

Waste System Operation Seen In 1-2 Months

Turkey Cr. Citizens In Landfill Vicinity Bar Garbage Trucks

A state construction permit has been given for the county landfill at Garth and the long-awaited, often-promised countywide garbage pickup should be operational "in a month or so," County Planner Dick Leslie said this week.

But for residents living near the county's existing dumps, the opening of the new landfill, whenever it comes, will not come soon enough.

A number of Turkey Creek residents took matters into their own hands recently, picketing the landfill there and turning back all garbage trucks. And this week the owner of the Little Mud Creek dump site took steps to see that garbage from District 4 only was dumped there.

Mrs. Nora Martin, who lives a short distance below the Turkey Creek landfill, said she and several neighbors stationed themselves at the entrance to the site two weeks ago and asked truck drivers not to dump there. The drivers, including county and Prestonsburg city contractors, complied without incident, she said.

When Prestonsburg police, escorting a city truck, arrived "to enforce the law," Mrs. Martin said, she reminded them that the dump had long ago been declared illegal by state environmental authorities. The sanitation crew and police turned back after a radio conversation with Prestonsburg City Manager David Evans, she said.

Leslie confirmed this week that the county had temporarily suspended its dumping on Turkey Creek, diverting garbage to sites on Little Mud and Stumbo Hollow, near Drift, instead. County equipment was being moved in this week to clean up the Turkey Creek site with a view to re-opening it, he said.

In the meantime, Bobby Spurlock, who leases the Little Mud site to the county for the dumping of District 4 garbage, was reportedly upset that garbage from other sections of the county was being dumped there. Cas Spurlock, his father, was said to have turned back the offending haulers Monday.

GARBAGE SPILLING into Turkey Creek from the county landfill there is a hazard to neighbors' health, according to Mrs. Nora Martin, who led a group in picketing the site recently.

ROAD ON ANDY ALLEN Branch of Middle Creek was in much better condition before South Central Bell laid a phone cable along its length last year, insists Richard Ousley, right, pictured here with his son Charles. Largely because of Ousley's complaints, the Floyd fiscal court recently began to insist that the phone company post a performance bond before laying cable on county roads.

"No Meddling," Answer to Plea Made for Union

Prestonsburg city councilmen Monday night turned down a request by striking workers to intervene in their labor dispute with Highlands Hospital.

A resolution proposed to the council by Marlene Webb, a laboratory technician and a member of District 1199, National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees, would have called on both the union and hospital administrators to resume negotiations immediately, make compromises in their positions, and "stay at the bargaining table until an agreement is reached."

Despite Webb's insistence that the union was not asking the council to take sides in the dispute, council members could not be persuaded to adopt the resolution.

While the council "would like nothing better than to see the strike settled, it would be presumptuous of us to ask both sides to compromise when we are not familiar with the issues," Councilman Estill Lee Carter told the union delegation. "To adopt the resolution would be meddling on our part," he said.

A recommendation by Mayor Harold Cooley to reappoint David Hereford and Roberta Davidson to the Archer Park Commission was approved by council, seven votes to one, over the strong objection of Councilman Bill Ray Collins.

The council approved the appointments without discussion.

A recommendation to appoint Blaine Hall to the Prestonsburg Housing Commission was approved without dissent.

Pending a longer-term arrangement later, the council voted to contribute $500 toward the salary of a bus driver for the Archer Park Senior Citizens' Center. As a result of budget cuts, federal funding for the driver, a CETA employee, will be discontinued at the end of this month. The fiscal court will also contribute to the driver's salary, it was indicated.

City Manager David Evans presented to the council a request by the city's auxiliary police for a resolution that would have required hiring of the auxiliaries for security at all special events held on city property. The council denied the request, arguing that, while the city might require that organizations make adequate provisions for security at events held in the city, it could not properly require them to hire the auxiliary police in that capacity.

Consumer complaints about poor television reception in the city would have to be more specific before the council could intervene in the matter, it was said. Citizens with specific com- (See Story No. 4, Page 4)

Hall Says Land Report Has Some Inaccuracies

A widely publicized study of land ownership patterns in Appalachia paints an inaccurate picture, at least as far as this county is concerned, Lovel Hall, property valuation administrator, said this week.

The study, which was financed by an Appalachian Regional Commission grant and reported on 80 Appalachian counties, was conducted over two years by a coalition of citizen groups called the Appalachia Land Ownership Task Force.

Absentee corporations own much of the region's natural wealth and pay disproportionately low taxes on it, the report concluded.

While absentee ownership is high and the tax on unmined coal is so low as to make it hardly worth collecting, Hall conceded, the taxes on surface acres owned by absentee corporations represent their fair share of the tax burden here, he argued.

Twenty-six percent of Floyd county's surface, and minerals underlying 34 percent of the surface, are owned by corporate, public or private absentees, according to the study. The top 10 surface owners here were said to control 46,066 acres, or 18 percent of the county, and to pay 1.38 percent of the property tax collected here.

While those figures may be accurate, Hall said, much of the land in question is vacant hillside. To compare it with the taxes paid on smaller, improved properties is "to compare apples and oranges," he said.

For more meaningful figures, the land study researchers would need to have compared the county tax rolls with descriptions of the taxed properties on file here, a task that Hall estimated would take about six months to complete. Joey Childers, the researcher who gathered the land ownership and tax data for this county, spent only two days here, he said.

Childers' unfamiliarity with the property tax rolls here also led to inaccuracies in his record of the county's top surface and mineral owners, Hall said.

The Elkhorn Coal Company listed, after two government agencies, as the top surface owner here, paid $10,945 in taxes on its 6200 acres in Floyd county, not the $2573 reported in the study; much of the Joe Trimble estate has since been divided among his heirs; and taxes on the Richmond estate, reported as $319.51, actually amounted to $2335 in the year under study, according to the tax commissioner.

National Mines, listed as the top mineral owner here, was reported in the study to have paid no taxes on the 19,087 mineral acres the company was said to own here. In fact, the company has 9084 mineral acres in this county and paid $5565 in tax on the property, Hall said.

BE BEHOLDEN

The beauty of this April leaves me flabbergasted enough to spare my reader (?) that ecstatic drivel that I can't resist when I stop and do a bit of beholding. So I give, instead, this advice: Take a long look every so often, yourself. And as a beholder be beholden for it all.

FORMULA

Comes to this desk a much-traveled formula for how to know you're growing old, Maggie. Some of these tips follow.

Everything hurts, and what doesn't hurt doesn't work.

The gleam in your eye is from the sun hitting your bifocals.

You feel like the night before, but you haven't been anywhere.

You get winded playing chess.

You know all the answers but nobody asks you the questions.

You look forward to a dull evening.

You turn out the lights for economic rather than romantic reasons.

Your knees buckle but your belt won't.

and at the conclusion of the games there will be an auction where the students will be able to use their "winnings" to bid on a number of gifts donated by local merchants.

On Friday night, April 17 a Talent and Queen Contest will be held at the Prestonsburg Elementary School auditorium beginning at 8 p.m.; talent acts and queen candidates from each school will compete.

Prospects Slim For Settlement Of Strike Here

The strike by hospital workers at Highlands Regional Medical Center enters its fourth week today (Wednesday), with no prospects for a resolution of the dispute in sight.

As patience on both sides wears thin, reports of violence persist, and each side accuses the other of being responsible for the breakdown in contract negotiations.

The union, District 1199, National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees, is still awaiting an administration response to its contract proposal, according to Larry Daniels, president of the hospital union chapter. The hospital's refusal to respond reflects its unwillingness to resolve the (See Story No. 7, Page 4)

At 89 Still Minding the Store

The shelves are not as well stocked now—just some canned goods, tobacco, cold soda pop and the like. Better roads and super markets have weakened the role of the neighborhood grocery and country store and Collins' Grocery at Lackey is no exception. But the kids still run in for a pack of gum and residents nearby stop for an "emergency" can of beans or corn from time to time so that the old store is able to keep its doors open.

Really, Mary Collins, owner-operator of the business, is not that concerned with the money. "Just so long as I can make enough to pay the rent," is the way she described the extent of her financial concerns. It's just that her life has been tied to the store for the past 67 years, and at age 89 she's not about to get out now.

It wasn't long after Mary Patrick from Salt Lick and Jonas Collins from Steele's Creek at Wayland were married that they got into the store business. In 1914 they established a business at Garrett where they stayed for six years. Then they moved their inventory to the present location at Lackey, only to lose the store to fire. Mrs. Collins and her late husband rebuilt on the same site and there it has stayed since 1925.

In those days the store sold a little of everything, according to Mrs. Collins, including dry goods and hardware along with the grocery stock.

"It was quite a bit different from grocery stores nowadays," Mrs. Collins pointed out. Flour and salt were measured and sold from barrels, as (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Court Promises Crackdown As Shoplifting Increases

As of today, April 15, Judge Harold J. Stumbo, of the Floyd district court, is, he says, cracking down—hard—on shoplifters.

Jail terms that heretofore have been eased by probation after defendants paid their fines and court costs will become very real. The full terms will be served. Fines ranging from $200 to $300 will also be collected.

"This shoplifting has got to stop," Judge Stumbo declared.

His decision to get tough, or tougher, followed a sharp increase in the number of persons arrested for the offense. Twelve persons—11 women and one man—had been booked in an eight-day period ending Monday for alleged thefts from Heck's Department Store alone.

Within a month, it was said at the county jail, 34 had been booked there.

Whether the increased number arrested is an indication of more shoplifting or greater effort to catch those guilty of the offense is not known. Stores hardest hit have hired security guards, and that obviously accounts for many of the cases reported.

Some shoplifters are coming from other counties. Most are women and most come here rather than to stores elsewhere in the county.

One woman was frank in her discussion that she came to Prestonsburg because "the word had got around that one store here was an easy touch."

Mine Stoppage Quiet in Floyd After 20 Days

As union representatives and bituminous coal industry negotiators began bargaining Tuesday in Washington, D. C., on the terms of a contract that might meet the approval of both sides to the controversy, the coal strike, in its 20th day, remained quiet and orderly in this county.

But the strike turned violent Monday in Letcher county. Rock-throwing at trucks near a coal tippie at Deane ended in gunfire. Gene Looney, 34, of Mayking, a UMW field representative working out of the Pikeville District 30 office, suffered a bullet wound in his thigh but was not seriously hurt.

Bobby C. Bates, Whitesburg, driver of a coal truck, was arrested after the shooting, and he also sustained a leg injury. Bates named Looney and Jerry Puckett, of Jenkins, in warrants. One report said Looney was attacked after he had arrived at the Whitesburg Appalachian Regional Hospital.

In this county mines remained idle and the coal truck traffic was at a minimum.

Few are hopeful that the talks resumed Tuesday will result in an early contract and resumption of work. Producers have coal stockpiles and aren't anxious, and the UMWA is demanding contract terms which may call for long debate.

The key issues involve the return to the contract of the $1.90-per-ton royalty on non-union coal processed at union tipples, the 45-day probation period for new workers and some adjustment about the leasing of mines.

IN APPRECIATION

A year ago, this week, my mother, Ollie Burchett, passed away. At that confused and broken-hearted time in our lives we tried to say thank you to all our friends who took time to care. It is said that time heals all wounds but anyone who has lost a loved one knows that it doesn't. Time only gives us a chance to think more rationally. Now that a year has passed—let me say thank you again for all the kindness shown us. I say this for all the family—my father, Glen Burchett, and all our children.

Praise For CPI Unit At McDowell Hospital

For the first time in our county there is an excellent Alcohol/Drug Treatment service. But there is some opposition to the place, which really disturbs me. Oh, the ignorance and prejudice of some people!

I am referring to the C.P.I. Unit at McDowell Hospital. A private, non-profit center, which provides a variety of Alcohol/Drug services for persons eighteen years of age and above (male and female). A residential treatment program—for twenty-eight days, with family involvement.

The professional staff includes alcoholism counselors, unit physicians, nurses and chaplaincy staff.

What more can I say, as the wife of a recovering alcoholic—and as a long-time resident of Floyd county?

Tribute To Sponsors

At this time, I would like to acknowledge two very special ladies who live in our community and have done a lot for a group of girls.

I would like to thank Mrs. Bonnie Spencer and Mrs. Sarah B. Allen for doing such a good job of sharing one year of their life with the Prestonsburg girls varsity cheerleaders. These two women have given large amounts of time and work to our cause and have given more kindness and love and more of themselves than any two women I have ever known. I love them for giving from within, and for not only helping us perfect our cheers, but for helping us to put our priorities in order and for teaching us our values and what the meaning of true friendship is. They have helped us to become not only a squad, but a family. The kind of family that goes to camp and cheers in the hot sun with Mrs. Allen following right behind and always being there to help and for Bonnie never missing a minute of practice and being an example of things we should do. Also for the many times, as a family we prayed together so that we would do what's right, be an example, and do our best. The Lord has definitely been good to us by letting us have the opportunity to be with these two wonderful people.

We, as a group, are more than blessed, and at this time, I would like to make it known to Bonnie Spencer and Mrs. Allen that I love you both so very much.

There IS a Way

West Virginia levies a tax of $2.75 per $100 valuation on its unmined coal, and its coal producers pay the same severance tax that is paid on Kentucky coal. Yet most Kentucky coal people resist an increase in severance tax, claiming the added burden would make Kentucky coal non-competitive with West Virginia's, although unmined coal in this state lies untaxed.

Most Kentucky coal leaders also oppose the proposed taxation of unmined coal but for another reason. It will be a difficult tax program to implement, they say, because thicknesses of the coal seams and the quality of the coal vary.

At the same time, Kentucky Energy Secretary William B. Sturgill, himself not long ago one of the state's leading coal operators, and certainly a friend of the industry, declares for both proposals—to increase the severance tax and to levy a tax on unmined coal. He says he thinks the coal business is profitable enough now, and will be in the future, to bear the added financial strain and in the meantime contribute to the state and its counties badly needed funds at a time when they are losing revenues from the federal government as well as from tax sources at home.

Mr. Sturgill rightly maintains that existing geological surveys provide enough information on coal seams to get started with unmined coal lands taxation while a full-scale taxation program is being developed. State Senator Benny Ray Bailey suggests that a start could be made by taxing unmined coal lands at the rate paid by owners of the surface, so that taxes could be collected from this source while a more comprehensive tax program is being perfected.

There are those who argue that it will be difficult to identify many owners of this unmined coal, not to mention the problem of placing accurate values on it. Nobody doubts that a tax program such as this will be hard to implement, but none of these problems justify abandonment of the idea—as the General Assembly has already done. After a levy of 31.5 cents per $100 valuation had been voted on unmined coal lands, the legislators at their next session reduced the tax to one-tenth of a cent, and at the next session dropped it altogether.

This legislative action, if it can be called action, smacks of craven surrender.

If the ownership and location of these lands is a chore tax officials would shun, could not the state, by law, solve the problem by refusing permits to mine any coal on which these taxes had not been paid every year since the law creating such taxation was enacted?

Nobody wants to kill the coal industry—not Harry Caudill who has so eloquently pleaded the cause of the people over the years, surely not Bill Sturgill. But every day that the acreage of unmined coal in Kentucky grows less the need for the industry to make a greater and more lasting contribution, particularly to the section of the Commonwealth that is yielding its resources to the industry, becomes more urgent.

If there is, to paraphrase the adage, a real desire to balance the scales, or even tilt them a bit toward the land that yields riches never to be regained, a way can be found to do it.

As Senator Bailey points out, "It doesn't make sense for the person who owns the land to pay tax on it while the person who owns the coal, where all the value is, pays none."

plaints could bring them before the council, Councilman Paul Phillip Hughes suggested.

An ordinance authorizing increases in water and sewage rates next year was approved by the council. The early authorization was required by federal regulations in order to permit release of Farmers' Home Administration funds for upgrading the water and sewer systems, it was explained.

While natural gas rates are also included in the ordinance, they are not dependent on the water system project and do not represent any increase over the existing rates, City Manager Evans said later.

The city will contribute $750 toward the purchase of fireworks for July 4 and the Chamber of Commerce will be asked to make a contribution as well according to a council decision.

In 1868 the first federal 8-hour-day law was passed by Congress. It applied only to laborers, workmen and mechanics employed by or on behalf of the United States Government, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U. S. Department of Labor.

The first strike by journey men occurred in 1768 in New York City as journeymen printers refused to work unless they received "three shillings and six pence per day with diet," according to a U. S. Department of Labor publication, "Labor Firsts in American."

dispute, he charged.

It is the union that is unwilling to negotiate, replies Russell Dean, assistant administrator at the hospital, who claims the union has never offered a formal, written counter-proposal to the hospital's original contract offer.

An informal union proposal, presented at the last bargaining session two weeks ago, called for a 72.5 percent increase in wages over the next two years and was completely unacceptable to the hospital administration, he said.

A union claim made this week that its proposed salary and benefits demands represent only a seven percent budget increase for the hospital over each of the next two years "could not be right," said Dean, in view of the fact that labor costs account for over 50 percent of the hospital budget.

The union cited a 100 percent turnover rate among hospital workers as evidence of poor working conditions there. Hospital spokesmen said the turnover rate was "25 to 30 percent" and within the normal range for the industry.

Meanwhile, hospital officials and strikers swore out warrants against each other this week, alleging various acts of violence. Hospital Comptroller Max Burnell was reportedly cited for wanton endangerment for allegedly trying to run a car off the road near Van Lear. Burnell complained of having shots fired at the tires of his car.

Four union members were booked at the county jail here Saturday, charged with criminal mischief after cars crossing the union picket line were allegedly damaged; a hospital security guard was charged with assaulting a picket, and the husband of a nurse anesthetist still working at the hospital was booked for allegedly threatening two union leaders.

While other area hospitals report heavier-than-usual occupancy rates, Highlands had only 28 patients in residence Tuesday.

was the brown, unrefined sugar of those times. "Green" coffee was the way you bought your morning brew then. "It was just the beans and you'd have to take them home and parch them and then grind the coffee yourself," she said. Salted meat and fish as well as smoked bacon were staples, and cheese was sold from big wheels.

"We didn't sell much in the way of vegetables then, since most people had their own gardens," Mrs. Collins recalled, although the store would regularly stock a variety of beans bought from local farmers.

Bartering was not yet a lost art in those days and Mrs. Collins spoke of trading groceries and other goods for hides, mayapple root, raw wool and ginseng. "They'd come in out of Quicksand, over in Knott county, riding horseback and in wagons loaded down with all that stuff," she recalls. "That was a long way to come in those days," she added.

The horse and mule were the primary means of travel during those first years of the store and she said that "before the railroad came through, we'd have to go all the way to Allen with a wagon to load up on things for the store."

With its big pot-bellied stove fired up in cold weather and straight back chairs in abundance, the place, like many country stores, served as a focal point. "People would sit around the stove until way in the night and just talk," Mrs. Collins recalled.

Credit was given freely back then, too, and apparently, it wasn't much of a gamble. "We'd credit anybody that'd come in and as far as I know nobody ever beat us out of a penny. Back then a man's word was his bond," she said. Things have changed, though, according to Mrs. Collins. "Lately, we've been beat plenty. More times than I've got fingers or toes," she added.

The store is a vital part of her life. A few years ago, she suffered a broken hip, but it wasn't long till she was using a walker to make her way back to her usual place of work. But her life has been more than the world of business—homemaking and motherhood came first. Her children are Mrs. George E. Evans, Jr., of Lexington; Gorman Collins; Prestonsburg radio station owner; Gordon and Charles Collins, of Lackey. Gordon Collins operates the family hardware business.

Mrs. Collins' store has changed. Gone are the sugar barrels and soda crackers, and pickup trucks have replaced the mule-drawn wagons. But the folks who still stop by Collins' Store know they can exchange greetings with Mary and walk away reassured that perhaps some things never change.

and Little Mud Creek landfills, and the inaccessibility of Stumbo Hollow on account of road conditions there, Prestonsburg is now forced to haul its trash to the Johnson county dump, near Thealka, said City Manager Evans.

Johnson county is charging two dollars a cubic yard, or about $60 a day, to take the city's garbage. The city normally pays $1150 annually for use of the Floyd landfills.

"This was a beautiful county until all this started," said Nora Martin, in reference to the opening of the Turkey Creek landfill. "It used to be such a clean place for children, but now we are in constant fear of their getting into the water."

Seepage from the dump drains directly into nearby Turkey Creek and garbage has been bulldozed into the creek along the perimeter of the site.

"You can smell the creek in the summer and maggots have been found in it," Mrs. Martin said. "We're afraid the children could get hepatitis, typhoid, anything, from it."

Officials of the Elk Horn Coal Company, which leases the site to the county, told her they would consider revoking the lease if the dumping was shown to be illegal, she said.

Anthony Moore, another Turkey Creek resident, said his environmental biology class at Alice Lloyd College had adopted the site as a class project. Students have taken samples from the creek for bacteriological analysis and chemical tests on a black ooze visible at the site were planned, he said.

Astor Hall, who lives near the Little Mud landfill, said the site had not been covered since last summer. Moreover, with the advent of drier weather, illegal burning of the refuse there has begun again, he said.

County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. acknowledged this week that the dumps are in poor sanitary condition, but said the present county administration had inherited the problem. While none of the sites is able to meet current environmental standards, proper management in the past would have prevented the worst of the present problems, he said.

County Planner Leslie said this week that the Garth Hollow site, which does meet environmental standards, is being prepared and will be open as soon as the state gives the final go-ahead. The site is being cleared, and silt ponds and diversion ditches have yet to be constructed there, he said.

Nearly 45 million women—more than half of all women 16 and over—are working or looking for work, reports a publication of the U. S. Department of Labor, "Perspectives on Working Women: A Databook."

WHO'S OLD?
 Glenn Burchett, one of the youngest 90-year-olds I know, paid us his annual visit this week, and by the time he left I was feeling maybe a year or so younger. This old friend hasn't let the years immobilize him. He drives his own truck, uses no eyeglasses except for reading, continues on the move, and only last week went fox-hunting.

I had thought he might have foregone this lifelong hunting pleasure, but he hits the ridges regularly. Says he has lost one of his buddies for those safaris to up there where the winds blow free since the day last year when Hansford Spears was pinned beneath a tractor and critically injured. But he and Ezra James continue to foxhunt and are looking forward to the time when Spears' recovery restores the threesome to full strength.

I would go hunting with them, myself, but fear being embarrassed by pulling up puffing during the hill-climb.

EIGHTY YEARS AGO

In 1901 J. C. W. Beckham was governor of Kentucky, H. V. McChesney was superintendent of public instruction and my father was superintendent of Floyd county schools.

That was a day when all 44 white schools and the one colored school in the county were valued at $14,351, and that included the grounds. The superintendent himself was paid an annual salary of $600 or less, and the average pay of teachers was $35.67 per month.

Teachers weren't distinguished by degrees in those days; they held first, second or third class teaching certificates which were earned by examination, not by attending college.

This old book which State Supt. McChesney caused to be published that year gives by statistics and narrative a pretty full picture of the situation in every county of the state. It even includes a list of the questions asked of those seeking teaching certificates that year.

Just to show you young whippersnappers that those old boys and girls who aspired to pedagogy some 80 years ago weren't the illiterates you might think, I reprint here a few of the questions and problems they had to face in the examination that year.

Take grammar, for a starter:

1. Define vowels, consonants, diphthong, triphthong and give an example of the last two.

2. Give a synopsis of the verb, "ride."

3. Analyze or diagram: Such as went to the fair were well entertained. (And so went the test for seven more questions, each of which was worth 10 per cent on the applicant's grade—if he or she came up with the correct answer.)

Then, to get a bit more basic, hone your wits on these problems in the arithmetic tests:

1. Define simple number, compound number, prime factor, greatest common divisor, improper fraction, sphere, circle, pyramid.

2. What sum loaned at 8% interest today will pay a debt of $538.80 two years, six months and 18 days hence?

3. Bought stock at 30% discount and sold it at 12% premium. How much did I gain on the investment of $1250?

4. If 10 men in 8 days of 12 hours each can dig a ditch 100 feet long, 8 feet wide and 6 feet deep, how many men in 12 days of 8 hours each can dig a ditch 120 feet long, 6 feet wide and 10 feet deep? (Incidentally, they gave 15% for solving that one.)

A few more like these samples and I would agree that those who faced such examinations were justified in hiring somebody to take the test, also, to serve as a prompter, as they often did.

dividual landholders did not figure in the list of top surface owners, apparently because most of his property is held in different partnerships and is thus filed in different places.

Hall granted, however, that the owner lists generally reflected fairly the county's major property owners.

Charges made by the researchers that up to a third of the property in some counties does not even appear on the tax rolls and that some tax assessors routinely grant agricultural exemptions to large landholding companies are not true of this county, Hall said.

With the completion of a Department of Revenue mapping project here two years ago, "ninety-nine percent of all property in Floyd county is on the tax rolls," he said. "We know who owns every tract," he added.

That is not true of mineral ownership, however, of which no records are available in the state. "The only people who have mineral maps are the companies who own the minerals," said Hall, confirming a claim made by the land study researchers.

Agricultural exemptions are not routinely applied here, and in fact only 14.2 percent of the county's acreage is so classified, compared with nearly 50 percent in some counties, he said.

The tax commissioner said he would favor the creation of a new tax on unmined coal, provided a way could be found to fairly place a value on it and provided smaller, owner-occupied tracts were exempt.

Mexican food is fast making its mark on America. Experts estimate that nearly 90 percent of all households now eat tacos as a regular part of the menu.

SYEP To Provide Up To 900,000 Jobs for Youth

Secretary of Labor Raymond J. Donovan announced that an estimated 850,000 to 900,000 economically disadvantaged youth, 14-21, will be hired this summer under the U. S. Department of Labor's Summer Youth Employment Program (SYEP).

Donovan said that $799 million is being apportioned among the 476 state and local governments serving as prime sponsors under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA). An additional $14 million will be available for jobs for Native American youth from tribes and reservations.

"This summer jobs program represents a sound investment in the disadvantaged youth of our nation," Secretary Donovan said.

"By providing them with useful summer job experiences," Donovan added, "we help these young men and women prepare themselves for productive adult lives."

"President Reagan, in his budget message, described the summer jobs program as one part of the nation's safety net for the truly needy."

The Secretary said the number of jobs set aside for disadvantaged youth this summer would total approximately 1.6 million to 1.8 million through a variety of sources, including the federal government's own summer aides hiring program, the National Alliance of Business, and the programs of community based organizations, all aided by the United States Employment Service and its 2,560 local Job Service offices.

The areas receiving the largest summer jobs allocations are New York city, $34 million; Chicago and Cook county, $30 million; and Los Angeles and Los Angeles County, $24 million. The Secretary pointed out that the extent of unemployment and poverty in each area governs that amount of funds allocated.

This is the 16th year of the program. It has served more than 10 million youth.

Under SYEP, youth get experience in a variety of job settings. These include X-ray, laboratory, medical, and dental assistants; library, teacher, museum, and legal aides; maintenance helpers; lifeguards; clerk-typists; junior coaches and counselors; and trainee positions in such skills as sheetmetal shaping, boilerroom operation and warehousing.

Last year's summer program provided jobs for about 800,000 youth at approximately 165,000 worksites. The jobs were available during late June, July, August, and early September.

Summer program participants are recruited from families determined to be "economically disadvantaged" on the basis of total family income.

... about your Social Security

SSI Recipients Records Received

The records of 25,000 SSI disability recipients, who were converted from state welfare disability rolls, are being reviewed to see if they continue to meet the criteria for disability, Jim Kelly, Social Security district director for the Big Sandy area, said recently.

In addition, an increasing number of social security disability beneficiaries are also having their records reviewed Kelly said. The purpose of the review or continuing disability investigation is to improve program management.

"Previously, disabled SSI recipients who were on state welfare rolls prior to January 1974, when the SSI program went into effect, had been excluded from such review," Kelly said.

A Continuing Disability Investigation involves a review of pertinent records to determine whether a recipient has recovered sufficiently so that he or she should no longer be considered disabled. Priority is being given to SSI recipients since there is reason to believe that some of them no longer meet the medical criteria for disability or blindness, Kelly said. In the case of converted SSI recipients, the state's disability criteria at the time they were found to be disabled continue to apply.

Ordinarily, "a Continuing Disability Investigation is conducted whenever earnings are posted to a person's social security record, there is medical improvement or return to work, when a medical reexamination is scheduled, or when new evidence indicates that the person is no longer disabled."

"Another reason for the review is because many awards are based on a temporary disability with an expected date of recovery," Kelly said.

Berea Nursing Course Stresses Spiritual Needs

"Back in the 60's, if a nurse had carried a copy of the New Testament in her pocket, she might have been considered a religious fanatic," according to Marlene Waller, assistant professor of nursing at Berea College. But that was before the recent emphasis on meeting the spiritual needs of patients, "Now, many nurses carry their Bibles to work—and they use them," she reports.

This year, Mrs. Waller taught Berea's first nursing course aimed solely at spiritual care. Eighteen nursing students were enrolled in the class which included weekly visits with patients at the skilled nursing facility at Berea Hospital and the local nursing home.

Course work included identifying and keeping lists of Bible verses that would be inspirational in certain situations, such as when a patient was lonely, depressed, experiencing guilt feelings or fear of death.

In addition, the class heard guest speakers, a hospital chaplain and a local pastor, who stressed that nurses, who are in frequent contact with patients, could be helpful to ministers in the recognition and referral of a patient's spiritual needs.

But because chaplains and ministers are not always available, and because illness and pain may block the patient's ability to pray, nurses need to be prepared to help cope with the situations that often accompany illness and death. Meeting those special needs sometimes means reading to patients, whether it is a favorite scripture or poetry, and praying with them. At other times, all the sick person may want is someone who will listen and understand.

"A good nurse is able to identify and meet physical needs. At the same time, however, she or he must be aware of psychosocial and spiritual needs," Mrs. Waller said.

Understanding and meeting spiritual needs is an important part of Berea's nursing education philosophy. "But in holistic nursing," Mrs. Waller continued, "the whole is greater than the parts. We teach our students to recognize and care for all the needs—biological, psychological, social, cultural and spiritual."

Debbie Clark, a senior nursing major who took the course, explained why she, as a prospective nurse, believed the course was beneficial. "Hospitalization is very traumatic. It's when a lot of people need religion most." Miss Clark, Vanceburg native, related a story about a woman she met last summer while working as a nurse technician at Mercy Hospital in Portsmouth, Ohio. "The patient, who was in her early 40's and dying of cancer, had become seriously ill so fast that she had not had time to go through the anger and grieving stages of dying." She commented further, "As I look back on that experience, I wish I had had the course a year earlier. Maybe I could have helped her more."

Berea's nursing program is the oldest at any college west of the Allegheny Mountains, dating back to 1899. It became the first collegiate degree program in Kentucky in 1956 when it was expanded to four years. The program has full accreditation from the National League for Nursing.

"We encourage our nursing students to feel comfortable about sharing values and religious convictions with their patients," Mrs. Waller said. "If a nurse sees a patient crying, praying or clasping a rosary, we think it is important to stop and talk or pray with the person. But we tell students to keep an eye on the intravenous tubes and monitoring equipment too."

State Offers Help On Noxious Weeds

Landowners with property adjacent to state-owned right-of-way may soon get relief from noxious weeds.

Kentucky's noxious weed law provides that the state will destroy noxious weeds on state-owned right of way at the request of the adjoining property owner.

The noxious weeds named in the law are Johnson grass, giant foxtail, Canada thistles, nodding thistles, and multiflora rose.

"Destroying the noxious weeds on just the right of way or just the adjoining property does not solve the problem," said George Franke, assistant state highway engineer. "Runners of windblown seed can cause the weeds to crop up again."

A joint effort between the state and the property owners must be made to destroy the noxious weeds, he said.

Landowners wishing to work with the Department of Transportation to rid their property of noxious weeds must submit a written application to the highway district office in their area. Applications and addresses of each district office will be located at the state highway maintenance barns.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Margie Osborne, who passed away three years ago, April 19, 1978.

You were wife, mother, grandmother, friend. Even tho you are gone, your precious memory lingers on, we miss you dearly everyday, more than words can say. We know you would never leave us alone, but God had a special need for you and He wanted you as an Angel to sit on His throne.

When the Lord took you, He took one of His best.

Love and sadly missed by, husband, children, grandchildren. 11.

College Hosts
 School Events

Business, music and science were the major topics of discussion on Pikeville College campus when approximately 350 elementary and high school students met for contests during the first week of April.

Forty students attended the American Private Enterprise System forum sponsored by the Pikeville College Center for Continuing Education, University of Kentucky Extension Service, Pike County Chamber of Commerce and the Pikeville Kwanis Club. Representatives from nine Pike county high schools and the Pikeville city schools studied the free enterprise system with local businessmen and attorneys. Bob Ford of Mountain Insurance Agency, Jim Pruitt of Pruitt and DeBourbon Law Firm, Reggie Smith of Industrial Fuels, Marrs Allen May and Daniel Stratton of Stratton, May & Hays Law Firm, Jim Polley of Pikeville Ready Mix and Patricia Bartley of Combs and Lester, PSC, discussed the various types of business.

Through testing, eight students were selected to represent Pike County in the APES forum to be held at the University of Kentucky during the summer.

Pikeville College also hosted the Solo Instrument and Ensembles Contest sponsored by the Kentucky Music Educators Association April 1, 2, & 3. Two hundred-twenty-five students represented 15 schools from Floyd, Wolf, Martin, Perry, Breathitt, Magoffin, Letcher, Johnson and Pike Counties.

Kathy Petot, a 1975 music graduate from Pikeville College and manager of the music festival for District 9, explained the judging process, "Students from grades six through twelve compete against standards not each other. Judges rate their talents superior, excellent, good or fair. These students are members of band and are usually judged with the band as a whole. This contest enabled each student to be recognized individually for their talent."

Two additional events have been scheduled at Pikeville College by the Kentucky Music Educators Association. Bands will be judged in concert and sight reading on April 18 and Vocal Solos and Ensembles, Choruses and Choirs will compete April 21.

The faculty and students of the science department at Pikeville college judged the Science Fair that was held in the Pikeville College gymnasium Friday, April 3. Students ages 5 through 18 who received blue ribbons from area schools competed to attend the state contest in Morehead.

Meeting To Discuss Brush Creek Fire Sub-Station Plan

A citizens' meeting has been scheduled for Tuesday, April 21, to discuss plans for the establishment of a sub-station of the Maytown Volunteer Fire Department in the Brush Creek section.

Maytown Fire Chief Edward F. Robinson stressed the need for increased fire protection in the relatively heavily populated Brush Creek section and pointed out that a sub-station would result in a considerable drop in annual fire insurance premiums for residents. "We hope some local people will volunteer to serve with the sub-station," Robinson said.

The meeting will be held at Ray Howard's Auction Barn at Hippo and will begin at 7 p.m. Additional information may be obtained by calling Monroe Vanderpool at Hippo.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT of throwing a block of coal at a passing vehicle, unidentified man in upper left corner of this picture, released last week by Highlands Regional Medical Center, was a member of a group picketing the hospital, according to information released with the photo, which stated that the coal shattered the windshield of a car driven by a non-striking nurse leaving the hospital at the end of a shift, shortly after 7:30 a.m. Monday, last week.

Mine Reclamation Program Needs Support, Dir. Says

A state environmental officer issued a plea here Tuesday for more public participation in a state program designed to reclaim abandoned mine sites.

The Abandoned Mine Land Program, which is funded from reclamation fees paid by coal operators, "will not work if people do not want it or do not feel the need for it," Dave Rosenbaum, director of the Department for Natural Resources' abandoned lands division, told a legislative committee meeting at May Lodge Tuesday afternoon.

The interim Joint Committee on Agricultural and Natural Resources heard explanations of the abandoned mine and small operator assistance programs prior to a tour of surface mining sites in the Jackson area today (Wednesday).

A state reclamation program still awaits approval of the federal Office of Surface Mining and is dependent on Kentucky's being granted primary responsibility by the federal office for enforcement of surface mining laws here. It will provide for reclamation of lands mined prior to August 3, 1977 and left in poor condition.

The Small Operator Assistance Program is designed to help operators mining less than 100,000 tons of coal a year to gather the technical data required to obtain a mining permit.

Both programs are financed by a 35-cents-a-ton fee on stripmined coal and a 15-cents-a-ton fee on deepmined coal.

Two Floyd sites are among those already proposed for reclamation under the state program—a landslide area off the old Middle Creek road above the now-abandoned Floyd County Animal Shelter and an area of abandoned silt structures and slides at Galveston.

An inventory of hazardous abandoned mine sites is being prepared by the Department of Natural Resources and a brochure distributed by the department urges residents to report any areas that may be eligible for funding under the reclamation program.

Security Guard Ordinance Gets Court Reading

A county ordinance that would regulate the employment of private security guards received its first reading at last Wednesday's fiscal court meeting.

While the ordinance, which would require a county permit before such guards could be hired, covers all employers, it became clear during discussion of the proposal that it is aimed at coal companies wishing to hire guards during the current or any future strike.

Security personnel whom the companies wish to hire would be screened by the sheriff's office or another police agency to determine their moral fitness for the task, according to the ordinance. The police would also be asked to determine if the area to be protected by the private guards was not already adequately protected by existing police agencies.

In seeking the council's consideration of the bill, County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. said it was designed "to ensure that private guards...have at least presented an appearance of sound judgment and character, so as not to create a danger of overreaction or irrational judgment" in the confrontations that might be anticipated in a strike situation.

"It is only proper that these men have at least the qualifications of any other peace officers and that we prevent any gun thug situation," Turner wrote in a letter to the court. Even convicted felons were hired as guards during the last miners' strike, he said.

The county would not be liable for the guards' conduct, even where it had issued a permit for them, Turner said. The ordinance he proposed is similar to similar regulations already in effect in Pike and Fayette counties, he added.

Private security guards are "nothing but scabs and strikebreakers, anyway," opined Magistrate Kenneth Roberts, who moved that the ordinance be given its first reading. A second reading of the bill is scheduled for April 17.

A section bounded by the mouth of Rough and Tough Creek, State Road Fork and the Magoffin county line will be advertised for bids from cable TV operators, the court decided, following a complaint that one operator was already serving the area without benefit of franchise. The Licking Valley TV Cable Co., owned by Mike Little, was said to be serving about 37 families in the area without county authorization.

An ordinance authorizing a $4 million bond issue to construct a coal washing facility for the Diamond Coal Co. at Ivel received its first reading. When the bond issue was proposed for approval last August, Frank Mink, company vice-president, told the court that the plant, which employed 200 before a sluggish economy and tougher environmental laws resulted in the layoff of all but 65 several years ago, would begin recalling workers upon construction of the new facility.

"The state is going to jerk the rug on us," County Attorney Turner warned the court, in reference to the closing of the juvenile detention center here by the Department for Human Resources. Even as it withdraws from the facility, the state could force the county to take over its operation, he said.

The detention center is scheduled to close June 1, a victim of state budget cuts. State law requires that counties provide facilities for detaining juveniles, who must be held separate from adult offenders. County officials say they do not have the $152,000 it takes annually to operate the facility.

A question of whether the state can itself lawfully withdraw from the detention center was raised recently by District Court Judge Harold Stumbo, who cited state law to the effect that the state's agreement with the county to operate the facility here could be broken only with the consent of both parties.

While the lease agreement repeats the language of the statute, however, it also provides for termination of the lease on 60 days' notice by either party. Turner said he intended to test the matter in court.

State gas tax receipts are down, which will mean a smaller state disbursement to the county, and receipts from the jailer have also been less than anticipated, Judge Executive Bill Wells told the court. A deficit of more than $85,000 in the county budget is possible this year, he said.

Flo Weddington presented a petition on behalf of 154 Emma residents complaining of road damage allegedly caused by coal truck traffic there. Albert Stevens asked for a 10-ton weight limit on the road serving Gunstock Fork of Spurlock Creek. Coal companies using the road have refused to help maintain it, he said. The court will seek remedies in both instances, it was decided.

A request by South Central Bell to lay telephone cable on a county road near Bonanza divided the court. Magistrates Ray Wilcox and Kenneth Roberts opposing the plan because of continuing complaints that roads have not been properly restored by the phone company. Judge Wells joined Magistrates Hershell Hamilton and Ed Caudill in approving the request, conditional on the company's posting a $10,000 performance bond.

Teen World Contestant

Miss Betty Hamilton, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Hamilton, of McDowell, has been selected for competition in the state finals of the 1981 Teen World Pageant to be held at Hyatt Regency in Louisville at 7:30 p.m., July 25.

The pageant is the official state finals for the Teenworld Pageant when contestants from over the state will be competing for the title. All contestants are between the ages of 14 and 18, have a "B" or better grade average, and are required to participate in the Teenworld Volunteer Service Program. This nationally sanctioned program has been an incentive for many teenage girls to become involved in service to their communities.

The winner of the state finals will receive an all-expense paid trip to compete in the national finals at the Omni in Atlanta, Georgia.

Contestants will be judged on scholastic and civic achievements, appearance, poise, and personality. Contestants may choose between talent competition or presenting a speech on "My Place in the World."

Miss Hamilton is sponsored by Big Sandy Insurance Agency, P and M Engineering, Martin's Bestway Market, Mr. and Mrs. Noah C. Akers, and First Guaranty Bank. She is a student at McDowell High School, and she is a member of the Junior class committee, of Teens Who Care. She is a flag girl and member of the Pep Club. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. Dinah Hall, of McDowell, Mr. and Mrs. Walker Hamilton, and the late Raymond Henson.

PHS Track Team Off to Good Start

The 1981 Prestonsburg High School track team is off to one of its best starts in years. First the Cats defeated Paintsville 91-37 back on March 24. Then, on April 4, the Blackcats placed eighth in the Tri-State Invitational against some of the best teams from Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky.

"The win over Paintsville was nice," commented Coach Forrest Hughes, "but placing eighth at the Tri-State meet was really great." The team performed very well considering it has less than a month's practice, he said.

In both meets P.H.S. has had several outstanding performances but the individual who is off to the best start of the year is junior Dennis Flanagan. So far this year Flanagan has either tied or broken three school records. Against Paintsville, he placed second in the triple jump, won the high hurdle race and tied with teammate Lonnie May in setting a school record for the 400 meter hurdles. But the big achievement came at the tri-state meet where he broke the school record for the 300 meter hurdles by over four seconds and then broke the record for the triple jump with a leap of 38'8".

Prestonsburg, whose 880 relay team advanced to the state meet last year, returned three of its four members Greg Slone, Robert Majet, and Randy Tincher—and added senior Jack Wells. They showed they could go again as they won the 880 relay against Paintsville and at the tri-state meet, over such powerhouses as Ironton, Russell, Boyd County and Ashland Paul Blazer. This same group also placed second in the 440 relay, breaking the school record in the process.

P.H.S. received a big boost from the field events as senior Raymond Gibson threw the shot put 47'10" to finish fourth in the competition, while junior Danny Cooley and Wells were finishing third and fourth in the high jump competition.

The Cats also had several misses at scoring. Eric Herrin finished seventh in the two-mile. Slone finished seventh in the 100 and freshman start John Anderson finished seventh in the 880. Commented Coach Hughes, "The 2:20 performance of Anderson was very pleasing for a freshman to even make a high school varsity team is rare but to compete with and beat some of the best 880 runners in three states is amazing."

P.H.S. will next travel to Lawrence county to participate in the Bulldog Invitational on April 11. The Cats next home meet will be on April 28 when they will host the Prestonsburg Invitational. Any area coach who would like to participate should contact the principal or athletic director at P.H.S.

The average prices per gallon at full-service pumps are $1.414 for regular; $1.458 for premium; $1.462 for no-lead; $1.525 for premium no-lead; and $1.388 for diesel. Self-service prices are $1.312 for regular; $1.349 for premium; $1.382 for no-lead; $1.452 for premium no-lead; and $1.446 for diesel.

1100 Miles on 37 Fence Posts

If Harry LaFontaine wanted to, he could drive the 1,100-mile distance from his office in Miami, Fla. to the campus of Morehead State University for about 37 fence posts.

But, LaFontaine says he only fuels his Lincoln Continental with wood for demonstrations and not for long trips.

Wood gasification expert LaFontaine will complete his Miami to Morehead trip today (Wednesday) when he will demonstrate and discuss his wood-powered automobile. The 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. seminar, jointly sponsored by MSU's, Appalachian Development Center and School of Applied Sciences and Technology, will be at B. F. Reed Hall.

LaFontaine, an engineer, university professor and former special effects consultant for James Bond movies, began working with wood gasification 40 years ago in Denmark. The Germans had taken control of gasoline and diesel fuel supplies, so LaFontaine and the Danes survived by adapting their engines to run on charcoal-fired gas generators.

LaFontaine has connected his latest generator to a specially built $48,000 Lincoln with no modifications to the car's original engine. The generator consists of a large, central cylinder in which wood, corn cobs, even peanut hulls are burned. The glowing coals produced at the bottom of the cylinder are the source of the car's fuel. Air is drawn over the coals and as the carbon monoxide is combined with hydrogen and methane, the gas is drawn into the engine. The movement of the engine's pistons creates a vacuum which keeps the gas flowing, so no fuel pump is needed.

The tank on LaFontaine's car holds about 125 pounds of wood and the car averages about one mile per pound, says LaFontaine. Wood gasification is not the answer to the gasoline crunch, however, but it could be used extensively during emergency situations, he claims.

So fence posts between Miami and Morehead are safe from LaFontaine for the time being. But when a 30-pound fence post is enough fuel to travel 30 miles and gas is nearing the $1.50 per gallon mark, fence posts along the roadway are tempting.

Not Auctions—They're Booming

By LINDA ST. THOMAS
Smithsonian News Service

Mun'a, dol'ha two, dol'ha ree, and a four, four, four, savin, eight-a, nine, sold American.

It may be easy to recognize the tobacco auctioneer's chant; the problem is figuring out exactly what it all means.

A literal translation of the above would go like this—"one, dollar two, dollar three, four, seven, eight, nine, Sold (to) American (Tobacco Co.)." yet getting the message across is only half the auctioneer's work.

Whether he's selling dishes or hogs, any good auctioneer is doing several things at once. He's announcing bids, listening for the next highest offer, sometimes watching for non-verbal signals and constantly assessing the mood of the crowd.

The auctioneer's delivery, for example, is nearly as important as the content of his sales pitch. The tobacco auctioneer's spiel is fired off at a pace that is at least 10 times as fast as the average conversational speech. Besides moving along the day's sales, this speed helps create a bit of marketing excitement. (General auctioneer Victor Richardson is said to have set a record in New York with his chant of 888 words per minute. The average bid-caller whizzes along at about 340 words per minute.)

Today, just about everything can be and is sold at auction: personal property, industrial and farm machinery, horses, tobacco, fine art, new and used cars, livestock and commercial and industrial real estate. In fact, whether held in country barns or the rarefied atmosphere of international auction houses, bidding has become big business—so big that some retail antique dealers now feel threatened by the ever-increasing popularity of auction sales.

Whatever their produce, many professional auctioneers spend years practicing a sales pitch, often acting as an apprentice or helper with an established auctioneer before beginning their own careers. One such self-made man is Edward "Ned" Murrow, 62, of Shepardsville, W. Va., who became a livestock auctioneer "late in life," at the age of 37, after years of raising cattle.

"I remember spending about six months recording my own voice and playing it back until I got the sounds I wanted," Murrow said. "I had been to auctions all my life but I had never done one myself."

When he started, there were only three people working a huge two-county region of West Virginia. Like other auctioneers, Murrow had one speciality—livestock—but later branched out to sell real estate, furniture, horses, farm equipment and antique cars.

"I can sell anything," Murrow says, "just give me the items, a platform, a microphone and a good crowd and I'll guarantee you some fast action. Once I sold a cemetery, already full, for about $100."

Murrow was one of the auctioneers at the Smithsonian's 1980 Festival of American Folklife in Washington, D. C., where pitchmen, street criers and auctioneers recently demonstrated their considerable verbal skills and also shared trade secrets with Festival audiences.

Roads To Be Repaved

The state Department of Transportation will resurface nearly 13 miles of roads in Floyd county. The East Kentucky Paving Corporation, of Grayson, has received three contracts totaling $491,946 for the resurfacing projects.

The company received a $244,990 contract to resurface KY 979, the Mud Creek road, from KY 122 to Tackett Fork, a distance of nearly six miles; a $98,187 contract to resurface KY 7, from KY 80 west to KY 80 east, a distance of over two and one-half miles; and a $168,768 contract to resurface KY 80, from KY 7 north to KY 35, a distance of 1.4 miles.

The projects are a part of the state's $27 million resurfacing program announced last month. The program involves resurfacing on 795 miles of Kentucky roads and is one of the state's largest in terms of dollars and miles.

The size of this year's resurfacing program resulted from savings in administrative costs in the Transportation Department, according to Transportation Secretary Frank Metts.

The best-kept secret, it seems, is that the auctioneer doesn't always know what he's saying. His chant, or roll, as it's called in the business, consists of the prices or bids mixed in with filler words, jokes and a few asides to the audience. The filler phrases, such as "will you give" and "do you want them at," as well as price series, become so routine that the auctioneer is not consciously aware of what he's saying at any given minute.

"The chant is our basic tool of the trade," says Buford Evans, president and founder of the Nashville Auction School and an old bid-caller himself. "Once you get the number brackets down pat, then your worry about increasing your speed and chopping up the filler words. Unfortunately, after just a few weeks of practice, a good auctioneer learns to butcher the English language."

"There are as many different chanting techniques as there are auctioneers. Some are musical and others sound like machines," Evans says. "No chant is exactly the same as another, even when delivered by the same auctioneer, because he's always changing his tempo, volume, inflection and word combinations to suit the occasion."

What's not a secret about the profession is that it requires non-stop talking. While the average auctioneer's time on the platform will be about two hours, some auctions may take up to 12 hours—a herculean task for most vocal cords. To prevent hoarseness or laryngitis, many auctioneers rely on breathing exercises, use a microphone, sip lukewarm water while working (cold water makes the voice raspy), suck on lozenges, avoid the wind and wear scarves on cold days.

Most professional auctioneers care for their voices the same way singers do, by learning to talk "from down here," Evans says. Using diaphragm muscles helps avoid straining the delicate vocal cords. And like a good singer, Evans and other auctioneers practice this breathing until it becomes natural.

But nowadays, it takes more than strong vocal cords and an entertaining chant to make a successful auctioneer. He needs to know about fees and commissions, state license laws, advertising, sales contracts, catalogs or circulars, signs, setting up for a sale and, most important, the value of items he sells.

In addition, many auctioneers are specialists in one or more fields—the sale of property, fine arts or livestock. The field of tobacco auctioneering, however, is unique in that its practitioners only sell tobacco. They must have a full knowledge of the product and, because they work exclusively with professional buyers, must be on the alert.

"It's a very demanding job, both physically and mentally," Buford Evans says. "These auctioneers walk up and down the aisles continuously, calling prices and recognizing bids as they go along, sometimes more than $2,000 worth of tobacco in 60 seconds. It's non-stop activity."

Whatever the specialty, every auctioneer knows how to take bids. At today's country auctions and estate sales, people usually communicate their bid to the auctioneer by voice or by raising numbered cards. The auctioneer recognizes the highest bidder and closes the sale by either announcing the buyer's name or number or by describing the buyer—"sold to the lady in the hat."

Taking non-verbal signal bids, the old wink-of-an-eye, tug-on-the-ear routine, is another matter. Many auctioneers, especially in the fine arts field, where buyers wish to remain anonymous, can recall a mix-up of complex bidding signals.

One of the most famous incidents occurred in London in the mid-1960's when a well known collector bid on a painting in accordance with his pre-auction agreement. The agreement was given to the auctioneer like this: "...when Mr. X is sitting down, he is bidding, if he bids openly, he is also bidding. When he stands up, he has stopped bidding. If he sits down again, he is not bidding unless he raises his finger. Having raised his finger, he is bidding, until he stands up again." Understandably, the auctioneer lost track of those signals somewhere along the line, and the painting went to the second-highest bidder.

Secrets of Pyramid Power Revealed

By MADELINE JACOBS
Smithsonian News Service

A scientist at the Smithsonian Institution may have solved at least one of the mysteries of the Pyramids of Giza—why they, unlike the other Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, are still standing for all to admire.

The answer, Dr. Farouk El-Baz says, lies in the engineering and scientific acumen of the ancient Egyptians. These clever builders, he believes, constructed the towering monuments in the image of natural landforms that were already resistant to wind-erosion. "Had the ancients built their monuments in the shape of a cube, a high-rise building like those of our cities, a pentagon or even a stadium, they would have been erased by the ravages of wind erosion long ago," El-Baz writes in the current issue of Smithsonian magazine.

"Instead, they chose the pyramid shape, which evades destruction by leading the wind upslope and funneling its erosive power to the peak where its energy dissipates into the air."

El-Baz, a geologist and director of the Center for Earth and Planetary Studies at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D. C., came to this conclusion after a number of years of exploration in the Egyptian deserts.

In the Western Desert of Egypt—part of the driest tract of land on Earth—El-Baz has seen numerous landforms that are startling in their resemblance to the pyramids in the Nile Valley, startling particularly because these forms have been created not by man but rather by natural geological process. Moreover, these natural pyramids have been exposed to and withstood the action of the wind for hundreds of thousands of years.

El-Baz believes it is not surprising that apparently no one has made the connection between natural and man-made pyramids until now.

"An expert looks at nature and thinks immediately how to modify it for the benefit of man, rather than trying to learn a lesson from it," the geologist explains.

"This idea has certainly been cooking in my head for a long time. I looked at some of these structures over and over again before I made the connection. But it now seems obvious to me that the ancient Egyptians must have studied such natural desert structures before deciding on the form of their towering monuments."

The first and largest true pyramid, the so-called Great Pyramid, was built by the Pharaoh Khufu (Cheops) about 4,500 years ago. An awesome engineering achievement, its four-sided plan covers 13 acres. At a height of 482 feet, it is one of the largest buildings ever erected by man and, until the Eiffel Tower was constructed in 1889, it was the highest man-made structure in the world.

Despite their age, the pyramids are still shrouded in mystery, and many scholars disagree about their original function and how they were actually built.

Whatever else they may be, the pyramids are a tribute to the ancients' keen knowledge of their environment and resources, El-Baz maintains.

"The Egyptians of the past appear to have learned more about the desert than their modern counterparts," he writes. "They mastered desert exploration and exploitation of building materials. They combed the Eastern Desert and the Sinai for precious metals...they roamed the Western Desert terrain and left their mark..."

During these explorations, he believes, they must have seen many natural pyramidal and conical landforms, as El-Baz himself did on several journeys in the late 1970s into the Egyptian deserts. On one such trip, he saw firsthand how nature's pyramids resist the wind.

In March and April, he explains, the wind in Egypt's deserts shifts direction. Normally, the winds blow in the general direction of north to south, but during the windy season, the winds blow generally from south to north.

This spring wind carries enormous quantities of debris and redistributes the sand even as it erodes obstacles in its way, El-Baz says. A strong gust of wind lifts fine dust from the pebbles and sand grains on the desert surface and hurls it upward toward existing conical and pyramidal hills. The velocity of the dust cloud increases as it approaches the hill, releasing its energy into the air at the apex.

The existence of these natural landforms may also help explain some of the mysteries surrounding the unprecedented magnitude of the pyramids' construction and the manner in which they were built, El-Baz says. What if, he ponders, the pyramids were built over existing conical or pyramidal shapes, thereby easing the extent of the construction?

In fact, a search in the library revealed that an Egyptian archaeologist, Ahmed Fakhry, had written a book in 1961 which described a rocky knoll of unknown size lying underneath the Great Pyramid and a big hill underneath the tomb of Queen Khent-Kawes at Giza. It thus seems likely that the ancient Egyptians received an assist from Mother Nature

In his desert explorations, El-Baz also has uncovered natural, wind-sculpted forms resembling the Sphinx, which dates from 2500 B. C. The Sphinx, he now believes, may have originated as one aerodynamically stable landform called a yardang, which is a naturally wind-carved hill found in the Western Desert of Egypt and in many other deserts. A yardang resembles an inverted boat hull with its prow pointing upwind and its steer in the lee.

"The ancient architects could have investigated such forms thousands of years ago and decided to dress up on (the Pharaoh's) image the yardang on the east side of the Great Pyramid," El-Baz writes. The monumental task of sculpting the Sphinx, which stands 40 feet high, would not have been as great if the ancient Egyptians started with a yardang, already protruding through the plain.

Unfortunately, today the Sphinx is showing signs of old age and its surface is slowly wasting away. But the damage is not due to severe wind erosion, since the Sphinx is an aerodynamically stable structure and allows the wind to pass by with little friction. Rather, experts say, its peeling surface is caused by the unusual rise in the water table due to the construction of the Aswan High Dam. Water laden with salts seeps through the porous rock of the Sphinx and evaporates at the surface. The resulting salt crystals expand and push out thin layers of rock which then peel off.

"This is perhaps ironic," El-Baz concludes in the Smithsonian magazine article. "The symbol of the ancients' understanding of their environment, a monument that is in complete harmony with nature, is being adversely affected by a modern symbol of controlling nature by damming the Nile."

"In our rush to 'develop' the Earth, we may neglect to learn valuable lessons from what the ancients had left for us to see, sometimes carved in eternal rock."

The Pyramids of Giza, fortunately, do not seem to be suffering the Sphinx's fate. "Today, they are the only ancient wonder still standing," El-Baz says, "and they are here to stay."

Bailey To Continue Battle For Knott Health Clinic

State Senator Benny Ray Bailey isn't ready to give up in his battle to open a medical clinic in Knott county.

Bailey's proposal to build a $750,000 primary health-care center about 10 miles from Hazard was rejected by the East Kentucky Health Systems Agency, the state's health-planning agency. It was also disapproved by the agency's sub-area board last month in Hazard, on the contention that it wasn't needed.

Health-service professionals in the area oppose Bailey's project because they believe it will duplicate services offered by the area's three existing clinics. One of these clinics is operated by the East Kentucky Health Services Center, Inc., of which he is executive director.

And last week in Lexington, the agency's project-review committee and the full board both voted it down for the same reason.

But Bailey will submit his application to the state Certificate of Need and Licensure Board on May 20. The board has the power to grant licenses for medical centers.

"I don't know what else we can do," he said. "If the Certificate of Need Board turns us down, we can't build it."

He said that studies show that there is a need for nearly 40,000 patient visits next year that clinics in the area cannot meet.

"I'm not trying to close any clinics; I'm trying to build one," Bailey said.

The licensing board is an arm of the Kentucky Department for Human Resources. Dr. Grady Stumbo, head of the department, helped start Bailey's clinic and has a professional relationship with it.

Stumbo said he is not involved in the proposed clinic nor the application process.

He also said it would be unusual, but not unprecedented, for the licensing board to approve a project that had been rejected in the advisory process.

"They are 16 or so free, individual citizens," Stumbo said. "Those people vote the way they want to."

Dr. John Hackworth, executive director of the East Kentucky Health

Systems Agency, said that the agency's board was put in a bad situation when Bailey didn't appear at the Lexington hearings.

"It's unfortunate if the applicant attempts to disregard the process," he said. "It will be interesting to see what happens on the state level. It should be fascinating."

Officials of Family Health Services, a Hazard-based agency, are the leading opponents of Bailey's proposal. Dr. Michael O'Neal, associated with Family Health Services, said three clinics in the area are operating at a deficit and have applied for a total of $370,000 in federal subsidies.

"To place a fourth primary-care center in an area where three existing primary-care centers are not meeting their budgets is of serious concern to me," he said.

O'Neal also said that the need in the area is not facilities but doctors.

"Building another center is evading the problem," he said. "The problem is that we don't have enough physicians."

A petition opposing the new clinic, started by a patient advisory board at Family Health Services, resulted in about 700 area residents signing.

"It's unusual for consumers to oppose an increase in health-care services," said Dr. Maureen Flannery of Family Health Services. "But people feel there are better things to be done with their tax dollars."

DEAR MR. AND MRS. DEMOCRAT:

I am Elmer Rice, of Banner, Kentucky, and I am a candidate for re-election as your County Surveyor. During the past four years it has been my pleasure to serve each and every one of you in that capacity. I was instrumental in the construction of the new park at Allen, having worked there as Supervisor for approximately twenty (20) months. I ask each of you for your vote; but more importantly, I ask that even if you cannot support me, that you do go to the polls on election day and exercise your right to choose elected officials.

I am as clean as a hound's tooth, and I have no axes to grind. I appreciate your past support, and I would appreciate your continued support.

If you want a change: vote and elect me your next sheriff. I don't have organized crime behind me. I don't think I need them. I want all the honest people to vote for me. If there is a change to be made, it's time now for that change. If we don't do something soon our county will go from bad to worse.

I don't have a lot of money to put these big billboards up or a lot of signs. As you voters know, these candidates who spend $75,000 or more have to make that money back somehow.

If elected sheriff, I will work for the county, and all the people of this county. We will get an early start cleaning up our county.

So if you like the way things are, vote for someone else. If you want a big change, vote for me. Thank you.

Part-Time Job
Worth
$19,139?

The Floyd County Times, dated March 18, 1981, had an article stating the Floyd Fiscal Court, made up of the County Judge-Executive and four Magistrates, voted themselves a cost-of-living raise of 12.4 percent, raising the annual salary to $19,139 for all magistrates in Floyd County.

- ✓ Do you the voter think a part-time magistrate's position should be worth $19,139 a year?
- ✓ Do you the voter want this type of public servant?
- ✓ Do you the voter realize that this type of salary for a part-time position is far above the average fulltime salary of many hard-working people in this county?
- ✓ Do you the voter think it is time for a change?

Birchell Duff says, All taxpayers in Magisterial District No. 2 are welcome to join him toward a new direction.

Birchell Duff says, If elected your next magistrate he will make a motion before the first fiscal court meeting he attends, to roll the salary back.

Birchell Duff says, let's use this salary increase to buy gravel for much-needed roads.

Birchell Duff says, you the voters have an opportunity to make a change in the May primary election. If, elected, he will be there when you need him, from the mouth to the head of every hollow. There will be no exceptions.

WHY PROLONG THE STRIKE?

Union employees are on strike at Highlands Regional for a fair contract. We have proposed wages, benefits, and working conditions which would bring us up to other regional hospitals. The proposals we have made could be all paid for with a 7% budget increase in each of two years.

Highlands Regional has a turnover rate of 100% per year. This is because of the low wages and benefits compared to other regional hospitals, and because of the way we are treated.

Three years ago, the lowest paid workers made $2.90 per hour. To have the same living standard as three years ago, these workers would have to make $4.04 per hour. The Union has proposed $4.25 per hour—21¢ higher than three years ago. We have proposed that LPNs and Technicians be paid equally to LPNs and Technicians at Pikeville.

The Hospital Administration claims its proposals are fair. If they really believed that, they would not have refused to settle this dispute with impartial arbitration. They wouldn't have refused to negotiate with the news media present.

In fact, the Hospital is refusing to negotiate at all. It is their turn to make a proposal. They can call a meeting by simply calling the mediator. They have not done so!

The Administration apparently wants the strike to continue. They have committed numerous acts of violence against Union members. Two security guards-grown men-physically assaulted two women on the picket line last week. Assistant Administrator Max Burnell was arrested for 1st degree wanton endangerment after trying to run a car off the road by bumping it repeatedly from behind with his car. Local President Larry Daniels has been threatened with death several times.

The Union is dedicated to resolving the strike in a fair and reasonable way as soon as possible. The Administration is refusing to negotiate.

The American House... American Dream

Institute of Architects; Photograph by Christian Staub

"Be polite to your neighbors!" That's the watchword of many of today's architects who, departing from an earlier generation's insistence that new buildings make original architectural "statements," blend their projects into existing neighborhood styles. At left (above), architect Hugh Newell Jacobsen of Washington, D.C., has tailored the front of a house in Pennsylvania in a traditional "telescope" look to blend with its surroundings while the contemporary features desired by his client are dramatically provided in the back (right, above). Likewise, on the West Coast, the Washington state architectural firm of Morgan and Lindstrom designed this award-winning house (left) so not to disturb its natural setting.

Now jump to the 20th century (the Victorian period was another matter altogether), and examine those severe glass and steel houses designed by Mies van der Rohe and his contemporaries who spent their lifetimes removing non-essentials from architecture. "More than anything else, Mies was a Puritan," Cox thinks. "He was adverse to ornamentation; his structures were linear, clean. They were successful because they were the attitude of this nation."

The extremes of this "international style" are in dispute now, but its basic concepts, linked as they are to simplicity, remain intact. "A house should deliver what it promises," says Jacobson, whose contemporary residences reflect those themes. "Some houses, with their great doors and elaborate street image, but nothing beyond, make you wonder why you ever came in." Early architects had the right idea, he believes; they created "minimal fronts, leaving the surprises for inside."

"WE'VE WEATHERED a few friendly complaints," conceded Barbara Bradbury, after she had festooned the family residence on Mays Branch with a banner celebrating the fortunes of the University of Georgia Bulldogs. The occasion was a party the day before her marriage, Saturday, to Kevin Heslin, of Atlanta. Both bride, second from left, and groom, in necktie, are University of Georgia graduates.

By DAVID M. MAXFIELD
Smithsonian News Service

The single-family house, some maintain, is as obsolete as that other erstwhile icon of American life, the tail-finned, chrome-plated, mini-mileage gas guzzler.

Yet never before has anything considered so culturally dated been in more demand, more expensive or a better investment. Despite soaring mortgage rates and operating costs, the old home place is still a bulwark of the American dream, albeit one now in reach of only about 15 percent of potential homebuyers.

A related reason for this demand, says architect Warren Cox, moderator of a recent Smithsonian Resident Associate lecture series on the look, history and problems facing the American house, comes down to this fact of life: The home—like the inhabitant's dog—is often a tangible reflection of the class, culture, aspirations and, not infrequently, the actual appearance of the residents themselves.

What do these "residents" look like today? And how are they changing to cope with the economic realities predicted to become even more severe during the 1980s?

At the moment, the house coming off the architects' drawing boards is a structure that is fresh and contemporary, yet garbed with traditional architectural elements. It is a product of the modern design concepts of the 20th century—flat, geometric exteriors and open, spacious interior planning—but with references to the past—perhaps shingles, classical columns or bannistering.

"The eclectic tradition of earlier periods, discarded for several decades, is reviving now," award-winning architect Robert Stern of New York says. "Architects are again turning to the past for inspiration."

To a great extent, though, this describes the "architect's house," one custom-designed for a client able to afford a bit of experimentation, one where innovation flourishes because the penalty for failure is small.

Other homes, of course, are on the market. And today, it seems, architecture is in a period of pluralism not seen since the Victorian age. There are solar-designed houses whose functional requirements dictate their appearances. There is a new interest in earthsheltered houses. There are houses with built-in whimsy that spoofs earlier architectural periods. And there are the mass-produced houses spreading across the landscape, some of them praised for their design "honesty" and others condemned for their "misuse" of materials and architectural styles.

This diversity, however, comes at a time when architecture and homebuilding are in the midst of crisis, the outcome of which is going to affect the way Americans live in future years. Just as the house of the 19th century reflected the lifestyles of that period with such features as cellars for food storage, verandas for summer nights and dining rooms to accommodate large families, today's economic realities are dictating the look of contemporary homes.

Because of inflation, high interest rates and energy costs, the trend is now toward smaller houses, way down from the 2,000-3,000 square feet of the 1950s; and once again, generations of families are sharing the same home, says Charles Moore, former chairman of the Yale Schools of Architecture.

"The problem of affordability is our biggest problem," West Coast builder Robert Fisher agrees. "We are now seeing unrelated families buying houses together, and in San Francisco, we are taking units and dividing them in half."

"Large picture windows are no more," Fisher says. The windows now going into houses are carefully considered for function and location. For example, passive solar systems, so simple in principle, call for windows on the south side of buildings to catch the winter sun and depend on awnings and nearby trees to provide summer shade.

Houses that rely on this approach still need conventional heating, but they may use as much as 75 percent less fuel than regular buildings, according to a recent Worldwatch Institute report. And, by the way, those fashionable rooftop skylights of recent years are terrible energy wasters; it is better to install them vertically, preferably high on south-facing walls.

Leading architects and builders also contend that another factor—red tape—is pushing real estate prices skyward. Government approval processes can be so time consuming, says Fisher, that in one project where $25,000 was budgeted for legal reviews and planning, the costs soared to close to $250,000.

Fisher believes that, as a result of these review delays, there will soon be a "backlash" as those who will pay for "anti-growth policies wake up and see they can't afford housing." Some states already have enacted so-called "anti-snob" laws whereby growth is permissible, unless it can be shown that a new housing project endangers life quality and natural resources. But Fisher concedes he has no answer to how the delays inherent in the review process can be prevented or shortened.

Residential architecture today is being buffeted by still another factor—a debate within the profession over something called "contextualism," that is, how a building relates and blends in with its neighbors. This thinking marks a break from recent decades when architectural "statements" shot up over the landscape, like giant ads for the originality and creativity of their makers.

"Like a lady," Washington, D.C.-based architect Hugh Newell Jacobsen says, "the best house is polite to her neighbors and never shouts."

This debate aside, there are certain characteristics that Americans yesterday and today seem to admire and seek in their houses. "I think," Warren Cox says, "that Americans have a distaste for heavy ornamentation in their houses. In their heart of hearts, I don't think they like all the elaborateness of European homes. Americans seem to like houses that basically are boxes with simple doorways."

Take a look at the earliest American houses, a simple, one-room "hall" of the 17th century and the Cape Cod cottage built by the Pilgrims. They were stark, gable-roofed, straight-lined with modest entrances. The later classic homes of the 18th and early 19th centuries, though more elaborate products of careful design, in large degree continued the earlier attitudes of restraint that did not, Cox says, "tolerate showing off."

★ CONSUMER ALERT ★

Fight inflation. Join a buying club. Combine your purchase with other consumers' purchases and get lower prices for everyone.

"The claims are appealing, but beware. Buying clubs may not save you money at all. In fact, buying clubs can be more expensive than shopping in your local retail stores," said Attorney General Steven L. Beshear.

A buying club is an organization that sells memberships by representing that its members will get brand-name products at prices lower than those found in retail stores.

The Federal Trade Commission staff surveyed a number of buying clubs during a recent investigation. The findings raise some interesting questions about consumers' ability to save money by buying on a group plan.

When you join a buying club, you may be asked to pay a large initiation fee up-front. Eighty percent of the 239 buying clubs questioned charged $200 or more to join. Initiation fees from $400 to $600 were not at all unusual, Beshear noted.

The initial effect of the initiation fee is to put you "in the red." If you make enough purchases to recoup your initiation fee, you can then begin to actually save money through the club.

The question you really need to ask yourself is whether it is a smart move for you to go in debt to save money, Beshear said. The answer comes down to elementary mathematics—if you pay $500 to join a club and save 25 percent on everything you buy, you still have to spend $2,000 before you break even, the attorney general pointed out.

The FTC staff obtained income statistics from 166 of the buying clubs. The actual income from the sale of merchandise was less than $3.5 million. However, the income from the sale of membership was $21.4 million.

So although buying clubs say they are in business to get savings on merchandise for members, the main source of income for some clubs is from selling memberships. To go one step further, as long as clubs make their money from large, up-front initiation fees, they make no real incentive to provide good service afterward, Beshear noted.

Consumers can no doubt find values in some buying clubs. Some clubs have low membership fees and really do prove to be bargains for their customers. But consumers must evaluate the clubs' savings claims before they join.

If a club claims 25 percent savings, the first question you should ask is 25 percent off what? If it's "suggested retail price" or "manufacturer's list price," you may be in trouble. Ordinary discount stores sell for under the suggested retail or manufacturer's list—and you don't have to pay an initiation fee to join, Beshear said.

Club prices are sometimes fabricated or copied from another buying club's. The only way to make sure you are getting a deal is to do your own comparison shopping. Make a list of what you want to buy and compare local retailers' prices with the buying club prices. But there is another problem—with some clubs, you don't get to see their prices...or their catalogue...or their showroom until after you join.

Buying clubs sometimes employ high-pressure sales techniques, such as: (1) You must sign up now or lose the chance to join, (2) Or if you find yourself being interviewed to see if you are "worth enough" to qualify for membership, look out. These tactics do not have to be used by a club offering bargains, Beshear said.

"Historically, one of the major buying club drawbacks has been their instability as business organizations. In Kentucky, in the past three years, several local buying clubs have gone out of business," Beshear said. "Unfortunately, when consumers pay membership fees in advance only to see the club go out of business, they have little hope of recouping their losses."

If you should have problems with a buying club, first contact your buying club. However, if you have a consumer problem which you are unable to resolve yourself, write: Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, 209 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

State Chamber Backs Reagan Economic Plan

At a recent meeting of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce board of directors, the State Chamber agreed unanimously "to enthusiastically endorse in total, President Reagan's economic package now before Congress," according to Board Chairman Dan Coleman.

"We know," Coleman said, that many special interest groups, some even with specific business and trade association ties with government, will want to accept only parts of the President's program and reject those parts that adversely affect them directly. We think that it is to the advantage of the American people to stand firm behind the total package. If the administration's package is torn apart, the impact will be to destroy an opportunity to revitalize the nation's economy by reducing the burden of government," Coleman said.

Public Asked For Opinion Of Budget Crisis, Effects

Citizens of Floyd county are being invited to a public meeting to voice their concerns about the current government budget crisis and its effects on various social, health and public assistance programs.

One meeting, hosted by representatives of the Department for Human Resources, will be held at 2 p.m., April 21, at the Paintsville RECC Building. The meeting is one of 16 such sessions scheduled during March and April at sites throughout the state.

Secretary Grady Stumbo said he hopes people attend to share their concerns and ideas.

"Reductions in our programs and services are inevitable," said Stumbo. "We know a lot of these reductions are going to be unpopular and in some cases difficult to cope with. We are genuinely concerned about the impact these cut-backs are having at the local level."

Through the meetings, he said, department representatives hope to help communities define what the budget cuts will mean locally and start looking for other ways to fill the gaps in service.

"I have said all along that we can't depend on government to satisfy all our needs," said Stumbo. "Now we all are beginning to see how necessary it will be for each of us to take on more responsibility for ourselves and for each other."

Each meeting will open with a 30-minute presentation on the Human Resources Department's services and the potential impact of federal and state budget cuts. The remainder of the two-hour sessions will be open for public comment and discussion.

Representatives of each of the department's four service bureaus (Health Services, Manpower Services, Social Insurance and Social Services) and the office of the Human Resources Ombudsman are scheduled to attend each meeting.

East Ky. Unemployment Rate Remains Highest in State

Eighty-four of Kentucky's 120 counties continue to report unemployment rates of 10 percent or higher, February labor force estimates show.

February figures showed unemployment in Kentucky dropped slightly during the month, to 10 percent, from a record high 10.4 percent recorded in January, Department for Human Resources reports say.

Nationally, February's unemployment rate was 8 percent. Kentucky's rate is the fifth highest in the nation, according to Robert MacDonald, chief labor market analyst for the Human Resources Department.

According to MacDonald, some 164,000 Kentuckians were unemployed during February.

Unemployment in the state's two major metropolitan areas dropped slightly in February, MacDonald said. Louisville metropolitan area unemployment was reported at 8.8 percent in February, down from a record high of 9.3 percent in January.

The Lexington metropolitan area's unemployment also decreased, from a January rate of 7.9 percent to 5.8 percent during February.

Eastern Kentucky continues to have the state's highest unemployment rate of 12.2 percent of the labor force, down slightly from 12.7 percent unemployment reported in that area during January.

The Bluegrass area again showed the state's lowest rate, with 7.3 percent unemployment in February, a decline from 7.7 percent recorded in January.

Although unemployment dropped slightly in eastern Kentucky during February, from 12.7 percent in January to 12.2 percent, the area continues to have the highest unemployment rate in the state.

Of the 34 counties in the area, all but three reported February unemployment rates of 10 percent or higher.

A 20 percent sample of persons who were previously employed in industries covered by unemployment insurance showed that 23.9 percent of persons sampled in eastern Kentucky were in construction and 19.1 percent were in manufacturing. Some 16.8 percent of the sample had worked in mining.

Menifee county had the area's highest February rate of 27.5 percent. Martin county, at 4.6 percent unemployment, had eastern Kentucky's February low.

The February unemployment figures in this area, by counties:

Bath 18.1; Bell 11.0; Boyd 10.0; Breathitt 10.0; Carter 20.3; Clay 14.6; Elliott 15.9; Floyd 11.1; Greenup 10.7; Harlan 10.2; Jackson 19.9; Johnson 12.0; Knott 19.0; Knox 10.6; Laurel 10.6; Lawrence 15.0; Lee 20.9; Leslie 9.5; Letcher 16.0; McCreary 16.1; Magoffin 16.6; Martin 4.6; Menifee 27.5; Montgomery 12.4; Morgan 17.9; Owsley 17.7; Perry 12.8; Pike 7.7; Pulaski 11.9; Rockcastle 14.3; Rowan 11.4; Wayne 13.0; Whitley 14.1; Wolfe 20.3.

THESE LITTLE PEOPLE™ BABIES NEED GOOD HOMES...

A tiny maternity ward named BabyLand General™ Hospital had a population explosion! The Little People™ babies' individual personalities delight a dedicated hospital staff. But they can't care for all of them alone. So they put some up for adoption.

Some are mischievous, others have fussy tempers, but most just love to be held. A few even have diaper rash.

No two Little People™ babies are alike, so each has its own official notarized Birth Certificate®. And, parents are required to fill out Adoption Papers® since adoption is, after all, a major commitment.

Each baby is painstakingly handsculptured to birth. Your love magically brings them to life.

Every Little Person™ baby needs a good home, with plenty of gentle love. BabyLand General™ Hospital asks that you take good care of Little People™ babies. But also make them behave.

Xavier™ Roberts, Designer-Physician, is gently birthmarking his signature on the babies' tiny bottoms for a limited time only.

BabyLand sends each Little Person™ baby a Birthday card on their first birthday, too, to show they still care. Because they miss their babies. Wouldn't you?

Some special Little Person™ baby wants a good home with you.

Natural Bridge Square Dancing To Begin April 18
Fiddles fly and feet move more furiously throughout the summer months at Kentucky's Natural Bridge State Resort Park, where square dancing can be found Saturday nights from April 18 to Oct. 31, and Friday nights from June 5 to Aug. 28 at Hoedown Island, the park's big open-air patio.

According to Richard Jett, who is in charge of the extensive square dancing programs, there are usually more than 1,000 attending on Saturday nights with people coming from all over the eastern part of the United States. Some watch, but most participate in the dancing, especially after taking a few lessons from Jett. "I'll be happy to show everyone lots of easy-to-learn mountain and western squares, with waltzes, polkas and many other couple dances thrown in for variety," he said.

According to Jett, clog dancing is one of America's most popular dance activities and this rapid-fire tap dance can be found in abundance at Natural Bridge, where clog teams from various areas often give short demonstrations during the programs.

Other dancing events scheduled for Hoedown Island this year include the 11th annual "Shinding in the Mountains" on May 23-24, the 15th annual National Mountain-Style Square Dance Festival on June 19-20, the annual Mountain and Western Square Dance Frolics on July 3-4 and the 16th annual Western Square Dance Festival, Sept. 4-6.

Further information about the dancing programs at Natural Bridge can be obtained by contacting Richard Jett, Campton, KY 41301, or calling (606) 668-6650. Natural Bridge State Resort Park is near Slade, Ky., just off the Mountain Parkway at exit 33.

Boy Scouts' Expo '81 Set for May 2

Thirty thousand visitors are expected to view Scouting's annual show, Expo '81, Saturday, May 2, 1981 in Lexington's Rupp Arena. Four thousand Scouts will present over 150 live action shows simultaneously on the arena floor. Preparations have begun for what Scout officials term one of the largest shows of its type in America.

Cub Scouts, Scouts, and Explorers have begun ticket sales throughout the council and thousands have already been sold. All proceeds go to support packs, troops, and posts in the Blue Grass Council.

The program will feature such Scouting activities as: rappelling, rope bridges, signal towers, camp cooking, first aid, camping, backpacking, rescue, survival demonstrations, crafts, photography, horsemanship, and much more. In addition, a stage show featuring local professional entertainment and celebrities will run continuously throughout the day and a large screen T. V. will be provided for viewing the Kentucky Derby. Also, members of the University of Kentucky basketball team will appear and meet the Scouts.

Keith Ward, newsman for Channel 27, WKYT-TV, is the Expo Chairman this year. He said, "Last year Expo '80 was one of the most successful Scout shows in the nation. Expo '81 will be even better. This super event promises to be an Expo '81 day to remember."

Gary Sandy, who stars as Andy Travis on the hit television show, WKRP, Cincinnati, will be the special celebrity guest for Expo '81.

Constitutional Amendments To Be on November Ballot

Frances Jones Mills, Secretary of State and chairperson of the State Board of Elections, has received from Attorney General Steven L. Beshear the proper wording of the two proposed constitutional amendments that will be submitted to the voters at the November 3 election.

It is required by the Kentucky Revised Statutes that the Attorney General state the substance of any proposed constitutional amendment prior to certification by the Board of Elections and printing of the ballots.

The 1980 General Assembly passed legislation to place these amendments on the ballot relating to the term of office of elected officials and property taxation.

The wording of the two proposed constitutional amendments reads as follows:

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT NO. 1—Shall Sections 71, 82, 93 and 99 of the Constitution be amended to provide: (1) that the governor, lieutenant governor, treasurer, auditor of public accounts, secretary of state, commissioner of agriculture, labor and statistics, attorney general, superintendent of public instruction, and register of the land office shall be eligible to election for two (2) successive terms and shall be ineligible to re-election for the succeeding four (4) years after the expiration of the second term for which they shall have been elected; (2) that the sheriff shall be eligible to election for successive terms.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS NO. 2—Shall Section 170 of the Constitution be amended and Section .172B be added to the Constitution notwithstanding contrary provisions of Sections 170, 171, 172 or 174 of the Constitution, to provide: (1) that the real property maintained as the permanent residence of the owner who is classified as totally disabled under a program authorized or administered by any agency of the United States government or by the railroad retirement system, be exempt from taxation up to the assessed valuation of sixty-five hundred dollars on said residence and contiguous real property, except for assessment for special benefits; provided the property owner received disability payments pursuant to such disability classification, has maintained such disability classification for the entirety of the particular taxation period, and has filed with the appropriate local assessor by December 31 of the taxation period, on forms provided therefor, a signed statement indicating continuing disability as provided herein made under penalty of perjury; (2) that the General Assembly may provide by general law that county, municipal and urban-county governing bodies may declare property assessment or reassessment moratoriums for qualifying units of real property to encourage the repair, rehabilitation, or restoration of existing improvements thereon; however, prior to the enactment of any moratorium program, the General Assembly shall provide or direct the local governing authority to provide property qualification standards for participation in the program and a duration limitation on the moratorium not to extend beyond five years for any particular unit of real property and improvements thereon.

Rehab Plans Follow Forest Fire Damage

Control of forest fires often doesn't end with the extinguishing of the last spark. After the fire crews have left the scene, foresters, hydrologists, and soil scientists become immediately concerned with protection of water and soil resources that could be damaged when rains do come.

Charles Crail, public information officer for the Daniel Boone National Forest says that an emergency rehabilitation plan to protect water and soil resources is put together often before the fire is out, because of the urgency in re-establishing ground cover. What was once protected by a layer of leaves and organic matter will be left blackened and bare and quite vulnerable to erosion. An emergency rehabilitation plan will contain ratios of grass seed and fertilizer that will give the best chance for a quick green cover and location of water diversion structures to reduce soil movement due to rapid runoff. Crail added that highest on rehabilitation priorities are areas with steep slopes, highly erodible soils, and important watersheds where it's necessary for water to remain clear and clean.

Roger Eubanks, fire boss for the 900 acre Cow Creek fire which burned in Whitley county on the London Ranger District said a rehabilitation plan for this fire was high priority due to erodible soils, steep slopes, and the important Cumberland River watershed. Fire crews, in their efforts to control this fire last Saturday, built about eight miles of fireline with most being constructed by bulldozers. The dozers cut firebreaks up to 12 feet wide down to bare soil. If left unattended erosion could cause damage by carrying soil into the lower part of the Cumberland River, which has been designated as a Kentucky Wild River and robbing the burned area of valuable top soil.

THE OLD COMMISSARY building, for 60 years a landmark in the Wayland area and a reminder of the town's coal mining past, was destroyed by fire Saturday, March 28. Firefighters, who were unable to slow the intense blaze, worked primarily to stop spread of the flames to nearby structures.

Our Fragile Earth

By JERRY HOWELL
 Department of Biological and Environmental Sciences
 Morehead State University

The National Wildlife Federation's Environmental Quality Index (EQI) for 1980 was published in the February-March, 1981 issue of "National Wildlife." EQI is a subjective estimation of the quality of American life, based on seven different environmental categories: wildlife, minerals, air, water, forests, living space, and soil. For 12 years, the Federation has been annually estimating these factors, collectively ranking them and individually comparing each category with its previous year's assessment. In the last installment, the 1980 wildlife category was analyzed. This article discusses the minerals category, an indicator of the U. S. energy situation.

Many facets of our energy situation in 1980 were familiar, according to the 1981 EQI. Oil still dominated our minerals scene, as it has every year since 1973; analysts still debated the amount of oil left in the ground; the U. S., with six percent of the world's population, continued to consume about 40 percent of the world's oil; and certain other minerals were in short supply.

There were some disquieting signs in 1980 that many Americans were committed to one energy path while their government was emphasizing another. The government seemed to continue seeking spectacular technological breakthroughs, such as synthetic fuels. EQI views the synthetic fuels program as an expensive, ineffective stopgap measure found to be very environmentally damaging because the various types of synthetic fuel production, such as oil shale being converted to oil and gas, require the disruption of many acres to produce a small amount of fuel.

At the other end of the spectrum, millions of Americans made conservation an important part of their daily lives. For most of 1980, oil imports were about 20 percent lower than 1979, and for the second year in a row, Americans used less gas and oil, even though market supplies were plentiful. American energy efficiency was 10 percent higher than in 1973 and auto mileage continued to improve. Between 1973 and 1979 industrial growth increased 17 percent, but energy use only grew by two percent.

Some experts think conservation alone could reduce U. S. energy needs by as much as 40 percent. Alternate energy sources, such as small scale solar, biomass (mainly wood and alcohol), hydroelectric and wind power, could complement conservation. It has been predicted that if solar energy, for example, reaches its estimated usage, by the year 2000 about 20 percent of our energy will come from the sun. We may see a doubling of present solar energy usage for hot water and homes this year.

EQI rated "minerals" as "no change" from 1979, but noted many encouraging signs.

Survey To Define Recreational Needs

A survey to determine the recreational needs and interests of persons residing in the Prestonsburg area are being placed in several businesses here.

The questionnaire may be obtained at The Bank Josephine, The First Commonwealth Bank, Francis Store, Shoe Store and DenimLand, Ken Dick Sport Center, and the Thomas Hereford Company.

The survey will also be distributed in area schools. Only one questionnaire should be filled out by a family. If more than one child is enrolled in school, the questionnaire should be answered only one time, not once for each child.

A heavy response will be helpful in assisting Archer Park to serve the people of the community better.

Correction

The Ottis Hall listed in last week's Times as having been jailed by Sheriff Doug Lewis on a charge of possessing alcoholic beverages is not the Ottis Hall who lives on Toler Creek.

About the House

Decorating For The Old-At-Heart

There are two sorts of people when it comes to home decorating: those who order three rooms of furniture in a flash, and those who enjoy decorating so much that it is an ongoing process. Constantly trying to get the perfect combinations of lamps, tables, and chairs, many decorating lovers even mix antique finds with modern pieces.

Venturing out to find new ways of searching for old things, though, is an adventure in itself. The flash people don't know what they are missing.

Besides garage sales, flea markets, auctions, antique shops and the classifieds, there are other options. Not a popular source, but a profitable one, is a wrecking site. The owner of a to-be-demolished building may find cleaning out the leftover remains to be too much of a hassle and, as a result, some valuable and not-so-valuable items may bounce the way of the wrecking ball. It is possible to find furniture there but a great deal of the leftovers will be things like doors, bathtubs, stoves, mantels and other such unmovables.

To find a wrecking site, look in the Yellow Pages under "Wrecking Contractors." Some may tell you where and when their next job is and what, if anything, is yours for the carting. Then again, others may convince you to steer clear away while they do the clearing away. (Best to take heed here.)

Some wreckers may let you take salvage for a price. Besides wrecking contractors, cities' building departments also know what buildings are doomed for destruction.

Sometimes, leftovers from wrecking sites are stored in wrecking yards. Cleveland Wrecking, the largest in the country, operates other yards in New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Los Angeles and Chicago. Prices are 10-20 percent higher in the yards.

You might have some luck with buildings that are being renovated or remodeled. You may be able to pick up a clock, a mirror, brass hardware, bathroom fixtures, etc. The City Hall would know if any municipal buildings are undergoing modernization.

Old drugstores, bakeries or hardware stores that are going out of business are another source. Store owners may be glad to sell you a wooden ceiling fan or a brass coat rack.

As you are driving around looking for demolition sites and salvage yards, you might spot a rundown little cottage—the looks of which tell you that no one lives there except maybe a stray cat or two. The owner may be willing to sell whatever treasures are left under the dust and spider webs. Check with the County Clerk's office to find the owner.

If you are looking for a specific item (old or new) to add to your home, The Old-House Journal may be of help. It is a catalog of furnishings for your home geared to pre-1920 decorating styles. Some of the items listed are salvage from old homes and some are reproductions.

The catalog lists the names and addresses of companies to contact for a particular piece. It also includes companies that do restoring and refinishing.

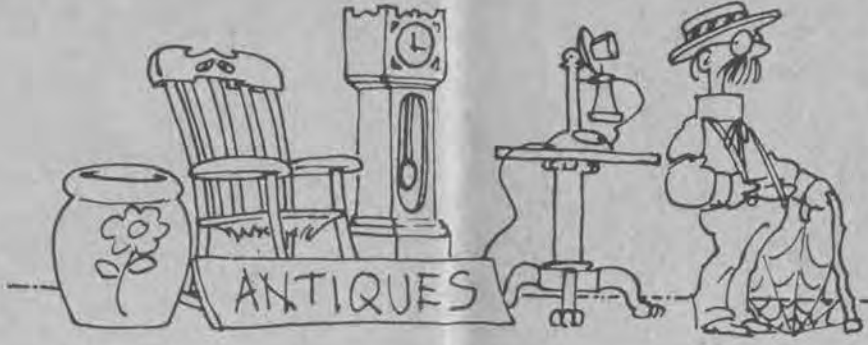

What Really Saves Energy And Who's Doing It

Just about everyone is doing it—trying to save energy that is. A recent survey by Cleveland State University revealed that over half the country is working to lighten the burden of rising energy costs on the poor, the elderly, and the disabled.

The six-month survey included more than 120 programs proposed or initiated at the state level. Direct financial assistance, lifeline utility rates which provide lower or frozen rates for initial blocks of energy use, rate reductions for specific groups, conservation information and assistance, and incentives to use energy during off-peak periods all factored into the findings.

The report notes that weatherization and conservation may be the single most cost-effective strategy for providing energy assistance to the poor and elderly, and should be part of any energy assistance program. It additionally states that relatively little attention has been paid to energy assistance related to natural gas as opposed to electricity as an energy source.

Dr. David C. Sweet, dean of the University's College of Urban Affairs which released the report, says the survey "shows clear evidence of the need for a comprehensive, coordinated approach linking up federal, state, and local resources to provide energy assistance for the poor and elderly."

In Seattle, a new 40-acre freight container terminal is saving energy by using high level illumination provided by newly developed 1000-watt sodium lamps. Each lamp has an average life of 24,000 hours and emits 140,000 lumens, according to an electrical engineer at the Port of Seattle where the lamps are being used.

A 1000-watt metal halide lamp, the kind currently used in other areas of the terminal, has a life of only 12,000 hours and gives 110,000 lumens.

The efficiency of the sodium lamps is even more impressive when compared with the 1000-watt incandescent, which has a life of 1,000 hours and provides only 23,000 lumens.

Letting Out The Hot Air

Is your attic fuming? It's a typical hot spot in the home because it's bombarded with heat from both directions. Warm air in the house rises to the attic while the hot summer sun beats down on your roof. Together, these processes can make your attic 35 degrees hotter than most other parts of your home. Install a wind-driven roof turbine and whisk the heat away, easing the load on your air conditioner.

This venting method not only cuts down on the amount of heat absorbed into your home through the roof, but it pulls heat out of the attic. The result is to allow heat in the lower parts of your home to rise up and completely out of the house, rather than stopping below your hot attic.

If you turn off your air conditioner and open your windows, you can create a natural cooling system by which cool night air comes in through the windows, pushing the hot air up and out through the turbines.

Installation is relatively easy. Cut a hole through the roof for each turbine, install and weather-seal. Two turbines at either end of the house are usually sufficient, but you should check the instructions.

The estimated cost of two automatic-damper roof turbines, including installation labor, is $175, but they can pay for themselves in one to three years, depending on the size and use of your air conditioner.

SPOT CLEANING WOOLENS WILL REDUCE DRY CLEANING BILLS

A good quality wool garment is a fashion investment. But special care is required to insure a long wearlife.

Some wools must be dry-cleaned or hand washed, while others are machine washable. Therefore, be sure to read care instructions on labels.

SUPERWASH is a certification mark for the Wool Bureau Inc. It indicates that the wool may be safely machine washed or dried. Care labels on washable woovens will almost always specify a mild soap and stain removal as they occur.

You can also refresh wool garments quickly after wearing or unpacking by hanging them on the shower rod over a tub of hot water. The steam will remove wrinkles and refresh clothes for wear.

Give wools at rest between wearings—at least 24 hours. Wrinkles will fall out, and wool fibers will return to their natural position.

When pressing is required, always steam press on the wrong side or protect the right side with a press cloth.

You may choose to hand wash knitted woovens. Hand washing requires special care, but it is not difficult.

To preserve the knitted garment's shape, trace its outline on a heavy piece of paper. Save this pattern for blocking the garment after it is washed.

Wash the garment in lukewarm water and add a mild, neutral pH, liquid detergent. Avoid water temperature changes and excessive rubbing, which often result in shrinkage.

Soak the garment for 5 to 10 minutes. Gently squeeze the suds through the garment. Never twist, wring, scrub or rub a wool garment when it is wet. The less the garment is handled, the better the shape is preserved.

Rinse the garment thoroughly, and squeeze out excess water. Roll it in a dry towel and let sit for a few minutes so that excess moisture can be absorbed.

Place the paper with the garment's outline on a dry towel. Pin the garment to the pattern, blocking to its original shape. Let the garment dry away from direct heat and sunlight.

At season's end, make sure woovens are clean before you store them. Store clothes, uncrowded, in garment bags. Fold knits and blankets and place them in drawers or chests. You may want to use moth crystals or a spray for additional protection against moths.

INTEREST-PAYING CHECKING NOT FOR EVERYONE

Checking amount users are faced with the decision of sticking to a regular account or switching to a new interest-paying account. These new accounts called NOW accounts, short for Negotiated Order of Withdrawal, came into being on Jan. 1, 1981. Banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions can offer the service.

But in making any consumer decision it's wise to get all the facts. Before switching from a regular checking account to an interest-paying checking account or from one financial institution to another, take time and compare. Most advertising gives the minimum balance requirement but omits details on penalties or service charges.

Interest on checking sounds like a good idea, but in actual practice, it may benefit only those people who can or are willing to keep fairly large sums in their checking accounts. Because this will add costs to businesses, these costs most likely will be passed on to customers in the form of service fees.

Most financial institutions require customers to keep a minimum amount of money, from $400 to $1,000, in their accounts to receive interest or to avoid a service charge. That means your balance cannot fall below the specified amount on any day of the month without paying a penalty.

Another problem with a NOW account may be the low-balance method used to compute your interest. Interest may be paid on the lowest amount you had in the checking account during the month. For example, suppose at the beginning of the month you had $5,000 in an account that requires a minimum balance of $1,000. On the 28th, you took out $4,500. You would receive interest only on $500 even though you had $5,000 in the account for 28 days. In addition, you may be charged a service fee for allowing your balance to drop below $1,000.

Another financial institution, for example, might require a $500 minimum balance but would charge $2 a month plus 20 c per check when your account is below $500.

Savings and loan associations are entering the checking account business for the first time, and they will be active competitors for customers. Some experts expect them to offer lower minimum balances and lower service charges to lure customers away from banks. However, the interest rate is set by law at 5 1/4 percent for NOW accounts in both savings and loans and banks.

Louisa Community Hospital is planning now for tomorrow

During the last decade, health care in the United States has undergone a remarkable transformation because of an explosion of new knowledge and pioneering medical techniques. Technicians now use equipment and surgeons routinely perform operations that were simply unheard of ten years ago. Because of this, lives are being saved that would have been lost before.

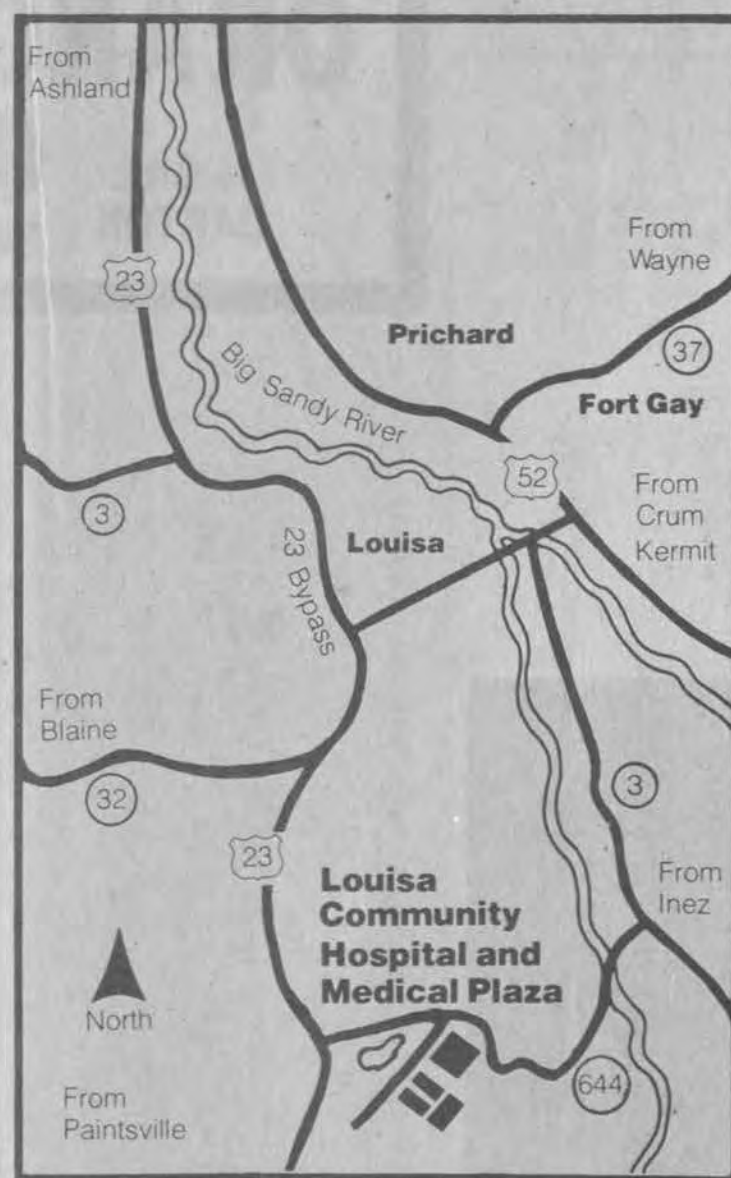

At Louisa Community Hospital, we are a part of this exciting progress.

From the very beginning, we have continued to add new services and facilities to serve you better. In recent years, that progress has accelerated.

For instance, our emergency department now has physicians specially trained in emergency medicine on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week. That gives you the security of knowing that the physician you see at Louisa Community Hospital is committed to the practice of top quality emergency medicine. And with four treatment rooms, you can be sure that our emergency department is among the finest in Eastern Kentucky.

We also added sophisticated new diagnostic services to help our physicians care for you better. Services such as ultrasound, which is even safer than x-ray, fetal monitoring for high risk pregnancies, a transport incubator for babies who need more intensive care, and electroencephalography for the evaluation of patients with head injuries.

But we are not willing to rest on what we have already accomplished. We will continue to introduce more new services because we believe your good health is an important investment in the future. And at Louisa Community Hospital, we're planning for it today.

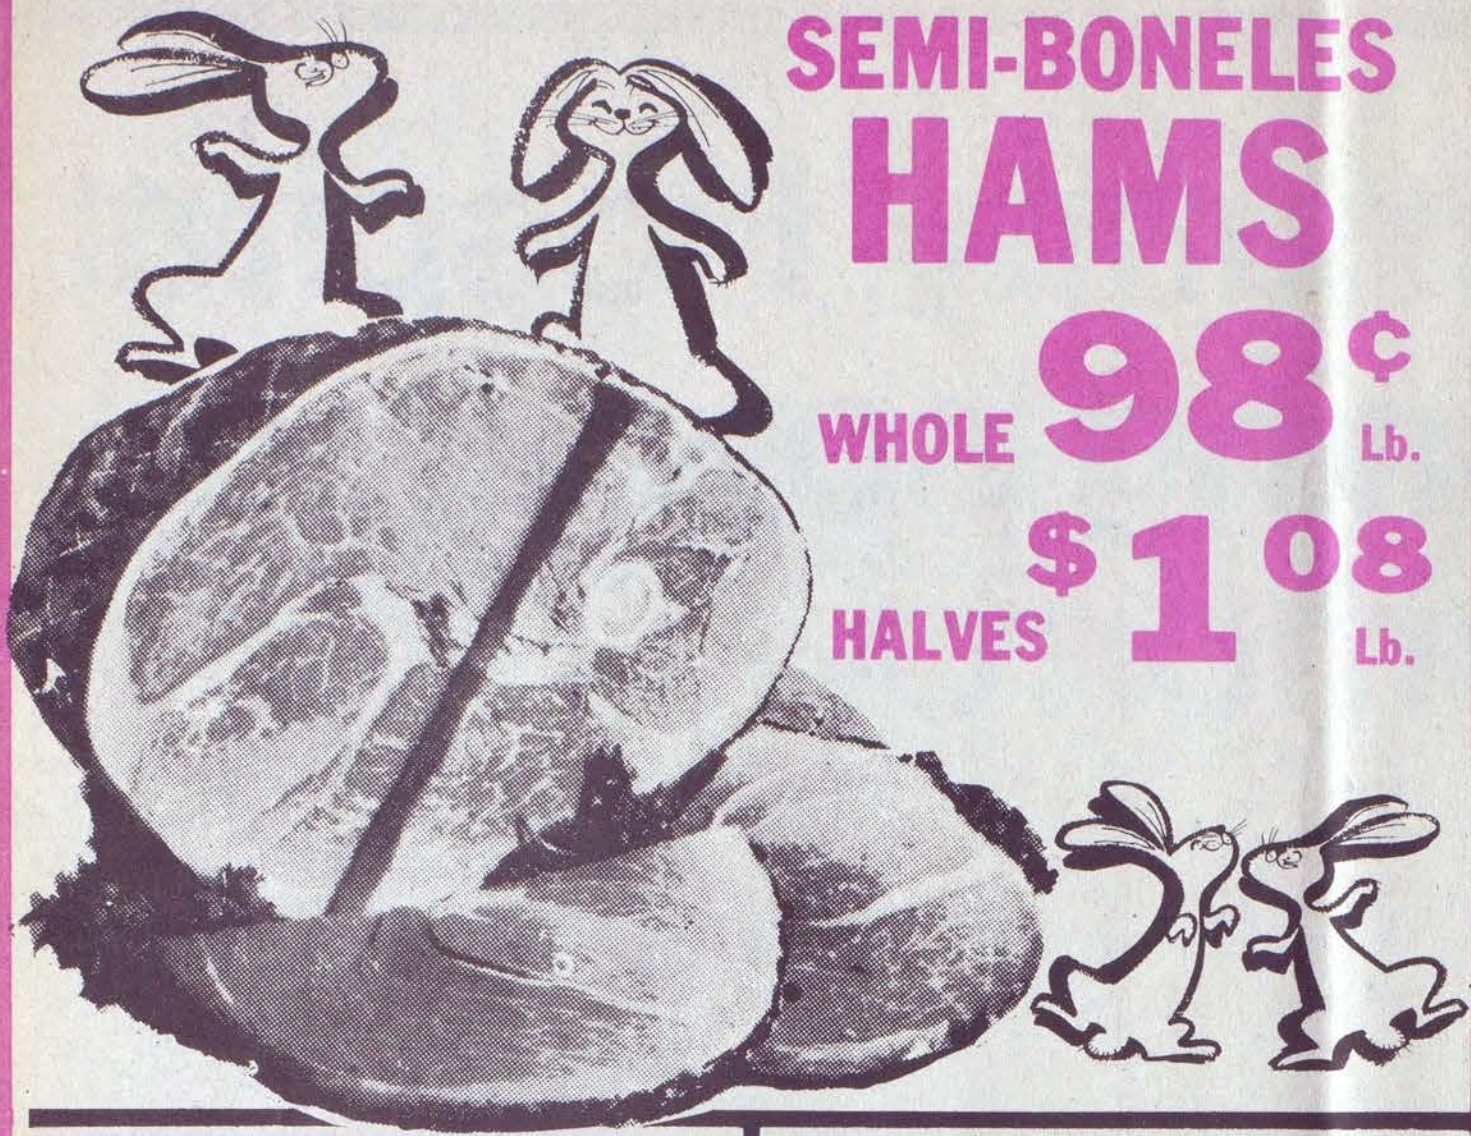

Louisa Community Hospital and the adjacent Medical Plaza are located two miles south of town on the south side of State Highway 644 and a quarter mile off of U.S. Highway 23.

Louisa Community Hospital has specially trained physicians on duty in the Emergency Department 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

AN ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY, TAKING NOTE OF CONCURRENT PROCEEDINGS AUTHORIZING CONTRACTS FOR THE CONSTRUCTION OF SUBSTANTIAL IMPROVEMENTS AND EXTENSIONS TO THE MUNICIPAL COMBINED AND CONSOLIDATED WATER, SEWER AND NATURAL GAS SYSTEM, AND AUTHORIZING THE ISSUANCE OF BONDS AND NOTES TO FINANCE THE SAME; AND IN CONNECTION THEREWITH, CONFORMING TO FINANCING REQUIREMENTS, SETTING FORTH AND GIVING NOTICE OF INCREASED SCHEDULES OF RATES AND CHARGES FOR WATER SERVICE, SEWER SERVICE AND NATURAL GAS SERVICE, THE SAME TO BE EFFECTIVE NOVEMBER 1, 1982, WHEN SUCH IMPROVEMENTS AND EXTENSIONS ARE EXPECTED TO BE SUBSTANTIALLY COMPLETED.

WHEREAS, the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky (the "City") has long owned and operated facilities through which it has provided water service, sanitary sewer service and natural gas service to the citizens and inhabitants of the City and its environs; and since 1963 has operated all such facilities as a municipal water, sewer and natural gas system, not only to facilitate the financing of necessary additions, improvements and extensions from time to time but also to effect substantial economies in management, maintenance, meter reading, billing and record keeping; and

WHEREAS, for more than two years the City and its Utilities Commission have recognized the need and demand for substantial additions, improvements and extensions to the water facilities of the combined Water, Sewer and Natural Gas System, consisting principally of a need for a new water treatment plant of sufficient capacity to provide for present and reasonably foreseeable future needs, additional elevated storage tanks to provide adequate pressure, and water mains and appurtenant facilities to extend water service to areas not heretofore served (collectively, the "1981 Project"); and in that connection employed Howard K. Bell Consulting Engineers, Inc., Lexington, Kentucky (the "Engineers"), to make a professional study, to recommend the nature, scope and extend of the facilities needed, to prepare estimates of cost, to project revenues and expenses, and to recommend what increases in rates and charges for use of the services and facilities of the combined and consolidated System might be required to provide for the operation and maintenance of the System, and to provide for the orderly payment of principal and interest in connection with the borrowing of monies necessary to pay the costs of the 1981 Project; and

WHEREAS, in aid and furtherance of the proposed undertaking of such 1981 Project the City has obtained a $1,000,000 Grant from the Economic Development Administration, U. S. Department of Commerce ("EDA"), a $1,000,000 Grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission ("ARC"), a $500,000 Grant from the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development ("DHUD"), and a loan commitment from Farmers Home Administration, United States Department of Agriculture ("FmHA"), such loan commitment being in the form of an assurance that if the City undertakes the 1981 Project and authorizes the issuance of its $1,700,000 "Water, Sewer and Natural Gas System Revenue Bonds; Series 1981," then FmHA will appear at the public sale thereof and tender a bid to purchase the same upon terms which are deemed to be highly advantageous to the City and within the scope of financial feasibility; and

WHEREAS, upon the basis of construction bids publicly received pursuant to advertisement as required by law, the City has established that the aggregate of all costs of the 1981 Project will be $4,200,000, and therefore can be paid for through application of the proceeds of the governmental Grants hereinabove referred to and the proceeds of the Bonds; and by concurrent proceedings the City, by Ordinance, has authorized the awarding of contracts, the commencement of the construction and installation of the 1981 Project, and the issuance of the City's Bonds, together with Revenue bond Anticipation Notes for interim construction financing purposes, and has provided for a public sale of the Bonds and Notes; and

WHEREAS, in order to provide for the orderly retirement of the funds to be borrowed through the issuance of the Bonds and the Notes, it is necessary to establish at this time new and increased schedules of rates and charges for use of the services and facilities of the combined and consolidated municipal Water, Sewer and Natural Gas System, the same to become effective on November 1, 1982, when the 1981 Project is anticipated to be completed, or very nearly so,

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT ORDAINED BY THE CITY OF PRESTONSBURG, KENTUCKY, ACTING THROUGH ITS CITY COUNCIL AS ITS LAWFUL GOVERNING BODY, AS FOLLOWS:

How To Handle the "Terrible Twos"

The "Terrible Twos" are legendary. The only word the two-year-old seems to know is "NO!"—and he says it, loudly and constantly.

Growing Child, the monthly child development newsletter, suggests that the reason behind negativism at age two is that the child has learned that "NO" is a powerful word. When he says "NO," it brings people up short. It draws attention and lots of words from them.

Using the word "NO" is also an expression of a child's increased ability to assert himself. "YES" is merely going along with a situation. "NO" is a kind of control over the situation. The world of smoothly flowing events stops suddenly when he says "NO," and new happenings begin to revolve around him in an attempt to get him to say "YES." The attention and the control of events lead him to experiment with resisting in a wide variety of situations.

There are several ways to handle a child when he's constantly saying "No!" The first step is to recognize that it's normal behavior at this age. Knowing this will help you be less disturbed when a child is contrary.

Secondly, it is often useful to avoid asking questions that require a yes-or-no answer when you want a child to do something. Instead of asking "Would you like some nice carrots?" you could say, "Here are some nice carrots." Obviously, if you give the child the option of saying "NO" and he says "NO," then you are in a bit of a bind.

If you expect resistance, say at bedtime, start the child down the road, then insert some pleasant experience into his activity. For instance, you could say, "Let's get your pajamas on and then I will read you a bedtime story."

What this does is reward the first step in the right direction, after which the child's own momentum can more easily carry him through to completion of the task.

Finally, it may sometimes be necessary to ignore resistance and proceed gently but firmly along the course you have chosen. It is important not to be impressed by the fuss he raises when you do this. Pay as little attention as possible to the fuss, avoid looking at him, and don't try to reason with him or "sweet talk" him while he is actively resisting. The extra attention merely reinforces his resisting behavior and he learns quickly that resisting brings him more attention.

A child this age characteristically shows no gradation of emotion. That means his response is all or nothing: he has not learned to display mild irritation when that is more appropriate to the situation.

The two's can be terrible. But take heart. The saying is "Terrible Twos and Trusting Threes, Frustrating Fours and Fascinating Fives." Better times are coming.

More information about this subject and about the physical and social development of children up to six years old can be gotten by writing to Growing Child, 22 North Second Street, P. O. Box 620N, Lafayette, Indiana 47902. When writing, include child's birthdate.

OMNIBUS

David Bowie enacts a scene without makeup, as in his Broadway triumph, of "The Elephant Man" in a segment of "Omnibus," an entertainment special spanning the arts and airing SUNDAY, APRIL 19 on ABC-TV.

Hosted by Hal Holbrook, the show will also feature Larry Hagman, Don Meredith, Bea Arthur and the Peking Opera Theatre of China. Larry Hagman, who is an American flag buff in private life, reviews its exciting history in a segment on "The Flag." Don Meredith serves as commentator and introduces a series of film and video clips that argues the question of whether instant replay should be the decisive factor in close calls in athletic events. Bea Arthur, backed by a trio of dancer-singers, culls 100 years worth of advice to women from American magazines.
