County Population Up 35 Per Cent In Ten-Year Period

The U.S. Census Bureau has apparently been persuaded that there are considerably more people living in this county than it originally reckoned.

Figures released by the bureau this week are still preliminary but are "looking a lot better" than the working figures issued in August, Judge-Executive Bill Wells said.

According to the current statistics, Floyd county has a population of 48,533 up 12,644, or 35 percent, over the 1970 ount. Housing units are put at 17,284. The August figures-which gave 39,785 as the population and 15,887 as the housing count-were widely criticized here as underestimating the county's growth during the past decade, and prompted a recount by census officials.

The revised figures are "just about what we thought they should be,' County Planner Dick Leslie said this week

Less satisfied with the recount was Prestonsburg City Manager David Evans. While the current figures put the city population at 3938 and the housing count at 1654, an increase over the August reckoning of 3399 and 1627, (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Floyd County Polls Big Democratic Lead

National election returns indicate that a Republican has been elected to the Presidency, but Floyd county, one of the Gibraltars of the Democratic party in Kentucky politics, has disagreed with that verdict

Of the 15,154 votes cast for President Carter and his opponent, Ronald Reagan, 10,775 of them went for Carter, 4179 for Reagan.

This Town...That World

All Salt River voyagers, meet me at the dock tomorrow morning. Early. I can't sleep, anyhow.

Remember, Indian Summer will later turn into a squawl.

A HOUND-DOG MAN

Exploring new KY 80 up Rock Fork, out of Garrett, recently, I ran into a whole flock of memories that have become befogged by time. There was the place, I thought, where Mitchell Hicks once lived and which I visited, climbing up the mountain and sliding down from Salt Lick to Rock Fork, to reclaim that Black-and-Tan hound that I had bought from him. The dog just could not divorce himself from the old home place, and the result was that I made this trip on several occasions.

Right Way or Wrong . . . One-Way Order Enforced

Some said they never saw the signs. Others saw the signs but remained unconvinced. Some were against the idea from the start. Others were willing to give it a try but argued you cannot change the habits of a lifetime overnight. And then there was the lady who took it all as another Halloween prank.

Though the wisdom of it all is still warmly debated, it is not a prank. Third Avenue, between Court and Graham, is now officially a one-way street And the way to go is south. That means you have to take a right as you leave the municipal parking lot, a left as you leave the court house. And the only lawful entry is via Court Street. There has been a change in the parking, also. Spaces have been marked along one side of Third Avenue, and new spaces have been provided on Court, abutting the city parking lot. But the curb at the post office intersection has been repainted yellowprohibiting any parking there.

enforced in earnest. After turning motorists around for a week, police officers are now issuing citations-with 30 tickets written in the first 24 hours, according to Police Chief Keith Lawson

Nobody is predicting how District Court Judge Harold Stumbo will deal with the offending motorists, but driving the wrong way down a one-way street carries a possible $25 fine.

The idea behind the new regulations, ordained by the city council earlier this year, is to relieve traffic congestion

The election was marked in this county by almost perfect autumn weather and a turnout of voters that was surprisingly heavy, especially in some precincts

The non-partisan race between James B. Stephenson and Cordell H. Martin for a seat on the state Supreme Court, with the two candidates residing in counties adjacent to Floyd, engendered some local interest. But it was the race for school board in the Left Beaver Creek section that provided real heat

Martin polled 4363 votes in this county to Stephenson's 3592. Outcome of the race may hinge on Stephenson's Pike county vote, since Martin has been reasonably certain of a strong showing in both Knott and Floyd. His Floyd county margin, however, was short of his supporters' expectations.

In the Educational Division 4 school board race Dr. Mary Hall won over Carson Akers, 1658 votes to 1271, according to unofficial returns.

U.S. Senator Wendell H. Ford polled 10,945 votes in this county to 2259 for his Republican opponent, Mary Louise Foust.

Congressman Carl D. Perkins was re-elected without opposition. yet 11,856 Floyd countians voted for him.

Also unopposed were John M. Stumbo and James Arville Duff, incumbent board of education members in Educational Divisions 1 and 2, respectively.

Morganfield, Jim Smith has been named to head the center here by the Singer Company, which recently won a Department of Labor contract to operate the program in the remodeled building formerly occupied by U.S. Shoe in the Goble Roberts Addition.

Thomas Hummer, of Johnson counrecently resigned as personnel director of the Mountain Comprehensive Care Center here to become deputy director of the Job Corps center.

A reported $1.6 million in federal funds has been spent on remodeling the building, which will be used to provide academic and vocational training for 165 disadvantaged male students, aged 16-21

Students will be drawn primarily from applicants at state Manpower offices in the Labor Department's southern region, and will arrive at a rate of 22 per week, beginning January 26, 1981, until the full complement of 165 students is reached, Smith said.

They will receive academic training through the GED program, testing to be provided by Prestonsburg Community College, and vocational training in the cement masonry, electrical,

Students are not permitted to drive or be in possession of a vehicle while in the program. (There will be a driver education program, but this will be conducted during the normal class day, under supervision.)

All students will be in bed at 10:30 or 11 p.m. Any student not in bed during the three nightly bed checks will be reported as AWOL and "dealt with accordingly

-Any student business, group or recreational trips will have staff supervision.

-Any student or staff member selling or promoting the sale of alcohol or narcotics will be terminated from the program or company

-Student termination will mean the student will be put on a bus back to his hometown-not "dumped" on the local community

-Regular locker and building inspections will be held and any students in possession of a weapon will be terminated.

Responding to questions by city officials, Smith noted that students will not be allowed to leave the center ex-(See Story No. 3, Page 4)

While this dog was still doing his imitation of Bugle Ann on our hillsides and ridges, I wrote a little piece for a foxhunters' magazine that was edited by the late Bob Breckinridge, of Lexington. Breckinridge, who at the time also was managing editor of The Lexington Herald, wrote me a right encouraging letter and invited me to stop by and see him when and if I ever made it to Lexington.

I had the newspaper bug, even at that early day, and decided to accept the invitation. I had done "stringer" work for some of the dailies and had an idea that I might grace The Herald with the presence.

The fear was palpable and the trembling visible when I made this call. I almost get nervous all over again, just thinking about it now, more than 60 years later. But Bob Breckinridge, newspaperman, soldier

Fire Victim's I.D. Poses Puzzle for Investigators

Was the man who burned to death in late 20's and early 30's, his weight beta house on Shop Fork at Wayland, the night of Oct. 14, really James Noel? If not Noel, who was the victim?

Investigators have yet to supply an answer to those questions. That's why David Jones, administrator, medical examiner's office for the Commonwealth of Kentucky, and Dr. David Wolf, forensic anthropologist at the University of Kentucky, spent most of the day last Thursday sifting the ashes of the two-story home in the ruins of which part of the victim's body was found after the fire

Wayland residents know that Noel, a comparative newcomer to the community is missing. But so is another man who is known to have been an intimate of Noel.

Officially, all that is known of the victim was deduced by Dr. Nickells, chief medical examiner for the state, who is a pathologist. It is known that the victim was a male, his age between the ween 150 and 160 pounds. And he died after the fire started.

As State Police Detective Danny Stumbo said, "Nobody can positively say who this fellow was, what caused him to burn, and why the fire was so intense." The specialized techniques of Dr. Wolf and Jones were employed in hopes of answering these questions.

To add to the mystery of the situation, the skull of the victim was missing-either removed from the scene or badly fragmented in the blaze, as were the arms and legs, and, of particular interest to the investigators was the prospect of recovering the victim's teeth, virtually indestructable anatomical clues which can relatively easily be compared to existing dental records. In addition, a distinctive brass belt buckle as well as a watch which Noel was reported to have worn the night of the fire, have not been found.

Dr. Wolf said the fire had burned with unusual intensity in the area where the victim's body was found, 'much hotter than a similar fire that killed three people in Breathitt county that I investigated recently," he said. We hope to find out why.

"There's some key things we're looking for that would answer a lot of questions," said Wolf, who estimated he has examined about 9,000 bodies in his career as a forensic investigator.

Although Dr. Wolf's findings had not been released as of Tuesday, according to state police sources, one observer of last Thursday's investigation said the intensive day-long search through the ashes of the death scene "didn't turn up but very little.

Wolf cautioned, however, that evidence which at first seems meager, may later prove invaluable. "You never know what's going to be useful until you look at the evidence totally,' he said.

The new regulations are now being

Pikeville Methodist Hospital has been ordered to rehire nearly 180 workers it fired during a turbulent twoyear strike in the early 1970s. It must also pay back-wages which could amount to more than $1 million.

According to a ruling of the U.S. Court of Appeals in March this year, the hospital's executive board discriminated in its hiring practices by refusing to re-hire workers who had joined the strike between 1972 and 1974. The U.S. Supreme Court refused this month to hear an appeal of that decision.

More than 200 service and maintenance employees struck in June, 1972, after a majority voted to join the Communication Workers of America and the hospital's executive board refused to recognize the union as a bargaining agent.

Dan Jack Combs, Pikeville attorney representing the workers, said last week the hospital executive board 'was so anti-labor and autocratic that they may now have placed the hospital in financial jeopardy.

Solar Seminar Slated at Park

Solar energy will make a brief nighttime appearance Thursday, November 13 when experts on sunpower come to Jenny Wiley State park, for a seminar on energy

The public is invited to the Solar Action Seminar starting at 7 p.m. in May Lodge. Speakers are coming from Tennessee and Indiana as well as Kentucky. The seminar is free.

One of the key speakers will be Gayle Sherrod, president of the Sherrod Construction Company, Winchester, who will explain how active solar systems actually work

Another focus of the seminar will be passive solar energy in construction, which relies upon architectural design rather than pumps, fans and hardware. Robert Meyer, of David, who has built three passive solar homes in the area, will show how a solar house requires less than half the fuel of a traditional house

Kathy Dahl, proprietor of the Alternative Technology business in Winchester, will address the area of 'soft-path'' energy lifestyles. She will explain how the average American can modify a house and household products

Fantasy Miners

Kentucky sits atop 22.5 billion tons of coal reserves, capable of producing a variety of synthetic fuels and other products. This symbolic sculpture in the shape of the state was conceived by Louisville artist David Caudill, left, and created by Louisville sculptor Paul Rossman, right. It's not a ton of Kentucky coal, but a few pounds of plywood, styrofoam and black paint. The Kentucky Department of Energy commissioned the work to display at coal and synthetic fuel conferences and at its Lexington headquarters.

Stanifer Appointed To Hospital Post

Larry Stanifer has been named project director for the Coal Miner's Respiratory Treatment Program being administered by Highlands Regional Medical Center, according to Clarence Traum, Administrator. Stanifer will administer policies for the Black Lung Program to obtain the most benefits possible for the miners and their families. He will work with government agencies in complying with their regulations and obtaining additional funding, according to Traum Stanifer feels the program will improve the health status and care that coal miners with respiratory disease receive. "We understand there is no cure for Black Lung disease, but we hope this program can help educate the victims and their families to live with the disability," commented Stanifer. Born and reared in Bell county, Kentucky, Stanifer received his Bachelor's Degree in public health education from the University of Tennessee. There he also completed a Master's Degree in public health administration and planning. Stanifer came to this area from Choctaw Indian Health Department in Philadelphia, Mississippi, where he was the director of planning and evaluation. Prior experience includes his appointment as administrative assistant at East Tennessee Baptist Hospital in Knoxville, Tennessee and health education consultant at the Knoxville Hypertension Management Clinic. During his career, he has published numerous articles in various health-related magazines. "We're pleased to have a person with such a high degree of experience to coordinate this program," Traum commented. "It is so important to the many coal miners in the Big Sandy Region.'

ATTIC ENTRY NEEDS INSULATION Attic insulation will help keep your home cozy this winter, but for maximum comfort and energy savings be sure to include the attic entry. Insulating the entry, whether it's a stairwell, hatchway or sliding panel can make a big difference.

Where there is a stairway, build a door to stop the flow of heat to the attic. Add rigid panel insulation to the door to give it additional heat resistance. For hatchways or sliding panels, build a frame to enclose them. Insulation can be layered around, glued or stapled to that frame. Also remember to cover sliding panels with insulation. After you do this, put your apples in plastic bags with holes for ventilation and store them in the refrigerator. You can also store them in a cool basement, 35 to 38 degrees F. Be careful, however, not to let them freeze in an unheated storage area.

The bite test is a simple way of checking whether the apples are ripe enough to eat raw. If they are not, leave them at room temperature, 60 to 70 degrees F, for about two weeks before refrigerating.

Apples are a favorite year-round whether they are used in pies, sauces, baked whole, cooked or eaten raw. When choosing apples to use in your favorite recipes, keep in mind these tips.

Begin by choosing apples that are firm, unbruised, not wilted or punctured and of good color for the variety. Although any apple can be used for any purpose, results vary. If you plan to eat apples raw, as a snack or in salads, mature fruit is desirable. Some green varieties are good cooking applies, but don't use unripe apples.

Proper storage of all varieties is necessary to ensure crisp, sweet quality long into the winter. Before storing, sort out any bruised or poor quality apples. Go to the bottom of the bushel and find all the ones that are damaged or soft. Use those first. You may want to wrap the remaining fruit in newspaper or tissue paper. That way if one does spoil, it won't ruin the rest of them.

East Kentucky Area Receptive To State's Foster Care Program

JACKHORN, Ky.—There are many "Jackhorns" in Eastern Kentucky. Such "company towns" sprang up around mining companies during the coal booms of the '30's and '40's and have since given way to strings of modest homes which edge creeks and lead up hollows.

The Jackhorn company store still stands, but the company that ran it and the town have long since moved on. The Letcher county community bears little resemblance to the bustling Jackhorn of the boom days, but the post office is still there and most of the men in the community work in one of the area's coal mines.

Ed and Twalla Brown have lived in Jackhorn for about 10 years. Ed works in the coal industry. Twalla, like most women on the creek, spends her days caring for children and keeping house. Their small, yellow frame house is filled with the signs of children. From the holiday cut-outs on the door to the multitude of 8-by-10 school pictures on the walls and tops of the living room furniture, it is clearly a home with children.

There are six children in the Brown house. The 18-month old boy is a "handful," but Twalla has help with him from the two older girls, who are both at home. Two other daughters attend the local high school. A son is in the first grade.

There is little to distinguish the Browns from any other family in the community, except that four of their children are foster children and three of those, because of their physical, In a specialized foster home these children receive individual care and attention they might not get in an institution. They also learn socialization skills they might not pick up in an institutional setting.

In addition, it is less expensive for the state to place children in homes rather than institutions.

It is easy to recruit foster parents for the special needs program in the mountain area, according to Gene Rice, district manager of the Bureau of Social Services' eight-county Kentucky River district in Eastern Kentucky.

However, the program is hindered by the lack of specialized medical and psychiatric resources in the area, he said.

"We have excellent primary health care. If a child gets a cold or the measles, we can take care of him right here. But many special needs children routinely require medical and mental health care that just isn't available here," he said.

The closest medical facilities providing the needed services are in Lexington, a three-to four-hour trip from most of the counties in the district.

These kinds of trips cause stress for the parents, who aren't required to make them but usually do, and for the children, Rice said.

The Kentucky River district has "more than enough homes" to place the area's children and often accepts referrals from other districts unable to find homes for their special needs children.

emotional or behaviorial problems, are considered "special needs" foster children.

The Browns have been foster parents since 1975 and are one of the 13 families approved to care for special needs children in the eight-county district.

Until the inception of the Department for Human Resources' specialized foster care program in 1978, a child like their 18-month-old foster son might have spent the first year of his life in a hospital.

Born with a defective heart, he has undergone open-heart surgery twice, first when he was 18 days old. He has also had chronic ear infections and, according to Twalla, "has spent as much time in the hospital as out." He has been in the Brown home for a year and is doing much better now. "They say by the time he's six, he'll be as normal as any other little boy," Twalla says. Being foster parents is both rewarding and heartbreaking for the Browns.

Ocassionally the placement doesn't work out or the child is returned to his home after his family learns how to care for him.

"It's hard to see them go when you get attached to them," Twalla said.

The Browns keep in touch with many of the children who have been in their home. They once had a phone bill of nearly $200 the first month after a little girl who lived with them was placed with one of her relatives.

According to Howard C. Lawson, deputy commissioner of the Human Resources Department's Bureau for Social Services, special needs children placed in specialized foster homes have a better chance of permanency because the parents have undergone training that helps them deal with the children's problems.

Before the program these children often were institutionalized or moved from foster home to foster home because the parents didn't have the skills to care for the child, he said.

The revised Prestonsburg figure represents a 15.1 percent increase in the city's population over the past 10 years

The census tally shows a total population of 501,742 in 25 eastern Kentucky counties-90,495, or 22 percent, more than in 1970, when many people had left the mountains in search of work in Ohio, Michigan and Indiana. The growth reflected in this year's census means that many of the emigrants have returned home, attracted by a stimulated coal-mining industry, some county officials believe

Other Big Sandy counties share in the general growth, with Pike numbering 80,777 (up 32.3 percent), Johnson 24,317 (38.6 percent), Knott 17,871 (21.6 percent), Martin 13,924 (48.5 percent), and Magoffin 13,455 (28.8 percent).

The cities of Pikeville and Paintsville, however, both show a loss in population over the 10-year period-Pikeville declining from 5205 to 4751 (down 8.7 percent), and Paintsville down from 3868 to 3802 (1.7 percent appeared at the entrance to the trailer housing his law offices. But the offending spaces were drawn in error, City Manager David Evans explained this week, and will soon be eliminated.

There have been other complaints, too, some arguing that the parking spaces should not have been painted on a Sunday, others that nothing will relieve the traffic congestion until the post office provides parking for its clientele, and still others that, if the street has to be one way, it should be in the other direction.

The new regulations are on the books, however, and will be enforced, Police Chief Lawson advised motorists this week

LETTERS To the Editor

Scores City Council

I think it's a shame and disgrace for our City Council to order a city police officer to patrol Third Avenue, harassing good citizens who, unknowingly, seem to be running a one-way street. Why can't this same officer be out catching drunk drivers, dope pushers, and bootleggers? Why couldn't this same police officer have been given today 'off'' and worked last night (Hallowe'en) trying to catch "egg throwers", "paint balloon" tossers, general hell-raisers, and thugs who delight in destroying private property? Why does our Council insist on keeping Third Avenue one-way? Is there a political favor or campaign payoff involved?

Health Educator CLINICS FOR THE WEEK:

There will be a Pap smear clinic conducted at the Floyd County Health Department Friday, November 7, from 8:30 to 11:30 and 1 to 2.

In order to be continually protected against cervical cancer, a woman should have a Pap test at least once a year. Any woman needing her annual Pap test is welcome to attend this clinic for this free screening service.

Also, on Friday, November 7, there will be a glaucoma clinic conducted at the Floyd County Health Department from 10 to 12 and 1 to 3.

Glaucoma is a serious eye disease that can result in blindness if it does. not receive proper medical attention Any persons age 35 and older can be screened for glaucoma at the health department free of charge. If higher than normal pressure is found within the eye, the patient will be referred to an eye physician for further diagnosis and treatment. Make plans now to attend this clinic for this very important screening service Monday, November 10, the regularly scheduled Wayland Outpost Clinic will be conducted in the basement of the Wayland Methodist Church from 10 to 12 and 1 to 2. Services available at this clinic will include immunizations, TB skin tests, urinalyses, and blood pressures.

and some living habits to reduce the high amount of energy wastage. This will include solar techniques, window treatment, compost toilets, plumbing modification and other items.

Larry Strange, a solar specialist from Nashville, Tenn., will talk about the economics of solar energy. The government's role in alternative energies will be covered by Ralph Dennis, of the Kentucky Department of Energy and a solar overview will be presented by Oscar Bloch, of the Kentucky Solar Coalition.

The Coalition, a citizen group composed of solar advocates, is cosponsoring the Thursday seminar with Prestonsburg Community College and another citizens' group, Appalachia-Science in the Public Interest.

Funding for the seminar is made available by the U.S. Department of Energy, the Kentucky Department of Energy and the Kentucky Energy Conservation Plan Consortium.

The Thursday night seminar will be preceded by a private solar energy conference of Prestonsburg bankers, builders, architects and suppliers, sponsored by the Kentucky Solar coalition and Public Interest group, and it will serve as an opportunity for Floyd county residents to learn how solar energy can benefit each household.

High Court Orders Retrial of Newsome

The conviction of John Henry Newsome, sentenced in 1977 to 15 years in prison for the 1976 knife-slaying of Prestonsburg merchant Gerald McBrayer, was overturned Monday by the state Supreme Court and the case was remanded to Floyd Circuit Court for a new trial.

The Supreme Court, with Justice James B. Stephenson dissenting, ruled that the trial court erred in refusing to instruct the jury on the possibility of returning second-degree manslaughter or reckless homicide verdicts in the case. Newsome was convicted of firstdegree manslaughter Newsome's daughters, Barbara, then 16, and Gloria, 14, were also convicted of first-degree manslaughter and received identical sentences. Their convictions were reversed by a subsequent Appellate Court decision, however, and Monday's Supreme Court ruling let that decision stand.

Newsome's original conviction was affirmed by the Court of Appeals but that decision was appealed to the higher court, resulting in yesterday's opinion

According to evidence presented in the five-day trial before Circuit Judge Hollie Conley in February, 1977, the slaying of McBrayer, 38, resulted from a quarrel over use of a stairway to the Newsomes' second-floor apartment in

Dr. Thompson To Speak At Drug Meet, Thursday

Dr. Merita Thompson, of Eastern Kentucky University, will be the featured speaker at a training session set Thursday, Nov. 6 at Pikeville College

Dr. Thompson will speak on the Alcohol and Drug Curriculum Guide K-12, developed by the Kentucky Department of Education and considered the most comprehensive educational guide to date.

The meeting will be in Room 301 of the Science Building at the college and will run from 7 to 9 p.m.

a housing project operated by the Church Housing Authority in the Goble-Roberts Addition here. McBrayer, a proprietor of Gerry and Jerry's Shoes, on the Auxier road, lived in the apartment directly beneath the Newsomes.

Prestonsburg attorneys charged that the defendants deliberately plotted McBrayer's death and stabbed him 16 times while he was unarmed. The defendants pictured McBrayer as the aggressor and claimed they feared he would kill them.

Newsome has been serving time for more than three years.

P-BURG WOMEN NAMED TO NATIONAL PANEL

Mrs. John Everly and Mrs. J. W. Clifton, Prestonsburg residents who successfully led the effort to identify and remove asbestos in the high school here last year, have been invited to be members of a panel which will conduct round table discussions at a meeting of the National Citizens Council on Toxic Substances Control to be held next week at Berkeley Springs, W. Va.

National publicity was given the asbestos problem in the school here, and Mrs. Clifton and Mrs. Everly have been asked to relate their experiences in identifying and finding a way to correct the problem which exists in schools and other public buildings in the county. Other members of the panel will be discussing such problems as benzene in working places, pesticides and chemicals in drinking water.

The meeting will be attended by experts on these problems and by concerned council members from all over the nation.

More About One-Way

The City Council in making 3rd Street a one-way street used extremely bad judgment, and in my opinion will drive business away from Prestonsburg. But it appears that some people are determined that Prestonsburg shall stay "little'

I noted that some people went clear out of town, probably to some other shopping center to trade.

Does not the council know that both Paintsville and Pikeville have large shopping centers with free parking?

A traffic cop turned all, both young and old, back on 3rd Street, requiring them to turn their vehicles around and go back. I could not blame them for going out of town.

Third Street is yellow lined on one side from end to end, and a few tickets written for improper parking would get the desired results

Concern Is Commended

Recently I became aware of an older woman in our community living in a deplorable situation. One could take no more than two steps in her tiny shack. She had no plumbing, no water, and no proper heat or cooking facilities. She spent most of her time lying on a cot with roaches crawling on and about her. She was in need of medical care and better housing but refused to seek them. The agencies which could assist her were limited by their own policies and legalities which complicated the situation. After several months of struggle, it seems she will soon receive the help she needs.

I would like to commend Larry Adams and Paul Chaffin, of the Prestonsburg Fire Dept., for their persistence in this effort. Mr. Adams was willing to become involved in a way that usually only one's closest family can be. I appreciate the concern the Fire Dept. showed for this woman.

Successful Revival

First Christian Church, 429 N. Arnold Avenue, is still rejoicing over the revival which was held October 19-24, by the singing and preaching of Brother Bill Gilliland, of Chester, West Virginia. The Lord's presence truly dominated each service. Those responding to the Gospel call were Cathy Horn, and Mark McGuire. Brenda Kay Music responded this past Thursday evening

We, at First Christian thank the Lord for these young people. The final evening of the revival was topped off by a wonderful fellowship among the area Christian Churches and Churches of Christ. Special music from these Churches throughout the week inspired each person who attended.

Are you a child of God? If not, come to God by faith in Jesus as the Son of God. This faith leading to repentence from sin, confessing Jesus as the Son of God, having your sins washed away and living a new life bound for heaven. First Christian proclaims the whole Gospel for the whole world. 11.

Satellites Provide Information On Ky. Forests, Mines

Information about forests and surface mines can be obtained from satellites and used to meet some of the requirements of the federal Surface Mining Act of 1977, Craig Ericksen explained recently at a "Trees for Reclamation Seminar" in Lexington. Ericksen is supervisor of a program within the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection that is working closely with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to develop methods of analyzing data collected by a satellite called Landsat.

"The satellites pass over Kentucky once every nine days and currently use a device known as a multispectral scanner to measure the reflected light of 1.1 acre units of land or water," he said.

The system can help with forest inventories, disease detection and forest harvest monitoring. The system can determine the general forest cover types over large geographic areas and their associated densities and acreages, Ericksen said.

In about 18 months a new generation of Landsat satellites will be placed in orbit, he said. These new satellites measure in smaller units of about one quarter of an acre, he explained. This more detailed information will be of greater use to the Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, enabling the bureau to collect more detailed environmental data, he said.

"The presently orbiting satellite can discriminate between deciduous, coniferous and mixed forest, along with agricultural, fallow, range and several other non-forest lands," he said. Limitations of the satellite data can be overcome by intergrating information from other sources such as photographs and maps, he added.

The Surface Mining Bureau will be using the data to analyze land cover prior to mining, Ericksen said. The department's division of forestry and the Kentucky Nature Preserves Commission plan to use the data for wildlife-habitat evaluations and forest cover classification, he added.

"Ky. Journal" Eyes College Sports, Aid

On Monday, November 10, KET's nightly news and information series features a close-up look at college sports recruiting practices. The series also provides information about how to obtain financial aid for college the week of November 10 through 13.

Airing at 7:30 p.m., "Kentucky Journal" looks at the problems of big-time college sports recruitment on Monday, November 10.

The "Journal's" information segment for the week of November 10 through 13 features a special "Money For College" series—what it costs to get a college degree and how students can offset these costs with financial aid.

"Money For College," geared to the middle-income person looking for college financing, begins on Monday. Reporter Milli Fazey interviews Alice Houston, assistant director of financial aid at the University of Louisville, about the kinds of financial aid available. During the interview, Houston debunks some of the myths surrounding the financial aid issue.

Tuesday, November 11, Fazey talks to Cathy Macchia, assistant director of financial aid at Eastern Kentucky University, about who is eligible to apply for funds.

Wednesday's "Information" segment deals with exactly how a person goes after the money he or she needs to further their education. Fazey talks to John Heneison, associate dean for labor and financial aid at Berea College about specific programs available to the middle-income earner.

The final segment on Thursday

Heart Clinic Slated Here for Two Days

A two-day consultative and diagnostic heart clinic for medically indigent patients will be held in the Floyd County Health Department, on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 11-12.

The clinic is being organized so that adults only will be admitted on November 11 and children only will be seen November 12.

Physicians from the departments of Medicine and Pediatrics at the University of Kentucky Medical Center will conduct the clinic.

Co-sponsored by American Heart Association - Kentucky Affiliate, Inc., the Bureau for Health Services and the County Health Departments, this clinic provides a diagnostic service for the patient along with recommendations for treatment and management of the case. It also provides an opportunity for the referring physician to consult with the clinician regarding his patient.

Necessary expenses of the clinic are being underwritten by American Heart Association - Kentucky Affiliate, Inc., and the Bureau for Health Services. Clinic personnel as well as space and equipment will be provided by the Floyd County Health Department as well as the Bureau for Health Services and American Heart Association - Kentucky Affiliate, Inc.

Only those patients who have been referred by a physician and have a written referral will be admitted to the clinic. Counties in this clinic area are Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin and Pike.

CARD OF THANKS

We, the family of Samuel Earl Watkins, wish to take this opportunity to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many friends who came by to see us, who called, sent flowers, cards and food, and gave us such comforting words of kindness during our time of sorrow. We wish to thank the Floyd County Funeral Home for its services, and the Little Paint Church of God quartet for the songs they rendered. Our heartfelt thanks go to the Revs. Dewey E. Music and Roy Tincher for the words of kindness they so graciously expressed.

Waste of Resources Must Stop

By AUSTIN SIZEMORE Soil Conservation Representative Floyd County

Conservation District It is the desire of the Floyd County Conservation District Board of Supervisors to encourage the cooperation and support of all to conserve our National Resources.

As badly as we hate to admit it, our forefathers helped to cause massive waste and destruction of some of what should have been our inheritance.

For example, we should be able to see wild turkey, buffalo, bears, the bald eagle, and many other wildlife species. Instead of being able to visually show them to our children, we must have them read of them in history books. Can you recall how clear and pure the streams used to be? Wouldn't it be great to see them during the settlement days here in Kentucky?

We tend to excuse the lack of awareness toward Conservation practices by our forefathers. We are told of the many hardships and the struggle for survival that they endured. But in the struggle to survive, and the desire for more produce from the farm, they caused massive erosion of our topsoil. The forest was robbed of virgin timber, allowing rapid runoff of water, causing sediment to practically fill our streams, resulting in flooding of our towns and cities.

The cost of operation nowadays is almost unbearable on a family size farm. So people sell their farms and move away, causing more urban development, thus the loss of more farmland;

The economic situation within our state at present is one of instability. As we pursue new ways to conquer our economic problems, let us not forget to be thoughtful of our children and their children's future.

Let's protect our forest, conserve our farmland, stop pollution of our water supply, use fuels and other sources. wisely, encourage our youth to do as we say not as we have done, concerning conservation. Think of this: trees and other vegetative growth are vital to our existence. They take in carbon dioxide and give off oxygen. Isn't that something we breath !!

The Wheelwright Trojans lost their Homecoming to the Jenkins Cavaliers. Friday Oct. 24, by a score of 30-28.

Alan Tackett led the Trojans in scoring with 20 points Eddie Little had eight points while the Cavaliers' leading scorer's were Van Wright and Greg Brown with eight points each and James Quintua and Mark Johnson with six points each.

Wheelwright's Captains Gilford Hall and Keith Smallwood met Jenkins Captains Jimmy Loney and Tony Hall for the coin toss with Jenkins winning the toss and electing to kick.

Jimmy Looney kicked to start the game with the ball going out of bounds which put Wheelwright on the 30-yard line. Eddie Johnson fumbled the ball and Wheelwright recovered, but was unable to break through Jenkins defensive line. After stopping a Jenkins drive, Wheelwright took over the ball and made their first touchdown with 4:14 left in the first quarter with Eddie Johnson throwing a 35-yard pass to Alan Tackett.

The second quarter began with Jenkins recovering a Wheelwright fumble. Eddie Johnson threw a short pass to Eddie Little who displayed great blocking ability on a run for 23 yards. With 6:22 left in the half, Eddie Little scored but extra points were no good. Later in the same quarter, Wheelwright's Alan Tackett ran a fake play which brought him another touchdown with 1:50 remaining. Jenkin's Mark Johnson completed a 20-yard pass that was intercepted by

By KENNY RICE

Last Saturday at the Kentucky Horse Park, Allen Central participated in the state high school cross-country. The Runnin' Rebs of coach John Martin reached the state meet by beating perennial power Jenkins for second place in the Eastern Kentucky regional.

Advancing to the championship is impressive. Getting there after only four meets and about a month and a half of practice is just short of amazing

'At Sheldon Clark, I got started in cross country (all three of his teams there went to the state)," Martin explained of the sport's start at AC "1 asked the players out for basketball if any of them were interested in going to a meet sometime. That was at the first of practice and I got away from it then.

Floyd Grid Teams Have Ups, Downs In Weekend Play

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON

Local high school football will come to an end this week-end in Prestonsburg, with the Blackcats playing host to Raceland

Last week-end, the Blackcats swamped the Hazard Bulldogs, 41 to 6. The Betsy Layne Bobcats closed their season by losing to the Whitesburg Yellow Jackets at Mullins, 28-6, and the Wheelwright Trojans closed out their season at Brackett Field by losing to Paintsville, 40 to 6.

Paintsville won the district title and will face Fleming-Neon in the first game of the Class A playoffs at Paintsville. The Pikeville Panthers won the Class AA title by defeating Morgan County at Pikeville in the opening round play-off game. The Belfry Pirates will face Leslie County, November 14 at Belfry, in the first game of the triple A play-offs.

Prestonsburg Blackcats walloped the Hazard Bulldogs at Hazard, rolling up six touchdowns. Scoring his first touchdown of the season was Dennis Flanagan. Also scoring a touchdown and passing for his first touchdown was the big end, Steve Wright. Other touchdowns were scored by Greg Slone, Greg Haywood, Randy Tincher and quarterback Jack Wells. The sophomore kicking sensation, B. J. Sturgill, kicked five of six extra points. Quarterback Jack Wells picked up his 11th touchdown of the season, and Greg Haywood now has a total of 54 points for the season.

The Blackcats will face a tough test this weekend when they play host to the highly rated Raceland Rams.

The bright spot in Betsy Layne's loss to Whitesburg was a 90-yard scoring gallop by senior Wayne Morris for the Bobcats' lone score of the game.

A few of the boys asked me when we were going to have that meet, so 1 started calling and made some arrangements to get us in four meets (necessary to qualify for the state meet)

The Runnin' Rebs were better than Martin expected in their first meet. "I realized we had some boys here who could run. They all ran close together, which is important in cross country. The teams that win have runners who are close together and can score points.

Life for the cross country runner is lonely. State championships come from teams that train on a 10-10 basis. That's 10 miles in the morning before school and 10 miles in the afternoon after school. At first, Martin's runners thought it was odd when he put them on a schedule of running a mile, then walking a mile and running another mile. Now they realize the importance of long hours and lots of miles in training for the cross country run.

'The more they ran, the more they got charged up for it. We got new uniforms and that excited the team. The school became interested in how well we were doing. I've had some boys come up to me and ask if they could try out for next season and everyone on this season's team is talking about next year already," Martin happily noted. A few members of the team are running eight miles a day right now. They are slowly but surely increasing that total. Martin has developed an offseason and summer training program for them

"This year we went to the state meet, but next year I think we can compete for it. These guys know what it takes to be a competitive cross-country team and they are willing to work.

Martin and his team have treated cross sport as a bonafide part of the school's athletic department, not as a means of just getting in shape for basketball and not as a filler sport in the fall. Martin has donated his time and truck, to transport the team to meets, and is pleased with the backing he has received from the school administration. There have been private donations to the team. Cross-country is a sport at Allen Central that is on the run, literally, and it could bring Floyd county a state title later on.

BASEBALL MEMORIES

The World Series is over, baseball is taking a rest until late February. Before we put baseball to bed for another winter, I thought it would be nice to salute some Floyd countians who have made their mark in the professional baseball ranks.

Joe Hinchman, Ray Patton, Harold Conn, Morris "Tootsie" Hall and Joe Weddington achieved that rare status of being professional baseball players.

They played during an era that, sadly, this county will never see again. It was during the time of the Big Sandy eague when the Reed and families were instrumental in producing great semi-pro basebal teams at Drift. The Drift Park would be filled regularly to watch local talent, many of whom turned down a chance at professional baseball to continue to work and live in Floyd County It was the heyday of baseball in the coal fields. And while it has been over three decades since that semi-pro league was thriving, the memories are still vivid to those who were privileged to see those teams. It is great that these folk are able and willing to pass along memories to other generations. For talking about the good old days and comparing players then and now are very much a part of baseball. It is what makes it the American game.

Johnny Endicott, of Endicott, bagged this 300-lb., six-point whitetail buck in the Dewey Lake Wildlife Management Area, Oct. 17 at 9:30 a.m. Endicott used a Bear Whitetail Hunter, shooting orange XX75 arrows with Satellite broadhead points from a range of about 20 yards. Endicott is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Thurston Endicott, of Endicott.

WAY TO GO BOBCATS

Kudos to Don Daniels and the Betsy Layne football team on a fine season. They had a two-game win streak and played respectably in every outing.

Once again, the Bobcats' program was on shaky ground at the start of the year, but they were able to prepare to play the powerful Paintsville Tigers within a week's time and they played them hard for the entire game.

They didn't threaten for the district title, but if L. program can remain solid with an on season program and adequate time to prepare for the upcoming season next year, they can contend within the next two years. The talent is there and Daniels is a very talented, very determined coach.

"New gas appliances are more energy efficient. But how much more?"

ANSWER:

"In time, they can pay for themselves in energy savings."

The more energy-efficient your appliances, the more money you can save. And with some of the new gas models, the savings over a number of years can actually equal the original purchase price.*

And that's ESP-Energy Savings Payback. Included among the many features that make these new ESP gas appliances so energy-efficient are electronic ignitions on ranges, dryers and furnaces (replacing the constant burning pilot light); more water heater insulation and improved burners; and automatic furnace flue dampers to help cut heat loss.

As ways to save money, ESP-designed gas appliances are the most efficient, effective answers yet.

So if you're getting ready to make a decision about new appliances, ask your dealer about ESP gas models. For other ideas on ways to save, stop by your Columbia Gas office for a copy of the free booklet, "The Everyday Energy Saver's Guide."

Gibson Jailed Here in Holdup Of Aged Couple

Almost two years after he had been accused in a grand jury indictment of the armed robbery of an elderly Floyd county couple, Kenneth Ray Gibson was arrested last Tuesday at Lackey by Deputy Sheriff Phillip Neeley and Constable Bob Hackworth.

The holdup of 80-year-old Wiley Jones and his wife Susie, both of whom were at the time homebound, took place Nov. 28, 1978 at Estill. An early report said the gunman made away with $300 and left the scene on foot.

Gibson, a former resident of the Lackey vicinity, was named on a first degree armed robbery charge by the grand jury, Nov. 28, 1978, and a bench warrant was issued for his arrest. His whereabouts remained unknown, however, until early last week when Deputy Sheriff Neeley received a tip that he was at Lackey.

Except for a pocket-knife, he was unarmed when arrested. He remained in jail here Monday.

Although early reports of the incident mentioned no accomplice in the holdup, Deputy Sheriff Neeley said two other men and a girl may have been involved

Dismal Fall for Hay Fever Sufferers

There will be no escaping this year's sneezing season for the nation's hay fever sufferers.

Before you can say "gesundheit," eyes will be itching and watery, noses will be running, upper respiratory systems will be fighting for air and 15 million people will be very uncomfortable, if not seriously ill. Abnormal winter weather conditions have yielded a bumper crop of pollens, creating what is sure to be one of the most distressing summers for hay fever victims in recent years.

The information, based on evaluation of statistical data provided by the National Climatic Center, identifies key hay fever pockets which are expected to produce record quantities of pollen as a result of the highly unusual weather conditions during the last six months.

Arizona-normally a pollen-free state which has long served as a haven for allergy sufferers-is in for a prolonged allergy season. This unusual occurrence is the result of winter's heavy rainfalls which produced dense vegetation growth.

Oklahoma and other central states where ragweed grows abundantly will become pollen factories this fall. Heavy rains and a warmer than usual spring caused increased growth of this weed.

Sections of the Gulf area, particularly Mississippi, which experienced flooding during January, will also be subjected to a more intense allergy season: The northwestern states, buried under record snowfalls, will see a flourishing of summer grass pollens particularly in Oregon and Washington, two states with the heaviest spring runoffs.

The northern portion of the country narrowly missed a relatively mild allergy year. A much wetter March and April counteracted one of the driest winters on record.

The outlook is not entirely negative however. Florida, where the mercury dropped to new lows in early March, will have a better than normal allergy season. The flowering of many trees was adversely affected when snow fell as far south as Tampa. This will be good news for hay fever victims, but bad news for orange juice drinking cold sufferers.

What Is Hayfever?

From May to October, one out of every 15 people suffers from hay fever, the most common of all allergies. Unfortunately, many of these people attribute their symptoms to the common cold and therefore are not properly diagnosed and treated.

What Is An Allergy? Not all allergies are seasonal. They can be caused when your body reacts abnormally to particles in the air, plants, insect bites, foods, drugs, even physical things such as heat or cold. The most common symptoms are watery eyes, stuffy nose, itching skin and hives. Sometimes allergies cause headaches, an upset stomach, or even asthma.

Although allergies begin most often in children, they can develop at any age. And, unfortunately, if even one of your parents has allergies, there is a good chance you could develop them yourself.

You are said to have an allergy when your body reacts abnormally to substances in the environment that do not bother most people-particles in the air you inhale, the food you eat, the drugs you take, even physical things, such as cold and heat. Emotional or nervous strain won't cause an allergy, but it can aggravate or "set off" an allergic reaction.

There are many different kinds of allergic reactions. The most common symptoms of allergy are stuffy or runny nose, watery and itching eyes, itching skin, or hives. Sometimes there is trouble in breathing (asthma), headaches, or an upset stomach.

Scientists are finding true the old saying that "allergies run in families." If even one parent has allergies, there is a likelihood that some children in a family may also develop allergies.

Allergies can develop at any age, even in infancy. Children develop allergic symptoms more often than adults.

Although allergies are seldom fatal, allergic reactions to substances such as drugs and venom from stinging insects can be dangerous and can lead to life-threatening conditions.

Because many allergies seem to be inherited, they are life-long. However, in most instances, with proper care and treatment, allergies can be controlled and most persons can lead a normal symptom-free life. There are many kinds of medicine that can produce large quantities of IgE treated with prescribed doses of whenever they come in contact with specific substances-or allergenschemicals, animal fur, certain drugs, insect venom or various airborne matter. When the IgE antibody meets the allergen, certain chemicals are released in the body, producing the allergic symptoms such as sneezing, itching and rashes.

help relieve or stop the allergic reaction, but true control in dependent on finding the cause. It is important to consult a doctor familiar with the problems of allergies. You should discuss this with your family doctor or phone your local Medical Society to request the names of allergists who practice near where you live.

At present there is no way to prevent allergies, aside from being aware of the problem and taking care to avoid the cause. Scientists are trying to improve the effectiveness of allergy "shots" or injection treatments to minimize or prevent allergic reactions to such substances as pollen and insect venom.

Moving may or may not help, and relief may be temporary depending on what is causing the allergy. Forexample, certain desert areas that once contained few allergy-causing plants now favor growth of grasses and weeds-by-products of irrigation and cultivation.

The doctor, by careful questioning of the patient and by performing certain laboratory and skin tests, can usually determine the cause of your allergy. However, much of the detective work must be done by you. In the case of a child, the parents, working with the doctor, may be able to determine what is causing the problem.

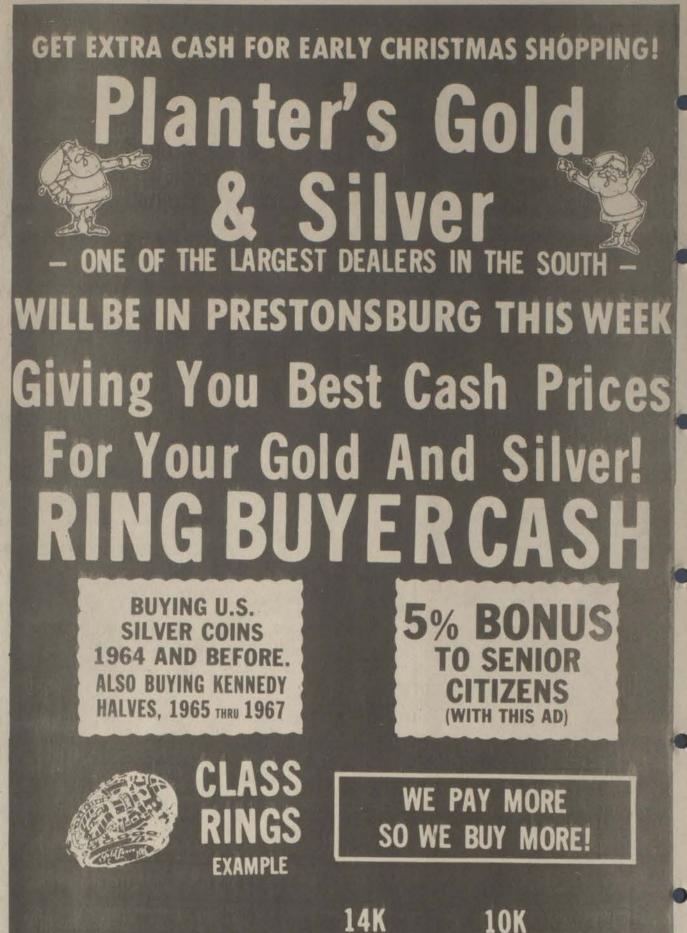

Hay fever is an allergy that is caused by pollen from trees, grasses or weeds. This term does not mean someone is allergic to hay and has a fever. It really means a person reacts to pollens which are most abundant early in the Spring (trees) or in the early Summer (grasses), or late Summer-early Fall (weeds). Symptoms of hay fever are spells of sneezing, itching, runny eyes and nose, burning palate and throat. Individuals suffering from hay fever can be affected in most parts of the country.

Asthma is a serious lung condition characterized by coughing, wheezing, and difficulty in breathing. The condition of asthma sufferers is often worsened by exposure to air pollutants, cigarette smoke, and chemical fumes.

Severe attacks of hay fever can be such as pollen, dust, food-containing so debilitating that the sufferer cannot work or carry out normal daily activities. These people require close medical supervision and effective medication.

> There are a number of highly effective medications for the treatment of hav fever the most common form of allergy, presently on the market. Many times, long-term allergy victims find that their medication ceases to work effectively. Medical research and testing has demonstrated that in these instances, a new chemical compound can prove to be a highly effective alternative. Patients also may have a series of injections-known as desensitization-containing small amounts of the identified allergen to build up their immunity. This treatment can take from two to three years to produce the desired effect. It is expensive and sometimes risky to try to make someone nonallergic. Many patients with seasonal allergies respond well to antihistamines without the desensitization. Hay fever may be complicated by upper respiratory infections or sinusitis. It may be associated with bronchial asthma, a disease that can be extremely debilitating and, in rare instances, fatal. The severity of hay fever attacks varies from person to person and from year to year, partially influenced by weather conditions and geographic locations. For those allergic to ragweed only, there is one sure cure-move to a place where ragweed doesn't grow. In North America this would be the far northern regions of Minnesota and Michigan, and many areas of Canada. Only those few people who are able to live a lifetime without exposure to allergic causing substances will never know whether they have an allergy. Allergy-prone people are advised to keep away from high pollen, mold spore and ragweed areas. They should stay indoors as much as possible during the allergy season, preferably with an air conditioner or air purifier running. If one is a suspected hay fever sufferer-that is one who keeps getting "colds" every spring which last through the summer-consult the family physician, who can recommend treatment or refer an allergist.

medical name for hay fever, no allergic. If both parents have longer has to be the villain it once was.

It wasn't that many years ago that the medical profession was confounded by the cause of allergies. They now know that an allergic antibody called immunoglobulin E (IgE) is one of the culprits. All people have small quantities of IgE in their bodies, as part of their defense system to fight bacteria and viruses.

Coming from a family whose members have allergies, such as hay fever, asthma or eczema, greatly Allergic rhinitis, which is the increases the chance of being allergies, it is likely that half of their children will have them, although not necessarily the same allergies. It is often found that one allergy can lead to another because sensitivity is high. A person may first become allergic to ragweed, then to other pollens, to molds and on to other substances.

Hay fever victims often have mild Allergy-prone people, however, cases which can be successfully

The good news is that one no longer has to suffer all summer long from hay fever. Learn to recognize the symptoms and seek medical assistance.

Figures Show Ky. SAT Scores High

College-bound Kentuckians have once again scored higher on the Scholastic Aptitude Test than the nation as a whole, according to figures recently released by the College Board.

The test is used by many colleges and universities as one criteria for admission.

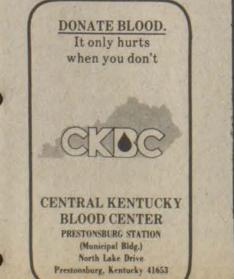

Kentucky students scored a total verbal mean of 471 and math mean of 507 compared to the national average of 424 in verbal skills and 466 in math. These figures are based on a top score of 800.

Kentucky has consistently ranked higher than the national sample mean and much higher than the southern region mean, according to Kentucky Department of Education officials.

"The SAT has been a good indicator of how well Kentucky is teaching the basics," said Raymond Barber, superintendent of public instruction. "I am pleased to see this indicator cono confirm that Kentucky is doing inue t a good job of preparing students for college. The test also includes questions concerning degree goals, colleges designated to receive scores and intended areas to study. The test results indicate more female students play to study biological sciences and related areas than male students. More men and women, however, designated physical sciences and related areas as their intended areas of study. Of the females tested, 29.3 percent expect to study biological sciences with 23.6 percent concentrating on health and medical areas. Only 20.2 percent of the males selected biological sciences with 13.8 percent expected to concentrate on helath and medical fields. Some 34 percent of the male students chose physical sciences as their intended area of study with 24.3 percent of the group specifically interested in engineering. A low 9.4 percent of the females selected physical sciences as their area of study with only 4.1 percent interested in engineering. More than half of the students taking the SAT in Kentucky said they plan to obtain a graduate degree while 25.8 percent will work toward a bachelor's degree. Only 1.7 percent expect to get a two-year degree. Of those asked, 16.3 percent were undecided as to which degree they would work to receive. The University of Kentucky headed the list of universities most frequently designated to receive test results. The University of Louisville was second and Tennessee's Vanderbilt University ranked third.

There were 37 fewer water-related fatalities in Kentucky in 1979 than in 1978. In 1979 there were 106 deaths compared to 143 in 1978.

'Bootleg' Mines Claim Victims; Stanley Says Some in Floyd Co.

The state Mines and Minerals Department has been moving against bootleg underground coal mines since this summer.

Tragically, while Mines and Minerals continues its drive to close illegal mines, the deaths at the wildcat mines continue. There have been five deaths this year in the Woodbine area of Whitley county, the most recent on Monday of last week.

Commissioner Willard Stanley said he'd been with the department 23 years but did not know about the prevalence of unlicensed mines until he became comissioner 10 months ago. This year, there have been nine warants issued, four indictments and one indictment pending.

Stanley estimated that there are about 50 illegal mines operating in Kentucky. There are 2,397 licensed operators

Most of the illegal mines are located in Knox and Whitley counties, he said. They are usually "family affairs," operated by a few men on a fenced-in farm, said Stanley. If there is threat of discovery, the miners may resort to working after dark, he said.

The three men killed Monday at a Woodbine mine were working at night. State officials had already closed the mine earlier this month and the danger sign was still posted. Dead are Frank Crawford, Jr., of Whitley county, Clarence Ray, of Laurel county, and David Hood, of Montana.

Lonnie Lowe died in August in the Woodbine area. John Thomas Adkins died Oct. 1.

Crawford, Ray and Hood were killed when detonators went off while they were still in the blasting area, Stanley said. The commissioner said the miners were using black-powder fuses, which are lit by open flame rather than electrical detonators.

Commissioner Stanley said he's received information that most of the miners operating illegally would be willing to pay the $100 state fee and become licensed but they cannot afford the $5,000 reclamation bond required by state and federal law

When an unlicensed mine is located, closure order is issued and danger signs are posted. At that point the offense is a misdeameanor. However, if the mine operator continues to work the mine, the offense is a Class D felony punishable by fine and/or imprisonment.

The state Revenue Department's top official declined to guess the amount of tax revenue the state loses each year because of illegal mining operations, but said his department is "gearing up" to study the extent of the problem.

"I have a gut feeling it's a sizeable amount" of revenue lost, Robert Allphin, commissioner of the Department of Revenue, told the Interim Joint Committee on Appropriations and Revenue Tuesday.

Allphin said because of the clandestine mining of coal and because some legal and licensed mines may not report all the coal they produce, auditors in his agency, who have only been trained "to look at books and records," cannot sufficiently cope with the problem.

According to Allphin, though, revenue auditors are now receiving special training from federal Internal Revenue Service officials in surveillance and other techniques he declined to identify. These methods will enable the Revenue Department to handle the problem, he said, a task force of the specially trained auditors. said Allphin, will be able to do extensive investigative work in Eastern Kentucky coalfields, where much of the problem exists.

The Justice Department will also help Revenue Department auditors with the work, Allphin said. In Kentucky, for each ton of coal lifted from the ground, a coal severance tax of 4.5 percent is applied to the sale price-about one dollar per ton, according to a legislator on the panel.

Allphin said oftentimes a small, unlicensed company with a fictitious name and address sells coal to a larger company without being taxed for mining the coal. In June, said Allphin, $2 million in coal was sold that way by 89 small companies. Letters were sent to the 89 companies but his agency was able to get replies from only six, said Allphin. The other 83 either had nonexistent addresses or never replied, he said.

Another problem, he said, is the shipment of illegally mined coal to surrounding states where the severance tax is easily avoided. Allphin said the Revenue Department is now drawing up legislation which should take care of the first illegal practice. Companies which purchase untaxed coal from illegal operations, under such legislation, would be responsible for the severance tax that was not collected in the first place, said Allphin. Willard Stanley, commissioner of the state Bureau of Mines and Minerals, told the committee illegal, unlicensed underground mines last year produced from "200,000 to 250,000 tons of coal." Most of those mines, he said, are confined to five counties, Whitley, Knox Floyd, Perry, and Harlan. "You'll find very, very little illegal mines outside of southeastern Kentucky," he said.

The unlicensed underground mines, said Stanley, are small and usually produce no more than 40 tons of coal a year. Most are family-run at night during the summer months.

Stanley disagreed, however, with Allphin's statement that much of the illegally mined coal is shipped out of state. "Most of the coal is being sold in Kentucky," he said.

Stanley said although licenses cost only $100 or $125 a year, depending on a mine's size, licensing requires a reclamation permit from the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, and owners do not want responsibility for reclaiming mined land.

Stanley said an owner who is cited for running an unlicensed underground mine and still continues to do so may be imprisoned for up to five years. He said he knows of no warrants given in the past to operators of the nearly 50 underground mines in southeastern Kentucky, many of which have been operating illegally for more than 10 years.

In discussing Tuesday's mine explosion in Whitley County which killed three men, Stanley said the Mines and Minerals Bureau had indicted the owner of the illegal mining operation and had ordered the mine closed.

Inspectors Check Toys For Possible Hazards

Although most adults never think of small parts, sharp edges or lead-based paint when shopping for Christmas toys, the Department for Human Resources' "Operation Toybox" has started unannounced inspections of retail toy outlets around the state to assure toys on their shelves are free of these and other potential safety hazards.

Inspectors from the Department's consumer product safety branch will visit 150 stores across the state between now and Christmas for spot inspections of toys and other products intended for use by children.

Toys will be inspected for sharp edges and points and small parts that could be broken loose from the toy and swallowed. Samples of painted toys will be collected to check for lead content in the paint, according to branch manager Edsel Moore.

In addition, electrical toys will be checked for proper labeling and independent testing laboratory logos. Federal consumer safety guidelines state electrically operated toys intended for children under 8 must not have a heating element.

Toys that have been banned or are subject to mandatory or voluntary recall by the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission since the state's last inspection may still be on some shelves, Moore said. Inspectors will remove them. "The consumer has an important voice in toy safety. If someone buys a toy and it proves to be a health hazard, we can check it out if they bring it to our attention," Moore said

Moore emphasized that the branch can't be responsible for toys that do not work properly and are poorly made. The branch can intervene if a defect in a toy proves to be a hazard to public safety. "The toy industry had an estimated $6 million in sales last year. Toys are tokens of affection and we want to see that they don't cause injury or pain," Moore said. One-third of all injuries to children are toy-related, he said.

Home-Made Storm Windows Save Money

Rising costs for fuel-whether for natural gas, electricity, oil or coal-are here to stay. Keeping fuel costs down as well as conserving our natural resources is everyone's concern.

Recent studies have shown that installing storm windows can cut home heating bills up to 15 percent. Single pane windows do a poor job of keeping heat inside your house. As you lose heat, you consume more fuel to maintain a comfortable temperature, and your fuel costs go up

There are several solutions to this problem, including made-to-order aluminum storm windows and double glazed permanent windows.

Do-it-yourself storm windows using clear plastic film offer an alternative to buying expensive custom-made glass storm windows, and plastic storm windows work as efficiently as factory made ones. The heavy clear plastic, which comes in varying thicknesses, is clear like glass, durable and non-yellowing. If maintained properly, the plastic storm windows may be used again year after year.

How To Make Them

There is nothing tricky about the skills required to make your own storm windows. First, decide whether you want your storm windows on the inside of the window or on the outside. It makes little difference in their heat-keeping ability, but for apartments or upper floor windows, it may be easier to work on the inside. Either way, the process is similar.

What you need: You should have a saw, a hammer, a staple gun (heavy duty or extra heavy duty, with 3/8" or 5/16" staples), metal cleats, 1" by 2" wood stock, clear plastic film, paint or stain and weather stripping.

How to Build the Frame

Whether used inside or outside the window, the wooden frame should be sturdy and snug fitting. Use 1" by 2" wood stock. Fastening the corners can be done several ways. The simplest way is to use a metal cleat.

Cleats should be applied at an angle to reduce the chance of splitting the wood. Use them on both sides of the joint.

For a snug fit, use weather stripping on the perimeter of the frame. By sizing your frames slightly smaller than the window area and stapling weather stripping to the frame edge, a tight fitting barrier is PAPER HANGING FREE ESTIMATES Phone 874-2454 -23-30t-pd formed that stops infiltration of air

The completed frames, particularly outside frames, will require some means of securing in the window space. This can be done with any of several fastening devices available in hardware stores. The frames should be painted or stained before the plastic is adhered.

How to Attach the Plastic

For a storm window, use double polished clear plastic superior gaugeorange interleaf paper, or extra heavy gauge-blue interleaf paper. Clear plastic is sold in varying thicknesses. If the only thickness is less than the above, use it. Thicker plastic is just a little easier to work with.

If your plastic is superior or extra heavy gauge, you can staple it directly to the frame, working your way from the center of each side to the corners until it is tautly in place.

If your plastic is thinner gauge (standard-green interleaf, or heavy-brown interleaf), direct stapling can cause rip-outs. In that case, use thin cardboard or screen door moulding tack strips. A tack strip placed over the plastic and stapled through will prevent rip-outs.

Install plastic on one side of the frame only, not on both.

When cutting your plastic, allow a little overlap. After fixing the plastic to the frame, you can trim the material back for neatness. The completed storm window is installed so there is about a one inch air space between the plastic and the window.

Ferguson's exhibit, left on display at the school, includes an assortment of pinch pots, whistles, mugs, ceramic scenes and masks.

KET Says Charges Misleading

Comparing Kentucky Educational Television with commercial television is like "comparing apples with oranges."

That's the way a KET official phrased it for members of the Subcommittee on Education and the Arts, a panel of state legislators who toured the network's Lexington-based production facilities last week after a meeting with KET officials.

Much of that meeting centered around the recently released report of the Governor's Executive Management Commission. In the report KET was criticized among other things for purchasing what the commission considered seemingly unnecessary and expensive equipment, and for its overly large and elaborate television productions.

The commission of executives and experts from the private sector was assembled by Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. to analyze state government operations and suggest improvements. KET, governed by a nine-member authority (board), is under the state Education and the Arts Cabinet.

Leonard Press, KET executive director, told the panel the commission's report, although useful, is misleading because commission members visited KET during the summet when KET's instructional broadcasting service for schools, known as ITV, was shut down. That fact was not mentioned in the commission's report, Press said.

Video recording machines the commission found unused during their visit are used at near full capacity during. While local commercial stations depend on a "network feed" for a majority of their programming, KET has a more diverse programming schedule which necessitates the full use of the video recorders, Press added.

He said besides carrying the more than 90 ITV series during the school year, video machines must also be used for local productions, for "dubbing" and to record shows relayed to Kentucky by satellite from the Public Broadcasting Service.

Three studio cameras purchased by KET for $405,000 had been criticized by the commission for their impracticality. Press told panel members the cameras were saving KET money, improving studio picture quality and replacing six older cameras.

Press also pointed to the success of KET's two new evening productions, "Bywords" and "Kentucky Journal," to answer the commission's complaint that KET productions were in the past too large. The two series, Press said, are popular and require smaller production crews.

Taylor Hollin of the state Department of Education, which is responsible for the curriculum development for KET's daytime instructional programming, said the Education Department views the role of ITV as supplementary to the regular school curriculum. He said the Department of Education, in preparing the ITV curriculum, "targets programming where maximum usage would be."

Approximately 89 percent of the state's elementary and high schools use ITV programming, said Sandy

Big Sandy Stream Rehab Work Starts

A notice to proceed was issued last Friday by the Huntington District, Army Corps of Engineers, to the Levi Construction Company, of Belfry covering rental of equipment for removal of debris from the bank and channel of streams within the Big Sandy River Basin

The stream rehabilitation program is a cooperative effort between the Huntington District Corps of Engineers and the Appalachian Regional Commission, with input from county and local officials who obtain the necessary real estate rights-of-entry and includes streams in Floyd, Johnson, Knott, Martin and Pike counties, Ky., and Buchanan and Dickenson counties, Virginia.

The work will include snagging and clearing operations, the removal of sand and gravel bars, and the removal of obstructions which impede stream flow.

Benefits will include reduction of local flood heights and aesthetic improvement of the area. "Because of the nature of work that can be accomplished under this program, it will be effective only in reducing damage and inconvenience resulting from minor floods," says Col. James H. Higman, district engineer.

The contract is in two amounts—$467,539 for the Kentucky work, and $151,789 for Virginia. Levi Construction Company will furnish 126 pieces of heavy machinery equipment with operators. The Huntington District will employ 94 Kentucky and Virginia workers as laborers and chain saw operators. It is expected that the work will be completed by mid-December, if there is no high water to delay operations.

Capt. William D. Roudabush will be in charge of the construction phase of the program. He will be located in Pikeville, and his mailing address is Levisa Fork Area Office, P.O. Box 416, Mail Route 3, Pikeville, Kentucky 41501. His phone number is Area Code 506, 432-4622.

The stream rehabilitation program, resulting from the April, 1977 flood, was first funded by Congress in 1978. Work was esentially completed on the Tug Fork in West Virginia and Kentucky last July. To date, approximately $2.6 million has been expended for this work.

OPEN 10 A.M.-8 P.M. SIX DAYS A WEEK BUT NEVER ON SUNDAY Welch of KET. Another KET official told the panel that a questionnaire returned to KET by more than 4,000 teachers indicated "roughly 50 percent were making regular use of instructional programming during the school day."

Rep. Carl Nett, D-Louisville, said the number of schools using ITV might actually be smaller than KET's figures indicate. He further suggested that KET's daytime programming might be more useful if geared toward more cultural programming, such as plays and opera. Another KET official said that ITV's usefulness and popularity could not be discounted.

The KET official cited the number of school superintendents who complained to KET recently when the state decided to end funding of a school equipment project, which provided a 50 percent match to schools during the past two bienniums to buy video equipment and televisions for ITV programming.

During that time, more than $3 million worth of equipment was bought and installed in Kentucky schools, the official reported.

Press told the subcommittee the commission's report, which also included recommendations concerning the hiring of personnel and KET's use of the Kentucky Early Warning System, will be seriously studied. "In one way or another, we'll implement all of the suggestions," he said. "We may surprise ourselves with how much mileage we can get out of those recommendations.

Choosing and Using the Right Cheese

Cheese can be enjoyed at any meal, from breakfast to a late night snack, but choosing the right kind and the right amount can be a problem, especially if you're trying something new. If you've ever bought too much cheese, or bought a type that your family will only pick at, you know how expensive that experiment can be. You can end up throwing away what is, after all, fairly expensive food-$4 or more per pound for many types of cheese.

The trick with cheese is to know how to use it successfully.

Cheese as a food can meet an important part of your daily nutritional requirements, providing plenty of protein for body building and calcium for bones and teeth. Cheese is high in phosphorus, iron and vitamins A, D, and B.

Cooking with cheese not only puts those extra vitamins into your meals. it also can turn an ordinary recipe into a flavorful gourmet dish. There are pitfalls involved in cheesing your cuisine, but with care you can avoid them

Other suggestions:

First, shredding cheese is easier when the cheese is very cold. When cooking, to prevent the cheese from becoming stringy, either cook it at a high temperature for a very short time or at a low temperature very slowly.

Cheese keeps well and in perfect condition if properly stored. You can keep the cheese in a cool, dark, well-ventilated place free from them in a circle according to flavor, drafts. Cover it with a damp cloth to keep it moist.

You can also store cheese in the refrigerator for quite some time. The vegetable compartment is the best. Wrap in foil or plastic or use an airtight container.

To store chunks and leftover small pieces, cover them completely with plastic wrap; do not allow any part to be exposed. Slices should be left are children present, add some in their original wrapper, if it can be tightly resealed-otherwise repack in plastic wrap. Very small leftovers and dried-out pieces can be grated and kept refrigerated in a covered jar or in a well-sealed plastic bag. #### Writes Spender Work

By DR. LEE BARTLETT

Dr. Lee Bartlett, a member of the English faculty at Pikeville College, has just published a new volume entitled, "Letters To Christopher: Stephen Spender's Letters To Christopher Isherwood, 1929-1939." The publisher is Black Sparrow Press, a leading publisher of contemporary literature in the U.S.

The thirty-year-old Bartlett has published four previous books, as well as poetry, articles and reviews in such magazines as Poetry. New York Quarterly, and London Magazine. He came to Pikeville College this fall from the University of California at Davis where he received his doctorate and was an instructor in humanities and a lecturer in English.

Tourist Department Has New Service Number

Keeping up with events and activities in Kentucky should be easier starting this week when a toll-free tourist information service number begins operation pack

The new service, sponsored by the state Department of Tourism, will replace the toll-free central reservations number for Kentucky state parks. "The decision for discontinuing the central reservations number resulted from a study of the phone system by the Parks Department Approximately 20 percent of total parks reservations were made through this system and that did not justify the enormous expense," said Jim Carr.

Carr, director of the department's division of marketing analysis and business development, said people calling the old central reservations will be given the toll-free information number.

The number Kentuckians will call is 1-800-372-2961. A toll-free number also will be available to people in 22 other states, Carr said.

The new service will provide telephone numbers of individual state parks and also numbers of local chambers of commerce and tourism commissions, for people desiring lodging at facilities other than those at state parks. "We will provide information on tourism-related facilities in Kentucky. We also will have the capability to mail material to those requesting more detailed information than we can give over the phone," Carr

The division is in the process of assembling nine different types of packets of information for distribution. Eight packets will concentrate on specific areas of the state and one packet will provide general information on the entire state.

In addition to its primary purpose of serving as an information center, the new service will aid the Tourism Department in two other ways. "We will use the phone system as a research tool to gather more information about potential visitors to Kentucky tourist attractions and to test the effectiveness of the state's advertising," said Carr.

Phone operators will ask a variety of questions to a random sample of callers to obtain more information for the Tourism Department data base. The questions will cover subjects ranging from the demographic backgrounds of the callers to the areas of the state the people plan to visit.

The phone operators also will ask a sample of callers where they obtained the information service number. This will assist the department in tracking the effectiveness of the media the department will use in its 1981 advertising campaign, Carr said.

Although the new service will serve as a multi-purpose, its most important function is to provide callers with answers to their questions about what is available in Kentucky, Carr said.

Water Resources, Focus Of Department

Water is one of Kentucky's most underrated resources, and Jackie Swigart, secretary of the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, considers the combining of three divisions in her department a step toward improved communication and integration of programs to protect this resource.

Inspectors, engineers, data processors, administrative personnel and clerical staff making up the new division of water are meeting together in Frankfort to bring about this process.

Programs will cover objectives, regulations and finances of the newly organized division made up of former divisions known as sanitary engineering, water quality and water resources.

Foster Homes Needed For "Special Needs" Program

Although Kentucky's special needs foster care program has enough homes in the Kentucky River district, more foster homes are needed in other areas of the state.

Special needs foster parents are required to take 32 hours of training in the care of special needs children. Training is usually held in a central urban area, like Lexington or Louisville. It involves learning the use of appliances for children who are physically handicapped, like braces or catheters, or special training in the care of status-offender teenagers and emotionally disturbed or retarded children.

In addition, they complete six hours of up-date training every three months. Foster parents who complete the training and are approved for the program receive a stipend of $11 per day. Under the regular foster care program receive from $4.75 to $5.75 per day, depending on the age of the child.

The state pays for any equipment the child might need, like a wheelchair or installation of a wheelchair ramp in a foster home. The state also pays the child's medical bills.

For more information about the foster care program in Kentucky, contact local offices of the Department for Human Resources, Bureau for Social Services.

Sgt. Williamson In Air Force Exercises

Army Staff Sergeant Ronnie H. Williamson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Williamson Jr., of Drift, recently participated in Reforger 8D and Crested Cap, North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) training exercises.

Reforger (return of forces to Germany) and Crested Cap (strategic deployment) demonstrated U.S. capability to rapidly move ground and air forces to reinforce NATO in a crisis situation.

More than 17,000 U.S.—based personnel participated in the exercise. Sergeant Williamson is assigned at Fort Hood, Texas.

Attend BSU Meet in Louisville

College students from this county who attended the Baptist Student Union State Convention at Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, October 10-12, are, above, from left to right, Judith Hale, Cheri Hinchman, Lisa Johnson, Pam Porter, Jack Childress, Dee Dee Kalos, Becky Watts, Tamyra Prater, and Bonita King. All were representing Prestonsburg Community College except Miss Kalos, who represented the University of Louisville.

Baptist Student Union, a Christian organization sponsored by the Enterprise Association of Southern Baptist Churches, has a membership of more than 30 at Prestonsburg Community College. Members meet each Thursday during the lunch hour. Officers at PCC are Judith Hale, president; Jane Wallace, vice-president; Jamie Branham, program committee chairman, and Barbara Hicks, food committee chairman. Sponsors are Gus Kalos, professor of music, and Michele Butts, assistant professor of history and journalism.

Mountain Utilities Permitted To Seek Loan Of $700,000.00

The state Energy Regulatory Commission has granted Mountain Utilities, Inc., of Prestonsburg, both the authority to borrow money and a certificate of convenience and necessity required before it could begin restoration of its gas system.

The commission found that Mountain Utilities had a 29 percent line loss of its gas during a test year ending Dec. 31, 1979. Such a line loss "not only represents a potential source of danger to the consumers but also makes it impossible for the applicant to remain solvent," the commission stated in its order.

Mountain Utilities plans to borrow $700,000 from the federal Economic Development Administration through the Kentucky Department for Local Government.

More than one third of the world's energy is consumed by the 6 percent of the world's populating residing in the United States.

NEW STORE HOURS:

Six days a week.

New Eye Surgery Performed Here

Dr. Michael Minix performs lens implant microsurgery in the new opthalmology room at Highlands Regional Medical Center. Dr. Minix is participating in a two-year investigation of this procedure by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

A 64-year old woman enters Highlands Regional Medical Center legally blind. After a 30-minute operation and several weeks recovery at home, she has near-normal sight again.

Miracles like this are happening often in the new opthalmology room at Highlands, a hospital spokesman said this week. Dr. Michael Minix, of the Highlands staff, is performing this relatively new type of surgery in which the cataract and natural lens are removed, and an artificial lens is permanently implanted.

Lens implant surgery is performed under a microscope. The delicate thread used for stitches is one-quarter of the width of a horse's hair. Elderly patients are the typical candidates for this microsurgery. "When the elderly lose their sight, they have more accidents and seem to lose interest in living, so this operation can mean a whole new life for them," says Dr. Minix. "It's a big plus to our area to be able to provide this service without making the patient travel to Lexington or Louisville."

The technique was discovered by accident...during an accident. When a small plane crashed during World War II, a fragment of plastic polymer from the windshield flew into the pilot's eye. It didn't hurt his vision, nor did his eye reject the material, the doctor treating the pilot recognized the significance of the incident and began researching this phenomenon.

Lens implant surgery was performed and tested on animals initially. The first successful lens implant on a human eye was done in the 1950's. Because of the intricate procedures used in this surgery, many surgeons would not attempt it. It wasn't until the introduction of microsurgical techniques in the 1970's that lens implant operations were consistently successful and more widely accepted.

The first lens implant microsurgery at Highlands Regional Medical Center was done May 8, this year. Since that date, 18 operations of this type have been performed by Dr. Minix and the HRMC surgical team.

Food Dollar May Not Buy Enough Nutrition

Americans spend an average of $1,200 per person for food each year, but they may not be buying their money's worth in nutrition.

PHP

Americans have changed both where and how they spend their food dollars during the last 15 years. They are eating out more, and spending a greater share of the food budget at the restaurant than they did in 1965, said Dr. Fudeko Maruyama, Extension food and nutrition specialist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Of weekly food expenditures, averaging $23 per person, $17 or 73 percent goes for groceries, and $6 or 27 percent for meals and snacks away from home, according to Maruyama. In 1965, Americans spent an average 17 percent of their food budget for restaurant meals.

The groceries they bring home have changed as well. A recent USDA survey shows Americans are buying less milk, dairy products, breads and cereals, eggs, fats and oils, sugar and candy, and vegetables-especially potatoes. They are buying more beef, poultry, fish, nuts, fruit, soft drinks, desserts and alcohol, especially beer and wine.

The supermarket food dollar now consists of 38 cents for meat, poultry, fish and eggs; 20 cents for fruits and vegetables; 12 cents for dairy products; 12 cents for breads and cereals; 7 cents for sugar, candy, soft drinks and desserts; 4 cents for beer and wine; and the remaining 7 cents for fats, oils and other foods.

Not all the changes in eating and buying habits have brought nutritional benefits. Studies continue to show people in this country are not as well nourished as they might be, said Maruyama. "Americans still consume too many calories, and too much fat, cholesterol, salt and alcohol.

Sugar and alcohol consumption has increased dramatically since 1965. Americans are drinking 38 percent more alcoholic beverages, mostly beer and wine. And although they buy less sugar and candy, they actually consume more sugar-largely in soft drinks, punches and desserts, Maruyama said.

sugar, said Maruyama. "That is the equivalent of each American drinking a 12-ounce can of soda every day, and consuming more than three tablespoons of sugar in that 12-ounce can.'

As Americans buy more beer, wine, soft drinks and desserts, they may shortchange themselves on nutrition. "Alcohol and soft drinks provide calories, but few nutrients, 'Maruyama said. "Buying more of these takes away from money available for nutritious foods.

Eleven cents of every grocery dollar buys beer, wine, soft drinks or desserts, she said. She pointed out that money spent at the supermarket for beer and wine-4 cents of every dollar-does not reflect how much people spend for alcohol. Most money for alcohol is spent at the liquor store and for drinks at bars and restaurants, she said.

Does eating more meals out encourage people to spend available food money for high-calorie, low-nutrient food and drinks? Not necessarily, said Maruyama.

'If people choose well, they can get nutritious meals when they eat out," she said. "Even the fast food places are becoming more .nutritionconscious, and are offering more vegetables and salad bars.'

Molasses Making Time at Cliff

Dearl Faye Holbrook feeds the gin mill

Hazel Lafferty and Oakley Morrison sample the molasses to see if they are good while Johnnie Lafferty, Jr., is skimming the juice.

By JOHN SPARKS County Extension Agent for Agriculture

During the crisp cool mornings a little smoke could be seen drifting from the Cliff community. Those at a distance may have thought it was early morning fog but those close to Johnny Lafferty, Jr.'s farm could smell the sweet aroma and know that it was sweet sorghum making time again in Floyd county.

A few years ago, Johnny decided he would try his hand at making molasses. His dad had been a veteran of sorghum making, and he had assisted him but had never run molasses through the evaporation pan. After getting expert advice from Anderson Hatfield on how to make sweet sorghum syrup, he started making sorghum himself three years ago.

His adventure keeps the whole family busy in cutting, stripping, and feeding the "gin mill" for the final product that everyone is waiting to buy. According to Mr. Lafferty, this is the first time that he had tried the variety, Dale.

Dale is a very high quality syrup light-colored and mild, with that characteristic sorghum flavor. It will bring a top dollar.

The first step to producing high quality syrup is harvesting the sorghum at the right stage of development. The new Dale variety can yield more than 150 gallons of finished syrup per acre, but the harvest time is critical. As the crop matures, the composition of the juice changes and the quantity and quality of the syrup changes.

Sorghum should be harvested before it is fully mature. The Dale variety should be harvested when most of the seed is in the dough to hard-dough stage of maturity. If the stalks are harvested too early, a low sugar content will reduce the quantity and quality of molasses produced. If the crop is harvested too late, the syrup is more likely to gel.

Those who are unable to tell when the plant is mature enough to make good syrup can use a Brix hydrometer to measure the amount of sugar in the juice. Before taking a Brix reading, farmers should let the juice stand for a few minutes to allow air bubbles to escape. A Brix reading of 15.5° to 16.5° shows the sorghum is ready to be harvested.

After the juice is extracted from the gin mill, it is heated in an evaporator

The juice should be evaporated as rapidly as possible at boiling temperatures of 108° to 110° C. or 226° to 230° F. As the juice is heated, various proteins and non-sugar substances rise to the surface and are skinned off.

Producers should use a syrup hydrometer to determine proper density. When tested near boiling temperatures, syrup density should be 35° to 36° Baume. Now that this year's harvest is already in containers, firewood is being gathered for the next crop.

For more information on growing sorghum or where to obtain thermometers and hydrometers call the County Extension Office at 886-2668.

Notice Of Hearing

(Auxier Water Company, Inc., Box 99, Auxier, Ky.)

The Utility Regulatory Commission has scheduled a hearing on the 4th day of December, 1980 at 10:30 a.m., Eastern Standard Time, in its offices at Frankfort, Kentucky, for the purpose of receiving testimony and comments with regard to the establishment of appropriate tariff provisions by water utilities whereby increases in the cost of purchased water would be passed on to customers without notice and hearing upon the filing of an application with the Commission and approval of revised rates by the Commission. This procedure would avoid delays which could affect the financial condition of the utility and its service. The Utility Regulatory Commission will examine each filing to determine whether all or part of an increase in the cost of purchased water could be absorbed by the utility.

Done at Frankfort, Kentucky, this 16th day of October, 1980.

Hot Summer Blamed In 35 Ky. Deaths

Thirty-five Kentuckians suffered heat-related deaths in July and August of this year, the Department for Human Resources announced this week.

The figure is a dramatic increase over the one heat-related death recorded during the entire summer of 1979, according to department statistics. The number may increase as county health departments continue to notify Human Resources of summer deaths.

Of the 35 fatalities caused by the summer's soaring temperatures, 15 occurred in a two-day period at the peak of the heat wave. Eight died on July 16, seven died the next day.

Human Resources' office of health data lists 19 counties including heatrelated deaths. Health data director Charles Kendell said 12 of the 19 counties were in western Kentucky. They reported 26 heat-related deaths. Nine deaths occurred in seven eastern Kentucky counties.

Jefferson county reported 15 heatrelated deaths in July and August, the highest number of fatalities in a single county. "This follows patterns we've seen in the past," Kendell noted. "In previous years, most heat victims were elderly persons living alone in metropolitan areas."

While the victims' ages ranged from four months to 91 years, the most frequent ages of those who died in the heat wave were in the early to midseventies. Fourteen of the 35 victims were male, 21 were female. Twelve were black and 23 Causian.

"All 35 deaths were either directly attributable to the heat, or the heat was a contributing factor," Kendell said. He noted that the "immediate cause" sections on the 35 death certificates were filled in with similar phrases: "heat stroke, heat exhaustion, hyperthermia, exposure to high temperature, body found on couch with high temperature."

KENTUCKY AFIELD

By JOHN WILSON The period from Nov. 1 through the third Wednesday in November is "closed "season" in Kentucky's woods and fields. During this time, almost all hunting is prohibited, even for species such as groundhog and gray fox that otherwise have no closed season.

The reason for this "no guns" rule is to allow wildlife law enforcement officers to more easily detect those hunters who just can't seem to wait for the third Thursday in November, the opening day of small game season.

The only exceptions to this general no hunting rule are the woodcock and snipe seasons, Oct. 4 through Dec. 7; the goose, rail and gallinule season, Nov. 12 through Jan. 20; archery deer nunting, opened Oct. 1, and the first weekend" deer hunt, Nov. 8-10.

The "shake-out" season for raccoons is open during this period, but raccoon hunters may not carry firearms of any kind during this season.

Another exception is granted to those who hunt with hawks. Falconry season opens Nov. 1 and continues through the regular season for the species hunted.

But just because you can't go hunting is no reason to stay indoors in front of the 'TV during this time. There are several pre-season activities which can make your hunting more enjoyable and productive when the Nov. 20 opening day finally does roll around.

If you spend most of your time behind a desk, start taking brisk walks at least three times a week and you'll be in much better shape for opening day. You'll be able to hunt longer without fatigue and you could possibly prevent problems ranging from sore feet to a heart attack brought on by too much exertion after a long lay-off.

Your shooting reflexes also probably need to be sharpened up. A few sessions with some clay pigeons (no closed seasons or bag limits on these birds) should get you swinging smoothly again. And while you're at it, better check the sights or the scope on your deer rifle to make sure it's shooting where you aim it.

November is a good time to do some scouting for new places to hunt. Remember that you must have permission to hunt on private lands (written permission if you hunt with rifle of .240 caliber or larger). A couple of afternoons driving through the countryside and talking to landowners could widen your hunting horizons considerably.

Or if there's a youngster in your family or among your acquaintances, you might want to spend the first part of November teaching him or her the basics of hunting how to handle fire arms safely and responsibly, how to shoot accurately, how to be a conscientious and responsible hunter and sportsman.

Giving someone else a proper introduction to the fine and honorable sport of hunting could turn out to be one of the best things you could do with your time this November, both for you and for the youngsters:

CARING FOR POPCORN

Popcorn is a type of corn containing a high proportion of hard starch. Under heat, the moisture in the starch grains expand, resulting in an explosive rupture of the epidermis and the starch grains. Poor popping results from poor growth or insufficient moisture in the kernels. Now is the time to make sure popcorn in the garden has the best growing conditions to insure better popping next winter.

A Kentucky autumn is a time for hiking, going to football games and horse races, leisurely walking a dusty road to see what lies beyond the next curve. It is a time for reveling in color, warmth and beualy-and a time for camping and for picnics.

The Persian, who studied the stars and made tents for a living, would have gloried in this season upon us. red colored variety is a novelty know as strawberry popcorn, grown for its small ears. The whole ear is used often for decorative purposes rather than for popping. There are small-ear novelties, but they are less readily available. The culture of popcorn is not different from that of sweet corn, and they are often grown close together. Pollination is sometimes of concern. However, sweet corn is not able to pollinate popcorn. But popcorn is able to pollinate sweet corn. Since sweet corn is normally eaten quite young, the effect of the popcorn is not evident in the kernels and is normally no great concers.

To get will filled ears, popcorn, as well as sweet corn, should be planted in blocks of several short rows rather. than in one long, single row. Poor pollination may result from poor arrangement of plants, or from extremely poor growing conditions.

Popcorn needs the same sunny, welldrained rich soil suitable as sweet or field corn. It requires a longer time for maturity than most sweet corn varieties and therefore should be planted fairly early in the season, about mid May when most of the summer garden is planted. Even though the garden soil may have been fertilized at planting time, a side dressing of nitrogen fertilizer such as ammonium nitrate at 1 pound per 100 square feet should be applied when the plants are about 10 inches tall. A child may be a prize product of heredity, good breeding, culture and wealth, but without good nutrition, these factors will be of little profit. The nutritional problems of infants and young children are best met by a teamwork of parents, physicians and nutritionists. Such a team can ensure wholesome physical growth to children by providing a balance of nutrients such as protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals, vitamins and water. We suggest, as a parent, that you read and become aware of the major contributing factors involved in proper nutrition.

At COOLEY PHARMACY we maintain an up-todate supply of thousands of pharmacy items to fill your needs . . when you need them. As your neighborhood pharmacist, our best interest is your best interest. We are concerned about your health and welfare, as we have been for the past six years here in Prestonsburg. We have been giving high quality, personal service. We are your one-stop pharmacy, small enough to know you and large enough to serve you. Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30; Sat. 9-5. HELPFUL HINT:

Christmas Brings Shoplifters Out

The Christmas shopping season brings good and bad news to retail merchants. The good news is increased sales; the bad news is shoplifters.

According to the state office of crime prevention, shoplifting increases dramatically during the Christmas shopping season. Gary Bush, crime prevention official, said the season brings out professional shoplifters who work in the cover of large crowds of shoppers

According to the uniform crime report maintained by the state police, 4,769 persons were arrested for shoplifting last year. Shoplifters took merchandise valued at $258,204, an average of $54 per theft.

Bush said that the real figure for shoplifting is probably double that. "The number of shoplifters caught is only a small percentage of the total shoplifters in the state," he said. "Even with the Christmas spirit, 1 doubt that many merchants want to give their merchandise to shoplifters," he commented. Merchants should take steps to discourage shoplifters and make shoplifting more difficult, he said

One of the most basic steps to take, Bush said, is to prosecute all shoplifters caught in the store and make court appearances. "Stores that ion't prosecute get a reputation among professional shoplifters as easy targets," he said.

Other tips to combat shoplifting:

-Greet all customers as they enter. It's good for business and discourages shoplifters. Shoflifters don't like attention

-Watch for jittery eyes and nervous

VOCATIONAL TEACHER Technical Drafting Needed in Johnson County area $10,344 to $13,860 per year de-

hands. These may be clues to a potential shoplifter.

-Pay special attention to persons with large packages or purses and those wearing unusually bulky clothing.

Bush, a former police officer, said he once arrested a man who had sewn pillow cases to the insides of the pockets on a loose coat. The man had $300 in clothing stuffed in the coat.

Keep valuables in locked displays and away from store exits.

Avoid tall displays and long rows that can provide hiding places for shoplifters to work. Limit the number of garments that can be tried on in changing rooms.

-Neatly kept displays and regularly removed empty hangers can tip store personnel to a shoplifter at work.

Bush said that advertising shoplifting policies with signs around the store discourages many shoplifters. Merchants who think they've spotted a shoplifter should call the police. If the person attempts to leave the store, the merchant has the right to confront the suspected shoplifter.

He said, the merchant should ask the suspect, "Do you have something of mine? I would like it back." The merchant has the right to detain a suspected shoplifter for a reasonable amount of time until police arrive.

Merchants who want more information on combating shoplifting can contact their local police or state police post or call the office of crime prevention at 1-800-372-2994.

Hall-Flora Marriage Solemnized

The garden wedding of Miss Paula Anne Hall and Mr. George Aaron Flora was solemnized July 26, at the home of the bride's grandparents, Dr. and Mrs. Paul B. Hall, Paintsville. The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Graham Abbott, minister of the First United Methodist Church, Paintsville

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Hall, Davis Branch, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Lyda Mae Flora, of Flemingsburg, Ky., and the late Clyde R. Flora. The late Mr. and Mrs. John A. Barnott, of Weeksbury, Ky., are the maternal grandparents.

Preceding the ceremony, nuptial selections were presented by Mrs. Nancy McKenzie, Paintsville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin gown with a Queen Anne neckline. The tailored bodice was enhanced with chantilly lace and seed pearls, as were the fitted traditional bridal sleeves. Her full skirt edged in matching lace terminated in a chapel train. She wore a picture hat of Swiss braid and sheer veiling and carried an arrangement of miniature white roses, orchids and baby's breath.

Mrs. Bryan Vanhoose was matron of honor.

Mr. William Forby, of Louisville, served as best man. Ushers were Mr. Bryan Vanhoose, of Paintsville, and Mr. David Zank, of Ashland.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the home. Mr. and Mrs. Flora are residing in Morehead, Ky., where they are students at Morehead State University.
