

Fire At Cliff Believed Result Of Arson

Arson is suspected in a Sunday night blaze which destroyed a wood frame house in the Cliff section. Reportedly owned by Jim Hammond, the house was not being lived in at the time of the fire although a witness told police "three or four" people were at the house shortly before the flames broke out, and at least one could be seen within the structure carrying a candle or match. State Police Arson Investigator Barry McKenzie is conducting an investigation into the fire and a number of "leads" have been uncovered, it was said. Prestonsburg Fire Department units responded to the blaze although the house was inaccessible to firefighting vehicles.

Water System Bids Believed Acceptable

Bidders on Five Contracts Ask $3 1/2 Million

Bidding for upgrading and extending the Prestonsburg water system attracted wide attention Thursday, with 24 companies bidding on the five contracts involved.

While the apparent low bids have yet to be audited, and some adjustments are anticipated, the bid prices, totaling $3.5 million, came in just under the $3.6 million in federal funds allocated to the project, though considerably below the $4.1 million estimated by water system engineers as the likely cost of the work.

Even if the low bid estimates stand, only $94,000 will be left for contingencies, a slim margin for a project of this magnitude. Utilities Superintendent Bill H. Howard said, however, he is hopeful that costs for the work can be contained within the funds available.

Contractors will have a year from the awarding of the contracts to construct water lines and 14 months to complete the water plant expansion, he said.

Officials of the four government agencies financing the project have (See Story No. 4, Page 4)

Native of Floyd Found Strangled

LaPorte (Ind.) police said Tuesday morning they have no clue to the identity of the slayer of Juanita Faye Boyd, 31, former Floyd county woman whose body was found last Saturday morning after she had been missing a week.

Miss Boyd had been strangled with a small cord. Her body was found in the trunk of a car in LaPorte county. She disappeared Feb. 22 and had been the subject of an intensive ground-and-air search by city, county and Indiana state police.

LaPorte police declined to discuss a possible motive for the crime.

The victim, who had worked as a beautician in LaPorte the last 12 years, was a daughter of the late Burl and Norma VanHoose Boyd and was a native of Eastern. She was graduated from Maytown High School in 1967 and the following year from the Ashland Beauty College.

Survivors include one son, Kevin, of LaPorte; seven brothers, Henry Boyd, of LaPorte, Paul Boyd, Dayton, O., Bradley Boyd, Sandusky, O., Harry Boyd, South Lyon, Mich., Jess Boyd, Columbus, Ga., and Charles Boyd, of Maytown, and two sisters, Mrs. Shirley Davis, of LaPorte, and Mrs. Louise Hellickson, Dayton, Ohio.

The body arrived Tuesday at the Hall Funeral Home, Martin, where visitation will be from 3 to 9 p.m. today (Wednesday). Funeral rites will be conducted from the chapel of the funeral home at 11 a.m. tomorrow (Thursday), the Rev. Lavonne Clem officiating, and burial will be made in the Boyd cemetery at Louisa.

Noel, Second Jailed In Slaying of Niemi

Mere Caffeine, Says Prisoner In Drug Bust

An investigation of suspected illegal drug sales, begun by police in the Prestonsburg area three months ago, culminated last Wednesday morning, apparently successfully, with the arrest here of two Chicago men on drug trafficking charges. But there may be a hitch.

Making use of an informant in a successful "buy-bust" operation in the parking area of a Prestonsburg restaurant, state police, with the cooperation of Prestonsburg policemen, arrested Thomas Eggleston on the Mountain Parkway, within the city limits, confiscated 5,000 pills, and lodged Eggleston in the county jail on a charge of trafficking in Schedule 2 non-narcotics, which includes such pharmaceutical drugs as amphetamines or "uppers." Later that morning, Eggleston's partner, Ron McPeck, also of Chicago, was arrested

This Town...That World

Correct me if I'm wrong, but my records show there hasn't been a postal rate increase this month.

HERE AGAIN

Last week I filled some space in this column with a recital of certain signs of spring, and wound up missing the surest—namely and to-wit, the peepers, not to mention the crocuses. For some obscure reason, I haven't heard the chorus performing from the little run at the back of our place, but others have and they say the tiny vocalists are in the same excellent form that marked their performance a year ago.

So—like the voice of the turtle, the sound of the peeper is in the land, and no sound, not even birdsong, makes gladder the heart of man. Strange that this tiny, ugly creature could mean so much to so many of us at a time when there's competition from the sight of the first blooms daring cold, March winds and from birds of varied hues. Maybe, somewhere, the Law of Compensation gets into the act.

Both Accused Say They Had Part in Plot

James M. Noel, the second man accused of murder in the insurance plot slaying of 19-year-old James T. Niemi at Wayland last October, joined his alleged confederate, Denver Patrick, Saturday as a prisoner in the Floyd county jail.

Noel was arrested late Friday in Columbus, Ind., to end a developing nationwide manhunt.

Coincidentally, on the same day that he was jailed here the remains of the man found in the ashes of a Wayland home were being buried at Garrett. The charred remains of the man were at first reported to be those of Noel, whose life had been insured for $100,000, six days prior to the fire. Patrick was listed as the beneficiary.

With the arrest of Noel came further confirmation of the decision arrived at by Coroner James J. Carter, State Police Detective Danny Stumbo, Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen, Commonwealth's Detective Tom Halbert and state pathologists that not Noel but the youth, Niemi, was the victim.

En route to Prestonsburg from Columbus, Ind., last Friday night, Noel admitted to Commonwealth's Attorney Allen and Detectives Stumbo and Halbert that he and Patrick planned the slaying of Niemi and the subsequent fire but denied that he had any part in the actual killing or the burning of the home. He said Patrick struck Niemi twice on his head with a clawhammer, poured whiskey around the area where he lay and set fire to the building.

Noel said he heard the victim scream as he left the burning structure and claims he would have returned to Niemi but feared Patrick.

Miners' Widows Win Health Care Benefits

Widows of some coal miners stand to get better health care coverage under the UMWA health and retirement funds as the result of a suit recently decided by a U. S. appeals court in favor of two Floyd women.

Rules barring the women from permanent health care coverage under the funds were held illegal by the court, even though they had been worked out in labor negotiations between coal companies and the coal miners' union.

The U. S. Court of Appeals in Washington, D.C., reversed the decision of a district court there which had found in favor of the health and retirement funds trustees. The lower court decision was based on the fact that the rules in dispute had been settled in the course of "explicit, informed and intense collective bargaining" between the coal operators and the union.

According to eligibility rules spelled out under a 1974 wage agreement, permanent health care coverage was to be afforded the spouses and dependents of miners who had died previously and were receiving pensions under a previous agreement.

Floyd Robinson, a miner, died in 1967 after 25 years underground in mines at David and Martin. Paul C. Hager died in 1971. He had worked 24 years in mines at David and Auxier.

While both men were eligible for pensions, they had not applied for them since they were still working at the time of their deaths.

In fact, Robinson died only five days after he turned 55 and became eligible for a pension. Hager had retired for a short time in 1968 but went back to work because his pension was insufficient to support himself and his family.

Since the men were not receiving nor had they applied for retirement payments at the time of death, their widows were refused permanent health coverage under the 1974 agreement.

Gracie Robinson and Juanita Hager, the miners' widows, contested the ruling in district court, charging that health and retirement funds trustees had arbitrarily excluded them from the permanent health coverage plan.

The court upheld the rules, arguing that they were not arbitrary since they had been worked out as part of a conscious, rational deal in the course of labor negotiations.

Softball Assoc. Stung by Park Board Decision

There were some other matters of business scheduled for discussion on the agenda at Thursday night's meeting of the Prestonsburg Park Commission, but, as expected, it was the topics listed under "old business" that carried the meeting for hours and resulted in some heated exchanges.

The old business, concerning proposed changes in park commission policy toward the Floyd County Softball Association and its relationship with Archer Park, was carried over from a special meeting of the commission, February 19, and although a number of points figured in a list of decisions affecting the softball association's role in the park scene, the real "sore spot" which emerged at the meeting was the apparent decision on the part of the commission to assume management of the concession stand operated by the softball association during the summer's league play.

Bill R. Collins, commissioner of the Floyd County Softball Association, who was joined by a number of other association officials and players to protest the park commission's plan, said loss of the concession stand revenue would "cut the association's income in half," and he contended that because the association's entry fee, which now is among the lowest in the state, would have to be raised to compensate for the loss in concession sales, "a number of teams would drop out." He hinted that the initial loss of teams and their sponsors would discourage other teams, hard-pressed for funds, and "any time you lose teams, you also lose public interest."

Collins, who has spearheaded the highly successful Floyd County Softball Association over the past ten years, told the park commissioners, "This softball league has promoted Archer Park for years. It's been like two good neighbors living side by side but now you're wanting to change things." He said the loss of income from the concession stand and the resulting entry fee hike would be particularly injurious since many sponsors would be reluctant to support a team this year, "especially if the coal strike we're hearing so much about happens in March."

Federal Budget Cuts Raise Fears Locally

Although the tide of popular support still appears to be flowing strongly his way, the President's proposed budget cuts have generated among some Floyd countians a sense of foreboding in recent weeks.

So far, the concern is most evident among county, city and school officials, the staffs of social service agencies and their clients, and CETA workers—although dissatisfaction can be expected to spread, some of them predict, when the cuts "hit home" in the form of reduced services and higher taxes.

Depending on how Congress deals with the budget proposals, a wide variety of services in this area—including the renovation of town water systems, state highways projects, county road maintenance, remedial reading and lunch programs in the schools, legal services to the poor, Medicaid and food stamp programs, black lung benefits and health planning services—stand to be affected.

Especially vulnerable are development projects funded by the Appalachian Regional Commission and the Economic Development Administration, on which a number of water system improvements in this area depend and which face elimination under the president's proposals.

The embattled Martin water system received a boost this week with the announcement from Congressman Carl Perkins' office that the city has been awarded a Farmers' Home Administration grant in the amount of $564,000 and a $279,000 loan for the renovation of its water treatment plant, replacement of distribution lines, and the installation of a water storage tank.

The project still awaits $100,000 in state Flood Damage Abatement monies, and $500,000 in EDA funds, however. While Perkins said this week he is hopeful the additional monies will still be forthcoming for the Martin work, the EDA funds at least are considered by many to be in grave doubt.

A Reagan-administration proposal to rescind fiscal year 1981 funding for the Appalachian Regional Commission would have "a devastating impact" on this district and would "bring the progress we have made to a halt and endanger the health and economic prospects of the people" here, Perkins said.

Among the projects in danger of elimination, he listed a planned million-dollar expansion of the Pikeville water system and a $500,000 expansion of the Salyersville water plant; a loan program for restoring small gas systems, including a county-owned system here; and a Pikeville College program giving technical assistance to small coal operators in this area.

Although their chances of being funded this year were regarded as slight in any event, a $750,000 expansion of Highlands Regional Medical Center and a $500,000 rehabilitation of the Wheelwright water system would also be jeopardized by elimination of ARC funds.

The Big Sandy Area Development District office, which provides planning and technical services to county and city governments here, stands to lose 32 percent of its $370,000 budget with the loss of ARC monies, and an additional 12 percent with the loss of HUD (See Story No. 6, Page 4)

MCCC To Plan Aid For Area Retarded

Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, Region XI Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board, Inc., at the request of the Department for Human Resources, Division for Community Services for the Mentally Retarded, has formed a regional planning task force to develop a three-year plan to guide the development of a comprehensive system of community-based services for mentally retarded citizens of Region XI (Pike, Floyd, Martin, Magoffin, and Johnson counties).

retarded to the various task force members who will reside in each county. The public forums are tentatively scheduled for the week of March 18. Notice of these forums will be made in local newspapers and by radio.

According to Charles Hicks, MR/DD Director for Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, "Dr. Grady Stumbo secretary for the Department for Human Resources, has established development of services for our mentally retarded citizens as a high priority during the present administration." Mr. Hicks also stated that "Dr. Ed Skarnulis, director for the Division for Community Services for the Mentally Retarded, and his new MR staff at the state level felt that the plan should be developed at the local level and then incorporated into a state-wide plan."

Members of the task force include: Ronald Mann, M. D., a general practitioner from Pike county, who was chosen chairperson and will represent the task force at the state-level planning council; Ray Brackett, assistant superintendent, Floyd county school system; Dr. Jerry Nelson, child psychologist, professor of special education, Pikeville College; Sr. Eileen Schepers, residential specialist, Mountain Comprehensive Care Center; Homer Marcum, Region XI Mental Health-Mental Retardation, Inc. board member and also representing the media; Audrey Pratt, director of special education, Floyd county school system; Ted J. Sanders, M. D., psychiatrist, Mountain Comprehensive Care Center; Mary Neeley, Bureau for Social Services field staff representative; Bill Duke, representing the Eastern Kentucky Vocational Rehabilitation program at Thelma; Grady Conley, member of the Big Sandy Area Development District's board; Debbie Tackett, special education teacher, Martin county school system; Ruth Provence, Region XI Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board, Inc. member and parent; Charles Hicks, MR/DD Director for Mountain Comprehensive Care Center.

The plan for this region is to be completed by July and integrated with similar plans being developed in the other fourteen Comprehensive Care Center regions of the state to formulate the state-wide plan.

Mountain Comprehensive Care Center personnel acting as resource staff to the task force are: Norm McCoy, Paula Coon, Andy Walker, Brenda Castle, Paula West, Peggy Scheibel, David Gillespie, Steve Coon, and Freda Greer.

Mr. Hicks coordinated the formation of the task force and served as acting chairperson for the first meeting which was held January 29. Members of the task force were chosen from various fields such as, members of local special education departments within the school systems, school teachers or superintendents, members of local area development districts, local Bureau for Social Services and Bureau for Social Insurance field staff, vocational school representatives, parents, and health professionals.

Three formerly independent railroad unions became affiliated with the AFL-CIO during 1957; they were the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, the American Train Dispatchers Association and the American Railway Supervisors Association, according to the U.S. Department of Labor's publication "Important Events in American Labor History."

Orientation sessions have been held to explain the philosophy underlying the planning process and to outline the planning tasks which include: 1) defining the ideal situation; 2) defining the current situation; 3) identifying issues; 4) setting objectives; 5) identifying priorities. At present, Mountain Comprehensive Care Center staff who provide support and act as resource staff to the task force, are conducting a region-wide needs assessment of the mentally retarded. Involved in the needs assessment are public forums which are to be held in each of the five counties in Region XI. These public forums will provide an opportunity for parents, professionals, and interested citizens to make recommendations in regard to services for the mentally

Taxicab Driver Slain in Johnson

A 19-year-old Paintsville youth was arrested in Salyersville Monday afternoon and charged with the slaying of John Willard, 38, Lexington cab driver whose bullet-riddled body was found beside a Johnson county road, Monday morning.

The prisoner, Charles Douglas Miracle, allegedly had driven Willard's cab from the murder scene to Paintsville early Monday morning and on to Salyersville later in the day. State Trooper Paul Estep, the arresting officer, said Miracle had parked the cab at the rear of a Salyersville funeral home and was walking past the Magoffin county courthouse when accosted. When Miracle moved, either to run or draw a weapon, the trooper tackled him. He carried a fully loaded .38-calibre revolver, the officer said.

The body of Willard was found by a passing motorist at 6 a.m., beside the Little Mud Lick road, five miles west of Paintsville. Police said Willard had been shot "several times." It was said by a Yellow Cab dispatcher in Lexington that Willard accepted Miracle as a fare to Paintsville, although the passenger admitted he did not have enough money to pay the fare until he could get a check cashed at his destination. If robbery was the motive for the slaying, the dispatcher said, the theft could not have amounted to more than $2 or $3, pointing out that the cab driver did not have enough money to buy gasoline for his cab when he began work Sunday.

Miracle is reported to be a multiple sclerosis sufferer and receiving therapy at the Thelma Rehabilitation Center.

He refused to make a statement after his arrest. He was jailed at Paintsville.

Church Criticizes Proposed Black Lung Cutbacks

Sam Church Jr., president of the United Mine Workers of America, has sent a telegram to all members of Congress seeking their support in keeping the Black Lung program from being undercut. Church also warned he would ask miners to "lay down their tools" in the event of any "attempt to gut this most humane and necessary program..."

Church said that as president of the nation's largest coal miners' union he "will call for all coal miners in this nation—union and non-union alike—to lay down their tools and walk away from the country's coal mines" if the program is affected by an atmosphere of budget cutting.

The union leader stressed that he had no argument with cutting the budget and saving tax dollars, but he pointed out that as far as the Black Lung program is concerned this should not be done at the expense of deserving victims of the fatal coal miners' disease.

"The burden of Black Lung program support should be lifted from the overall public," Church said, "and the coal companies should be forced to bear the burden that ethically should be borne by the coal operators." If the operators are forced to bear the costs of compensating the miners whose lungs are damaged by working in their mines, it would give the operators an incentive to cut down on dust levels and perhaps eradicate the disease in a generation.

"Simply stated," Church added, "coal dust kills. Coal dust kills very slowly and with great agony. We cannot in good conscience allow the Black Lung benefits gains for coal miners to be tossed aside."

Church's telegram to the Senators and Representatives ended with the reminder that, if necessary, he would ask miners to leave the mines.

Farmers Should Apply For ASC Costsharing

The ASCS office is reminding farmers that now is the time to apply for cost-sharing on spring seeding practices under the Agricultural Conservation Program. ASCS will pay 75% of the costs incurred for the establishment or renovation of permanent vegetative cover (not to exceed an amount determined by the Country Committee).

Eligible components of these practices are seedbed preparation, seeds, necessary fertilizer and lime (as determined by a soil test). The final date for seeding to be completed is April 30.

Other practices available for cost-sharing are tree planting, improving a stand of forest trees, livestock water wells and ponds, permanent vegetative cover on critical erosion areas, diversion, sod waterways, etc. All practices are set at 75% cost-sharing levels.

For further information, contact the Floyd County ASCS Office, 886-2802. Practices started before approval will not be eligible for cost-sharing.

TO THE SCHOOLTEACHERS AND PEOPLE OF FLOYD COUNTY

During the past few weeks several of you have contacted me concerning the proposed action by Governor Brown of cutting out the salary increase for our school teachers. During the 1980 General Assembly I was proud to vote in favor of that increase because of the great need we have in Kentucky to provide quality education for our children. Unfortunately, after the legislature adjourns the Governor has the power to make cuts like this without our consent or approval. However, this issue concerns me greatly and I have contacted him by way of letter which reads as follows:

Governor John Y. Brown, Jr.
Governor Commonwealth of Kentucky

Frankfort, KY 40601

RE: Teachers' Salaries

Dear Governor:

I have been contacted by several teachers from my district who have been told that you are considering eliminating the salary increases which were a part of the biennium budget for secondary and elementary school teachers. If there is substance to that rumor, I would like to take this opportunity to express to you my objection.

I assume that you are well aware of all the reasons why such a cut should not be made, i.e. inflation, already low base salary compared to similar jobs in the private sector, contrary to legislative intent, etc., and I will not belabor the point by rehashing them again in this correspondence. On the other hand, I am well aware of the economic situation that our state government faces at this time, and realize that cuts in the budget must be made.

However, Governor Brown, I would ask you to consider that in my judgment one of the chief problems with state and federal government is that we have lost sight of our functions. I recall distinctly your remark in the state of the state address to the legislature that "government cannot be all things to all people". I agree with that position and it is my feeling that government owes the responsibility to the citizens to provide basic services such as roads, education, police protection and other such fundamental services which benefit nearly every citizen of our great commonwealth. I think that such a move would not only adversely affect our educational system as a whole, but would discourage talented and qualified individuals from engaging in this profession in the future, and I do not believe that that is in the best interest of our state. Our teachers are currently underpaid as a whole, and yet they are charged with the development of perhaps our most precious asset, the minds of our children.

During the 1980 General Assembly I, like you, was blessed with an infant son. If we fail to provide them and all the other children in Kentucky with the opportunity to receive a quality education which will be so vital to them in whatever profession they choose, then we, as elected officials have breached our duty. If we fail to provide those educational opportunities to our children, then government is nothing to anybody.

I strongly urge you to oppose this measure or any other which would adversely affect our educational system.

With best wishes, I remain

Sincerely yours,

Gregory Stumbo

Bell's Proposed Rate Jump Will Bear a Close Look

THE TIMES admits that it does not have the knowledge of rate structures or the technical information that is needed to make an acceptable argument against the rate increases which South Central Bell proposes to inflict upon telephone users.

But the fact that such technical data is to us ordinary folk almost as incomprehensible as the heights to which those rates threaten to climb does not keep us from opposing increases which are as high as 110 per cent.

South Central Bell argues—and who can deny it?—that it realized a profit last year of only 7.76 per cent and that its financial gains aren't sufficient to hold for the company a favorable place in the bond market at a time when it must borrow money for expansion and services.

Since the telephone system's plight is comfortable beside that of its customers at a time when natural gas, electricity, gasoline, items that are basic to modern living, are running amok, price-wise, the Utility Regulatory Commission should take a long look at South Central Bell's proposal before approving it.

It should, for example, inquire into:

1. How much of this increase in rates is necessary to keep the company's business as it now exists on a profitable basis.
2. How much is being sought for capital investment—for expansion which would not be undertaken, in the first place, were South Central Bell not already certain such extension of lines and addition of services would be a moneymaking venture for years to come.

If South Central Bell can get all the funds it needs from its present customers to make connections to future customers, it will reverse the old adage to read, "Nothing ventured, plenty gained."

on the same charge as he came to the jail to help post the 10 percent of Eggleston's $25,000 bond, set by the court. McPeck told officials, though, that he wasn't worried. He claims that the "drugs" were nothing more than caffeine pills and until authorities receive the results of a state police lab analysis they can't be sure that he's not telling the truth.

If McPeck's claim is confirmed, the Chicago men may go free, according to a state police spokesman.

Counterfeit drug laws won't apply, apparently, because the pills were not stamped with a manufacturer's logo, and since the operation was not a formal business, as such, laws governing unfair business practices may not be valid. Theft by deception laws may be useful in prosecution of the case, but even that is doubtful, it was said.

If the operation was based on the sale of caffeine pills, as is claimed by McPeck, it has been a lucrative pursuit, according to state police, since such caffeine-based stimulants cost only about 1.8 cents each and are commonly passed off as amphetamines which bring $1 to $3 each.

"In a case like this," commented the police spokesman, "pills are probably sold to young people who are relatively inexperienced with drugs and who may never realize the difference between the caffeine pills and the 'real thing' since many times they'll develop a psychological high from the fake drugs, anyway."

State police and local authorities who have worked long and hard on the case hope that the pills will turn out to be amphetamines. If not, an attorney general's opinion may be asked in order to avoid the apparent legal loophole which exists in the case. However the case turns out, police feel that if the investigation and resulting arrests cause reluctance in even one potential drug dealer, their efforts would be justified.

Preliminary hearing of the case has been set for April 1.

On appeal, the Appeals Court reversed the lower court decision, arguing that rules granting benefits to the survivors of miners who had worked a relatively short time for companies contributing to the benefits funds could not reasonably exclude survivors of miners who had worked for longer periods.

As long as the rules qualified widows of miners employed by the companies for as little as a year, the court held, they ought to qualify the widows of those who had worked more than 20 years.

The widows' case was argued by Larry F. Sword, an attorney with the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund.

FAITH

The old man was, as they say, nearing the end of his row and was inclined to look back on the few furrows that during a long life he had plowed. He admitted to those about him that there wasn't much to see.

"Wanted to be an engineer on a train but never got off this farm. Never did want to set the world on fire. Succeeded in that, anyhow...Never got to college and if I've won any honors I can't recall them...This house and the farm, they're 'bout all we got, children...must pay those taxes...Had a lot of things in mind, but, somehow, just never got around to 'em...little late in the day to be worryin' 'bout that now though...guess I'm a failure..."

He paused and those around him sat silent, waiting for him to speak again. Finally, he cleared his throat, straightened his lank frame on the bed, and his voice came stronger:

"But let me tell you something, young'uns—I've got a wonderful future."

HOW ONE MAN LIVED

My neighbor, George Brown, tells of one Grant Hale who, some years ago in Lawrence county, literally lived off the land, neither toiling nor spinning, but going directly to field, hill and stream for not only his own livelihood but also the support of his wife and several children. One gets a mental picture of a rough, uncouth individual such as the TV brand of buffalo hunter at mention of one who depended on fishing in summer and trapping in winter for "a living," but this man was no such character. He kept his family plenty to eat, and his children were always in school as well-dressed as their schoolmates.

"As a boy of 12 years," writes Mr. Brown, "I remember some of his methods. To trap a red fox, he used a live rabbit for bait, tying it to a bush near a rock cliff and forcing the fox to approach it from only one direction. On three sides of the bush he placed three steel traps, hid them well and used 'possum fat to kill the human scent. He usually found the fox caught in all three traps."

"Mr. Hale's trap lines ran upstream six miles and the same distance down along the wandering ridges of the Big Sandy. He would set dozens of dead-falls under sheltering rocks to catch 'possums, skunks and other furbearers."

"The fish trap (those were the days when game wardens were few, if any) with which he caught many the catfish was a marvel of perfection, made of white oak splints, finished with a drawing knife. It was two feet at the neck, tapering to a foot at the upstream end. I saw him remove over 100 pounds of fish from the trap on one occasion. These fish he sold to eager customers in the mining town of Whitehouse."

So life meandered along for Grant Hale, but Mr. Brown records the sad turn of events that came when Hale decided to quit hunting, trapping and fishing, leave the old home on Lost Creek and go to work in the mines.

"He gave his trap to my father," our correspondent notes. "We set the trap at the foot of the Lost Creek shoal, baited it with an old ham-bone and some cheese. We removed 54 blue cats from it."

As an afterthought, Mr. Brown adds: "I have never since liked catfish any too well."

To follow directions sensibly, you've got to use your head. Like the woman who was doing the family wash and ran into the garment on which was stamped, "Wash separately." She laid it to one side, apart from other clothing, but decided she would wait till she found another piece of apparel or so that were marked, "Wash separately," and save on water and soap by washing those special pieces together.

Committee To Study Farm Land Loss

Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr. has established a committee to study the steady loss of agricultural land and recommend ways to preserve it.

The committee will consist of 16 members, most from state agencies, and four ex-officio members. In his order establishing the committee, Brown said the Agricultural Land Study and Policy Committee will first study the matter and then report recommendations to him that deal "with the retention of the agricultural land base in Kentucky." He said the recommendations "shall include an analysis of the impact of state government actions on agricultural land conversion and detailed measures that can be implemented to mitigate conversion to the maximum extent practicable."

He also said the committee will submit proposals and recommendations on ways "to preserve the agricultural land resource base" in Kentucky.

The recommendations will be submitted no later than next February.

The secretary of the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection will chair the committee. The dean of the University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture will be vice chairperson.

In 1960, the nation's railroads and the five operating brotherhoods agreed to refer their longstanding dispute involving work rules and practices to a tripartite Presidential commission for study and recommendations, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U. S. Department of Labor.

Officials say they have learned that the two went together to Ohio.

In his confession Noel said Niemi was staying at Noel's house, the dwelling which was burned, and that Niemi was chosen by the plotters to be the victim. He and Patrick, he said, figured to collect $200,000 double indemnity from the insurance company. Noel added that his share of the insurance was to be $25,000 and that the remaining $175,000 was to go to Patrick.

Now, authorities have the task of determining which of the two is telling the truth. Noel has agreed to submit to polygraph examination. He will probably be taken to Frankfort next week for this test.

The arrest of Noel came just as local authorities, Kentucky state police, the FBI and other law-enforcement agencies were gearing up for a nationwide search for him.

A telephone call shortly after noon last Friday to Coroner Carter virtually ended the search. The call came from Barbara Barnes, of Columbus, Ind., a sister of Noel, who told Carter she had read a newspaper account of the case and asked him for additional information. The coroner told her that it had been determined that Niemi, not her brother, was the victim, that a massive manhunt was beginning and that her brother was in "big trouble." For further information he referred her to Commonwealth's Attorney Allen after she had promised him she would let him know if she learned of Noel's whereabouts. After talking with Allen, Mrs. Barnes later Friday called Carter again to tell him that Noel had called her. She denied knowing anything more about his whereabouts than that he was in Columbus when he called her.

An all-points alert was established, and later in the evening Columbus police arrested Noel as he walked along a highway there. Noel later said he went to the police station there with the intention of surrendering but became frightened and left when he overheard officers mention his name in connection with the slaying of a policeman.

Patrick remains in jail in lieu of $50,000 bond for the murder and $25,000 on the arson charge lodged against him by Arson Investigator McKenzie. Bond has not been set for Noel. Examining trial for Patrick was postponed last week and a new date had not been set Monday. Bond for Noel had not been set Monday. His examining trial will be docketed later, it was said.

The next grand jury session will be held in May, and Commonwealth's Attorney Allen said that after indictments are made trials of the accused will be sought as soon as possible. It is expected that the death penalty will be asked.

Investigators here reiterated this week their indebtedness to the Wayland Fire Department for its cooperation and for the work done by Dr. David Wolfe, forensic anthropologist, Dr. George Nicholls, forensic pathologist, and David Jones, chief administrator of the state medical examiner program, in identifying the fire victim.

The park commission, on the other hand, contends that the activities "across the bridge" (referring to the area of the playing fields) are something of a "private enterprise," as one commissioner termed it, and commission members feel that the softball activities should become more integrated with the other operations of Archer Park. Added revenue from the softball concession stand would be used to better the park as a whole, the park commission argues.

Park commission member Roberta Davidson spoke of the autonomy of the softball organization as a "unique" situation among similar city parks and referred to the league as a "special interest group."

"The park commission is simply trying to make a better facility of the park overall," Mrs. Davidson commented, "and to do this we feel that we should be more involved in all activities within the park."

Ralph Little, an umpire with the softball association, warned of tampering with a "good thing," reminding the park commissioners that the league was "No. 1" in the state, with a state champion men's team, a fourth place women's team and a fifth place men's team. "Nobody can take care of it like Bill Collins," Little said, stressing that "a minimum of 350 families are involved in this league, and it means a lot to the local economy."

According to the park commission's decisions, park personnel would line and maintain the playing fields one time per day—another reason the park should maintain its "hands-off" attitude of the past ten years, according to the softball association supporters.

"Who's going to straighten up the field when it rains after your fellows go home," asked softball enthusiast and local sporting goods store owner Dickie Hall who repeated the testimony of others that league members and officials pitch in to keep the field in good condition throughout the afternoon and night, despite all but the most severe weather.

Softball association umpire Dale McKinney told commission members, "You've got success over there (referring to the summer's park softball activities), and here you've made yourselves authorities on something you don't know anything about. You should focus your efforts on the parts of the park that aren't making money such as the tennis courts rather than punishing a feature that is an obvious attraction."

Park commissioner Martham Archer stressed to the softball league supporters that the commission had studied an association financial report submitted by Collins in November and determined that even with the loss of concession stand revenues, "the league would still wind up making $400."

McKinney voiced strong protest that the park commission had already made decisions on the matters which were discussed during last Thursday's meeting. "Why are we even talking these things over if the decisions have already been made?" he asked.

One park commissioner reassured the softball association members that "Our intention is not to destroy anything, but to create a better park—to make the park accessible to different groups."

Collins replied to the park commissioners, "You're hurting the people you're trying to help. You're a parasite on this league if you follow through with this thing."

Artists Weekend Well Attended At Lodge Here

Artists' Winter Week-End '81, held at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, last week-end was the largest in the number of entries in its 15-year history. Russell May, of Prestonsburg, one of the Heritage Artists participating in the annual event, said this week.

It drew 142 entries from as far away as Texas. Also exhibited during the event was the largest painting shown at the lodge—a 7 by 8-foot painting by Mr. May for the baptistry of Faith Bible Church, near Martin, which has been restored after virtual destruction by fire.

Heritage Artists participated in the week-end by conducting seminars and general working with exhibitors. Winners in the various categories of art:

State Alcohol Educ. Program

The Department of Transportation's alcohol driver education program, designed to educate people convicted of driving while intoxicated, is not intended to rehabilitate alcoholics. Rather its goal is to keep participants from being charged with driving while intoxicated again, said Bill Wilhoite of the division of driver licensing.

First offenders caught driving intoxicated enroll in the classes as an alternative to losing their licenses for six months and paying fines exceeding $100.

From April, 1979 to February, 1980, the alcohol driver education program has 6,403 participants. A questionnaire answered during the class showed 91.2 percent were male and a majority were between the ages of 21 and 29.

The majority were married, had high school educations and held an unskilled or semi-skilled job.

More than 45 percent felt they are average drivers when they drink, but 80 percent felt their arrest will change their drinking or driving habits.

Education is considered by far the best resource for first offenders on drunken driver charges, Wilhoite said. At the same time, "it saves the driver's license and many times the livelihood of the person involved," he said.

Kentucky is the only state with legislation to support such a program. Administered by Eastern Kentucky University's traffic safety institute, the program costs $25. Classes meet once a week for four weeks.

"We hold about 35 classes per month in 24 locations throughout the state," Wilhoite said. An all-day class is held on Saturday for individuals who cannot attend the four weekly sessions.

During the weekly 2½ hour meetings, the participants learn how alcohol affects the body and in turn their driving ability, Wilhoite said.

According to statistics, one of 50 drivers on the road every hour of the day has consumed enough alcohol to affect his or her driving, Wilhoite said.

"The ideal situation is that no one drinks and drives, and that is the overall theme spread throughout all four nights," he added.

Onions may have altered the course of history, the March Reader's Digest reveals. At the height of the Civil War, Gen. Ulysses S. Grant sent an urgent message to the War Department: "I will not move my Army without onions." Gen. Grant believed that onions prevented dysentery and other ills. The next day three trainloads were on the way.

One of the most destructive "illegal aliens" in the U. S. today is the gypsy moth, the March Reader's Digest declares. It was brought to this country in 1869 by a French naturalist who hoped the caterpillars would produce silk. Instead, they just eat leaves—in 1980 they defoliated trees from Main to Maryland.

It's too hot to be called a paradise, but the tiny kingdom of Kuwait comes close. According to the March Reader's digest, education and medical care are free, so are phone calls. A gallon of gas costs a mere 27 cents and best of all, citizens pay no taxes.

The Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, designed to eliminate improper activities by labor or management, was signed by the President on Sept. 14, 1959, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U. S. Department of Labor.

DAVID SCHOOL

ALTERNATIVE FOR YOU

Every child is special. Each one has the right to the education which will suit his or her abilities, which will determine his/her function and value in the community as they come of age and take their places as working members.

Because each child is unique, one structure cannot suit every need. The accelerated student must not be held back nor the slow one left behind. Much testing has been done to group students according to their needs.

We have progressed from the two-room school to the consolidated classroom. Could something important have been lost in that evolution?

A total concept of learning must involve the body as well as the mind, the spiritual life as well as the academic. Students will look to their teachers as examples. It is not enough to place the facts in their hands. They need the wisdom to use them.

As the population increases and centralizes, the classrooms overflow. A continuous stream of youth must be processed through the educational system. How many won't make it? How many will never walk up that aisle in their caps and gowns?

The teen years are times of conflict and growth. Social or emotional reasons may push them away from their classmates or teachers. Special learning disabilities or problems at home may set them apart.

What happens to the hundreds of students who drop out each year? Will there be jobs for them, a place for them with their families and peers?

CULTURAL BACKGROUND

The southeastern Appalachian coal field is an area rich in history and human experience. Fluctuating social and economic conditions have compounded the need for special education. Lack of industry, other than coal production, and the immense cultural and economic change that has flooded the mountains for the past thirty years have created special problems for our youth.

"... and there are those who came to David."

The southeastern Appalachian mountains run closely together, tangled like ancient tree roots, their steepness, their closeness forms a natural barrier to outlying areas. Until the beginning of the coal industry, they successfully nurtured and sheltered a people. They were independent survivors living close to the mountains that held them. They held family ties to be dear, a man's individuality his most valued possession. They had a richness that would be sought at any price, that shiny black vein. The mountaineer would pay for it.

He quit working for himself and went to work for the mines. Money flowed along with the coal, stopped when the mines played out. The barriers had been broken, lives were changed. A pattern of dependency on the coal industry was established, it is repeated with the era of surface mining. So much wealth has been hauled out in railway cars, but what has been brought back? What will happen to the increasing numbers of youths who find that education has dead-ended for them?

FOCUSING IN THE AREA

In Floyd County, Kentucky, the roar of a coal truck is a familiar sound. The air brakes hiss and the trains jerk as the engine catches hold. In the town of David a history has slowly begun to unfold.

Over thirty years ago the town of David was a model of prosperity. Twenty-five years later the mines played out and the economy bottomed. Recent strip mining development has revived the industry here.

Here, in David, where history has begun to repeat itself, it is also being made.

Pride in community living has made a return, a visage of the one room school, so well remembered for its individualized structure, has been revived at the David School, a center for alternative education.

The David School is an Alternate Learning Center established for academic and vocational training. The School is located in the former Princess Elkhorn Coal Company buildings in David, Kentucky.

Founded by Danny Greene and Jean Ford in January, 1974, the David School serves those students who have dropped out of the traditional school system. Established in an area where the dropout and unemployment rates are most alarming, the School offers a second chance for youth who seek alternatives in their lives.

The School accepts students aged fourteen through eighteen on referral by parents, teachers and social service agencies.

At David a completely individualized academic program of Language Arts, Math, Social Studies, Science and Art is offered. The vocational program offers on-the-job training in the School's Woodworking Shop, Mini-Mart and Service Station.

Students enrolled at David are placed on one of three educational tracts:

- (1) students preparing to take the GED test,
- (2) students completing their required curriculum for an elementary or secondary certificate, and
- (3) students seeking further vocational training and job referral.

The David School has served over 200 students and has been recognized by other educational institutions for its unique and innovative structure. Prestonsburg Community College has offered its facilities and support through Director Henry Campbell. PCC Professor Leo Weddle is an active board member of the School, and his students make an annual visit to the classrooms and other instructional facilities of the school. Former Floyd County School Superintendent, Charles Clark aided the school in acquiring state approval and establishing the breakfast and lunch programs.

The school wishes to thank the Juvenile Justice Department along with the Floyd County Fiscal Court for their aid in funding over the past three years. Special thanks to Boystown of Omaha, Nebraska, and the Ryland Family Foundation for their much needed support.

The Mini-Mart, which is the only grocery store in David, trains the students in retail trade, customer service, stocking, ordering, purchasing, cashier training and other facets of business management.

David School
Board of Directors—Rev. William Poole, President; Daniel Greene, Vice-President; Joe Erdman, Secretary-Treasurer; Clara Erdman; Wally McMasters; Dr. Leo Weddle; Jim Necessary; David Rubinstein, Attorney; Laura Weddle; Jason Petosa.

David School Staff—Daniel Greene, Director; Debra Blackburn, Secretary, Bookkeeper; Jean Ford, Principal, English; Helen Mroska, Mathematics, Career Development; Bob Castle, Social Studies; Andrea Gaines, Science; Vicky Cantrell, Music, Poetry; Clarence Hayes, Woodworking Instructor; Marvin Rice, Industrial Arts; Tim Sizemore, Art; Doris Slone, Food Services; Vicky Sizemore, Business Instructor; Randy Seal, Service Station Manager.

"When a craftsman begins his work, he can make the most insignificant piece of wood become something outstanding." The Woodworking program, under the direction of Marvin Rice and Clarence Hayes, is designed to provide the basics in safety, shop math, carpentry, woodworking skills, along with machines and their repair for future employment. The school is presently developing a line of craft items for sale.

Career Development prepares the student to plan for his/her future by familiarizing them with procedures for job interviews, especially filling out applications, field trips to local businesses, schools of higher learning and information on colleges and advanced vocational schools.

Upon enrollment, each student is tested in his/her own basic academic skills, especially mathematics and language arts. With the test results the student's own program is then geared to his/her level. The school maintains a student-teacher ratio of 5 to 1 in all academic classes. This enhances the individualized instruction.

The Service Station is unique in its threefold purpose for the David School:
(1) on-the-job training in basic automotive instruction and service station management,
(2) a much needed service to the community,
(3) a source of employment for several individuals.

44th Wildlife Week Observance Stresses Threat of Polluted Seas to Man, Wildlife

Can anything so vast as the oceans—which cover nearly three-fourths of the earth's surface—really be in danger of dying? The answer is "yes"—unless they are treated with more respect. For the immense oceans are in fact a single, fragile ecosystem. That's the message the National Wildlife Federation is emphasizing during its annual observance of National Wildlife Week, March 15 through 21.

The theme of this year's National Wildlife Week, which NWF has sponsored for 44 years, is "We Care About Oceans." It's the first time a Wildlife Week theme has focused on the sea. "For centuries we have taken from the ocean's riches, and with a growing world population we will turn more and more to this bountiful resource," explained Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the NWF. "We must stop polluting and treating the oceans carelessly, for a threat to the oceans is a threat to our own futures."

Valuable ocean resources include:
 Food: About 10 percent of the world's protein comes from the oceans; some countries rely on the oceans for as much as three-fourths of their protein. We already catch about 60 million tons of food from the sea each year, and with new techniques of ocean farming, called "mariculture," scientists predict that we could grow some 100 million tons. In addition, the seaweeds found along the coasts are among the oceans' most valuable living resources, for food, and for the chemical and industrial products derived from the plants.

Minerals: About 99 percent of the world's bromine is found in the sea. There is enough copper on the ocean bottom to last the world 6,000 years, and enough nickel to last 150,000 years. Other elements, minerals, and organic compounds found in the oceans include magnesium, chlorine, sulphur, boron, iodine, calcium, silicon, carbon, and phosphorus.

Energy: The oceans have become an important source of oil and gas, and today offshore wells are producing petroleum around the globe. Scientists are studying various ways to tap the oceans' enormous energy potential. Possibilities include thermal water decomposition, tidal power, and ocean thermal energy conversion. The U. S. Department of Energy estimates that 180 million kilowatt-hours of power—about 75 times as much as we used last year—could be generated annually from the Gulf Stream flowing along the East Coast if the current could be harnessed.

Recreation: Huge industries have grown around our love of swimming, fishing, boating, scuba diving, and snorkeling.

In addition, the oceans are a reservoir for more than 97 percent of the world's water supply. Through a natural process known as the hydrologic cycle, water is continuously transported from the seas to the land, and back again, providing water for plants and animals. Life-supporting oxygen comes to us from the oceans, too. Some scientists believe that the oceans' one-celled plants, phytoplankton, supply oxygen to the atmosphere than all the forests on earth.

"With all that the oceans give us it is ironic that we have treated them as bottomless dumping grounds," said Kimball. "We've polluted the seas with oil, pesticides and other chemicals, radioactive compounds, sewage, sludge, and toxic heavy metals, such as mercury and lead."

The most heavily polluted ocean waters are those shallow waters near land, and this is unfortunate, because most marine life is concentrated in the four percent of the ocean relatively close to land. Even the most far-off waters do not escape, however, for the oceans' efficient circulatory system—currents which carry oxygen and nutrients from one sea to another, thus joining them into a single ecosystem—carry pollutants across the globe.

For example, radioisotopes from atmospheric nuclear bomb tests are appearing in Antarctica's Southern Ocean, once thought to be pristine, as are toxic heavy metals, released from the burning of fuels in far-off industrialized countries.

"Fortunately, we have taken the first steps toward insuring a cleaner, healthier ocean," Kimball noted. "A new federal law requires that dumping of municipal sewage sludge be halted by the end of this year. And just last year, the NWF won three lawsuits it had filed against government agencies. As a result, ocean dumping of dredged harbor bottom spoils, often badly contaminated with heavy metals and oil, will be strictly controlled."

"Clearly, healthy oceans are vital to all of us, no matter where we live—by the sea or far inland," Kimball emphasized. "During Wildlife Week we hope concerned Americans will take the time to learn how the oceans' resources can be managed more wisely, and will join us in saying, 'We Care About Oceans.'"

TV news anchorman Walter Cronkite is chairman of this year's National Wildlife Week observance. The "week" was first proclaimed by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938 as a means of educating the public and rallying support for wildlife conservation measures.

Edgar Allan Poe was expelled from West Point for "gross neglect of duty" and "disobedience of orders."

Both Frankfort, Washington Threats to Teachers, Claim

Kentucky Education Association (KEA) President Joyce Dotson says Kentucky teachers are in a time of crisis and face danger on two fronts—Frankfort and Washington.

Announcing appointment of a KEA crisis committee, she told the group's 600-member Delegate Assembly, meeting here in special session, that State Superintendent of Public Instruction Raymond Barber "is not raising his voice against salary cuts for teachers" during the next round of state budget cuts caused by a $185 million shortfall in revenue.

Financial threats to public schools from the Reagan Administration and the state cutbacks "are causing great concern among teachers and others who value public education," Dotson said.

"Because of these developments we all face our daily tasks in a state of anxiety. We strive to do our best in our classrooms, but worry is constantly with us. How can teachers teach at their best when they are plagued by worry?"

"But as a result of a letter sent by the state superintendent to local superintendents we know that teachers in several school districts have been told they may not have a job in the fall. In other districts teachers have been told they will receive only a portion of the promised raise."

"It may be that I expect too much," she continued, "but I wonder if anyone here thinks as I do that it's strange we have a state superintendent of public instruction who is not raising his voice against salary cuts for teachers. The state's top elected education official should know that nothing could have a more devastating impact on teacher morale and teacher effectiveness than cutting teacher salaries."

"We are told that we should know definitely by April 1 as to where state budget cuts for education will be made," Dotson said. "But what we need now to alleviate tensions and worry is a clear statement from Frankfort that teacher salaries will not be cut."

She said final salary figures for 1979-80 show that the average salary for Kentucky classroom teachers was $14,520 compared with an average of $14,849 for the seven bordering states. This is a difference of $329 rather than an earlier estimated difference of $155—"more than double the earlier figure because our neighbor states did better in raising their teacher salary average than had been expected."

For the current school year, 1980-81, the Kentucky salary estimate is $15,580 compared with a seven-state estimate of $16,198. Again, the figures might change later but the difference has now grown to $618, so "we are falling behind once again."

The KEA president said any effort to suggest that teachers are going to be paid less or ought to be paid less must be fought—"Don't let anyone convince you that teacher salary cuts are a necessity, that it's your patriotic duty to work for less."

She noted that proposed Reagan Administration cuts of 20% in federal spending for education would mean a loss of $33,378,000 for Kentucky schools, starting in fiscal year 1973. This, she said, will result in serious reductions in service.

Dotson announced appointment of a 10-member crisis committee to prepare recommendations on possible actions and alternatives for the KEA board of directors to consider at its March meeting—or sooner, if an emergency arises.

Both Finance Secretary George Atkins and James King, secretary of the Governor's Cabinet, have assured KEA officials they will be told of the state's decision prior to public release of information about budget cuts, she said.

"If teacher salaries are on the cuts list, the KEA board of directors will be called into session immediately. And if there is a need I will not hesitate to call the KEA Delegate Assembly into special session. A decision affecting 29,000 teachers and the children they teach cannot and will not be taken lightly."

Big Sandy NOW And Women's Issue

Big Sandy NOW is generating interest in women's issues locally by timely programs dealing with problems facing women in the Big Sandy area. At a recent meeting, Eleanor Self, Kentucky NOW State Coordinator, encouraged open discussion of the problems of spouse abuse, job discrimination, and discrimination against women in general. Self stressed the importance of giving support to any efforts to help women gain equality under the law. She said that without passage of the Equal Rights Amendment, which would guarantee these rights for everyone, this support is vital.

The problem of sexual harassment was discussed by Nancy Rankin, field representative for the Kentucky Commission on Human Rights. This commission deals with discrimination related to age, race, sex, national origin and employment. Rankin reviewed the guidelines for establishing a sexual harassment charge and also informed the group of the proper procedure for filing such a complaint.

Big Sandy NOW has tentative plans for a seminar to gain more insight into these problems in our area and to further educate the public as to the alternatives available when discrimination occurs.

More women are now working full time, some live alone, some support families, and some contribute to support. As more women become self-sufficient, their needs become different. Big Sandy NOW recognizes these needs and is now in the process of compiling a women's Service Directory, to be published within the next year. This directory will provide a guide to services available to citizens of the Big Sandy area, focusing on the needs of women. This directory is intended to raise awareness of the resources available in each community, which can be valuable to us in solving our own problems.

Big Sandy NOW is the first chapter of the National Organization for Women to be convened in eastern Kentucky. Membership is growing steadily and representatives are available to present programs on such topics as The Equal rights amendment and The Human Life Amendment. The organization welcomes the opportunity to help organize consciousness-raising sessions with women throughout the area. Please contact the chapter at P.O. Box 185, Paintsville, Kentucky, 41240, or call 789-8599 or 297-3843.

Carter Caves To Host
 Mt. Memories Week-End

Kentucky's mountain heritage will be honored in song and dance at Carter Caves State Resort Park's fifth Mountain Memories Week-end, March 6 and 7.

Some of the state's best-known traditional musicians are scheduled to perform during the two-day event. They include Dick and Anne Albin, Nancy Johnson and Blake Barker, Lily May Ledford, Annadeene Fraley and Doug Chapin.

The festivities start with a concert scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday, March 6. A full schedule of events is set for Saturday, including musical jam sessions, a square dance and a crafts display and sale. A country buffet will be served at 5:30 p.m., followed by an 8 p.m. concert.

Further information may be obtained by contacting Carter Caves State Park in Olive Hill, 41164, or by calling (606) 286-4411.

Koret clothes become favorites for many reasons. Their timeless, classic styling. Their versatility. Their incredibly comfortable fit. And, of course, their reasonable price. That's why they'll become your favorites, too. Like this elegant 100% pure Italian Silk blazer.

Ed. Dept. To Release School Dropout Study

Why students drop out of school is the basis of a study soon to be released by the Kentucky Department of Education. The study, according to Education Department officials, hopefully will be used by school counselors to predict which students are likely to drop out of school before finishing their education.

According to Clyde Caudill, head of the department's research and planning office, the study had two major purposes. "First, we wanted to improve our ability to identify potential school dropouts through the use of data available to school personnel, and secondly, to describe the differences between school dropouts and those who choose to continue their high school education," Caudill said.

The report was researched by Dr. Donald Martin, currently superintendent of Southgate Independent Schools. Martin completed the study during the 1979-80 school year while employed as an intern with the Department of Education.

The study draws 32 conclusions about dropouts and non-dropouts in Kentucky relating to achievement, attendance and home environment.

The report also includes a "regression equation," which is a formula to be used by counselors in a student's ninth-grade year to determine if he or she is a potential dropout candidate.

Conclusions were drawn by using information provided by 536 dropouts on a questionnaire. That information was then compared to information gathered from 536 high school graduates. Dropouts in the study were much more likely than graduates to check the two reasons that related to dissatisfaction with school, which were "School was not teaching me what I wanted to know," and "Disagreed with school discipline policy."

According to Caudill, the identification procedures summarized in the study should result in an overall improvement in recognizing those students who are probable dropouts.

"As we improve our dropout identification abilities, it is important that we continue to develop and evaluate dropout prevention activities. There is little to be gained if we merely develop our ability to identify potential dropouts. Our attention must remain focused on the prevention of school dropouts," Caudill said.

According to Education Department officials, a copy of the study will be sent to each school district sometime this week. Additional copies will be made available upon request.

Observe 66th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Cecil recently observed their 66th wedding anniversary and Mr. Cecil's 86th birthday at their home at Harold. The observance had been delayed because of Mr. Cecil's being hospitalized.

All five of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil's children and their wives were present to serve dinner and present them with many gifts. The cake was baked by their granddaughter, Betty Kaye.

Mr. and Mrs. Cecil, who have 18 grandchildren and 23 great-grandchildren, are still active in their church and attend when they are able to go. Mrs. Cecil taught Sunday School for 52 years until she resigned at the age of 80.

Thirty-two guests attended the anniversary-birthday observance in their honor.

Add Carbohydrates For Nutrients, Fiber

Carbohydrates are much maligned and misunderstood nutrients. Say starch, and many people think "fattening." But complex carbohydrates, found in breads and cereals, vegetables and fruits, are not villains but nutritional good guys.

"It's hard to understand how carbohydrates, particularly starches, got their bad reputation," said Dr. Darlene Forester, Extension specialist in foods and nutrition in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture and a registered dietitian.

"Carbohydrates contain the same number of calories per ounce as pure protein, and less than half the number of calories as fat."

Yet people watching their weight shun starches and sometimes mistakenly blame them for weight problems. Popular fad diets such as the Scarsdale Diet, Dr. Atkins's Diet Revolution and the Mayo Clinic Diet advise followers to cut way down in carbohydrate intake while helping themselves to hefty portions of protein, some of which also provides large amounts of fat.

People who avoid carbohydrates in their diets do not understand what carbohydrates are and the nutritional benefits some kinds can provide, Forester said.

Carbohydrates, including starches and sugars, provide energy (calories), she said. They are found in all food groups: breads and cereals; vegetables and fruits; meat, poultry, fish and beans; milk and cheese; and the "other" food group containing fats, sweeteners and alcohol.

But carbohydrates differ in their nutritive value. Simple carbohydrates, the sugars, provide calories but few nutrients. But complex carbohydrates, including starches, provide many vitamins and minerals, and sometimes protein, along with the calories.

Everyone, including dieters, should include a fairly high proportion of each day's calories from complex carbohydrate foods, Forester said. Good sources include breads and cereals, especially whole grain products, beans, peas, nuts, seeds, fruits and vegetables.

She recommends for everyone four servings per day of breads, cereals or grain products, and four of vegetables and fruits.

"Some people may think four servings of starchy foods a day sounds like a lot, but starches are no more fattening than any other food," she said. "The preparation and toppings often add many of the calories."

For example, cutting and frying can turn a 100-calorie potato into French fries at 10 calories each. Sour cream and butter add fat and calories to baked potatoes, and butter and jelly boost the calorie count of a slice of bread.

Most Americans, particularly those counting calories, would be wise to cut down on foods containing mostly fats and sugars and add more servings of fruits, vegetables and whole grains, Forester said.

"The diet will be bulkier, but you will get more nutrients and fiber for the same or fewer calories," she said. The bulk also makes you feel full, and so may curb even a dieter's appetite, she added.

Forester recommends emphasizing whole grain products, such as whole wheat cereals and breads, oatmeal and brown rice.

"Overall, whole grain foods are more nutritious because the nutrients and fiber are not lost in processing," she said. If you choose processed grain products, look for enriched flours, breads, pastas and rice, she advised.

Eating more complex carbohydrate foods will provide the added benefit of fiber. Although fiber does not provide energy because it is not digested, it does provide bulk to help move waste products through the digestive system, said Forester. Eating adequate fiber may help prevent such condition as constipation, diverticulosis and other bowel problems.

Persons who eat the recommended servings of grains, vegetables and fruits do not need to add extra fiber, such as fiber pills or unprocessed bran, to their diets, said Forester.

To add more starches and fiber to your diet and cut down on fats and sugars, Forester suggests the following tips:

—Choose fruit in place of sugared desserts, candies and cookies. A fresh or baked apple can substitute for apple pie, for example. The apple, at 80 calories, provides complex carbohydrates and saves calories over the sugar-laden pie, at 400 calories for one-sixth of a 9-inch pie.

—Eat fresh fruits and vegetables as nutritious snacks. Instead of high-fat, high-calorie chips, have sunflower seeds or popcorn popped in a small amount of oil or in an air popper. Use a sprinkle of butter-flavored salt instead of melted butter to save more calories.

—Fill the cookie jar with graham crackers instead of traditional cookies. Made with whole wheat flour, grams provide some nutrients and fiber.

—Use whole grain flour to replace all or some of the white flour in breads, cakes, muffins and pancakes.

—Add a salad to lunch or supper menus. For variety, try bean and vegetable salads as well as those with lettuce and other greens.

QUESTION:

"I turn my thermostat down, but our gas bill still goes up. How come?"

ANSWER:

"Most of the increase comes right from the well—the higher prices Columbia has to pay."

Most of Columbia's natural gas supplies do not begin as ours, but must be purchased. And since passage of the 1978 Natural Gas Policy Act, which allows gradual lifting of wellhead price controls to encourage gas exploration, the price Columbia pays for gas has been steadily increasing.

Added to that are the rising costs of maintaining and improving pipelines, storage facilities and services.

So rates have been going up. However, at Columbia we're doing all we can to hold down costs. We're investing in more efficient equipment and streamlining operations. Bi-monthly estimated bills are one savings you're probably familiar with.

In short, we're cutting where we can to keep your gas bill increases to a minimum.

And though your gas bill may be higher than you or we would like to see it, natural gas still costs you less than other energy forms.

For ideas on ways to make natural gas work even more efficiently for you, ask for our free pamphlet, "The Everyday Energy Saver's Guide".

COLUMBIA GAS
 Still your best energy value.
 And we want to keep it that way.

★ KENTUCKY AFIELD ★

By JOHN WILSON

"I'm hardly surprised by anything anymore," says Jim Durell as he looks over the results of an annual survey of animal highway mortalities and sightings of strange "critters" around the commonwealth.

Durell, an assistant director in the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources wildlife division, hardly raises an eyebrow anymore when someone reports, for example a road-killed badger in Bullitt County. But even he paused a bit over the Martin County porcupine sightings.

One person seeing a porcupine could be attributed, perhaps, to a slight overdose of mountain dew, but three separate reports are something else. And it's also hard to argue with a dog that shows up with a face full of quills.

Durell speculates that the porcupine must have been brought into the area, where it either escaped or was released. There haven't been any sightings recently, so maybe the porcupine has headed back to the north woods, its usual home.

One animal that was once rare or absent from the state is now relatively common in almost all sections of the commonwealth. Coyotes were first reported in far western Kentucky, but now their likely to show up just about anywhere. There was even a road-killed coyote reported from populous Fayette County last year.

Bear reports are also becoming more widespread, although still unusual. A bear was hit by a car, stunned and captured in Lawrence County last June. An ear tag indicated that it had wandered over the line from near-by West Virginia.

The bear was sedated, tagged in its other ear and released. This past December it was legally killed by a hunter near Tazwell, Va.—more than 100 miles from where it was last seen in Kentucky.

Other reports of bears have come from Fleming, Bell, Clay, Harlan and Laurel counties in Eastern Kentucky. There was even a bear sighting (unconfirmed) in Spencer County.

Cougars (or mountain lions) were once virtually extinct east of the Mississippi, but these big cats are showing up more and more frequently in the Appalachian mountains with each passing year. In 1980, there were what Durell calls "strong" sightings in Lewis County and in McCreary County.

A more common native species, but one that is hard to see, is the bobcat. It too seems to be increasing its numbers. Last year there were 32 bobcat sightings by conservation officers, 20 reported sightings by individuals and 11 road kills.

"The most road kills we've had before was five in 1978," Durell says. "There were three in 1979, so the 11 last year represents a significant increase, probably reflecting a growing population."

The point of all this is that you shouldn't doubt your own sanity if you should come up on some completely strange creature out in the woods. The first thing to do, especially if the critter in question has big teeth and/or claws, is to leave it strictly alone.

The second thing to do is report the sighting to your local conservation officer, who will in turn file a report with the wildlife division in Frankfort. Your sighting will help fit one more piece into the complex and apparently ever-changing picture of what animals we do have sharing Kentucky with us.

Crump's Grass Roots Comment

Because Regular leaded gasoline is cheaper, many motorists with vehicles equipped with catalytic converters changed from unleaded to leaded gasoline, and ruined the catalytic converter. Repairs will cost a "bundle." The mandatory inspection regulation should go the way of the Department of Energy's Emergency Temperature Restriction regulation, commonly referred to as the Thermostat Nightmare.

Empty Promises Stuffing Envelopes

By Robert L. Carl

Postal inspector Christine Macho of Los Angeles slides a stack of flashy-colored flyers across her desk. "It's one of the biggest problems we have," she says. "We get at least 8 to 10 complaints every day on these envelope-stuffing schemes."

Envelope stuffing as a business seems legal. Its rewards seem exciting. The flyers offer good money: $200 per week, "50¢ per envelope stuffed in your own home!" It seems easily done, something to do to earn extra food or spending money.

Magazines and newspapers, the kind often sold at supermarket checkout counters, are filled with such ads. The classified pages advertise the "thousands of dollars" to be earned at home. Post office boxes across the country are listed for readers to "Send for free details."

So what's the problem? When you send in for details, you get back a brochure about the great money you'll earn if you send $10, $15 or $20 for a "starter kit."

Instead of getting envelopes to stuff, the "kit" turns out to be a booklet of several typed pages. It tells you to start the process all over again, by placing ads or posting flyers for envelope stuffers just like the one you read.

Then, when people write to you asking for details, you stuff their envelopes with the same brochure that you got asking for $10 or more. Your profits come from a percentage of the starter kit fees. The rest goes to the "Pharaoh" at the top of the pyramid who prints the pamphlets you send out.

It's a clever deception, and it's become more popular over the past couple years as inflation increases, driving even those with good salaries into second jobs. The individual may not lose more than $20, but the returns for the people behind the schemes are fantastic.

Around holidays like Christmas or Easter, the number of schemes increase, though all year round they successfully snare people most vulnerable to rip-offs: college students, young housewives, the handicapped, the elderly, and people who seek piecework that can bring extra income without leaving home.

One victim in San Francisco needed to earn extra money without leaving home because of her small baby. Her husband recently broke an arm and a knee-cap and couldn't work.

She responded to an envelope-stuffing idea, but with a different twist. Instead of replying by mail, she phoned her answer to an ad for "answering telephones in your own home."

After paying $25, she was appalled to find she wouldn't be an answering service operator after all. She would have to place ads and try to get money through the method she had used. Her only use of a telephone would be to answer callers from her ads.

"It's a racket," she told Postal Inspectors. "It sounds so easy and honest. I should have known something was wrong right away, as soon as I saw claims of $200 per week."

The perpetrators don't overlook any new slants on the pyramid theme. A Los Angeles man was arrested by postal inspectors for a scheme that promised rewards for correcting students' lessons at home. He netted himself some $125,000 in one year, using the same pyramid tactics as the envelope-stuffing schemes, and without any connection with students of any type.

"I've never seen a legitimate advertisement offering money for stuffing envelopes," says deputy attorney general Herschel Elkins of Los Angeles, "yet they appear in virtually every newspaper in the country. No law enforcement office has the time or personnel to bring actions by the thousands. It's like putting your finger in a dam."

How could anyone fall for a racket like this?

Many elderly people do because they are easily taken in by the prospect of an unexpected windfall. They generally must rely on small, fixed incomes or limited savings and they are fearful that these resources will not last out their lifetime.

Law enforcement officers hesitate to arrest most people who become involved in these schemes, as they are actually victims, too. Most are frightened, operating out of their own kitchens. They only do it because someone who wrote a "sales pitch" told them to.

Several agencies throughout the country are constantly on the lookout for offenders. Charges can be brought leading to a $2,500 fine for each person an ad may have reached. Criminal charges can be filed with penalties of up to five years and $1,000 for each mailing. The authorities can also stop mail to offending companies.

To register a complaint, write to the post office's mail-fraud department. The greatest enemy of the swindler is the informed person.

When a money-making advertisement sounds too good to be true, it usually is.

When Temperatures Rise

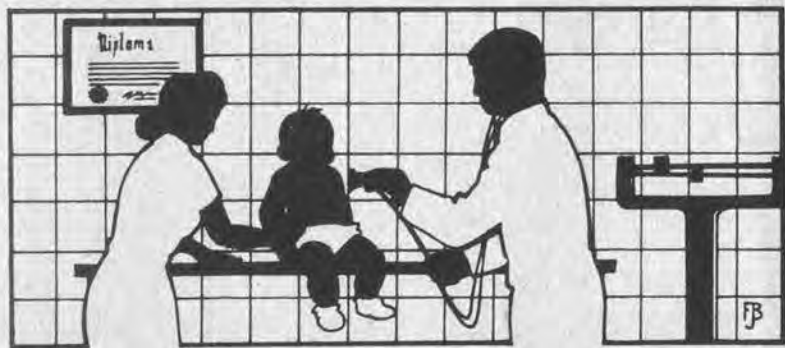

Although young children have slightly fluctuating temperatures, (which go up and down at different times of the day, depending upon the varying levels of the child's activity) a temperature between 97.7° and 99.5°F is considered normal. For slight temperatures which accompany a cough or cold, you probably won't need to consult a physician, but what are some of the signs that tell you to call a doctor?

- Your child's temperature (oral) exceeds 101°F for more than 24 hours or more.
- Your child's fever is accompanied by twitching movements of such areas as the face, arms or legs. This symptom should be reported to the doctor, even if the twitching disappears after a short period of time.
- Your child complains of pain in the abdominal area or near the kidneys.
- Your child experiences a burning sensation upon urination or urinates more often than normally.
- You observe the sudden appearance of a rash not caused by prickly heat or redness in the diaper area, which could signify the start of an infection.
- Your child is wheezing or experiencing difficulty in breathing because of an obstruction in the bronchial passages due to mucus, spasm, or a foreign object.

What can you do for your child when there is a fever? Physicians recommend:

- In the house, keep the child in light clothing.
- For an infant, underwear or a diaper will suffice. The less clothing, the more quickly the fever will drop.
- For temperatures above 102°F, place your child in a tub filled with lukewarm water. Pour warm water down his back for half an hour. To break the fever can require approximately 30 minutes.
- Unless specifically instructed by your physician, do not give your child an enema.

A fever that lasts more than three days or a temperature over 104°F that lasts for four hours are signs that a doctor's care is required.

Handling Health Costs

Unfortunately for all of us, the cost of health care is sky-rocketing. Recently, the Federal Trade Commission released a policy book which tells what it has done and what it intends to do about these rising costs. Some of the problems which the FTC has undertaken include:

- A close look into Blue Shield insurance policies, with a special study of the role physicians play in determining fees paid.
- An investigation into the limited availability of dentures sold directly to the public from the dental laboratories, instead of through the dentists.
- A consent order keeping the California Medical Association from publishing comparative scales for physician's fees.
- A discussion of health manpower: Would increasing the number of physicians contribute to rising costs? What is the possibility of allowing for "alternative providers" such as midwives or nurse practitioners?
- An analysis of the services these "alternative providers" would give and the possibility of their reducing health costs, including an investigation of physician boycotts against these providers.
- Ways in which to provide consumers with more information so that they will be able to make decisions which are best suited to them, such as a guide for the analysis of health-insurance policies.

Spring Fire Increase Feared

A forest fire which erupted suddenly on the hillside bordering Lake Drive at Lancer, Friday afternoon, threatened residences there for a time and underscored the continuing danger of woodland fire throughout the county, and other areas of the state. Forestry officials stress that an unusually dry winter has left little moisture in the soil and they fear the possibility of a repeat of last fall's fires which were the worst in the state's history.

The spring forest fire season officially began Sunday and now through May 15, it is illegal to have an outdoor fire within 150 feet of a wooded area and all burning must be restricted to the hours between 4 p.m. and midnight, the forestry division reminded residents this week.

Pike Woman Pleads Innocent of False Abduction Report

A Pike county woman was charged with filing a false police report last week, after leading about 30 police officers on a search stretching from Pikeville to Louisville.

Police said Sara Jean Newcomb, 21, of Lookout, called the Shively police department, in Jefferson county, about 6 a.m. last Tuesday to report that she and another Pike county woman were abducted the night before.

The pair had been kidnapped in Pikeville by an armed man in a pickup truck, Mrs. Newcomb is said to have told police. The man struck her 18-year-old companion on the head with a pipe and threw her from the truck on the Mountain Parkway, the woman said. He then took her on to Jefferson county where she escaped, she is quoted as saying.

Mrs. Newcomb was returned to Pikeville Tuesday evening. Police say they don't think another woman was involved in the alleged incident.

In Pike district court later, Mrs. Newcomb pleaded innocent to the false-report charge. A $2000 bond was set by District Judge Richard Elswick and she was taken to the Pike county jail.

The misdemeanor charge carries a maximum penalty of a year in jail and a $500 fine.

Highlands Tightens Visitor Policy

Patsy Wells, HRMC chief operator and information clerk, is shown giving one of the first visitor badges to James D. Fitzpatrick. All visitors entering the hospital will receive a badge which is color-coded to indicate their destination.

Highlands Regional Medical Center recognizes that appropriate visiting by family and friends can be important to a patient's recovery, hospital officers say. The task for the hospital, according to a news release issued this week, is to balance the opportunities to visit patients with the rights of other patients and the responsibilities of the hospital staff. The result of much thought and discussion, especially by the HRMC security department, is the new visitors' badge system, which started at the hospital this week.

Visitors must enter through the front door and obtain a visitor's badge at the information desk. The badges are color-coded to indicate the visitor's destination. The badges permit access to the cafeteria and must be worn at all times. Any visitors without badges or with inappropriate badges will be asked to return to the information desk.

Too many visitors staying too long creates problems for staff and patients, according to the hospital statement. "This program has been established for the benefit of our patients and to assist our staff," stated Mason Sexton, director of security. "Enforcement will be consistent and fair. We ask that all visitors and outpatients cooperate and work with us to make the system work as smoothly as possible."

General visiting policies at HRMC are: two visitors per patient; visits should be limited to 30 minutes; children under 14 are not allowed in patient rooms and should not be left unattended in the lobby; and smoking is permitted only in designated areas.

Visiting hours have been established according to patients' needs for treatment and rest in each nursing unit. Visiting hours are 1:00 to 5:00 p.m. and 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. daily. Maternity and nursery visiting hours are 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. so the mothers can spend the rest of the time with their babies. Visiting hours in C.C.U./I.C.U. are 10 minutes on the hours at 10:00 a.m., 2:00 p.m., 6:00 p.m. and 8:00 p.m. Patients in this unit are restricted to two visitors, four times per day.

Memorial Gift May Give Aid To Others

A memorial gift to the Floyd county unit of the Kentucky Division of the American Cancer Society is a thoughtful gift—a living memorial. This tribute to someone loved means others are helped.

Every gift provides material aid to the cancer research programs in our laboratories and hospitals; helps educate the public concerning the importance of detecting cancer in time, and supports service programs for cancer patients and their families.

When a memorial gift is made, the family of the deceased is notified with a memorial card. This card carries the name of the person in whose memory the funds have been given and the name of the person who made the gift. An acknowledgement goes to the contributor with an official receipt for tax purposes.

Memorial gifts may be sent to the American Cancer Society, Medical Arts Building, 1169 Eastern Parkway, Louisville, Ky. 40217. Please make checks payable to the American Cancer Society. Contributions should be accompanied by the full name of the deceased, the name and address of the family member to whom the memorial card should be sent and the donor's full name and address.

For further information, or to obtain cards and envelopes to send a memorial gift, see or call Winifred Virginia (Peachie) Collins, Memorial Chairman of Floyd County, American Cancer Society, who may be contacted at the Floyd County Library.

Two Pass Exam for Tax Commissioner

A record number of persons took the state examination to qualify as candidates for property valuation administrator in their home counties in the May 26 primary elections, Revenue Commissioner Robert H. Alphin announced today.

Alphin said 353 persons passed the test out of the 496 who took it last week, for a pass ratio of 71 percent. Four years ago, 262 out of 397 who took the examination passed it, a pass ratio of 66 percent.

In Floyd county, Harry Allen and Marena Hale passed the qualifying examination.

Passing the test does not mean a person automatically will be a candidate for property valuation administrator. In past years, several persons who qualified on the examination did not file to run in the primary. The filing deadline this year is April 1.

At least one person qualified in all but 11 counties, compared to 23 counties in 1977. The 11 counties where no one qualified this year are Anderson, Bath, Breathitt, Campbell, Clay, Estill, Lee, Leslie, Union, Webster, and Wolfe.

Incumbent property valuation administrators are not required to take the examination to run for re-election.

Theologian Fuller To Speak At Lexington

One of the world's most widely-known New Testament scholars will be the guest-speaker at an "open house" event being planned by the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Kentucky at its location, 544 Sayre Avenue, Lexington. The visiting scholar will be the Rev. Dr. Reginald Horace Fuller, of Alexandria, Va. Dr. Fuller will speak at the seminary's chapel of the Holy Light at 4 p.m. on Sunday, March 29, on the theme, "Is Jesus God?" Dr. Fuller writes that this will be a discussion of recent debates on christology, which have created interest in both the United States and England.

Tips For Stove Owners

During the last five years, more and more people have been purchasing coal and wood-burning stoves to help save on their home heating bill.

With the increase in the number of stoves, owners need to be aware of guidelines that will allow them proper use of their stove, said Sandy Holland, Extension energy specialist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Regardless of the type of stove to be used, it needs to be properly installed and managed to avoid hazards such as fire or asphyxiation," emphasized Holland.

When using a coal stove, Holland warns owners against adding fresh coal to coal embers because there is a possibility of a mild explosion occurring. "Instead of using fresh coal, use wood kindling to get the fire going again."

She said that coal needs to be stored in a cool, dry place. "Don't store wet and dry coal together because this, too, can cause gases to build up and could result in a mild explosion."

If you have a wood-burning stove, Holland advised using dry, seasoned wood. She also said that it's important to keep the fire burning regularly to keep your chimney from cooling down. There may be times when you've got a smoky fire inside your stove. If so, Holland said that this could be caused by wet wood, too small or too large a flue, obstructions such as trees or a bird nest, or down drafts caused by varying wind patterns.

To prevent injury and damage in the event of a fire, the specialist says that it's a necessity to have a fire extinguisher on hand and to have smoke alarms throughout the home. "The smoke alarms will allow us to get out of the house before gases build up," Holland said.

Observe 60th Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Holbrook, of Ada, O., celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary, Feb. 10. Jessie Holbrook and the former Flossie Snavelly were united in marriage on Feb. 10, 1921, at Prestonsburg.

In celebration of the occasion, the Holbrooks were entertained by Mrs. Ruby Snavelly and her children, Robert and Shirley, and by Mr. and Mrs. Harland Hall. The Holbrooks received calls from relatives and friends throughout the day.

Mr. Holbrook is retired from the Civil Service, having worked at the Army Tank Depot in Detroit since Sept. 29, 1966. Upon his retirement they returned to Ohio to live in Ada. Mr. and Mrs. Holbrook are members of the Free United Baptist Church in Maysville.

Tax Tips

People often ask whether a gift is taxable either to the giver or the receiver. The answer is that a person may give $3,000 to any other person without incurring taxable liability. Parents may give their child $6,000 annually (or $3,000 each) without making waves. Anything over that amount is taxable to the donor.

Not many of us have $3,000 to give away, but we often forget the little things we have donated: clothing and furniture to charitable organizations; mileage ($0.9 a mile) for charitable purposes; toll telephone calls for charities; the spare change you drop into a collection can on the street corner; the amount you pay for Girl Scout cookies in excess of what you could buy them for in the grocery store; the amount of theater subscription tickets in excess of the door price of tickets; the cost of ingredients used in making baked goods for bake sales; the cost of materials used in making items for bazaars, and so on. All it requires is keeping a diary or log book.

Remember, however, that the things you buy at bake sales and bazaars and the raffle tickets you buy for good causes are not deductible, because you are receiving something for your money.

Cancer Hopeline

Q—I am a cancer patient and am receiving pelvic radiation treatments. Can you offer me some guidelines about nutrition during treatment?

A—Since your physician knows your condition and reactions to specific foods, you should rely on him for advice about any change of diet.

If you expect to receive radiation treatment in the pelvic area for three weeks or longer, you may experience diarrhea. It often does not occur until two or three weeks after treatment begins.

During your program of treatment, your physician may advise you to avoid raw fruits and vegetables, salads, fried foods, spicy or highly seasoned foods, and coarse, whole grain breads and cereals.

If diarrhea should become a problem, your physician may recommend a low residue or even liquid diet. He also may ask a dietitian to consult with you and offer individual assistance. He also may prescribe medication if symptoms dictate that such medications are necessary.

At the Hopeline, we have information available on low residue and other types of diets which can be followed by cancer patients.

Particularly useful are "Diet and Nutrition: A Resource for Parents of Children with Cancer," "Feeding the Sick Child," and "Eating Hints: Recipes and Tips for Better Nutrition During Treatment." This material is offered free but should only be used with the knowledge of your physician.

Call the Hopeline at 1-800-432-9321 from 9-9 Monday-Thursday, or 9-5 Friday, or write to us at 915 S. Limestone Street, Lexington, KY 40536.

Big Sandy NOW To Meet Sunday

The Big Sandy Chapter of the National Organization for Women will hold its regular monthly meeting Sunday, March 8, at 3 p.m. at the Johnson County Library. An open, round-table discussion on feminist thought is scheduled. Visitors are welcome.

Rev. Frederick Cook

The Rev. Frederick B. Cook, 74, father of Dr. William B. Cook, of Prestonsburg, died last Thursday at the Riverview Manor Nursing home here following an illness of several months. A native of Petersham, Mass., he was a son of the late Allen B. and Emma Shephardson Cook and was a former minister of the South Congregational Church in Centerville, Massachusetts. His wife, Mrs. Lallage Cuthan Cook, preceded him in death last October. In addition to his son, he is survived by one daughter, Carol Elaine Cook, of Minneapolis, Minn.; four sisters, Alice, Ethel, and Miriam Cook, all of West Hartford, Conn., Mrs. Charlotte Collins, of Durham, N.H., and two grandsons. In lieu of flowers, the family has requested that contribution be made to the memorial fund of the South Congregational Church of Centerville where a memorial service for the Rev. Cook will be held at 2 p.m. Friday. The Rev. Seth Newton will be the officiating minister. The body was taken from the Carter Funeral Home here to Centerville where burial was made in the Beechwood cemetery.

Jerry Richard Meade

Funeral services will be conducted at 1 p.m. tomorrow (Thursday) at the Pruitt Free Gospel Church on the Abbott Road for Jerry Richard Meade, 73, of West Prestonsburg, who died Monday at the Highlands Regional Medical Center following an extended illness. Born April 15, 1907, he was a son of the late George and Ida Hackworth Meade and was a retired miner and had also been employed with the Nelson Mainstream Program. He was a veteran of World War II and was a member of the Pruitt Free Gospel Church. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Bertha Shelton Meade; four sons, George, Marcum, Ermon, and Larry Meade, and one daughter, Patsy Ann Meade, all at home; two brothers, David and Homer Meade, and three sisters, Mrs. Grace Barker, of Charleston, W. Va., Mrs. Haley Harmon and Mrs. Rosie Huddleston, both of Warsaw, Ind. Friends may visit at the church prior to services. The Revs. Fred Garrett and George David Garrett will officiate at the funeral services, and burial will be made in the Hackworth cemetery under direction of Floyd Funeral Home.

The founding of the AFL-CIO on Dec. 5, 1955, brought under one roof unions representing approximately 16 million workers, according to "Important Events in American Labor History," a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Columbus in Hickman county was the first entire town in Kentucky to be moved from one site to another. Following the disastrous 1927 flood Columbus was moved from the riverbank to a bluff 200 feet above. The American Red Cross did the relocation at a cost of $100,000.

Survival Tactics

Americans have a way of enduring when endurance is needed and a way of making do with what is at hand.

American Indians led the way for early settlers in devising methods for survival in a rugged country. Indians who traveled through Kentucky could survive many days on the trail with little sustenance.

Settlers learned that Shawnees could travel three or more days on nothing more than water in which poplar bark had been cooked or steeped. In summer some tribes considered rattlesnake meat sufficient if that was all that could be found. The Shawnees, however, considered these snakes friends and would not kill them.

If it was necessary to be outdoors in extremely cold weather, the Shawnees practiced preventive medicine. Every morning the warriors doused themselves in cold water or rubbed snow over their bodies to build up resistance to colds.

The Kentucky Indians also devised a "telephone system" that was copied by early settlers. Smoke signals might have been a part of the system, but usually each day at sunrise and at dusk the chief or head of the Indian party would stand in an appropriate place and give out great warwhoops. The number of loud whoops would indicate to any other Indian party in the area the number of white prisoners.

The same communication system whooped out the number of scalps taken in raids and warfare. The whoops were loud and long and carried great distances. It was up to the receiving party to note the difference between prisoner warwhoops and scalp whoops.

On their trips Indians carried another survival food that to the early settlers looked like ground corn. They carried only a small amount of the finely pulverized corn because more than a spoonful or two would cause extreme stomach swelling.

If unable to gain direction in the woods by moss, plants, bark and other signs, some Indians (Kentucky's Henry Clay also practiced this) always took the opposite direction to what they thought they should take and invariably found their way to safety.

Another survival tactic to some Indians was treatment for snakebite. Wilburn Waters, son of French Huguenot John Waters and a half-breed Catawba, learned that the warm insides of a cup-open chicken would heal a copperhead snakebite.

One way of survival for both Indians and soldiers in the mid-1700s gave a name to a stream that divides Kentucky and West Virginia. In 1756 when Major Andrew Lewis marched against the Shawnee towns near the mouth of the Great Kanawha, he received orders to return his men to headquarters. DeHass's "History of Western Virginia" states the soldiers were suffering intensely from lack of food. To survive, the men cut their buffalo skins into tugs and ate them. This act named Tug River.

Alerts Unleaded Gas Violators

Representative Eugene V. Atkinson (Pa.)...The Clean Air Act Amendments of 1977 will soon require approximately 40 million automobiles in 29 States to be subjected to a mandatory inspection and maintenance for emissions of carbon monoxide and photochemical oxidants—ozone. This program will be quite costly. Each motorist will be responsible for the cost of inspection and for the cost of any repairs to the automobile emission control equipment.

"Each State will also have to bear considerable costs as a result of administering this program..."

"Inspection and maintenance may be entirely unnecessary since the older cars on the road are already being gradually replaced with newer cars which contain factory-installed emissions control equipment. It is also doubtful that such a program would produce the desired effects. More than one automobile company has stated maintenance of the complex pollution control equipment by mechanics who are not company-training factory personnel could do more harm than good..."

"To make matters more confusing, many of the vehicles which consumers purchase are already out of compliance. The Environmental Protection Agency only spot checks production line vehicles. According to the General Accounting Office, of the roughly 9 million automobiles manufactured in 1978, the EPA only spot checked 332 of them and 25 percent of those were already producing emissions at levels above EPA standards."

"Today, Representative Bailey, of Pennsylvania, and I have introduced two bills H.R. 1357 and H.R. 1358 to delay the provisions of the Clean Air Act Amendments which require the inspection and maintenance program. I respectfully urge that this legislation be considered. The atmosphere has changed much since the enactment of the amendments. The air itself may already be approaching the goals set out in the amendments without the costly inspection and maintenance program."

Regular meeting of the Board of Commissioners of the Beaver-Elkhorn Water District held at the District Office at Hueysville, Kentucky on February 25th, 1981.

Commissioners present: Gary Martin, Chairman, Doug Marshall, Raymond Meade. Chairman Martin called the meeting to order and opened the floor for business. Eight residents of the Price area were present with complaints about water service in the Price area. It was explained by Chairman Martin that Beaver-Elkhorn was experiencing problems with the intake at the river and that the problem was being corrected when the level of the river goes down, and that the workers could get to it to repair or make a new screen for the intake. Doug Marshall made the motion to instruct Bob Hackworth, General Manager, to take all necessary steps to correct the problem and authorize the General Manager to make payment for repairs or purchase supplies to correct the problem. Raymond Meade seconded. Vote carried unanimously.

Gary Martin explained to the board that the water service contract with the city of Allen had expired as of August 1980 and that water service at the present was on a day-to-day basis.

Doug Marshall made motion to terminate service to the City of Allen until the problem at the river was corrected to increase water pressure to the Left Beaver area, and a new contract could be negotiated. Raymond Meade seconded. Vote carried unanimously.

Molly Banks of the Salt Lick area requested water service in that area. Gary Martin explained that a cost study must be conducted in that area and determine if extensions were feasible. Raymond Meade made the motion to instruct Bob Hackworth to do a cost study of the area, Doug Marshall seconded, vote carried unanimously.

Chairman Martin explained that in the past that Beaver-Elkhorn Water did not have any internal control of purchases and cash flow. He stated that he prepared six recommendations for the board to consider and become part of policy.

1. Establish a cash flow control system, to balance on a daily basis.
 2. Establish a two signature checking system (checks are designed already for that purpose and would be no additional cost to the District).
 3. No bills to be paid without the vote and approval of the board.
 4. No purchases to be made without a supply requisition form being presented (this would be with the exception of an emergency and would endanger the physical system or would cause an outage of water to our customers for an extended period of time).
 5. No over-time to be paid to any employee, but would be given compensatory time that could be accumulated.
 6. To direct our attorney to establish and prepare a policy and/or By-Laws that would be specifically for Beaver-Elkhorn Water.
- Raymond Meade made motion to accept all six recommendations, Doug Marshall seconded, vote carried unanimously.
- Doug Marshall made motion to authorize Raymond Meade to determine locations for two fire hydrants in the Left Beaver area, Raymond Meade, seconded, vote carried unanimously.
- Doug Marshall made motion to instruct Bob Hackworth to determine places where two or more consumers are receiving water service from one meter, to install a meter for each building and to inform customers of this board's instructions and that they are to all be billed separately. Raymond Meade seconded, vote carried unanimously.
- Doug Marshall made motion to adjust the wages of Bob Hughes to conform with his time worked at the water plant. Raymond Meade seconded, vote carried unanimously.
- Raymond Meade made motion to publish the minutes of this meeting in the Floyd County Times and to authorize payment for publication. Doug Marshall seconded, vote carried unanimously.
- Raymond Meade made motion to adjourn, Doug Marshall seconded.

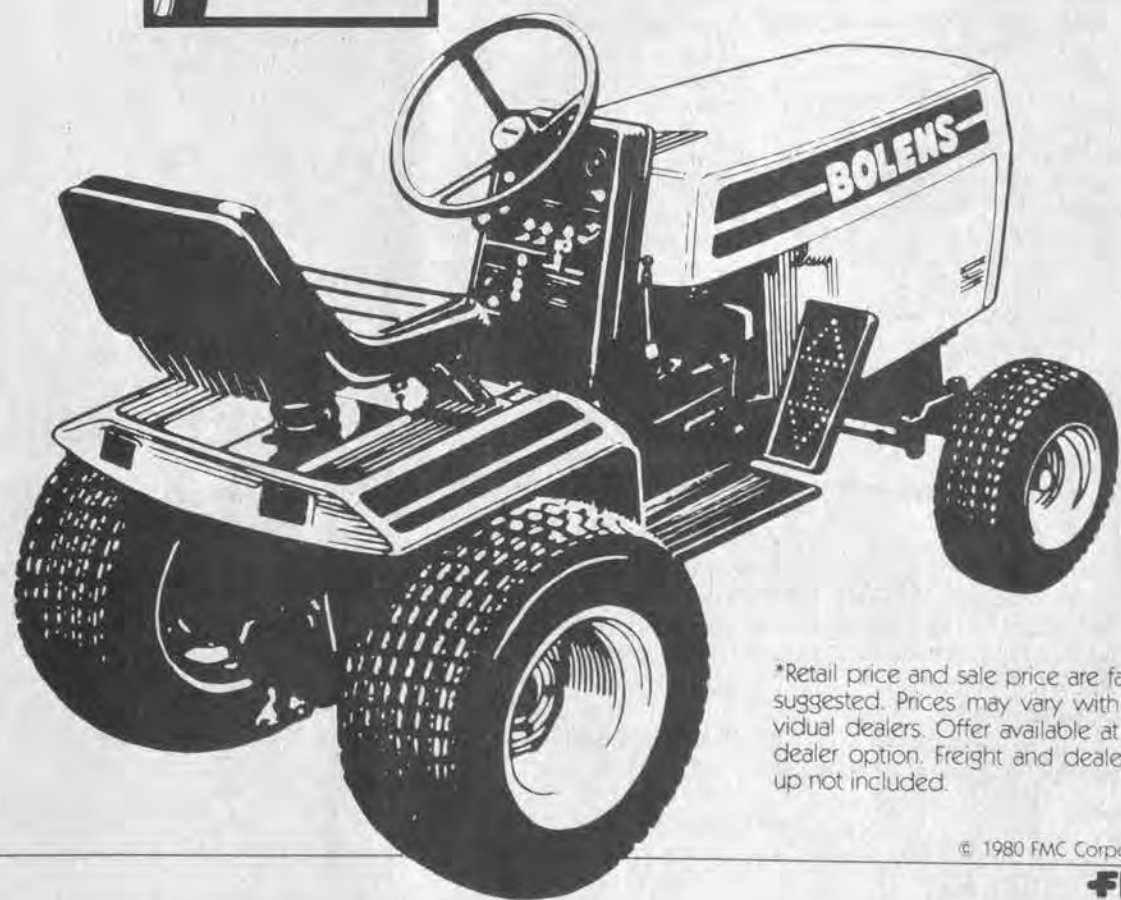

Gary L. Martin, Chairman
I hereby certify that this is a true and accurate recording of the minutes of the regular meeting of the Board of Commissioners of the Beaver-Elkhorn Water District held at the District office at Hueysville, Kentucky on February 25, 1981.

Using Computers To Predict Marriage

By Georgette Wagner

Consider the case of a college student who wants to get married after graduation, but can't decide which woman would make the best mate. Jane is cute, but she has a mean temper. Susan is sweet, but irresponsible. Sally would make a fine mother, but an awful partner. How is the poor fellow to decide?

During these times of spiraling divorce, selecting a partner can be risky business, but two sociologists at the University of Utah are developing a computer program to take the muddle out of marriage.

"Matesim-Marriage Analysis" analyzes what a marriage between two individuals would be like. It predicts the outcome of the proposed marriage—harmony or divorce—and identifies areas the couple will find pleasurable or problematic.

Developed by Gerald W. Smith and Jerry D. Debenham, the project is still, as the authors concede, in the Model T stage. At this point, the program is used only experimentally.

"However," Smith says, "the program does provide a rational way to look at marriage and to think reasonably about it."

"Matesim" helps a person cut through the emotional maze and identify the values and expectations he or she holds about marriage and a specific mate. Rather than relying on violins and heartthrobs, he or she has sound reasons to accept or reject a spouse.

University of Utah students participating in the experiment fill out questionnaires that cover 108 categories ranging from school to spiritual beliefs. They answer questions about themselves, their prospective mate, and their ideal marriage partner.

The information is fed into the computer along with the judgments of two marriage counselors and a sociologist. The student is then told how similar his perspective mate is to himself, to his ideal partner, and to an ideal mate chosen by the trio of therapists.

When Jerry Doe (all names have been changed) filled out a questionnaire about his date, Marlene, he was told they would have problems with nurturance and honesty. However, the computer said, they were "a close match and have much in common." In addition, both are similar to what the therapists consider ideal. "We anticipate a good relationship," he says.

The advice to less compatible couples is more blunt. Ill-starred partners are told to expect "an early divorce," "considerable difficulties and later divorce," or a "mediocre and stable" marriage.

One man, whose prospective spouse was given a so-so rating, was told he could improve the relationship by promoting greater honesty and communication with his partner.

"Matesim" is not an isolated program, but part of a computer revolution that is using inexpensive, flexible computers to help in decision making. Similar projects have been developed to tackle problems in law, medicine, psychiatry, and education.

Computer prophets foresee a time when every household will own a minicomputer, which can be used not only to select a marriage partner, but also to choose a job, plan a budget, and make similar complicated decisions.

Like other projects, "Matesim" assumes that rational decisions can be made about such emotionally complex areas as marriage. Not all would agree. Some might complain they would prefer not to know, as one couple was told, that their marriage would be "mediocre, but lasting."

However, even if rational decisions can be applied to marriage, the decisions are based on assumptions that are difficult to prove. For example, what is a perfect marriage?

In order to analyze any marriage, Smith and Debenham had to determine the factors that make up a good marriage.

"In designing the program," Smith says, "we concluded that three factors were important in a successful marriage."

First, the sociologist says, the two partners should be similar to each other. Second, one's mate should be as close as possible to one's ideal spouse. And last, the partner should be similar to the ideal husband or wife promoted by one's culture or background.

"We, of course, realize that these assumptions and weightings may not necessarily be accurate in analyzing and predicting marital success," Smith and Debenham say. "The model is, however, a significant beginning and can be readily used for future research."

For the college student who could not decide whether to pursue Jane, Sally, or Susan, "Matesim" would help him determine whether physical attraction, personal qualities, or character was the most important factor he sought in marriage.

And, just in case he was a very popular fellow, "Matesim" can analyze up to 100 prospective spouses.

H&R BLOCK TAX TEST

Question No. 1

It is too late to claim a deduction or credit overlooked on a 1977 tax return.

True False

If you know about amending a tax return, you probably know the answer. If you don't, maybe you need H&R Block. Because H&R Block knows tax laws that you might not know. You can amend a tax return for overlooked deductions and credits up to three years after the filing deadline. So the answer to the question is FALSE.

Energy Update

Reclaim Free Heat

With a heat reclaimer, you could preserve some of the valuable warmth that is presently escaping your kitchen stove or living room fireplace. Heat that travels through the furnace and is normally lost through a chimney can be reused by a heat reclaimer and diverted to any area of the home.

In addition to providing heat, installation of the heat reclaimer allows the homeowner a 15 percent tax credit under the Tax Energy Act of 1978.

Users of the device have reported fuel savings of up to 20 percent, according to one manufacturer of these units.

Others dispute claims that these heat reclaiming devices can reduce that much of your fuel bill. One spokesman for the New York State Energy Hotline advises that heat reclaimers are mainly helpful on old, inefficient furnaces. In addition, some experts say that there is not much usable flue heat to recover.

How does the heat reclaimer work? When you use your fireplace or stove and heat in the flue reaches a certain pre-set level, a thermostat turns on a fan that forces the hot air into 52 steel heat exchanger tubes. When the flue cools down, the thermostat turns the blower off automatically.

Incoming air in the exchanger tubes is heated by the flue gases and this new hot air is diverted to any area of the home through an optional duct and register attachment.

The heat exchanger tubes of some units can be removed for cleaning. The whole item plugs into any 110v household outlet. Some of the units come with a five year money-back guarantee.

Although you may have qualms about sending "born again" heat through your house, have no fears. The flue gases and hot air travel through separate paths in the exchanger; it is physically impossible for soot or gases to enter the living areas of your house.

The units list for about $200.

Medical Cutback Affects Local Nursing Home

FRANKFORT, Ky. (February, 1981)—Relatives of patients in Floyd County nursing homes give high marks for the quality of care the homes provide, according to a survey conducted by the Kentucky Association of Health Care Facilities.

Based on a 1 (poor) to 5 (excellent) scale, the overall average score for the quality of services in Floyd county was 4.5.

The Average score for specific services were:

- Nursing care: 3.7
- Personal attention and staff involvement: 4.5
- Activities program: 3.9
- Dietary services: 4.2
- Housekeeping: 4.4

The surveys were distributed to relatives of each patient earlier this year. Relatives were not asked to identify themselves or the name of the patient.

In addition to the five questions about quality of care, relatives also were asked whether or not they supported increased Medicaid support from state and federal agencies. Ninety-two percent of those responding favored increased Medicaid expenditures for the elderly.

Many relatives chose to explain their ranking with additional comments.

One Floyd County resident who elaborated has a 94-year-old stepfather in a local nursing home.

"If I ever have to be in a nursing home, I would want it to be this one," he wrote. "They really care."

The granddaughter of a 93-year-old woman who has been in a nursing home for the past year and a half wrote

"Their kindness and patience are commendable. They do their best to make it a real home for the patients."

KAHCF conducted the survey in each county in Kentucky with nursing homes that belong to the association. KAHCF President David Wren said the surveys helped the association assess how relatives of patients perceive the quality of care provided in each home.

"We are alarmed by proposals by the Kentucky Department for Human Resources (DHR) to reduce the scope of the state's Medicaid program," he said. "The survey is really a report card from people who spend enough time in nursing homes to see and appreciate the quality of care we're able to provide."

Mr. Wren said the quality of care in nursing homes is threatened by the proposal from DHR.

"Patient care is bound to suffer because forty percent of participating facilities will receive less than the cost of providing for Medicaid services if the current reductions are put into effect," he said.

He also said one proposal limiting each facility to 80.1 percent Medicaid patients is unworkable.

"One hundred and one of our 166 facilities already have more than 80 percent Medicaid patients. In effect, this proposal would require us to vigorously discriminate against Medicaid patients in favor of private pay patients. If a facility which had 80.1% of its licensed beds occupied by Medicaid patients had vacancies in some of the remaining beds, it could accept private pay patients, but it would have to turn away Medicaid patients. These Medicaid patients and their families then would be denied their first choice in selecting a nursing home. It is likely that Medicaid patients so denied admission would have to be placed in facilities much farther from their homes and families.

The Kentucky Association of Health Care Facilities represents 70 percent of the long term care beds in Kentucky.

P.C.C. Workshop On Handicapped Set For March 11

A special workshop, specifically designed for parents and relatives of handicapped children and for teacher aides will be conducted next Wednesday, March 11 in room P-216, Prestonsburg Community College, from 9 a.m. till 2:30 p.m.

Presented by UCPB Child Development Centers, of Lexington, the workshop presentations will feature "hands-on" demonstrations with children. Session leaders will include Donna Wilhite, O.T.R., a registered occupational therapist; Betty Greene, M.A., C.C.C., a speech and language pathologist, and Norb Ryan, a parent advocate. Wilhite and Greene will demonstrate evaluation techniques and will describe and demonstrate appropriate activities with the cooperation of local children. Mr. Ryan, a cerebral-palsied adult, will share personal and professional experiences.

The workshop is free and lunch will be served in the meeting room. Meat and drinks will be provided but guests are requested to bring a covered dish if possible.

Karen Blum, UCPB coordinator, stressed that the session is open to anyone interested in learning more of the special problems of the handicapped.

Food Handler's Permit Required By State Law

All persons in Floyd County involved in the preparation, processing or handling of food are required by the state to have a valid Food Handler's Permit. This includes all cooks waitresses, waiters, and busboys in restaurants; persons handling fresh meat in grocery stores; nursing home personnel, and school lunchroom personnel.

A Food Handler's Permit requires a T.B. skin test and an urinalysis which you may get at the Floyd County Health Center any Monday, Wednesday, or Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. After completion of these tests, the permit will be issued from the Floyd County Health Department.

Police Arrest Wife of Victim

State troopers last week arrested a Johnson county mother whose two sons were charged earlier with the murder of their stepfather.

Betty Miller, 48, of Volga, was arrested Tuesday after an investigation into the death of her husband, Charles Miller, 53, according to James Adams, a dispatcher for the state police post at Pikeville. Miller was found dead in a wrecked pickup truck Friday morning, Feb. 20.

Mrs. Miller was lodged in the Johnson county jail, the dispatcher said.

Acting on evidence provided by Johnson County Deputy Coroner Brian Fraley, state police arrested Mrs. Miller's sons by previous marriages, James Allen Dixon, 21, and Kelly Eugene King, 20.

The two men were taken into custody Saturday night near their mother's home and entered not guilty pleas at an arraignment Wednesday before Johnson District Judge John Gardner.

The truck was found about seven miles west of Paintsville on KY 172 by a passing motorist.

Fraley told state police investigators that the truck was only slightly damaged and that "it didn't seem possible" that the dead man's injuries were a result of the accident.

Gymnastics Team Is State Champ

Eastern Kentucky Gymnastics members went to Lexington last Saturday, where, in competition with 13 other teams, they were named State Class IV champions in the 9 to 11 age group.

Approximately 90 girls from all secondary with many representing groups which have been established much longer than the two years that Eastern Kentucky Gymnastics has been in operation under the leadership of Henry Young.

To earn a team championship, the three highest individual scores of members of each competing group were combined. Thus the team with the highest score was designated winner and in this case, state champion.

Mina Hosseinipour, 11, of Williamson, won the all-around 1st place award with a score of 34.15. Kristy Nunnery, 9, of Prestonsburg, tied for sixth place with 32.50. Other team members and their scores are Lisa Young, 11, 31.95, and Bonnie Hensley, 11, 31.00, both of Prestonsburg; Rachel Bentley, 10, of Hindman, 30.85; Wendy Combs, 11, 30.45, Leigh Ann Patton, 11, 29.20, and Mary Clifton, 9, 29.05, all of Prestonsburg.

Although members of Eastern Kentucky Gymnastics had no chance of winning a state team championship, because only two girls represented their teams in each age group, members participated in both the Class IV competition for the eight and under and 12 and above age groups. In the eight and under age group, Crissy Lawson, 8, of Prestonsburg, and Beth Hammel, 7, of Williamson, performed well. Miss Lawson earned a 32.25 score which won her third place, and Miss Hammel scored 27.8. In the 12 and above group, Mish Sloane, 12, of Hindman, tied for eighth place with a 32.55 score, and Farideh Hosseinipour, 12, of Williamson, won seventh place with 32.60. Fifty girls competed in both these age groups.

Eastern Kentucky Gymnastics, under direction of Henry Young, is located at Archer Park and in Williamson, W. Va.

The 58th district basketball tournament for both boys and girls will get under way tonight (Wednesday) at the Allen Central High School gymnasium.

In the lid-opener at 7 p.m. the Allen Central Rebels, with a record of 16 wins and 16 losses, will face the underdog Prestonsburg Blackcats with a record of 5 wins and 19 losses. In girls' play at 8:30 p.m., the McDowell Daredevilles will go against the Wheelwright Lady Trojans.

Thursday night, the Allen Central Rebelettes, rated No. 4 in the state, will meet the Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats. In the boys' bracket at 8:30 p.m., the Betsy Layne Bobcats will battle the Wheelwright Trojans.

Friday at 7 p.m. the McDowell Daredevils will face the winner of the Allen Central-Prestonsburg game. In the girls' bracket at 8:30 p.m., the Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats will play the winner of the McDowell-Wheelwright game.

The girls championship game will be at 7 p.m. on Saturday night and the boys' title game will follow. Winners and runnersup in both divisions will move into the regional tournament next week, with Belfry High School playing host for both boys and girls.

Last week, the McDowell Daredevils won two games to become the winningest boys' team in the 15th region. Tuesday night, the Daredevils won over the Millard Mustangs, 90 to 77. Newsome, came up with his best night of the season, firing in 30 points and grabbing off 12 rebounds. The Daredevils shot 49 percent from the field and connected on 77 per cent from the free throw lane. The Daredevils closed out their regular season Friday night by defeating Letcher County, 79 to 68. Pete Grigsby fired in 21 big points, and Stewart Osborne connected for 20.

The Allen Central Rebels won one and lost one last week. Tuesday night the Rebels won over the Knott Central patriots, 69 to 68. The homesteading Rebels outscored the Patriots in the third quarter, 25 to 16, and led by 8 going into the fourth quarter, but had to battle to hold off a rally by the Patriots to win, 69 to 68. Randy Conley connected on 14 of 15 attempts from the gratis line and finished out the night with 22 points. Bruce Mullins, the junior jumping jack had 22 points and 15 rebounds. On Friday night the Rebels traveled to Pikeville and lost to the Panthers, 68 to 64.

The Betsy Layne Bobcats traveled to Virgie Friday night and received their worst beating of the season, losing 101 to 68. The Virgie Eagles, rated 8th best in the state were led by Todd May who scored 35 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

The Prestonsburg Blackcats lost two close games last week, one to the Elkhorn City Cougars Tuesday night, 66 to 49, and to Lawrence County at Louisa Friday night, 58 to 49. John Gilliam scored 16 points and Joe Marson had 8 points.

The Allen Central Rebelettes won their 31st game of the season by defeating the Virgie Eaglettes, 59 to 34. Scoring honors for the night went to Kim Shepherd of Allen Central with 21 points.

Lady Rebels Begin Quest

By KENNY RICE

They are just five games away. Five games they are favored to win, away.

It isn't enough that Allen Central's Lady Rebels have pretty much breezed through the regular season, that they dominated the 58th District for a third straight year. Judy Eversole's team has to win the 15th Region and find out what they can do against the top teams from the Commonwealth. That's been their goal since a heartbreaking loss to Sheldon Clark in the semifinals of the 15th Region tourney in March, 1980.

The Lady Rebs want to prove they can play with the state's best clubs and they know the only way to have that opportunity is to reach the Sweet 16 in Richmond.

"I've heard a lot of good things about Allen Central and their record is certainly very impressive, but Pikeville brought their unbeaten record to the state last season and they didn't get by the first round," Dan Hempel, coach of the state's top ranked team, Clark County, said two weeks ago. "If Allen Central is as good as I've heard, maybe they can come to the state tournament and bring some respectability to the 15th Region. The teams from the Mountains have to come downstate and win before they are going to get any recognition."

Hempel's statement is familiar to Judy Eversole and her team. They have played this season under a microscope. They have been expected to win, all season long, and their excellent record has been taken for granted because they are doing what many feel they should.

The Lady Rebs also know they were not ranked among the state's top ten (in the AP poll) until near the end of the season. As Hempel stated, it is difficult for the Mountain teams to get respect throughout the state because of the failure of past 15th Region winners, Sheldon Clark and Pikeville, to get no farther than the opening round of the Sweet 16.

This is a team that has established itself as the best team in Eastern Kentucky and a club that has the talent to make a fine showing in the state tourney. But the district tournament is beginning tonight as Eastern and the Lady Rebels know they must walk before they run, so their efforts are concentrated on winning another 58th District. They begin their quest this week to get to Richmond.

Central's dynamic backcourt duo, Trena Hensley and Kristi Frye, have played in three regional tournaments and the senior All State candidates feel the Lady Rebels are a confident team entering the post season.

SEEDINGS

For the first time in the history of the 58th District Tournament, every team in the tourney is seeded. The No. 1 seed plays No. 5; numbers 3 and 4 tangle to see who will play the No. 2 seed. Seeding is based on the Floyd County Conference standings: This means the conference takes on an even greater importance than when the top two finishers started receiving seeds in 1975.

The county schools made a smart move in approving the seedings for each team in the tournament. It creates more interest in the county games during the regular season. Even if a team can't make it to the top two spots, a third place seeding is better than a fifth place and this should keep interest in the conference race down to the very last game. This might help attendance and revenue for the schools.

Also seeding the teams in this manner should insure the 58th District of always having at least one of the best teams in the district in the regional tournament. That, of course, was the intention of the seeding when it began in '75, but now with the top finisher in the FCC having to play the last place finisher to go to the regional, that first place finish is even more vital.

The other three districts in the 15th Region may be following Floyd's lead in future seasons with the seeding of their districts from top to bottom.

NOTICE To All Water Consumers of Beaver-Elkhorn Water District:

We have found some customers permitting their "neighbor" to connect onto their line, thereby avoiding the hook-up charge and the metered water charge. This is clearly a violation, both on the part of the regular metered customer and the "neighbor" who is permitted to make this connection.

Customers permitting this, when discovered, will be "Back Charged" for minimum billing as though he had two meters, or in the event he declines to pay the back charges, he will be subject to be disconnected for violation of rules and regulations of the Beaver-Elkhorn Water District and the Energy Utility Commission of Kentucky.

Axe May Cut Deep in Ky.

Actual effects of President Reagan's proposed 1982 budget cuts on Kentucky are still sketchy and incomplete, but state officials reported last Wednesday that the state could lose more than $335 million in federal aid.

Robert Warren, deputy secretary of finance, said the area of human services would be hit the hardest with proposed cuts of $187.4 million.

William Huffman, social insurance commissioner with the Department for Human Resources, speaking at the noon press conference, said the cuts would most affect people holding part-time jobs, those receiving less than the minimum wage and people on Supplemental Security Income.

He estimated that more than 160,000 households now receiving food stamps would be affected by the cuts. Of the more than 400,000 people now receiving food stamps in the state, about 100,000 would be affected by the cuts.

"Any cap at all will require a reduction in benefits," Huffman said. He pointed out that Human Resources Secretary Grady Stumbo has already taken steps to reform the health services area without reducing services.

Raymond Barber, superintendent of public instruction, said cuts amounting to $38.5 million in education's budget has been expected for some time. Under the program the state could lose funding for 3,000 teachers statewide.

Major effects of Reagan's education cutbacks will not be felt until 1983, Barber added.

Transportation cuts amounting to $72.5 million would come from 30-odd pots, including $33 million in highway-construction money and $33.6 million under the president's plan to transfer highway money from the Appalachian Regional Commission to the Federal Highway Administration, according to estimates.

Clair Nichols, deputy transportation secretary, said the most important interstate projects are to be saved, but added the department is unaware of which projects they are.

In development and commerce, Secretary Bruce Lunsford said the major loss would be the Appalachian Regional Commission.

Warren estimates Kentucky could lose at least $11.5 million from Reagan's proposal to eliminate the non-highway portion of the Appalachian Regional Commission.

Lunsford said the state's use of industrial revenue bonds and resources provided by the Kentucky Development Authority could offset a portion of the estimated $5.9 million in community and economic development grants the state stands to lose if Reagan's budget is passed.

Warren said one answer to the state's budget problems would be to reinstate the sales tax on food and utilities. However, the Department of Finance is not planning on drafting legislation to that effect, he said.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our beloved wife and mother, Roxie Chaffins, who passed away March 2, 1980. We just can't know what lies ahead From day to passing day. What changes God is planning in His wise and loving way. We just can't know the reasons Why our sorrow has to be. Why we must lose the ones we need And love so specially. We just can't know—but we can trust And faith can help us find Our way to those "tomorrows" That will bring us peace of mind. Sadly missed by husband, OLIVER, daughters, sons, and friends.

SET DATE FOR SAVINGS GOAL
Successful savings plans differ from family to family, but two characteristics usually are obvious: saving is a habit because the plan is livable.

As you evaluate your plan consider these questions: Do you have some rainy-day money set aside for an emergency? Do you have a so-called contract with yourself to save so much a month? Do you have a monthly savings plan that will help you achieve a certain goal on a definite date? Goals could be short-term, such as replacing a car, or long-term, such as paying for a child's education.

A strategy for saving that may work for you is, first, set aside an emergency fund—one that's the right size to make you feel secure. Putting two or three months' income in such a fund is a general rule of thumb. Keep the money where you'll earn interest and where you'll be able to take it out if needed.

Second, figure out how much you'll need to set aside every month to reach a certain goal.

And, finally, once savings goals are met, investigate ways to move extra funds into investments.

Many couples hold safe-deposit boxes in both names. However, be aware that joint registration does not mean joint ownership of the property inside, whether it's jewelry, stocks, bonds or insurance policies. This creates a problem on the death of a joint owner because the bank must seal the box until local tax authorities inventory the contents.

In most cases, particularly in smaller communities, this delay may not be very long. However, if some vital information needed by the family is kept in the safe-deposit box and the death occurs at a time the bank is closed, the information will not be available.

Telegram Rate Up

It is going to cost more to send telegrams.

The state Utility Regulatory Commission has approved rate increases by Western Union which will mean an additional $37,000 in annual revenue for the company in Kentucky.

The Federal Communications Commission had already approved an increase in the company's interest rates, said Robert Fulton Jr., director of regulatory matters for the Washington, D.C.-based company. Fulton testified during a commission hearing in December.

Western Union is applying for rate hikes in all 44 states where it is subject to regulation, he said.

More money is needed because changes in labor contracts and other increased costs have resulted in a poor rate of return for Western Union, according to Fulton.

The increases are the first for this segment of Western Union's business since 1975, he said.

Its rates will raise from $4.75 to $6, a $1.25 increase, for a basic 15-word message. Overnight telegram rates will increase from $4 for a basic 100-word message to $5.50 for a 50-word message; and its personal opinion telegram rate will raise from $2 for 15 words or less to $3.50 for 20 words or less.

Telegrams are usually delivered within four hours while overnight telegrams are delivered the next day. Personal opinion telegrams within the state are sent to the governor or to legislators while they are in Frankfort.

King Of The High C'S Is Portrayed On KET

A documentary portrait of opera's reigning tenor, "Pavarotti: King of the High C's," airs Sunday, March 8 at 8 p.m. during KET's Tele-Fund '81.

The hour-long special delves into the private, as well as the public, life of Luciano Pavarotti. He is seen and heard in concert, discussing his work, relaxing at home and on vacation.

The film follows him back to his hometown of Modena in Northern Italy, where Pavarotti reveals his great passion for the countryside and also introduces many of his friends and relatives. In one of the film's more poignant moments, Pavarotti and his father, himself an amateur singer, perform a duet at a local Mass.

Also included in the film are clips from Pavarotti performances of his favorite composers. There are scenes from several operas by Puccini and Verdi and footage of Pavarotti's electrifying performance of Verdi's "Il Trovatore" before 20,000 people in Verona's open-air theater.

Pavarotti's feelings for his art and the pressures of being a star are other subjects explored in this BBC/Polyphone co-production.

Get instant relief for your pocketbook with our Equal Payment Plan.

Winter is here. And with its chilling winds comes the most expensive time of the year. Bills from the holidays, snow tires, cold and flu expenses, taxes—the list is long.

And winter is also the highest electric usage period for most of our customers. That means higher energy bills come right along with everything else.

To help ease the overall winter drain on the pocketbook, Kentucky Power is offering "instant relief" for customers with good bill-paying records. It's called the Equal Payment Plan (EPP). By going on EPP now, qualified customers can defer part of each winter electric bill to spring and fall when usage is less.

Here is how it works — If for example, your current bill is $150 but your average bill (based on last year's usage) is $75 per month for a year, you would have to pay only the $75 when you go on EPP. Over the first 11 months you would pay $75 per month. (If there is any difference between your estimated and actual usage, we'll make an adjustment in your monthly EPP amount after six months.) On the 12th month, we'll settle up any differences.

EPP is that simple. You pay less than what you actually use during these heavy-use periods, then pay the company back (with no interest) during the low usage months.

EPP is of most benefit to heating and air conditioning customers whose bills fluctuate seasonally, but the program is available to all residential customers.

If the idea of leveling off your electric bills sounds good to you, come in or call your nearest Kentucky Power office. We have an EPP specialist waiting to talk to you.

We give it our best.

Wins Recognition

The Delaware (Ohio) Federated Music Club recognized nine high school students at its second annual Student Recognition Night, January 29. Juniors and seniors were chosen for recognition on recommendations of public school teachers on the basis of their exceptional abilities as solo performers. One of the nine recipients was Miss Jennifer Burchett, of Buckeye Valley High School, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Burchett, III, of Delaware, Ohio, formerly of Prestonsburg. Miss Burchett is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gale Music and Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Burchett, Sr.

Bluegrass And Country Music March 12 On KET

KET presents an evening of hand-clapping, foot-stomping entertainment for music lovers of all kinds Thursday, March 12 during Tele-fund '81.

Bluegrass abounds beginning with an encore performance of "J. D. Crowe and the New South," airing at 8 p.m.

Next at 8:30 p.m. KET presents "Kentucky Bluegrass: A Preview." This sampler from KET's new Bluegrass music series starring the McLain Family Band offers a glimpse of the performances taped live at the family's annual summer music festival and a close-up of the individuals who make up the McLain band.

Then at 9:30 p.m. KET premieres the first episode in its new series, "Kentucky Bluegrass: The McLain Family Festival." In thirteen half-hour programs, the series explores the full range of bluegrass music—from traditional bluegrass to country-western, gospel and the blues performed with a bluegrass flavor.

The series premiere features the entire McLain clan—Raymond K. on guitar, Raymond W. on banjo, Nancy Ann and Michael on mandolin, Ruth on string bass and Beverly on banjo—in a spirited performance of traditional bluegrass numbers, including "Under The Double Eagle," "Big River Blues" and "I'm Blue And Lonesome Too."

A medley of creek songs, including "Cripple Creek," "Troublesome Creek" and "Baptizing On Beaver Creek" follows. The McLains' bluegrass version of "The Stars And Stripes Forever" rounds out the half-hour of family entertainment and ends the first show of the series on a patriotic note. Upcoming programs in the series showcase such regionally and nationally known groups as Buck White and the Down Home Folk (Texas), the Goins Brothers (Ky.), the Country Gazette (Tenn.), as well as international performers Applesseed from Japan and Fesaci from Czechoslovakia.

In a finale on March 12, the cowboys take over with an hour-long concert of country-western tunes and popular bluegrass favorites. "It's Party Time: The Breeding's Bunch," featuring the Lexington-based group of singers and musicians, airs at 10 p.m.
