

Solid Waste Contract Here To Remain Intact

As Officials Reach Accord Here Monday

This Town...That World

Drowsy? Languid? Have a touch of the vapors? Well, here's a thought to keep you awake. It's only 23 days till Christmas.

AND NOW...

The last Thanksgiving drumstick had no more than been demolished than harried mothers and housewives began girding for the Christmas ordeal. What to buy for whom?...

I do not want to wear the mantle of Scrooge, but I've done a bit of figuring on this matter of buying gifts. If, for example, there are as many as a dozen members of the immediate family—husband, wife, children, in-laws, brothers, sisters, grandchildren—and each buys the other a gift, as many do, that means 121 gifts, and if they're all piled beneath or around one tree the place begins to look like a department store.

And, sure's you're born, there'll be some child within a block or so from you who gets almost nothing.

That thought also could shake some of us awake.

OOOPS!

To shift gears from the lugubrious to the ridiculous, I have been asked to in-

Responsibility for operating the county's solid waste system will remain with Floyd County Solid Waste, Inc. as long as the system has any bond indebtedness, according to an agreement concluded Monday between the Floyd fiscal court and the Kentucky Pollution Abatement Authority.

The pact appeared designed to lock into position even more securely the innovative county-operated trash collection and disposal system which became operational here in May with the help of a $495,000 grant from the Farmers' Home Administration and a $1.5 million bond issue.

Floyd County Solid Waste, Inc. is a non-profit agency set up by the fiscal court to administer the county's landfill and its trash-collecting fleet. The Kentucky Pollution Abatement Authority is said to have mediated the sale of bonds for the project.

According to the bargain struck at a special meeting of the fiscal court Monday, the "integrity and solvency" of the county garbage system requires

Arson Suspected in Blaze

Efforts by firefighting squads from Martin, Left Beaver, Allen and Maytown proved futile in the face of a blaze which destroyed Ray & Anita's Restaurant at Hite, last Tuesday night. Witnesses in the vicinity told state police a man was seen around the place at about the same time flames erupted from the 4,500-square-foot brick structure, and an arson investigation continued this week. Although the restaurant, which is owned by Harlan Ray and Anita Stumbo, was gutted by flame, firemen were able to protect nearby structures including Rita Renee's and S. & S. Market, which were threatened for a time.

Chances Dim For Funding US 23 Link

It might be a slim chance, but U.S. 23 could yet be upgraded to four lanes between Prestonsburg and Paintsville if a "finish-up" plan proposed recently by the Appalachian Regional Commission (ARC) is funded in the 1983 federal budget and approved by Congress.

The ARC, a victim of cuts by the Reagan administration this year, has proposed an eight-year plan to wind up its highway construction program and a three-part scheme to close out its area development program.

The highways plan calls for $2.27 billion in ARC funds between 1983 and 1990 to construct 554 of the 1474 miles which have been planned and authorized but not built.

To be constructed under the plan are about 60 miles of highway in eastern Kentucky, including sections of U.S. 23 in Boyd, Johnson, Floyd, Pike and Letcher counties and sections of U.S. 119 in Pike county. Specifically included is a 17.2 mile section of U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and a point north of Paintsville.

If the plan materializes, it will mean that about two-thirds—or 2100 miles—of the planned ARC corridor system will be built. Congress originally authorized construction of 3025 miles of highway in Appalachia, of which 1559 have been built since creation of the ARC in 1965.

In selecting the sections to be included in the finish-up program, ARC officials said they gave priority to those expected to carry most traffic, used to haul the most coal, most important as stateline crossings, or contributing most to corridor completion or regional economic development.

According to a proposal for winding down its area development activities, ARC proposes a five-year program to help "the most distressed and underdeveloped" counties meet critical water and sewage problems. Magoffin county is cited as a case in point.

Another five-year program would be aimed at creating or retaining private sector jobs and attracting private investment, and a three-year program would extend primary health care in areas with doctor shortages and high infant mortality rates.

Whether the Reagan administration can be persuaded to support the finish-up programs remains in doubt. The President's 1983 budget is scheduled to go to Congress in January.

Human Resources Budget To Be Topic Of Hearing

Persons wishing to comment on the budget proposed for next year by the Department for Human Resources are invited to attend a public hearing at 2:30 p.m. next Tuesday, December 8, in the Pike building at Prestonsburg Community College.

The hearings—Prestonsburg's will be the first in a series of five—are being conducted by Secretary Grady Stumbo at the request of Kentucky Action on Human Needs, a coalition of advocacy groups.

Special Prosecutors Asked in Two Cases

To avoid possible conflicts of interest, Commonwealth's Attorney James Allen this week relinquished prosecution of two cases awaiting trial here.

County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. confirmed Tuesday that, at Allen's request, he would be prosecuting the case of Torrence Wright, accused in the shooting death of his wife, Barbara, near Printer early this year. The case is set for trial December 14.

Allen is said to have stepped aside from the case because his partner, Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Jerry Patton, who assisted in taking a statement from Wright in connection with his wife's death, was representing Wright in a divorce proceeding at the time.

In another case, the state attorney-general will be asked to appoint a special prosecutor to try Olive Ann Meade, accused of assaulting her infant daughter, Allen said this week.

The case had been set for trial Monday this week. Similar charges against Mrs. Meade's husband, Ben, were recently dismissed for lack of evidence.

Allen cited recent criticism of his handling of the case as the reason for his stepping aside. Gary Johnson, Ben Meade's attorney, charged that Allen had held the threat of prosecution over Meade only to bring a guilty plea out of Meade's wife.

Allen insisted he had not tried to coerce Mrs. Meade but said he was withdrawing from the case out of concern that she feel confident of receiving a fair trial.

The case was continued to December 30, when another round of pretrial hearings is expected to begin. If the case goes to trial early next year, about two years will have elapsed since the time of the alleged assault.

The Meades were arrested February 21, 1980, after Bobby Jean Meade, one of triplets and then four months old, was admitted to a Louisville hospital, where a doctor reported she had suffered fractures to the head, ribs, and legs. The infant died later of a congenital illness.

Another of the triplets, Billy Joe, died February 17, 1980; the third was stillborn.

Handicapped, Elderly Lead Area Needs

The elderly and handicapped were apparently uppermost in the minds of a group which gathered last month to rank this area's needs.

The group, which met under the auspices of the Floyd County Rural Development Committee, was asked to list the area's needs in order of urgency. The ranking, Committee Chairman John Sparks said, will serve as a guide to the distribution of federal block grant funds in this state.

Increased services to the elderly and handicapped was named by a majority as the most urgent need here in the social services category. Providing safer and affordable housing for these groups, weatherizing their homes, providing them with transport facilities, and helping them meet their winter fuel bills also received high priority.

Among social services, the need for a juvenile detention center, the restoration of Medicaid benefits lost in recent budget cuts, and provision of a spouse and child abuse center also ranked high.

Expansion of health department services, restoration of the school nurses lost to federal budget cuts earlier this year, health education and screening services were listed most frequently in the health category.

Housing needs regarded as most urgent were the availability of low interest loans, assisted housing in the Right and Left Beaver Creek sections, and housing for the elderly and handicapped.

Building code enforcement, home loans to the poor, and a housing project on Abbott Mountain were also mentioned with relative frequency.

Providing more job opportunities, diversifying industry and seeking land for commercial and industrial use were listed most often under the category of economic development, with job training and tourism also

Local Oil Reserves Spur Data Search

Geologists have long known of the presence of oil reserves in a wide area of the Appalachians. The Oil Springs field in Johnson, Magoffin and Morgan counties has produced a small but steady stream of crude for decades. But with huge reservoirs in the Southwest and a healthy supply assured in past years, at least, from the Near East, the oil business in this section has generally been "small time" at best.

There is a resurgence in interest these post-oil-embargo days, however, in development of new domestic sources, generally, and the Appalachian section is being looked at with particular enthusiasm.

The search for eastern oil reserves has not skipped Floyd county. This week, Geo Seismic Services, Inc., a Houston, Texas-based firm, was winding up data collection exercises in the Little Paint-East Point section.

Dave Jones, head of a 35-man crew which has worked in Breathitt and Johnson counties as well as Floyd over the past month, would only say that Geo Seismic Services is contracted to "a major oil company" to conduct geological tests in the area.

According to Jones, oil company geologists look at all available information relating to the area of study and, based on their findings, specify where data collection should be carried out. In Floyd county, apparently, the area of the interest has been the section from Abbott Mountain all the way to the Johnson county line and beyond. (Similar testing was conducted by another company along Little Paint about a year ago.)

Testing procedure consists of laying literally miles of cable along highway right-of-way and staking the line with sensors which are spaced at regular intervals. Four specialized trucks called "vibrators" are equipped with large metal pads which are lowered onto the road pavement and send series of powerful shock waves into the ground. Sophisticated electronic equipment which is housed in a special van, records patterns returned by the shock waves as they "bounce" off various strata and subsurface features.

"This is strictly a first step in looking for possible oil reserves," Jones emphasized. "It's definitely a 'pig in a poke' proposition."

Jones said the company crew working here makes no analysis of data. "We don't know what the likelihood of oil or any other mineral being here is, and we're not really concerned with that. It's just our job to collect the data, send it to the oil company and let their computers and researchers interpret the information."

Jones said the crew here, which includes some local workers, is only one of dozens of Geo Seismic Services crews which are working from Kentucky as far south as Alabama. "Most of the research is still going on out west," Jones commented, "but we're starting to do a lot of work east of the Mississippi, too."

The company is working under a permit issued by the Kentucky Department of Highways.

OIL IN THEM THAR HILLS, or at least the possibility thereof, has been the focus of data collection work which was expected to be concluded this week in the Little Paint-East Point section of the county. Here, a technician for Geo Seismic Services, Inc., of Houston, Texas, mans equipment in a mobile recording van during testing operations, Monday.

Effort To Block Stripmine Fails

Property owners on Finance Hollow and Arkansas Creek, tributaries of Beaver Creek near Martin, have failed in an effort to block a stripmining permit sought by Triple Elkhorn Mining Company in that area. However, an official who listened to the landowners' protest at a Frankfort hearing has recommended that certain conditions be placed on the permit.

Everett Akers, of Finance Hollow, argued against issuance of the permit—which would allow mountaintop removal on a 150-acre site—claiming that blasting associated with Triple Elkhorn's previous mining in that area had damaged his home and a television antenna he owns nearby.

Joining Akers in his effort to halt the mining were Tandy Sammons, Scottie Crum and Minnie Prater, longtime residents of Wolf Hollow on Arkansas Creek.

One Injured in Crash of Car, Coal Truck

Coal, some 42 tons of it, and the wreckage of an automobile and coal truck trailer are strewn over a large area of the new KY 80 bridge near the "Y" at Martin. Traffic on the new road was tied up for about two hours late Sunday afternoon after the car, driven by Rick Farmer, of Phelps, reportedly pulled into the path of the 18-wheel tractor-trailer truck driven by Greg Mullins, of Jenkins. A passenger in the car, Dianne Lester, of Phelps, received leg injuries in the crash and was treated at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin. Drivers of both vehicles were unhurt. The automobile was reported "totaled" in the crash and the truck's trailer, which overturned, was also called a total loss and was valued at $22,000. The coal truck rig was owned by Woody Holbrook, of Whitesburg.

American Biologist Determined To Prove Jungle Creature Exists

Deep within the unexplored jungles of the Congo, tales of a fierce, dragon-like beast have been told by the native pygmies for the past 200 years. Dr. Roy P. Mackal, an American biologist, is convinced that the stories are true, and he has set out to prove the existence of a legendary beast the pygmies call mokele-mbembe (mo-KEL-ly-mm-BEM-be).

In the current issue of Ranger Rick's Nature Magazine Mackal describes his 1980 search for the beast and reveals he plans for a second safari into the African jungle in the fall of 1981.

The first report of the mokele-mbembe emerged in 1776 when a French priest wrote of seeing in the jungle strange footprints resembling an elephant's, but with claw marks. Mackal explains in the National Wildlife Federation's monthly publication for children. When more reports of the creature's existence emerged in the 1800's, four separate expeditions set out from 1812 to 1938 to solve the mystery behind the beast, also likened to a dinosaur. All four searches were unsuccessful. The heat, swamps, disease, and hostile natives proved too much for the explorers.

Then, last year, Mackal and James H. Powell, a crocodile specialist, set out to find the mokele-mbembe. The only way to cross the uncharted jungles of the Congo is on foot or by air. Mackal and Powell walked. The biologist describes the trek in Ranger Rick:

"The smell of the swampy muck was horrible. The heat was over 90 degrees each day. It seemed that every living thing tried to bite us or suck our blood. We had only freeze-dried food, smoked meat, and a little fruit to eat. Finding drinking water was always a big problem. I was never so glad to see anything in my life as the village that was to be our base camp."

Although most of the natives were afraid to talk about the mokele-mbembe, some did claim they had seen the animals. When shown pictures of different kinds of dinosaurs, they would always point to the brontosaurus and cry, "Mokele-mbembe!" From the pygmies' descriptions, Mackal found he was searching for animals with bodies the size of a hippo's, with long snake-like tails and necks. Their feet were supposedly clawed, their skin reddish brown or gray and hairless. Some of the creatures were said to have rooster-like combs along the backs of their necks.

The natives led Mackal and Powell to river banks where a vine called the molombo grew. The pretty flowering vine was supposedly a favorite food of the mokele-mbembe. About 20 years ago, the pygmies said, the beasts began coming to a lake where molombo grew and where the natives liked to fish. In an attempt to stop the creatures the villagers sharpened large trees into stakes and drove them into the river bottom near the entrance to the lake. But the huge fence didn't stop the mokele-mbembe.

When one of the animals broke through the fence, the pygmies speared the beast, cut it up, and ate the meat. Then, the story goes, all the people who dined on mokele-mbembe died.

"The last time anyone reported seeing one of these animals was in 1979," Mackal writes in Ranger Rick. "The natives urged us to stay and perhaps see one for ourselves." But because they were running out of money and supplies, Mackal's expedition had to leave.

For his 1981 expedition Mackal and Powell recruited two other scientists and planned to venture into the jungle with ten porters. They planned to take video equipment to set up on the river banks where the molombo grows. With a sonar-like device that bounces sound waves off the underwater objects they also hoped to scan jungle waterways.

Does the mokele-mbembe really exist? "My companions from my last trip and I are sure that some strange animal is really out there," says Mackal, 56, a former research associate in biology at the University of Chicago. If Mackal's hunch is right—and his camera works—he may bring back a videocassette of the strangest animal ever taped for TV.

More Pay for Less Work

Elimination of the system, which generally was labeled as "iniquitous," has failed to achieve any visible saving to the taxpayer.

The General Assembly, by fixing the maximum salary that may be paid a magistrate, for example, at $27,500 a year, pretty well settled the matter for those who pay the taxes. At the same time, it "compounded the felony" by enacting a law that reduces the duties of a magistrate to the bare minimum—requiring attendance at fiscal court meetings and performance of legislative duties only.

No longer may a justice of the peace issue a summons, a warrant of arrest or any other court document, nor may he or she preside at the trial of any case, be it never so trivial. Moreover, such an official, we learn, may no longer under present law act in an executive or administrative capacity such as supervising road construction or repair.

If that is the last word of the Legislature about the matter, time is left hanging heavy with these officials. They have time left that may, and often is, spent in "moonlighting" on other jobs.

Yet the annual pay of Floyd county's magistrates now stands at $20,300 (including expenses)—up almost 70% from the $12,000 paid them four years ago.

Is it any wonder that bond issues and new taxes are met with such stout opposition from the voters?

that the present contract with Floyd County Solid Waste "remain intact." The fiscal court agreed not to transfer responsibility for the system to any other entity during the life of the bonds.

In August the fiscal court granted Floyd County Solid Waste exclusive rights to operate the system here for 20 years. Last month the court ordered an audit of the system's books in an effort to forestall any suggestion of impropriety in the operation of the system.

Meanwhile, the two magistrates who will be leaving the court at the end of this month, having lost their bids for re-election, urged stronger enforcement of the solid waste ordinance.

District 1 Magistrate Ray Wilcox complained of householders who spurn the authorized trash collectors and then dump their refuse by the side of a road. District 4 Magistrate Hershel Hamilton said many residents are apparently unaware that use of the garbage collection system is mandatory.

Judge-Executive Bill Wells said the county is preparing to file suit against some people who have questioned the legal standing of the county solid waste ordinance. In addition, the court voted to ask Sheriff Henry Hale to appoint ecology officers to police the county's littering problem.

The present fiscal court would not have time to revise the county's cable TV franchise ordinance even if it wanted to, County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. told the court. Next to the solid waste system, the regulation of cable TV operators is probably the issue in which the present court has invested most of its time and prestige.

Following a state Appeals Court ruling which invalidated the existing ordinance on technical grounds several months ago, discussion has centered on whether to reinstate a franchise system giving cable operators here exclusive rights to service certain areas or to establish a regulatory agency without setting franchise boundaries.

Magistrate Kenneth Roberts advocated the establishment of a commission to regulate TV rates but said franchising should be abandoned in favor of free competition among operators. Magistrate Wilcox warned, however, that one or two large operators could soon dominate the cable TV market here.

In any event, with the growth of cable TV in the state's urban areas, the industry will likely come under the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission in the near future, County Attorney Turner opined.

mentioned among needs in this category.

Funds for textbooks and teaching aids, for vocational education, and for repair of school buildings were most frequently cited as educational needs, with special education and the Headstart program also said to be pressing.

Improving the county's secondary roads, establishing a bus system, and eliminating high-hazard sections on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville were given top priority among transportation needs. Upgrading coal haul roads and replacing the Tram bridge were also cited relatively often.

With regard to land-use planning, flood prevention and drainage, expansion of the sanitary landfill, use of stripmined areas, and rechanneling of the Big Sandy and Beaver Creek were listed as more urgent needs.

In the environmental protection category, the group urged expansion of the Prestonsburg sewage system, funding for ecology officers, and enforcement of laws regarding the covering of coal trucks and discharge of sewage.

Setting up recycling centers for oil, paper and glass, and energy assistance and weatherization for poor, elderly and handicapped persons were listed as the more urgent energy needs. Some also thought education in the use of solar energy worth funding.

Among needed community services, top priority was given to the expansion of fire, rescue and ambulance services. Extension of water, power and sewer lines to open up land for housing and industry, consolidation of the countywide solid waste system, and extension of the Beaver-Elkhorn Water District were also cited among the more pressing needs.

Results of the needs survey here will be sent to the Governor's Balanced Economic Growth Council, which is responsible for recommending how the federal funds which will come to the state next year as block grants should be distributed.

Says Trees Hide Lake

Several years ago I vacationed in your beautiful state. One of the most beautiful areas was Dewey Lake in Jenny Wiley State Park.

Can you imagine what a disappointment it was this summer to visit this same area? You can hardly see the lake for all the trees that have grown around it. Isn't there some way this area can be kept better cleared for a better view of that peaceful lake?

Missing Child Act

Currently, there is a bill entitled "Missing Child Act" which lobbyists are trying to get passed in both the U.S. House and Senate. Briefly, this bill is to aid in gathering information on missing children which would enable the FBI to be called in sooner. It would also allow states to feed specific information into a computer which could be used nationwide in identifying children's bodies. In general, this bill is to urge the government to become involved in aiding families in their search for their children. This does not involve parental snatching.

If interested in the above, obtain as many signatures as you can in your area and mail them to me at Box 419, Winchester, Kentucky 40319. I will forward all of them to my congressman. Thank you for your endeavor.

New KY 80 Opens Quietly But Officially

New, four-lane KY 80, Kentucky's first "resource recovery road," was officially opened to traffic Nov. 19, but its new status was accomplished so quietly that few were aware of it.

It simply went into the record as officially open, this 43-mile highway through the hills from Water Gap in this county, through Knott county and ending at Hazard, Perry county.

The $274 million road wasn't dedicated, and it may never be, for such a formality would require that the heavily traveled route be temporarily closed.

Its official opening to traffic came four years and two months after the first contract was awarded in September, 1977.

The only formal dedication of any section of the route was made by Governor Julian Carroll, shortly before the expiration of his term of office. The exercises, held at Water Gap, were marked by Carroll's address in which he spoke of the extra thickness of the base and surfacing to guarantee that the highway would stand up under the anticipated heavy loads of coal.

But as cost of the highway mounted, the incoming administration of Gov. John Y. Brown reduced the thickness of the roadway in then-incomplete sectors as an economy measure. The lime stone used for base was discarded in favor of native sandstone. Thicknesses varied from sector to sector.

But, engineers said, there was no sacrifice of load-bearing strength.

Others have wondered, however, how well the highway will stand up under continued heavy use. Sandstone had not been used for base until KY 80 in its cost problems came along, it was said.

What will the highway be named, not simply KY 80? Many have urged that it be named for Governor Carroll, who engineered its funding, got it well under way and so committed the state to its completion that it could not be stopped. Others have asked that the road be named for Congressman Carl D. Perkins. But these suggestions were met by a Department of Transportation statement that it had adopted a policy which does not permit this or any other road to be named in honor of a living person.

Cost of actual construction of KY 80 was $220 million. The remaining $54 million in overall cost was split up into $23 million for right-of-way, $22 million for design of the route and $9 million for relocation of utilities.

All of KY 80's 43 miles is black-topped, except for 4-1/2 miles of concrete in Knott county. The last section of the road to be completed, making its official opening possible, was a three-mile stretch in Knott county, mostly on Rock Fork Creek, which ends near the Floyd-Knott line.

Friendly persuasion.

What would it take to persuade you to join the Payroll Savings Plan and buy U.S. Savings Bonds? We could appeal to your patriotism. Or we could point out the dangers of not preparing for the future.

Instead, we'll just point out in a very friendly way that Bonds are one of the easiest ways to save. Even if saving has always been difficult for you. The Payroll Savings Plan sets aside a little from each paycheck toward Savings Bonds. And that's a nice way of saving, because you'll hardly miss it. But if you need it, it'll be there. Just like a friend.

Take stock in America.

When you put part of your savings into U.S. Savings Bonds you're helping to build a brighter future for your country and for yourself.

Heart attack or stroke could make the best years of your life the worst.

You have loved ones, a future, good health. It could all be lost with a heart attack or stroke. And that happens. Last year, nearly one million Americans died of heart disease and stroke. And 200,000 of them died before retirement age.

The American Heart Association is fighting to reduce early death and disability from heart disease and stroke with research, professional and public education, and community service programs.

But more needs to be done. You can help us support research and education by sending your dollars today to your local Heart Association, listed in your telephone directory.

Cooking in the Cumberlands

By IRENE HAYES

Of all the holidays, Christmas is the best loved, most festive and most widely celebrated. Even the hardest hearts melt at Christmas. To children it is a world of enchantment.

I can recall Christmas at home when I was very young. I remember in particular a doll I received. The doll was all I asked for and all I wanted. It was dressed in a pale orange dress, and to me it was the most beautiful doll in the world. We treasured gifts more then because we received fewer of them than children do now.

I would like to urge young mothers to begin now to plan special activities for their families and to include them each Christmas. That is what their children will remember when they are grown. So many parents complain that they wish their married children would come home to visit at Christmas. You must make it so enjoyable that they can't stay away. You must begin early to create an atmosphere that is special to your family. I think that going home for the holidays is a wonderful experience. When you can no longer go home the memories become more precious.

When my children were young and on up through their teenage years, we selected a fatherless family whom we could help to have a better Christmas. My children were better shoppers than I. They could purchase far more than I could for the same amount of money. Taking gifts and food to the family on Christmas eve was a source of great joy to my children. They could hardly wait to get started. My oldest daughter told me years later that she could remember what she had bought for the other children but could not remember what she received. They benefited more than the children who received the gifts.

Too often we let the pressure of cleaning, decorating, gift buying and wrapping, cooking and baking rob us of the pleasures of Christmas. I have been guilty of this and I regret it.

We sometimes have ham and sometimes we have turkey for Christmas dinner. When I have ham I like to bake a hen so we can have dressing made with rich broth, as it is a family favorite. Scalloped Oysters is a favorite dish for many people, especially men. The following recipe was given by Rita Justice of Zebulon, Kentucky.

Scalloped Oysters

Preheat oven to 350°. Grease an 11-1/2 x 7-1/2 x 1-1/2 inch baking dish with butter. Arrange one half of 1 pint of large select oysters in baking dish.

COMBINE:
4 tbsps. melted butter
1 1/2 cups soft bread crumbs
1 tsp. celery seed (optional)
1 1/4 tps. salt
1/4 tsp. white pepper
Sprinkle half of this mixture over oysters.

POUR over crumbs: 1/4 cup light cream (20 percent)
Repeat, using balance of oysters and bread crumbs.

POUR over all: 1/4 cup light cream
The liquid should come about 3/4 of the way up on the oysters.
Sprinkle with paprika if desired.
Bake uncovered 30 to 40 minutes in 350° oven or until golden brown.

I always plan to have salad with lots of color. The following Christmas Salad is one of the very best. Mrs. James E. Allen, of Langley, Kentucky, gave me the recipe. It sounds complicated but it isn't. Be sure to set each layer thoroughly before adding the next layer. Cool the last layer completely before adding it. You can have it mixed from the beginning and it will be cool enough by the time you need it. The best part is that you can make this salad a day or two ahead of time.

Christmas Salad

Dissolve 2 (3 oz.) pkgs. strawberry gelatin in 1-1/2 cups boiling water. Add 1-1/2 cups cold water. Pour into a 9 x 13 2-inch pan or glass baking dish. Chill until set.

Melt 1 lb. marshmallows with 3 tps. water in top of double boiler. Remove from heat.

ADD: 1 (3 oz.) pkg. softened cream cheese
Blend well.

Dissolve 2 (3 oz.) pkgs. lime gelatin in 1 1/2 cups boiling water. Add 1 cup cold water. Cool. Combine with marshmallow mixture.

THEN ADD:
1 tsp. tarragon vinegar
1 (8 oz.) can crushed pineapple, drained
1/2 cup chopped nuts
Cool in the refrigerator but do not allow to set.

WHIP until stiff: 1/2 pint whipping cream.
Fold into marshmallow mixture. Spread over top of strawberry gelatin. Chill until firmly set.

Meanwhile dissolve 2 (3 oz.) pkgs. strawberry gelatin in 1 1/2 cups boiling water. Add 1 1/2 cups cold water. Cool completely. Pour over top of green mixture. Chill until set. Cut into squares and serve.

I love jam cakes and the following is one of the best. It was given to me by Mrs. Joseph Hiller of London, Kentucky.

Jam Cake

Note: For best results, all ingredients should be at room temperature. CREAM TOGETHER until light and fluffy:

1/2 cup shortening
2 cups sugar
THEN ADD: 5 unbeatn eggs
Mix well, THEN STIR IN: 1 cup butter-milk

SIFT TOGETHER:
3 1/2 cups flour
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. allspice
1 tsp. cloves
1 tsp. soda
1/2 tsp. salt

Add to above mixture and mix until well blended.
THEN ADD:
2 tps. vanilla
2 cups blackberry jam
1 cup chopped pecans or walnuts

Pour into 3 greased and floured layer cake pans.
Bake 45 to 50 minutes in 300° oven or until done when tested.

If tube pan is used bake 2 hours in 300° oven.
Spread icing (below) between layers and on top and sides of cake.

ICING

COMBINE:
1 cup brown sugar
3 tps. shortening
2 tps. butter or margarine
Boil 1 minute.

THEN ADD:
1/4 cup evaporated or whole sweet milk
5 marshmallows
Cook over low heat until marshmallows melt. Cool.

THEN ADD:
2 cups powdered sugar
Blend well.

When I was young, mother allowed the youngest children to decorate gingerbread boys and girls. We loved it. If you have teenagers, begin now to teach them to bake the cookies and make candy. It will be good experience for them and helpful too.

When my children were home we always sang Christmas carols on Christmas eve. Sometimes carols were present and sometimes not. This is the time for cookies and a hot drink. Hot Buttered Cranberry Punch is one of the best for the holidays. It will probably become your favorite holiday drink as it is for many others. The delicious aroma of the spices adds to the holiday atmosphere. This recipe was given to me by Frances Brown, of Murray, Kentucky.

Hot Buttered Cranberry Punch

COMBINE:
1/2 tsp. whole allspice
3 (2-inch) sticks cinnamon
1 tsp. whole cloves
1/3 cup brown sugar

Place in percolator basket.
POUR into bottom of percolator:
1 pint cranberry juice cocktail
1 (No. 2) can unsweetened pineapple juice

Perk 5 to 10 minutes. Remove basket.
ADD: 1 tbsp. butter
Serve hot.

One of the best cookies is Christmas Rock Cookies. They are easy to make and delicious too. The recipe was given to me by Stacy Conn, of Betsy Layne, Kentucky.

Christmas Rock Cookies

CREAM:
1 scant cup butter
1 1/2 cups sugar
ADD and BLEND WELL. 3 eggs

THEN ADD:
1 scant tsp. soda dissolved in 2 tps. hot water

COMBINE:
3 cups flour
1 pound nuts, chopped
1 pound dates, chopped
1/2 cup candied cherries
Pinch of salt
1 tsp. cloves
1 pound raisins
1 tsp. cinnamon

Add to above mixture. Use half red and half green candied cherries for more color. You can use half black walnuts and half English walnuts if desired.

Drop by teaspoonfuls onto greased baking sheet, 2 inches apart.
Bake 5 to 8 minutes in 350° oven.

Make this a very special Christmas. Plan ahead and then relax and enjoy it with your family, the most precious people on earth. If you know someone who will be alone on Christmas include them in your plans. It will make your day happier. I wish for you the happiest of holidays.

HEALTH NEWS

By JANE BOND
Health Educator

Over 11,000 women in the United States die each year from cervical cancer. This is a real tragedy since this type of cancer can be one of the most curable of all cancers if it is detected early enough and treatment is started. The test for cervical cancer is simple and painless and takes only a few moments to perform. Women can protect themselves from cervical cancer by having Pap tests regularly.

The Floyd County Health Department is having a Pap clinic Friday, December 4, from 8 until 11:30 and from 1 until 2. This clinic is a free service of the health department and any woman who has not had a Pap test in the past year is urged to take advantage of this service.

On Monday December 7, a nurse from the Health Department will be in Martin at the Beaver Valley Clinic from 10 until 2. She will be offering T.B. skin tests, urinalyses, blood pressures, immunizations, and Pap tests. This clinic is a free service of the health department and the public is welcome.

Glaucoma is the second leading cause of blindness in adults striking painlessly without symptoms. The best way to be protected from glaucoma is to have regular checks for the disease. The Floyd County Health Department is having a glaucoma screening clinic on Wednesday December 9. This clinic is a free service of the health department and is open to persons of all ages. Persons age 35 and over are especially urged to take advantage of this clinic since that is the high risk age for glaucoma.

WHEELER WINS ELECTION FOR CIRCUIT JUDGE

Wins By Majority of 45 Votes Over Judge Williams

OFFICIAL RETURNS IN

Two races for circuit judge in the recent election resulted in the most interesting political campaigns conducted in Kentucky this year and in the barest margins for the victors.

In the Floyd-Knott district, C. B. Wheeler, of this place, defeated Judge W. W. Williams, candidate for incumbency to the office, by a majority of 45 votes, official returns show.

Returns, as approved by the election commissioners of Floyd and Knott counties, show that Judge Williams polled a total of 4,723 votes in this county, and 1,689 in Knott. Judge Wheeler received 4,874 votes in Floyd and 1,583 in Knott.

Sampson's majority over Beckham is well over 20,000, it is believed. Forty-three counties are still out in the official tabulation, and the minor state races are, as a result, undecided.

O. H. Stumbo, Democrat, of Prestonsburg, won out over George T. Roberts, Republican, of Harold, for circuit court clerk by a majority of 378 votes. Stumbo polled 4,944 votes to Roberts' 4,566, returns show.

For State Senator from the Floyd-Pike-Knott district, H. D. Fitzpatrick, Republican, of Prestonsburg, defeated Dr. Alex L. Hill, Democrat, also of this place, by 1,039 votes, with Kennedy precinct in this county not counted in the race. The winner polled 4,590 votes in Floyd, 7,370 in Pike and 694 in Knott. Hill's vote was 4,093 in Floyd, 5,620 in Pike and 1,902 in Knott.

The majority of Rev. A. L. Allen, of Allen, over Representative W. S. Wallen, Democrat, of this place, is placed at 671, with Kennedy precinct not listed by the election commissioners. Allen's vote totaled 4,561 and Wallen's 3,890.

MRS. HELEN CARVER DIES SATURDAY NIGHT

Mrs. Helen Carver, 25 years old, died Saturday evening at 10 o'clock at Martin, and the body was shipped by G. D. Ryan, undertaker, to her old home at Johnson City, Tenn., for burial.

Mrs. Carver moved to Martin with her husband, L. R. Carver, C. and O. brakeman, about two years ago. She was a member of the Catholic Church, and had many friends at Martin. She is survived by her husband and three children, and by her parents, who live in Johnson City.

HELP OFFERED FOR CRIPPLES

Further efforts are being made in this county to locate crippled children and to offer them such aid as will correct their handicaps, according to Miss Anna B. Quinn, representative of the Kentucky Crippled Children's Commission, who was in Prestonsburg last week.

Lon S. Moles, of this place, is aiding in this work, as he has done previously, and all cases needing treatment should be reported to him. The Floyd County Health Unit is also co-operating in the work.

Crippled children from this county will be taken to the Baptist hospital, Ashland, for treatment free of charge. Since the commission was established, more than 1,000 crippled children have been corrected of their handicaps. Hundreds who, otherwise, would have gone through life physically twisted have been sent home after treatment with little to show of their former pitiable condition. Already in Floyd county 50 cripples have been located and 20 of these cases have been corrected.

Mrs. Herbert Salisbury and children, of Ligon, came down Wednesday for a visit with relatives here.

SISTER OF J. A. VINSON DIES IN LOUISA, NOV. 9

The following, taken from The Big Sandy News, tells of the death of Mrs. Jennie Vinson Garrard, a sister of J. A. Vinson, of Glo, this county:

MRS. JENNIE GARRED DIES Mrs. Jennie Vinson Garred was found dead in her room in Louisa Wednesday morning about 10 o'clock. Mrs. G. R. Vinson and Miss Betty Skeens went to her room at that hour and found the lifeless form. It was evident that death had come painlessly and that the spark of life had gone out only a short while before. She had made the request the night before that she be not disturbed the next morning and for this reason no one visited her room earlier.

Heart trouble was, no doubt, the cause of her death, as she had been a sufferer from this trouble for several years. About two weeks ago Mrs. Garred returned to Louisa from Detroit, where she had spent several months with her daughter. Her state of health had been precarious for a long time. She had suffered the loss of her husband and her only son within the last two years. She was the widow of Mr. A. J. Garred, a well-known attorney and former county official, who died suddenly in his home.

Mrs. Garred is survived by one daughter, Mrs. L. Brode, of Detroit, and three grand children. Her son, Richard V. Garred, of Lexington, died about two years ago. Mrs. Garred was the daughter of Judge Richard F. Vinson and Mrs. Georgia Randall Vinson, and was a life-long resident of Louisa. She was a sister of Mrs. Victoria Prichard and G. R. Vinson, of Louisa, J. A. Vinson, of Garrett, and Mrs. Dora Geever, of Nuttallburg, W. Va.

Mrs. Matilda Griffith Succumbs Here Friday

Mrs. Matilda Griffith died here Friday, November 11, at the home of Mr. Lee May in her 75th year after a brief illness.

Mrs. Griffith was well-known in Prestonsburg, and was one of the best women in Floyd county. She had been a member of the Freewill Baptist Church for 41 years, and her life was that of the pioneer Christian and mother.

The deceased, before marriage, was Miss Matilda Cisco, of Pike county. Her husband died 29 years ago. She had been in Prestonsburg for several years, and had lived at the home of Mr. May for some time.

Surviving Mrs. Griffith are the following children: Mrs. Pricey Spears, of Catlettsburg; Mrs. Vicky Burchett, Auxier; Mrs. Zella Burchett, of German, this county; All G. and Lindsay Griffith, of Thomas; George Griffith, of McVeigh; Wallace Griffith, of Auxier, and John Griffith, of Columbus, O. Several brothers live on Johns Creek, Pike county.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Isaac Stratton and Rev. Malcolm Hubbard, and burial was made Sunday in the Spears cemetery at the mouth of Buffalo Creek. E. P. Arnold and Company directed the funeral and burial.

D. A. R. CHAPTER IN MEETING, TUESDAY

The John Graham Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, were delightfully entertained on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. W. H. Layne on Second Avenue.

The meeting was presided over by the regent, Mrs. George P. Archer. Preceding the opening of the meeting Prof. T. J. Curry made a talk concerning education in Eastern Kentucky. Several matters of interest to the members were brought up and discussed at the business meeting.

After the business was disposed of, Mrs. Jo M. Davidson had charge of the evening's program. "The Women of the Revolution" was the subject of the evening and proved one of the most interesting of the years stories. At the close of a very pleasant evening the hostess, assisted by Miss Susan Wallace, served a delicious salad course.

Those enjoying the affair were: Mrs. Geo. P. Archer, Mrs. L. S. Moles, Mrs. Waid Cross, Mrs. C. W. May, Mrs. E. A. Stumbo, Mrs. H. D. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. S. L. Spradlin, Mrs. Winnie F. Johns, Mrs. Grace D. Ford, Mrs. W. S. Wells, Mrs. Jo M. Davidson, Mrs. E. P. Arnold, Mrs. C. Y. Ligon, Mrs. W. S. Harkins, Mrs. A. C. Harlowe, Mrs. W. H. Layne. Visitors present were: Mrs. J. D. Harkins, Mrs. F. L. Heinze, Mrs. F. A. Hopkins, and Miss Susan Wallace.

WILLIE BURCHETT KILLED WHEN HIT BY FREIGHT TRAIN

Willie Burchett, 18 years old, was struck and instantly killed, sometime between eight and nine o'clock Tuesday evening, by a manifest freight a few hundred yards above the Colonial Coal and Coke Company tippie, a short distance above here.

Particulars of the tragedy are un-supplied, since the victim was un-accompanied at the time of his death. Members of the train crew reported to another freight at West Prestonsburg that they believed the train had struck a man. The train which caused the youth's death was bound down-river under rush orders, and the other train made the trip back to the spot where the body lay.

County Judge Ed Hill conducted an inquest, and the body was removed to the undertaking establishment of E. P. Arnold and Company, where preparations for burial were made.

The victim was the son of Tom P. and Nettie Elam Burchett, who reside here. Besides his parents, he is survived by one brother, Harvey Burchett, and three sisters, Mrs. Goldie May and Misses Thelma and Elizabeth May Burchett, all of Prestonsburg.

The youth was a miner, employed by the Colonial Coal and Coke Company, with which firm his father is electrician.

Funeral services were conducted Thursday morning by Rev. George Rose and Rev. Malcolm Hubbard, with E. P. Arnold, undertaker, directing funeral and burial. Interment will be made in the family burial ground at Sugar Loaf, where Mr. and Mrs. Burchett lived prior to moving to Prestonsburg.

FATHER OF MRS. E. D. BAGBY DIES

Was Well-Known Designer Of Steamboat Machinery

The death of George Shelton, Sr., prominent Paducah business man and father of Mrs. E. D. Bagby, of Prestonsburg, occurred Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 8, at his home in Paducah. Of his death, the Paducah Evening Sun carries the following account, which includes an interesting sketch of his life:

"George Shelton, Sr., 66 years of age and one of the most prominent business men in the city, died yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock at his home, 231 Fountain Avenue. His death followed an illness of complications, lasting six months.

"Mr. Shelton was born in Metropolis, Ill., on March 10, 1861. He moved to Paducah thirty-six years ago, and has resided here since that time. He operated the Shelton Brothers' Foundry, and specialized in the building of steamboat machinery.

"Mr. Shelton was the inventor of a water pump used universally on steamboats in river trade. This pump was known as the "Steamboat Doctor." Mr. Shelton's father, one of the early settlers of Metropolis, brought the first steam threshing machines to this county.

"He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Mollie Shelton, three daughters, Mrs. Slavia Hall, and Mrs. Douglas Bagby, of Prestonsburg, and Mrs. Edwin Taylor Smith, of Winchester, Ky.; six sons, Howard E., George Jr., James Boyd, Fred and Russell, all of this city; four brothers, Henry Shelton, of Paducah; Ed Shelton, of Paducah; Joe Shelton, of Evansville, Ind.; and John Shelton, of Metropolis.

"Mr. Shelton was the best-known designer of steamboat machinery on inland waters. He patented several machines of international distribution. Mr. Shelton received his college education at Cincinnati, Ohio.

"Funeral services for Mr. Shelton will be held at the residence Thursday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, with the Rev. A. L. Currie, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, of which church Mr. Shelton was a member of long standing, officiating. Burial will be made in Maplelawn cemetery."

Joe Ward left Thursday evening for Chicago, where he will purchase equipment for his new theatre here.

CHARITIES BOARD OUTLAY IS LEAST MADE FOR STATE

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 11—The biennial report of the State Board of Charities and Corrections for the period from July 1, 1925, to June 30, 1927, required by law to be published in pamphlet form in advance of the assembling of the legislature, is ready for the printer.

It shows per capita expenditures for general maintenance and operation reduced to the lowest figure ever reached—$142.22. This is the average net cost to the State for one year for each person in the seven charitable and penal institutions, and is the lowest cost shown in the history of the Board of Charities and Corrections.

In getting these costs down, there has been no lowering of the standards in well-cooked food, in sanitation, in medical attention, or in general efficiency effecting the inmates and patients. Many repairs and replacements were made during this period.

The average population for all the institutions for the year ending June 30th, 1927, was 8209, the highest ever reached in Kentucky. At the beginning of this biennial period it was 7877. In 1921 the number was 6762.

The compensation paid to prisoners in the penitentiaries out of their earnings on contract work, at ten cents per day each, amounted to $70,260.94 for fiscal year ending June 30, 1927.

Farm lands at three institutions have been rented and cultivated very profitably. The Board is urging the legislature to buy farms for the two prisons. One near Frankfort should be bought with a view to building a new prison on it with prison labor, is the suggestion.

Thirty-two thousand (32,000) gallons of tomatoes and beans have been canned this season from the farm at Lakeland Central State Hospital.

At Greendale 255 acres of adjacent land was bought in 1926 for the House of Reform, making the total acreage 450. With the aid of the Agricultural Experiment Station Experts, University of Kentucky, a very definite and comprehensive plan of cultivation and rotation of crops for a four year period has been worked out for this farm. Also, an orchard of six acres has been set out with choice varieties of trees. Six acres have been planted with strawberries and three acres with raspberries. Also 1000 grapevines have been planted. The Experiment Station will supervise the cultivation of crops, thus giving the inmates the advantages of learning scientific methods of farming. A fine purebred dairy here is maintained on the Greendale farm.

For 15 years or more the water supply at the Houses of Reform has been inadequate. The only source has been the Lexington Water Company's line, five miles long and entirely too small to serve all the users along the route. Two deep wells on the grounds have been put into commission to supplement the city supply, and this will remedy a very bad situation of long standing. A water softening plant just being installed will greatly improve all the water for general use, and also will stop the formation of scales in the boilers.

New boilers have been installed at the Houses of Reform and the State Penitentiary, and a new engine at the Eastern State Hospital.

W. M. Stone Dies Near Louisa Friday

W. M. Stone, 84 years old, died at the home of his son, R. A. Stone, three miles south of Louisa, late Friday evening, November 11. His remains were interred in Pine Hill cemetery at Louisa Sunday afternoon by the side of his wife, who preceded him in death many years ago.

Captain Stone was for more than a quarter of a century a familiar figure at and about the court house here, most of the time serving as deputy sheriff, first under one sheriff and then another, a kind of court attendant, and knew nearly every citizen in the county, personally, all of whom regret his departure.

He is survived by his son, R. A. Stone, with whom he made his home in recent years, and one daughter, Mrs. Tom Beavers, of Vienna, Va.

The deceased was the father-in-law of Mrs. Lou Gearheart Stone, former Floyd county girl, who has many relatives in this county.

HEALTH UNIT CONDUCTS SUCCESSFUL CLINIC HERE

A very successful pre-school clinic was held in the office of the Health Department Monday, November 14. Dr. Grant Rice gave all children present a physical examination, besides weighing and measuring them. He was assisted by Miss Betts and Miss Small.

A great improvement was noted in children who had been examined at the fair, a month ago.

There are still a large number of children in Prestonsburg who were not present Monday, Dr. Rice said. The health department is anxious for the mothers to make a practice of bringing the children once a month to the clinics. These clinics will be held on the second Monday afternoon of each month from 1 to 4 o'clock.

A record is kept of each child, so that at any time the mothers will be able to know just how much progress their children are making.

It is also advisable for all school children to have diphtheria toxin-antitoxin to protect the children from diphtheria, Dr. Rice said. This gives a life immunity. Any mother who has seen her child suffering with diphtheria will realize the great value of the toxin-antitoxin.

MEMBER OF KENTUCKY HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Lon S. Moles, prominent Prestonsburg business man, has been elected to membership in the Kentucky Historical Society. Mr. Moles has evinced intense interest in Kentucky history, and especially in the quaint relics and legends of this section of the state, and will prove an active member in the Society.

ROAD PLANS ARE CHECKED

Commission Considers John's Creek Route Construction

Answering the request made at the State Highway Commission meeting in Frankfort, Nov. 10, that the Beaver Creek road in this county be let to contract, the office engineer of the department reported that plans for this road would not be completed until Nov. 20, according to minutes of the meeting furnished Judge Ed Hill and A. J. May by E. N. Todd, state highway engineer.

Change in route of the Beaver Creek road at Dinwood is being contended for and against, and the Commission has decided to hold the matter in abeyance until all data relative to the two routes is furnished the office at Frankfort.

The route advocated by J. S. Bentley, engineer on the road, follows the left side of Beaver Creek to Maytown, while the other, proposed by B. L. C. May, would go via Dinwood and up the right side of the creek. An effort will be made to prevent indefinite postponement of action regarding this road.

Request was made at this meeting by A. J. May that the Commission take over construction of the John's Creek road, approximately 14 miles in length, and the engineer was directed to have a survey made from the mouth of Brandy Keg up John's Creek to the Pike county line at the mouth of Brushy. The survey is necessary, it is said, before the Commission can take any action in regard to the road.

County Judge Ed Hill said this week that an effort would be made by him and the fiscal court to have the State Highway Commission take over the Left Beaver road, also.

Two-Year Old Child Succumbs to Poison

Phyllis Rice, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Rice, of Garrett, died Saturday evening 20 minutes after swallowing three strychnine tablets while Mrs. Rice was absent from the room.

The child's body was prepared for burial by G. D. Ryan, undertaker, and was shipped Monday to Sherman, Johnson county, for burial. Funeral services were conducted at Sherman Tuesday.

Surviving the child are its parents, two sisters and one brother. The father is assistant mine foreman for the Elk Horn Coal Corporation at Garrett.

LAKE COAL RATE HEARING BEFORE COMMISSION ON

Producing and Consuming States Arrayed For Fight

CASE OPENED WEDNESDAY

Hearing of the new lake cargo rate cases started before members of the Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington Wednesday, November 16. James D. Francis, chairman of the lake cargo rate committee representing the operators of southern West Virginia, Eastern Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee, together with other operators, left for Washington Sunday evening.

Before the hearing opened on Wednesday it was promised that there would be arrayed on the side of the southern railroads which are seeking to reduce rates to the lake ports, official and private support not only from the coal producing states, but from the great coal consuming states of the northwest as well.

Other States Affected The consumer states, which pay the freight, and who stand to benefit by the proposed cut, have manifested great interest in the cause, while the coal producing states have rallied vigorously to the support of the operators and the roads.

The cases in which evidence is to be taken, first at Washington and later at Minneapolis, is that of the Chesapeake and Ohio, Norfolk and Western and Louisville and Nashville railroads which filed a schedule of tariffs involving a 20 per cent reduction on coal to the lake cargo ports. This reduction, offered following a series of conferences of railroad officials with coal operators, would have, if permitted to have become effective, offset a 20 per cent reduction previously ordered by the commission in behalf of shippers from Pittsburgh and Ohio No. 3 fields. The schedules, however, were hastily suspended by the commission, and the hearing ordered which began Wednesday.

It is anticipated that the Pennsylvania operators who have been fighting for a number of years for an increase in the differential spread between rates from their fields to the lake and those from the southern fields, will offer determined resistance to the reduction.

FmHA Director Sees Improved Operations

The Farmers Home Administration will try to do a better job of tailoring loans to the needs of the borrower, according to State Director Kendall Seaton.

"We are trying to reduce the number of delinquent notes," Seaton said. "This will be accomplished through stepped up collection efforts, consolidation and rescheduling of notes."

Seaton said the agency is making an effort to improve the quality of its loan servicing which should reduce delinquent notes and loan losses.

"Supervision extended to farm borrowers will be re-emphasized in upgrading our over-all operations," he said.

"Farmers Home Administration policy would be one of helping people help themselves," he added. "Our concern will be to assist people in setting proper priorities in order to meet the FmHA payments and to accomplish the objectives of the loan." Seaton said this would involve family budgeting, farm and home planning, and cooperation with the local FmHA office.

Children and Television — A Question of Quantity and Quality

What have most children done for 3,000 hours before they are six years old? What have they spent more than two years doing by age 18? The answer is not sleeping or playing, but—watching television.

Now in its fifth decade, television has been both praised and criticized for its influence on children. Many schools offer television courses for credit, while other schools blame television for students' low grades, poor test scores and disappointing reading habits.

Since 98 percent of all American homes have one or more televisions, most children will continue to watch television as they grow up.

Most importantly, parents need to know what their children watch on television. Often called the silent babysitter, television portrays the complete range of human emotions and actions. While these emotions and actions are part of daily life, they may be too mature or severe for the young viewer. Parents must check regularly whether their children's favorite programs meet their own values and beliefs.

One way for such checking is for parents and children to watch television together. During this shared time, they can discuss their favorite characters, the program's main points, and whether they agree or disagree with these.

Such discussion encourages children to think for themselves instead of accepting all television information as true facts. By asking for the children's opinions, the parents are showing they respect what the child has to say.

When the parents can't watch television, they can ask their children to write down the programs watched. This program log will show the kinds of programs the children prefer. If the programs are all alike—as cartoons or situation comedies—parents can suggest other programs to provide more experiences and ideas, such as science fiction or sports shows.

Selection of television programs can teach children decision-making skills. Parents can name three or four programs which meet their approval, and then allow the child a choice among these selections.

Parents should also determine how much television children watch. A steady menu of television each night discourages children from physical activities such as sports or childhood games. Growing children need regular physical activity to help their bodies develop. Also, children need regular breaks from the make-believe television world to do real-life things.

Homework and reading are the two main battlegrounds for television, parents and teachers. Television has been identified as the main cause for neglected homework and dislike for reading.

The off button on the television set is the key to these problems. Parents may allow children a certain number of viewing hours with both homework and television to be finished by bedtime. If children do not have enough self-discipline to handle this, they may need the rule "first homework is finished, then television can start."

Although most children watch far too much television, proper guidance from parents and teachers can make television viewing more constructive. Upon graduation from high school, the typical child will have spent 15,000 hours watching television and 11,000 hours in the classroom, therefore both the quantity and quality of television viewing is of great importance in shaping young minds.

The "S" is Harry S Truman is not an abbreviation—it is Truman's complete middle name.

VA Pension Recipients Receive Questionnaires

More than 23,000 Veterans Administration pension recipients received reminders this month that it's time to take the annual look at their incomes for this year to make certain they still meet the legal eligibility rules for benefits.

A questionnaire required by law was sent with the November checks. Lee Caudill, director of the VA's regional office in Louisville, said, Veterans receiving pensions for non-service connected disability must return the questionnaire by January 1 or face suspension of their payments.

Those who need not return the questionnaire are persons over 72 years of age who have received the pension for the past two years, and children under 23 receiving pension under laws in effect prior to December 31, 1978. These pensioners must report only changes in the number or status of their dependents, or any increase in annual income which puts it over VA limits.

Caudill pointed out that pensioners need not report the June 1 cost-of-living increase in social security payments, since the VA records this information automatically.

Help on completing both the annual income questionnaires and the reminder cards is available from VA regional office personnel, or from state or major veterans organization offices.

Adult Literacy Is Campaign Objective

The Kentucky Department of Education, with the help of entertainer Johnny Cash, has launched a campaign aimed at attacking the problem of adult illiteracy in the state.

Although the Education Department's unit for adult education has provided instruction for thousands of adults through the years and has awarded more than 125,000 General Education Development diplomas, adult education in Kentucky has touched only 2 percent of its target population of 1.4 million.

The solution to tackling this problem, education staff members believe, may rest on a promotion developed by the state of Tennessee starring Cash. The message is simple, illiteracy—we cannot afford it.

Cash was a natural for the campaign after he portrayed an illiterate Kentucky coal miner who successfully overcame the problem in the television drama "The Pride of Jesse Hallam."

Cash does have a high school diploma but he said when the movie was telecast he identified with the character he portrayed "because of my background." As most country music fans know, that background includes growing up on a small Arkansas cotton farm.

"I remember so many times standing in line to have my cotton weighed and seeing small-time chisellers cheating the workers who couldn't fill out their forms," Cash said in a syndicated interview published when the film was aired.

After the March showing of "The Pride of Jesse Hallam," Cash was contacted by the Tennessee Department of Education. The singer-actor agreed to donate his time and efforts for radio and television spots and to appear on billboards to combat the problem of adult illiteracy in Tennessee. He has done the same for Kentucky.

In October, 100 billboards were strategically placed throughout Kentucky. Numerous television and radio public service announcements will be released in January.

By stressing illiteracy's cost to society, the campaign hopes to encourage efforts to steer adults with this disability into state-run basic education courses.

"Ideally Mr. Cash's promotion will give Kentucky adult education greater visibility and will increase public awareness of adult illiteracy," said Alice McDonald, office head of federal programs with the Department of Education.

Fonda Butler with the adult education unit explained that although local education programs exist in 112 counties statewide money is not always available for promotion.

"Sixty percent of these programs have a budget less than $10,000 which does not provide a great amount for promotion," Butler said. "They cannot advertise in the yellow pages, have their own radio and TV spots or use payroll circulars which are promotional staples of large programs."

"For these reasons, small programs have frequently suggested promotion of adult education statewide with a toll-free number to increase their visibility and help reach those in need," Butler added.

Kentucky's toll-free adult education number is 1-800-372-7179 and can be seen on billboards and public service announcements. Interested persons may call the number to find out about a local adult education program in their area.

The problem of adult illiteracy is not unique to Kentucky or any particular region of the country. It is estimated 25 million adult Americans are functionally illiterate.

The point of the campaign is that society cannot afford the costs of illiteracy, illustrated by the fact 25 percent of American adults without a high school education cannot address an envelope well enough for a letter to reach its destination, and more than half cannot read well enough to understand a help-wanted ad.

Educ. Dept. Reveals New Budget Figures

The Kentucky Department of Education revealed budget figures for the next biennium at a special meeting of the state Board of Education in Frankfort Nov. 24.

In disclosing the figures, Superintendent of Public Instruction Raymond Barber said the budget was based on a growth prediction in state revenue receipts of 10 percent.

"This increase would amount to about $202 million for state government," he noted, "but this figure seems to be optimistic to me."

Under the proposed budget, teachers will receive a 5 percent raise for the 1981-83 school year amounting to an average of $820 yearly, and teachers can expect a 7.5 percent pay hike for the 1983-84 school year which would add another $1,310 to their yearly salary.

Arnold Guess, head of the Department of Education's Bureau of Administration and Finance, said this increase is over and above what teachers would receive for rank and experience increments.

The two in-service days that were eliminated from the school calendar due to recent budget cuts are restored under the proposed budget. This would mean an additional $5.5 million to the 1983 budget and $6.4 million to the figures for 1984.

Capital outlay funds which had also been cut because of budget restraints from $2,000 per classroom unit to $1,800 per unit have been partially restored under the proposed figures. Some $100 per unit, amounting to $3.1 million, has been restored for 1983 with that figure holding constant for 1984.

The only surprise in the budget was a $600,000 expenditure for the two-year period to attract more students into the math and science teaching field. A firm decision on how this money is to be distributed will be determined at a later date.

The move to appropriate money for attracting future teachers into the math and science field recommended by Cresap, McCormick and Paget, a consulting firm which studied public school finance and management in Kentucky.

The total budget for the Department of Education amounts to $1.161 billion for 1982-83 and $1.24 billion for the second half of the biennium.

DIAMONDS

There is a difference in the quality of diamonds.

Are you buying diamond rings at what you think are wholesale or discount prices?

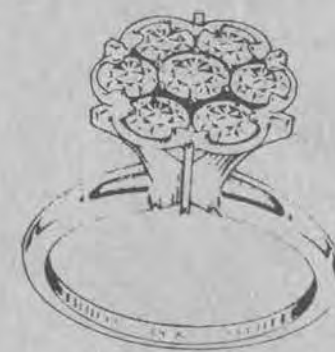

When economic times get tough, a number of predictable things happen. One very unpleasant fact is that too many retailers or so-called retailers or "wholesaler-retailers" take advantage of consumer's genuine desire and/or need for a bargain to cheat them blind. This is politely called deceptive pricing. In fact, it's stealing.

What these so-called discounters are doing is taking very cheap quality diamonds and marking them up two or three times more than what they are worth. Then they put them on sale and usually you pay more than what the ring is worth to begin with.

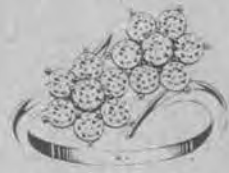

If you want to buy diamonds at a fair price and be told the truth about what you are buying, come to Earl Castle's Jewelry in Prestonsburg, Ky.

Yule Atmosphere, Free Parking In Floyd Towns

It's December, now, and the final countdown to the "big" day has begun. Yule decorations have been hung along streets in Martin and Prestonsburg and merchants in both towns are switching to special store hours for the convenience of shoppers.

Although no new decorations were purchased this year, according to Prestonsburg City Manager Dave Evans, city workmen have fashioned some new ones from "bits and pieces" of older decorative fixtures. Free parking through the Christmas season will begin Friday at 5 p.m. and some downtown stores have already begun to stay open later in the afternoon and more will follow suit.

In Martin, where fire department personnel finished up with downtown decorations this week, many stores have also extended business hours with more to follow. Parking in meterless Martin is free to shoppers and one Martin spokesman emphasized that the parking area located behind the IGA downtown will accommodate plenty of vehicles.

To Observe 50 Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Talmage Allen, of Hueysville, will be celebrating their Golden Wedding anniversary at their home Dec. 13, at 1 p.m. All family and friends are invited to attend.

IRS Booklet Answers Farmers' Tax Questions

Today's modern farmer has many unique tax situations, and a free publication from the Internal Revenue Service can help answer the questions that arise from these situations.

IRS Publication 225, "Farmer's Tax Guide," covers a wide range of subjects, such as soil sales, crop destruction, chicken purchases, casualty losses and share farming. Examples of how to prepare the Form 1040 and related schedules, and listings of important tax dates which affect farmers throughout the year are also included.

"Farmer's Tax Guide" is written in clear, understandable style and can be a source of valuable information for today's farmer, according to the IRS. This handy reference can be ordered by calling the IRS at 584-1361 in Louisville, 255-2333 in Lexington, 628-0055 in Covington, or toll-free at 1-800-428-9100 elsewhere in Kentucky.

★ CONSUMER ALERT ★

WOOD-BURNING HEATERS

With the rapidly rising price of fuel, the thought of heating your home with low-cost, wood-burning heaters has probably become more attractive. In fact, sales of wood-burning heaters jumped from 200,000 in 1972 to 1.2 million in 1979.

With more and more people investing in these devices, Attorney General Steven L. Beshear suggests you should know how to compare wood-burning heaters so that the one you purchase will fit your needs.

There are two basic kinds of wood-burning heaters: radiant and circulating.

Radiant heaters have a single wall between the fire and the room. This wall gets extremely hot and radiates heat into the room. Caution is necessary around radiant heaters because contact with the heater can cause serious burns. Radiant heaters are not recommended for those with small children, Beshear advises.

Circulating heaters have a second wall which surrounds the firebox. Air is heated between the walls and then passes out into the room. Some models have blowers which force the air to circulate. These circulating heaters can heat several rooms fairly evenly; however, they generally cost more than other heaters, Beshear says.

The most effective wood-burning heaters have devices which burn the small particles and gases that wood releases as it burns.

Another aid to efficiency is the thermostatically controlled damper. These dampers automatically open and close to maintain a selected temperature. Therefore, the fire burns more evenly and efficiently.

"Safety is a must," says Beshear. "Consumers should be careful when choosing, installing and using wood-burning heaters."

Before you install a wood-burning heater, contact your local building inspector and your homeowner's insurance agent to find out what requirements you must meet, the attorney general advises.

After your heater is installed, never let children play near the heater and never use chemicals to start a fire. Don't burn trash or man-made logs in your heater; they can damage your unit. It is also a good idea to keep a fire extinguisher handy—just in case, Beshear adds.

Creosote buildup is always a danger with wood-burning heaters. Creosote is the "tar" that accumulates inside the chimney. Creosote buildup can be a definite fire hazard.

By building a roaring fire in your heater once a week, you can burn out the creosote before it gets thick enough to be dangerous, according to Beshear.

"You can get maximum economy from your wood-burning heater by carefully choosing the wood you burn. Hardwoods, such as oak, provide more heat per log than softwoods, such as pine," he says. Avoid buying green wood unless you can store it for at least six months before burning. The least expensive way to get wood is to cut your own. To find out where you are allowed to cut your own wood at little or no cost, call you forest service.

If you have consumer questions or complaints, write to the Office of the Attorney General, Division of Consumer Protection, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

... About Your Social Security

Penalty Can Result from Failure To Report

People who receive supplemental security income (SSI) payments can be penalized if they fail to report an event which could affect the amount of their payment, Jim Kelly, Social Security district director for the Big Sandy Area, said recently.

Any penalty imposed is in addition to repayment of an overpayment resulting from failure to properly report an event.

Overpayments most often result when a person fails to report receiving additional income, earnings, additions to bank accounts, receipt of money or other gifts, acquiring property, changes in living arrangements, or moving.

A penalty can be imposed when:
 —The person fails to make a timely report of an event.
 —The unreported event could cause a reduction in payment, suspension or termination of payments.

 —Payment was received and accepted for the period of time involved.
 —There is no good cause for relief from the penalty.

A booklet, "What You Have To Know About SSI," contains detailed information about what events should be reported and is available at the Social Security office on US 23, between Prestonsburg and Paintsville.

SSI is a Federal program which provides a basic cash income to people in need who are 65 or older or disabled or blind. Although SSI is administered by Social Security, funds to make payments come from the U.S. Government Treasury general funds, not from Social Security taxes.

Fluoride Means Cut In Ky. Dental Costs

A Department for Human Resources preventive dental program is helping Kentuckians save money, according to department Secretary Grady Stumbo. "Last year, Kentucky consumers saved more than $9 million on tooth fillings in areas where Human Resources has placed water system fluoridation equipment and provided fluoride mouthrinse programs for school children," Stumbo said. The savings are based on an average cost of $10 per filling.

By June 30, 1981, the close of the state's 1981 fiscal year, more than 2.8 million Kentuckians, or 78 percent of the state population, were receiving the dental benefits of consuming fluoridated water. During the 1981 fiscal year more than 370,000 school children participated in the department's fluoride mouthrinse program.

Also last fiscal year, Human Resources provided and installed fluoridation equipment in three community water plants. In addition, fluoridation equipment was placed in six rural schools.

Since 1951, when the first public water supply in Kentucky was fluoridated, 215 community supplies have added fluoridation equipment. Since 1973, Human Resources has installed fluoridation equipment in 143 rural schools with combined enrollments exceeding 40,000 children.

"Consuming fluoridated water is documented to reduce the occurrence of dental cavities by 65 percent," Stumbo said. "There is an additional 25 percent to 40 percent reduction in cavities in children who also use a fluoride mouthrinse. Without the preventive effects of using fluoridated water or a mouthrinse, Kentucky children ages 6 to 18 years old would get an average of two permanent tooth cavities each year."

United Methodist Student Day Observed At Martin

The Senior United Methodist Youth Fellowship of Martin United Methodist Church presented the morning worship service, Sunday, November 29, this being United Methodist Student Day.

Trudy Hunter, coordinator of youth work in the church, led the services. In this all-youth-participation service, Teresa Mullins read the Scripture lesson, Trudy led in the prayers, Elta Kiki Vass led the congregation in the Affirmation of Faith, and Gina Marshall gave the story-message for the children in the congregation. A trio composed of Stannual Mullins, Elta Kiki Vass and Gina Marshall sang a medley of contemporary church songs with Gina accompanying at the piano.

The message was in the form of a dialogue based on the Biblical account of Zacchaeus who climbed up a tree to see Jesus pass by. Stannual Mullins took the role of Jesus and Duke Martin was Zacchaeus.

Debbie Hunter was greeter. Stannual Mullins and Duke Martin were ushers. The candlelighter was Ron Hunter. Remaining members of the Youth Fellowship rounded out the choir.

A special offering was taken for the United Methodist Student Loan Fund, a fund maintained by the general church body from which United Methodists may borrow at a very low rate of interest to help finance their college education. Scholarships are also available from the fund.

Epileptics Helped by Treatment, Not Helped by Ignorance or Fear

BY CHRISTA U. MUCKENHAUSEN, M.D.

An estimated two million Americans have epilepsy in one form or another, the most common form—as well as the most alarming—being the "grand mal" type seizure. About 80 percent of epilepsy sufferers can achieve full or partial control of their seizures with medication.

Another equally important medication, however, is understanding and acceptance.

While not all seizures are epileptic in nature, seizures of one kind or another are the primary characteristic of the disorder. Seizures are marked by muscle convulsions, partial or total loss of consciousness, mental confusion and disturbance of bodily functions usually controlled automatically by the brain and nervous system. They are caused by temporary buildups of electrical charges in some nerve cells of the brain, causing the brain to lose control, partially or entirely, of the muscles of the body, consciousness, senses and even thoughts.

Grand mal seizures last anywhere from one to five minutes and can occur one or more times daily. The patient loses consciousness and usually falls to the ground with convulsive movements over most or all of the body. After the attack the patient is generally confused, drowsy and very sleepy for several hours.

Petit mal seizures, the most common form in children, usually last from five to twenty seconds, and may occur many times an hour. The spell is most often accompanied by staring or twitching of the eyelids or momentary lapses of consciousness. The patient, usually not having any warning prior to a petit mal spell, almost always is aware afterwards that his or her mind has "gone blank" for a few seconds.

Psychomotor seizures can occur at any age and include such phenomena as chewing and lip smacking, staring and confusion, abdominal pains and headaches, changes in color perception, spots before the eyes, buzzing and ringing of the ears, dizziness, fear, rage, anger and—after the seizure—sleep. The seizure lasts anywhere from a minute to several hours and the patient is completely unable to remember what happened during the attack.

To help a person who is having a seizure, the first rule is to keep calm. There is nothing one can do to stop a seizure once it has begun. If it is a grand mal attack, the area around the person should be cleared to prevent injury. One should not interfere with the movements of the patient in anyway. If the mouth is open, one can place a soft object, such as a folded handkerchief, between the side teeth to prevent the biting of the tongue. Most often, however, the teeth will be tightly clenched. Generally it is not necessary to call a physician unless the attack is followed immediately by another major motor seizure or seizures lasting more than ten minutes.

After a seizure, simply let the person rest. It is most important to treat the incident in a calm, matter-of-fact manner, without adding to the embarrassment of the patient.

Strictly speaking, epilepsy is not curable, though it can be controlled in varying degrees by medication.

Children who have seizures associated with fever, but never under other circumstances, usually outgrow the seizures by four or five years of age. In the case of epileptic seizures, children occasionally outgrow them.

Most people with epilepsy are not mentally retarded. However, uncontrolled seizures during childhood may have an effect on mental capacity, and a brain injury or disorder of the central nervous system which caused epilepsy may also cause other conditions, such as mental retardation or cerebral palsy.

Epilepsy is not inherited, although some may inherit a low seizure threshold, which means they may, more readily than others, suffer seizures as the result of brain irritation.

Epilepsy is usually underreported. About two million Americans are thought to suffer the disorder, with about 100,000 new cases developing each year.

When treated properly epilepsy should not prevent a person from leading a productive life. In practice however, the contrary is often true. The consequences of epilepsy are the patient's social, economic and intrapersonal life are often catastrophic. Through fear and ignorance—both their own and society's—epilepsy sufferers are often excluded from normal human relations, from educational opportunities, and the right to earn a living and support themselves.

Epileptics generally have fewer seizures, however, if they lead active and productive lives, work and participate in sports, go to school, drive a car, marry and have children. How much to tell a potential employer about one's epilepsy depends on a number of factors, not least the degree to which one's seizures are controlled. At a patient's request, a physician may be able to help the employer better understand the potential employee's condition.

While family physicians and pediatricians should generally be consulted first, more difficult cases of epilepsy may be referred to a neurologist, a specialist in the disorders of the nervous system.

Epilepsy is a common condition and is quite amenable to treatment. It is time to clear away the anxieties and ignorance that commonly surround this disorder.

House Burns In Hite Blaze

The second fire in a week to hit the Hite community occurred Monday afternoon when a frame house owned by Ivel Moore, of McDowell, and rented by Billy Crum, was leveled by flames. Mrs. Crum and small child were at home when the blaze began and although they were able to escape unharmed, all the family's possessions were destroyed, it was said. Firefighting units from Martin and Left Beaver squads responded to the fire. A fire last Tuesday destroyed Roy and Anita's Restaurant at Hite.

Our Fragile Earth

By DR. JERRY HOWELL
Department of Biological and Environmental Sciences
Morehead State University

Air quality continued to improve in many parts of the country last year, but the prospects for further progress were clouded by political problems. This was the conclusion of one section of the 1981 Environmental Quality Index (EQI), an annual subjective comparison of seven indicators of the quality of life. Based on events in 1980, the 1981 EQI found that wildlife, water, living space, and soil decreased environmentally when compared to 1979, while minerals, air and forests fared about as well as in 1979. Not one category was in better condition than the year before. EQI's reports on wildlife and minerals (energy) were summarized in previous installments; this article, originally published in March, 1981, discusses the status of our air. This installment is being reprinted because of its relevancy: the Clean Air Act of 1970 must be renewed or revised by Congress this year.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) reduced or changed many of its air quality regulations in 1980, partly to help a slumping economy. EPA effectively reduced industrial production costs through setting pollution limits for an entire plant, rather than monitoring each smokestack. Companies no longer must install expensive air pollution control measures at each emissions point. They also gave Ohio's utilities more time to burn local supplies of high sulfur coal without installing costly scrubbers. In addition, EPA granted U.S. automakers another reprieve last fall when they delayed three exhaust standards for at least a year, despite the fact that one of their studies showed that many recently-built cars were creating about four times more emissions than they were designed to produce, primarily because of the failure of poorly-maintained catalytic converters.

Two problems still remain: acid rain and climatic change. Acid rain, a rapidly increasing (50-fold in the last 25 years in the eastern U.S.) problem, occurs when coal or auto pollution combine with water in the air, eventually falling to earth as precipitation. As a result, many lakes in the northeast and Canada no longer have fish. Drastic climatic change may result if the world's fossil fuel (coal, oil, and natural gas) usage continues to grow at the annual rate of four percent. Should this occur, the amount of atmospheric carbon dioxide will double in 45 years, substantially raising the earth's surface temperatures. Air quality deterioration, despite these obstacles, was halted in 1980. Some cities, such as Los Angeles, New York, Denver and Louisville, already notorious for deteriorated air quality, reported little or no progress, but air quality improved in over two dozen other urban areas. EQI judged the Clean Air Act effective because there were more cars and industries in 1980 than ever, yet air pollution was lowered overall. The Clean Air Act, up for renewal in Congress this year, will face stiff opposition from some industrial critics and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

Mother of Loretta Lynn, Crystal Gayle Dies At 69

Clara Webb Butcher, mother of country singers Loretta Lynn and Crystal Gayle, was buried Saturday in the family cemetery in Butcher Hollow, where she was born.

Private funeral services were held for family and friends of the family at 2 p.m. at the Jones-Preston Funeral Home in Paintsville.

Mrs. Butcher died Tuesday at the age of 69 of cancer. She had lost one lung and a portion of the other. She had been living in Nashville with Miss Gayle and was admitted to Parkview Hospital there a week ago and died Tuesday night, last week.

Miss Lynn was performing at the Riviera Hotel in Las Vegas, canceled the last three days of her two-week engagement to return to Nashville.

Mrs. Butcher was one of 12 children of an Irish mother and a Cherokee Indian father. After the death of her first husband, Ted Webb, she moved to Wabash, Ind., and married his first cousin, coal miner Tommy Butcher.

After working in a home for retarded children, Mrs. Butcher returned to Nashville to live with Miss Gayle.

Barber Praises Perkins, Natcher

Although he painted a fairly grim economic picture for education, Superintendent of Public Instruction Raymond Barber told the Ashland State Vocational/Technical School staff last Friday that he still intends to build a $3 million addition to the facility.

During a late afternoon meeting with the Eastern Kentucky Educational Development Corporation, made up of 35 area superintendents, Barber said the best news he could bring them was expected 10 percent gross increase in state revenue receipts.

"This will bring in another $202 million for our department," he noted, "but some $73 million of that has already been spent on delayed items. For example, we will need to spend $10 million just for textbooks."

Barber said he also looks for progressive cuts over the next three to five years in federal funds.

He praised U.S. Reps. Carl Perkins and William Natcher for their strong support for education but added that "there is no good news coming out of Washington."

"They (Perkins and Natcher) are like the little boy who had his finger in the dike to keep back the water," Barber said. "I just don't know how long they will be able to hold back the pressure."

According to Barber, he believes that the legislature is ready to give some revenue-generating options to those at the local level.

"We're going to have to initiate it, though," Barber told the superintendents. "So let me know what I can do to give you some funding relief."

He urged area educators to work with their members of the General Assembly and "show them what you're spending your money for."

The Allen Central Rebels outscored the Prestonsburg Blackcats in the final quarter of Saturday night's championship game, 22 to 7, to win the Jenny Wiley Invitational Tournament held here at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse over the Thanksgiving weekend.

Bruce Mullins and Tim Lawson were the key players in the fourth quarter explosion by the Rebels as they won the tournament by the score of 54 to 38. The Blackcats were tied with the Rebels until five minutes were left to play in the game. Bruce Mullins fired in 25 points while teammate Tim Lawson canned 17 points. Joe Marson had 11 points and 12 rebounds for the Cats. Kelly Cecil had 8 points. Todd Nairn came off the bench and scored 7 points in the second half. Billy Dingus of the Rebels had a good night on the board, as he grabbed 9 rebounds and scored 5 points.

As a team, Prestonsburg controlled the boards with 30 rebounds, while Allen Central had 28 rebounds.

Earlier, a 26-point effort by Dickie Crum led Johnson Central to an 85 to 56 win over Wheelwright for third place honors. Terry Conley led Wheelwright with 14, Eddie Johnson had 13 and Jack Kendrick connected for 11 points.

In the opening round on Wednesday night, Johnson Central won over Betsy Layne by the score of 53 to 49. Central trailed by 8 points going into the fourth quarter. Betsy Layne couldn't buy a basket in the fourth quarter. In fact they scored only one field goal in that cold fourth quarter. Eric Salyer had 14, Dickie Crum connected for 13 to lead the Golden Eagles to the upset win over the Bobcats. Dwight Newsome and Dwayne Lykins had 11 and 10 points to pace the Bobcats.

In the nightcap, Allen Central won over Magoffin county, 85 to 64. Bruce Mullins had 29 points to lead the Rebels.

Thursday night, the Wheelwright Trojans defeated the Bearcats of Johns Creek 69 to 61. Sophomore Tim Cole fired in 26 points while teammate Jack Kendrick had 14 points.

In the second game, Thursday night, the Prestonsburg Blackcats defeated the Dorton Wildcats, 56 to 50. Joe Marson fired in 14 points. Steve Hinchman, 12 points and Sophomore Tony Whitaker, 10 points. Sophomore Kelly Cecil led the team in rebounds and fired in 8 points. Mike Mullins had 15 points for the Dorton Wildcats.

In the semi-finals, Allen Central slipped past the Johnson Central Golden Eagles by a score of 72 to 70. Tim Lawson led his team in the see-saw battle with 25 points. The Golden Eagles led at halftime 32 to 31, and going into the fourth quarter they led 53 to 51. Bruce Mullins got into foul trouble early in the game and had to sit out much of the contest. He had 12 points and 9 rebounds, but Billy Dingus took up the slack and scored 10 points while hauling down 11 rebounds. Eric Salyer led the Golden Eagles with 21 points. Dickie Crum had 18 points but big John Hall pulled down 12 rebounds in the game. Allen Central as a team had 36 rebounds and 17 turnovers while Johnson Central had 30 rebounds and 16 turnovers.

The Prestonsburg Blackcats and the Wheelwright Trojans locked-up in a barn burner in the second game. Prestonsburg won the game in an overtime, 71 to 62. Wheelwright led going into the fourth quarter, 48 to 42 but the Cats tied at 54 all and again at 60 all to put the game in an overtime. Todd Nairn was the key in the fourth quarter and in overtime with 14 points. Tony Whitaker had 14 points, Joe Marson had 12 points and 9 rebounds. Kelly Cecil had a good night with 12 points and 7 rebounds. Senior Steve Hinchman played three outstanding games and in this game had 13 points and 6 rebounds.

For the Wheelwright Trojans, they were led in scoring by Sophomore Tim Cole with 18 points, Jack Kendrick had 15 points and 8 rebounds, and Eddie Johnson connected for 7 points. Allen Central won the championship game and their record is now 5 and 1. Prestonsburg was runner-up and their record is now 2 and 2. Johnson Central placed third, their record is now 2 and 1. HOW TO SELECT CORN HYBRIDS
Planting the hybrids next spring having the best odds for performing well through harvest on your farm and with the practices you use to grow corn always is a profitable strategy but is even more important this year when you select seed corn.

The reason simply is the combination of rising costs and lower prices putting the squeeze on profit.

Here are the following guidelines and suggestions to help you select the right hybrids, based on knowledge about local growing conditions and information available from the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Ability of a hybrid to make a high yield per acre is important, but don't put all your corn-growing eggs in that one basket. Consider other performance factors, as well as yield, to select hybrids that will give you maximum profit per acre which may not be the same hybrids that produce the most bushels per acre. Maturity, lodging resistance and consistency of performing well, for example, are important.

Best information to use in comparing hybrids is the unbiased data collected in corn hybrid performance trials conducted by the state agricultural experiment station. The Kentucky Hybrid Performance Test annual report, now available at the county Extension office, shows the importance of checking performance in a location applicable to where you farm, and that yields can vary widely—with a 60-bushel range in this one test.

In addition to yield date, the publication has information on maturity, percent stand and percent lodging.

Maturity usually is indicated as moisture content at harvest. Corn dries in the field at the average of one-half percentage point per day when conditions are normal. This means, for example, that a hybrid with 5% more moisture at harvest needs about 10 days more to dry to the same moisture content of a hybrid with 5% less moisture at harvest.

Lodging percentage at harvest is a good measure of a hybrid's resistance to stalk rot and ability to withstand wind, insects and plant diseases. When only a few plants are lodged at harvest, grain losses in the field will be small.

Some difficult lessons were learned in the 1981 growing season when much of the corn was planted on June 9 tells quite a story. The farmer on whose farm these hybrids were grown had planted a 125-day maturity hybrid. When harvested in mid-November, the ears were only two-thirds filled, the moisture was 29% and yield approximately 125 bushels per acre. However, two hybrids with 19% moisture on the same day, yielded over 125 bushels per acre.

At a cost of 6 cents per point for drying, the earlier maturity hybrid would net 60 cents more per bushel at the same yield level.

Other sources of information for evaluating hybrids are well-managed local corn demonstration plots sponsored by the Extension service, FFA Chapters, seed companies, and so on. To be effective and meaningful, these testing programs should have at least three replications for each hybrid or have a check variety after every 2 or 3 hybrids with yield adjustments made accordingly. Even better would be the combining of data from several locations within a county or multi-county area.

Strip tests or plots with each hybrid entered only once are of little value for yield comparison. Field variation usually is greater than most hybrid differences in such tests.

Hybrid selection decisions made on the basis of test plot results can be no better than the care of conducting the test.

Test any hybrid at least 2 years before adopting it for large acreage or eliminating it. In other words, don't over-emphasize the results of a single year. In the 1981 Kentucky Preliminary Hybrid Performance Results, 40 of the 120 hybrids were tested for the first time. Eleven of these 40 hybrids yielded at the bottom of the test or nearly 60 bushels less than many of the proven hybrids.

Most commercial seed corn companies conduct extensive testing programs. These programs are usually of greatest value in comparing available hybrids within a given company. The data are often from test plots at many locations and for many lines and represent several years of testing.

It's worth your time to watch a commercial seed company harvest its test plots. You not only obtain the performance results firsthand, but also can gain excellent information about testing techniques.

Leisure Time

Turning Leisure Into Loot

The 1970s began with pronouncements that it was to be a decade devoted to the pursuit of leisure time activities. More people would have more time to fulfill themselves and their creative urges outside of their jobs. As this new decade begins, many people are finding that they simply cannot afford their leisure time. Inflation eats up their paycheck faster each week.

It doesn't necessarily have to be that way. Some people are discovering that their hobbies and tinkering around the house are worth more than personal satisfaction; it can mean money in the bank. All it takes is a little time, talent and salesmanship.

The phrase "arts and crafts" covers a lot of ground, everything from building furniture to making ashtrays. If you have an arts and crafts type hobby, and have been content to sell your wares to just friends and neighbors, consider expanding your business. There are about 6,000 arts and crafts events staged each year, and at some of these events, as much as $2,500,000 passes hands. Managers of these crafts shows report an increase in both attendance and sales.

The reason is that more people are looking for one-of-a-kind items, articles that are not mass-produced in some factory. Even some local department stores are beginning to take note, opening up areas for craftworkers to display their materials.

Selling Your Wares

If you have a craft and want to sell your material, consult some of the following manuals.

Creative Cash—How to Sell Your Crafts, Needlework, Designs and Know-How, by Barbara Brabec, (CountrySide Books, $8.95 paperback) This guide is of special interest to homemakers who want to start individual or family businesses. It contains some success stories plus a chapter listing 200 information sources. Order from A.B. Morse Co., 200 James St., Barrington, Ill. 60010. (Add $1.00 for postage and handling.)

Support Your Local Artist
Many cities also have crafts cooperatives where groups of workers pool their energies for the purpose of displaying and selling their goods. Everybody shares costs to keep overhead down. Check your local newspaper or telephone book. (For some reason, many of these cooperatives begin with the name Artisan.)

Don't forget advertising in the newspaper. Many people check the classifieds, looking for good deals. Your craft might fall into that category.

You should also realize that your hobby doesn't have to be all that exotic to make money. One New Jersey man recently put an ad in the paper saying he would do odd jobs around the house. Within two weeks, he had enough jobs to last him several months.

Some To Be Cut From Food Stamp Program

New requirements set by the federal government will affect eligibility for some food stamp recipients, announced Dr. Grady Stumbo, Secretary of the Department for Human Resources.

An insert explaining the new requirements will be enclosed with the December allotment when recipients receive their food stamps.

Regulation changes made by Congress mean that some households will no longer be eligible to receive food stamps if their gross income exceeds 130 percent of the poverty guideline unless at least one household member receives Social Security Income or Social Security disability, or is age 60 or older and the total net household income does not exceed poverty guidelines.

The standard deduction for work-related expenses has also been reduced from 20 percent to 18 percent of the gross earned income.

Changes caused by these requirements will begin with the January allotment. There will be an opportunity for a fair hearing for anyone who disagrees with any action taken. Any questions concerning eligibility for food stamps should be directed to your local Bureau for Social Insurance office.

Good Year for Turnips

It must have been a good year for turnips—in some gardens, at least. Lemuel Foley, of Corn Fork stopped by with these two "keeper" turnips which he grew in Bill Foley's turnip patch on Cow Creek. The one at left weighed in at 3½-pounds while the smaller one hit 2-lbs. 3-ozs.

PUBLIC NOTICE TO OWNERS OF RENTAL HOUSING

The Floyd County Housing Authority is administering a Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program in Floyd County using funds provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Under this program, owners will rehabilitate rental units which are now substandard or have major building systems or components requiring repair or replacement. The cost of this work, which must total at least $1000 per unit, may be financed by a local lending institution, by the owner, or by any other source available to the owner. The agency does not make rehabilitation loans or grants, but will assist owners to obtain financing.

After required rehabilitation work has been completed, the agency and the owner will execute a contract which establishes a rent for the unit(s) that will cover rehabilitation costs, meet monthly operating expenses, and allow a reasonable profit on the owner's investment. For a fifteen year period, the owner will rent the rehabilitated unit(s) to eligible lower income tenants, who will pay approximately 25 percent of their income toward the rent. The agency will pay the remainder of the rent directly to the owner. The initial occupant of a rehabilitated unit may be the owner's present eligible tenant. After rehabilitation the rent (including utilities) cannot exceed the following Maximum Rents:

BEDROOM SIZE
1	2	3	4
206	244	282	319

The agency's current funds will allow rehabilitation of 35 units of rental housing as follows:

1 BR	2 BR	3 BR	4 BR
8	18	7	2

No unit will be assisted which results in the permanent displacement of a current tenant.

Proposals from owners will be received by the Housing Authority until further notice.

Owners who wish to submit a proposal must obtain an application form from:

Floyd County Housing Authority
Housing Office
Green Acres
Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653
Telephone No. 886-2717
Office Hours: 8:30-12:00 and 1:00-4:30

Our Fragile Earth

By DR. JERRY HOWELL
Department of Biological and Environmental Sciences
Morehead State University

This article originally appeared in March, 1980. It is being reprinted because of its relevancy: the Clean Air Act of 1970 must be renewed or revised by Congress this year.

Los Angeles has always had air pollution problems, and despite several victories in the fifties and sixties, smog surrounding the city has worsened over the last two years, according to a November 20, 1979 Wall Street Journal article. Despite a multi-billion dollar effort and a federal law mandating cleaner air, Los Angeles is losing the fight.

The failure was caused by several factors, including automobile emission control devices not living up to expectations because they deteriorate faster than projected, were tampered with by car owners and dealers, and were subjected to leaded gasoline and poor engine maintenance; unfavorable weather conditions; the fact that required industrial pollution control systems have accomplished the easiest part of air pollution, to the point that additional controls would cost much more and do little to help the situation; economic and population growth have created more air pollution; and regulatory agencies and scarcities have forced industries to use fuel oil instead of natural gas or other cleaner fuels.

The implications extend farther than the boundaries of Los Angeles because under the 1977 Clean Air Act, regions not making "reasonable progress" toward meeting stringent standards by 1987 will face growth restrictions. Cities, like Phoenix, Denver and Dallas, which have reported little or no progress in cleaning their air may become embroiled in controversy between development advocates and no-growth proponents.

Another city in air pollution trouble, according to a recent news report, is Pittsburgh. The city and surrounding Allegheny County, with a population of 1.6 million, are noted for heavy industry and power production facilities. The area was the major subject of a study published in December, 1979, in the American Journal of Public Health, and conducted for the Environmental Protection Agency.

Areas in Allegheny County with the highest air pollution had significantly higher rates of hospital admissions for lung ailments and heart disease. The excessive hospitalization attributable to air pollution cost nearly $10 million. Nationwide, ill health due to air pollution, in addition to causing untold suffering, is costing us $1.3 billion annually.

The costs would be much higher if other factors, such as days lost from work, early retirement, doctor bills, and premature death, had been considered in the study. It is obvious that the human and monetary costs of air pollution are more than the costs of controlling it.

by HAROLD COOLEY

There are two basic types of frostbite, "superficial" and "deep". Superficial frostbite causes a sharp, yet mild pain with tingling and yellow-white frosted area of skin which is numb and hard. The best way to treat it is to immediately rewarm the frostbitten area with the hands or by submersion into circulating warm water until normal color returns. Do not rub or exercise the frozen area. Deep frostbite is indicated when the injured area stops hurting even though there has been no relief from the cold. It usually involves the limbs. Medical attention is immediately necessary.

The pharmacist on duty at COOLEY APOTHECARY will be happy to give first aid advice when appropriate. We are your physicians' consultant. # Money Matters

Do Your Homework Before You Work-At-Home

"Get-rich-quick and earn-big-money-in-your-spare-time promotions often deliberately confuse and take advantage of consumers," warns the Direct Mail/Marketing Association. DMMA believes that, while most advertisements are honest and legitimate, consumers should investigate any business offers before getting involved.

Consumers have lost millions of dollars responding to deceptive and illegal ads promising unusually high income through work-at-home and get-rich-quick businesses such as stuffing envelopes and clipping newspapers.

- Question any offer requiring purchase of expensive materials.
- Question any offer promising high profits and demanding little or no experience.
- Read and understand all terms of any contract or agreement before signing. Instructions, catalogs, mailing lists, "inside secrets" and advice are often of dubious value, entailing additional investment.
- Know the product or service to be sold. Deceptively alluring ads often dwell on profits, barely mentioning the product to be sold or handled.
- Become familiar with all relevant laws, rules and regulations. Mail order businesses are regulated by the Federal Trade Commission, U.S. Postal Service and local and state laws.
- Beware of unidentified testimonials. Check out those where identities are given.
- Demand evidence of proof-of-earnings claims and return-on-investment possibilities.
- Never send cash through the mail. Use checks or money orders.
- Remember, as a mail order practitioner, you are responsible for consumer satisfaction and for complaints and problems resulting from the sales of your products. You will have to make refunds to dissatisfied customers.
- Verify the integrity of a firm by checking with the state, federal or local office of Consumer Affairs; the State Attorney General's office; and the Better Business Bureau both in yours and the company's location before you invest.

College Dollars for Adults

A new financial aid guide for adults just published by the College Board dispels the myth that money for college study is available only to the poor, the young, and those with "straight A's."

Paying for Your Education: A Guide for Adult Learners is designed to help adults obtain financial aid for which they may be eligible, whether they select a two- or four-year college, or choose to attend full- or part-time. Survey results and enrollment trends show that one out of every five American adults aged 25 and over is currently enrolled in some form of education or training.

The guide disproves the belief that money for college is available only to youngsters coming out of high school. A 30-year-old Philadelphia secretary, for example, recently saved the cost of nine credit hours by earning credit for what she'd learned on the job.

A sales representative for a large industrial firm in New York, for example, financed a series of non-credit business courses through his company's fringe benefit plan.

A barber in a small town was able to obtain his barber's license while receiving benefits from the G.I. bill.

The 65-page, pocket-sized booklet proves that a college education need not be out of reach for the self-supporting adult, by showing how to:

- discover possible sources of aid
- organize a successful campaign to obtain aid, and
- compare aid awards offered by different institutions

Paying for Your Education is available for purchase at $3.50 per copy, and to educators at special bulk rates ($1 each for 100-999 copies; 75¢ each for 1,000-9,999 copies; and 50¢ each for 10,000 or more.) Copies may be obtained by sending a check or institutional purchase order to College Board Publication Orders, Department C-88, Box 2815, Princeton, New Jersey 08541.

Tips Listed for Taking Temperature Fever Is Symptom

Fever is the body's way of showing that something is wrong. It is our defense mechanism to combat infection.

Someone in the family is flushed and the skin feels warm to the touch. How do you tell if fever is present, and if so, how much? Use a thermometer. The American Medical Association's Handbook of First Aid and Emergency Care tells how.

If using an oral thermometer, insert the bulb under the victim's tongue and keep it there for at least three minutes. Warn the patient not to talk or bite down. Do not take a temperature for at least 30 minutes after the patient has bathed, smoked, eaten hot or cold foods or drunk water.

To take a rectal temperature, place the patient on his stomach on a firm surface. Lubricate the bulb end of the thermometer with cold cream or petroleum jelly and insert gently about one inch. Never use force. Leave in for three minutes.

To read the thermometer, hold the end without the bulb between the thumb and the first finger. Use a good light. Look through the pointed edge toward the flat side until you see a thin silver or red line. Rotate the tube gently if the line is not visible.

The temperature reading is at the end of the silver line. The long lines mark the degrees of temperature and the short lines indicate two-tenths of a degree. An arrow points to the normal reading of 98.6. Readings higher than this indicate a fever, except in rectal temperature, which is one degree higher.

Before taking temperature, the thermometer must be shaken down so that the silver or red line reads below the 98.6 mark to approximately 95 degrees. Read the thermometer to make sure the mercury is shaken down.

Individual temperatures may run slightly above or below the average, and they may vary throughout the day, running lower in the morning and higher in the evening. Slight changes usually are not significant.

If the fever suddenly changes from slight to high, 104 degrees or more, call the doctor, or take the patient to the nearest hospital emergency room. The same advice applies if the fever persists for no obvious reason.

Aspirin and other similar medications are helpful in reducing a fever. But take these only after consulting the doctor.

Education, Club Topic

At a recent meeting of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Women's Club held at the home of Mrs. Marscella Bradley, of Garrett, Mrs. Marie Mullins, program leader, presented an informative program, "Forecast for Education," including discussions of early childhood development, day care education, cuts in education, education for handicapped children, cost of education and educational requirements. Several members of the club joined in the discussion.

During the business session, the club president, Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, announced a clean-up campaign for Floyd county, to be held November 21. She stressed the need for this particular campaign. The club agreed to collect and present paperback books for the Veterans Hospital, also magazines are to be collected for the grade schools, the first set of magazines going to the Wayland school.

Mrs. Martin informed the club of a "fun trip" being arranged by Mrs. James Adams, of Prestonsburg, a tour of Washington D.C., next April 1.

Mrs. La Faye Hughes asked the club to keep in mind the fire department which is being formed at Garrett, pointing out that since the club has the Area Fire Department at Wayland as its Community Improvement Project, it may be will to keep in mind the needs of the Garrett Fire Department. Mrs. Martin welcomed the new member, Mrs. Phyllis Honshell, of Wayland, who will serve with Mrs. Martin on the Kentucky Educational Television special committee. Mrs. Martin also spoke of the privilege she enjoyed of introducing Mrs. Beatrice Collins, of Prestonsburg, who is a charter member of the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Women's Club, at the seventh district fall board meeting held at Jenny Wiley State Park. Mrs. Collins has been a lifelong club member and worker. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Marie Mullins and Mrs. Lula Coburn, to the following members: Mrs. Blanche Barner, Mrs. Loretta Martin, Mrs. Maxine Martin, Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, Mrs. La Faye Hughes, Mrs. Marscella Bradley, Mrs. Launice Dunfee, Mrs. Joyce Stevens and Mrs. Phyllis Honshell.

The next regular meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Anna Castle at Wayland, Ky.

Washington KET Special Drew Strong Response

On November 16 and 19, KET viewers called in their questions to Kentucky's U.S. senators and representatives during two "Kentucky Journal" specials. Originating, live, from Washington, D.C., via satellite, the public affairs specials allowed Kentuckians to address questions to Senators Wendell Ford and Walter "Dee" Huddleston and U.S. Representatives Larry Hopkins, Carroll Hubbard, Romano Mazzoli, Carl D. Perkins and Hal Rogers.

"The viewer response to the call-in was tremendous," says "Kentucky Journal" producer Charles Thompson. "And the congressmen were delighted to answer questions from the public."

During the programs, the KET switchboard received a total of 261 calls from viewers in 81 of the state's 120 counties.

The largest number of calls were received from viewers in Fayette, Johnson, Kenton and Madison counties. There were especially strong responses from Boone, Calloway, Campbell, Graves, McCracken and Marshall counties as well.

"Kentucky Journal" airs each Monday through Thursday at 7:30 p.m. (ET), on KET.

Winter Economy Said Cause Of Rise in Child Abuse Here

Human Resources Secretary Grady Stumbo reported Nov. 23 that 15,000 cases of suspected child abuse involving 37,000 children were investigated by his department last year. This is a 20 percent increase over the previous year.

"I am concerned about the incidence of child abuse," said Dr. Stumbo. "Studies in five selected areas show abuse reports rise during winter months when children can't get out to play. We also know tension increases with financial stress which many families are experiencing now because of the sluggish economy."

Dr. Stumbo called for community help, both in detecting and preventing child abuse. The Department for Human Resources is mandated to investigate all cases of suspected child abuse and provide protective services where needed.

"Our staff will continue their hard work dealing with these cases," Dr.

Stumbo said. "But we need the help of neighbors who suspect abuse or neglect to report it to us."

Kentucky law requires that all cases of suspected child abuse be reported. Citizens can call the Bureau for Social Services office in their county.

Another resource available to people who want to help prevent child abuse in the Kentucky Chapter of the National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse. Chapter members will work with any community to sponsor educational and crisis intervention programs. The Kentucky chapter can be reached at (502) 585-1995 or by writing executive director Ben Feltes, 809 South 4th St., P.O. Box 1652, Louisville, Ky.

Help for parents who want to stop abusing their children is available through Parents Anonymous of Kentucky. This group also offers help to parents who are not yet abusing their children, but are afraid they will. Parents Anonymous can be contacted by calling collect (606) 491-5683 or by writing executive director Brenda Williams, P.O. Box 801, Bowling Green, Ky. 42101.

"Most of us think child abuse is something that happens somewhere else," said Dr. Stumbo. "It happens right here in Kentucky, and I am appealing to caring people to help the department protect the children and try to help the parents."

Teen Workers' Woes

About one third of high school freshmen and sophomores, and half of all juniors and seniors hold jobs during the school year.

Now a study questions whether the work ethic is such a good thing for teenagers. Sociologists at the University of California at Irvine studied 212 working high school students and 319 students who had never worked.

The workers were more likely to have bought, sold or used marijuana and alcohol, for one thing. Those who worked very long hours studied less, got lower grades and had less interest in school than they did before they started working.

While 80 percent of the workers claimed to like their jobs, they were generally more cynical and disdainful of the work world than non-workers, and they tended to have lower ethical standards.

Twenty-nine percent admitted that they gave away goods or services to friends while they were on the job. Eighteen percent said they had stolen from their employer or from co-workers. Sixteen percent reported to work intoxicated at least once, and 9 percent marked more hours on their time card than they actually worked.

The study, one of the first large-scale looks at working teens, was sponsored by a grant from the National Institute of Education.

Not all the results were bad. The California study included a short business quiz at the end of the survey, and workers scored significantly better than the non-workers on it. Workers also learned how to organize and budget their time, deal effectively with the public, and cope with difficult situations, the study found.

Whiskey Can Be Risky

In the late 1960s and early 1970s, many investors purchased Scotch whiskey in the form of Scotch whiskey warehouse receipts. Under this plan, the investor buys whiskey which is stored in a warehouse in Scotland until it has reached its maturity age, at which time it is sold at a profit.

Unfortunately, the investors did not get what they paid for. Most of the whiskey purchased had already reached its maturity age and could have been sold at the time of purchase without further aging.

Investors accustomed to doing business with reputable stockbrokers had assumed that they would be able to sell their holdings through the same brokerage firm from which they purchased the investment.

In most cases it turned out that the promotional literature, while holding out a vision of easy resale, was generally designed to avoid any commitment by the seller to repurchase the Scotch whiskey receipts, or even to arrange such repurchase.

Investors were also not informed that there are many pitfalls involved in trying to dispose of Scotch whiskey in small lots; that once sold to the investor, the whiskey belongs to him and it is his responsibility to arrange for disposal; and that the longer an investor holds Scotch whiskey warehouse receipts, the more money he loses because of the continuous storage and insurance charges.

According to the Securities & Exchange Commission, the promoters claimed that they were selling the investor malt whiskey when, in fact, what the investor was actually buying was less expensive grain whiskey or a blend containing only a very small percentage of malt whiskey. The latter is very difficult to sell at any time because blenders want to buy individual malts and grain whiskey to determine their own blending proportions.

Many promoters sold their clients worthless receipts from fictitious warehouses representing whiskey which never existed. Other investors did not receive their whiskey until one or two years after the purchase date.

Some promoters charged their clients storage fees for storing the whiskey in the warehouse, but did not pay the warehouse. When no payments were made to the warehouse, the warehouse exercised its rights and sold the whiskey in order to pay for the storage charges, and later remitted any excess to the legal owners—the promoters.

Anyone holding receipts for whiskey in bonded warehouses in Scotland should first make sure that they are the legal owners of the whiskey to which they are entitled. This can be done by determining if you have in your possession a "confirmation of ownership" from the warehouse where the goods are stored. Then find out if the warehouse really exists and where it is located.

Once ownership of the whiskey has been established, the investor may contact a broker and request a bid for the sale of the whiskey. The seller may not receive a bid which he considers a fair price; however, if the seller feels that the price offered to him is too low and he decides to wait longer before selling the whiskey in order to get a better price, he or she runs the risk of a higher storage charge.

A list of reputable brokers may be obtained by contacting the American Consulate General, 3 Regent Terrace, Edinburgh, Scotland.

Say Worst Past for Housing Recession

The worst is over for the nation's longest and deepest housing recession since World War II. Dr. Jack Carlson, chief economist and executive vice president of the National Association of Realtors, told the association's 74th annual convention in Miami Beach recently.

"While existing home sales this year have declined by nearly 50 percent since the peak level in 1978, home sales and housing starts should pick up modestly next spring and increase even further through 1983," he said.

Carlson, along with David Maxwell, chairman of the Federal National Mortgage Association, and Philip Brinkerhoff, president of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation, who addressed the session, "The Economics and Real Estate Outlook for 1982," acknowledged that finding new ways to cope with high interest rates will be a major issue in the 1980s.

"Mortgage interest rates could get down to 15 to 16 percent next spring," Carlson said. "However, the most significant drops in interest rates are resulting from creative financing packages, which make up more than 60 percent of the home sales taking place today."

Brinkerhoff noted that a number of changes are occurring in the housing industry, particularly in home financing, which will play a major role in the future buying and selling homes.

"Homebuilders are likely to build fewer, smaller and more energy-efficient homes; investors are buying more mortgage-backed securities; and secondary mortgage markets are likely to play a much larger role in home financing of the future," Brinkerhoff said.

Both Brinkerhoff and Maxwell outlined new programs in operation and under development in the secondary mortgage market which are designed to respond to the changes occurring in the marketplace.

"In addition to our Resale/Refinance program, which allows a buyer to obtain a loan at a below market interest rate by combining the sellers' old low rate loan with new money at a higher rate, and our offer to purchase buy-down mortgages, we will soon launch a program to purchase second mortgages provided they were originated by FNMA-approved lenders," Maxwell said.

FNMA also will expand in the areas of Adjustable Rate Mortgage purchase programs and conventional mortgage-backed securities," he said.

Brinkerhoff noted that Freddie Mac became the first secondary market institution to announce an ARM purchase program.

"Since last May, we have purchased $25 million of ARM loans throughout the country," he said.

"One of our most significant new programs," he continued, "has been our Guarantor Program, which builds upon our conventional mortgage-backed securities program."

The program allows lenders to "swap" mortgages for securities, or participation certificates, which the lender, in turn, can sell to investors.

"To date we have held two offers—in October and November—in which we committed to purchase $3.7 billion in mortgages from lending institutions," he said. "This not only represents the largest financial transaction of its kind but will allow 100,000 additional homes to be financed."

The Guarantor Program will allow institutions to raise more long-term money for mortgage finance than they currently can, he added.

"We expect to purchase $30 to $40 billion per year under the program," he said, "which will give all types and sizes of lending institutions access to the capital markets, many of which have been too small to take advantage of this kind of access in the past."

The National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association, represents more than 700,000 individuals involved in all phases of the real estate industry.

A Tree's True Value

A tree has other kinds of value than stumpage or lumber. Professor T.M. Das of the Agricultural University of Calcutta, India suggests that a tree which lives 50 years normally contributes services worth nearly $196,250 (U.S.) to its community. The tree would produce about $31,250 worth of oxygen, $62,500 in air pollution control, $31,250 in soil erosion control and additions to soil fertility, $37,500 in recycling water and controlling humidity, $31,250 in shelter to animals and birds, and $2,500 worth of protein. Other tree values include flowers and fruits. Professor Das suggests that a tree sold for commercial purposes brings less than 0.3 percent of its real value.

Smokers of Marijuana Undergo Devastating Personality Changes

New evidence, factual and frightening, reveals that marijuana smokers can undergo devastating and irreversible personality changes—including permanent intoxication from as few as two joints a week. Gathering evidence for the first time from a number of eminent sources—physicians, neurologists, psychiatrists, psychologists and other experts—the Reader's Digest reports in the December issue that even in small quantities, pot has "dramatically impairing effects on cells and...can damage man's most precious possessions: the mind, the personality, the spirit."

Psychiatrist-neurologist Robert Heath is one of the specialists consulted in the Reader's Digest report. In a recent Rhesus-monkey study he conducted, the monkeys were exposed to the smoke of three-fourths of a marijuana cigarette five days a week, for six months. Structural cell changes occurred in all the brain sites and particularly in the sites directly related to typical pot symptoms of apathy, emotional flatness, irritability and fear.

Dr. Harold Voth of the Menninger Foundation's School of Psychiatry, has studied the psychopathology of marijuana for the past eight years. He points out in the article that "it takes years of heavy drinking to reach the same point of psychological impairment that marijuana can induce in a matter of months, particularly in the case of the very young user."

Evidence of a growing awareness to a problem of epidemic proportions with dramatic implications can be seen in the response to previous marijuana articles. The Digest report, written by Peggy Mann, is the third of a series. Her first article dealt with pot-induced impairment of the brain and reproductive system. The second, with the drug's effect on the lungs, heart and immune system. Combined, they sold more reprints than any other articles in the sixty-year history of Reader's Digest.

Pot smokers start out as a diverse group, but Mann points out that when they become chronic users, they "tend to get into a startling sameness, with a distinct pot-induced profile." The symptoms of this profile are alarmingly similar to senility. Chronic users of pot become psychologically, physiologically and socially disabled—depression, an unreasonable preoccupation with how one's body feels, obsessive-compulsive tendencies and inflexibility were similar symptoms found in a July 1981 study of teenage pot smokers and elderly, senile adults. The study was conducted by Dr. Mark Gold, director of research at Fair Oaks Hospital in Summit, N.J., one of the few psychiatric hospitals in the country that specializes in treatment of the marijuanaholic.

Dr. Mitchell Rosenthal, director of Phoenix House in New York City, the nation's largest residential drug-treatment facility, predicts:

"A sizeable number of our young people will not mature as they should. Instead, we can look forward to a growing population of immature, under-qualified adults, many of whom will be unable to live without economic, social or clinical support."

Road Fund Plan Would Draw Extra $200 Mill.

The State Highway Advisory Committee has proposed a six-point plan to add more than $200 million in annual revenue to the state's road fund.

The 45-member committee, formed by Transportation Secretary Frank Metts in September, is working on proposals to present to the Legislature to aid the road fund.

According to transportation officials, the state's road fund has declined to the 1975 level in terms of actual dollars. The state Transportation Department has suffered a combined $365 million shortfall in state and federal revenues since 1980.

The six-point plan proposed by the committee at its third meeting held in Elizabethtown Nov. 19 is intended to reverse the current decline in the road fund. The proposals, if acted on, would enable the state to continue present levels of maintenance and construction.

The proposals agreed on by the members of the committee are:

- Elimination of tolls on the state's nine toll roads. The committee recommended that tolls be eliminated on the toll roads to encourage use of the roads. Toll revenues amount to $18 million annually with the cost of collecting the tolls totaling $7 million. Members felt the $11 million loss in revenue would be offset by lower maintenance on adjacent routes. Members also recommended the addition of more access to the toll roads.

- Increase automobile registration from $12.50 to $25. The members proposed bringing the cost of auto registration up to the levels of neighboring states. The average cost of registration in surrounding states is $25.90. This proposal would create an estimated $20 million in additional revenue annually.

- Raise truck registration to the average of surrounding states. Estimated to add from $20 million to $50 million to the state's road fund, the proposal would combine the surcharge on truck fuel into the registration fee to make collection easier. The committee also recommended the exemption on farm trucks weighing less than one ton be removed.

- Increase the motor fuels tax. The motor fuels tax generates about 45 percent of the revenue in the road fund. The tax was changed from nine cents per gallon to 9 percent of the wholesale price of gasoline by the Legislature in 1980. The change failed to produce the expected revenue increases because of decline in the fuel use and in the cost of gasoline. The committee recommended raising the percentage of the tax and setting a higher floor on the tax. Estimated revenue to be generated is $100 million.

- Transfer highway-related sales taxes to the road fund. Under this proposal, tax revenue from garages, service stations, auto parts dealers and motor vehicle dealers would be transferred to the road fund. About $45 million in sales tax is collected annually from these sources. Members justified the proposal by saying these revenues relate directly to highway use.

- Transfer property tax on automobiles to the road fund. About $25 million goes into the general fund annually from property taxes collected on automobiles. The figure recommended by the committee does not include the portion of automobile property taxes designated for local governments and schools.

The committee will meet in December in Louisville to draw up final recommendations which will be presented to Secretary Metts.

Metts has assured the committee that whether or not he accepts all their recommendations, he will do all he can to see the state's transportation needs receive a fair share of the state's revenues.

Dec. 9 KET Program To Eye Watts Policies

Secretary of the Interior James Watt is the topic of the public television special, "James Watt's Environment: Promised Land," airing Wednesday, December 9 at 9:00 p.m. (ET), 8:00 p.m. (CT), on KET.

As a member of President Reagan's Cabinet, Watt has generated controversy with proposals for extending leases for oil exploration near California beaches and harvesting timber in protected wilderness areas. Viewpoints from industrialists, residents of the affected areas and national environmentalists are juxtaposed with comments from Watt and the Interior Department during this one-hour program.

Coal fields and strip mines in Kentucky and forests in western Oregon, Montana and Wyoming are visited in an examination of Watt's intention to open them for lumber harvests and oil/gas development.

"James Watt's Environment: Promised Land" was produced by the Chedd-Angier Production Company.

WATER RESOURCES ACT COMMENT IS ASKED

Cafeteria style service for soil and water conservation programs will not help the nation meet its food and fiber commitments in the future, according to a three-year study from the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). "About one-third of America's cropland is eroding faster than the soil can rebuild itself through the natural process," explained Pat Beyler, District Conservationist, with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service office in Prestonsburg. "Floyd County has some 4,000 acres which are a part of the national figure," Mr. Beyler said. "We now have a proposed soil and water conservation program which could redirect USDA people and money to the most critical resource problems in the state and the nation to enable us to maintain our agricultural production base," he pointed out.

The study was called for under the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977 (RCA). It asked for an evaluation of past programs and an analysis of the direction future programs need to take. Kentucky Senator Walter D. Huddleston was the author of this legislation. The general public was also invited to participate in shaping USDA's efforts in the area of natural resources.

There are two alternatives programs and USDA's preferred program. Alternative 1 calls for status quo operations with severe budget reduction outlays for soil and water conservation programs throughout USDA.

Alternative 2 is the redirection of the present programs and was previously the most popular with the public during the 1980 RCA review. On the other hand, the preferred program is representative of the public's desire to return greater control to states which is a central theme of the current administration. The preferred program consists of the following and is an expansion of Alternative 2 but calls for no additional increase in current funding levels: Establishment of local, state and national conservation boards; required conservation plans before Farmers Home Administration loans are approved; tax incentives as an inducement to increase conservation systems; increase funding for research, information and education programs; expansion of the long-term agreement approach for cost-share monies; targeting money and technical people into the most serious erosion plagued areas; pilot projects to evaluate new approaches such as performance bonuses and cross-compliance; increased emphasis on local and state involvement in setting priorities for soil and water conservation activities. The public comment period will end January 15, 1982. For further information people should contact either the Soil Conservation Service or the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service offices in Floyd county.

Chandler's Was Lone Voice Raised Against Curci Firing

Last Tuesday's vote by the University of Kentucky Athletics Board to buy up the three remaining years of Head Football Coach Fran Curci's contract was unanimous, except for one vote. In the 15-1 decision which, the board hopes, will effectively remove Curci from the coaching spot, former governor A. B. "Happy" Chandler cast the one vote against the motion to dismiss Curci.

As the lone dissenter on the board, Chandler, a long-time friend and supporter of Curci during his nine years as head coach at UK, was outspoken about the board's decision.

While UK Athletics Director Cliff

Hagan called Curci's firing "in the best interests of the university and its football program." Chandler said the decision had set the football program back "at least five years."

Chandler said he would be "sorry for the fellow that comes in" to replace Curci, and he added that his advice to a new coach coming to UK would be "to try to go someplace else."

"This university established itself in times past as the graveyard of coaches and they just made another demonstration of it today," Chandler declared.

The former governor said he didn't think a series of well-publicized off-the-field incidents involving players and the police had resulted in Curci's undoing, rather, he pointed to what he termed "attitude" on the part of fellow athletic board members. "None of these so-called experts here, these professors on this board, they didn't help this man (Curci). They didn't go to practice. They didn't help him recruit. They didn't help him at all," Chandler said.

"In 1979, they gave him a new five-year contract, so they wiped all that out," Chandler said. "This is unjust and unfair and, I think, a tragic decision that ought not to have been made."

"I think this boy got bad treatment and for that they'll have to answer, I don't have to answer for it."

Atty. General Says $1 Million Is Saved

Attorney General Steven L. Beshear has announced approximately $1 million was saved for the taxpayers of the commonwealth in fiscal year 1980-81 by the reduction in the amount of money spent by the state on personal service contracts for private attorneys.

"When I became attorney general in December 1979, I found there were 127 personal service contracts for private attorneys representing a total dollar value of $2,448,225," said Beshear. "To me, this represented an abuse to the pocketbook of Kentucky taxpayers, and we set out to do something about it."

With the cooperation of Gov. John Y. Brown Jr., all proposed employment of attorneys, either full-time or through personal service contract, began to be reviewed by the office of the attorney general. In addition, the attorney general's office began to provide legal representation to some 37 state boards and commissions which had previously hired outside counsel by personal service contract.

Q. Is any research being done to limit the amount of radiation needed to make x-rays?

A. Researchers at the University of Texas M.D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston have developed a new x-ray process that reduces radiation exposure and also eliminates the need for film.

Dr. Alfonso Zermeno, leader of the research team, says the process is totally electronic. Replacing the film is a reusable plate. Dr. Zermeno explained that a charge is put on a plate, which x-rays discharge, forming a latent (hidden) image. The image is then read by laser with the results produced as a black and white photograph.

The system will reduce the x-ray dose appreciably, and in some cases only one x-ray instead of a series will need to be taken. Such a new x-ray can be manipulated with a computer to produce much more information than x-ray film.

The new technique is cheaper than standard x-rays taken with film containing silver. Another cost incentive is that the plates are reusable indefinitely.

The first model of the new process is expected to be tested at M.D. Anderson Hospital in about a year. It will take less than 30 seconds to read the pattern of one x-ray into the computer and be ready for the next x-ray.

The process is easily adapted to standard x-ray equipment so that switching to the new process will not be unduly expensive. The new plates simply slide into the same cameras where film cassettes are now placed. The new and the old systems could both be used, but the new eliminates the need for a darkroom.

Do you want to keep a record of the x-rays you have? Call the Cancer Hopeline for your free copy of "X-rays: Get the Picture on Protection." Call toll free 1-800-432-9321 from 9-9 Monday-Thursday and 9-5 Friday. You may also write us at 915 South Limestone Street, Lexington 40536.

Q. My mother is dying of cancer at home with her children caring for her. How much and what should we tell our own children ages 5-15?

A. Death is an inescapable part of life. Treating it as a taboo subject only makes it harder to handle later on. To help your children through this experience, let them know that talking about death, even grandma's death, is all right. It's also best to be honest about your feelings on the subject, something that may be easier said than done.

Remember that children are exposed to death every day; dead birds, animals, and insects. TV and fairy tales portray it. Children even act out death in their games. They confront it, but as adults we often avoid the topic because it is upsetting to us or because we don't have all the answers. Sharing your feelings and admitting when you don't know is far more comforting to a child than saying something untrue. That creates distrust and uneasiness.

Children develop their concepts of death at different rates just as they grow at different rates. Preschoolers, for example, see death as temporary, reversible, and impersonal. Children between 5 and 9 may realize death is final, but they will escape it. From 9 or 10 through adolescence, children perceive death as final and personal. Some become philosophical about life and death. Others react to their fear of death by taking unnecessary risks to prove their immortality.

In having the opportunity to care for your mother at home, her last memories, and yours, will be of familiar people supporting each other in familiar surroundings. The children can be included as much as they wish. In this way, death will be a less mysterious, frightening experience.

A free booklet, "Talking to Children About Death," presents these ideas and many others which may be of help to the family teaching children about death as well as to those whose lives have been or soon will be affected by the death of a loved one. For a free copy, call the Cancer Hopeline toll free at 1-800-432-9321 from 9-9 Monday-Thursday or 9-5 Friday. You may also write us at 915 South Limestone Street, Lexington, 40536.

'Messiah' Presented By Chorus, Dec. 6, 7

The Prestonsburg Community College Chorus will present "Messiah" Sunday, December 6 at 3:00 p.m. at the Mayo Methodist Church of Paintsville, and Monday, December 7 at 7:30 p.m. in the Pike Auditorium of P.C.C.

Soloists for the performance will be Bob Young, tenor; Doug Smith, bass; Dee Dee Kalos, soprano; Elma Jessen, soprano; Malinda Preston, contralto; and Vicki Paek, contralto. Mary Grace Garland will accompany the chorus and soloists. The performance will be under the direction of Gus Kalos, head of the music department at Prestonsburg Community College.

"Messiah" was completed by Handel during the twenty-four days between August 22 and September 14, 1741. After a rehearsal on April 8, 1742, it was performed for the first time at a charity concert held at Dublin on April 13. Approximately a year later, it was heard in London on March 23, 1743, but since that time has probably had more performances than any masterwork in the history of music.

The public is invited to attend.

The music department at Pikeville College conducted an instrumental music workshop Saturday, November 14 on the college campus. Jim Andy Caudill, Ernie Hills, R. Eugene Schindler, C. Gerald Martin, and Todd Wright comprised the workshop faculty.

Students from nine area high school bands, with their directors, participated in clinics to improve individual musicianship and performed in small ensembles during the day's activities.

Those attending were Dale Handy, Karla Hinkle, Bob Folt, director, of Beltry High School; Vickie Lyn Little, Gina Carpenter, and Bob DeHoag, director, of Jackson City High School; Allen Tackett, Steve Damron, Sherry Lynn Burke, Angela Collins, and Helen Colley, director, of Virgie High School; Kari Owens, Jeff Craft, Wally Ratliff, director, of Prestonsburg High School; Gary Ratliff, Jamie Bartley, Duane McCuiston and R. Craig Valentine, director, of Elkhorn City High School; Patricia Shepard, Karen Feltner, Shirley Moore, Mark Combs, James Bach, Lounette Howard, Thada Rogers, Russell Perry, Ricky Arnett, John Clemons, Lloyd Creech, Kathy Jewell, Mike Shouse, and Bob DeHoag, director, of Breathitt County High School; Kevin Kinney, Brian Kinney, Rodney St. Clair, and Marcia Thompson, director, of Millard High School; Joell Allen, Beth Vance, Chris Thornsberry, Lorraine Martin, Cindy Osborne, Barbara Collins, Lisa Chafins, Freddie Osborne, Shawn Martin, Dan Parker, and Judy Looney, director, of McDowell High School; James Brashear, Dwayne Fields, John Morgan, and Tim Cody, director, of Dilce Combs High School.

Prestonsburg High School Class of '40 Reunion

The first class reunion of the 1940 Prestonsburg High School graduating class was held at May Lodge, August 22. Registration began at 4 p.m. and dinner at 7. Thirty-two classmates attended. Honored guests were former teachers, Minnie Grace Sutherland, Virginia M. Jeffries, May K. Roberts and Dr. Joe Taylor Hyden. Due to illness, Superintendent Ishmael Triplett and Principal Claybourne Stephens were unable to attend. President of the class for all four years of high school, James Russell Rice, was master of ceremonies.

James Russell Rice opened the dinner with prayer and a short talk. After dinner, Lily B. Johnson introduced the teachers and they gave a short talk. Patty Rimmer Webb called the roll and each classmate gave a short resume of his life since graduation. One distinction of the 1940 class is it has produced two Floyd county sheriffs, Henry C. Hale and Frank Leslie. A memorial table had been set up and decorated by Alice G. Burke Buchanan in memory of deceased classmates. Russell Rice made a plaque with each picture of the deceased classmate in it. James Burdsal gave a memorial service. Class awards were presented by Anna Louise H. Harris to the following:

Classmate that had traveled the farthest, Tilden Belvard Friend, who was given a Russell May painting of the old high school. Classmate that had changed the least: Man, James Russell Rice; woman, Lily Blackburn Johnson. Classmate married the longest, Lily B. Johnson, 41 years. Classmate with the most grandchildren: Juanita Keen Kilgore, 19 grandchildren.

Natural Gas Supply Termed 'Excellent'

Natural gas supplies for Kentucky appear to be "excellent" this winter, according to state Energy and Agriculture Secretary Bill Sturgill.

"Of course, there is no guarantee that scattered supply problems would not occur if the winter is unusually cold," Sturgill added. "But the overall supply situation must be regarded as excellent, and there is no reason at this time for concern about gas curtailments."

The state's energy chief also announced no shortages are anticipated for coal, electricity or fuel oil again, barring unusually severe weather. Coal fuels virtually all of the state's electric-generating facilities.

The Kentucky Department of Energy's announcement was based on reports filed by the five interstate gas companies that collectively supply more than 95 percent of the natural gas sold in the state.

These companies are Columbia Gas Transmission, Tennessee Gas Pipeline, Texas Eastern Gas Transmission, Texas Gas Transmission and the Kentucky-West Virginia Gas Co.

The reports, required by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, showed only one supplier, Tennessee Gas Pipeline, that anticipated having less than 100 percent of its customers' reported requirements for this winter. This shortfall is not expected to pose any problems for customers, however, since the affected distributor, Western Kentucky Gas, anticipates sufficient gas from other suppliers, to make up the deficit.

The New Kitchen Look

Old is in and it's usually expensive, but there are still some antiques that are easy to find and to afford. Old kitchen paraphernalia from the Twenties through the Fifties still cook like a charm and look—well, they look like kitchen stuff is supposed to look. Not bronze or wicker, they have a solid, everyday beauty. What are some of these bargains?

• Aluminum cookware: Introduced by the Pittsburgh Reduction Co. (now Alcoa), aluminum was popular by the Twenties but didn't gain its high-tech lustrous look until the early Fifties. Hammered aluminum is likely to become a popular collector's item soon.

• Blenders: Waring introduced the first successful version in 1937. Your best bet would be glass topped with porcelain with a chrome base. Prices can be as low as $4.

• Pyrex: Was first touted in 1915 as "the modern cookware that lets you watch foods cook." The 1922 Montgomery Ward Catalogue offered a 12 inch pie plate with a heavy silver plateholder for $4.36. That's about the present price for old ones like it now.

• Stoves and refrigerators: If you want to go all the way, gas stoves are great looking, dependable and fairly practical, but be careful of old refrigerators. They have tiny freezers, parts are nearly impossible to get, and they're heavy. Buy one from someone who just wants to see the last of it.

• Kitchen tables and chairs: The painted cottage style of the Twenties gave way to the chrome legs of the Thirties. Most painted pieces are cheap and repainting is a lot easier than natural refinishing. Detail the chairs with dime store fruit and flower decals.

• Toasters: The first electric ones were real Rube Goldberg contraptions, but around 1926, the first streamlined chrome model arrived. They're only about $15 in perfect condition.

• Wallpaper: Old rolls turn up with amazing regularity in five and ten basements, garage sales and attics. Go for class or kitsch.

New Mowers Meet Safety Standards

A power lawn mower should be both easy and safe. It should be light, simple to maneuver, quick starting and reliable. It should also be designed to lessen the chance of a hand or foot hitting the mower's blade, and it should reduce the risk of harm from thrown objects.

Unfortunately, safety and ease have not often come together. Most mowers that rank high in ease of use fail to earn similar marks in all around safety, which leaves the consumer with an unpleasant trade-off between convenience and possible harm.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) has published a long awaited set of safety standards for rotary powered lawn mowers. Although the standards don't go into effect until the end of 1981, two companies are already making machines that meet most of the CPSC's requirements. These are the Hahn IHS 122 and the Honda HR2 IPXA. Both are self-propelled mowers (a drive mechanism powers the wheels as you walk behind and steer) selling for about $400.

The major requirement of the CPSC standards is a "deadman" control of the mower blade. This type of control must be actuated to run the blade. Once it is released, the mower engine must keep running, but the cutting blade must stop within three seconds. Both the Honda and the Hahn are equipped with such a control.

The CPSC also requires that the mower blade be shielded against accidental contact. Both brands pass this test. The Hahn also performed quite well on a thrown objects test, spewing random bits of dirt and gravel off to the sides of the machine and well out of the way of its operator. The Honda performs as well with its grass bag in place, but when used with an optional grass discharge chute, tends to throw objects towards the operator of the mower.

On both brands, the controls, fuel and electrical systems, spark plug terminals and mufflers are well designed. The only inconvenience is their weight; both the Hahn and the Honda weigh about 90 pounds, and jockeying either about the lawn will be too taxing for some people.

Quartz Questions

The makers of quartz heaters have been conducting an aggressive marketing campaign extolling the benefits of their product but Connecticut's Department of Consumer Protection advises you consider the following facts before buying one.

- Quartz heaters give off radiant heat, which warms objects, not air as standard, convection heaters do.
- Spot heating is a good use for quartz heaters, but they must be directed at and placed within range of what you're heating.
- When using any spot heater, always keep your central thermostat high enough to keep water pipes in the rest of the house from freezing.
- Since the electrical cost to run quartz and convection heaters are the same, you're not saving money if the quartz heater is significantly more expensive to buy.
- Ask about the life expectancy, cost and availability of quartz elements. See if the unit has been approved by an independent laboratory.
- Never put a quartz heater too close to an object.
- Don't use extension cords with heaters. If you do and the cord gets hot, unplug it immediately.
- Questions or problems associated with the advertising or safety of quartz heaters will be answered by calling, toll free, 1-800-842-2649.

New Safety Plugs

If you've recently bought a television, radio, or portable electric lamp, take a look at its plug. It should have a recently introduced electrical safety plug known as a polarized plug. A safety feature meant to reduce the possibility of electrical shock, one blade is slightly wider than the other, making it impossible to place the plug in a wall outlet in a non-polarized fashion.

If a polarized plug fails to fit, reverse the plug. If the plug still doesn't fit, contact an electrician to replace the outlet. While not apparent to the untrained eye, wall receptacles in most homes built during the 1920's and later will have slots that conform to the new polarized plugs. Don't alter the plug—you could be in for the shock of your life!

Natural Gas For Cars

The current gasoline crisis has resulted in myriad schemes for running cars on practically anything but gasoline. One fuel conversion possibility that is being actively explored with renewed interest involves propane and natural gas.

Propane, best known for fulfilling the gas needs of the rural populace, is a liquid petroleum gas that is in world-wide surplus at the moment, selling for much less than gasoline. While the most abundant supply of natural gas comes from non-renewable underground wells, any organic waste material can be compressed to form methane gas. For example, the enterprising city of Modesto, California is running many fleet vehicles on gas produced from sewage.

Since both natural and propane gas burn cleaner than gasoline, they provide the double bonus of fewer emissions and longer engine life. However, like all substitutes for gasoline, these fuels have drawbacks. There are only 25,000 propane dealers in the country (compared to 171,000 gas stations) and most of them are in rural areas. Converting your car to propane could cost you anywhere from $1000 to $1800. Natural gas conversions have lagged even farther behind because a base refueling station runs over $40,000, so only large fleets find natural gas cost effective.

Financial considerations aside, insurance companies ask that vehicles be certified safe before they will grant a policy. Improper installation and the resulting improper ventilation can cause the driver to suffocate or cause the car to explode. Also, if your car breaks down, the local mechanic is not likely to know how to fix it. But then, when cars were first introduced, few blacksmiths could fix a flat.

Plan To Help Poor Pay Heating Bills Submitted To Feds

Dr. Grady Stumbo, secretary of the Department for Human Resources, has announced Kentucky's plan for helping low-income people pay winter heating bills has been submitted to the federal government.

It appears the department will receive more than $19 million in the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program Block Grant.

The state's Department for Human Resources developed the plan and will be responsible for administering Kentucky's participation in the federal Home Energy Assistance Program.

Of the $19 million, 9 percent, or $1,710,000, will go to the Social Services Block Grant, and 1 percent, or $190,000, to the Preventive Health Services block grant. Fifteen percent, or $2,800,000, of the funds will go to help low-income households weatherize their homes. The major portion of the funds will be reserved to help eligible low-income households pay fuel costs this winter.

"This year the department has been able to develop a more flexible program. Changes in the regulations allowed us to target a portion of the funds to meet specific needs of Kentuckians," Stumbo said.

"We have worked closely with various groups across the state, including energy vendors, social service agencies and legislators to get suggestions for the development of this year's program. We also conducted a public hearing on KET," he added.

Stumbo outlined several major changes from last year's program:

- Sixty percent, or $7,500,000, will be reserved for the elderly and handicapped. Applications from these households will be accepted Jan. 4, 1982, in local Bureau for Social Insurance offices.

- The remaining 40 percent, or $5,000,000, will be reserved for crisis intervention for households which are without or soon to be without heat. Applications from any household in a crisis situation will be accepted beginning Jan. 18.

- Funds for both the elderly and disabled households and households in a crisis situation have been allocated on an area development district basis.

- Only households that pay all their own heating costs will be eligible. This includes families which pay heating costs through rent.

- In most instances, payment will be made by two-party checks to the energy vendor and recipient.

Stumbo estimates the program will serve 75,000 Kentucky households. "We have tried to set eligibility income levels to provide assistance to as many eligible households as possible and to provide to those households amounts that can be a significant help to them in meeting the high costs of winter heating," he said.

Income maximum for a family of four has been set at $704 monthly or $8,450 yearly.

To be eligible, a household must have no more than $3,000 in liquid resources. Payments will range from $100 to $250 and will vary by household income, fuel types and family size.

Under the plan, each applicant is eligible for only one payment during the program's operation.

"Total benefit funds available for energy assistance are much lower than last year ($12.5 million compared to $22 million last year.) Because of this, the program's funds may be exhausted very quickly," Stumbo said.

Work On Exhibit At PCC, December 3-8

Artist Tom J. Whitaker holds his first color print before a background of his work which is on exhibit at the Prestonsburg Community College library, now through next Tuesday, December 8. A reception to which the public is invited is being held today (Wednesday) from 6 to 8 p.m. to meet the artist and view his work.

Whitaker, who has returned to teaching at the college after a leave of absence for further study, has recently released his first color print, that of a hog looking through a fence. Asked his reason for painting a hog, the artist said, "A hog has character...and I guess there's a little bit of hog in all of us."

The exhibition includes drawings and watercolors which range from boldness to delicacy of feeling with a wide scope of subject matter.

Still Will Receive Arts Council Award

James Still, outstanding Kentucky writer, has been named the recipient of the 1981 Milner Award.

The award, established to recognize the achievements of the late B. Hudson Milner, of Louisville, former chairman of the Kentucky Arts Commission, is given annually by the Kentucky Arts Council in recognition of outstanding leadership in the arts in Kentucky. Still was chosen by the council from nominations submitted by people across the state.

Still, a native of Alabama, has lived in Knott county since 1932 where he has produced a remarkable collection of poetry and fiction. His best known novel, River of Earth, published in 1940, was reissued by the University Press of Kentucky.

Still has written many stories, poems and children's books which draw upon his observation of life in Knott county.

He received the prestigious Marjorie Peabody Waite Award in 1979 from the American Academy of Arts and Letters and the National Institute of Arts and Letters. This award is given in literature once every three years to an older writer for the continuing quality of his work.

In Kentucky, Berea College honored Still with the special Weatherford Award for the body of his work. The award recognizes publications that have done the most to promote understanding of the Appalachian region.

The award will be presented to Still Thursday, Dec. 10, at 8 p.m. at Strickler Hall, University of Louisville. After the presentation, which is open to the public, Still will read a selection of his work.

Mine Water Treatment Technique Said More Practical, Less Costly

Coal operators in the area can look to Pikeville College for assistance in new mining technology. Dr. Charles F. Jordan, Associate Professor of Science at Pikeville College, has developed a practical and less expensive method of removing iron and manganese from mine water effluents.

Dr. Jordan has been invited to present his research at the 1981 Symposium on Surface Mining Hydrology, Sedimentology and Reclamation to be held December 7-11 in Lexington. The symposium is sponsored by the University of Kentucky Colleges of Agriculture and Engineering, the office of Engineering Continuing Education and Extension, the Institute for Mining and Minerals Research, and the Kentucky Water Resources Research Institute. The symposium is intended to provide a transfer of information between professionals in industry, government, consulting firms and universities.

Dr. Jordan has been working with coal operators in Kentucky, West Virginia, and Virginia for more than two years to meet federal and state effluent limitations for iron and manganese in waters associated with surface mining. In most cases, the cost for this treatment is lower than for previously tried and less successful methods. No adverse environmental effects have been realized with this method if reasonable precautions are taken.

Dr. Jordan's research has been supported by the Appalachian Region Commission and the Kentucky Department of Energy through a grant to the Pikeville CTFAC program.

A LONG WAY HOME

Timothy Hutton turns to social worker Brenda Vaccaro for help in his fierce determination to be reunited with his sister and brother—separated when the three were adopted by different families in childhood—in "A Long Way Home," an ABC-TV special movie presentation of a "G.E. Theater" inspired by actual events, airing SUNDAY, DECEMBER 6.

Following their abandonment in Florida by migrant worker parents, the three children are discovered and taken to a family service agency.

Miss Vaccaro stars as a compassionate social worker who ultimately decides to assist Donald (Hutton) in his attempts to locate and contact David (Paul Regina) and Carolyn (Lauren Peterson), his long-lost younger brother and sister.

This suave actor starred in television's answer to the mid-sixties James Bond craze. The highly popular spy spoof focused on the exploits of two handsome super-agents who teamed up to fight an international crime syndicate known as T.H.R.U.S.H.

Although the plots were far-fetched, the sex appeal of the two stars, combined with their "thrilling" lifestyles, captured the audience's imagination. The series debuted on the NBC Television Network in 1964 and ran for four years.

Question: Name the actor pictured above and the name of the series. Bonus points for naming his co-star and their exotic superagent names.

Tempers flare, teeth grind and everyone on the Hill is on edge as the latest round of negotiations between the police union and the city are suspended, while a new, problem-ridden transferee overreacts to a crisis in the field, forcing an old buddy, Officer Hill (Michael Warren), to cover for him, in "Cranky Streets," on NBC-TV's Emmy-winning "Hill Street Blues" THURSDAY, DECEMBER 10.

With marathon negotiations with the City Council at a standstill—and prospects of obtaining even modest salary hikes and fringe benefits bleak at best—a contentious tone is set for the "blues."

About the House

Window Film Reflects Energy Savings

Windows are still the primary culprits in the battle to conserve energy.

Studies conducted by HUD demonstrate that as much as 30 percent of the average home fuel bill is caused by heat loss through windows, and up to 30 percent of air conditioning expense is due to energy loss through window glass. Also, about three times as much energy is lost through the glass in windows than from leaks and cracks around window frames.

If you're energy-minded and conscientious about insulating your attic and keeping your thermostat or air conditioner turned down, you may still be literally throwing money out the windows.

More and more home and business owners are discovering the year-round cost effective advantages of using window insulating film, which helps keep winter heating and summer air conditioning costs in line.

Insulating film for windows consists of a microscopically thin layer of aluminum sandwiched between a film laminate. When adhered to windows, the film virtually becomes part of the glass. Because of its unique structure, insulating film works in two ways. First, in the summer when the sun shines on your windows, the film rejects a significant portion of the sun's heat, keeping the interior of your home cooler so you need less energy. Second, in the winter, insulating film reduces heat loss by re-radiating the heat back indoors and saving on fuel.

Researchers in insulating window film at Van Leer U.S.A., makers of a wide range of insulating film for consumer and commercial use, have documented that window film can reflect from 60 to 80 percent of the sun's rays, making your home cooler in the summer. Or, in the winter, depending on the film used and on the climate, it can prevent from 14 to 40 percent of the heat loss that normally occurs through windows.

There are other long-term benefits of window film. For instance, once you install it you can forget about it. Unlike storm windows, there's no need to change it with the seasons.

It also minimizes the sun's glare and eye discomfort while still transmitting adequate light.

Window insulating film can protect your draperies, carpets and furniture from fading by screening out most of the sun's ultraviolet rays. In addition, it increases safety by making glass more shatter resistant and reducing the possibility of injury from flying fragments.

So, for a few hours spent some afternoon, you can invest in long-term energy savings which eventually will mean money in your pocket.

Is the water in your area hard as nails? Don't buy expensive water softeners. Just add a dash of apple cider vinegar to your bath, laundry, or dishwasher. How much will depend on how hard your water is, but the vinegar works wonders.

Carpet shampoo by the gallon, heavy brooms, mops, cleaning solutions, etc.—you'll find what the professional cleaners use at janitor supply stores. And these longer-lasting quality items cost about the same as the products you buy where you shop out of habit.

When corrosion on old brass door knobs and hinges can't be rubbed off with cleaners, try rubbing the brass with the finest steel wool. It's great for brass andirons that you haven't polished for years. Once the brass glows again, wax it with car wax to seal in the shine.
