condition.

HUNTER IS SHOT FOR GROUNDHOG

John Kendrick was shot in the shoulder Wednesday morning of last week on the John Moore branch of the Mayo Trail, when he was mistaken for a groundhog, according to reports here. The same man and another boy, who remain here, were hunting when Kendrick was shot. It is said, and Shepherd stated that upon sight of the other he fled, being unable to see Kendrick distinctly. The wound is not serious, it is said.

W. L. Wigginton, field auditor, L. E. Lockard, time-keeper, P. E. Duffenbach, chief engineer, and George Balch, general superintendent for Byllesby Engineering Management, are new men connected with the Louisville Gas and Electric Company in pipe line work in this field.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Times to Publish Weekly Editorial Contribution

In view of the belief entertained by The Times that there is a great deal of valuable but unexpressed sentiment on various subjects of interest, we are announcing the appearance in future issues of this paper of editorials written by Floyd county people on topics of their own choice.

One editorial will be published each week, and the writer's name will be picked at random from a number of others so that none may be given preference over another. These contributions may not be religious discussions or comment upon local politics. They must not be of an offensive character, but should be of a sound, constructive nature, aimed not at the injury of any but for the benefit of the region in which we live.

BEAVER ROAD SURVEY BEGUN

Contract May Be Let For Road Soon After July 1.

As The Times goes to press, information is received that a corps of engineers have arrived at Allen, Kentucky, and are now on the ground starting the surveying of the state road project from Allen to Lackey, a distance of approximately 20 miles.

It is understood that Governor Fields, while in Prestonsburg a few days ago, gave out information that he would urge the Highway Department to complete this survey as quickly as possible, in order that it might be let for construction during the present year, at least, soon after July 1, the beginning of the next fiscal year.

The survey, it is hoped, will be completed in time for the letting of the contract in the early fall. In view of the assurance from Governor Fields that the state will aid in this construction and his attitude about the matter, strongly favoring this project, and the fact that the county has already sold its bonds applied on this project, we have reason to expect an early completion of this much-needed road.

LOCAL KIWANIS MAKE DIXIE TRIP

And Vote for Atlantic City for Convention

M. J. Lee and Will H. Layne returned Sunday evening from Memphis, Tennessee, where they have been attending the Kiwanis International Convention, June 6-9, as delegates representing the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club. They enjoyed the round trip, reporting excellent roads until they came back home and were stoned in by a mule team from Cliff.

Our reporter has been trying to get all the facts and information relative to this trip and what happened, but has been unable to do so except in spots and that too only when the other one was not around. They say the whole thing is too big to make a definite report of what all happened down in Dixie at this convention, but their manner indicates that they thoroughly saturated with the Kiwanis ideals, and received a new charge of enthusiasm as to what Kiwanis really means to a community.

One of the outstanding features of the convention other than the routine of business was that it was the largest attended convention ever held by Kiwanis International, numbering over four thousand delegates. Memphis turned over the city, and Dixie will long linger with them as the center of the convention.

IDENTIFICATION OF SUSPECTED SLAYER FAILS

Man Arrested As Sherman Early Brought From Kansas

SLAYER YET AT LARGE

The man hunt which has been conducted over a wide area of the United States by police and detective agencies of Sherman Early, who shot and killed Homer Bayless, of this place and Will Hays, of West Virginia, July 30, 1925, at Burton, this county, continues as the result of failure to identify a man brought here from Wichita, Kansas, last week in the belief that he was the man being sought for the dual killing.

Deputy Sheriff Banner Mead and Special Deputy John Allen left here Sunday, June 5, for Wichita, after being notified by a Wichita detective agency that a man giving his name as Frank Francis Early, 37 years old, was being held as a suspect in the case. A photograph furnished officials here was indeed closely to the likeness of the fugitive.

Identification was attempted Friday evening and Saturday morning, and the prisoner was released after those who were intimately acquainted with Sherman Early failed to recognize him as the slayer. Among those who attempted recognition of the suspect were Glomer Spencer, whose life was probably saved by his watch which was struck by Early's bullet after he had shot Bayless and Hays, and whose head was grazed by a bullet; Earl Hartley, who had hired Early as cook for drilling at Burton; Pauline McGuire, Andy Gearheart, D. P. Brown and others.

The man who was brought here for identification resembled Sherman Early. He claimed to have been reared in Owensboro, Daviess county, while Sherman Early is a native of Owingsville, it is said. The suspect is a man of short stature, with a prominent chin and deep-sunk eyes.

A reward of $500 has been offered by Gov. William J. Fields for the capture of Sherman Early, who escaped shortly after the shooting of Burton.

Homer Bayless, one of the victims of the shooting, was a son-in-law of Jonathan Fitzpatrick, of Prestonsburg. While here the suspect was treated with commendable kindness by officials and was given funds sufficient to secure him transportation back to Wichita, to which place he said he would return.

The Wichita Evening Eagle of June 8 carried a three column picture of Messrs. Mead and Allen with their "man" and Chief of Police Walston.

APPROXIMATELY $115,000.00 IS BEING SPENT ON SCHOOL BUILDINGS IN THIS COUNTY

A constructive program inaugurated this year by the Floyd County Board of Education and by the Prestonsburg School Board will result in the erection before September 1 of five large school buildings in this county.

Foundation work is now under way for the construction of a two-story brick high school building for this place, at an approximate cost of $31,000. This building will be approximately 90 feet in length by 60 feet wide, and will have eight rooms, affording facilities for students hitherto unequalled here. W. T. Meilon and E. P. Carter are contractors on this structure, and are rushing work toward completion at the earliest possible date.

The building will front upon Second street, being located on the site formerly occupied by old public school, and will be a large auditorium which will seat approximately 600 persons.

Prof. T. J. Currey will be principal of the high school again during the coming school year, and the student body is expected to be greatly enlarged. Last year about 120 pupils were enrolled. All members of this year's faculty have not been named.

Auxier Building Under Way. At Auxier a two-story brick building for both high school and grade pupils is being built at a cost of $21,750 by B. P. Carter, Prestonsburg contractor. It will probably be completed within a month. The building will be approximately 100 feet long and 60 feet in width, and will have a baseball field, which can upon occasion be utilized as an open-air basket-ball court, is in front of the building, giving the Auxier school one of the best athletic fields available for any school in Floyd County. Forrest Short is principal of the school, and will be assisted by Misses Flossie Hopson, Ruth Meeks and Mona Daniels.

JAKE COLLINS IS KILLED ON JOHNS CREEK

Identity of Slayer Uncertain; Warnie Cline Is Suspected.

PRISONER ESCAPES

Jake Collins, of Johns Creek, this county, was shot and killed Sunday afternoon on that creek about twelve miles from here, and Earl Thompson was shot through the thigh as the result of an altercation, the details of which are so mixed that reports conflict as to the identity of Collins' slayer or as to the name of the man who wounded Thompson.

A number of men had gathered at the place where the shooting occurred, and some of them are said to have been drinking. According to reports reaching here, the report of a shotgun suddenly rang out and Collins fell, shot in the chest. Shot scattered over the victim's chest indicated that the slayer stood some distance away. Collins is said to have died instantly.

A man whose name was given here as Warnie Cline was accused of the killing, and was captured Sunday night, a few hours after midnight, by Deputy Sheriffs Turner Burdett and J. L. Laferty, about two miles below the scene of the slaying.

Cline was placed on a mule, and the trip into Prestonsburg with their prisoner was begun by the officers. At the mouth of Buffalo Creek, about two hours before daybreak, the accused man suddenly spurred his mount into the bushes and disappeared. A chase was begun at daybreak, and Cline was pursued to the head of Cow Creek, where the trail was lost.

Magistrate Cain James held an inquest over the body of Collins, but reports received here state that no definite proof of the slayer's identity was obtained.

The victim was about forty years old, and is survived by his widow and five children. He was a son of Vess Collins. Burial was made Tuesday on Sowders Creek.

Betsy Layne School Completed.

Completion of the Betsy Layne Consolidated School building was made in March of this year by the contractor, E. E. Ramey. Cost of the building is placed at $29,500. The building is two stories high, has 12 rooms and is constructed of brick.

E. A. Maggard was principal here last year and will assume the same duties at the opening of the coming term. Prof. Maggard will be assisted in high school work by Mrs. B. O. Cunnell. Grade teachers, it is announced by Superintendent John Stephens, will be Miss Eula Hunley, Delmon Howard, Joseph May, Samuel Hale, Mrs. Verlie G. Bush, Miss Marjorie Lee and Miss Emily Scalf.

Begins Work at Maytown. Work has been started on a two-story brick building for the Maytown Consolidated School, at Langley, this county, which is to have 11 rooms and will be erected at a cost of $23,250. C. E. Hale is the contractor in charge of the work. Work has been retarded here by damage wrought by recent flood waters in Beaver Creek to the foundation, but the building will be ready for use in September, it is expected. Prof. N. C. Boughton will be at the head of the faculty, with Lincoln J. Wells his assistant high school teacher. Teachers in the grades will be H. N. Cooley, ex-superintendent of Floyd county schools, and Jones Moore, with two or three other instructors yet to be selected.

A four-room frame building is being erected for the Harold-Laynesville Consolidated School, and is due for early completion. Contract for the work was awarded to Henderson Richardson for $7,900. G. M. Hale will be principal of the school, with Oscar Bush and B. L. Sturgill assistants.

DRILLING ACTIVE IN LOCAL FIELD

Pipe Line Work Gives Employment For 860 Men.

Work in the Floyd-Knott oil and gas field is reported as being active, with about 30 rigs in operation, one big pipe line under construction and several short lines to be laid.

Drilling has been retarded by the recent high water in this county, but will probably continue at its present pace throughout the summer, an official of the leading company in this field said Tuesday.

The only well reported last week was a light gasser on the Vinson Waitaker lease on Middle Creek. Approximately 400 men are employed in this county in laying the big 20-inch gas line from Maytown to Kenova, W. Va., for the Warfield Natural Gas Company, and the same number may be used by a new company in running various short lines from producing districts into the Middle Creek division of the Ford, it is said.

W. L. Wigginton, field auditor, L. E. Lockard, time-keeper, P. E. Duffenbach, chief engineer, and George Balch, general superintendent for Byllesby Engineering Management, are new men connected with the Louisville Gas and Electric Company in pipe line work in this field.

TYPHOID THREAT IS STEMMED BY RED CROSS AID

Health Centers Are Established in Five Towns.

WET SEASON, BANE

Approximately 5,000 persons are said to have been inoculated against the ravages of typhoid in this county in an effort to prevent the spread of an epidemic in the wake of the wall of water which swept Beaver Creek and other health centers have been established sections of Floyd, May 23 and 30.

at Wayland, Garretts, Lackey, Betsy Layne and Maytown, with Dr. S. H. Higgins of Ashland in charge of the work. Dr. Higgins and Mrs. Burns have had five nurses in Beaver Creek for more than a fortnight, vaccinating young and old, and urging the employment of measures to restore sanitary conditions in the flood-stricken area.

Nurses Margaret Land, of Winchester, Misses Berry and Hensley, of Ashland, Mrs. Crowley, of Lexington, and Miss Baird from Versailles have been under the leadership of Dr. Higgins and Mrs. Burns, and a monumental work has been effected in combating the threat of an epidemic of typhoid.

When the Times called Wayland to gather information as to the extent of the work to date it was learned that the Red Cross workers had left Wayland Thursday morning. Whether the work there had been completed could not be learned.

Since the flood, a number of families in the Beaver valley have been obliged to live in neighbors' homes and public buildings while their own dwellings were being rehabilitated. While conditions have been had in that section of the county, few or no families are reported as being destitute. Increased illness reported from the water-swept sections, most of which is due to exposure, but has as yet taken no alarming aspect.

Beyond vaccination of hundreds of persons and instructing in cleaning the mud and debris from homes and streets, have chlorinated a great portion of the Red Crossworkers and physicians water supply on Beaver Creek and have arranged for the shipment into the valley of three carloads of lime, with sufficient clothing for the needy.

Unprecedented rains throughout the year has retarded farming in Floyd County, as elsewhere, to the extent that present conditions are probably no more distressing than those anticipated for the coming winter. Little bottom land is under cultivation, and a part of hillside crops have been damaged by torrential rains.

County Agent Fred Lawson is urging farmers, however, to replant with early with which, he says, mature crops may maturing corn and with soy beans, be obtained in the growing season yet remaining.

CAPTURE SLAYER AT WHEELWRIGHT

John Bush, negro, was wanted for murder in Louisville, was brought here Tuesday by Deputy Sheriffs W. D. and Rufus Martin from Wheelwright, on Left Beaver, where he was working in the mines. A sergeant of the Louisville police department arrived here Wednesday and left Wednesday evening with the negro for Louisville, where charges will be preferred against the prisoner.

The negro killed a 75-year-old night watchman in Louisville in May, and fled on the night of the killing with another negro's wife. Detectives located him by letters written by the woman with whom he left Louisville to her mother there. Robbery of a store part which the nightwatchman's child is believed to have furnished motive for the slaying.

A. B. Meade, of the sheriff's office, spent the week-end with his family at Banner, returning here Monday.

Abbott Resident Assault Victim

Ocie Puckett and her husband, Amos, like many other older residents in the area, get along the best they can, paying their bills and buying groceries with meager pension checks and raising as much of their own food as their own vitality and land will allow. They're not the kind of people who would represent a "big score" for a would-be robber or assailant. But increasingly, it is people just like the Pucketts who are being victimized, perhaps because they seem, at least, easy targets.

Mrs. Puckett, 62, found herself such a victim as she picked raspberries near her home on the Left Fork of Abbott Creek about three weeks ago.

A man who she described as tall and heavy set with a dark complexion, approached her and asked how much remained from the government check she and her husband receive each month. "I told him we didn't have a thing left out of our check and he hit me across the back with a club," Mrs. Puckett explained. When she cried out for her husband the assailant struck her again, this time a blow to the ribs. She began crawling toward the roadway and the man left, she said.

Two days later she was taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center by the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad accompanied by an acquaintance, Ethel Click, and although her injuries were not major, x-rays revealed cracked ribs.

"I just want for you to print something about this so other people like us will be careful," Mrs. Puckett said. "You'd think we'd be the last people somebody like that would want to bother—we don't have but very little to start with—but I guess nobody's safe no more," she commented.

'Fiddler on the Roof' Begins Run, Last of Season at Music Theatre

The longest-running musical in American theatrical history, (seven years on Broadway) and winner of the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award as the best musical of its first season, as well as ten "Tony" awards, "Fiddler on the Roof" is to be presented as the final 1980 season production at the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre on Wednesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays, beginning today (Wednesday) and ending August 17.

Written by Joseph Stein, "Fiddler on the Roof" is based on the endearing Tevye stories by the Yiddish short-story writer who called himself Sholom Aleichem. Tevye is an overworked but indomitable milkman in a little Russian village in 1905, loveable for his cheerful courage in the face of his troubles—which include his poverty, his sharp-tongued wife and three daughters of marriageable age for whom, alas, he can provide no dowries.

At the beginning of the story he sings a song about the unshakable Jewish traditions that sustain him and his fellow oppressed villagers. "Without our tradition," he sings, "our lives would be as shaky as...as a fiddler on the roof." As an illustration, a violinist is standing on the peak of Tevye's hovel, sawing away.

At the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre, guest star Robert Bostrom will have the role of Tevye who carries on comradely conversation with God to complain about his problems, but never bitterly. It is he who will sing the wry witty song of his fantasies. "If I

Were a Rich Man."

Mary Flynn Thomas, previously cast as Dolly Levi in "Hello, Dolly", will be seen as Tevye's wife, Golde, who sarcastically calls him "my breadwinner!" and joins him in the song so comically superfluous for a couple married for 25 years—"Do You Love Me?"

Dorothy Howard has the role of the busy Matchmaker, aptly named Yente—that being an old-country word meaning a woman who's a Big Dealer and even more a Big Talker and a Big Meddler. Pam Chabora, Linda Jacobs and Peggy Vaughn will portray the three elder daughters of Tevye who sing the plaintively funny song pleading for action on their behalf by the Matchmaker, though they later spurn her offices and choose their own husbands. Mega Lynaugh and Sabrina West will be seen as Tevye's two other daughters, still below marriageable age.

Matt Orme, Don Richards, Timothy C. Reischauer and Wayne Lee will enact suitors for the marriageable girls—four of them for three daughters, so that one must be disappointed. Other leading members of the cast will be David Lyttle, Gerald B. Adams, Scott Levy and Rick Lynaugh.

"Fiddler on the Roof" will be presented Wednesday, Thursday, Saturday and Sunday evenings through August 17. On Friday evenings the theatre presents a musical showcase, which features musical numbers from Broadway's most famous musicals.

Tickets may be obtained by writing the theatre at Box 22, Prestonsburg, or by calling the theatre at (606) 886-9274. Curtain time for each performance is 8:30 p.m.

Dogs To Be Licensed: State Law

You wouldn't think of driving your car all over town without a license, but there are dog owners who think nothing of letting their pets roam the streets even though they too must be licensed.

State law requires all dogs six months and older be properly licensed. Responsibility for establishing and enforcing the dog law falls under each fiscal court which appoints a dog warden and maintains a dog pound.

Mary Lois Hawkins, state supervisor for the dog law program, said the licenses must be obtained or renewed each year on or before July 1. Tags are distributed to each county and sell for $1.50 to individuals and $10 or $15 to kennel operators, depending on the number of dogs kept.

Fifty cents of each $1.50 dog license fee is returned to county fiscal courts for payment of dog warden and dog pound expenses. For his services, each dog warden retains 25 cents for each license issued.

The remaining 75 cents of each tag fee is pooled in the Department of Agriculture's livestock fund for administration of the dog law and payment of claims for livestock or poultry losses resulting from stray dogs. Accumulated fees are disbursed at a designated time each year, with each valid claim receiving a proportional share of the total fund.

Figures for fiscal year 1979-80 are not available yet, but 1978-79 records show only 59,222 individuals registered their dogs and 5,550 kennels registered. That's one dog for every 60 persons living in Kentucky.

State agriculture officials speculate license tags represent less than 10 percent of the dog population.

Farmers who own four or five coon dogs do not pay any attention to the state dog law, said Irene Miller, president of the Franklin county Humane Society.

"We tell them about the law and they say they don't own the dogs anymore," Miller said.

Hawkins said not licensing a dog could be expensive to both the pet's owner and a property owner.

BLACK SHALE MAP AVAILABLE

The Kentucky Geological Survey at the University of Kentucky has released a new map showing the structure and thickness of the Devonian-age black shale in Eastern Kentucky.

Approximately 540,000 acres of black shale—a possible new source for oil—are exposed at the surface in central Kentucky. It ranges in thickness from about 40 feet in Casey county to more than 1,500 feet in Pike county where it is present in the subsurface. Testing has shown that on the average about 15 gallons of crude oil can be extracted from a ton of shale.

Much of Kentucky's natural gas is produced from the Devonian-age black shale in the eastern part of the state where it is present at depths of 2,500 to 5,000 feet.

Knowledge of the geologic structure and thickness of the black shale should aid greatly in the search for oil and gas in Eastern Kentucky. This information will also be valuable in the possible future utilization of the black shale as a source of synthetic petroleum.

A copy of "Structure and Isopach Map of the New Albany-Chattanooga-Ohio Shale (Devonian and Mississippian) in Kentucky: Eastern Sheet" may be ordered from the Kentucky Geological Survey, University of Kentucky, 311 Breckinridge Hall, Lexington 40506.

Settlement School Hosts Writers' Workshop

"The last night of workshop the group visited Mr. Still's cabin. We'll all remember how we sat there in his cabin, some in chairs, others on the floor, as he and the great lady Mrs. Arnow discussed literary properties and news," an aspiring writer said. "I feel that the visit to Still's cabin was the ice cream topping of the great literary feast we had enjoyed all week long."

Last year's Appalachian Writers Workshop at Hindman Settlement School enthused many would-be writers to begin creating with words. This year's workshop is scheduled Aug. 3-9 at the school on the forks of Troublesome Creek in Knott county.

Mike Mullins, workshop coordinator and director of the school says, "It will be an exciting week. It would have to be one of the greatest workshops. Just look at the staff. In addition to James Still we have Harriet Arnow, Wilma Dykeman, Jane Mayhall, Jim Wayne Miller, Gurney Norman, Verna Mae Sloane and Shirley Williams."

Still, a native of Alabama, came to the settlement in the 1930s and became as one with his surroundings. He immediately saw the beauty and strength in mountain faces and the expressive words that set his people apart.

He listened to the Jack tales and the riddles and rusties. He used them in his writing to forever document his people in honesty and love. Among his books are "Hounds on the Mountains," "Way Down Yonder on Troublesome Creek" and "Sporty Creek."

Harriett Simpson Arnow grew up on the Cumberland River. However, it was later as a resident of Michigan that she renewed her ties with home in such books as the unforgettable "The Dollmaker," "Hunter's Horn" and "Seedtime on the Cumberland." Like Still, her books are authentic, readable and interesting accounts of a people.

Wilma Dykeman, noted lecturer, novelist, historian and biographer, has written novels, "The Tall Woman" and "The Far Family."

Jane Mayhall of New York City grew up in Louisville. She is a novelist, poet, essayist and literary critic.

Jim Wayne Miller is well-known for his poetry, his lectures and essays. He authored "Copperhead Cane" and "The Mountains Have Come Closer." Gurney Norman, native of Perry county, is writer-in-residence at the University of Kentucky and wrote "Divine Right's Trip" and "Kinfolks."

Verna Mae Sloane, born in Knott county and lifelong resident, has natural insight in lives of mountain folk. She has written memorable accounts of mountain people and mountain ways including "Common Folks" and more recently "What My Heart Wants to Remember."

Shirley Williams, book editor and feature writer for the Louisville Courier-Journal, grew up in Knott county and graduated from Hindman Settlement School.

Some of these writers now live away from Appalachia but know the mountains and hill people well. They continue to advise aspiring novelists and story writers on writing about the things and people they know. They give advice on using words that create pictures and feelings.

The workshop is limited to 60 residential students. Preference will be given writers from the Appalachian area or who write about Appalachia. "Evening readings, discussions and lectures are open to the public," Mullins adds. "It actually is a week's retreat to share with Kentucky writers and to absorb the sights and sounds of the Hindman area. We love our creeks and our mountains but most of all our people."

Persons interested in the workshop may get other information by contacting Mike Mullins, Appalachian Writers Workshop Coordinator, Hindman Settlement, Hindman, Ky. 41822, phone 6065-785-5475.

Wants OSM Approval For Ky. Stripmine Law

With agreement reached on several disputed issues in Kentucky surface mining statutes, the state's top environmental official has asked the federal Office of Surface Mining to withdraw its remaining objections to the legislation.

Jackie Swigart, secretary of the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, said the statute enacted by the 1980 General Assembly for control of surface coal mining "is as consistent with the federal act as it needs to be."

Swigart announced that six of 21 points raised by OSM with regard to the Kentucky statute have been completely resolved, and portions of two others are no longer of concern.

93% Immunized

Last year, about 93 percent of Kentucky's students in kindergarten through grade 12 were immunized against diphtheria, tetanus, polio, measles and rubella (German measles), according to Dr. Charles Hernandez, the Department for Human Resources assistant commissioner for disease control and epidemiology.

Immunizations are available at local health departments and private physicians' offices.

Under state law, school systems cannot enroll any child who doesn't have an up-to-date immunization certificate, Hernandez said.

Air Force Volunteer

Amos W. Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Johnson, of Teaberry, enlisted in the United States Air Force on July 17th, according to T-Sgt. Jim Brooks, Air Force recruiter in Ashland.

School, Johnson is scheduled to report for active duty September 26th. Upon graduation from the Air Force's six weeks basic training at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, he will receive technical training in administration which is the career field of his choice.

He will be earning credit toward an associate degree through the Community College of the Air Force while attending basic and other Air Force training schools.

The 'Battle of War Creek' Blamed on Secret Service

For a time it was war on War Creek, Breathitt county, the other day, and many residents of the community say federal agents caused the trouble.

A shoot-out involving nine Secret Service agents and an undetermined number of residents of War Creek followed the arrival of the agents who reportedly were on the trail of a counterfeiter. The officers, mistakenly surrounded the home of J. C. Lucas, apparently thinking their quarry had taken refuge there.

The Jackson Times, in its investigation of the resultant affray, was told the federal agents were dressed like hippies, some in dungarees, dirty, with open shirts, their vehicles unmarked and none resembling an officer. The nine piled out of three automobiles, armed with shotguns and revolvers.

The shooting followed. Nobody was hit, but cars and trucks on both sides had windshields shot out and were otherwise damaged.

One resident of the community, Lonnie Miller, about 23, was arrested by the agents on a wanton endangerment count and was placed under $2500 bond by the district court. He claimed he was not guilty, adding, according to the Jackson newspaper, "I was shot at first."

Citizens of War Creek were reported highly disturbed by the federal officers' action. The officers were not available for comment. One resident of the community posed the question:

"What would you do if a bunch of sloppy dressed men drove up to your house and jumped out of their cars with guns in their hands?"

Easter Seal donations have made possible scholarships and fellowships for advanced study by more than 1200 doctors, therapists, and other professional workers to serve the handicapped.

Woods' Homers Part of Summer

By KENNY RICE
Summer brings many things we can count on. Dewey Lake is always jammed with boats on weekends as people seek fun and sun on the water. Tennis courts always fill up with participants as the sun moves behind the hills. The drive-in theaters always show the Robert Mitchum flick, "Thunder Road." Archer Park is always the site for some of the best softball action in Kentucky. And, Larry Woods is always either at or near the top of the Archer League home run race.

As sure as summer follows spring, one can count on Woods smashing a softball and sending it on a majestic flight that ends well beyond the 290-foot mark in the deepest part of the Archer softball field. He does it frequently and, seemingly, with little effort.

Woods is one of the most prolific home run hitters playing in the Kentucky Amateur Softball Association. His blasts are becoming legendary. Like the two times he hit two home runs in one inning. He did it this season against one of the league's top pitchers, Morgan Elkins, of the Kentucky State Police. And there was a game this season when he hit four out of Archer.

"I've seen everybody in the state championship teams where they were loaded with the powerhouse hitters, but I've never seen anything to compare with Larry's four homers in a game," Commissioner Billy Ray Collins says of the feat accomplished during the July 4th tournament.

What is even more amazing about the feat is that Woods had hit four homers in his four trips to the plate in the game. His fifth, and final, time up in the game, brought a hush over the crowd anxious to see a perfect five for five homer day. The leftfielder trotted to the fence as the pitcher waited to deliver to Larry. He sent the pitch over the left field fence, but the leftfielder, with his back pressing against the fence, reached over to make the catch and rob Woods of his fifth homer of the afternoon.

These home runs did not count in the regular league race because they were hit during a tourney, not a league game. Woods won the July 4th Tournament home run award, one of many tourney home run trophies he has collected.

Since coming into the league six years ago, the Prestonsburg city policeman has led the league in homers three times and finished second three times. He has helped his team win the league crown three times with either a second or third place finish the other three times.

His slugging and steady glove at third have made him one of the most sought after players in the league, maybe the most sought after. After breaking into the league with Harold Telephone, he was recruited by Ridgeway Fuel which went on to become one of the best softball teams in Kentucky. When Ridgeway broke up two seasons back, perennial league contender National Mines acquired the annual All Star performer.

For five seasons, 1975-79, Woods and his friend and fellow policeman, Keith Lawson, treated area softball fans to the state's most exciting home run races. Larry won in '75, Keith won in '76. They became teammates with Ridgeway in '77, when Keith won his second straight home run title and Larry came back to win the crown in '78. They were National Mines teammates last season when Larry won his second home run title in a row. The years Keith won the crown, Larry was runnerup, and vice versa. The four homers hit in one game by Woods this season broke the Archer record set by Lawson last season.

After Lawson was tragically wounded in the line of duty over the winter, this great one-two home run punch has been halted.

Larry Woods' homers are a part of summer, but he does not always go to bat with home run on his mind.

"No, I really don't try to hit one out every time I'm up," he added, "But, there are times when I do go for the home run." And those times are a softball fan's delight.

REGIONAL TOURNEY

Archer Park will be the host site for the Women's Class A Regional Tournament, August 1 through 4, and for the Men's Class A Regional Tournament, August 8-11. All this softball action is free to the public.

PAR THE HARD WAY

Martin golfer Terry Sizemore made par the hard way on the No. 9 par-three hole at the Paintsville Country Club. Terry hit his first shot out of bounds. After the one stroke penalty, he hit his next shot off the tee and into the hole for a par.

AN ART EXHIBIT

Who says sportswriters ain't got class? I want to tell you about a professional artist's exhibit at the Public Library.

Why write about an art exhibit in a sports column? Because out of all the hunters and fishermen I've had the privilege of talking with and writing about, I've found they all have an appreciation for wildlife. And that's what this exhibit is about.

From August 9 through 23 at the Public Library in Prestonsburg, Mark Weddington Tackett will have paintings of 45 different species of wildlife in Kentucky on display. It's free to the public. I've had a sneak look at some of the paintings and was very impressed. You will be too.

May Is Honored

R. L. May, wheelsman on the Str. Arthur M. Anderson of U.S.S., Great Lakes Fleet, was recently presented with a decanter set for 25 years service by Capt. G.R. Palmer. Mr. May has served aboard the 767-ft. carrier since 1972.

Historical Society Markers Preserve State's History

Exciting and colorful events in Kentucky history are recorded on more than 1,365 markers which picket the state's highways and roadways. These markers are produced by the Kentucky Historical Society.

Of this total, 271 are related to the Civil War, according to Dianne Wells, chairman of the markers program since 1971. Some 35 concern Daniel Boone and a large number identify Indian raids and Revolutionary War information. Markers also identify early forts, stations and settlements, iron furnaces, salt works, tanneries and Kentuckians who have made significant contributions to history.

Marker No. 871, located in the Russellville (Logan County) county square, identifies the home of John Littlejohn who was born in England in 1756. Littlejohn came to America in 1767 and served as a Methodist minister for 60 years. He was the guardian of the Declaration of Independence and other state papers which were entrusted to him by former President James Madison in the War of 1812.

As the British advanced on Washington in August 1814, the president ordered the national archives to be loaded on a wagon and sent 35 miles to Littlejohn.

Another famous Kentuckian, Mary Ingles, is identified by Marker No. 859 which is located at Big Bone State Park in Boone County. Ingles was reportedly the first white woman in Kentucky. According to legend, Shawnee Indians captured Ingles and her two sons in 1755 at the site of Roanoke, Va.

Eventually, Ingles was separated from her sons and taken to Big Bone Lick where the chief of the tribe adopted her. She was forced to make salt and given very few liberties. Ingles escaped from the tribe, however, and returned to her home in 40 days.

Two other famous Kentuckians, Jereboam and Anna Beauchamp, are commemorated by Marker No. 1077 which is located at the Bloomfield Cemetery in Nelson County.

Edgar Allen Poe is just one author who wrote of the tragedy inspired by the Beauchamps' deep devotion and love.

To avenge his wife's alleged seduction by Col. Solomon Sharp, Beauchamp murdered him at Sharp's home in Frankfort in 1825. Beauchamp and Anna were held in the Frankfort jail.

She was released but joined her husband in his cell, refusing to be separated even by force. He was sentenced to hang, but on execution day, they attempted suicide by stabbing themselves. Her wound was fatal, but he lived to be hanged. Beauchamp's was the first legal hanging in Kentucky. The Beauchamps were buried together in the same coffin by request.

Historical markers also identify significant buildings and sites, such as the Scott County Courthouse. It was the site chosen by Judge J. E. Cantrill for trials of the 20 persons accused of being involved with the assassination of Gov. William Goebel in 1900. Although the murder occurred in Frankfort, the hearings were held in Georgetown to ensure fair trials for those indicted.

The Old Crow Inn in Danville is the oldest existing stone house in Kentucky, and Marker 1376, which identifies it, is located on U.S. 150 in Boyle County. Built in 1784, the house has been enlarged and Doric pillars have been added. The inn was owned by John Crow who came to Harrodsburg with James Harrod and his group of 32 in 1774. Crow made the inn the political and cultural center for the District of Kentucky when the Supreme Court met there, 1783-85.

Marker No. 1274 identifies the Indian Old Fields and is located 11 miles southeast of Winchester on KY 15 in Clark County. This site was called Eskiippakithiki. Sometimes referred to as "Kentake," it was the last of the Kentucky Indian towns, occupied by the Shawnees from 1715 to 1754. Famous early Kentucky explorer John Finley had a store on this site in 1752.

The historical society is funded to erect 35 new markers each year and provide maintenance for those already standing. Individuals and organizations also fund markers.

Suggestions for markers are carefully researched and submitted to county marker chairmen. They make recommendations and send them to the society. Wells and her assistants conduct additional research and forward the applications to a 12-member editing committee selected by General William Buster, director of the Kentucky Historical Society.

After the applications have been checked by the committee for authenticity and clarity of expression, Wells and her assistants make a final review before sending them to Sewah Studios in Marietta, Ohio, where the markers are cast in aluminum.

"When the marker is finished, it is shipped to the appropriate state transportation department district office," Wells explained. "Transportation personnel then erect the marker at a site which they and the county marker chairman have approved."

In 1969 the society published "Guide to Kentucky Historical Highway Markers" which is available to society members for $1.50 and to non-members for $2.

In 1973 a supplement to the original guide was published. It is available to members for $2 and to non-members for $2.25. These publications contain the exact location and wording on all the markers in the state.

You can help preserve Kentucky's heritage by reporting any damage or needed repairs to markers. Reports should be made by contacting Dianne Wells, Kentucky Historical Society, Box H, Frankfort, Ky. 40602.

Puttying—Not Putting

Dennis Halbert, a senior at Berea College, was photographed during the puttying contest, part of the school's 58th annual Labor Day celebration. An agriculture major, he is the son of Mrs. Pearl S. Halbert, of Printer. Labor Day is observed each spring to honor the students who work in the on-campus work program while earning academic degrees. All students at Berea work 10 to 15 hours each week in college offices, service operations and student craft industries.

30 Blood Donors Needed Weekly By Station Here

Many who have passed the Municipal building here recently may have noticed a new sign on the lawn out front. The Central Kentucky Blood Center has opened a substation on the second floor of the building.

The Prestonsburg station is open to receive blood donors three days weekly: Tuesdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Thursdays, 12 noon to 8 p.m.; Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

To be successful, the center needs to draw approximately 30 donors per week, 10 donors a day.

"In order to do this we will be needing to recruit new donors who have not given before and ask that our old donors give more frequently," a station representative said. A person can donate safely every 56 days, up to 5 times each year. The more times per year you donate, the more years blood protection you provide for your family."

Kentucky Ranked Among Top Six In Child Support Enforcement

A recent edition of a federal publication, "Child Support Report," ranked Kentucky in the top six nationally in two categories of child support enforcement activities.

Kentucky ranked second only to Idaho in the increase in successful paternity actions from federal fiscal year 1978 to fiscal year 1979. State figures show the Department for Human Resources more than doubled its successful court cases establishing paternity for children receiving no parental support.

County attorneys working on behalf of Human Resources established 784 cases from Oct. 1, 1978, to Sept. 30, 1979, compared to 367 during the previous fiscal year. That is an increase of 213 percent. The increase compares to an average 11.7 percent increase nationwide.

Kentucky ranked sixth among states in increases in total child support collections for the fiscal year. Collections jumped from $2.5 million to $4.6 million.

Harry Dickerson, director of the child support enforcement division, said the improvements are due to several factors. County attorneys have played a big role in successful court cases, Dickerson said. The division's efforts in establishing paternity also have been aided by a new blood-testing procedure at least 90 percent accurate in establishing that a certain man fathered a certain child.

"Much of the credit for increased success in child support enforcement has to go to the division staff. We've worked hard to see that children get financial support they're entitled to," Dickerson said.

Through a federal program, county attorneys receive 15 percent of total payments established by the court for cases involving a mother receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children. The financial incentive has led more and more county attorneys to take child support cases to court, Dickerson said. The number of county attorneys taking part in the program has increased from 62 in the 1978-79 federal fiscal year to 101 in 1979-80.

The mechanical aspect of digestion begins in the mouth with the action of teeth and tongue serving to break the food into smaller physical components. Progressive constriction of muscles leading to the stomach serve to transfer food from mouth to the stomach. The chemical phase of the digestive process is very complex. For example, enzymes in the digestive juices are involved and each has a specific effect on food. Chemical action, though, actually begins in the mouth with secretions in the saliva. The digestion of proteins is initiated in the stomach while carbohydrate digestion is begun in the mouth.

Many people complain of digestive disorders. There are a great variety of non-prescription medications on the market designed to give relief. With these and all of the other merchandise we carry, the staff at COOLEY APOTHECARY, INC. would be glad to advise you. We also have an excellent prescription service for prescription medication. We're located at 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30; Sat. 9-5.

JUST SAY "CHARGE IT"

Earth Heat Becoming A Hot Item

By Georgette Wagner

Since the 1890s, residents of Boise, Idaho, and Klamath Falls, Oregon, have been heating their homes with water from neighboring hot springs. Until the advent of the energy crunch, no one paid much attention to this unique and rather exotic source of heat. Gas was too cheap and abundant.

No longer. Oil prices have skyrocketed and oil reserves are dwindling. Geothermal energy, as heat from the earth is called, has become a "hot ticket." Already:

- The Geysers geothermal plant produces enough electricity to serve 600,000 homes in northern California.

- Geothermal energy heats a hospital in Texas, a high school in South Dakota, and a YMCA in California.

- Heat from the earth's crust is used to dehydrate onions in Nevada, heat greenhouses in Salt Lake City, and raise prawns in California.

Scientists on the geothermal bandwagon believe that if only one tenth of one percent of the U.S. geothermal resources can be recovered, it would equal all of the coal reserves in the country today.

One expert believes just developing the sources of geothermal energy found in the last few years could reduce oil imports by 20 percent.

Geothermal energy is not cheap. But it is competitive with the price of oil today. A barrel of oil can run as high as $45, while geothermal energy is equivalent to a barrel of oil costing $11-35.

Just developing the sources of geothermal energy found in the last few years could reduce oil imports by 20 percent.

Furthermore, geothermal energy, like solar energy, is non-polluting.

The federal government is enthusiastic enough about geothermal energy to plunk down $150 million for projects testing and developing new geothermal technology. Congress already has passed tax incentives to spur development and is considering more.

But the United States has been slow to recognize the potential of geothermal energy. Iceland, Japan, the Philippines, and New Zealand have utilized geothermal energy for decades.

Perhaps the leader in geothermal energy is Europe, where geothermal energy heats:

- 6000 homes in Budapest, with a goal to heat an additional 100,000 to 200,000 residences;
- 30 acres of greenhouses in Szentel, Hungary; and
- 17,500 apartments in France, with a target of 500,000 more dwellings by 1985.

This country's foot dragging is explained by a maze of problems facing geothermal energy development. Technical and legal factors have not been ironed out completely. And development requires a major investment, one the large energy companies have been unwilling to make.

What Is Geothermal Energy?

Imagine the earth as a ball made up of three layers. The core is a hot mass of liquid iron and nickel. The next layer is a covering of hot, semi-molten rock called the mantle. The top layer is the crust. The crust is not solid, but a series of continental plates that float on top of the mantle.

As the plates move, the mantle is disturbed and occasionally hot rock called magma shoots up toward the surface. Magma that breaks through the crust forms a volcano, but magma trapped underground is a source of geothermal heat.

Most magma cools eventually. The one exception is magma composed of radioactive elements which, as they decay, release heat. Some deposits of this radioactive rock, called pluton, have been generating heat for 200 to 400 million years.

Geothermal heat can be either wet or dry. Dry geothermal energy is hot rock, which is buried under the surface. It represents 80 percent of the U.S. geothermal resources.

Wet geothermal energy comes in two categories: hydrothermal and geopressurized. Hydrothermal resources are geysers, hot springs, and other sources of hot water and vapor which are heated by contact with magma and pluton. The best known example is the geyser Old Faithful in Yellowstone National Park.

Geopressurized resources are pools of hot salty water and methane gas that are trapped under pressure. Prospectors drilling for oil often tapped these pools and would curse the hot, smelly water that spewed out.

Hot dry rock, hydrothermal, and geopressurized resources exist throughout the United States, but the most accessible resources lie in the West and Gulf Coast. Nonetheless, one crew recently "struck hot water" 30 miles from Times Square in Fort Monmouth, New Jersey.

Hydrothermal energy is the easiest of the three to "mine" and the bulk of geothermal energy used today is hydrothermal. This is how the homes of Boise and Klamath Falls are heated. Water from nearby hot springs is run through a heat exchanger, which extracts the heat and pipes hot air through the homes.

Similar systems are used to heat hospitals, greenhouses, and agricultural operations like Geothermal Food Processors in Fernley, Nevada. There, a hot spring has been tapped to dehydrate 34,000 pounds of onions a day.

With the exception of the Geysers plant in northern California, most hydrothermal energy is not hot enough to produce electricity; it can be used solely for low temperature operations such as heating homes and processing food. To generate electricity, water must turn to steam, which then propels a generator.

Three Kinds of Energy

Geopressurized energy, which is concentrated in Texas and the Gulf States, represents not one, but three forms of energy: geothermal, hydraulic, and natural gas. According to the theory, developers should be able to first tap the methane for natural gas.

Next, prospectors would extract the heat from the salty pool. Finally, the pool itself would be opened and the energy released by the waters bursting forth would be harnessed to electrical generators.

As intriguing as the concept is, it is not "a piece of cake," as old time oil prospectors used to say. The first step came with the reopening of a well that was originally closed when developers found geopressurized water rather than oil. Methane was successfully extracted from the southern Louisiana well.

The next step is a site near Alvin, Texas, where University of Texas geologists are conducting a two-year experiment. They hope to drill 16,500 feet into a geopressurized pool and test whether hot water as well as methane can be extracted economically.

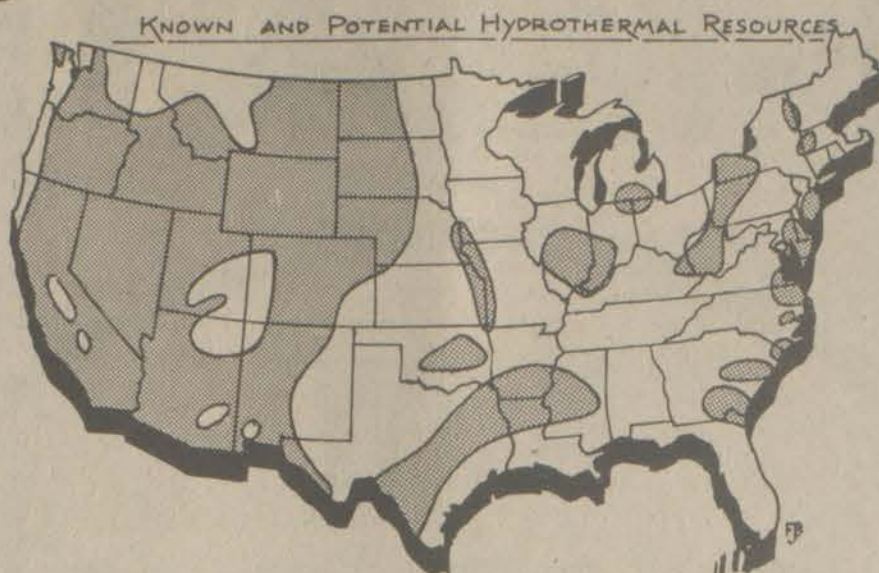

For all three types of geothermal energy, scientists are examining the concept of cascading heat. Under this theory, geothermal heat is reused. At Raft River, Idaho, for example, hydrothermal waters are used to generate electricity. Then the still warm water heats a fishfarm pond and a greenhouse before being disposed.

Despite its advantages, geothermal energy is not without its problems. Although non polluting, geothermal energy can harm the environment. A geothermal mine could lower the ground level, up to several feet in a few years. And some geothermal operations might trigger seismic disturbances in earthquake-prone areas.

Furthermore, care must be taken with the disposal of wastewater. If too hot or too full of minerals, the water could kill plant and fish life. Geopressurized water also has a foul smell.

Who Owns It?

One of the biggest headaches facing geothermal energy developers is red tape. Geothermal energy is largely undefined legally. Take hydrothermal energy, for example. Does hydrothermal energy come under existing laws for subsurface water rights? Or should property owners own "heat rights" as well? Geopressurized energy is equally complicated legally. Is the fluid a mineral, a water, or a heat right—or all three? Satisfying the legal requirements and obtaining the necessary permits for a geothermal development can take years. Despite these obstacles, forward looking scientists are confident that geothermal energy is one part of the solution of the energy crisis. Heat from the earth may never replace oil as an energy resource, but the warmth steaming beneath our feet does offer an alternative.

Thought to Remember

By LARRY BURKE
Insurmountable! This word is one of the most tragic we as humans ever face. It means we are confronted with something which we are not able to overcome.

Vary few people have not had the experience of meeting at least one task in their lives which seemed insurmountable to them. This is the time we realize we are mere mortals, and our limitations stop us cold in our tracks.

Thousands of years ago Moses was leading the children of Israel out of bondage when he met the insurmountable Red Sea. You know the story — the awesome sea before them, the advancing Egyptian army behind them. The word insurmountable would surely apply to this situation.

Then a voice said, "Wait — the waters will part". What then happened was the insurmountable disappeared.

This is true with our lives. At the last moment, when all seems lost, our Red Seas part and we continue on our journey. Those who listen carefully always hear the voice saying, "Wait — the waters will soon part". And by listening and waiting, we soon find the pathway through the sea.

Unemployment, Black Lung Payments Said Being Rushed

The U.S. Labor Department began rushing distribution of overdue benefit checks worth millions of dollars to some 600,000 unemployment insurance recipients and 8,500 black lung compensation claimants, immediately upon President Carter's signing of a $16.6 billion supplemental appropriation on July 8, Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall announced.

Of the total federal funds approved, approximately $1.9 billion went into depleted Labor Department accounts that have been unable to pay certain unemployment benefit recipients since early June and new black lung benefit claimants since April.

Long-awaited enactment of this appropriation by the Congress set in motion special disbursement procedures designed to put money into the hands of affected workers within two or three days, Marshall said.

The $1.9 billion Labor Department appropriation included $1.5 billion to replenish the depleted Federal Unemployment Benefits Account (FUBA), which is the source of unemployment insurance benefits paid to jobless federal and postal enrollees under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), and workers laid off as a result of the Redwood Park Expansion Act.

The department had requested in early May additional money to keep the fund operating through fiscal 1980, but FUBA funds began to run out for workers in many states during the first week in June. The great majority of workers affected by the fund shortage were trade adjustment assistance beneficiaries who lost their jobs due to increased imports; most of these were autoworkers. The shortage did not affect workers paid out of state accounts and the Federal Unemployment Insurance Trust Fund.

Checks processed under accelerated procedures worked out by the Department's Employment and Training Administration with state employment security agencies are retroactive to as far back as June 3, when FUBA funds first began to dry up in some states.

The department estimates that $1.1 billion of the $1.5 billion FUBA appropriation will be disbursed during the remainder of fiscal 1980. The excess will be carried over in the fiscal 1981, beginning Oct. 1, 1980.

Of the $1.1 billion estimated to be paid out this year, some $880 million is expected to go to trade adjustment assistance beneficiaries, $108 million to veterans, $62 million to federal and postal workers, $45 million to CETA public service jobs enrollees, and $5 million to California redwood workers.

The remainder of the $1.9 billion Labor Department supplemental funding—$392,347,000—went to the black lung program for the remainder of fiscal 1980, as an advance from the U.S. Treasury General Fund.

Checks totaling $114 million in retroactive black lung benefits were mailed out of Philadelphia immediately to 8,500 coal miners and survivors of miners, whose compensation has been delayed since April.

All costs of the black lung program are ultimately borne by the coal industry, primarily through the federal government-administered trust fund which is financed by a 50 cents per ton assessment on underground-mined coal and a 25 cents per ton assessment on surface-mined coal.

When these revenues are not adequate to meet the program's obligations, advances from the general fund of the U.S. Treasury may be authorized by Congress. All such advances must be repaid with with interest.

The shortage of trust fund money for this fiscal year was anticipated last fall, and the department submitted to Congress a request for advance of the funds in January 1980.

Marshall said the department's Employment Standards Administration succeeded in greatly speeding up the processing of the huge number of claims that resulted from the March 1978 amendments liberalizing the Black Lung Benefits Act. As a result, he said, so many benefits claims were processed that financial demands on the fledgling trust fund outstripped budget authority approved for 1980. Claims presently are being processed at the rate of 11,000 per month, with approvals running about 3,000 per month.

Of the $423 million advanced for the program at the start of the fiscal year, only $88 million remained in the trust fund at the end of March. To lessen the impact of the fund depletion, the department in April started withholding payment of retroactive benefits to all newly-approved beneficiaries.

Claimants approved for black lung compensation are eligible for benefits retroactive to the date of their filing of a claim, or to Jan. 1, 1974, whichever is later. The retroactive amounts are usually sent with the first regular monthly compensation check in a lump sum.

By holding up payment of the retroactive benefits in the face of a fund shortage, the department was able to make all regular monthly payments to every beneficiary on the rolls, including those newly approved.

OSM Awards $130,000 To Put Out Pike Fire

Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus announced that a $129,866 contract has been awarded to a Pikeville firm to extinguish a burning coal waste pile affecting 25 residents of Pike County.

The contract was awarded to Pike County Construction Company for the emergency project near Collins, approximately 10 miles south of Pikeville.

"Noxious fumes and smoke, as well as open flames, are arising from the waste piles," said Walter N. Heine, Director of Interior's Office of Surface Mining (OSM).

"Three utility gas lines lie on or near the burning waste pile and there are seven homes in the immediate vicinity, four of them within 100 feet of the pile," Heine said.

David C. Short, OSM's Region II Director in Knoxville, Tennessee, said the waste material apparently was dumped there approximately 25 years ago. He said no one has been able to determine who was responsible for the dumping and no bonds cover the problem.

"Corrective action," Short said, "will include removing approximately 6,000 cubic yards of burning refuse and extinguishing the fire both in that material and the 6,000 cubic yards remaining at the site. The refuse will be mixed with non-burnable material, recontoured, and revegetated." The work is expected to take about 30 days.

Funds for the work will come from the Federal share of reclamation fees levied on current coal production, under the 1977 Federal Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act, to reclaim abandoned mine lands.

Kentucky Active Competitor For International Markets

According to an old saying, a person is a good salesperson if he can sell an icebox to an Eskimo or sand to an Arab. Good sales by Kentucky manufacturers have put some unusual products in a variety of countries. For example, Kentucky companies sell sunlamps to the Philippines, kayaks to Canada, used whiskey barrels to Scotland and bowling balls to Central America.

Although the Bluegrass State is best known for its bourbon and tobacco exports, the diversity in products illustrates the number of small businesses that are actively competing in the international market, said Commerce Commissioner Jack C. Segell. "Based on my European trade trip and conversations with European businessmen, there are opportunities for Kentucky companies to export more products," he said.

Due to aggressive efforts from businesses, the Department of Commerce and the international office, Kentucky's percentage of small firms involved in exporting is more than three times the national average, said William Savage, director of the international division in the Department of Commerce. About 24 percent of Kentucky firms export, as compared to a national average of 7 percent. The number of Kentucky firms reporting international trade has increased from 224 in 1976 to nearly 600 in 1980.

Parker Tobacco Co. of Maysville is a Kentucky business that has been exporting for 20 years. The company buys tobacco from Kentucky and other parts of the world, processes it, and exports it worldwide.

About $9 million of the company's $25 million annual sales is from exports, said part-owner Alex Parker. "In fact, if we hadn't gone overseas, we might not be in business today," he commented.

Usually, the importing country sends its own representatives to select and inspect the tobacco before it is shipped overseas.

However, Parker Tobacco still finds it necessary to maintain strong ties to other countries. One of Parker's sons lives in Brazil, and two other sons have been traveling in Honduras and Africa. "There's no way to do it besides with personal contact," Parker commented.

During the peak burley season 600 persons are employed day and night to process the tobacco, Parker said. The offshore tobacco that is imported into the United States for processing provides employment for 100 persons for an extra three months, he added.

As the second-largest employer in Bell County, Middlesboro Tanning Co. employs 250 persons to finish shoe leather for export to foreign shoe manufacturers. The company's increased exporting resulted from the shoe industry's move overseas, said Robert Anderson, Jr., in the sales division.

Because it takes 120 separate hand operations to make shoes, the industry has expensive labor costs, Anderson said. With much lower labor costs overseas, the shoe manufacturers have moved into countries such as Korea, Canada, Europe and the Middle East.

The company does most of its sales directly from Middlesboro by using a Telex and quoting prices in response to inquiries. It is soliciting trade with China and has filled orders for the Soviet Union.

Much of the lumber exported by Mor-Wood Sales in Morehead goes to underdeveloped countries. Mor-Wood has an $8 million contract to export wooden cartons to Libya. One day an international representative from La Choy was in the plant and asked where he could get a quarter of a million wooden boxes, said Larry Cook, general manager. The company looked at the order, and took on a Libyan contract.

"Out of every 30 inquiries, we try to zero in on five or six," Cook said. "We try to weed them out so we don't end up chasing rainbows."

Although Mor-Wood has been exporting for just two years, the exports now account for between 30 and 45 percent of sales, Cook said. Mor-Wood employs around 100 persons at the sawmills, plus support personnel.

Sargent and Greenleaf in Nicholasville began an exporting program in 1977 and already has export sales of more than $5 million annually, said President Rex Parmelee. The company manufactures and sells high security locks to countries all over the world. Only Iran, the Soviet Union and several African countries don't import from Sargent & Greenleaf.

Sargent & Greenleaf security locks are used to secure government documents in many of the NATO countries, and are required by law in some U.S. government buildings. The company decided to begin an export program when it moved into a new factory and needed to use the additional space, Parmelee said.

Although the locks were already being sold overseas by trading companies, Sargent & Greenleaf thought it could profit from its own export program. The company established relationships with U.S. embassies in other countries and held seminars for banks, government and safemakers.

The U.S. and state departments of commerce were very helpful with determining the legal and technical aspects of exporting, Parmelee said.

Sargent & Greenleaf has since decided to do its own freight forwarding and packaging and processes some of its own banking. As a complete export group, the company is now looking for other compatible Kentucky-made products for export, Parmelee explained.

With exports accounting for 30 percent of its sales, the company has not had to lay off any of the 350 Nicholasville employees, despite a domestic lull, Parmelee said.

Another rather technical product is exported by Prewitt & Associates of Lexington. The company manufactures a recorder-strain, which is a device used to measure the movement strain on airplanes, bridges and buildings.

The device records the movements on a metallic disk. After inspecting the disk, an engineer can determine the effect traffic has on a bridge and whether it is safe, said Fay Yount, export sales manager.

The company finds it necessary to export because of the specialized nature of the device, Yount said. Exporting now accounts for 80 percent of Prewitt's sales.

Prewitt attracted international attention by advertising in trade publications and using direct mail-outs. It now exports to Japan, Australia, Canada, Kuwait, Hong Kong and several other countries. The boom in exporting among small and medium businesses has resulted in a definite increase in employment, Savage said. It has also spurred development of the state's international trade services, which will make future exports even easier, he added.

"Kentucky is in the vanguard of exporting programs," Savage explained. Other states are inquiring about our program so they can better design theirs," he said. "This has established Kentucky as a stable exporting state with a definite commitment to exporting," Savage said.

Exporting is an integral part of Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr.'s economic development program, Segell said. "Kentucky will continue an active export program as a hedge against any future U. S. economic slowdowns," he added.

Safety Group Warns Of Heated Child Car Seats

To all the problems Kentuckians face during the above-normal temperatures, consider one more.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has issued warnings about the intense summer weather overheating car interiors, especially the vinyl and metal on child restraints.

The NHTSA has developed the following precautionary measures:

- Before placing your child in a child restraint system, check the device. If it is too hot, place a towel or blanket in the seat before buckling your child in.
- Infant and child seats get just as hot as the car seat, so when possible park in the shade.
- If you must park in direct sunlight, cover the car seat and child restraint system with a light-colored towel or blanket.
- Never let your child ride unrestrained on the regular seats of your auto. Always use a child restraint system selected on the basis of the child's age, weight and height or use the vehicle seat belt. Place the child in the back seat whenever possible. If the child can sit up, use the lap belt rather than no restraint system at all.

Six Named To Head Cystic Fibrosis Drive

Charles Thayer, president of the Kentucky-West Virginia chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation, has named Mrs. Diane Ward, Auxier; Miss Sherry Ratliff, and Mrs. Janice Hall, Martin; Mr. and Mrs. Bob Howard, Wheelwright; and Mrs. Lucy Wallen, Minnie; as chairpersons of the 1980 Cystic Fibrosis "Breath of Life" Campaign for their respective communities in Floyd county.

The annual campaign, designed to raise funds to support programs aimed at combatting the disease and providing improved patient care, is also regarded as the major public education tool of the CF Foundation. Details of the community campaigns to be held this fall, will be announced soon by the individual chairmen.

In addition, Thayer also announced that September 21-27 will be recognized across the country as "National Cystic Fibrosis Week." The purpose of the week, recently signed into law by President Carter, is to increase public awareness and understanding of cystic fibrosis.

"By supporting Floyd county's 'Breath of Life' campaign, local citizens will be buying time and hope for the many thousands of children—and their families—whose lives are affected by cystic fibrosis," Thayer said.

Tiny Miss America Contestant

Cristi Leigh Thompson, four-year-old daughter of Burbon and Ilene Thompson, of Martin, has been chosen to compete for Tiny Miss America in the preliminary meet in Lexington, Sept. 6 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

She has four brothers, Terry, Tommy, Ronald and Michael. Her paternal grandparents are Josephine Thompson, of Martin, and the late Ballard Thompson. Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wilhite, of Ligon.

She was chosen through a candidate-at-large system and is being sponsored by the Allen Dental Center, of Allen, Hall's Pharmacy, of Martin, and East Ky. Marine, of Pikeville.

Humane Society Plans Supper Here Aug. 2

A soup bean supper will be held at the high school cafeteria here from noon until 7 p.m. Saturday, August 2, by the Floyd County Humane Society. Tickets may be purchased from members of the Society, at the animal shelter, or at the door. All proceeds will be for the benefit of the work of the sponsoring group.

For those who would like to be a member of the Humane Society, membership cards are on sale at the animal shelter on the old Middle Creek Road.

Begins Second Term of Office

Floyd Superintendent of Schools Pete Grigsby, Jr. recently took the oath of office for a second four year term. Administering the oath was John M. Stumbo, chairman of the Floyd County Board of Education.

Soviet Army Moves On U.S. Technology

The Soviet Union has the United States to thank for its advanced technology in air defense, military ground transportation and multiple independently targeted re-entry vehicles (MIRVs), charges Ralph Kinney Bennett, senior editor of Reader's Digest's Washington Bureau.

Despite an embargo on high-technology items prompted by pictures of Soviet soldiers rolling into Afghanistan on trucks built with American help, thousands of "non-critical" items continue to flow to the U.S.S.R.—motors, office machines, machine tools, tractors among them—Bennett reports in the August issue of the magazine.

In effect, this places the U.S. in the difficult and costly position of being forced to compete against itself in the arms race. For the past ten years "the Kremlin, moving further away from consumer goods, devoted an astonishing 15 percent of gross national product to its military might," Bennett notes. In contrast, the U.S. spends about five percent of GNP on defense.

Major breakthroughs for the Soviets were the acquisition of computer "chips" and machines capable of making miniature ball bearings (essential in the assembly of a missile-guidance system) during the detente period of the Nixon Administration. The chips arrived in Russia by way of Poland, when the sale of a complete plant for the manufacture of integrated circuits was approved in 1974. The miniature ball bearings were harder to come by, since the Pentagon opposed selling them the one machine essential to their production. But, as Bennett points out, "In 1972 Secretary of State Henry Kissinger overrode opposition, and the Soviets were able to buy 168 of the machines," strengthening their MIRV program considerably.

The Office of Export Administration (OEA) in the Department of Commerce is charged with the responsibility of preventing inadvertent sale of militarily sensitive items. It was this office that approved the sale of a $6-million computer to Zil, the largest truck plant in Russia and producer of military trucks.

Bennett urges removing export control from Commerce and establishing a clear set of priorities for U.S. security interests; an evaluation of sales based on their impact on the Soviet economy rather than their U.S. value; and the establishment of a basic never-sell list.

"In the end," he concludes, "the United States can no longer ignore the fact that the Soviet Union remains a garrison state in which everything serves a military-political purpose. We must not contribute to that purpose through ill-advised trade."

Getting the Airline Bump

When your airline flight leaves—you may be left behind.

Since most airlines overbook their flights to a certain extent, you can be "bumped" off your flight even though you have a valid ticket and a confirmed reservation. "Bumping" occurs when there are more passengers registered for a flight than there are seats available. Therefore, some ticket holders will not be able to travel on that flight.

Although overbooking and "bumping" are legal, those who are "bumped" against their will are usually entitled to some compensation.

When an airline discovers one of its flights has been overbooked it is required to seek out people who are willing to sell their seats back to the airlines before "bumping" anyone involuntarily. If you're not in a hurry to arrive at your destination, you may be interested in selling your ticket back to the airlines.

However, before you consider selling your seat, you should make sure another flight is available soon and that the airline will pay for any expenses you might have while waiting for an alternate flight.

Since there is no set amount of compensation for "bumping" yourself, you will have to negotiate with the airlines for an acceptable sum. Keep in mind that you will have to accept an amount of the airline's choosing.

If an airline cannot find enough people who are willing to sell back their seats, they may "bump" a passenger involuntarily. Those passengers who are involuntarily "bumped" are almost always entitled to compensation equal to the cost of their ticket.

If you are "bumped" against your will, the airlines must reimburse you the one-way fare to your destination. If they can't arrange another flight which is scheduled to reach your destination or your next stopover within two hours of your original flight, or four hours in the case of international flight, your amount of compensation will double.

In either case, you will always get to keep your original ticket to use on the alternate flight or to refund. The compensation is merely to pay for your inconvenience.

To make sure you qualify for compensation, you should always obtain a confirmed reservation. (The airline can tell you how to get one.) You should also plan to arrive at the boarding gate at least 10 minutes before departure. Many airlines choose to "bump" those who arrive last at the airport.

All airlines are required to have written explanations of how they determine which passengers are involuntarily "bumped." You can learn how to reduce your chances of being bumped by calling the airline and asking for its "bumping" priorities.

If you feel getting "bumped" has cost you more than the airline is willing to pay, you can try to negotiate a higher settlement with the airlines complaint department. If that does not resolve your grievance, you may take the airlines to Small Claims Court.

However, you must remember not to endorse any payment from the airlines if you plan legal action. Consumers who have airline complaints which they cannot work out with the company should write the: Civil Aeronautics Board, Bureau of Consumer Affairs, Washington, D.C. 20428.

Consumers having complaints about the practices of Kentucky business should write the: Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Emergency Feed Program Given New Period Options

Secretary of Agriculture, Bob Bergland, recently authorized an optional method for determining eligibility for the emergency feed program which could allow participation by more farmers.

Under the option, county offices of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service will consider a livestock feeding period that runs from the date of application to the end of the crop year and will consider both the feed a farmer has on hand as well as the estimated production for the rest of the year.

Previously, county offices determined that the program's feeding period ended when additional feed normally became available to the farmer.

Bergland said the option will allow a farmer to reserve some of the farm's production for winter feed and use purchased feed to meet current needs. The regular requirement that the feeding period end on the day when additional feed normally becomes available on the farm sometimes results in a hardship for some producers, Bergland said.

Under the emergency feed program, county offices authorize financial aid to farmers when a natural disaster reduces the amount of feed normally produced on the applicant's farm and the applicant must buy feed in larger-than-normal quantities.

Participants may be reimbursed up to 50 percent of the cost for feed purchased. This, however, may not exceed 2 cents per pound in terms of feed grain equivalent.

Approximately 200 of the top water skiers from seven states will compete in the Southern Regional Water Ski Tournament Aug. 1-3 on Cypress Lakes near Gilbertsville. The event will include some champion national skiers, since this is a qualifying tournament for the national contest.

Bleacher seating will be available for the first 1,000 spectators. Additional persons are invited to bring a lawn chair and sunbathe.

Competition begins at 8 a.m. each day.

QUESTION:

"Our natural gas bills go up and down with the seasons. Any way to change that?"

ANSWER:

"Columbia's Budget Payment Plan evens them out. You pay the same every month, summer and winter."

August is sign-up month for the Columbia Budget Payment Plan, which means that starting in September, your natural gas bills can be averaged out, and you'll have the same, predictable amount to pay each month. Summer and winter.

For example, a family with a total bill for the year of $564.00 will pay $47.00 each month on the Budget Payment Plan. And have the assurance of knowing what each bill will be. Without the Budget Payment Plan, a summer bill could be as low as $12.00, but their February bill could reach $95.00.

Gone are the extremes. You'll pay more in the summer, but you'll pay a lot less in the winter. And at the end of 12 months, if you've paid for more natural gas than you've used, you get a credit.

Over one-third of our residential customers are now using the Budget Payment Plan. And August is the month to sign up. So act soon. To start the Plan—or receive a brochure that explains it more fully—contact your Columbia Gas office. Also ask for a copy of our free conservation tips booklet, "The Everyday Energy Saver's Guide."

The FDA: Product Police and Consumer Protection

By Barry Yeoman

Does your television emit a safe amount of radiation? What's really in the cosmetics you buy? Is peanut butter made according to recognized standards?

These things are directly regulated by the Food and Drug Administration, a branch of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare. The physicians, chemists, nutritionists, microbiologists and pharmacologists at the FDA try to make sure that your food, drugs and cosmetics are safe, that the products you buy are fairly labeled, that you will not be exposed to unsafe levels of radiation, and that restaurant and interstate travel facilities are sanitary. The consumer safety officers investigate complaints and inspect plants. The lawyers and compliance officers interpret and enforce the law, and the consumer affairs officers work with consumer groups.

The FDA has many functions. It inspects new plants where food, drugs, televisions, medical devices and cosmetics are made, to assure that these products are safe for consumer use. Before drugs, medical devices and foods are even put on the market, they are inspected and approved. The FDA inspects every batch of insulin and antibiotics, and even most color additives before they can be used. It makes sure that foods made according to a set recipe meet set standards. It also sets standards for products that emit radiation.

After a food or drug has been put on the market, the FDA will obtain samples to make sure that it is safe. For example, last year the FDA urged caution on the use of propoxyphene, best known as Darvon, a drug prescribed for killing mild or moderate pain.

Thirty million prescriptions for propoxyphene had been issued the year before, and 1000-2000 deaths had occurred as a result. Most of these deaths were termed suicides, but it was also observed that accidental deaths may have occurred when people took only slightly higher than the maximum recommended dose. The FDA issued a warning which said:

"People who use propoxyphene for relief of mild pain should be careful not to take more than the recommended dose or to mix the drug with alcohol or certain other drugs... Disregard of this advice may have fatal consequences."

The FDA is also reevaluating all propoxyphene products to determine which are effective, and if it should be more carefully controlled or if it should be taken off the market entirely.

What You See/What You Get

It is the FDA that develops labeling regulations. Here again, the FDA's scope includes prescription products and consumer goods. Medicine labels must be approved so that doctors know exactly what they are prescribing. Cosmetic labels must list ingredients; some foods require nutrition listings.

Legally, the FDA cannot recall a product. Most recalls are carried out voluntarily by the producer or distributor. Sometimes this is based on findings of the manufacturer; otherwise it is by the FDA's findings. If the company does not comply (and this is rare), the FDA can seek a court order authorizing the federal government to seize the defective or dangerous product.

A recall does not necessarily mean that the product will be taken off the shelf. Perhaps the violation can be corrected easily. This may be through relabeling, repairing, or modifying a product without taking it off the market. Whether this is done or the product is actually removed and returned to the manufacturer, another role of the FDA is to issue public warnings when a hazardous product has been found.

Besides not having the power to order recalls, the Food and Drug Administration has other limitations. It cannot require approval for the safety of cosmetics before they are sold; only afterwards can it take legal action to halt sale of the product. Products made and sold within the same state are out of the jurisdiction of the agency; interstate commerce must be involved. The FDA cannot control the price of any product, nor can it directly regulate advertising, except of prescription drugs and certain medical devices.

Consumer Education

The consumer information end of the Food and Drug Administration is extensive. A whole series of "We Want You To Know About" pamphlets has been published about microwave oven radiation, prescription drugs, medicines sold without prescriptions, etc. The last brochure, for example tells consumers that:

"Each drug (or medicine) you take not only acts on the body but may also alter the effect of any other drugs you are taking. Sometimes this can cause dangerous—even fatal—reactions.

"For example, aspirin increases the blood-thinning effect of medication prescribed for patients with heart disease. Therefore, a patient who has been taking such a medication may risk hemorrhage if he uses aspirin whenever he gets a headache. Before using any combination of drugs—prescription drugs with OTC (over the counter) drugs, or several OTC drugs together—it is important that you ask your doctor and follow his advice."

What Can You Do?

The public can play a role in the FDA. In fact, the agency invites you to express your views about current policies. You can respond to rulemaking proposals published in the Federal Register, petition directly to the FDA Commissioner for a change in regulation (write to the FDA for standard petition style), or become a consumer representative in an FDA advisory committee.

The Federal Register publishes FDA notices. The notice of intent invites comment on plans to change or issue regulations. The notice may be issued as a press release, as an announcement at public meetings, or as a study draft. A study draft is an examination of the issues before a formal proposal is drawn up.

The notice of public meetings or briefings is usually issued as a press release. The purpose of a public meeting is to inform the public about a proposal or a change, explaining the issues involved and what the effects of the change will be.

The notice of public hearing announces those legal proceedings used in administering the FDA's regulatory programs. All interested people may submit oral or written testimony.

The Federal Register is available at main branch public libraries and local U.S. congressional offices. Remember, when you give an opinion, the most weight will be given to it if it provides new data and scientific findings about the subject of the proposal. The FDA prefers that you submit four copies; one is acceptable, though. Your opinion can be filed in any form in the Office of the Food and Drug Administration's Hearing Clerk, Room 4-65, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Maryland 20857.

You can also contribute your ideas and opinions at consumer exchange meetings. These are held regularly in the Capitol area with national consumer leaders; additional meetings are regularly scheduled by all FDA district offices. These meetings are held so that consumers can help FDA officials establish priorities for current and future health concerns. Also, these meetings facilitate exchanges between local FDA offices and consumers.

Reporting Defects

On the most basic level, it is your right—and indeed your obligation—to report defective goods, be they insanitary, mislabeled, or in any other way harmful. There are 130 FDA field offices that handle this information. Your complaint can either be in writing or by phone.

FDA local offices provide educational materials; they also can put you in contact with a consumer affairs office that will provide information. They can, for instance, provide tips for buyers of microwave ovens.

"Don't try to test the oven yourself with any of the devices that are sold to consumers for such purposes. The FDA has tested a number of these devices and found that many of them are inaccurate and unreliable. The testing devices used by public health authorities to measure oven leakage are tested for accuracy by the FDA."

The Food and Drug Administration has advisory committees pertaining to various subjects, and consumer representatives are selected for these committees. To become a representative, there must be an opening, you must not have a conflict of interest, and you must be selected after being nominated by an organization.

The FDA has a special interest in making sure women and minorities are adequately represented on these committees. If you are selected you receive a daily compensation fee of $128, plus travel and per diem (for non-Capitol area residents).

For more information about the FDA or the products it regulates, call or write to your local office or write to FDA, HFJ-10, 5600 Fishers Lane, Rockville, Maryland 20857. Specify what subject you want to know about.

The FDA publishes a magazine called FDA Consumer, written for the public, with articles about everything from DES and the bee sting vaccine to care of pregnant mothers and nitrate-free bacon. To subscribe for a year, send $10 to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Tourism—an Old, Old Pastime

By Neyle Shackelford
UK College of Agriculture

If you think tourism is a comparatively modern activity, listen to this: Reading back into history, especially Roman history, the evidence is that it is an old old pastime.

More than that, research reveals that ancient Roman tourists behaved like modern American vacationers. They stopped at motels, complained about the food, bought paperback books, and spent beyond their means.

But the Romans faced a few unusual hazards not likely to be encountered by tourists of today. Current travelers will not likely run the risk of being sold into slavery or becoming unwilling cannibals.

Before the Roman Empire declined and fell, it had built some 50,000 miles of first rate roads stretching all the way from Scotland to the Sahara Desert and from western Spain to the Euphrates. On these roads a Roman rode in the most luxurious carriage he could afford. The philosopher Seneca once took a trip in a compact model, but the Stoic had to admit he felt wretched all the way.

On the road, Seneca and other scholars perused the ancient equivalent of paperbacks—parchment books that were more convenient to carry than the ordinary papyrus scrolls.

Some wealthy travelers slept in their carriages or in tents, foreshadowing modern campers. Others stayed in expensive inns. Strabo, the well-traveled Greek geographer, recommended several inns where the food was excellent.

Along the major roads were "mansions," rowdy lodging places where a Roman could pull up his chariot and spend the night. These places, however, were something less than ideal. Some of the motel keepers watered the wine, stuffed beds with grass instead of feathers, and grossly overcharged. They were often in league with highwaymen who kidnaped wayfarers and sold them into slavery.

These innkeepers were often careless, too, with the quality of food they served. One guest found what looked like a human finger joint in his otherwise excellent stew. His suspicion was quickly confirmed by his traveling companion who was none other than Galen, the great physician and anatomist.

The Roman poet, Horace, often wrote complainingly of these "knaveish publicans." On one trip he griped about being kept awake by noisy frogs and a "designing wench," the daughter of a donkey driver.

It is written that Romans, even as Americans today, delighted in visiting historical landmarks. They loved to travel to Greece and western Asia Minor where professional guides expounded the history and legends of Athens, Delphi, Ephesus, and other centers. And like some cities of today, Greek cities revived and staged festivals to attract tourists. Obscure celebrations such as Poke Sallet, Strawberry, and Apple Butter festivals became common because promoters never missed an opportunity to attract "new money" into their home towns.

In those olden times a well-heeled Roman never had to carry more than 50 denarii in cash. Just as now, banks issued traveler's checks, but the fee was a stiff 12 percent of their value.

So as can be seen from the foregoing, there is little that is new about tourism and that human nature never changes. It also offers additional evidence that, to a great extent, history ever repeats itself.

State Crime Rate Up 6.2 Percent in 1979

If you were the victim of a robbery or a violent assault last year, take heart. There are many other Kentuckians who know exactly how you feel.

The state released its latest annual crime statistics recently and, according to that report, the number of robberies reported during 1979 was up 14.2 percent. The rate of increase for aggravated assaults was almost as high, 13.5 percent.

In Floyd county, total crimes were up from 387 in 1978 to 561 in 1979, although robberies dropped from six to four. Murders dropped from nine to two and manslaughter from three to none, but rapes were up from six to nine.

State Police Commissioner Kenneth E. Brandenburg, whose agency compiles those statistics annually based on data received from all state, county and local law enforcement agencies in Kentucky, said that the sharp rise in robberies and aggravated assaults was the chief factor behind an overall 6.2 percent increase in Kentucky's major crime rate for 1979.

The other offenses traditionally included in making that calculation are murder, rape, burglary, larceny and auto theft.

Rape, down by slightly under 1 percent, was the only offense to show a decrease. Murder was up by 5.3 percent, burglary by 3.8 percent, larceny by 7.2 percent and auto theft by 3.1 percent.

Related arrest figures also showed juveniles as having been involved in nearly one-third of all the major crimes cleared by arrest. Juvenile involvement was heaviest in auto theft, burglary and larceny.

The opening pages of the report also contained a special dedication to the two state policemen, one Maysville patrolman and two deputy sheriffs, one from Wolfe County and one from Pike County, who were shot to death in the line of duty during 1979.

Not since 1971 when five police officers also were slain in the line of duty have the state's uniform crime statisticians recorded so many police officer deaths in a single year.

In releasing the 1979 report, Brandenburg noted that it is the tenth such report issued since the Kentucky State Police first started collecting statewide crime statistics on Jan. 1, 1970.

Since that first report, he said, the number of major crimes being reported annually has risen by almost 80 percent with the biggest increase being in larceny, up 190 percent in 1979 as compared with 1970, and rape, up almost 63 percent.

The unusually big increase in larcenies is partially offset, however, by a change in reporting requirements that took effect in 1973. Prior to that year, the only larcenies counted were those in which the value of the goods stolen was $50 or more. After 1973, all larcenies were included, regardless of their value.

Other 1970-79 comparisons made showed 41 percent more burglaries, 39 percent more robberies and 9 percent more aggravated assaults. Auto thefts were down by 19 percent while the number of murders reported in each of those years was constant at 335.

Although the overall number of juvenile arrests between 1970 and 1979 was up only slightly in the major crimes group—from 30.4 percent to 31.2 percent—the rate of change in certain other offense categories also surveyed was much higher.

Juvenile arrests for drug violations were up 637 percent and arrests for driving while under the influence increased 605 percent. Smaller increases also were noted for drunkenness, up 63 percent, and runaways, up 25 percent.

The number of juveniles arrested for carrying or possessing a deadly weapon, however, was down 17 percent.

Brandenburg also noted that county police officers were assaulted more often, both in 1970 and 1979, than any other group of Kentucky law enforcement personnel. The rate of reported assaults against county policemen, for each of those years, was about one out of every four officers.

However, the commissioner also said that while the assault rate among Kentucky troopers was lower, "it is significant because of the sharp pace at which it is increasing."

In 1970, state police reported about 3.9 assaults per 100 officers. By 1979, it was up to 16.6 per 100.

CONCERNING THE CONSTRUCTION OF A COAL PREPARATION PLANT ADDITION TO A COAL TIPPLE LOCATED NEAR IVEL, KENTUCKY

Diamond Coal Company, Inc. has applied to the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection for a Permit to Construct a coal preparation plant addition to a coal tipple located off U.S. Highway 23 near Ivel, Kentucky.

The application proposes the construction of facilities for receiving coal by truck; facilities for crushing, screening, and conveying coal; and facilities for washing coal. Air pollution control measures proposed by the application include use of enclosures and wet suppression using high pressure fogging nozzles.

The proposed construction is subject to the Standards of Performance for New Stationary Sources and to the Prevention of Significant Deterioration (PSD) of air quality provisions of the Clean Air Act (40 CFR 52.21). Paragraph (k) of that Federal Regulation exempts the proposed construction from an air quality analysis for the determination of consumption of allowable increment of air quality deterioration, since allowable emissions would be less than 50 tons per year and 1000 pounds per day. Therefore, no air quality analysis has been performed.

Based on the information submitted by the applicant, the Department has concluded that the proposed construction will comply with all applicable emission and air quality standards. Therefore, a preliminary determination has been made to grant a permit to construct. Copies of the report of this determination are available for public inspection during normal business hours at the following locations:

- Division of Air Pollution Control
Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection
West Frankfort Office Complex
1050 U.S. 127 By-Pass South
Frankfort, Kentucky 40601
- and
- Office of the County Clerk
Floyd County Courthouse
Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653
- and
- Division of Air Pollution Control
Appalachian Regional Office
825 High Street, 3rd Floor
Hazard, Kentucky 41701

Any member of the general public who considers himself affected by this facility, on the basis of air quality, is invited to make written comments and may request a public hearing. To be considered, any comments or requests for public hearing must be postmarked within thirty (30) days of the date of this notice, and should be addressed to Mr. Michel I. Mashni, Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, Division of Air Pollution Control, West Frankfort Office Complex, 1050 U.S. 127 By-Pass South, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. Any comments received will be considered in the Department's Final Determination to grant or deny the permit.

BLOSSOM-END ROT STRIKES AGAIN

An abrupt increase in inquiries concerning blackened dead spots on the bottom of tomatoes have substantiated the return of this perennial tomato problem. Although blossom-end rot is often listed as a disease, it is not caused by disease organism such as fungi, bacteria, and viruses. It is a problem related more closely to moisture stress and fertility.

The first sign of blossom-end rot is a small water-soaked area at the center of the tomato where the blossom developed. Gradually, as the rest of the tomato grows and the tissue continues to die, the dead area becomes blackened and depressed.

When conditions are right for its development, blossom end rot tends to become most evident at this time of year as weather conditions shift from ideal growing temperatures and adequate rainfall to less rainfall and higher temperatures. This condition, in combination with excess fertilization, low soil calcium, and insect or disease damage, often leads to blossom-end rot. Varieties also may vary in their tendency to develop this problem.

One of the most important parts of combatting the problem is to maintain uniform soil moisture. In a garden where water is easily available, the problem is fairly easy to control. Regular thorough waterings when there is not adequate rainfall help considerably.

In early summer when temperatures are still not high for long periods, tomatoes need only about an inch of water applied per week. As temperatures rise and are maintained for longer periods, they may need as much as two inches a week, either as natural rainfall or irrigation, or most likely a combination of both.

When irrigation is not possible, a heavy mulch can help keep soil moisture more uniform as well as help the soil retain moisture longer. Mulches also discourage the practice of deep cultivation which may damage roots and add to the problem. Where mulches are not used, scrape the surface only enough to remove weeds, but not deeply enough to cut roots.

Blossom-end rot may sometimes develop even though there is apparently adequate moisture. This may be a result of fertility levels, or the type of fertilizer used. Excess nitrogen and potassium fertilization as well as excesses of soluble ammonium, magnesium, or sodium seem to add to the problem. When soluble calcium levels are low the disease becomes more severe.

In dry weather, excesses of any of these nutrients may result in their uptake by the plant in preference to the movement of calcium even though calcium may be adequate in the soil. Low calcium in the tissue leads to collapse of cells at the blossom end of the fruit. Water stress increases the damage.

Damaged tomatoes should be promptly picked and discarded so that they do not compete with normal fruit.

Low calcium in the soil can be eased for future years by the addition of lime. However, since ground limestone is slow acting, there is little benefit for the present situation.

A soil test can determine whether lime is needed, and how much to apply. It should be plowed or spaded into the garden in fall or early spring. If available, calcium fertilizer may be used for side dressing plants as calcium and nitrogen fertilizer while blossom-end rot is a problem.

Also, avoid ammonium forms of nitrogen fertilizer such as ammonium nitrate or ammonium sulfate during the fruiting season.

Gas Co. Ordered To Serve W. Prestonsburg Residents

The state Energy Regulatory Commission has ordered East Kentucky Utilities to contact each property owner in the immediate area of the William Bivens residence, West Prestonsburg, and determine how many people want gas service.

The company has also been ordered to provide service by Oct. 1 to those persons interested.

The commission received a complaint letter from Bivens on Oct. 15, 1979, asking for natural gas service from East Kentucky Utilities. In January, commission staff members made an on-site inspection.

According to the commission order, the company is directed to provide service to all individuals requesting service unless it can prove inability to serve the potential customers due to gas supply shortage.

The commission also issued three other orders which allowed Glen Childers and Ike Skeen, both of Prestonsburg, and Earl Bolen, of Garrett, to deviate from a commission regulation.

They will be allowed to use 1.25 inch plastic and steel pipe, in lieu of black steel pipe, in construction of a service line from their respective homes to a gas line of Inland Gas Co.

Inspection by commission staff found it would be possible to bury the line to a sufficient depth to prevent damage to the lines by surface digging and plowing.

TERM OF CONTRACT.

Contracts under this tariff will be made for not less than 1 year with self-renewal provisions for successive periods of 1 year, each, until either party shall give at least 60 days written notice to the other of the intention to discontinue at the end of any yearly period. The company will have the right to make contracts for periods of longer than 1 year.

SPECIAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

See Terms and Conditions of Service.

This tariff is available to customers having other sources of energy supply.

This tariff is available for resale service to legitimate electric public utilities and to mining and industrial customers who furnish service to customer-owned camps or villages where living quarters are rented to employees and where the customer purchases power at a single point for his power and camp requirements.

TARIFF L.G.S. (Large General Service)

Available for general service. Customers shall contract for a definite amount of electrical capacity in kilovolt-amperes, which shall be sufficient to meet normal maximum requirements but in no case shall the capacity contracted for be less than 50 kva. The Company may not be required to supply capacity in excess of that contracted for except by mutual agreement. Contracts will be made in multiples of 25 kva.

RATE.

Table with 2 columns: Service Charge, Energy Charge. Rows include Kwhrs equal to the first 30 times the kva of monthly billing demand, Kwhrs equal to the next 170 times the kva of monthly billing demand, Kwhrs in excess of 200 times the kva of monthly billing demand.

MINIMUM CHARGE.

This tariff is subject to a minimum monthly charge equal to the sum of the service charge plus $3.35 per kva of monthly billing demand. The minimum monthly charge so determined shall be subject to (a) adjustments as determined under the "Fuel Clause," (b) credits as determined under clause entitled "Equipment Supplied by Customer."

DELAYED PAYMENT CHARGE.

This tariff is net if account is paid in full within 15 days of date of bill. On all accounts not so paid an additional charge of 5% of the amount of such bill will be made.

MONTHLY BILLING DEMAND.

Billing demand in kva shall be taken each month as the highest 15-minute integrated peak in kilowatts as registered during the month by a 15-minute integrating demand meter or indicator, or at the company's option as the highest registration of a thermal type demand meter or indicator, divided by the average monthly power factor established during the month corrected to the nearest kva. Monthly billing demand established hereunder shall not be less than the customer's contract capacity except that where the customer purchases his entire requirements for electric light, heat and power under this tariff the monthly billing demand shall not be less than 60% of the contract capacity. In no event shall the monthly billing demand be less than 50 kva.

DELIVERY VOLTAGE.

The rate set forth in this tariff is based upon the delivery and measurement of energy at standard distribution voltages established by the company of not less than a nominal voltage of approximately 2,400 volts nor more than a nominal voltage of approximately 34,500 volts. For the delivery and measurement of energy at any voltage less than the voltage of established distribution lines operating within these limits an additional charge will be made of $.24 per month per kva of monthly billing demand.

The rate set forth in this tariff is based upon the maintenance by the customer of an average monthly power factor of 85% as shown by integrating instruments. When the average monthly power factor is above or below 85%, the kwhrs as metered will be for billing purposes, multiplied by the following constants:

Table with 3 columns: Average Monthly Power Factor, Constant. Values: 1.00 (.951), .95 (.965), .90 (.981), .85 (1.000), .80 (1.023), .75 (1.050), .70 (1.0835), .65 (1.1255), .60 (1.1785), .55 (1.2455), .50 (1.3335).

Constants for power factors other than given above will be determined from the same formula used to determine those given.

FUEL ADJUSTMENT CLAUSE.

Bills computed according to the rates set forth herein will be increased or decreased by a Fuel Adjustment Factor per kwh calculated in compliance with the Fuel Adjustment Clause contained in Sheet No. 5-1 and 5-2 of this Tariff Schedule.

TERM.

Variable but not less than 1 year.

SPECIAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.

See Terms and Conditions of Service.

This tariff is available for resale service to legitimate electric public utilities and to mining and industrial customers who furnish service to customer-owned camps or villages where living quarters are rented to employees and where the customer purchases power at a single point for both his power and camp requirements.

This tariff is also available to customers having other sources of energy supply but who desire to purchase service from the company. Where such conditions exist the monthly billing demand shall not be less than the customer's contract capacity.

In the above tariffs, Quantity Power replaces Large Capacity Power; Large General Service replaces Large Power and Capacity Power-Option; and Industrial Power replaces High Tension Power and Transmission Power.

Service under all the foregoing tariffs is subject to the terms and conditions contained therein. Information concerning these terms and conditions will be furnished upon request from any customer or prospective customer.

Robert E. Matthews, President Kentucky Power Company Ashland, Kentucky

The rates contained in this notice are the rates proposed by Kentucky Power Company. However, the Energy Regulatory Commission may, after evidentiary hearings, order rates to be charged that differ from these proposed rates. Such action may result in an increase in rates for consumers other than those included in this notice.

Child Restraint in Car Would Curb Main Killer of Children

The No. 1 cause of death in young children is easy to prevent. Of every 100 children killed in car accidents, 70 could have avoided death if their parents had added one more habit to their child care routine.

But less than 10 percent of Kentucky's children have parents who take the time and effort to place them in child restraints when they ride in a car, according to safety officials.

Parents who have been unwilling or unable to purchase a child restraint because of the cost of the devices (prices range from $20 to $50) may soon be able to borrow one. The Traffic Safety Institute at Eastern Kentucky University, under a program administered by the state Department of Transportation, is offering assistance to local health and civic organizations interested in establishing a loan program.

The institute has designed a manual for child restraint loan programs that instructs groups on how to organize, equip and purchase child restraints and publicize a program in their area. Adopted from a successful program in Michigan, it enables groups to loan child restraints for a small fee.

Program coordinators are especially hopeful that it may help financially disadvantaged parents who may be unable to purchase a restraint.

Robin McBride, coordinator from EKV, said he wants to reach parents through hospitals and organizations.

"We want to develop an entire attitude change," he said. "Children don't have the power to make a choice and have to depend on adults for protection."

McBride emphasized that the safest way for a child of any age, even newborns, to travel in a car is a child restraint. "Holding a baby in your arms is just as bad or worse than no restraint at all," he said.

"A 10-pound baby being held in a vehicle traveling at 30 miles per hour develops a force of 300 pounds if the vehicle crashes. Plus, the baby could easily be crushed by the person holding him," McBride said.

The equivalent force would be to drop that same child from a three-story building, he added.

McBride said another problem exists because many parents fail to use restraints properly.

Although there are many varieties of child restraints, parents should be sure the model they select has been "crash" or "dynamically" tested. Tested restraints provide a high level of protection by distributing and absorbing the force upon impact.

Until recently, no rating standards had been established for restraints

Building Inspectors Attend School

Local building inspectors from all over Kentucky will be attending building inspectors school July 28 through Aug. 1 at the Lexington Technical Institute on the University of Kentucky campus.

The school is sponsored by the state Department of Housing, Buildings and Construction. There are 85 city and county inspectors enrolled.

The purpose of the school, the first of its type in Kentucky, is to give the new inspectors information about establishing building inspection departments and to familiarize all the inspectors with the new Kentucky Building Code.

Kentucky's new code went into effect Feb. 15 and is the first uniform statewide building code in the commonwealth.

Not The Same Man

The Ben Boyd who was listed among those arrested in the July 23 issue of The Times is not the Ben Boyd who resides at Drift.

regarding height or construction material. But, a system is due to go into effect in January 1981, according to Georgia Fay of KYDOT's Office of Highway Safety Programs.

Fay suggested that parents try the seat in their car before purchasing or renting. Some restraints require a tether strap to secure the car seat, while all systems use adult seat belts in the car, she said.

Coordinators of the new program hope loaning a child restraint for the first nine months of a baby's life will encourage parents to purchase and continue to use a child seat designed for children who sit by themselves. Restraints are available to fit children until they have grown enough to fit an adult seat belt.

In addition to protecting a child's life, using child restraints prohibits a child from moving about in a car and distracting the driver. According to recent studies, children behave better if they ride in a child restraint.

The ride home from the hospital is the best place to start using a child restraint, McBride said. If a child is trained early to accept the safety precaution, it will likely be viewed as a regular part of riding a car.

"I see so much potential in this area," McBride said. "The needs and importance of some programs come and go, but this can stop the No. 1 preventable killer of children."
