This Town...That World

Thanksgiving—when the downed gobbler gets gobbled up.

A GREAT DAY

Whatever we have done to the detriment of the real spirit of Thanksgiving, it remains a great day.

When I think of the day, there pops into mind a picture from an old history textbook: doughty Pilgrims, rifles or blunderbuses in hand, guarding their women-folk and children through a snow-carpeted forest, braving both weather and Indian foes while on their way to worship and give thanks for the blessings that had been theirs.

We may not venture into any snowy forests this Thanksgiving, or run the peril in this electronic age of tomahawk and arrow, but problems beset us, for all that. The savages, these days, aren't mere redskins. The weapons are not always visible but they're no less dangerous.

In a sense, we all are embattled. But not overcome. Then let us count our blessings and remember that our bounty consists not only of food and drink and shelter or any other material thing.

City Proposes To Annex Area; Talks Ski Plan

Annexation is back on the Prestonsburg city council agenda, following a decision of the council Monday to begin proceedings aimed at bringing a section on the city's southwestern perimeter within the city limits.

On a motion of Councilman Estill Lee Carter, the council voted to seek annexation of an area extending from the present city line, near Archer Park, to "the top of the hill" on Katy Friend.

Jenny Wiley State Park will be the site of a ski resort in the future if John South and other members of the Big Sandy Ski Club have their wish. South told the city council that two such resorts are planned for eastern Kentucky, one at Pine Mountain and the other either at Jenny Wiley or Natural Bridge State Park.

While some questioned the practicability of the proposal, South indicated that preliminary feasibility studies appeared promising and that similar resorts are already flourishing in the Louisville area. The council voted its support for a resort here.

The state highways department will be asked to widen U.S. 23 and to add turning lanes on a section extending south from Prestonsburg Community College to the present four-lane highway. The project, which the council will ask to have undertaken during the next construction season, is aimed at improving traffic flow and giving easier access to schools and businesses in that section.

In other business, Town Branch residents asked to have fire hydrants installed, citing several recent fires there, and were referred to the city utilities commission; a public hearing on next year's budget was set for 6 p.m. on December 8; a $31,778 bid by Manning Equipment, of Louisville, on a sanitation truck was accepted; John Burke, praised by Mayor Harold Cooley as "a conscientious member," was reappointed to the utilities commission for another six-year term; and police officer Randy Ferrell was moved from probationary to permanent status.

Water, Septic Tanks Responsibility Shifts

The Floyd County Health Department and the health departments of other Kentucky counties are no longer responsible for several functions commonly associated with them, Earl Compton, administrator of the health department here, said this week.

The department now has no responsibility for public water supplies, the sampling of private water sources, solid waste disposal, water and air pollution control and plumbing or sub-surface sewage (septic tank) permits or installation.

It was pointed out that jurisdiction for water and air pollution control, sanitary water supplies and solid waste disposal has been transferred from the Department for Human Resources' Bureau for Health Services to the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection since 1973, and that the Division of Plumbing and jurisdiction for septic tanks was transferred to the Department of Housing, Buildings and Construction's plumbing division in June, 1974.

A Department for Human Resources memorandum also states that local health departments are no longer required to provide office space and services to representatives of state government, including representatives of the Division of Plumbing. "In other words," said Compton, "the Floyd County Health Department will no longer provide office space and service to plumbing inspectors without proper reimbursement from the Division of Plumbing."

Mr. Compton explained that the decision to put an end to activities connected with these programs was prompted, in part, by the large amount of non-reimbursable monies expended by local health departments across the state. During the last fiscal year

(1979-'80), for example, he said, a total of $689,862 was spent by health departments in Kentucky, and of this total Floyd county's health department spent $2871, on programs for which they have no responsibility and in which they have no jurisdiction.

The local health department will, however, continue to abate nuisances relating to non-functioning septic systems and to other matters which in its opinion may be injurious to public health.

Brothers Held After Trooper Hurt Saturday

Teaberry brothers, David Akers, 30, and Daniel Akers, 31, were jailed here late Saturday on charges stemming from an alleged attack on State Trooper Joe West earlier in the day at the Akers home.

Daniel Akers was booked only on a disorderly conduct count, but charges lodged against his brother included first degree assault, second degree assault, terroristic threatening, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct.

Bonds totalling $18,500 were asked for David Akers' release from jail. The bonds were executed Monday morning.

It was said at the Pikeville State Police barracks that Trooper West went to the Akers home in response to a complaint alleging that some drunks were shooting at each other. He reported finding David Akers, drunk, standing in front of the house, and the officer's attempt to arrest him was followed by the attack.

West was struck with a board and suffered head and chest injuries. He was treated at the Methodist Hospital, Pikeville.

The first degree assault charge against David Akers accused him of cutting Walker Newsome.

Trooper Don Weedman is investigating the incidents.

FILLS LATE HUSBAND'S POST

Believed to be Floyd county's first female constable, Mrs. Corbin Joseph was officially sworn in, Monday, by Judge-Executive Bill Wells following her appointment as District No. 1 constable for the unexpired term of her late husband. Mrs. Joseph, of Prestonsburg, is 71.

Defence Moves To Grant Bond In Little Case

Raymond Little, jailed on charges of slaying two men in a Knott county courtroom last year, should be freed on bail, according to a motion filed in Pike Circuit Court by his attorney recently.

The defendant, of Dry Creek in Knott county, is accused of shooting Estill Thornsberry and his son, Major, in the Knott district courtroom, September 24 last year.

According to the motion filed by Little's counsel, Prestonsburg attorney Gary Johnson, evidence has come to light which is said to rebut the state's argument—that the denial of bond was based—that the evidence is great that the defendant will be convicted of the offense for which he is charged.

On the basis of the new evidence which suggests, according to his attorney, that Little "fired only in self protection," a new hearing is sought on pre-trial release for the defendant.

In support of his motion, Johnson claims that eight "copper jacket and bullet fragments" were discovered at the scene of the shooting, although the state's evidence has previously suggested that Little fired only six shots. The inference, as stated in the motion, is that "someone other than Raymond Little fired at least one weapon in the Knott district courtroom" on the day the Thornsberys died.

Other evidence suggests that, two months prior to the courtroom shooting, Little was himself wounded in the course of a "shooting fracas" involving him and the Thornsberys, it is argued in the motion.

A hearing on all motions pending in the case has been set for January 20.

Griffith Heads Control Group As Three Quit

If words could solve Martin's water and wastewater woes, Tuesday might have been its day of salvation.

In a meeting that brought together city, county and state officials, there was advice in abundance. Joe McCauley, director of the Big Sandy Area Development District, said he would fire the city's water commission and appoint commissioners accountable to the city administration.

County Judge-Executive Bill Wells urged a "long range" plan to tie Martin in to the Beaver-Elkhorn water district.

And a number of Martin residents begged city officials to lay personal and political differences aside in a concerted attack on problems that have strained their patience and, they say, now threaten their health.

Mayor Larry Hall, noting that the city was sued by the Environmental Protection Agency Monday over the chronic failure of its water and sewer systems to meet federal regulations, announced that he had taken "affirmative action" to redress the problems. He had received a firm commitment from a licensed operator to take over as superintendent of the system, he said, and also favored an emergency tap-on to the Beaver-Elkhorn system.

Raymond Griffith, who emerged as the new water commission chairman following the sudden resignations of the former commissioners last week, pledged that the new commission would be "willing to work with everyone."

Following the resignations of Roy Ratliff and Denzil Halbert last week, Ron Reynolds, then chairman of the commission, reportedly appointed Griffith and McDouglas Whicker to replace them. Reynolds himself stepped down shortly thereafter, and the new commissioners named Steve Jenkins to take his place.

The federal suit against the city came as a last resort, when all other attempts to bring the city into compliance with environmental regulations were unavailing, according to Clyde Baldwin, chief engineer of the state Division of Water's operations and enforcement section.

Further inaction on the part of the city, he warned, would mean not only that city revenues would be consumed in defending itself in federal court, but also that the city would become ineligible for further grants.

Highlands Terrace Dedicated

Congressman Carl D. Perkins speaks to a group of local citizens who gathered Sunday for the dedication of the $2.8 million Highlands Terrace apartment complex here. Chalmers Frazier, chairman of the Church Housing Association, presided during the ceremony which featured an invocation by Dr. Ted Nicholas, of the First Methodist Church, and dedication of the building and presentation of a plaque commemorating a $50,000 bequest granted the housing association here through the Episcopal Church, by Moultrie MacIntosh, rector of the St. James Episcopal Church here and representative of the Kentucky Diocese. Church Housing Director Julia M. May described the complex which provides 80 single units for elderly and handicapped housing. Following a benediction by Rev. Taylor Biggs, of the Community Methodist Church, refreshments were served in the reception room of the complex.

New Judicial System Viewed As Mixture of Good and Bad

The state's reorganized judicial system will be three years old in January and some claim it is again time for a change. At its last meeting Floyd fiscal court called for a return to the former system, although Judge-Executive Bill Wells said this week he thinks a blend of the new and the old might save the virtues and avoid the evils of both.

No one is claiming any heavy groundswell of opposition to the reformed system—although the Clinton county fiscal court is also said to have objected to it recently—and, even among the magistrates here who voted to undo it, some expressed reservations about a wholesale return to the former state of affairs.

Few deny that the previous system was often riddled with abuses. Critics charged that many officials presided over "kangaroo courts" vulnerable to political influence and dispensing both favors and retribution in a manner that mocked the ideal of impartial justice.

The fact that fines represented a principal source of revenue for many small communities sometimes resulted in arbitrary "blitzes" on unsuspecting motorists passing through them, it was claimed.

But the new system has its problems, too—not the least of which, critics say, is a lack of accessibility to the courts. Trial of misdemeanors, once spread over more than a dozen judges, now over-burdens the district court judge and severely restricts defendants' access to the judicial system, it is claimed. The problem is compounded by the long distance from outlying parts of the county to the county seat.

Prior to the reform, police judges and magistrates were empowered to issue warrants, accept pleas, and try misdemeanors—that is, offenses punishable by fines up to $500 or pen terms up to 12 months. Under the new arrangement, trial of these cases falls to District Court Judge Harold Stumbo, assisted by two trial commissioners—Ellis Martin, of Lancer, and Paul Osborne, of Wheelwright—whose powers are limited to issuing warrants and setting bonds.

Local magistrates lost control of speeding tickets, one court official explained, and "were left with the blacktop and the gravel."

The fact that fines represented a principal source of revenue for many small communities sometimes resulted in arbitrary "blitzes" on unsuspecting motorists passing through them, it was claimed.

Some county officials complain that centralization of the system has resulted in a substantial loss of revenue to the county. Certainly, it has taken control of court-generated revenue from local officials. State officials argue, however, that the county receives in judicial services considerably more than is collected here in fines and court costs.

Last fiscal year, $257,716 was turned in to Frankfort in fines and court costs levied by Floyd courts, the bulk of it from district court. In addition, $56,601 went to the state in drivers' and boat license fees—in all, $314,317.

Total state expenditures here, however, amounted to $422,542, made up of salaries for the judges and their staffs ($291,748), rental of court facilities ($56,482), payments to cities which formerly employed police judges ($42,730), operating expenses ($25,920), and capital outlay ($3806). (These figures were supplied by the Administrative Office of the courts.)

Centralization, some officials charge, has also brought with it state pressure aimed at ensuring greater uniformity in the district court's handling of cases, pressure which may have reduced some arbitrariness, they say, but only at the expense of greatly reducing the district judge's discretion.

Among the arguments advanced in support of the judicial reform was the need to restrict the conduct of trials to those with legal training. Judge-Executive Wells is unconvinced. Many non-attorneys are capable of trying misdemeanors, he believes, especially

Mud Creek Road Celebrates Birthday

Demands by area residents are getting a response in the fourth magisterial district, according to Magistrate Hershel Hamilton, who cites as examples commitments won from state officials on the Mud Creek road and the Tram bridge.

"It is our understanding that the Mud Creek road is top priority," Hamilton said this week, in reference to a proposal to straighten and widen the tortuous KY 979, between Harold and Hi Hat.

In a recent letter to the Mud Creek Steering Committee, a citizens' group formed to demand improvements to the Mud Creek road following an accident involving a school bus near Branham's Creek last January, a state highways official indicated that efforts are being made to have the road included in a program to reconstruct various state roads.

"At the present time the bond market is down, but Frankfort is working on this," wrote Ed Patton, general manager of the state highways department's Pikeville district office.

Patton conceded this week that Frankfort officials may not consider rebuilding of KY 979 as "top priority." Officials at the district office, he said, consider it "something that needs to be done—like a lot of other roads."

Patton said he had heard no estimate of the cost of reconstructing KY 979, but Magistrate Hamilton said the cost of straightening the road's 41 curves was estimated at about $6 million.

Meanwhile, construction of a new bridge to span the Big Sandy at Tram awaits only the negotiation of a last right-of-way needed, Hamilton said. A million dollars in federal money has been appropriated for the project, estimated to cost about $1.8 million, and construction should begin within three months, Hamilton said.

50-Year Reunion Of Class Is Held

Winter Is Time for Roach Control

If you've been waging a losing or at best no-win battle against cockroaches, try blitzing them this winter with an all-out pesticide and sanitation attack.

This strategy, timing a major control effort when the pest is less of a problem than during the summer, is suggested by R. A. Scheibner, Extension entomologist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Here he tells why cockroaches are so wily, crafty and difficult to eradicate, and why winter is a good time to control the pests.

There is no love lost between cockroaches and people. But we—carelessly or unwittingly—provide food, water and shelter for the pests so they brave dangers that go along with living near us.

By foraging at night, cockroaches avoid some of the risky encounters with people who want to destroy them. During the day they stay snugly out of sight by hiding in the several miles of dark cracks and crevices in the average home.

If cockroaches get so numerous that they cannot find daytime hiding places and are forced to rest in the open, this means you may be playing host to thousands of the pests.

As a good host you undoubtedly have provided plenty of food for a burgeoning cockroach population. The household pests eat just about anything people eat plus other things like sewage, soap, grease and glue.

While they feed on our food they also "potty" on it and give it a roachy flavor due to their oily body secretions. Because they move readily between filth and food, their feet track germs onto our food. Being unable to tolerate cockroaches is not being over finicky!

Besides eating, drinking and playing hide-and-seek with people, cockroaches also like to socialize among themselves, especially in the activity of increasing their numbers. They have a lot of capacity for doing this.

The German cockroach, the most common type infesting homes, produces four to five egg capsules in its life-time of about one year. Each capsule contains 30 to 40 eggs which hatch and develop to egg-laying adults in about two months. Longer time is needed during cool temperatures.

On the average, German cockroaches have 3 to 4 generations per year. A single pair can parent about 400,000 more roaches into your home in a year's time if all the young survive. If you start with 10 breeding pairs of roaches and you don't do anything to control them, you could wind up with 4 million in a year.

That's a real population explosion! "Hitting a man when he is down" is not considered good sportsman-like conduct. But when your opponent is roaches, forget about being fair. They're not. They'll play "down and dirty" every time you give them a chance.

All summer long cockroaches multiply at their most rapid rate, and reach their peak population in the fall. As temperatures get colder, reproduction slows down, but does not stop at winter room temperatures.

This is a good time to take advantage of the situation. It's easier to kill cockroaches at a faster rate than they can reproduce during the winter. Even if you may not accomplish complete eradication, you can drastically reduce the population so that the build-up is not apt to be so overwhelming next summer when the pests go back into full reproduction.

Cockroach control involves more than squirting around with a good insecticide. Sanitation is of first importance, and will bring about more effective and lasting control than the use of insecticides alone.

Insecticides may be next to useless if they are not applied right and if good sanitation is not also practiced. Your county Extension agent has a publication, "Cockroach Control", that will help you to do the job effectively.

since, in most cases, the defendants plead guilty.

"I held court (as a magistrate) every Saturday for 12 years," he said this week, "and 95 percent of the cases were worked out without the need for a jury trial."

A reasonable reform of the present system, Wells believes, would be to return to the magistrates the power to issue summonses and accept pleas. Defendants pleading guilty could be dealt with by the magistrates, with those pleading not guilty referred to the district court for jury trial.

At issue, according to Wells, is local control. "They talk a lot in Frankfort about returning control to the counties," he said. "But, on this matter, we are not being treated fairly."

Thanksgiving (the giving of thanks, the sense of being truly thankful) is great therapy for jaded spirits. I'm inclined to think we might do well to carry it over into Christmas and on to New Year's when we might make some appropriate resolutions about the matter.

And now one cynic has already said that I like Thanksgiving because it's a holiday which doesn't close post office, courthouse, everything before we get the paper out on Wednesday.

Letters to the Editor

Fire Dept. Reports

The Area Volunteer Fire Department at Wayland, Ky. wishes to thank each of its firemen and all citizens who helped fight the forest fires in town and the surrounding area during the height of the fires for the period of Nov. 4 through Nov. 14. We further extend our appreciation to the Martin Fire Department, the Hindman Fire Department and the Knott County Rescue Squad Fire Department for coming to our assistance at the very bleak hour on Nov. 10 when it appeared we might lose several homes in town.

The area volunteer firemen spent some 400 hours unselfishly. We further wish to thank all the ladies who spent many long hours, both day and night, at the Fire Department Hall, giving and preparing food and drinks, so that we might have something if and when we got the opportunity to stop by between calls.

We also appreciate all donations received from the public, and same will go toward the purchase of badly needed clothing and other equipment.

When calling to report a fire, always give complete name, location and telephone number. Always have someone on the main road to flag the fire department in and have someone at the scene of the fire that is able to give pertinent information to the firemen, such as if everyone is out of building, if there are any flammable liquids inside, if there are oxygen tanks inside for use by people with breathing problems and any other pertinent information. If practical, always close the building and wait for arrival of fire department. Anyone wishing to make a contribution may do so by mailing same to: AREA VOLUNTEER FIRE DEPARTMENT, P. O. Box 277, Wayland, Ky. 41666

Resources For Tuition

I am writing this to inform all high school seniors that there is help one can receive to pay for his or her college education. Students who are citizens of the United States can receive various forms of financial aid to help meet the cost of higher education. Most financial aid programs can be in the form of scholarships, grants, work opportunities and loans.

The awarding of this aid is done by the director of Financial Aid using the criteria of need and demonstrated academic potential, with the aid being awarded in the types deemed most appropriate to the needs of the individual student. The College Financial Aid Program is generous in helping students meet their tuition and other financial obligations. Financial aid is worked out in a personal way to meet each student's particular needs. In order to receive financial awards, there are certain applications and forms that must be filled out by each accepted student.

Two types of grants a student can check into are the Kentucky Higher Education Assistance Authority Grant (KHEAA) provided by the state of Kentucky and the Basic Educational Opportunity (BEOGG) Grant Program. The KHEAA grant is available to Kentucky students who demonstrate financial need and are enrolled fulltime in a degree program at an eligible Kentucky institution. The application for this grant is taken care of through the filing of the Kentucky Financial Form (KHEAA). The Basic Opportunity Grant (BEOG) is a Federal Opportunity Assistance Program. This grant provides up to $1800 for all eligible students to assist them in meeting their educational costs. The Basic Opportunity Grant has to be renewed every academic year.

There are other types of grants one can check into. A student who is planning to continue education after high school should check with his or her school counselor to see what kind of help he or she is eligible for. CAROLYN SALISBURY, Freshman at Pikeville College

Cites Media Distortion

(An Open Letter to the People of the Commonwealth of Kentucky.)

Since the formation of the Kentucky State Police in 1948, we have made every effort to advance our professionalism in law enforcement and service to the people of the Commonwealth of Kentucky. We, of the Kentucky State Police Professional Association, feel the people have supported us in those efforts.

Recent events as reported by news media have caused great concern among the members of the Kentucky State Police. Statements and editorials by the media have resulted in a distorted picture of the issues. The accusations presented to the public by media are matters for the courts to decide and the public to judge based on the facts, not media accusations. The officers of the Kentucky State Police are willing to accept the findings of the courts and the judgments of the people after the facts are known. We, of the Kentucky State Police Professional Association, support the officers at the Elizabethtown Post and have faith in their professional performance of their duties.

We, the Association, wish to assure the people of the Commonwealth that we will continue to strive for the best full service professional State Police agency in the nation. One of which the people can continue to be justly proud. STEVE SPURRIER, President, KSPPA

Will You Help?

I want to remind all the residents of Floyd County, that at the present time there is still an animal shelter in Floyd County that remains closed. There are few shelters located in the state of Kentucky, so we were very fortunate to have a shelter in our county. As you should know, the shelter is closed due to lack of funds from the Floyd Fiscal Court, and support from the general public. The Prestonsburg city Council gave the Humane society funds as long as possible, which funds helped to keep the shelter open longer than we had anticipated. We need to get the shelter reopened for the good of the public, as well as for the homeless, stray animals. Please write or call your magistrate and county judge if you are interested in helping the shelter re-open. It is their duty and responsibility as county officials to fund some sort of pound or shelter in this county. Only the people of Floyd county can ever make a difference in whether or not the animal shelter opens or remains closed. Want you join the Humane Society and help us re-open? If you really care, now is the time to step forth and show it.

Urge Parental Guidance

Today the most important medium to come into the hands of mankind is probably television.

It is watched day and night by millions. Children are watching programs of violence, sex and vile language which could lead them to a life of crime. With more parental guidance they could be watching programs more suitable like ball games, comedy features, news and educational programs.

The need to start at an early age is of grave importance. In many families both parents work, and this makes the job more difficult. Taking time to communicate with children, having family discussions and spending more time with them could be a beginning in the right direction.

Waging a battle against the movies being shown at theaters all over the country should be considered by parents. X-rated movies shown at drive in theaters can be viewed by anyone passing by in a car. Teenagers not old enough to be admitted to the drive in car park alongside the road and watch these disgusting movies.

If movies like these must be shown they should be inside a theater and not in the open for all to see. By all standards, they should be completely banned.

Show your children you care by showing more parental guidance.

Alternative To Abortion

Abortion is a current controversial topic. It is more than a topic of conversation. It is a cause for dividing our nation of people who are taking sides on a moral issue. True, people for centuries of time have been divided over infanticide, the murder of infants, born or unborn. But the death-knell for unborn infants was rung loud and clear on January 22, 1973 when the highest court in our country announced the decision that ignored the humanity of the unborn child.

The controversy continues. Pro-abortionists advance many reasons for aborting unborn infants. Anti-abortionists offer equally as many reasons for not aborting unborn children. Whatever reasons are given on either side, the basic issue is moral, what is right and what is wrong.

The Bible, God's Holy Word, is the infallible guide for determining the morality of the abortion issue. There is sufficient scriptural basis in numerous references to establish the truth that life is a gift from God, even in the conception stage. Many references in the Bible attest to the fact that God is the creator of the unborn. It is wrong for mankind to destroy and kill infants whom God has created!

There is an alternative to abortion. It is adoption. There are agencies which arrange for the adoption of unwanted infants. The Kentucky Baptist Child Care Program, 10801 Shelbyville Road, Middletown, Kentucky, welcomes people who face problem pregnancies. This agency offers a broad range of maternity services to persons throughout Kentucky, regardless of religion, race or age. Counseling is provided for unmarried expectant parents and their families while making decisions about the pregnancy and the expected child.

The Child Care Program can be reached in the Louisville area by calling 245-2101. The toll-free number in Kentucky is 1-800-292-9440.

WAYLAND

CLUB HAS GUEST SPEAKER

The Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club met recently at the home of Mrs. Hansel Bradley, of Garrett.

Guest speaker for the evening was Jack Stevens, guidance counselor for Allen Central High School, who spoke on "Education". Mr. Stevens pointed out that "it is very important for each student to select his own educational institution and his own vocation." He also stressed that it is not necessary that students choose large, expensive learning institutions but that there are many small colleges with high academic requirements but low tuition. He mentioned Berea College, whose tuition is only $1648 a semester. He also listed Alice Lloyd College in this area and pointed out that there are 13 vocational schools in the state along with business schools, flight schools, etc. He also explained that there are many programs available to students whereby money can be obtained for an education if a student wishes to inquire about its availability.

Following Mr. Steven's talk, Mrs. Hansel Bradley showed a film titled, "Focus on Federation" presented by the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs. The film showed the interior of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs' headquarters in Louisville, and the narrator stressed the Federation's continuing community service since 1894.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Lula Coburn, Mrs. Hansel Bradley and Mrs. Marie Mullins to Mrs. S. M. Martin, Mrs. Don Hughes, Mrs. Bill Castle, a charter member visiting from Irvine, Kentucky, Mrs. Jack P. Stevens, Mrs. Ruth Francis, guests, Mrs. Leatrice Dunfee, Mrs. Otto Martin, and Mrs. Marie Robinson and Mrs. Vennessa Robinson, guests.

CETA Funded in Kentucky

Kentucky has received $98.2 million to continue employment and training programs for economically disadvantaged Kentuckians.

The funds, appropriated by the U.S. Department of Labor, will enable the state to continue job programs under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1, said Larry Conner, director of CETA and Manpower Training for Kentucky's Department for Human Resources.

Five Kentucky regions received the federal allocations for job training and employment programs through CETA, Conner said. Human Resources will administer $54,751,392 in the 91-county balance of state area.

Other CETA prime sponsors in Kentucky received funds to continue programs in their areas: Bluegrass Manpower Consortium, $4,094,416; Louisville/Jefferson County Consortium, $11,596,633; Kenton County, $2,156,466; and Eastern Kentucky Rural Consortium, $25,593,902.

Conner said the funds will enable Kentucky localities to continue existing CETA employment and training services for low-income Kentuckians.

Nationwide, $6.3 billion has been allocated to 475 local and state governments. The allocations, authorized by a continuing resolution passed by Congress, are based on each area's population, unemployment rate and number of low-income families.

Caution—Turkey Can Poison You

Overindulgence in food and drink are not the only causes of holiday discomfort. Precautions should also be taken against food poisoning caused by one of America's most popular holiday foods—turkey. According to John Draper, manager of the Department for Human Resources food branch, most of the holiday cases of food poisoning involve turkey. Draper listed the following tips on how to enjoy turkey and avoid the risk of food poisoning:

- Turkey should be thawed gradually in the refrigerator, below 45 degrees. Never refreeze a turkey that has been thawed. Turkey thawed in a microwave oven should be cooked immediately.
- Remember to wash hands, utensils, cutting boards and any other surfaces that come in contact with uncooked turkey. While thorough cooking kills most salmonella bacteria, the type commonly associated with turkey, salmonella may remain on unwashed surfaces and may spread to other foods that don't require as much cooking time.
- It is safest to cook turkey and dressing separately. If you must stuff the turkey, do so immediately before cooking and remove it as soon as the turkey is cooked.
- A meat thermometer is the best way to determine when the turkey is done. Insert the thermometer into the thickest part of the thigh, but not in contact with the bone. Bake the turkey in a 325-degree oven until the thermometer registers at least 190 degrees. Place the thermometer in the center of the stuffing in a stuffed turkey and cook until it registers at least 165 degrees.
- Never partially cook the turkey one day and finish cooking it the next.
- Leftover turkey should be removed from the bones immediately, placed in a shallow pan and refrigerated. Turkey left out of refrigeration all day for nibbling is a prime target for salmonella. Cooked turkey should never sit at room temperature for more than two hours.
- Refrigerate stuffing separately and freeze all leftovers that will not be used in a couple of days.
- Handle leftover turkey as little as possible.

R.I.F. Program Encourages Reading Skills

The first of three yearly book distributions to pupils at Clark Elementary School was made last week as part of the school's participation in the Reading Is Fundamental (R.I.F.) program.

According to school librarian, Louise Howard, a special motivational activity was staged this year in conjunction with the American Book Week theme of "Books Alive" as about three-fourths of students and faculty came dressed as their favorite literary character.

In the federally-funded program, which this year provides money on a three to one matching basis, books are bought at a considerable discount and given free to students. Money was raised this year through the Clark P.T.A. while in previous years the Prestonsburg Junior Woman's Club supplied the needed funds.

This year, for the first time, elementary students participated in the selection of books to be ordered, Mrs. Howard pointed out.

Prestonsburg Elementary also participated in the program, this year. John K. Pitts, Clark principal, is project director of the R.I. F. program.

ALLEN WOMAN'S CLUB HOLDS MONTHLY MEET

The Allen Woman's Club held its monthly meeting at their clubhouse. The meeting began with the pledge to the flag. A devotional entitled "Thank You God for Everything" was read by Carolyn Branham.

Special guests for the evening were The Teens Who Care from Prestonsburg high school. They presented the club members with information about the activities and projects their organization is involved in.

Roy Compton, new chief of the Allen Volunteer Fire Dept., came by to thank the club for their support. The club had just recently presented to the Fire Dept. a check for $1,095.99, the proceeds from the softball tournament held at the Allen Park in September. Each club member volunteered to sell 10 tickets each on a 19" color television being given away by the Fire Dept. either at the Allen Christmas Parade on December 6 or December 20 depending on when all tickets are sold.

Plans for the Christmas Parade are being made. The parade will be held on December 6 at 12 o'clock. A Snow King and Snow Queen, grades 5 thru 8, a Snow Prince and Snow Princess, grade kindergarten thru 4th will be chosen at the Allen Elementary School to reign over the parade. A $10 first prize and a $5 second prize will be given to the best parade entries. Santa will be on hand to hand out treats to all kids present.

The club will end their day's activities with their annual Christmas dinner for club members and their husbands at the Jenny Wiley May Lodge that evening.

The club welcomes as a new member, Mrs. Pauline Webb, of Emma.

Also, the club would like to congratulate the vice president and her husband, Ferne and Carl Ankrom, of Banner, on the arrival of their new baby son, Rex Wesley, born on Oct. 29.

Hostess for the evening was Carol Jo Collins. Refreshments were served to the following members, Mary Hinchman, Carolyn Branham, Pat DeRossett, Bonita Porter, Hollie Blanton, Jo Ann Adams and Pauline Webb.

ANNOUNCE BIRTH

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Nelson, of Little Paint, announce the birth of their first child, a daughter, Dava, November 23 at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

HERE FROM WASHINGTON

Mr. and Mrs. Douglas M. Meador, of Naches, Wash., are visiting their son, Seldon Horne, and Mrs. Horne and granddaughter, Kim, also other relatives and friends in Eastern Kentucky.

CARD OF THANKS

The Collins family would like to thank each person who sent flowers and food, or who helped in any way during our hour of need. We would also thank the Rev. Henry Crider, the singers, and the Floyd Funeral Home.

IN HUNTINGTON

Mrs. Phyllis Ranier and Mrs. Ruby Clark were Christmas shopping in Huntington, Saturday.

The Season of Advent

The Advent season is the New Year of the Christian year. Advent begins on the Sunday nearest November 30, and ends on Christmas eve.

The word, "Advent," literally means "coming." The season is one of preparing, waiting, anticipating, and even expecting Christmas and the coming of Christ into our world. We who know Christ as Lord need to examine rigorously the quality of our lives and habits, our attitudes, pastimes, etc. in the light of God's great love toward us. Are we living and acting in a way that reflects God's love? The season of Advent bids us to "clean up our own house" and make realistic preparations, lest we miss the deepest experience of Christmas.

Many churches celebrate Advent during these four Sundays before Christmas in different ways. Gifts are made, the church decorated, and the most prevalent celebrations occur with the lighting of candles in the form of an Advent wreath, one purple candle for each Sunday, and a white one in the center for Christmas Eve. The shared experience of these traditions is important in linking the past and present, and in reinforcing the bonds between people.

Labor Department Issues New Regulations To Protect Roofing Workers from Falls

The U.S. Department of Labor has issued new regulations to protect an estimated 40,000 roofers who regularly work on low-pitched roofs from falls.

The regulations were issued by the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA).

Eula Bingham, assistant secretary of labor for occupational safety and health, said the regulations had been developed "with the urging and help of both labor and management."

Bingham added: "The new regulations specifying perimeter guarding on these roofs are the first promulgated for this particular danger and close a serious gap in federal safety standards for a very hazardous industry."

The overall roofing and sheet metal industry, of which low-pitched roofing is a part, employs about 135,000 workers and had an annual rate of 197.9 lost work days per 100 workers in 1977, compared with 61.6 per 100 for private industry as a whole, according to figures from the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS).

Bingham said the new rules are part of OSHA's construction standards and apply to built-up roofing work on all roofs with a ground to eave height more than 16 feet having a slope equal to or less than four in 12 (i.e. a rise of four feet for every 12 feet of horizontal extension).

The new rules cover the hoisting, storage, application, and removal of roofing materials and equipment, including related insulation, sheet metal, and vapor barrier work, but do not cover the construction of the roof deck itself.

In addition to input from labor and management groups, OSHA also consulted the federal Advisory Committee on Construction Safety and Health prior to issuing proposal for the new standards in August 1979.

OSHA, however, rejected the committee recommendation that only motion-stopping safety systems be allowed since in roofing work motion-stopping equipment such as guardrails must be removed before the work can be completed and alternative safety systems must be used.

Some highlights of the new rules, part of a subsection in construction standards on guardrails, handrails and covers are that they:

- Provide for the use of a motion-stopping-safety system, warning lines, and/or safety monitoring systems (i.e. monitoring by a competent person to warn workers of hazards of unsafe actions). These requirements will not apply at points of access such as stairways, ladders and ramps, or when employees are on a roof only to inspect, investigate or estimate roof condition.
- Require the use of safety belts or a guard rail system at hoisting and storage areas, and a chain or gate across the opening of guard rail systems when hoists are not operating.

—Prohibit the use of mechanical equipment near unprotected roof edges.

—Require training for all employees engaged in "built-up roofing work" so that they can recognize and deal with the hazards of falling while working near a roof perimeter. "Built-up roofing" refers to the weatherproofing cover applied over roof decks and can be either a liquid-applied system, single ply system using silicone rubber, plastics, or similar material, and adhesives, or multi-ply system using felts, bitumen, and mineral aggregate.

The final rules for perimeter guarding of low-pitched roofs were scheduled to become effective Jan. 13, 1981.

On The Road Clothes Care Tips

Few women professionals in any business spend as much time on the road as professional golfers. Week after week, LPGA members tour from course to course by car or plane, depending on budgets and schedules.

Though the pro who has "made it" enjoys more luxuries on the road than the rookie seeking her first win, there's still at least one golfer in the $100,000 income bracket doing her own wash in a coin-operated laundry.

Judy Rankin, a petite, blue-eyed blonde from Midland, Texas rarely has the hotel send her clothes to the laundry or cleaners.

"They've shrunk too many of my cotton-knit golf shirts," she explains.

Judy, a consultant to Whirlpool Corporation on clothing care for the traveler, selects mostly washable, Permanent Press clothes for her traveling wardrobe. She sometimes washes them in her hotel room. More often, she prefers the convenience of coin-operated laundry equipment when it is available, particularly during the half of the season when she's traveling with her husband and 12 year-old son.

Judy carries her own detergent when she's traveling by car, preferring liquid bottles to prevent spillage. Liquid detergent is also highly recommended for use with cold water, since powder detergents will not completely dissolve unless mixed with warm water first.

"I hardly ever wash with hot water any more," says Judy. "I separate whites from the rest of my wash, but mix colors since they don't run or fade as much in cool or warm water. I've even washed cashmere sweaters in cold water on a delicate cycle."

To clean heavily soiled areas in cooler water, Judy uses a pre-treatment spray. Golfing particularly takes a toll on pockets, which hold balls and tees, and the hems of pants.

"We go for balls in the mud," says Judy, "in contrast to casual golfers who don't play the game for a living. The tapered pant leg now in fashion looks terrible with golf shoes, so we still wear straight cut slacks that are longer and often get stained in the sand traps, rough and water hazards."

It helps to turn pockets inside out, turn down cuffs, brush away lint and dirt and apply a pre-treatment spray before washing.

Large Capacity Drying

Judy has learned to use large capacity coin-operated dryers which can get warmer than home dryers. She separates heavy items from light

Off-Duty Fireman Hangs from Roof To Save Dwelling

The advice, "Hang in there," was never taken more literally than it was Sunday afternoon by a Prestonsburg fireman. And Mrs. Lula Prater probably owes to his tenacity the fact that her house was not burned.

When Fireman Larry Adams, who lives on Middle Creek, discovered that a trailer just a few feet from the Prater home was burning, he seized a water hose, and with a cousin climbed to the roof of Mrs. Prater's two-story home. There Adams, held by the ankles, took a precarious position suspended over the roof's edge and thus kept the Prater house dampened enough to save it from burning until help arrived from the Prestonsburg Fire Department.

Fire Chief Tom Blackburn said, "There is no doubt that he saved the house from burning."

When the fire department arrived on the scene, three miles east of State Road Fork, the trailer home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Nelson was beyond saving, but fellow firemen took over from Adams in preventing damage to the Prater home.

The Nelsons were not at home at the time of the fire, and the cause of the blaze has not been determined. Mr. Nelson had left some time earlier to bring his wife and recently born child home from the hospital. They have two children. While firemen were still at the scene, Mr. Nelson and family returned to find their home and its contents destroyed.

Also on Sunday afternoon, Squad 6, composed of a recently formed team of emergency medical technicians, patterned after paramedic squads and equipped to handle emergency calls, went to the aid of Henry Leedy when he was stricken outside his home on Earl Street here. The squad administered first aid and kept Mr. Leedy warm and comfortable until an ambulance arrived to take him to the hospital.

ones for faster, even drying, and is careful not to overload the dryer so her clothes can tumble freely to keep wrinkling to a minimum.

According to home economists, today's fabrics need lower heat to prevent damage, which is why home and commercial dryers offer different temperature selections and a final cool-down period. Each fabric has a natural moisture content, which if removed by overdrying, can result in wrinkling, static electricity, shrinking and harsh feeling clothes. When using a commercial dryer that does not offer these cycles and a final cool-down period, Judy compensates by removing items from the dryer every few minutes—especially synthetics so that they won't overdry.

As we all know too well, the dawn of permanent press fabrics did not mark the extinction of the iron, particularly when clothes are constantly folded in suitcases the way Judy's are. Yet the petite blonde golfer has picked up several tips along her road to success to help keep her clothes as fresh and neat as possible from tournament to tournament.

Ironing On The Go

For example, Judy rinses her clothes in cool water which helps minimize wrinkling of synthetic fabrics.

These steps make the tedious task of ironing without a board in the hotel room much easier. "I always carry an iron with me, and I'm pretty handy with the bed," Judy laughs. "In fact, I'd rather press clothes than fool with a cumbersome clothes bag."

To keep her slacks smooth, Judy carries a suitcase large enough to hold them folded in half. She folds them over a hanger the same way, and the fold can be eliminated quickly with an iron before heading to the first tee.

Except for a small carry-on bag, Judy prefers using one large case that a porter or bellhop can manage for her, over a number of smaller bags. She offers several tips to reduce weight and bulk in a large case:

"Shoes and handbags really weigh you down, so I select styles and colors that will go with several outfits. To cut down on heavy, cold-weather gear, I take along long underwear, which is also easy to wash. I make better use of space in my suitcase by rolling up wrinkle-free items like polyester skirts and nylon nightgowns and fitting them snugly into corners."

Phone Company Wins Financing Of New Building

Better service for Floyd phone customers should result from a state committee's approval of funds for a new office facility to be built near here for South Central Bell, it was argued in Frankfort last week.

The telephone company won the approval of the state Industrial Revenue Bond Oversight Committee last Wednesday for $1.7 million in bonds to finance the building, to be constructed on Wills Branch, off the Lancer-Water Gap road.

In an effort to convince a wary committee of the merits of the project, proponents pointed out that South Central Bell is being pressed by the Utility Regulatory Commission to provide better service. In this county alone, 300 requests for phone service are said to be pending.

Phone customers here face delays in getting needed repairs because the company's equipment is located in other counties, and the existing facilities here are too small to house it, the committee was told.

The need for developed land here and the county's above-average unemployment were also cited as reasons for approving the bond issue. Developers Moore and Bishop, of Lexington, who will lease the new building to the phone company, told the fiscal court here last month that the project will create 17 new jobs within 20 to 22 months of its completion.

The initial vote on the project was 2-1, with five abstentions. John Hardwick, of Louisville, who voted against the proposal, said he found it hard to understand why South Central Bell is unable to meet service requests and why the committee should get involved.

State Sen. Benny Ray Bailey expressed similar doubts. "If the facility is so needed," he said, "why hasn't it been done already?"

In the course of further discussion, Deputy Development Secretary Bruce Lunsford, who chairs the panel, told committee members he felt they were "a little too concerned that the lessee here is the telephone company." The committee then voted 6-1, with one abstention, to approve financing for the building.

Lunsford said later he thought "indecision" accounted for the large number of abstentions in the initial voting. "I thought it needed further discussion," he added.

Stumbo Refuses Salary Increase

Dr. Grady Stumbo, the Floyd countyman who heads the Kentucky Department for Human Resources, may have set a precedent in state government last week.

He refused the $16,500-a-year salary raise offered him by Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr.

"It's the first time that I've had anyone not take a salary increase," Brown said. "I commend him for it."

A Brown spokesman had said that Stumbo's pay was being raised, partly as a result of the governor's "not liking the idea that others in the department make more money than the secretary."

But after private meetings with Brown, Stumbo decided to decline the offer, said Barbara Hadley, director of communications for the Human Resources Department.

"Basically, he is asking the employees of this department to give that extra effort in spite of all the financial difficulties that the department and the employees are facing," she said.

"He feels that he needs to be able to give that extra effort himself before he can ask the employees to do that."

Brown said Stumbo "just didn't feel that he should take that salary with the present economic situation...He says the raise is not as important to him as the job he has to do."

Stumbo's pay raise was to have come about through his position as a special assistant to the governor, said Frank Ashley, Brown's press secretary.

USE YOUR HEAD TO PROTECT IT

Wearing a helmet won't prevent you from having a motorcycle accident. It won't guarantee you won't be injured. But, says the Motorcycle Safety Foundation, helmets and other protective gear minimize your chance of serious injury.

You're three times as likely to sustain a head injury in an accident if you're not wearing a helmet. Helmets can't keep you from having an accident but they do help prevent injuries!

The Foundation calls the helmet the "most important piece of personal equipment for safe riding."

Group Seeks Input On Medicaid Cuts

Sen. Benny Ray Bailey is chairing an interim committee on Medicaid which is considering ways to cut costs in Kentucky's Medicaid program. Dr. Grady Stumbo, Secretary of the Department for Human Resources, which administers the program, is expected to unveil his cost-cutting proposals at the committee's December 10 meeting in Frankfort.

In an earlier report to the committee, Dr. Stumbo said that "to assure the most efficient and productive use of available health care services, direct involvement by the eligible patient in the cost of services received is probably the most effective. To this end, a system of participation in the cost of care by the eligible patient in the form of co-payments is being considered."

The East Kentucky Citizens for Better Health Care will be holding a meeting at St. Theodore Catholic Church, on 3rd Avenue here Monday, December 1, at 11 a.m. The group will discuss the possible cost-cutting measures in the Medicaid program. According to Nick Frasure, a spokesman for the group, "It is important that Medicaid recipients have input into the committee that is talking about cutting costs in Medicaid." The group is seeking comments from recipients to submit to the interim committee. Those seeking more information are invited to call Frasure at 886-8318.

Slayers of Wells Scheduled To Fill 'Prior Commitments'

For the 1978 abduction and slaying of Wells, James King was sentenced to two concurrent 21-year pen terms in this state, and David King drew a life term.

Clothes Buying Basics

The cost of clothing, like that of life's other necessities, has increased dramatically in recent years, causing many consumers to be cautious on expanding their wardrobes. To get more per clothing dollar, 'spend' extra time and effort on planning and shopping.

Check Impulses

Get organized! Establish a shopping plan. List the articles of clothing each family member has. Use this as a reference to figure out what is missing and what is likely to need replacement during the next year or two. Include items family members would like to have but may not need immediately.

Next, make a clothing budget and stick to it. Keep in mind that it is possible to save money by judicious shopping and planning ahead. But, don't buy on impulse. Those impulses are one of the major causes for money waste. A bargain is a bargain only if it is needed and useful.

When To Shop

There are three major periods for store-wide clearance sales: after Easter, after July 4, and after Christmas. Specific items are often on special sale during certain months. For example:

- Back-to-school clothes—August, October
- Children's clothing—July, September, November, December
- Coats (women's, children's)—April, August, November, December
- Coats (men's)—January, August
- Dresses—January, April, June, November
- Handbags—January, May, July
- Lingerie—January, May, July
- Men's shirts—January, February, July
- Men's and boys' suits—April, November, December
- Shoes (boys' and girls')—January, March, July
- Shoes (men's and women's)—January, July, November, December

Search For Quality

When considering a garment, be sure to inspect it carefully. Generally, the better the craftsmanship the better the quality. Are the seams and hems smooth and even, and can they be altered if needed? Do patterns match? Is the stitching smooth and close? Is the garment lined?

Read the label carefully. Federal law requires that clothing labels contain: the generic name and percentage of the fiber or fibers they contain, listed in the order of predominance by weight of each fiber; the name or registered number of the manufacturer or seller; and, if imported, the name of the country where processed or manufactured. Consumers should become familiar with basic fibers and material finishes.

The information on the label can clue them in on the upkeep, durability, and appearance to be expected from a garment. Consider, too, the care instructions which should appear on a label or tag attached to the item, and if on a tag, save this information for reference when it needs to be cleaned.

Keep in mind that some garments need not be of the highest quality. Children's play-clothes will be outgrown comparatively quickly and need only be durable enough to stand up to their intended use. The staples of an adult's wardrobe, however, should be long-wearing and of high quality. Here, the emphasis should be on simple, classic styles that will remain fashionable for years, and on versatile garments that can be worn on many occasions in various combinations.

Imperfects or seconds—flawed garments often offered at greatly reduced prices—can be good buys, depending on whether the flaw is merely surface, or such that it will affect the usefulness, attractiveness or durability of the item. If the problem can be easily and inexpensively fixed, the garment may be a very good buy indeed.

Welcome Back, Jerry Fultz

By KENNY RICE

At the age of 20, he was coaching the Calvary College basketball and baseball teams while yet a player on those teams. For that accomplishment he received statewide recognition from the Courier-Journal and Lexington Herald. He also received national coverage for being the nation's youngest college coach and also the only college player-coach.

Jerry Fultz is back in Floyd county after a 12-year absence. The former Wayland High star bursts into laughter at the mention of his Calvary College coaching days. "The school was cutting back and they fired the coach," he recalls. The coach recommended me for the job. The president contacted me, asked me if I wanted the job. I couldn't be paid, of course, because I was playing. I told him to give me a week to think about it but it took me about a minute to decide.

"I did the whole works, including the recruiting. I think there were about 10 Floyd countians on that team. "It was an experience. After the story came out in Grit I got letters and calls from all over the nation. I think most of them were trying to console me."

That one year of coaching done, he returned to being just a player his senior season after Calvary hired another coach.

The personable Fultz is the assistant basketball coach and head baseball coach at McDowell High this season. He is back in his native county after coaching basketball and baseball for two years at Robertson County High, for three years at Breckinridge County High and two years as basketball, baseball and assistant football coach at a high school in Carrollton, Alabama.

"I enjoyed the experience in Alabama of coaching football and it was a wonderful place to live. They don't hire basketball coaches there, they just hire assistant football coaches who coach basketball. Most of the basketball coaches there have little or no experience in basketball. Football dominates Alabama sports like basketball dominates Kentucky sports."

The lack of interest in basketball was one of the reasons Fultz decided to return to Kentucky. Besides, he wanted to come back home.

"It's good to be back home. You always want to come home and see what you can contribute. I hope I can contribute to the county in general, not just the basketball and baseball programs at McDowell but the programs all over the county. I want to see the entire county have a good sports program and the entire school system prosper. I like being back in Floyd county and I want to contribute."

ENTHUSIASM

Another welcomed addition to the county coaching ranks is Bobby Jones who is the head coach of the Wheelwright girls' team. Girls' basketball at Wheelwright has been on shaky ground since the sport for the ladies was renewed for the 1974-'75 season. Jones is hoping to build a foundation for the program.

He is starting off on a good note. He has four freshmen and four sophomores who figure to play key roles for the Trojanettes this season. It is doubtful if Wheelwright will make a serious run at the district's top two spots, but within the next three years it has a good chance of getting into the regional tournament for the first time in the school's history.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

The 1975 Prestonsburg basketball team was one of that school's best teams ever. They went to the semi-finals of the region after winning the 58th District and they set a school record with 28 victories.

David Flanery led the team in assists that season. He has been working as a certified public accountant in Lexington since his graduation from Kentucky in '78. He and his wife, Vickie, have bought a house there.

RETURNERS

Betsy Layne has lost 10 players through graduation from their 15th Region championship unit. Included in the exodus are five starters.

"The other five seniors we lost (non starters) were big assets in practice sessions last season," Coach William Newsome, Jr. points out. "They had experience and were physical players. They made our starters better ball players by going against them everyday in practice. A lot of people overlook that."

Newsome is the only coach in the county with no starters back from last season. Ron Robinson, of Prestonsburg, came close, losing seven players and four starters to graduation. Jack Wells is the lone Blackcat starter back. Randy Conley and Bruce Mullins return for John Martin at Central. David Turner has three starters, Pettie Grigsby, Jimmy Dale Turner and Chester Newsome, back at McDowell. Sixth man Stewart Osborne is also back. At Wheelwright, Danny Johnson has starters Gilford Hall and Gerald Osborne returning.

Virgie Center Dedicated

The $1.8 million Virgie Athletic Center, located next to Virgie High School in Pike county, was dedicated last Saturday. According to Pike County Superintendent James T. Dotson, the center will seat approximately 2,500 persons and will have multiple uses for all physical education classes at Virgie High.

Keynote addresses were by Supt. Dotson and UK basketball coach, Joe Hall.

The new center replaces the old gym, which was built about 45 years ago and seated only 700.

FINANCING AVAILABLE

For years hi-fi has been geared for a special kind of person. A person who was willing to learn the foreign language of electronics and also to keep up with the hundreds of brand names. A person who was thrilled by the complexity of it all. If you didn't want the complications you didn't get involved. Simple as that.

Pioneer, the leading maker of high fidelity components in America, has just changed all that. They've created a system anyone can both understand and love: Syscom.

Syscom is a complete high fidelity component system put together by Pioneer engineers. Not by you.

So you can't make a mistake Syscom includes everything. The amplifier, tuner, turntable, tape deck, speakers. It even comes with a specially designed cabinet. So it looks every bit as good as it sounds. And it sounds better than just about anything you've ever heard. Syscom is easy enough for even the least mechanical of us to operate. Do you know the difference between off and on? You know enough. There are five Syscom groups to choose from. Each was made to fit a different lifestyle and a different budget. Shopping for Syscom isn't even complicated. Because Pioneer has made it available at select stores. And we're proud to say, we're the store in your area.

Ginseng Not Endangered, Interim Committee Told

It's a $4 million annual cash crop on the export market and it's being stolen from right under the landowner's nose.

Members of the interim joint committee on agriculture and natural resources heard last week from state and private experts concerned about this money crop.

The crop, an ivy-like plant known as ginseng, grows wild in shaded, woody areas around the state. Its dried roots are used by Oriental countries as a medication and in their religious rituals and is commonly thought to be an aphrodisiac.

Fred Waters, assistant commissioner in the department of agriculture, said the economic factor of the plant is multiplied up to four times with an estimated annual value of $15 million. This, he said, encourages people to dig plants from private property without permission.

Federal regulations are calling for tighter regulations on the harvesting of the ginseng plant as a result of the plant being placed on the international register of endangered species in 1973.

Steve Goodman, president of the Kentucky Ginseng Association, said this group was formed following the federal government's ban on exporting the plant.

"The placement of ginseng on the endangered species list was a reaction to U.S. pressure on other countries limiting their killing of leopards and seals," he said. "We have never found any indication that the ginseng plant is endangered."

A study conducted by the University of Kentucky using 64 plots in 12 counties found a 43 percent increase in production between 1979 and 1980.

In a volunteer program administered by the university there were 12 registered dealers in 1978-1979, increasing to 19 during 1979-1980. Approximately 23,046 pounds of dried ginseng roots were reportedly sold during 1978-1979 while the quantity dropped to 14,467 in 1979-1980.

This decrease was due, in part, to the uncertainty of whether the plant would continue to be exported, Goodman said.

Rep. Lloyd McKinney, R-McKee, said he favored legislation to keep people from digging the roots and clearing the ground. "If they're (the diggers) trespassing to dig ginseng they should be stopped," he said.

The committee is responsible for making recommendations to the next legislative session on possible controls for the plant needed to conform with federal regulations.

"What you need to do right now is get the plant declared an agricultural crop," Estill county farmer Stanley Risen told the committee. "They're (the trespassers) stealing my cultivated crop from right under my nose."

Risen said that without the plant being classified as an agricultural crop he cannot get help to find out who is stealing the plant from his property.

"They're just trespassers and that's all," he said.

KENTUCKY AFIELD

By JOHN WILSON

With half of Kentucky's split gun deer season completed, indications are that this year's harvest will set another record.

An unofficial survey conducted after the Nov. 8-10 hunt, shows that 4,793 deer were checked through the state's network of official check stations, an increase of 1,400 over the same period last year.

Deer harvests in Kentucky have grown steadily in recent years, indicating an ever increasing deer population in the commonwealth. In 1976, 3,476 deer were taken and by 1979 this figure had almost doubled—7,442 deer were legally harvested by firearms last year.

The fact that Kentucky hunters may take two deer under certain circumstances this year should also increase the harvest. Conservation officers report checking several hunters who were gun hunting with their "second deer" permit after having taken a first deer by bow and arrow. And some lucky (or skillful) hunters have already filled both permits.

Biologists and wildlife law enforcement officials also give part of the credit for rising deer populations to the new district court system. District judges seem, on the whole, more willing to levy maximum or near-maximum fines on convicted deer poachers.

Illegal poaching still remains a big problem, one which biologists feel is responsible for low deer numbers in some areas of the state. The annual illegal toll on our state's deer herd is probably at least as great as, if not greater than, the legal harvest.

But penalties like those handed down recently by one district judge should go a long way toward improving the situation. After finding three men guilty of deer poaching, the judge fined each of them $525, confiscated two firearms, two spotlights and the pickup truck they were using, then sentenced them 12 months in the county jail.

As far as fish and wildlife department officials can determine, these are the longest jail sentences ever handed down in a game law violation case in Kentucky. This should make poachers sit up and take notice that our court system now sees poaching as a serious crime and are handling down equally serious penalties.

Aged Tarhill Claims Spitting Crown

Uncle Pouch Sutton "winding up."

Otis Hankins demonstrates uncanny accuracy.

Editors note: Any resemblance found in the following to facts, living persons or actual names is purely coincidental.

SPECIAL TO THE TIMES

Shale Knob, Mo.—Despite unseasonably cool temperatures, several hundred spectators descended on this tiny southwest Missouri town Saturday to watch as Clovis "Pouch" Sutton took on all comers to walk away with the All-South Tobacco Chewing and Spitting finals.

Virtually unknown on the spitting circuit until this year, the 81-year-old Sutton won in all categories of competition at the day-long event which featured such widely-known circuit names as Junior Muncy, Seth Honshell, and Menfee Simpkins, along with 14 more of the South's finest.

In the first of the day's events, the so-called payload category, contestants demonstrated their maximum quid capacity, and, although the event was predicted by most circuit followers to be a showdown between Emmett "Hoss" Munford and Wilburn Starkey, East Tennessee's "Golden Boy," Sutton stunned the wondering on-lookers by tamping in a pouch-and-a-quarter, a full three ounces over the previous All-South record set in 1974 by Munford.

Munford, who refused to bow out of the competition without a scrap, "got in trouble" when he attempted to surpass Sutton's chew. As referee Shade Ferguson later recounted, "He took in too much and started smotherin'. I knew he was in trouble when his color started to go bad." The disheveled Munford was forced to drop out of the day's competition and his hometown physician, Doc Lester Sykes, hinted that the long-time ace may never compete again. "That big wad foundered the Hoss," Sykes stated, "and now he can't stand the taste of the stuff—can't even handle snuff."

Referred to as "Uncle Pouch" by acquaintances in his hometown of Lye Branch, North Carolina, Sutton's affectionate nickname reflects the nature of the grossly distended cheek tissue which he has acquired in some 70 years of chewing, and which, in Saturday's games, no doubt gave him the edge in the payload event.

Icy temperatures offered less than favorable conditions for the day's second event, the all-important distance spitting competition. Chewing circuit veteran and '67 spitting champ Worley Sutterfield explained: "In hot weather, your quid's really going to fly 'cause it stays pretty well thinned out. In cold weather, though, it gets chilled and starts to ice up before it travels its full distance." But if the temperatures affected everyone else's spit, Uncle Pouch didn't seem to notice. His spit of 22 feet 7 inches broke the previous All-South record by some three feet. In a post-competition interview the grizzled Sutton attributed at least part of his success in the distance trials to his favorite chew, Brown's Mule. According to the soft-spoken new champ, "I like Brown's Mule best 'cause it gets slicker and stays balled up better."

In the day's final and decisive event, the accuracy trials, Arkansas native Otis "Razorback" Hankins figured to dominate the competition as he had hit the mouth of a Mason jar three times in a row at thirty paces during practice. In a tense showdown, Hankins, generally considered the "bad boy" of the tournament circuit, especially since his July 8 maiming of an official at the Arkansas state finals at Pine Bluff, approached the foul line and repeated his feat of a few hours earlier. While other competitors refused to even attempt to match Hankins' score, Pouch proceeded to hit for three in a row as the noticeably agitated crowd shouted, "One, Two, Three," as each of the old man's quids "stripped the net" on the fruit jars.

After the third bullseye, a stilled crowd waited in anticipation as tourney officials conferred to devise a means of settling the apparent tie. But in an unexpected and dramatic move which has since become a part of the North Carolinian's flashy style, Sutton settled the matter.

As one half-hysterical fan reported, "The old man wheeled all of a sudden and loosed a load over toward the well box, and the next thing I knew, a big starling was down on the ground thrashing around." Most of the other awe-stricken fans apparently witnessed the incident as well, and it soon became clear who the new champ was as the crowd collectively went berserk. Even a stunned Hankins got caught up in the excitement of the moment when he realized that Sutton had spotted the passing fowl, led him for a distance, and calmly rendered the bird temporarily blind with a precisely placed amber cluster.

In nearly an hour of bedlam in which 12-year-old Lester Sims received minor hurts after being trampled by several members of his own family who are said to tend toward heftiness, the nondescript Sutton was at once transformed from an obscure Carolina guinea herder into the pride of the Tar Heel state.

Demonstrators Seek School Transportation

YOUNG PICKETS make their point in a demonstration in front of the Board of Education offices here Monday. Nine children, in the care of Maggie and Rita Dye, of Spewing Camp, at Orkney, complained of what they say is the board's refusal to provide them transportation to school.
The children have been out of school three weeks since the resignation of their driver, who had been under contract with the school board to haul them by jeep the mile-and-a-half out of Spewing Camp to a regular bus route.
Mrs. Maggie Dye accused school authorities of doing nothing to help them and said she feared the children "are already so far behind (in their schoolwork), they'll never be able to catch up."
School Transportation Director Wayne Ratliff is on vacation. Assistant Director John Campbell declined invitations to comment on the situation.

I.D. Badges Part of HRMC System

An HRMC employee is photographed for new I.D. system.
All employees, volunteers and students at Highlands Regional Medical Center have been issued employee identification badges for the convenience and security of employees and patients. The badges are step one in the plan of Mason Sexton, director of security. "The badges will assist employees in identifying unauthorized persons and help visitors find the proper employees," said Sexton. Also, the badges have a notice on the back to the authorities which permits cardholders to pass through police and fire roadblocks for reporting to the hospital in the event of an emergency.
"The employee I.D. badge system will be beneficial to everyone," commented Clarence Traum, administrator.
Employees won't be the only ones wearing badges. In the near future, visitors and others entering the hospital also will be receiving badges at the Information Desk which must be worn while at HRMC. The badges will be color-coded, indicating which floor the person is to visit. For those visiting patients on the floors, two badges per patient will be issued to avoid overcrowding. Security Guards will enforce these new regulations strictly.
Visiting hours at HRMC are 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. and 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. New O. B. visiting hours are 2:30 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Danny Phillip Caudill, a 1966 graduate of Wheelwright High School, was presented with a book award for attaining the highest class grade in coal law, at the annual Salmon P. Chase College Law Award Program, Nov. 12. He was also named to the Dean's list for the Spring, 1980 semester.

Mr. Caudill is the son of Canel and Alpha Jean Caudill, of Bevinsville, and grandson of the late Reverend Johnny Jones and Lula Jones, of Bevinsville, and Lee and Arizonia Caudill, of Ligon. He resides with his wife Iris and son Phillip at Walton, Ky., while attending law school.

More Women Working Says Labor Dept.

The number of women 16 years of age and older in the Kentucky civilian labor force increased nearly 54 percent during the decade of the 70s, compared to a national increase of 39.6 percent, U.S. Department of Labor statistics show.

In 1970, 35.8 percent of all Kentucky women in this age group were either working or looking for work. By 1979 this figure had risen to 48.2 percent.

Nationally, 43.4 percent were working or looking for work in 1970, compared to 51.3 percent in 1979.

The number of women 16 and older grew 14.1 percent in Kentucky and 17.7 percent nationally.

Unemployment rates for women also increased during the nine-year period. Kentucky's female unemployment rate went from 5.5 percent to 6.6 percent, while the national rate for women grew from 5.9 percent to 6.8 percent.

Chief labor market analyst for the state Department for Human Resources, Robert W. MacDonald, attributes the increase in the number of women in the work force to a combination of high inflation rates, which made it necessary for women to add to the family income, and the influence of the women's rights movement of the 70s.

The state division of conservation's soil scientist staff mapped 34,357 acres during the month of September. The division has mapped 121,386 acres since January. September's total is the highest production rate so far this year.

The young, the old, the retired, the working people, both men and women, school children, churches, businesses, and especially to the voters in this area who reserve the right to choose who they want to be their Magistrate.

At this time, I would like to give all the people a candidate who can fulfill the office with pride, honesty, and as a hard-working person.

My name is LOWELL SAMONS of Prater Creek. I am from a family of nine children: seven brothers, and two sisters, and am proud to say that my parents are Hezzie Samons and Bessie Conn Samons, also of Prater Creek. My father's parents are the late Grover Samons and Virgie Akers Samons of Betsy Layne, Ky. My mother is the daughter of the late Ike Conn and Geneva Boyd Conn of Dana, Ky.

I have worked in the coal mines for 10 years. I am 42 years old and a family man myself—one son, two daughters, and one grandson.

Dropping 55 MPH Limit Senseless, Says ECU Traffic Safety Prof.

For nearly seven years, the 55 miles per hour speed limit has been cursed and discussed. President-elect Ronald Reagan has even called for the abolishment of the law which ordered Nov. 25, 1973, by former President Richard Nixon. However, many traffic safety and energy conservation experts believe the lower speed limit has been in the nation's best interest.

One of the persons in support of the speed limit is Eastern Kentucky University's Dr. Ben Koepke, an associate professor in the Traffic Safety Institute.

Koepke is a great believer in the national slogan, "Drive 55 and Stay Alive." National safety figures indicate there has been a downward trend in the number of traffic fatalities since the lower speed limit went into effect," he said. "It is not the single reason for the lower highway death rate, but it is certainly a factor."

He also feels the 55 limit is a major reason for the lower fuel consumption. "Studies have shown that the average car gets 20 percent better mileage because of lowering the speed limit from 70 miles per hour. This is primarily due to less wind resistance," said Koepke. He agrees that other factors have contributed to the lower fuel consumption by driving Americans such as smaller cars and the indications people are driving less.

Regarding the Republican party platform plank which calls for an end to the 55 mph speed limit, Koepke believes it is one of those pre-election promises that we may never hear again.

"I just don't think it is in the cards to do away with the law. The federal government is committed to this program and it would take an act of Congress to change it," he said, adding that by doing so would "fly in the face" of all the facts concerning energy conservation and traffic problems. "The idea is politically attractive, but when you look at the practicality of it I don't think it looks as good."

Surprises for the Holiday Table

These are the days of turkey and dressing, mashed potatoes and gravy, cranberries, pumpkin pie and other holiday foods. But they can be days of lothespins, trifles, kisses, water wink eye, scrapple and lots of other foods Kentucky cooks dream up, then cook up.

For cooks who may want to try trifles, beat one egg and add two tablespoons sugar and pinch of salt, then stir in sifted flour to make soft dough. Roll one-fourth-inch thick, cut with biscuit cutter and fry in deep fat.

If you really want a taste of Kentucky heritage, try something more basic, like lothespins might do. Use any basic yeast dough recipe, roll into a flat rectangle and cut into strips which are wound around clean, all-wood, old-fashioned clothespins. Dip each clothespin into melted shortening before wrapping. Place on greased baking sheet and let rise until double, then bake. Remove each pin while still warm.

The same dough recipe can also be used to make knots. Instead of winding strips of dough on pins, tie the tough into loose knots, then bake.

How about water wink eye, a recipe from Lake Cumberland country? Brown one chopped onion in two tablespoons of flour and three tablespoons of bacon grease. Add a pint of cold water and three sliced potatoes, dash of salt and pepper. Cook until done.

Since Indians helped greatly during the early settlement days, why not try Indian nog, Indian bread and pudding, frizzles and gravy. For nog, use two cups evaporated milk (instead of thick cream), two cups cold water, a dash of salt and cinnamon and three tablespoons sorghum molasses. Combine and stir well, then pour into glasses, sprinkle with a dash of nutmeg, ginger or cinnamon and serve. Serves five.

Modern Indian bread, can be made with a basic yeast biscuits (angel type) recipe. Roll the dough thin and fry in hot oil or shortening. Sprinkle with sugar or with salt and eat warm. Maybe spread with syrup, molasses or other spread.

P'burg Gets Grant For Police Vehicle

Police departments in Prestonsburg and six other Kentucky cities have been awarded federal highway grants totaling $60,143 for traffic enforcement programs.

Other cities involved in the program are Monticello, Leitchfield, Pineville, Paintsville, Lancaster, and Richmond.

Six of the cities will receive a new traffic enforcement vehicle equipped with lights, siren, vehicle screen, mobile radio and moving radar. For the six cities, it will be the first vehicle they have ever had to be used strictly for traffic control.

Paintsville, however, has a traffic control program in operation so its grant money will be used to expand their existing program by equipping six cars used for traffic control with mobile radios, vehicle screens and radar equipment.

The vehicles in all seven cities will be used to patrol high accident areas at peak traffic times. Citations for speeding, reckless driving and driving while intoxicated will be given by the traffic control officers in an attempt to cut down on the number of accidents in the cities involved, state Department of Transportation officials said.

Studies show that there is a direct correlation between the amount of traffic enforcement in a city and the rate of accidents, officials said. The program will attempt to make the public aware of poor driving habits.

Each city will contribute additional funds to provide the salaries of officers and gas and maintenance for vehicles. Paintsville will also purchase the six vehicles, which will be equipped from the grant money.

The federal grants awarded by the Department of Transportation are financed with highway safety money made available to Kentucky through the department's office of highway safety programs. Prestonsburg received $7695 in federal funds for the program.

According to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor, the United States joined the International Labor Organization in 1935.

For an older type Indian bread, measure 1 1/2 cups graham flour, one cup Indian meal after sifting, add one teaspoon salt and three teaspoons of baking powder and sift again. Add one-half scant cup molasses and 1 1/4 cups milk. Mix and steam 3 1/2 hours with water boiling beneath as for Boston brown bread.

Melt two tablespoons of bacon fat in skillet to fry Indian frizzles. Separate slices of chipped beef or chipped ham and rise quickly in hot water. Drop in melted grease and fry until slices are crisp and curled up. Serves five. Make gravy by browning flour in skillet with two teaspoons of bacon fat, add water and cook till thick. While cooking, drop in chipped ham or chipped or dried beef.

Indian pudding is made by scalding one quart milk and pouring it slowly on 1/3 cup Indian meal. Add 1/2 cup molasses, one teaspoon of salt and if desired one teaspoon of ground ginger. Bake in slow oven two hours. Serve with butter or cream.

Instead of port scrapple, turkey scrapple might use up the last morsel of the holiday bird. To any reheated or freshly cooked granular cereal, mush or smiliar foods, fold in chopped turkey and heat. Ladle into loaf pans until set and firm. Slice and fry in skillet.

What is good food without a kiss or two? To make potato kisses, put 2/3 cup hot mashed potatoes through ricer to take away lumps, beat in two teaspoons melted butter. Place mixture in mixing bowl, add one pound sifted sugar and beat thoroughly. Add 2 1/2 tablespoons cocoa, beat, mix in one teaspoon vanilla, dash of salt (scant dash), 1/2 pound coconut. Drop by spoonful on waxed paper, cool, then place in covered container.

Floyd Mine Co. Gets Small Operator Aid

Tram Coal Co., of Harold, has been awarded a grant of $27,457 from the Small Operator Assistance Program.

The grant, announced by Jackie Swigart, secretary of the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, is from a federally funded program designed to help small coal operators gather data required for permit applications.

Grant funds provide for the gathering of background data on ground and surface waters, stream life and geological strata in the areas to be mined. Grant payments are made directly to engineering firms selected to gather the environmental data, program Bob Trimble said.

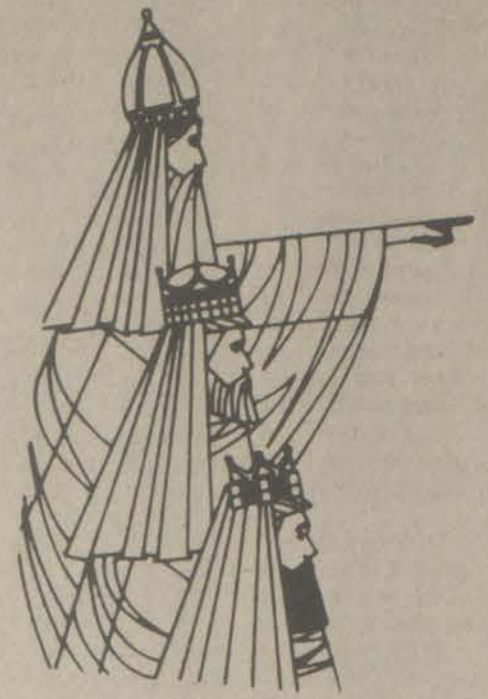

Work on the Floyd county site near Little Mud Creek will be done by Dames & Moore, of Lexington, and Summit Engineering, of Pikeville.

Kentucky coal operators mining 100,000 tons or less of coal a year are eligible for assistance under the program. Operators can apply for the program if they apply for permits under the permanent regulatory program for surface mining, Trimble said.

"The small coal operator is vital to the coal industry and to Kentucky's economy," he said. "Our program services can save the small operator $20,000 to $30,000."

SOAP, as the program is known, has provided more than $1.6 million in services to Kentucky coal operators since it was established last October.

Further information on the program can be obtained by calling or writing SOAP, Third Floor, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Ky. 40602, telephone (502) 564-2356.

NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS OF DAVID WATER DISTRICT DAVID, KY.

The Utility Regulatory Commission has scheduled a hearing on the 4th day of December, 1980, at 10:30 a.m., Eastern Standard Time, in its offices at Frankfort, Kentucky, for the purpose of receiving testimony and comments with regard to the establishment of appropriate tariff provisions by water utilities whereby increases in the cost of purchased water would be passed on to customers without notice and hearing upon the filing of an application with the Commission and approval of revised rates by the Commission. This procedure would avoid delays which could affect the financial condition of the utility and its services. The Utility Regulatory Commission will examine each filing to determine whether all or part of an increase in the cost of purchased water could be absorbed by the utility.

The David Water District intends to be represented at the hearing and urge adoption of such a procedure.

CLEANING HOUSEPLANTS AIDS LOOKS, GROWTH

Washing the dust off your large-leaved houseplants can improve both their looks and their growth. Polishing, however, can damage them.

A midwinter cleaning of dusty houseplants opens up leaf pores so that plants can breathe properly and removes dust catching surface films that may be partially blocking light falling on the foliage. And, of course, it makes the plant look better.

Plant polishes, on the other hand, especially some home remedies like milk, mayonnaise and olive oil, make the leaves shiny but may clog plant pores. They also form a greasy film that traps dust and holds it on the leaves.

Even commercial plant polishes can cause these problems, especially if they're applied frequently or used on both the upper and lower leaf surfaces.

As an alternative to polishing, firm, smooth leaves can be washed with a gentle spray of clean water or sponged with a soft cloth. African violets and other plants with hairy leaves, cacti and succulents should not be sprayed or washed but can be dusted with a soft brush.

TREES FOR WET AREAS

Low places where soils remain wet much of the year present real problems where large trees may be needed. Since it may not always be possible to improve drainage in such locations, trees that are able to tolerate wet soils must be selected. The list of trees able to endure such conditions is not long; however, there are some that are able to survive as well as become attractive landscape plants.

The trees most people associate with wet places are willows. The weeping willow, corkscrew willow and pussy willow are most common. Although they are able to survive wet areas, their use is limited. Willows are relatively short-lived trees; their wood is weak and cracks very easily. In the lawn, they often shed thin, weak twigs, making frequent clean-up necessary. Their wide spreading root system is attracted to most places, such as sewer

EAST POINT HOMEMAKERS PLAN CHRISTMAS LUNCHEON

The East Point Homemakers met November 18 at the home of Leota DeRossett. The meeting was called to order by president Martha Leake. "A Time to Give Thanks" was the title of the devotional given by Elsie Leake.

Roll call, secretary and treasurer's reports were given by the secretary.

A Christmas luncheon was planned for the December decorations. Members brought ideas for gifts and decorations to share with the club. Refreshments were served by the hostess to the following members: Dorothy Harris, Leatha Kendrick, Elsie Leake, Martha Leake, Armita Snavley, Katherine Stephens, Frances Pitts, Brenda Allen, Nena Short, Leslia and Liza Kendrick.

lines or drainage tiles. Willows can be attractive trees, but they are not well suited for the limited space of many home lawns.

A more suitable tree for that wet spot is the bald cypress. Bald cypress trees are native to western Kentucky and are tolerant of wet soil or occasional standing water. They are also suitable for dry locations.

Bald cypress is a conifer, but not evergreen. The needles turn reddish and drop in the fall. Its feathery foliage allows some light beneath the tree, and grass is often able to grow beneath them unless soil is too wet.

The river birch is another native Kentucky tree suitable to wet spots and is often found growing along stream banks. The bark of this birch is not white, but peels out from the trunk in thin sheets, giving the trunk of the tree a distinctive appearance. Once established, this tree is relatively fast growing.

Red maple or swamp maple is able to tolerate wet soil and infrequent flooding. The plant gets its name from the red flowers and fruit it produces, not from red leaves year-round. It develops bright autumn colors in orange and red shades. Because it is a fast growing tree in wet locations, its wood is weaker than that of sugar maples, but stronger than that of the soft or silver maple. Red maple is also found in Kentucky woods.

A popular shade tree relatively tolerant of moist soils is the sweet gum. It is not as tolerant of standing water as bald cypress or willow, but is able to grow in soils that stay wet for long periods of time. Young trees should be kept well watered during drought periods.

Another native tree that endures wet soil well is the sycamore. However, this is not considered a good lawn tree since it sheds its large leaves throughout the summer, and the ball-like fruit clutter the lawn. Sweet gum trees also have similar fruit which may be objectionable in a small lawn.

Some magnolias tolerate moist to wet soil. One of the best is the Sweet Bay or Swamp magnolia, which grows to a small tree. Its leaves have a silvery underside, making them especially attractive as they blow in the wind. Although sweet bay magnolias tolerate wet places, they are not tolerant of drying, and may need extra watering during drought periods.

★ Cancer Hopeline

Q—I know I shouldn't smoke, but after 30 years, how can I quit?

A.—It may sound too simple to say this but the best way is to take one minute, one hour, and one day at a time.

You know all too well that smoking is a form of addiction that can be very hard to break. If you think of the months ahead as you resolve to quit, you probably will feel like the task is too overwhelming. Try quitting a little at a time, just the way you started.

When should you quit?

Right now if you can, but if you need some time to work up your courage, try November 20. That day the American Cancer Society is sponsoring its Great American Smoke-out for this year. A lot of people just like you will give quitting a try that day. The ACS and the Cancer Hopeline would like to help you make November 20 the first day of your return to better health.

Need some help?

The American Cancer Society sponsors Quit Smoking Clinics throughout Kentucky. For information about the clinics in your area, contact:

American Cancer Society, Kentucky Division, Medical Arts Building, 1169 Eastern Parkway, Louisville, Ky. 40217, (502) 459-1867 or American Cancer Society, Bluegrass Area, North Park Shopping Center, 500 New Circle road, NW, Lexington, Ky. 40505, (606) 253-2822.

The Cancer Hopeline has a free kit to help you kick the habit. It contains the best of the methods that really have worked for people just as hooked as you are. We will be glad to send you a free copy. Just give us a call Monday-Thursday from 9-9 or Friday 9-5 at 1-800-432-9321. Write us at 915 S. Limestone St., Lexington, Ky. 40536.

Lice on Loose In Some Areas

In the past year, many communities have reported outbreaks of head lice. Transmission of head lice is a particular problem in schools due to the large number of children in close contact. In most instances, parents pressure the school board to close a school which is experiencing an outbreak. School closure is never indicated as a control measure.

The key to control is prompt identification and treatment of infested individuals. The following information on lice infestation includes the most recent recommendations of Charles Hume, Kentucky Director for the Division of Local Health, Department for Human Resources, and the Floyd County Health Department.

There are three types of lice that infest man: body lice, public or crab lice, and head lice. Head lice are tiny, blood sucking insects that live on the scalp and the hair of humans. Traditionally, lice infestations have been associated with conditions such as poor sanitation and poverty. Today, however, all members of society appear to be equally susceptible.

In almost all cases of head lice, transmission is due to direct contact (head to head) with an infested individual or it can be transmitted through hats, combs and brushes or upholstered furniture recently used by an infested person; however, these kinds of transmission are rare.

The most common symptom of lice infestation is severe itching. Diagnosis is made by identifying adult lice and their eggs (nits). Head lice or their eggs are most commonly found on the back of the neck or behind the ears. Nits are attached to the hair shaft very close to the scalp. Nits are firmly cemented to the hair shaft and are not easily removed. Live nits will be found only 1/4 to 1/2 inch from the scalp. If nits are found farther than 1/2 inch from the scalp, they are dead or only an empty egg case.

Once head lice has been identified, the infestation must be treated promptly. Family members of infested persons should be examined and also treated if necessary. Available products include Kwell, which requires a prescription, and non-prescription medications are considered very effective. Kwell, should never be used to treat preschool children or pregnant women.

Whatever product used, care should be taken to follow exactly the manufacturer's directions for shampooing. Contrary to some manufacturer's claims, medications used in treating head lice may not kill all the nits. Therefore, an effort should be made to physically remove as many nits as possible. In addition, patients should be retreated in seven to ten days. It is difficult to remove all the nits which have hatched after the initial treatment. Shaving the head or cutting the hair is not necessary, nor is the wearing of a head covering required.

Personal articles such as hats, recently worn clothing, sheets and towels can be disinfected by machine washing in hot water, and drying using the hot cycle or pressing with a hot iron. Non-washable items may be dry-cleaned. Combs and brushes can be treated by soaking them in a Lysol solution.

Cleaning of houses, wards and other rooms inhabited by infested persons should be limited to a thorough vacuuming. Fumigation of rooms is not recommended, as it is costly and has not been proven effective.

No Gas Problem Foreseen For Holiday

Kentucky motorists should have no difficulty in finding gasoline along the state's major highways over the Thanksgiving holiday. According to the AAA Blue Grass Automobile Club's November fuel gauge survey, 63 percent of the stations reporting will be open on Thanksgiving Day; 71 percent will be open past 6:00 p.m. on Saturday, and 54 percent will be open on Sunday.

The AAA survey also showed that the average price per gallon at full-service stations dropped almost one cent.

The average cost at full-service pumps is $1.23 for regular; $1.31 for premium; $1.28 for no lead; and $1.19 for diesel. Self-service prices are $1.15 for regular, $1.20 for premium and $1.21 for no-lead.

All stations reported ample supplies of fuel on hand.

Ban Horse Drugs

Thoroughbred horses must be medication-free on race day under rules adopted by the Kentucky State Racing Commission.

The state commission voted 5-2 for a total ban after listening to hours of testimony from racing industry experts.

Rules adopted in July would have allowed traces of veterinarian-prescribed medicine—specifically phenylbutazone or "bute" an anti-inflammatory drug that has been called a close relative to aspirin, and furosemide or Lasix (a brand name), diuretic used to control hemorrhaging in bleeders.

Commission rules will now, subject to approval by a legislative committee, ban all substances foreign to the horse, including legal therapeutic medication, on race day.

Illinois Church Calls Former Floyd Man

First Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), Illiopolis, Ill., has called W. Jefferson Williamson as its new minister. The Rev. Williamson, a native of Estill, Floyd county, is currently completing training in clinical pastoral education in Columbia, South Carolina. He has received training at the Baptist Medical Center and the William S. Hall Psychiatric Institute.

Prior to entering clinical training Rev. Williamson was minister-director of the Christian Church United Ministry, Hazel Green, Kentucky. He also served as director of housing at Alice Lloyd College, Pippa Passes.

Rev. Williamson received his Bachelor of Arts at Bethany College, Bethany, W. Va., and his Master of Divinity degree at the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia. In addition, he has done graduate work in psychology at the University of South Carolina.

He is married to the former Marilyn Kay Livingston, a native of Corpus Christi, Texas.

All In Vain

Have you ever visualized the perfect hair-do? I was just wondering how many other women have experienced the same problem I have. I found in a picture the perfect hair-do I wanted, which I thought would be just darling on me (and, by the way, I know how hair stylists frown on pictures). After looking the picture over I knew my hair was a little too short for the style. So I let my hair grow for three months to get the length I needed for the hair style in the picture. Next, I inquired around and, by stopping 10 or 15 women on the streets to inquire who had styled their hair, which altogether took me two or three more weeks, I finally decided upon just the right hair stylist. I called to make an appointment and was told that I was in luck—they had just had a cancellation and could take me within two weeks. So, I thought, well, I've gone around looking like Lassie for months now, what's two more weeks.

Finally the big day arrives, I'm off to the hair stylist. While waiting for my turn, I began to get a little concerned as to whether or not I had made the right choice; the stylist was so busy talking, she was cutting a woman's hair too short. Just as I was about to decide to leave, the stylist called my name.

I took a seat. STYLIST: "How do you want your hair styled Hon?" ME: I have a picture here, do you think you could style my hair to look exactly like it? STYLIST: Oh, sure, Hon, I've styled this one several times. ME: (to myself) "Thank God, finally I've found the one." STYLIST: "Hon, I don't know who styled your hair before but, frankly, it's in bad shape." ME: "She was a new girl I tried" (I had cut it, myself).

The stylist began cutting and styling my hair. At first, I'm o.k., but she kept going over and over my hair; by now I'm getting a little panicky. ME: Aren't you cutting it too short?! STYLIST: No Hon, not much; you see, I have to do this in order to straighten it up. ME: (to myself again) My God, how much hair does she need to straighten it up? STYLIST: Now, you are going to just love it when you see it styled. ME: (to myself, because I'm too close to tears to comment). How in the world can you style hair an inch and a half long? STYLIST: (after blowing my hair dry and brushing it straight back) "There, Hon, don't you just love it?" ME: But it doesn't look anything like the picture and it's a lot shorter." STYLIST: "Sure, Hon, it will look just like it, as soon as it grows out."

Of course I had a disappointing day. You might say, I was right back where I started.

(Editor's Note: The writer prefers to remain anonymous and is confining herself to quarters while her hair grows back.)

Coal Availability Report Compiled

Information on the availability of coal in Eastern Kentucky has been compiled in a report by two University of Kentucky agencies.

Titled "Guide and Finding Key to Eastern Kentucky Coal Field Literature and Information," the report lists by county the known coal beds, the quadrangles which cover each county, and published reports and geologic quadrangle maps.

The report is a joint project of the Kentucky Geological Survey at UK and the UK Institute for Mining and Minerals Research.

Information in the report should be useful to those conducting research on geology and coal occurrence in Eastern Kentucky and to those interested in the occurrence of coal and associated rocks in a specific quadrangle or county.

The report may be examined at the offices of either the KGS or IMMR. Interested persons should contact Russell Brant at (606) 258-5863.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES

'A Tale of Two Cities,' starring Chris Sarandon (pictured) in the dual roles of Sydney Carton and Charles Darnay, will be broadcast as a 'Hallmark Hall of Fame' presentation, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 2 on CBS-TV.

Peter Cushing, Kenneth More, Barry Morse, Flora Robson and Billie Whitelaw co-star in the new adaptation of Charles Dickens' classic novel.

The story, set against the vivid background of the French Revolution, focuses on Darnay, a descendant of the French aristocracy who is sentenced to death for the crimes of his ancestors, and Carton, the ostensibly aimless English barrister whose physical resemblance to the Frenchman enable him to go in his place to the guillotine.

Little Known Facts

Musicians have many eccentricities. For example, Haydn could write music on clean white paper only. Mozart composed while playing billiards. Rossini composed most of his music while he was drunk, and Wagner found it easiest to compose when he was dressed up in historical costumes.

Organized, White Collar Crime Said To Be New Targets of FBI

The Federal Bureau of Investigation is successfully shifting its resources to combat organized crime and white-collar crime, FBI Director William H. Webster told participants of the Kentucky Prosecutors' Conference.

"Some of the things we're doing will be of interest to you," he said. The bureau is using its money and people "to reach beyond the streets into the upper echelons of criminal activity," he explained.

Organized crime is recognized as a serious problem today, and 21 percent of the bureau's field agents work in the area. An essential element of organized crime is "the edge," Webster said. The edge can be graft, corruption or the channeling of illicit funds into legitimate business or any way which will give the criminal an advantage over honest people.

Informers and authorized wire taps are valuable tools in dealing with organized crime, he said. Webster credited tapes of payoff conversations as very helpful in proving to a New York jury just what had been going on in a case which was tried last November.

White collar crime may add 15 percent to the costs of goods and services he said, and 20 percent of business failures can be traced to white collar crime. Webster said that in 1973 the FBI had 8 percent of its resources devoted to white collar crime and now has 23 percent of its employees working in this area.

Undercover agents are an extremely valuable technique in combating white collar crime, Webster said, stressing the bureau's agents are special agents working within legal restraints and under bureau discipline. "Properly managed, the undercover method is cost effective," Webster said last year undercover operations cost the bureau $3.6 million but the investigations led to the recovery of property worth $190 million.

Saying he would like to tell the prosecutors more about foreign counter-intelligence, Webster noted the bureau monitors 80,000 visitors from Russia and Soviet bloc nations each year is now keeping track of new agents from China.

"We're meeting our most significant problems head on, and we are solving them," he said.

The Kentucky Prosecutors' Conference was sponsored by the Office of the Attorney General and the Prosecutors' Advisory Council with funds from the Kentucky Crime Commission.

Medical Science Still Needs Donors

By David Williamson

Did you ever hear someone say that you can always raise a little cash by selling your body to medical science?

Don't believe it. "There's no medical school in the country that will pay a person for his own body or for someone else's," says Susan Padilla, administrative assistant in the Department of Anatomy at Duke University Medical Center.

"We get two or three phone calls and two or three letters a day from people who want to donate their bodies. A lot of people are convinced that we buy bodies, and some won't believe us when we say we don't."

One of Ms. Padilla's responsibilities is to oversee the acquisition of cadavers for anatomical study and research. Her task is far from simple.

"Each year, we need to have approximately 60 bodies available for teaching and research, including 29 for our medical students who begin three months of anatomy in August," she said. "Sometimes we have enough, and sometimes the supply is very tight. We have never had too many."

Seven of every 10 bodies the department receives have been bequeathed to the School of Medicine by individuals, while families of deceased persons donate most of the rest. Duke also receives one or two unclaimed bodies a year from the North Carolina Commission of Anatomy, composed of representatives of the state's four medical schools and the funeral industry.

Saves Burial Expenses

"There are so many feelings involved at the time of death that we have to be very, very understanding with the families," she said. "Some families are grateful to be spared the burden of burial expenses, and many others are sincerely trying to help advance medical science."

So that the bodies will be used to best advantage, a variety of other students begin learning their professions in the anatomy laboratory—pathology assistants, physical therapists, graduate students and physicians' assistants.

The tissues are also employed in training surgical residents and in the development of new procedures in orthopedics, radiology, plastic surgery and other specialties.

"Thousands of people around the country die each year or remain sightless because there are not enough organ donors."

"Organs such as kidneys and eyes are definitely the medical center's top priority in terms of donation," she said. "That's because many thousands of people around the country die each year or remain sightless because there are not enough organ donors. To survive after death, kidneys need to be removed within 30 minutes and eyes within four hours."

Ms. Padilla said that a person interested in leaving organs to transplant patients or an entire body to education and research needs only to fill out a free "Uniform Donor Card" that is available in most states, and directly through the departments of anatomy at local medical schools.

Depending on the distances involved, the schools will often pay for embalming and transporting the bodies if they are considered suitable for study. The school will cremate them later. At Duke, ashes are either returned to the family if they wish or scattered in the Duke Forest.

Respect Required

At the beginning of each course, students are reminded that it is a special privilege to be able to study the human body directly and that the donors have been gracious enough to provide that opportunity, says Dr. J. David Robertson, chairman of anatomy at Duke. Respect for the remains is required at all times.

"Gross anatomy, which is the oldest medical science, is absolutely essential to all aspects of medicine, particularly surgery, and physicians have always recognized that," Robertson says.

"With the tremendous advances that have occurred in the other basic sciences in the past few decades, we can no longer require that all students learn everything about human anatomy, but there is still a level of knowledge that is irreducible."

Few of the medical freshmen who began their dissections this year knew the fascinating, if sometimes macabre, story of how those dissections gradually achieved public acceptance over the centuries. Fewer still will ever forget their first day in anatomy class.

"There is nothing in the life of man which is more attendant with fear, uncertainty, mysticism and superstition than his dead," observes

Dr. A.M. Lassek, author of Human Dissection: Its Drama and Struggle.

The ancient Egyptian embalmers, for example, were the precursors of the modern anatomists, but their religion dominated the burial preparations. Among their customs was to hire an old man to make the first incision and then, as he fled, to throw rocks at him to show their gods that they disapproved of his action.

In Greek-dominated Alexandria, dissections were allowed for several centuries immediately before and after the birth of Christ, but were later forbidden by Christian, Hebrew and Moslem holy men for more than 1,000 years.

The rebirth of anatomical study coincided with the beginnings of the Renaissance in Italy and the rise of the great universities. As early as the 13th Century, some physicians in Italy were required by law to prove that they had participated in dissections.

And by 1543, Andreas Vesalius was able to publish his illustrated anatomical work, the "Fabrica," which has been called one of the 10 greatest contributions to medicine.

Grave Robbers

Although anatomy flourished in Europe, England and the United States had to contend not only with adverse public opinion, but also with a great scarcity of cadavers. The shortage compounded the problem of public acceptance by giving rise to ingenious gangs of grave robbers.

"During the height of activity of these unprincipled gangs, no family, even the most respected and distinguished, could rest assured that one of its members would be interred with any degree of permanence," Lassek wrote.

The grave robbers' tactics included tunneling through the ground so that bodies could be removed without disturbing new graves, bribing funeral directors to substitute wood or stones for bodies in caskets and disarming elaborate booby traps set up over new graves, stealing the bodies and then re-arming the traps.

In Washington, D.C., a body snatcher named Janssen caused so much ill will toward the area's medical schools that the schools took up a collection to pay him to leave town.

In Cincinnati, Ohio, William Cunningham used to dress up bodies and drive them through town propped up in his carriage, pretending to be escorting home drunken companions.

Cunningham, whose nickname was "the Ghoul," once got revenge on a group of medical students who had played tricks on him by digging up the body of a smallpox victim. Much to his delight, several of the students who dissected the cadaver contracted the disease.

When he died, his wife sold his body to the Medical College of Ohio for $5.

Sack-'em-up Men

Lassek said that while professors of anatomy may have detested these petty criminals known as resurrectionists or "sack-'em-up men," they had no consistent alternative to dealing with them because young physicians were required to perform dissections before they could be licensed.

The most notorious incident in the history of the body trade occurred in Scotland in 1828 when William Burke and William Hare murdered 16 persons to sell their bodies to the unsuspecting Dr. Robert Knox, Edinburgh's most renowned anatomist.

That case, along with another that followed in London three years later, led to passage of the Warburton Anatomy of 1832, which allowed people to will their bodies to science and provided doctors with most unclaimed cadavers.

In the United States, grave robbing continued well into the 19th Century, when public pressure from physicians and laymen forced the states to enact similar legislation. An incident that affected one of the nation's most prominent families probably did more than any other to create that pressure.

While looking for the stolen body of a young friend at the Medical College of Ohio in 1878, one of the sons of Senator John Scott Harrison accidentally found the senator's body instead. John Scott Harrison, who had been buried the day before, was the son of President William Henry Harrison and the father of President Benjamin Harrison.

PURCHASING WOOD FOR HOME USE

Many Kentuckians will be purchasing wood this year to help heat their homes or for simple enjoyment in the fireplace. The purchase of wood can be confusing and consumers can follow a few basic steps to ensure their money is well spent.

"There are five things to consider when buying wood: the amount of wood, the species, the moisture content, the degree of preparation and the price," said Attorney General Steven Beshear.

Most wood is sold by cords. A standard or full cord is 128 cubic feet, the equivalent of a pile 8 feet long, 4 feet high and 4 feet wide. A "face cord" or "short cord" is a pile of wood 8 feet long, 4 feet high and as wide as the lengths of the cut wood, usually 12, 16 or 24 inches. A face cord is always less than a full cord and should be priced lower.

State Cancer Crusade Over $1 Million Mark; Floyd Makes '80 Goal

The American Cancer Society's Kentucky Division raised $1,000,757.13 during the 1980 Crusade, according to Cawood Ledford, chairman of the annual drive in Kentucky.

Floyd, Johnson and Knott counties were among the 42 units in the state which made the Crusade goals.

Ledford said the amount raised in 1980 represents the first time that the Society's Kentucky Division has exceeded the $1 million dollar mark in fund raising.

In 1890, 28 percent of Kentucky's black population lived in urban areas. By 1960, 71 percent lived in cities.

Honored On Birthday

"A 'truck load' is a vague term depending on how big the dealer's truck is. A standard pickup will only hold one-third to one-half a full cord. Beware of what the dealer calls 'about' a cord, delivered in a half-ton pickup truck," Beshear advises.

If you have questions about the amount of wood you have received, stack it before you pay. The dealer should be willing to have you do this or you may want to pay a little extra to have him do the stacking.

The type of wood used will affect the amount of heat that can be produced. While the denser hardwood produces more heat, a pile of mixed woods can be helpful as the softwood can be used for kindling or heating on warmer days. The species or type of wood can be determined in most cases by examination of the bark.

Types of wood and their heating capabilities include:

High heating—live oak, shagbark hickory, black locust, dogwood, slash pine, hop hornbeam, persimmon, shadbush, apple, white oak, honey locust, black birch, yew, blue beech, red oak, rock elm, sugar maple, American beech, yellow birch, longleaf pine, white ash, Oregon ash, black walnut.

Medium—holly, pond pine, nut pine, loblolly pine, tamarack, shortleaf pine, western larch, juniper, paper birch, red maple, cherry, American elm, black gum, sycamore, gray birch, Douglas fir, pitch pine, sassafras, magnolia, red cedar, Norway pine, bald cypress, chestnut.

Low—black spruce, hemlock, catalpa, red siber, tulip poplar, red fir, sitka spruce, black willow, large-tooth aspen, butternut, ponderosa pine, noble fir, redwood, quaking aspen, sugar pine, white pine, balsam fir, cottonwood, basswood, western red cedar, balsam poplar, white spruce.

If you have a consumer problem please write to the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, Frankfort, Ky. 40601 or call the toll-free hotline: 1-800-432-9257 and request a complaint form.

Surgery For Myopia Subject Of Research

The Kentucky Academy of Eye Physicians and Surgeons is endorsing a resolution passed by the National Visory Eye Council which calls for carefully controlled research on radial keratotomy, a surgical procedure for the correction of myopia. The Council urges restraint in using this procedure, which has received widespread publicity during the last year and involves 16 radial incisions into the corneal tissue as a measure to correct nearsightedness. The Council considers radial keratotomy to be an experimental procedure and expressed grave concern about potential widespread adoption of an operation intended to correct a common condition that can be easily and safely corrected by the use of eyeglasses or contact lenses. Until it has been subjected to adequate scientific evaluation in animals and humans, the Kentucky Academy of Eye Physicians and Surgeons and the Council stresses the importance of encouraging animal research on radial keratotomy while limiting research to controlled clinical trials conducted by responsible investigators.

Perkins Protests Omission Of East Ky. Synfuel Projects

Congressman Carl D. Perkins has condemned the emphasis being given to synthetic fuel development in the western states and has demanded that officials in charge of the program make sure that Eastern Kentucky gets its share.

The congressman took the action after the Energy Department announced 18 proposed projects, with six going to Colorado and Utah for oil shale.

"They don't have any technology for converting shale to oil yet, but all of the technology anybody needs to convert coal to gas and oil already exists, and on a commercial scale," Perkins said.

In a letter to Secretary of Energy Charles W. Duncan, Jr., and Synthetic Fuels Corporation President John Sawhill, Congressman Perkins wrote:

"I have taken note of the recently announced proposed projects under the Energy Security Act, and as a co-sponsor of the legislation, a champion of commercial scale synthetic fuel production since I came to the Congress in 1949, and a Representative from Eastern Kentucky, I strongly object to the omission of any projects in Eastern Kentucky. I know that these are proposals from corporations, but I have not spent my time here without learning that government agencies can influence such factors as locations chosen by corporations seeking project approval, and I want to urge you as vigorously as possible to ensure that the huge coal areas of Eastern Kentucky are developed for synthetic fuel," he said in the correspondence.

"Right now, we have only the liquefaction pilot plant at Catlettsburg, and I can state that we have it because the late, revered Rogers C. B. Morton was Secretary of Interior at the time the decision to locate the plant was being made, and he came to my office at my request to discuss a site, and told me he would locate it in his native state, Kentucky. But the decision was made because Eastern Kentucky, with its vast coal supplies, plentiful water resources, and immense development site availability, was the logical place.

"I do not think the intent of the Energy Security Act was to put a preponderance of projects into Western shale, and I just have to wonder what the average American, wondering about the future fuel supplies, has to think about peat as a solution.

"I think the average American who is thoughtful would want to see your activity focus in the existing coal fields, and would want to see projects get going based on known technology, such as the plants Sasol is putting up in South Africa.

"Terrible mistakes have been made in the past by Administrations without foresight, such as the 1953 decision not to continue synthetic fuel projects. The underground gasification project at Gorgas, Alabama, is a perfect example. Let us not see that kind of ineptness again."

Crash Course in Accidents

By Lynn Varacalli

Crash! You have just been involved in a motor vehicle accident. Bang! You never thought it could happen to you. Crunch! You haven't the vaguest idea what to do first. In fact, most people don't.

Most people also are not aware of what information they need or don't need at this moment of crisis. By clipping the attached form and storing it in your glove compartment, one worry will be off your mind. At least one.

Now, for the immediate worries. The first and most obvious thing to do when you are involved in an accident is to stop the car regardless of how minor the accident appears. Driving away can cause more problems.

If available, use emergency flashers or flares to prevent additional collisions. At the same time, don't move the cars or any parts of cars until the police arrive. And don't hesitate to call the police even if a very minor accident. Later injury claims could make it into a major one.

Let police know if an ambulance is needed. Do not move any injured persons unless there is immediate danger of a fire or explosion. You would be liable if the injuries were aggravated by the move.

While you are waiting for the police, start filling in the accident form. Stick to the details of the accident. Do not volunteer that the accident is your fault even if you believe that to be the case. On the other hand, try not to lose your temper even if it is clearly the other driver's fault for the accident.

Check with the police to see if you need to report the accident to the motor-vehicle department. In some states, failure to file a written report can result in the suspension of your license.

Even if only slightly injured, don't shrug off seeing a doctor. Prompt medical attention is important when filing a claim against the other driver's insurance company. You would want it on record that you sought treatment right away, not a week later. Besides, a bruise could lead to more serious injury and unwanted medical bills.

As soon as possible after leaving the scene of the accident, call your insurance agent. Your agent will take over where you left off so you can relax and convince yourself that driving is relatively safe.

Kentucky Joins In Stripmine Law Suit

Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr. and Attorney General Steven L. Beshear last week jointly announced that Kentucky will participate as a friend of the court in support of the Commonwealth of Virginia and the State of Indiana in two cases now pending before the United States Supreme Court involving the 1977 federal strip mine law.

Brown said that it is important to Kentucky and the state's vital coal industry that the suit be decided as soon as possible.

"Because of the importance of coal to Kentucky's economy, it is imperative that the questions surrounding this law be fully explored and resolved by the United States Supreme Court so that Kentucky will know the ground rules under which it must operate," Brown said.

Beshear agreed and said that his office has advised the Attorneys General of Indiana and Virginia of Kentucky's decision to join with them in the appeal.

The United States Supreme Court recently decided to hear and rule on the legal challenges to the statute presented by the Indiana and Virginia cases.

Beshear explained that Kentucky's entering the cases before the United States Supreme Court is the shortest, quickest and most direct route to obtain a decision concerning the validity of various parts of the statute.

Jackie Swigart, Secretary of the Kentucky Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection, said the announcement by Gov. Brown and Attorney General Beshear was "an appropriate time and manner to determine the constitutionality of the federal law that the Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection must enforce."

Comments Sought On Tobacco Programs

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland recently asked the public to comment on proposed determinations relating to the amount of the national marketing quota for 1981 crop burley tobacco. Under current law, the U.S. Department of Agriculture must announce the amount of the national quota for burley tobacco for the 1981-82 marketing year no later than Feb. 1.

Details on determinations to be made and the legislative provisions on the determinations are scheduled for publication in Nov. 18 Federal Register.

A meeting will be held by USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service to discuss supply and demand and other factors relating to the determination. It will be held in Lexington, with the exact time and place yet to be determined.

Before making final determinations, Bergland said consideration will be given to any written comments received on or before Jan. 13. Comments may be sent to the director, price support and loan division, USDA-ASCS, P. O. Box 2415, Washington, D. C. 20013.

All written comments will be available for public inspection during regular business hours at the office of the director, room 3741 of USDA's South building.

Water...Is It Safe To Drink?

By Marilee Wyman

In Elizabeth, New Jersey, thousands of barrels of dangerous chemical wastes were discovered in a water-front storage facility. It is only one of many potentially hazardous situations which threaten water supplies in the New York/New Jersey area. Elsewhere the situation is worse. The water supply of Berlin, New Hampshire was responsible for 750 illnesses in 1978, while in Sewickly, Pennsylvania, 5000 people got sick from drinking water which was presumed to be safe.

The purity of our water can no longer be taken for granted. Since 1961, over 80,000 Americans have gotten sick drinking "safe" water. Some officials believe this figure reflects only 1/10th of the actual illnesses caused by contaminated water, because many health departments don't keep statistics and because people often don't realize the source of their illness. In addition, the long-range effect of trace chemicals found in many water supplies is difficult to determine.

How Safe Are You?

Fortunately, 65% of our population receives water from large municipal systems which are relatively safe. This water is generally free of bacteria, though some systems contain trace chemicals which may produce long-range health problems. About 15% of us receive water from smaller public systems which vary in quality from water of remarkable purity to water that is actually dangerous. One out of every five Americans get their water from private wells.

Public systems are required to comply with the Safe Drinking Water Act, which imposes strict standards for bacteria, chemicals and metals in public water supplies. Though passed by Congress in 1974, little has been done to enforce the Act. The cost of cleaning public water supplies ranges from $1-$240 per person per year depending on the size of the system. Private wells are not covered by the Act.

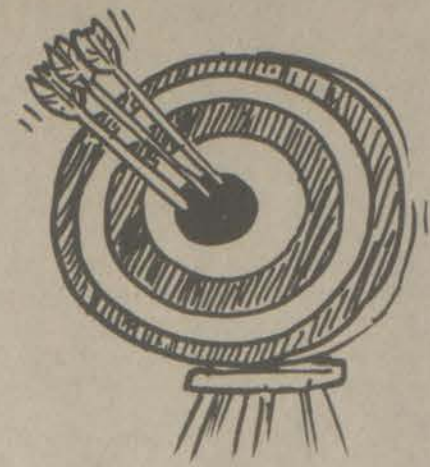

Small, rural water supplies are most likely to have contaminants. If you are in this group, you should have your water analyzed periodically. It is not safe to assume that if the water tastes good it's safe to drink, because contaminated water often tastes no different from clean water.

Do Filters Work?

Home filtering devices use activated carbon, ion exchange, reverse osmosis and distillation. They can be used singly or in combination, but they are not effective against all forms of contamination. It takes 7-18 minutes to trap many cancer-causing chemicals. Home systems are rarely capable of this, and the Federal Trade Commission has been asked to crack down on misleading advertising by manufacturers who claim their filters rid water of carcinogens, for example.

Furthermore, not all systems do the same thing. Some, like the carbon filters, remove sediment, unpleasant odors, colors and some chemicals. Others "soften" water by removing minerals which can form deposits that eventually clog plumbing. Others do both. Some systems are relatively inexpensive and easily installed; some require professional installation and maintenance.

You can spend up to several hundred dollars for a water filter. Before you do, read the manufacturer's claims carefully and be skeptical of claims to produce "totally pure" water. At best, home filtering systems provide only a partial solution to water contamination.

Clean Windshields, Safety Officer Says

Most people get up in the morning allowing just enough time to take a shower, get dressed, eat breakfast and make a dash to their cars to drive to work. However, in the daily obstacle course of getting to work, they encounter an unexpected seasonal problem—ice on the windshield.

There are two ways to approach the situation from this point. The driver could clear a spot just barely big enough to see out of and continue to work, struggling to see all the way, or he could handle it the correct way.

"Drivers should allow enough time to properly clean off the windshield before going to work," said Bennie Maffet, safety coordinator for the state Department of Transportation.

If all windows are not completely clear, the vehicle is not safe, Maffet said. "Many accidents are caused by ice on the windshield, but by the time the officer gets there the windows are clear," he said.

Many drivers may think their time is more important than a clear windshield, but they are still breaking the law. "It is a law that windshields must be clear and drivers can receive a citation if they aren't," Maffet said.

The law states that "no person shall drive any motor vehicle with any sign, poster or other nontransparent material upon the front windshield, side windows, side or rear windows of the vehicle, other than a paper required to be so displaced by law."

Clearing devices, defroster and windshield wipers, are also required by law to clear rain, snow and other moisture from the windshield.

Maffet urges all drivers to make sure their vehicle is properly equipped for the winter weather ahead.

"You owe it to yourself and the other people you'll be sharing the road with to properly maintain your vehicle both inside and out for winter," he said.

Geological Survey Releases Bibliography

The Kentucky Geological Survey at the University of Kentucky has just released a bibliography of all its publications through 1978.

The bibliography is designed to help geologists, geographers, librarians and geological researchers interested in Kentucky. There is also a listing of maps published by the Survey.

Copies of the bibliography—Information Circular 2—may be ordered from the Kentucky Geological Survey, 311 Breckinridge Hall, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky. 40506. Cost is $6 per copy which includes mailing charge and Kentucky sales tax. Payment should accompany orders.

The Federation of Organized Trades and Labor Unions, which later became the American Federation of Labor, was organized in Pittsburgh in November 1881, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Building Technology Whose Time Has Come

"An energy-efficient building construction technology whose time has come..."

That's the way inventor-architect Melvin H. Sachs describes his technology—known as U-Form—which features "built in" insulation and can cut heating costs by half and air conditioning costs by one-third for the life of a building.

Those and other energy and cost-saving features led an international panel of judges to award him top honors for "significant achievement in technological development" at the recent Eighth Annual World Fair for Technology Exchange in Atlanta. Sachs developed the winner with the aid of an $87,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Energy.

Sachs, 48, of Livonia, Mich., was one of seven inventors supported by DOE's Energy-Related Inventions Program who exhibited their inventions at the Atlanta Fair. He was the only architect among the select seven.

The Detroit area inventor was a student of Buckminster Fuller, famed architect-inventor-scientist, 26 years ago at the University of Michigan.

Sachs' "Best of Tech-Ex" award at the Atlanta Exposition was the culmination of 14 years of active development of an idea he first committed to paper in 1966.

Sachs' concept is not unlike the "stockade" system developed by "Bucky" Fuller 50 years ago. The differences are basically those of size, weight, materials, including insulation, and the fact that the current energy crunch places an entirely new emphasis on energy efficient building construction methodology than was the case in Fuller's heyday.

"Another way of putting it," says Sachs, "is that people may not have been interested in this concept when gasoline was 19 cents a gallon, heating oil a dime, and crude oil under $2 a barrel."

"Now, of course, it's a different story."

The key to Sachs' concept is a series of permanent building forms which incorporate insulation, the framework for pouring reinforced concrete supporting columns, and pre-finished exterior and interior surfaces. These permanent forms automatically become parts of the building's wall structures.

Some obvious advantages of the system are the dual use formwork and year-around workability of concrete without freezing.

"As permanent forms," says Sachs, "they can do and are designed to do things that ordinary form-work simply cannot do."

Sachs also contends that the current high inflation in the U.S. heightens the importance of the U-Form since it can cut construction time by one-third to one-half.

"Contractors will sign 'fixed price' contracts based on six or seven months in this day and age," says Sachs. "But they won't sign many contracts in these inflationary times based on 12 to 14 months or more."

"With this technology," he adds, "you can pour concrete into the U-Forms on a Monday afternoon and on Tuesday morning you can start installing the floor and roof systems."

To buttress Sachs' cost-saving claims, Detroit Edison recently discovered in its own study of actual billings that the total energy cost for Sachs' U-Form Headquarters Building in Livonia averaged only 63 cents a square foot for all energy consumed during 1978-79. This compared with Detroit Edison's own projections of $1 to $1.25 per square foot for other thermally efficient but more conventionally constructed buildings.

Several major U-Form projects have already been built in the Detroit metropolitan area. Many more are in various stages of analysis, design, or construction throughout the country.

They include the Livonia U-Form Headquarters, a 120,000-square foot, eight-story office building built in only seven months; the Central Towers Apartments, a 232-unit HUD complex for the elderly in Detroit; the Chidester Apartments, an eight-story 151-apartment unit for the elderly in Ypsilanti, Mich. and the Laurel HUD Project, a nine-story, 196-unit building in Livonia.

The DOE program offers one-time assistance, usually amounting to one year of financial and technical backing. Assistance is negotiated directly with the inventor or small businessman.

Allen Methodist Women To Hold Bake Sale Dec. 3

The Allen United Methodist Women held their monthly meeting on November 11 in the church fellowship hall. The business meeting was opened by the vice president, Edna Mae Callison, leading the group in the Lord's Prayer. The secretary, Kay Lemaster, read the minutes from the last meeting. Mrs. Callison presented the group with a special recognition award by the Kentucky Conference of United Methodist women for achieving goal in membership increase.

The motion was made and passed to hold a bake sale December 3, in front of the Little Bear Market at Allen. The sale will begin at 9:00 a.m. and each member is being asked to make or bake an item for sale.

Mrs. Tincy Crisp, treasurer, reported that approximately $500 had been made from the Christmas Bazaar held in October. Mrs. Crisp distributed pledge cards for 1981. During the business meeting, the ladies were advised that the classroom table the group had voted to purchase last fall, had been donated by Mrs. Jewel Allen.

Mrs. Jayne Patton had the program for the evening and distributed a list of scripture readings for the ladies to read and discuss. Mrs. Tincy Crisp closed the meeting in prayer.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, Ernestine May, to Jayne Patton, Karen Marcum, Jewel Allen, Edna Mae Callison, Tincy Crisp, Donna Hall, Elsie Lafferty, E. Lee Kinzer, Janice Stratton and Kay Lemaster, who gave the blessing.

The December 9 meeting will be held at the Allen United Methodist parsonage with Kay Lemaster, hostess, and will be the annual Christmas Party. Each lady is asked to bring a gift to exchange. All ladies are invited to attend.

R/X for Depression: Straight Thinking

People in the grip of depression often complain that they can't think straight. Now, doctors at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine are finding that correcting this "straight-thinking" problem often also reverses the depression.

The method is called cognitive therapy and its exponents are Drs. Aaron T. Beck and David D. Burns. Their work is described in the December Reader's Digest.

"The continuing work of Beck and Burns and their colleagues reinforces the basic discovery: our moods don't decree our thoughts. It's the other way around. Our thoughts govern our moods. Therefore, if you think right, you'll feel right," says Edward Ziegler in the article.

The thinking errors that people fall victim to include taking everything personally, seeing everything in black and white, overgeneralizing, jumping to conclusions, labeling and mislabeling.

There are three crucial steps you can take when you are upset, Dr. Burns advises.

1. Write down your negative thoughts. "Don't let them buzz in your head; snare them on paper!"
2. Review the list of thinking errors.
3. Substitute more objective thoughts that put the lie to the ones that made you depressed.

The key to cognitive therapy is self-esteem—not what others think of you, but what you think of you. Like yourself better and you'll feel better.

Mother: Watch Out For Danger Zones

Every occupation has its "danger zones." Times when accidents occur due to lagging attention or physical exhaustion. Ask Shirley Radl to pinpoint the hotspots in a mother's career, and her response will be, "the first five or six years in her children's lives."

Radl elaborates, "Pre-school children require more care, create more confusion and make more demands than children at any other age. The constant one-on-one, mother to child exposure, lays the groundwork for maternal stress."

Mother's Day Out has become an institution in the Radl household. Whether a paid babysitter, neighbor or babysitting cooperative takes charge of offspring, a day in the company of adults can be soothing balm to a mother's aching psyche.

Author of How To Be A Mother And A Person, Too, Radl is exploring the motherhood role in the next decade and interpreting results of a national analysis of women's attitudes toward mothering.

The most trivial of events can signal a danger zone. "Know your limits," encourages Radl. "When you wake up to discover that the milk's gone sour in the fridge, your dog had a midnight accident on the rug, and the washing machine won't work, call the kids together and declare a truce. Tell them you're taking the day off from cooking, cleaning and kids. Find a sympathettic neighbor to watch them and go shopping or just stay home and relax... alone!"

"Sure it sounds selfish," acknowledges Radl. "But, what's best for Mom is usually best for the children, too. When she's feeling good, she's a more patient, fun-loving mother."

A Palo Alto, California mother of two, Radl speaks from experience. She laughingly admits to being "the only mother on the block who hasn't been to a shrink." Her balanced outlook on mothering can be attributed to a supportive husband and outlets which include founding a parental stress hotline and spearheading a grassroots movement dedicated to upgrading the image of mothering in the media.

"Mothering is not easy. It is not a genetically-endowed skill. What it takes is the wisdom of Solomon, the patience of Buddha and the love of, you guessed it, a mother," maintains Radl. Mothering experiences differ with each family, but Radl would like to see a parental coping course become standard indoctrination for prospective parents.

"No one ever warns parents-to-be about things like noise pollution. A crying baby can send a mother right over the brink, if she thinks it is unnatural to be bothered by wailing." In fact, Radl feels items like disposable diapers have preserved the sanity of more than one young mother.

While empathizing with mothers in general, Radl has a special feeling for supermoms. "Pity them all," she sighs. "They are creating needless anxieties by taking that best-of-all-worlds approach to life. Kids should be enjoyed even if housekeeping suffers. After all, no one ever died from dust balls."

"If I can help just one mother to relax and have a little fun," explains Radl, "then we all benefit."

In her research and studies, Radl has found that most child abuse incidents occur at the dinner hour. "It's no surprise," she asserts. "Dinner time means kids are ornery and hungry, and tension's running high in anticipation of Daddy's arrival."

"On top of that are the phone calls. It's a little known fact, but just ask any mother, when dinner time arrives, the phone starts ringing. Do we want to buy carpeting, life insurance, get our furniture reupholstered at a discount, or contribute to the fund for unhappy mothers?"

Fortunately, the cure for this danger zone is a simple one, Radl advises. "Hang up. You can either take the phone off the hook, or develop a special code of rings for your husband and friends to use."

To make the dinner hour less of a pressure cooker, Radl finds the following helpful:

Don't Cook: bring dinner in. Everybody from cook to dishwasher gets a reprieve from chores.

Start Early: prepare as much of the meal as possible while children are playing outside or napping.

Take a Hike: get the kids out of the house while cooking, either for a walk around the block or have your partner take them for a drive to pick up milk or a newspaper.

Plan a Picnic: the kids will think eating on paper plates is a real treat. Let them invite some friends over and make it a party.

Serve Soup: when your timing's off, placate them with soup while the entree is cooking.

"Forewarned is forearmed," summarizes Radl. "If we develop a faculty for recognizing impending danger zones, we'll be able to redirect our energies which makes for a happier household."

Every job has its occupational hazards, and for mothers, the dinner hour is just one crisis time... the end of summer vacation and rainy days are also sure bets to raise tension levels. Radl recommends that Mom drop the children off at a sitter and take "time out" for her own interests.

Kentuckian To Produce Thanksgiving Special

KET offers viewers an alternative to the sports extravaganzas of Thanksgiving Day with a look at how Americans around the country are celebrating this traditional holiday.

Louisville native Eleanor Bingham Miller will be on hand in the Washington studios of anchor station, WETA-TV, to help produce the special "America At Thanksgiving 1980," airing at 2 p.m. on KET. Miller is co-owner of the production house, Image Audio, Inc., which first conceived the idea for the program.

The two-hour program, distributed nationally by the Public Broadcasting Service (PBS), will be a live broadcast, originating from six different locations around the country via satellite.

During the show, viewers visit six different holiday gatherings: a traditional turkey dinner with a Nebraskan farm family; a black gospel church service in Tallahassee, Fla.; an annual Massachusetts fox hunt; the gambling and restaurant scene at the M.G.M. Grand Casino in Las Vegas; Thanksgiving dinner with members of the Last Gasp Motorcycle Club and their families in Boston; and, dinner with inmates at a juvenile detention home near San Francisco.

Jimmy Breslin, New York Daily News columnist, will host the show and will appear on camera from his seat in the control room of WETA-TV to question the people attending the different gatherings, stimulate dialogue between locations (Tallahassee will talk to San Francisco, Boston to Las Vegas) and explain the processes involved in creating and producing this live satellite broadcast.

An improvisational musical group will also be present in the Washington, D.C., studios to provide musical bridges between the segments.

Producer Miller, who describes the logistics of the live satellite broadcast from multiple locations as "hair-raising," is excited nonetheless by the unscripted, unrehearsed aspect of the show. According to Miller, the program is rooted in the live broadcast traditions of programs like Edward R. Murrow's "Person To Person," and "Wide, Wide World," but with a new twist—multiple originations thanks to modern satellite technology.

"America At Thanksgiving 1980" is produced by Image Audio, Inc. Leslie Shatz, partner with Miller in Image Audio, Inc., is executive producer.

On And Off Water: An Explanation

Due to the water trouble at Martin the past three weeks, I was unable to pay my utilities the past month at the laundromat, car wash and flower shop. I wish to thank almost all customers for being so nice and going along and to let them know that the leaks, breaks, errors, misjudgements and highway construction has about all been corrected, and that the water has been restored to normal service. So, come on, let's wash. THE WATER'S ON!

Kentuckian To Produce Thanksgiving Special

Legend accords the first Thanksgiving observance in North America to a group of Pilgrims at a lonely settlement called Plymouth, who gathered to celebrate their first year of survival with prayer and feasting. The day didn't receive official recognition until 1863, when President Lincoln proclaimed Thanksgiving a national holiday to be celebrated on the last Thursday of November. During Franklin Roosevelt's Presidency the date was moved up to the fourth Thursday in November to allow more time for the Christmas shopping season.

But Kentucky's day of Thanksgiving historically was way ahead of the national celebration. Gov. Robert P. Letcher declared "a day of prayer, praise and thanksgiving" to be celebrated in Kentucky on September 26, 1844. It was one of his last acts before leaving office, since his successor was to be elected only a few weeks later.

According to a report in a Frankfort newspaper, the state's capital city observed the day with morning and evening church services. The paper stated that "from what we have seen and heard, the excellent practice of keeping a day of Thanksgiving may now be considered as firmly established in Kentucky." Business houses of

Toll-Free Lines Open For Veterans' Questions

Kentucky veterans who have questions about their claims or benefits from the Veterans Administration can call toll-free to their regional office in Louisville.

Veterans in Louisville and Lexington need dial only a local number which will put them in touch with the veterans benefits division of the regional office, Lee Caudill, director of the office said.

Other veterans in the state can call toll-free by dialing 1-800-292-4562.

In Lexington the local direct line is 253-0566, and in Louisville veterans should call 584-2231.

the town were generally closed, wrote Kentucky historian Bayless Hardin in 1947.

Hardin noted that, because of the upcoming election, "the papers were full of Henry Clay, who was running for President of the United States."

Hardin added that some people spent the day at the races in Lexington; the fall meet was drawing to a close and "great crowds flocked there to see the best horses of the day match their speed and stamina with those of neighboring and distant planters."

Neither the newspaper nor Hardin mentioned a typical menu for the day. Perhaps turkey, dressing, cranberry sauce and pumpkin pie were later additions to the holiday. But, according to Hardin, it is known that in 1844 "there were no Indians" to gather with Kentuckians for their first Thanksgiving.

Gabriel Slaughter, the sixth governor of Kentucky, died in the old governor's mansion.

Cancer Commission Re-organized

Dr. Grady Stumbo, secretary of the Department for Human Resources, has told the new members of the Kentucky Cancer Commission "to come together with priorities and get the work done."

The commission, which has been in limbo since July, met for the first time since new members were appointed by Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. in October. One of the appointees is Dr. Gan Madidiar, of Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin.

Other commission members are: Sen. Robert Martin, D-Richmond, chairman; Josephine Dye, Ashland, vice-chairman; Dr. Ralph Tesseneer, Highland Heights, secretary treasurer; Rep. Jerry Lundergan, D-Lexington; Joan White, Cadiz; Dr. Peter Bosomworth, representing the University of Kentucky; and Dr. Harold E. Boyer representing the University of Louisville.

The commission presently has about $500,000 to work with after $1.5 million was removed from its trust fund by executive order of the governor to help tighten the state's budget.

The commission unanimously voted to seek an attorney general's opinion regarding the legality of such a removal of funds from a trust.

Announce Birth

Mr. and Mrs. Delmer Ousley, of Prestonsburg, announce the arrival at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, on Nov. 5, of their first child, a daughter. The baby has been named Tiffany Lynn. The maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Ousley, of Spurlock, and the paternal grandparents are Frank Meadows and Lucille Meadows, of Prestonsburg.

Columbia Gas Offers Tips On Fuel Saving

Autumn frosts have ended October's warm Indian summer and the "buffer zone" between summer's low-volume residential use of natural gas and the sizeable volumes needed to heat homes in winter.

The colder it is outside, the harder home heating systems must work and the more fuel they'll need to keep us warm.

Using more gas, and the fact that energy prices, like most others, have risen since last winter, means that making the best use of the least possible gas is more important than ever.

To help its customers ease the impact of winter heating costs on their budgets, Columbia Gas of Kentucky is offering a 31-page booklet filled with information on energy and useful tips on how to cut energy use.

The free "Everyday Energy Saver's Guide" has suggestions for saving natural gas, electricity and gasoline. It's available at Columbia offices.

"Watching cold-weather patterns can help customers plan their household budgets for heating bills," Jack Stumbo, Prestonsburg manager for Columbia Gas, said today.

"The cost effects of today's weather will show up in customers' bills as much as 30 to 60 days from now," the manager said, "depending on when their meters are read."

"Area residents should use these final days before the frigid winter to weatherproof their homes."

We have your best interest at heart.

Plan To Help State Needy With Heating Bills Submitted

Kentucky's plan for helping low-income people pay winter heating bills has been submitted to the federal government for approval.

The state's Department of Human Resources developed the plan and will be responsible for administering Kentucky's participation in the federal Home Energy Assistance Program. Department officials believe the plan is "tailored to do the best job for Kentuckians."

The department has been informed it will receive almost $24 million for distribution to low-income households. The Human Resources Department's Bureau for Social Insurance will begin taking applications on Jan. 5.

Human Resources has requested Kentucky be allowed to waive two federal program requirements. One stipulates that benefit payment amounts be based on energy cost and type.

"We feel the requirement would be unfair to the people who apply for aid through this program," said W.L. Huffman, Commissioner for social insurance. "In many areas of Kentucky, two or more utility companies serve the same county and each company has a unique rate structure. Those companies or individuals who sell coal or wood base their charges on the going rates. The charges vary and overlap. Our plan contends that all eligible households should be approved for payments based on income and degree of responsibility for energy costs."

The state plan also requests waiver of regulations requiring utility companies and other fuel vendors participating in the program to follow specific procedures for service termination notices, pre-termination hearings and billing procedures.

"In Kentucky, utilities are governed by the state's Energy Regulatory Commission," said Huffman. "We feel that imposing dual regulations on utilities would impose increased costs on them and ultimately these costs would be passed on to consumers."

Huffman said the department has received "the utmost cooperation" from utility companies participating in energy assistance programs during the past two winters. "They have been most helpful in making sure low-income families have payment schedules they can meet," he said.

Because the program's requirements would require extensive and costly changes in their computerized billing procedures, many utility companies throughout the state have said they may be unable to participate in the Home Energy Assistance Program this winter if the waiver request is not approved.

Several weeks ago, Human Resources submitted a waiver request asking that the state be exempt from matching federal program administration dollars. That request already has been approved for all states. Kentucky will be allowed to spend up to 7.5 percent of its total allocation for administration costs.

Huffman said he anticipates no changes in the income maximum and benefit amounts established by the department. "We have tried to set eligibility income levels to provide assistance to as many eligible households as possible and to provide amounts that can be a significant help to them in meeting the high costs of winter heating," he said. Huffman estimates the program will serve 120,000 Kentucky households, approximately one-third of those that may be eligible.

The plan sets income maximums as follows:

Family Size	Monthly	Yearly
1	$395	$4,739
2	$589	$7,060
3 or more	$808	$9,690

Huffman explained that households are considered fully responsible for their heating costs if they pay their total heat bills directly or if they rent non-subsidized housing and pay rent payments that include heating costs.

Partially responsible households are those who rent subsidized housing and do not pay heating costs directly but are charged during the program's operation for energy costs exceeding those normally covered by rent payments. Also included in this category are renters of subsidized housing who are not fully protected against increases in energy costs.

Certain housing authorities will be eligible to receive benefits on behalf of eligible tenants. Benefit amounts will be based on monthly heating costs or an amount determined by a federal formula, he said.

Under the plan, each applicant is eligible for only one payment during the program's operation. The benefit amount will be paid without regard to the recipient's actual cost or obligation.

If the federal government does not approve the department's waiver request, payments may vary by fuel type, said Huffman.

Payments to households using non-continuous billing energy sources (those who purchase wood or oil as it is needed, for example) will be made by one-party check to the household for the full benefit amount. Payment to households using continuous billing energy sources (those who receive monthly bills from a utility company, for example) will be made by two-party check to the household and the vendor for the full benefit amount.

Of course, said Huffman, if the waiver request affecting the utility companies is denied, all payments will be made directly to the eligible households.

Huffman stressed that people do not have to be in a "crisis situation" to receive benefits through the Home Energy Assistance Program. "In the past, we have offered programs that help only when a household is in danger of utility cut-off," he said. "Eligibility for this program is based solely on income, resources and family size. Those families hit hardest by skyrocketing fuel costs don't have to wait until they face a utility or fuel supply cut-off to get assistance."

Huffman said the social insurance staff has conducted extensive outreach efforts during the past several months. Because of the publicity, he said, the program's funds may be exhausted very quickly.

He plans to go to several social insurance field offices on the first application day, Jan. 5.

About the House

The Child's Room: Color With Care

If you are thinking about painting your child's room, here's how to help you reflect your child's own personality in the new decorating process:

- Consult your child first. Have him select his favorite colors and listen to his decorating ideas. Then work with him to decide what you will paint and what colors would work best.

- One way of separating a room into different areas is to paint the furniture in those areas different colors. For example, furniture in the reading area can be one color, in the toy area another color.

- If you have two children who are sharing a room, you can paint their furniture different colors. If they are sharing a dresser, paint the drawers different colors to help them distinguish their own.

- Before painting furniture, it's a good idea to wash and sand it. Use a semi-gloss or gloss paint for furniture and a flat paint on the walls.

Take Advantage of Good Scents

Any house is bound to contain a variety of odors, and some of them are not too pleasant. If you want to keep your house smelling fresh all the time, here's how to fight those offensive odors and keep them from returning:

- Good cleaning is the best and surest way to keep things smelling fresh. Be sure to wash out all garbage cans thoroughly and use plastic rather than paper bags to line them. Clean the inside of your refrigerator and wipe down pantry shelves on a regular basis.

- Good ventilation in all rooms is important. An exhaust fan in the kitchen will help remove cooking odors and leaving windows open a crack or more will air out other rooms.

- Besides baking soda to keep the inside of your refrigerator smelling fresh, a few pieces of charcoal will keep odors at a minimum also.

- A bowl of vinegar in the kitchen will help reduce cooking odors; in the living room, it will help remove the scent of stale tobacco.

- Air sweeteners can be useful, but their effects are often temporary. Most air sweeteners are available in an aerosol can or wick form.

- A good way to scent your house is the natural way. Use pine cones, incense, fresh flowers or a fireplace full of hickory chips.

A Whole House Light Switch

There's a new system on the market now that allows you to control all the lights in your house by pushing a single button. And that button can be located next to your bed for added convenience.

The system consists of a single command console and several ancillary modules. These modules can be plugged into a wall outlet or they can be wired in place of a toggle switch. Lamps and appliances can be plugged into the modules. A remote control device allows you to turn the lights on and off like you would turn a TV set on and off.

The command module has 10 buttons. Each button controls a different module. This means that by pushing the individual buttons, you can turn on and off specific lights and appliances all over the house. There is also a main button that controls all of the lights at the same time.

What are the advantages to having a whole-house light switch? If you are upstairs at night and hear a strange noise downstairs, you can flood the house with light before you set a foot out of bed. This would certainly scare a burglar, and, if nothing else, reassure you if you are alone in the house. You can be sure that all the lights are out at night to save on energy. You can even turn on the coffeemaker in the morning before you get up.

What are the disadvantages? The only problem with the system occurs when you and your neighbors share the same pole transformer and all of you have the system. Because the signal travels over house wiring and even out of the house, you can turn your neighbor's lights on and off, too, if he happens to have the system in his house. This problem can be corrected by coding your system differently from your neighbor's.

Telephones Aid The Handicapped

If you have a problem using the telephone because of a physical impairment, you may not be aware of the special services that can help you. Here are a few of the ones available:

For the hearing impaired, a telephone with an adjusting wheel on the handset can amplify the voice being received. A different model is also available for the person with a severe hearing loss. It has a high volume button that provides even more amplification.

A special bone conduction receiver that transmits sound vibrations to the inner ear is helpful for those persons who hear better by bone conduction.

Because many hearing impaired individuals cannot tell when the phone is ringing, Bell Telephone has devised some alternatives to the ordinary telephone bell or ring. One concentrates all of the sound in a frequency range which most people with impaired hearing can hear. Another is a very loud bell which can be heard over high-level background noise and over long distances. You can also get a lamp indicator that visually shows when the phone is ringing. Another special unit can be attached to any lamp; it will flash the lamp on and off as the phone is ringing.

For individuals with impaired speech, Bell Telephone can provide a special receiver with an adjusting wheel that increases the volume of the speaker's voice. The volume can be turned down for someone with normal speech.

The Bell System has also developed a special electronic larynx for persons who have lost the use of their larynx. Sound is produced when the electronic larynx is placed against the throat.

Warm Up To Bathroom Heaters

To keep your bathroom warm without turning up the central thermostat in your home, invest in a bathroom heating unit that uses only minimal electricity and that can be turned on and off as needed.

There are many different types of bathroom heaters. Some models are installed on the ceiling and some directly onto the bathroom wall. Some can provide fan-forced heat and some give infrared heat.

Other models combine the convenience of heat, fan and light. The heater and ventilator have their own plug-in motors that allow you to control them individually. You should be able to find economically priced models that are also easy to install.

Staying Safe From Lightning

Every year, over 18,000 homes in this country are damaged or destroyed by lightning. No one can predict exactly when and where lightning will strike, but there are precautions you can take to protect your family and household from danger during a lightning storm.

When lightning strikes a house, it can start a fire, splinter wood beams and blow out windows. Fires are usually started when lightning hits the chimney or TV antenna on the roof. The bolts jump from there to house wiring or plumbing.

Lightning rods installed correctly will direct the lightning to the ground. If you live in a vulnerable area, such as the top of a hill or on open land, have a good lightning protection system installed on your house by a professional.

If you are at home during a lightning storm, do not stand on your porch or at an open window. Avoid using the telephone, the television, and other appliances during the storm. Also, postpone taking a bath or doing the dishes until the storm is over.

If you happen to be outside when a lightning storm begins, avoid hilltops and high places. Stay away from lone trees, flagpoles, towers and metal fences. Beware of unprotected shelters that might attract lightning. Don't swim during a storm and stay out of open boats.

You can learn to recognize an approaching lightning storm before it strikes. Look for large anvil-shaped clouds and listen for thunder in the distance.

Low-Interest Mortgage Rates To Qualified Buyers

We care about the housing needs of Floyd County and Eastern Kentucky. That's why we've been the leading lending institution under the Floyd County Bond Program, with loans closed and committed in excess of $4,000,000.00, and why we've processed nearly $2,000,000.00 worth of Kentucky Housing loans since 1979.

Now The Bank Josephine, in conjunction with Kentucky Housing Corporation, has additional funds available for use by qualified home buyers. And our lending staff is prepared to see that all these funds are committed before the December 31 deadline!

So if you're in the housing market and can meet the following criteria, chances are that you qualify for a low-interest Kentucky Housing loan. And that's very important with today's conventional interest rates!

1. Total purchase price of home (new or used) cannot exceed $52,000.00.
2. Gross annual income may not exceed:
 - a. $19,000 per year for single person
 - b. $20,000.00 per year for married couple (families may add an additional $1,000.00 for each child).

Even if you feel you don't qualify, we still have Floyd County Bond funds available in addition to most conventional loan programs. For further details or information, call our Mortgage Loan Department at 886-9101. Let us help. Because we care.

Heritage Foundation Urges Decalogue Not Be Purged

To provide direction to Kentuckians who want to know what to do in the wake of the recent Supreme Court decision on the Ten Commandments, the Kentucky Heritage Foundation has sent a letter to some 15,000 individuals, churches, and organizations which helped put the Ten Commandments in their schools.

The letter also argues:

All 21,000 framed copies of the Ten Commandments posted in Kentucky schools have been placed there under a law (KRS 160.580) which permits local school boards to receive gifts for the good of the school.

As long as the Ten Commandments are prominently displayed in the U.S. Supreme court chambers and the White House, it will be hard to convince people that the court's decision was meant as a license to obliterate Biblical writings from public places.

It urges them to do two things:

1. Contact Atty. Gen., Steve Beshear and Superintendent of Public Instruction Raymond Barber and urge them to file a motion for a rehearing before the U.S. Supreme Court.
2. Since the Supreme Court did not ban the display of the Ten Commandments in schools or any other public buildings, but merely struck down Kentucky's law requiring the state to collect funds, print and post the plaques, to remind Mr. Beshear not to misconstrue this ruling by issuing an opinion which would cause the Ten Commandments to be purged from the schools.

Present-Election Comment

Answering Mr. Wiley—in last week's paper, yes, the voters of our country got the straw, and we needed more to pick the rotten peanuts out of our country.

'Tis The Season To Be Prudent'

A white Christmas can turn into holiday blues if you overspend and go into debt. But it doesn't have to be that way.

Christmas needn't mean worrying how to pay for it. It just means making a budget, using the principles that make sense the rest of the year.

First, figure available funds. How much money can be squeezed from normal operations? And end-of-year bonuses or tips? If so, write them down.

Presents will probably take the lion's share of expenses, so list recipients with gift ideas and a price range for each. Then figure holiday costs for food, entertaining, travel, decorations, Christmas cards and postage.

Now you can tell if there's enough to cover estimated costs. If so, carry out your plan. If not, go back to the drawing board—or into savings.

If you can't afford Christmas, how can you afford to finance it? It's a question seldom asked. But if you borrow for Christmas, it costs more than cash. It can cost your holiday happiness.

Notice how the cost of not saving keeps going up? When you need cash and haven't saved it, you have to borrow. You have to pay top dollar to use someone else's money. That's why it makes so much sense to put a few dollars away each month in the Payroll Savings Plan or in a Bond-a-Month allotment.

You can buy U.S. Savings bonds and receive interest on your own money. Or you can pay it out on someone else's. White Christmas or holiday blues—it's your choice.

HONORED ON BIRTHDAY

Jessica Walters was honored on her fifth birthday with a party given at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Walters, at Emma, November 23. The house was decorated in keeping with the occasion. Birthday cake and other refreshments were enjoyed by the little honoree, her parents, her sister, Jennifer Walters, her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Wells and Mrs. Bonnie Walters, and other relatives: Mrs. Stuart Stephens and son, Ray, Michael Leslie, Linda Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Wells and daughters, Charlotte and Stephanie, James Wells and David Walters. The honoree received many gifts, including a record player from her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walters.

Donations Needed

A November 18 fire destroyed the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Beverly in Johnson county, including all their furniture and clothing. The family is in great need of any kind of furniture, clothing or any type donation to help them through this difficult period. Anyone wishing to contribute can get in touch with them at Glen's Carpet Center, 789-5649.

Mrs. Beverly is the former Betty Meadows, granddaughter of Edith Spurlock Crisp, of Prestonsburg. Floyd countians wishing to help out may also call Mrs. Crisp at 886-2269.

$3 Million Education Center Named for Former Floyd Man

The $3 million Foster "Sid" Meade Area Vocational Education Center at Vanceburg was dedicated last Sunday afternoon. The center was named for the Floyd county native who now is superintendent of Lewis county schools.

Keynote address at the dedication was given by Raymond Barber, state superintendent of public instruction.

The Meade Vocational Education Center has been under construction for the past year and opened August 14, with classes in welding, business and office, auto mechanics and automotive body.

Prior to the opening of the vocational school, students in Lewis county had to be bused to Maysville, approximately 35 miles away, according to Supt. Meade.
