Candidate Held Here After Opponent Shot

Ray Fields, Republican nominee for sheriff in Martin county, is in a Huntington, W. Va. hospital with two highpower rifle wounds, and his Independent opponent for the office, Alvin Davis, is in jail here, charged with the shooting.

The 38-year-old Davis was transferred to jail here from Martin county "for security reasons," State Trooper Scott Woodard said. He remained in jail Saturday, apparently unable to execute the $25,000 cash bond asked for his release on a first-degree assault charge and $2000 cash bonds on three counts of wanton endangerment.

His sister, Mary Murphy, 32, of Pilgrim, was jailed at Inez on a charge of complicity to first-degree assault, and $20,000 cash bond was asked for her release. Her alleged offense was described as driving the get-away car. She remained in jail last week.

Hall Held Here After Kin Shot Sunday at Drift

Harless (Baldy) Hall, of Drift, was jailed here Sunday night by State Detective Danny Stumbo, a few hours after Hall's nephew, 17-year-old Brian Birdsell, had been shot and critically wounded inside Hall's store.

The youth was shot in the back of his head with a bullet from a small-calibre weapon, Stumbo said. He was transferred later Sunday night from the McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital to the UK Medical Center, Lexington.

Hall was being held in jail Monday as a suspect while the investigation of the shooting continued. He denies having any part in the wounding of young Birdsell

He told Detective Stumbo that the shooting apparently resulted from a robbery attempt on his place of business. Hall told the officer he heard a shot while he was outside the storeroom and that when he returned he found his nephew lying wounded on the floor.

The detective said interior of the store "looked like a battlefield," there were so many bullet holes, but added that he could not say if the bullets were fired Sunday night or at earlier dates.

Eight persons—six men and two women—were booked at the jail over the week-end on charges of driving under the influence of intoxicants. These arrested:

Award Climaxes Work of Court On Solid Waste

For its success in meeting the problem of solid waste the Floyd fiscal court last week received the Community Improvement award from the state Department for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection.

The award was presented last Thursday to County Judge-Executive Bill Wells in ceremonies conducted at the sixth annual Kentucky Environmental Conference in Louisville.

The county's solid waste achievement record includes the purchase of a 550-acre tract near Garth where an approved landfill has been located and is now in use. A contract is expected to be awarded next Wednesday for the clearing of an additional 50 acres of the tract for extension of the landfill and for road construction and the laying of a water line. The court formed a solid waste commission, which operates its countywide waste collection and disposal.

in his truck on the Little Rockcastle hill, en route to Inez, two weeks ago. The first bullet, he said, struck him in the right shoulder; the second, in his left knee-cap. He drove, unassisted, to Inez and from there was taken to the Cabell-Huntington Hospital where a portion of the knee-cap was removed.

Davis was arrested about 12 hours later. Both he and his sister maintain their innocence.

Of events leading to Fields' arrest The Martin Countian, Inez newspaper, said in its Sept. 30 edition:

Before dark Tuesday, someone noticed a knapsack and a rifle lying in the weeds near where Davis was later arrested. The police were notified and deputies Robert Maynard and Jim Meeks and Inez policeman Jack Endicott hid behind trees on the hillside overlooking the gun which they believed had been used to shoot Fields.

If luck led to the finding of the gun, a double-dose of luck resulted in the arrest of Davis. At approximately 12:30 a.m., shortly after midnight, the deputies said, a car pulled up and stopped. Davis got out and began looking in the weeds for the gun, the deputies explained.

When one of the deputies yelled at Davis, they said, he fired at them twice and the car sped off.

The policemen returned the fire, but no one was injured.

The weapon the deputies say Davis used to fire at them has not been found. County Attorney Drewie Muncy said that Davis has also been charged with possession of marijuana.

In addition to Davis, Field, a former Martin county judge-executive and sheriff, is opposed at the coming general election by Howard Dillon, Democrat

SORGHUM MAKING is often hot, demanding work, and you've got to keep at it—if you're a grown-up that is. For the young'uns it's a different matter and a thick mattress of ground cane stalks can provide an ideal spot for some rough and tumble fun. The acrid odor of a burning slate dump at Lackey is noticeable all the way back to Garrett, up Rock Fork and on occasion as far away as Salt Lick. To area residents with healthy lungs the sulphurous fumes are irritating and unpleasant, but to those who suffer from black lung, emphysema and other respiratory ailments, the heavy smoke which hangs in the creek bottoms and hollows can be almost unbearable.

The big mound of coal refuse which rises out of Baptist Bottom at Lackey began smoldering on August 4, according to nearby residents, and, although citations have since been issued by at least two state environmental agencies, the plume of smoke continues to rise and no one seems to know just what to do about it.

Hollie Allen, who lives in an attractive hillside home directly behind the dump, is one of the scores of local people who is angry with the situation. His wife, who suffers from emphysema and chronic asthma, is "under oxygen," as he pointed out, now far more frequently than before the burning began. "Another woman just down the road is in the same shape," he added. "It's a darned shame."

According to Allen, a coal company leased the 50-year-old refuse pile from owner Gorman Collins, of Prestonsburg, and began work there in July constructing a shaker and using screens to extract remnant coal from the refuse.

"When the pile first began smoking the company claimed that it had been afire to start with," Allen pointed out, "but everybody around will tell you

'Succession' Unsuccessful In Recent Chamber Poll

Twenty-three of the 28 individuals responding to the recent poll conducted by the Prestonsburg-Floyd County Chamber of Commerce are opposed to the proposed Succession Amendment which will appear on the November election ballot.

Four said they would support the amendment and one took no position on the issue. There was no response from 63 to whom ballots were sent.

Tommy Slone, of Prestonsburg, last Thursday filed suit against the city of Prestonsburg, seeking to recover $123,000 for medical expenses and damages allegedly resulting from a fall at the scene of sidewalk construction last October.

Plaintiff says he tripped and fell at the point where the work was being done on Court street, near Third, and that his back was injured and his hip broken in the fall. He blames the city with "carelessness and neglect."

Of the total asked, $3000 is for actual medical expenses, $20,000 for future medical expenses and $100,000 for damages, according to the suit filed in circuit court here.

I almost pulled them through. Last April I took under advisement the sad case of the Cincinnati Reds and came up with the prediction that that bunch of palookas would be lucky to finish fourth, or words to that effect. The result was the best record in all major league baseball, though they lost, as you may have heard, a place in this playoff mess.

WHEN DYING IS BEAUTIFUL

It's dying color these hills are melding into, these early October days, not the much-advertised living brand, and all who fail to see them within the next week will be missing beauty that, as a compatriot remarked, "boggles the goggles."

A Harold miner's struggle to prove he was wrongly fired by a Pike county coal company more than four years ago ended in victory last week when a judge found in his favor, ordering the company to reinstate him with back pay.

Victor McCoy, now in his mid-40s, mined coal in the Crescent Coal Company's 10C mine on Millers Creek until April 22, 1977, when he refused any longer to ride the belt line or walk to the mine face, claiming that both options were hazardous.

Chief Administrative Law Judge James A. Broderick, of the Federal Mine Safety and Health Review Commission, found that McCoy was fired for refusing to work under conditions he reasonably believed unsafe, and that his firing was a violation of the 1967 Coal Act.

According to testimony in the case, miners entered or left the Millers Creek mine either by walking, riding a battery-powered scoop, or riding the belt line. Those who rode the belt were exposed to "real danger of serious injury." Broderick concluded.

There were no lights along the belt line, miners riding it had no way to stop it, and it passed through at least one area where the roof was only inches from the belt, it was said.

If a miner was unable to jump off the belt, he would either be thrown into a crushing machine or off the end of the belt onto a pile of coal 70 feet below; it was not uncommon for miners to suffer bruises and sprains in jumping from the belt; and one miner was more seriously injured when his clothing became entangled in the rollers, Judge Broderick noted in discussion of the case.

McCoy testified that he continually bruised himself jumping off the belt (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

Some Motorists Irked as County Delays Control

"Somebody is going to get killed...New KY 80 already is a mess and will be worse..."

These remarks are typical of several heard here recently as motorists have protested the spillage from coal trucks on county and state highways.

They also protest the lack of a county ordinance providing penalties for spillage, and point out that neighboring. Pike county has such an ordinance which applies to trucks of all kinds carrying loads which may be spilled onto roadways and requires that they be covered.

The Floyd fiscal court considered such legislation two years ago but shied away from its enactment when it was pointed out that the court has no jurisdiction over state highways.

Almost at the same time, however, the Pike fiscal court was enacting an ordinance which applied to all "common carriers" whose contents were subject to spillage, and district court later upheld the legislation, although it covered state as well as county roads. The court pointed out that the state law provides only a minimal penalty and that the county was within its rights in fixing stiffer penalties.

County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. said this week that even an ordinance governing spillage on county roads only would be perhaps 90 percent effective, since carriers with coal loads must as a rule travel the smaller county roads before they reach the state highways.

He also pointed out that the state has two specific statutes governing shifting loads and spillage from such carriers and that these laws can be enforced by any officer.

State officers have on occasion issued citations to drivers of uncovered coal trucks but few have been fined, once they get to court.

The Pike county ordinance provides for a fine of not less than $300 nor more than $500 for the first offense. A second offense is punishable by a jail term of 30 days for the driver of an uncovered truck, or other agent of the company, and a fine of $500.

Pike county reportedly is having little trouble with coal spillage.

Hearing Slated On Coal Tipple

The question of whether the temporary shutdown of a Dinwood coal tipple should be lifted, pending a resolution of the dispute between the tipple owners and area residents, will be considered today (Wednesday) at a hearing here.

Dinco Coal Sales, Inc., of Paintsville, owners of the coal-loading facility, requested the hearing after an Office of Surface Mining inspector found in July that the tipple was operating in a residential neighborhood without the necessary waivers and ordered it closed.

The hearing is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. in the circuit courtroom before Administrative Law Judge David Torbett, of the U.S. Department of the Interior office of hearings and appeals.

Meanwhile, U.S. Magistrate Joseph Hood, at a Tuesday hearing in Ashland, declined to block the OSM action against Dinco. The company had earlier filed suit in U.S. District Court, asking for temporary relief on grounds that its request to the Interior Department had already been denied.

Dinco argued that OSM inspector Steven Cassel's notice of violation, issued July 20 this year, was in fact a cessation order and as such should have been reviewed at a hearing within five days of its issuance. Magistrate Hood in effect sidestepped the argument, however, by allowing the plaintiffs to submit, and then recommending, a more conservative "mandamus" petition, ordering OSM to proceed with its hearing within a week.

Dinco is represented in the case by Prestonsburg attorney Clifford B. Latta and Frankfort attorneys William H. Gorin and David C. Chort. Short was formerly a regional director with OSM. OSM is represented by Charles P. Gault and Dinwood residents Ivan and Mary Debord are represented by David Rubinstein, of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund.

THE SULPHUROUS SMOKE which rises from a large slate dump at Lackey causes a good deal of distress among residents as far away as Garrett and poses a dilemma for environmental officials who have yet to provide a remedy for the situation.

CAN FUNERAL DECISIONS BE MADE WISELY UNDER STRESS?

Not always-which is why we recommend planning your own funeral.

Caught up in grief and stress, some people may be emotionally unable to cope with making funeral arrangements effectively. They may be tempted to proceed with more costly arrangements than they should. It should be noted that the psychological value to the funeral has no relationship to its costs.

Planning such arrangements may eliminate the possibility of such over-spending. Planning can be accomplished in advance of need, in an atmosphere uncharged with the emotionally distressing circumstances of bereavement. For details of planning funerals, call us-or stop by for literature.

Your questions and comments on this and other subjects are welcome-in private or publicly through this column.

Woman's Club Executive Board Meets

The executive board of the Prestonsburg Woman's Club met last Thursday evening at the Emma Wells May Cultural Center with the president, Mrs. Carolyn Traum, presiding. Mrs. Traum reported on the KFWC fall board meeting, which she attended in Louisville. Advertisements for the "Clubwoman Magazine," plans for the club's Arts and Crafts building at Archer Park, the possibility of the sale of Christmas greetings and cookbooks, the club's possible commitment for the painting of the "Welcome to Prestonsburg" signs, and the acceptance of prospective new club members were discussed.

Present for the meeting were Mrs. Carolyn Traum, Mrs. Debby Stumbo, Mrs. Helen Ankrom, Mrs. Docia B. Woods, Mrs. Elizabeth Ramey, and Mrs. Martha Leake.

Following the board meeting, the regular monthly meeting of the club was held, at the same location, with Mrs. Traum in charge. Miss Christine Spradlin presented the devotionals, the theme of which was "To Everything There Is A Season," after which she read a poem and led the group in prayer. Mrs. Jean Clark, program leader, introduced Carter Conley, of Salyersville, forest education officer of the Division of Forestry for six counties of the Eastern Kentucky district. Mr. Conley presented a film on conservation entitled, "Time is Running Out," gave a brief discussion of this topic and held a question-and-answer period. He told the group that Prestonsburg has one of the besttrained fire departments in Eastern Kentucky.

Following the program, members and guests were served refreshments. Hostesses were Mesdames Joyce Allen, Roberta Davidson, Polly Sparks, Eva Collins and Betty Porter.

During the meeting following the refreshments, Mrs. Traum discussed with the members the matters previously discussed at the executive board meeting. It was decided that an advertisement would be placed in the "Kentucky Clubwoman" magazine, in memory of a long-time club member. Mrs. Jane Combs. Members agreed that the Arts and Crafts house at Archer Park would be needed for various meetings there, and should be used only for club-sponsored activities. The club decided to sell Nellie Meadows' Christmas prints for the benefit of the Kidney Foundation. The decision regarding the painting of the "Welcome to Prestonsburg" sign was postponed until further information can be obtained.

The president reminded members of the Seventh District KFWC Woman's Club meeting, ot be held at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, Oct. 24, beginning at 9 a.m., with the Prestonsburg Woman's Club serving as hostess. Miss Ruby Akers, of Drift, serves as governor, and Mrs. Maxine Bierman, of Prestonsburg as vice-governor of the district. Members who wish to attend this meeting should contact Mrs. Martha Leake, regarding tickets for the luncheon on that date, by October 10. It was decided that money for the club's "Birthday Calendars" should be turned in by October 15.

The rummage sale, planned to be held at the garage of Mrs. Lucille Nunnery was postponed. Reports from various committees were heard.

Welcomed as new members were Mrs. Betty Stephens, Mrs. Dorothy Harris, Mrs. Clare Day, Mrs. Mary Sue Moore, Mrs. Arnita Snavley, Miss Ann Holbrook and Mrs. Drema Miller. Those in attendance, other than the hostesses and members of the executive board were guests, Carter Conley and Mrs. Clare Day, and members, Misses Alice Harris and Christine Spradlin, and Mesdames Sandy Burchett, Dorothy Osborne, Jean Clark, Ditty Tackett, Mabel Brown, Garnett Fairchild, Mabel Donahoe, Zella Archer and Maman Leslie.

The club's next meeting will be Thursday evening, November 5, at the same location, with Miss Christine Spradlin, Mrs. Elizabeth Ramey, Mrs. Garnett Fairchild, Mrs. Boots Adams and Mrs. Kathryn Frazier as hostesses. The program leader will be Mrs. Lucille Nunnery

The Verdict: Thumbs Down

When Governor Brown headed into the boondocks on his recent "Government to the People" tour he was aware that he wasn't going to satisfy many of the people he would see. When he got back in Frankfort the conviction that you can't satisfy everybody was surely intensified.

We are among those who were dissatisfied.

The governor's promise to continue work on US 23 in Pike county was great news. To have left that key highway a mess of completed sections and gaps partially complete or untouched would have amounted almost to criminal neglect.

But the "thumbs down" response to the needs of that stretch of US 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville was very disappointing, although Brown is not the first governor to refuse to do anything about a situation that grows worse by the year and poses a night-and-day threat to human life.

The state is asked to widen US 23 between the two countyseat towns, one of the most heavily travelled sections of highway in the Commonwealth and one which perhaps has the heaviest traffic in actual weight, since it is jammed with coal trucks and heavy machinery. From the overhanging cliffs boulders fall, rockslides pile onto the highway. Northbound traffic is forced to hug the cliffside as it faces a steady stream of vehicles in the one remaining lane.

It's a deadly gauntlet that the motorist runs because there's no room to dodge.

We were disappointed by the response to this need, and when we learned that 13 miles-almost the exact distance of this highway sector of ours-of the Owensboro-Madisonville road was promised, a few days later, for widening and resurfacing, our disappointment changed to anger.

We do not begrudge Western Kentucky road improvement. It needs help, just as we do. But we remain to be convinced-and it will take a lot of convincing-that Madisonville-Owensboro route is more congested and more dangerous than this part of US 23 where a casual drive can be a motorized version of Russian Roulette.

without a permit. Although violation notices were issued and fines may be forthcoming. the question remains about whose responsibility it is to see that the burn-

'We contacted the Federal Office of Surface Mining (O.S.M.) in Knoxville when we learned of the situation," reported Bill Clements, director of the Hazard Division of Air Polution office. "and after talking with them we felt that they would do the work, using ncy funds through the Federal Orphaned Lands program." Later, however, O.S.M. informed state DNREP officials that they had concluded it should be the state's respon-

Valerie Salvon, a lawyer with DNREP's Office of General Counsel, said talks with federal officials are continuing. "Unlike the Federal Orphaned Lands program, we just don't have the funds for such work-emergency or otherwise," she commented. "Sumac Company talked about putting out the fire, and it may be their ultimate responsibility to do so," she added. "We're very much aware of the problem with the dump,' she said. "We just need to find out who's going to be able to do something about providing a remedy. Hollie Allen and some of the other folks around Garrett and Lackey feel the responsibility lies closer to home. "It's a shame that the government. state or federal, should have to come in and spend a whole bunch of money on a problem which somebody else created.

The miner was plainly entitled by statute to refuse to ride the belt, Broderick ruled.

According to McCoy, the only practicable alternative to riding the beltline was to walk alongside it, an option he also considered hazardous because of areas of unsupported roof and because of cables lying on wet floor areas. Judge Broderick agreed. Walking the beltline at the 10C mine was a "grossly unreasonable" alternative to riding the belt, he said.

Broderick ordered Crescent to reinstate McCoy in the position from which he was discharged, to pay back wages with interest, and to pay a civil penalty yet to be assessed.

Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) officials, to whom McCoy first took his complaint, reportedly declined to prosecute it. A private attorney in Pikeville then took the case but later relinquished it. McCoy has since been represented by Stephen Sanders and Tony Oppegard, attorneys with the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund.

Letters to the Editor

The views expressed here are those of the writers, and not necessarily those of this newspaper. No unsigned contributions will be published.

Protests Coal Spills

I have written only one other letter to a newspaper in my life, and it got results. So, perhaps this one will do the same, if only to allow me to vent my feelings.

I have never heard quite as much talk and complaining as I have heard in the past few weeks concerning the uncovered coal trucks that are allowed to operate here in Floyd county. Please, before anyone gets upset thinking that I am about to lodge a complaint against the coal industry, let me assure you that I am not about to do that. There is no one any happier than I that we have this "black gold" in our county and we can all benefit from it. But, someone, somewhere in this county needs to do something to protect us from getting killed or badly injured from falling coal on the highways.

And, speaking of highways, have you driven on the new Kentucky 80 recently? I could cry when I think how it is going to look within a year's time from all the coal that is practically covering it already. We need good highways so badly and this particular highway is a godsend to us. If we don't stand up and protest now this will go on forever and never get any better. I wonder how many people reading this letter have had their cars damaged from falling coal, or have actually wrecked because they saw coal falling toward them. I had a large piece of coal hit my car Thursday evening, one inch above my windshield. I thank the good Lord that it hit the metal, even though it damaged my car. I could easily have wrecked or been blinded by shattered

I would like to express my appreciation to the coal truck drivers who do take the time to cover their trucks. At least they know that their coal is not going to be the cause of someone. perhaps someone in their own family, getting injured or killed. And, they can drive up our new highway and know that the coal lying all over the road is not theirs. I don't know how much money is lost by the 8-10 minutes of time that it takes to cover these trucks, and I don't know who actually is to blame, the coal operator or the driver, but please take some time to protest what is happening around us. If we don't stand up and demand that this be stopped, your or someone you love is going to get hurt or killed because a few minutes lost covering a load of coal would mean a few dollars lost in somebody's pocket.

Against Succession

I am against the Succession Amendment. My opposition to it is not because I have anything against the present governor-1 think he has done a good job under the present circumstances-but we must look down the road to many governors in the years to come.

This amendment could lead to all decisions involving politics. As in the case of a president running for reelection, the money goes where it will help get the most votes. If that be true with a governor running for reelection, counties like Floyd, Knott, Pike, Morgan, Breathitt, Letcher and Perry, which are safely Democratic at most elections, could suffer a heavy loss of state funds because no political gain could be expected by spending money in these counties. I think this is one thing we should consider when we vote at the November election.

Say Real Needs Not Met

Headline in the Floyd County Times on August 15, 1981 read, "Quarter Million Lost by Schools." For the past several months, at Floyd County Board of Education meetings, problems concerning the cutbacks in state and federal funding have been discussed.

Not only do we have parents who are fund raising, we have teachers selling candy to raise money for such things as music for chorus; a principal selling ice cream and soft drinks; faculty members, countywide, have become junk food salespeople to provide materials for classrooms.

There's an elementary school PTA raising money (about $2,400) for books. PTO and PTA groups all over the county have taken on the added burden of buying books and classroom materials. A chemistry teacher does not have enough lab books, a science teacher has nothing to use to teach biology, there is no money for specimens to use in dissections. A board member, asking for 150 desks for a high school, was told there was no money

Can our Superintendent recommend to our board members that a Public Relations person be hired, at fulltime salary, when situations such as these are happening in schools, countywide?

How much better would it be if the board saw to it that fee money received from the state ($5,00 classroom material, $2.75 library, $1.75 audio visual, based on average daily attendance) got into the classrooms? How much better for public relations when teachers could spend time teaching, rather than selling, in their classrooms? How much better would it be if the salary paid to a public relations person was used to buy books and desks for the boys and girls in all Floyd county schools?

The public relations the administration hopes to achieve throughout Floyd county may be best reached, not by a three-page publication, but by making sure the fee money gets into the classrooms and a hiring freeze be implemented at Central Office.

An improvement in the quality of education in the county will be the best public relations our administration could achieve.

Another Good Year

This is the time of year that we give thanks for folks like you who have been so kind to write about our East Point Area Development Club scholarships and the applebutter we make and sell so we can give these scholarships and

Its people like you at the 'Times' who always help us and we would never be able to do as well without your fine help as well as the help of those who make the applebutter and help in any way they can.

We have sold all the applebutter we made this year (almost 1900 qts.) so we will again be able to give the $500.00 scholarships (two) to these fine students who have need for them and we always hope to be able to help them with their education in this way. This year, its been a fine year for apples, but maybe next year, they might not do so well, if not, maybe we still will be able to make and sell as much applebutter as we have in the past, hope so anyway

Again thanks to all who helped us in any way!

Seeks Old Book

I have just finished "The Noble Lord," by E.D.E.N. Southworth. To my disgust, I read on the last page that there is a sequel "The Lost Heir of Linlithgow." Where in the Commonwealth of Kentucky does one find "The Lost Heir," etc?

It is not a collector's item-just a forgotten book; but one that the generation to which I belong would enjoy. Can a reader help me? Three dollars would be a good price.

School Boards Of Area Meet

School board members and school administrators from seven area school districts met yesterday (Tuesday) for the annual session of Eastern Kentucky (South) Region of the Kentucky School Boards Association (KSBA). The dinner meeting was held at 7 p.m., at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park.

John M. Stumbo, chairman of the Eastern Kentucky Region, who also is chairman of the Floyd County Board of Education, presided.

The program included a review of KSBA programs and services, and discussion of the serious operational problems of schools caused by recent state budget cuts. Members of the region's Legislative Network also met to discuss legislative concerns for the 1982 General Assembly. Charles J. Brauch, KSBA President and a member of the Bardstown Board of Education, noted that "Public education in Kentucky is at a critical juncture. For the past several years, the Kentucky General Assembly has taken significant steps toward closing the gap that exists between Kentucky and the seven surrounding states in funding for public elementary and secondary education.'

"In 1980-81," he added, Kentucky spent $153 less per pupil than the average of the seven surrounding states. Kentucky ranked 35th in the nation in per-pupil expenditures and the recent state budget cuts have reduced us even more.

"The 1982 General Assembly will determine whether Kentucky will continue her climb toward offering her children an educational opportunity equal to the seven surrounding states, or whether we will take a step backward in funding for education."

The region is composed of the following county school districts: Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin and Pike, and the independent school districts of Paintsville and Pikeville.

Bread Baking Is on the Rise

Home bread baking is back. Whole grain flour and cereals are reappearing in the marketplace. The soft, white loaf has had it. Baking of the family table-the kind he's learned to make himself.

Making bread is a creative process that calls for involvement between cook and dough. No other food preparation task fulfills expectations to such an extent. The seasoned cook can tell by the feel and appearance of the dough what to do next. It yields, it performs, it responds and fulfills. It's rewarding, too, to see your bread disappear as it always does among discriminating diners.

Today, making bread is not the time consuming chore it used to be. First glance at a recipe the process appears to be three hours from start cereal grains with their complex to finish. Actually, it requires less than thirty minutes of attention from are gaining new respect. the cook. During the time required for rising and baking, most seasoned cooks dovetail other cooking and housekeeping chores.

Recent focus on the role of fiber in daily nutrition provides another solid reason for making bread at home. Commercially prepared specialty breads high in fiber, protein and other nutrients carry specialty prices which can be reduced considerably by home baking. And dieters concerned with fiber intake have discovered that bread is one of the most palatable ways to increase it. Fiber ingredients that add bulk to the diet add interesting texture and flavor to bread. Good sources of fiber are whole grain flours, bran cereals, dried fruits such as raisins, dates, figs and nuts. The recipes for yeast breads that follow contain an assortment of fiber ingredients. Watch for new recipes appearing on the Fleischmann's Yeast package. They can be transferred from the package to a recipe card using a warm iron.

When you relate nutritive value of food to cost, bread is considered one source of caloric energy for body of the economical foods. Estimates activity. on how much money you can save making bread at home vary according to how much bread a family eats, where you shop, what kinds of bread the family likes and the amount of uneaten bread in the home. Storebought bread containing whole grain flour, sprouts and other nutritious ingredients often costs a dollar or more for a one pound loaf. Coffee cakes and rolls, particularly varieties that contain nuts, raisins and special ingredients also reflect higher labor and packaging costs. Such breads can be made at home for much less than half the price, including the cost of fuel.

Time: Consumption and Cost

If home bread bakers earned the minimum hourly wage for the time it takes to make bread at home, how would cost compare with bakery bread? Seasoned home bakers say that their time is hardly a factor in determining the cost. An organized cook can produce a big batch of bread in less than 20 minutes. This includes time for measuring ingredients, mixing and kneading.

Doubling recipes and freezing the excess doubles dividends for the time invested. It is true that it takes two and a half to three hours from start to finish when you consider rising time, shaping and baking. But yeast dough does its own thing and doesn't require constant attention from the cook. And savvy home bakers don't sit and wait for dough to rise.

Some bread recipes can go into the refrigerator or freezer to be baked at another time. So baking bread at home is not a matter of time consumption. It is basically an exercise in time management.

Bread For Todays Lifestyles

Nutritionists believe that obtaining a nutritious well-balanced diet is difficult when snacks are a way of life. They believe that the habitual nibbler is likely to become one of the 47 percent of all Americans who believe they are overweight. There's a saying that seems appropriate for todays snackers: "Choose your calories by the company they keep." For those concerned with calories as well as nutrition the "good company" foods are those with generous others expressed disappointment. amounts of protein, vitamins, minerals, fiber and micro-nutrients.

Bread dough can accommodate a wide variety of nutritious ingredients such as eggs, dried fruits, vegetables, meats, milk, cheese, etc. It is without doubt, one of the most economical and exhaults, ways to add important nutrients to the diet.

Compared with crackers, for instance, bread is considerably less making bread, active dry yeast is expensive. And nutrition data in- dissolved in 1/4 cup of warm water dicates that crackers are higher in (105° F.-115° F.), and that is the bread has become a weekend ritual calories, fat and salt. A pound of procedure we recommend for procesin many homes and it is no longer saltines contains 54 grams of fat sor breads. It is added with the a feminine pursuit. Since man is no compared to 17 grams in a pound of remaining liquid in the recipe longer the sole bread winner he enriched bread; and the sodium through the feed tube, with the apparently likes providing bread for content of saltines is double that of bread.

Bread and Nutrition

Bread made from cereal grains is the staff of life in many parts of the world. At the turn of the century, the consumption of cereal products in the U.S.A. was 358 pounds per person per year. Today we consume around 130 pounds, so bread is playing a considerably smaller role in a more varied diet. Some families have omitted it from the dining table because they erroneously think it's fattening. However, as nutrition research progresses, bread and carbohydrates and high fiber content

One of the great achievements in public health has been the flour enrichment program. The addition of B-vitamins-thiamine, niacin, riboflavin, and iron started in 1941. Amounts of the nutrients in the enrichment formula were established on the basis of dietary need. However they also restore to white flour the approximate amounts of those nutrients in whole grain.

The complex carbohydrates found in bread also perform important functions in the utilization and digestion of food in the following

- · They give bulk to move food through the digestive tract, keep it healthy, prevent constipation.
- * They influence the types of bacteria which grow in the intestines and serve as food for these bacteria to aid digestion.
- · They help the body use fats efficiently.
- · They provide an important

Labor-Savers For The Home

Ultrasonics, computerized solid state controls, digital readouts, microwave ranges and a plethora of gadgets inspired by the space age have been moving into American kitchens. The growing interest in home baking has brought more powerful mixers and kneading devices to small electrical appliance lines. These are real labor savers for inexperienced cooks who don't know how to handle doughs and for handicapped persons with limited energy. Kneading hooks do an efficient job of developing gluten in flour and reduce kneading time somewhat. Some of these products have helped considerably to reduce cooking failures and undoubtedly are among the reasons why breadmaking has become a hobby for men as well

How about baking yeast bread in the microwave oven to reduce baking time? Unfortunately yeast breads tend to be heavy, chewy and pale in color when baked via microwaves. So conventional oven baking is advised. Microwave ovens can be used however to heat baked and frozen bread, rolls, coffee cakes etc. It is important to follow directions in the manufacturers use and care book for each type of microwave

Food processors mix wet and dry ingredients with incredible speed. It takes only seconds to thoroughly mix ingredients. And thorough blending of ingredients speeds development of gluten so kneading time is reduced to two to three minutes. Many food processors are limited in capacity to a pound or a pound and a half loaf. (Not all food processors are designed to manipulate heavy dough. Consumers are advised to consult manufacturers use and care books before attempting to make yeast

Making Bread In A Food Processor

Adventurous cooks are making yeast breads in their food processors. Some were excited about results, Slight changes in procedure result in better bread. In the accompanying recipes for Tomato Yeast Muffins, flour, sugar, salt and margarine are measured into the processor bowl. Then rehydrated yeast and liquids are added. You'll find all the ingredients combine with incredible processor running.

The recipe doesn't specify temperature for the remaining liquid: it may be cold or ice cold. This is a considerable departure from most minutes. Rising time may be yeast bread recipes. The reason: heat from the processor motor warms the dough in the bowl. By adding cold liquid the temperature of the dough is reduced, resulting in a more desirable rising temperature. An even temperature of 80° F. to 85°

In the conventional method for F. is recommended for rising. If the temperature is higher the dough will rise too fast so gluten won't have time to develop properly.

> When all the liquid is added, the dough forms a ball in the bowl. At that stage, sixty seconds of additional processing will suffice for kneading. The dough is then transferred to a greased bowl for rising. As you can see, the processor reduces mixing and kneading time to less than five shortened occasionally because thorough blending of ingredients often speeds development of the gluten. But remember fermentation time is essential for good yeast bread. Most of these recipes require a rising period before shaping and baking.

Federal Jury Ponders Fate Of 2 Officials

A U. S. district court jury was in its second day of deliberations Tuesday at Pikeville on the guilt or innocence of Magoffin Sheriff Thomas "Skip" Salyer and Harold Dean Howard, Magoffin county school board member, on trial on charges of mail fraud and conspiracy in connection with the May primary election.

The jury deliberated two hours Monday. Returning Tuesday, it had not reached a verdict at 11:45 a.m.

The defense attorneys said Prater and Lykins had reason to testify against Salyer since Prater had been arrested by the sheriff on numerous occasions. Salyer also had arrested a relative of Lykins, they said. Adkins, who represented Howard, and Lemaster, Salyer's attorney, also asked the jury to consider whether any fraud had actually been committed, since the residents had sold their votes of their own free will. In his closing argument, Assistant

Money Not the Only Answer, Says Higher Education Council

The Kentucky Council on Higher Education's Committee on Higher Education in Kentucky's Future, which has studied the future of higher education in the state for the past 16 months, last week issued its final report urging that the quality of higher education in Kentucky be improved.

The report by the 30-member committee to the Council at a meeting in Lexington, says that Kentucky has sufficient campuses and specialized pro-

According to the committee's chairman, Frankfort attorney Edward F. Prichard, Jr., the report goes far beyond recommending more state support of higher education.

"We believe that additional financial support is indispensable for a quality system of higher education," Prichard says, "but money is not the sole means of attaining high quality.

Recommendations in the 200-page report deal with improvement of quality, graduate and professional education, college and university faculty, campus research and public service, and campus finance management.

Among the recommendations that deal specifically with improving quality are the following:

-That basic or minimal college-prep curricula be required for students entering Kentucky's public higher education institutions;

-That Kentucky's universities be encouraged to provide services directly to local schools to help improve elementary and secondary education;

-That there be a skills test for entering college freshmen with results given to Kentucky high schools and the

-That prospective teachers be tested in their subject fields before graduation and that schools of education place more emphasis on subjectfield study;

-That state teacher-certification standards be strengthened to insure better quality elementry and secondary teachers.

The citizen's committee also calls for special college prorams for talented students and for the creation of a special state fund to provide scholarships for such students and money to bring outstanding visiting scholars (professors) to the public universities.

It was a great win for us." Coach Haywood was also pleased with the offense. "Our offense," he said, "did a heck of a score was now 30-20.

the line of scrimmage and the backs

There was dancing in the streets Friday night following the Prestonsburg Blackcats' exciting 30-26 win over the AAA Belfry Pirates.

The fans who attended this showcase of high school football got their money's worth as the game had a little bit of everything in it. Prestonsburg received the opening kick-off and began its first long drive of the night on its own 20. After getting the ball to the Belfry 20 behind a strong ground game, Steve Rice took the option pitch from quarterback Todd Nairn, and threw a strike to Dennis Flanagan all alone in the end zone. B. J. Sturgill tacked on the extra point and Prestonsburg led

The Cats stopped Belfry on their first possession and Rice fielded the pirates' punt and returned it 15 yards to the Belfry 45. A penalty moved it to the 30 and the Cats quickly moved in for the score with Rice taking it in from the 1. Sturgill's kick was good and the lead was 14-0 at the end of the first quarter.

Belfry began its first scoring drive on its 30 and quickly moved 70 yards, with Tom Taylor going in from two yards out. The two-point try was stopped and the Cats' lead was cut to 14-6. Prestonsburg began the next series on the 25 and began another long, timeconsuming drive. Behind the excellent blocking of the offensive line, Joe Frazier, John Burchett (guards), Ray Marcum (center), B. J. Sturgill, Ritchie Schoolcraft, Randall Hager (tackles), Jeff Wells (tight end), Dennis Flanagan and Brad Hughes (split ends), the Blackcats drove 75 yards with Rice going in from eight yards out. Sturgill's kick again was good and the Cats increased their lead to 21-6. The Pirates were forced to punt after picking up a first down and the Cats began their last possession on the 40 will be limited to antlered deer only during this year's archery season, which opens Oct. 1.

This "bucks only" rule, the only major change in bow hunting regualtions this year, applies in deer hunting zones four and five. Zone four counties are Bath, Daviess, Elliott, Fleming, Lyon, McCreary, Marshall, Menifee, Morgan, Nicholas, Pulaski, Rowan and Wayne.

The counties in zone five are Bell, Breathitt, Bourbon, Clark, Clay, Clinton, Fayette, Garrard, Harlan, Jackson, Jefferson, Jessamine, Knox, Laurel, Lee, Leslie, Letcher, Madison, Montgomery, Owsley, Pike, Powell, Rockcastle, Simpson, Whitley, Wolfe and Woodford.

Deer populations in these counties are below what the habitat could support, biologists say, Every doe is important for breeding stock in these areas, and high bow-hunter harvest of does last year prompted the antlereddeer only rule.

These counties also have shortened gun seasons-five days in zone four and three days in zone five. Eight counties are closed to both gun and bow deer hunting-Estill, Floyd (except Oct. 1-31 bow hunting on Dewey Lake wildlife area), Johnson, Knott, Lincoln, Magoffin, Martin and Perry.

Bow hunters in remainder of the state (zones one, two and three) may take either antlered or antlerless deer during the entire archery season, which runs from Oct. 1 through Nov. 21-30 portion of the archery season.

An antlered deer is defined as one having at least one antler four inches long or longer, measured from the skin to the antler tip. The antlers may be forked or unforked, as long as this minimum size requirements is met.

The season limit this year will be two deer, provided that at least one is taken by archery (bow or crossbow). This means that two may be taken by archery or one by archery and one by gun. The only way two deer may be taken by gun hunting is if one is taken from a "special area"-Ft. Knox, Ft. Campbell, Land Between the Lakes or the Bluegrass Army Depot.

A "second deer" permit is required to hunt for the second deer and a portion of the first permit must accompany the second. Complete details are contained in the deer hunting guide which is attached to each permit.

Biologists expect another cord harvest of deer this season. Kentucky's deer herd continues to expand rapidly in many sections of the commonwealth and should keep growing for several more years.

Trojans Lose to Redskins

By HARRISON HORN (W.H.S. Journalism)

The Wheelwright Trojans hosted the Cumberland Redskins this past Friday night and were disappointed as the Redskins rolled to 50-24 victory. Cumberland was the first to put points on the board as they took the kickoff and returned it to the Trojan's 20-yard line where three plays later, they scored on a nine-yard pass play and converted on the two-point conversion.

The Redskins scored again when they broke open a 40-yard run from scrimmage for the touchdown and made the two-point conversion. The Trojans then took the ball on the kickoff and marched 60 yards for the touchdown which was scored on third down from the two when Eddie "TD" Little plowed over for the score.

The drive was kept alive on a 26-yard pass play from David Tackett to Robert Harlow. In the second quarter, the Redskins scored on a kickoff return of about 70 yards and a two-point conversion was not good. The Redskins scored again on their next possesion on a seven-yard run from scrimmage and the two-point conversion was good.

The Trojans were able to score again when Eddie "TD" Little took the kickoff and returned it to Cumberland's nine-yard line and three plays later David Tackett found Robert Harlow in the end zone for a touchdown of nine yards but again the two-point

James Hatcher's Will . . .

Beware of 'Get-Rich-Quick Schemes, Also of Worker Depending on a Belt

The philosophy of the late James Hatcher was first recorded on the lobby walls of the Hatcher Hotel which he built in Pikeville almost 50 years ago. Guests at the hotel were regaled with these earefully lettered examples of his humor and personal views. Then when his will was probated after his death in 1939 that same homespun philosophy, which recommended hard work, warned against waste and espoused the simple, country life, became a legal record. This newspaper first published Mr. Hatcher's will 40 years ago. We reprint it here for a new generation-Editor

When I used to employ a great many men it was my custom to always turn down the fellow who came for employment wearing a belt and smoking cigarettes, for I knew it would take most of his time to keep his breeches up and his cigarette lit. You do some thinking and looking around and you

I want to say further to my beneficiaries that the less they spend while they are young, the more they will have when they grow old. An old person needs more money than the young. I do not want my devisees to give all their time to the country club

or other social functions and have none

I further advise my devisees that as long as your present business will need and keep you, you should keep that business and that you should never let some young fellow tell you what to invest your money in for the purpose of getting rich quick. I never did buy any stock on the market. If you will keep your land and cultivate it, it will feed

can and will see that I am right.

I want to say to my trustees and to my nephews to whom I have willed the Hatcher Hotel, that I want the printed matter on the hotel walls to remain as printed, and if for any cause it should have to be removed, I want it replaced as I now have it, except that the coloring of the lettering may be different. I further want to say to each of my devisees that I have given to each of them a sufficient amount of property and land by which each can make a living by staying upon it and working. No one can grow corn, wheat, oats, potatoes and other farm products nor run a hotel or other business by staying on concrete roads.

I want each of my beneficiaries to bear in mind that a person living on a little farm in the mountains, you can make a living and save more money on it provided he stays at home and works. Too many today are looking for a job when they may have one at home on the farm if they only would go to it.

I want to advise all by beneficiaries to stay out of politics except to vote for the proper interests of their county and

I want to say to my female beneficiaries that they should beware of young men without money, merely seeking a home in which to live and a little money with which to buy cigarettes; that matrimony is the most important contract you will ever make in your lifetime and that you should give such thoughts serious consideration.

The farmer who has 50 bushels or more of corn in his crib on the first day of April, has wintered his stock, is in a much better shape financially than the man who has a $1500 or $2000 a year job. Why? Because he has lard, chickens, eggs, milk, butter and bread produced from corn that was put in the crib the fall before.

When you stay on a farm your wants are not as great as when you are walking the streets, smoking cigarettes and eating many luxuries too numerous to

70 Farms Eligible For Program Benefits

Final certification results in Floyd county as of Sept. 28 showed that 70 corn producing farms will be eligible for program benefits this year.

Farmers in compliance with provisions of the 1981 feed grain program are eligible for disaster payments if their corn was seriously damaged by natural causes during the growing

Persons who did not file by the June 15 deadline may still do so. However, they will have to pay a small tee for ASCS to measure the crop acreage and the acreage must be within the allowable tolerance.

Any farmer who has not reported his 1981 crop acreage should contact the ASCS office (886-2802) as soon as possible-but before the evidence of the crop is destroyed.

It now appears that in order for a farm to participate in the 1982 Feed Grain program, a 1981 crop acreage report must be filed, ASCS said.

Soil-Water Appraisal Available

Sharon Conley, ASCS, and Pat Beyler, SCS, display RCA appraisals at the service offices here.

The most comprehensive appraisal ever conducted of the Nation's Soil and Water Resources will be available for reference October 1, in the Soil Conservation Service (SCS) and the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) offices in Prestonsburg.

The appraisal is published in two volumes. Part I, Status, Condition, and Trends presents data on soil, water, and related resources in the United States. Part II, Analysis of Resource Trends, shows likely future consequences if current practices continue.

These documents replace earlier drafts of the RCA appraisal. Extensive public comments on the drafts are reflected in the final appraisal.

A recommended conservation program of the Secretary of Agriculture, which will be based on the appraisal and on public response to earlier RCA draft documents, will be released for public comment this fall.

Applicants for all Department programs will be given equal consideration without regard to race, age, color, sex, or national origin.

The relatively small amount of money being invested in health projects throughout the world is paying dividends well beyond expectations. That these benefits are not merely those experienced by people in the underdeveloped countries, is suggested by these words from the World Health Organization: "As the underdeveloped nations begin to raise their standards of living, so will the market for the goods of the technically advanced expand." The same relationship of benefit to expenditure may also be said of the space program. Medical advances since the first moon shot have been considerable.

The staff at COOLEY APOTHECARY INC makes it its business to keep up to date on all the advances in the health field. This enables us to offer as complete and modern an inventory of convalescent items, health aids, and prescription items as possible. Fire Prevention In Home Is Topic Of Program Here

Fire Prevention Week began Monday, and in conjunction with the annual observance, the Prestonsburg Fire Department will present programs beginning tonight through Friday as part of a special seminar for area residents, "Fire Prevention in the Home."

Fire-fighting specialists will discuss such topics as exit drills in the home, mobile home fires, smoke detectors and fire extinguishers. Question and answer sessions will follow the presentations which will begin each evening at 7 p.m. at the Prestonsburg Fire Department.

"Those who have spent the past year free from fire loss should not become careless, but should be even more prepared for that dreadful emergency," said Prestonsburg Fire Inspector Larry Adams. Adams said anyone interested may call the department at 886-1010 or simply show up for the free sessions.

WOODCOCK HENTING

What hunting season opened Oct. 3? If you can't answer that one, you're not a woodcock hunter. With a few exceptions, the woodcock season (which runs through Dec. 6 this year) goes unnoticed by most Kentucky hunters.

On the average, only approximately 6,000 Kentuckians hunt woodcocks-compared to an estimated 61,500 quail hunters and 49,500 dove hunters. Many of the estimated 12,000 woodcocks taken annually in Kentucky are harvested incidentally by quail hunters, since portions of the two seasons overlap.

But interest in woodcock hunting seems to be growing in Kentucky, according to Bill Graves, assistant director of the fish and wildlife department's Division of Wildlife.

"I think more and more hunters are beginning to realize that woodcocks ex-says, "and it takes only a few encounters with the woodcock to convince the hunter that he's a fine game

Woodcocks are migratory and by the time the December season closes most of them have passed through Kentucky on their way south. Their usual migration route is an indirect one, following the Ohio River westward before turning south again. Their schedule is unpredictable-they'll suddenly appear in an area then just as suddenly disappear a few days or a few weeks later.

Woodcocks feed primarily on earthworms, so they can generally be found in moist, wooded lowlands where worms are abundant. But don't be surprised if you flush one from along the edges of woodlands or even from relatively dry upland thickets.

Experienced hunters look for 'splash," the distinctive droppings of the woodcock and for the tell-tale holes in the ground these birds make when they probe for earthworms with their long beaks. Once a hunter locates good woodcock habitat, he can count on the birds returning to it year after year.

Bird hunters who get impatient waiting for the late November opening of the quail season should consider giving the woodcock a try. Most bird dogs will point woodcocks, so this bird offers a chance for some early October dog work. But remember to confine your hunting to woodcocks-there's a closed season on just about everything else the other exceptions are deer, waterfowl, snipe and raccoon) from Nov. 1 through the opening of the small game

Although he's not a particularly fast flyer, the woodcock can be tricky and hard to hit. He has a disconcerting habit of waiting until the hunter practically steps on him before he flushes. When he does fly, his twisting, turning flight and his habit of ducking behind trees make him a challenge to even the experienced shotgunner.

After a few sessions with woodcocks, both ol' rover and the hunter's shooting reflexes should be ready to take on the bobwhite when the third Thursday of November finally rolls around.

The daily limit on woodcocks is five, with a prossession limit of 10 after two or more days of hunting. Shooting hours are from one-half hour before sunrise until sunset, prevailing time.

HRMC Holds Abuse Detection Classes

"Child welfare experts estimate that two-million children in the United States under age 12 are being brutally beaten or severely neglected by their parents," stated Billie Goble, director of social services at Highlands Regional Medical Center. She was speaking before a group of nurses and other hospital staff members for inservice training classes at Highlands.

Child abuse is the number one cause of death for children under the age of two, she told the group.

The purpose of the instruction was to identify the problems of abuse and neglect in children, adolescents and adults. Hospital employees have frequently encountered these types of situations in their daily work. The participants were informed of the different treatment alternatives available in our area and how they can lend assistance. They were reminded that the law requires everyone to report suspected cases of abuse to the Department of Human Resources, Bureau of Social Services. They will then investigate the situation and followup if necessary. Failure to report a case could result in a fine, imprisonment or both.

"75% of all inmates have been abused or neglected as children," quoted Ms. Goble from American Humane Association statistics. "We must do our share to stop this cycle and get help for the abused and the abuser.

Is Al-Anon For You?

The Al-Anon family groups are a fellowship of relatives and friends of alcoholics who share their experience, strength and hope in order to solve their common problems. We believe alcoholism is a family illness and that changed attitudes can aid recovery.

Do you worry about someone else who drinks?

Do you tell lies to cover up for another person's drinking?

Do you feel that drinking is more important to your loved one than you are? Do you make threats such as "If you don't stop drinking, I'll leave you"? Have you been embarrassed by a drinker's behavior?

Do you feel that if the drinker loved you he or she would stop drinking to please you?

Do you feel there is no one who understands your problem?

If you have answered yes to three or more of these questions, Al-Anon or Alateen may help.

Al-Anon meets Wednesday at 10 a.m. at St. James Parish Hall; Saturdays at 8 p.m. at the Floyd County Library and Fridays at 8 p.m. at the CPI Unit at McDowell Hospital. Alateen meets Saturdays also at the Floyd County Library at 8 p.m. For more information call 886-2893 or 886-8572.

* EXTENSION SERVICE NOTES *

By JOHN E. SPARKS County Extension Agent for Agriculture

Everybody likes a healthy lawn: Fertilize now for an aesthetic, useful, dense bluegrass or fescue lawn.

Test-Don't guess. How do you determine what fertilizer your lawn needs? The best way is to have the soil tested. Contact the County Extension Office for information on how to take the sample and submit it for analysis. A good recommendation can then be made as to how much lime, phosphate, and potash is actually needed to supply the fertility needs for your lawn. Samples can be collected anytime during the year. Test your soil every 3-4 years to make sure you are providing the necessary fertility.

When and how much nitrogen?-The soil test does not indicate nitrogen needs, but turf growth is very much affected by nitrogen fertilization. Apply the nitrogen at the wrong time or in heavy amounts, and you can surely damage your lawn. If you apply too much nitrogen too often, your lawn will likely suffer from disease and insect problems that can be very costly to control.

Nitrogen fertilizer should not be applied at the same time for all grasses. Fescues and Kentucky Bluegrass grow best during cool weather. Because of this, fall and winter nitrogen fertilization is best. These grasses should not be fertilized during the hot summer. After heavy spring rains sometimes it is necessary to fertilize lightly in late spring. However, be careful not to over-fertilize to the point that weeds such as crabgrass are being encouraged and the desirable grasses weaken-

If you fertilize according to the fall program your lawn will not be dark green all summer, but it will maintain its density, green-up quickly in early fall, and not be so seriously damaged by diseases and insect problems. A lawn receiving heavy spring and summer fertilization is very susceptible to summerkill caused by disease, insect and drought stresses.

Apply fertilizer uniformly. Nitrogen fertilizer is very effective in "greening up" a lawn and in causing fast growth. Because of this, it is important to apply nitrogen-containing fertilizers uniformly over the lawn. This eliminates "streaking" which is very unsightly in lawns.

It is most difficult to evenly apply fertilizer by "hand". Either a drop type or rotary spreader should be used. However, when using drop type spreaders, be careful to overlap the wheel tracks, since all of the fertilizer is distributed between the wheels. It is difficult to maneuver drop type spreaders around ornamental trees and shrubs without causing some streaking. Rotary spreaders are somewhat better in that they usually cover a broader swath and tend to fan out the fertilizer at the edges of the swath. They seldom leave the distinct coloration or growth difference that occurs with skips and overlaps when using the drop type spreaders.

The Two-Wheel Explosion

This year promises to be a banner one for the American bicycle industry. The increasingly high cost of transportation will force many people to abandon their automobiles and walking may be the only mode less expensive than biking.

Many joggers, shunning their shin splints, are discovering they can get just as much exercise pedaling as they can running, and they see a lot more of the countryside. Finally, the success of the movie "Breaking Away" is expected to do for bicycling what "Deliverence" did for white-water canoeing. Bicycling may not be as exhilarating but it certainly is safer and more practical. Whatever the reason, bicycles are not just for kids any more.

What Kind To Buy

Up until 15 years ago, there were two basic kinds of bicycles available in the United States: the single speed, coaster brake "American" model, and the multi-speed, hand brake, lightweight "foreign" bike.

The single speed, American brand is rapidly following the old reliable Model T Ford into the garage of nostalgia. Fortunately for bicycle riders, the new bike models are Old Tin Lizzie.

You can pay as much for a bike today as you did an economy car ten out of the store on your new bicycle. years ago. So before you head for a bicycle shop, it's a good idea to think hard about how often you plan to use your bike, for what distances, and Bicycle thefts, like bicycle riding, are under what conditions.

If you are a Sunday-driver type of bicycle rider, interested in nothing more than a pleasant day in the sun and some moderate exercise, you don't need a 15-speed, $1,500 model. If you live in a hilly area, and plan to use your bike a great deal, then you want to consider more than just two wheels and a frame.

What To Look For

Once you have decided what kind of riding you'll be doing, and what price range you can handle, it's time to head for a bicycle shop.

Once you're inside the store, you'll notice that the selection of adult coaster brake bikes is either slim or non-existent. Some bike manufacturers have stopped making them. for cheaper modes of transportation, It's called progress, but don't despair. Those sleek, light-weight, multi-speed bicycles, originally designed for long-distance touring, can be perfect for a spin around the block.

If you have decided on a multispeed, check the shifter. Is it out of the way so it won't be a lethal weapon should you fall? Can you shift gears while the bike is standing still? Many multi-speed bikes have the shift positions clearly marked so you know immediately what gear you're in. Check for that.

Make sure the bike has a chain guard. Most now do, but some foreign brands still come without a chain guard, meaning that you will have to hike your pants up a bit to ride safely. Does the bike have enough night reflectors, at least one on each wheel and one in the front and the back?

Ask the sales person about maintenance. Most bicycles require nothing more than an occasional check to make sure everything is usually more reliable than the secure and the chain and sprockets automobiles that have followed the are well-oiled. Other bikes would give a DC-10 mechanic a headache.

One final thought. Before you ride buy the most secure lock and chain you can afford, and get into the habit of using them all the time. at an all-time high.

Bell Announces New Installation Charges

South Central Bell's residence and single-line business telephone customers in Kentucky will soon notice a change in the way the company charges for telephone installation

With the recent approval of the Kentucky Public Service Commission, South Central Bell-effective October 1-will begin charging for telephone installation on a "time-and-materials" basis. Also on that date, the company's Kentucky customers will have the option of providing telephone wiring inside their home or office.

'The new pricing method is similar to that used by electricians, plumbers and other service technicians for years," according to Art Willett, local manager. "Charges for telephone wiring work in the home or office will be based on the actual time our technician spends doing the work."

Willett said only those customers who move or need to alter their existing phone service-and require a South Central Bell technician to do the work-will be affected by the pricing change.

For residence customers, the installation charge will be $20 for the first 15-minute period, and $8.30 for each additional 15-minute period, or portion of a period. Business customers will be charged $30 for the first 15-minute period, and $9.50 for each additional 15-minute period, or portion of a period.

Children Will Be Conference Topic

Kentucky Department for Human Resources has received an award of federal funds to hold a statewide conference on children and youth. The award was announced last week by Dr. Grady Stumbo, secretary of the Department for Human Resources.

The conference has been scheduled for November 12-13 at the Lexington Center in Lexington.

A 17-member steering committee has been approved by Dr. Stumbo to plan and coordinate the activities of the conference. Louis Twyman, Louisville, was appointed chairman of the steering committee.

Other steering committee members include: Scotty Kenkel, Lexington; David Richart, Louisville; Nancy Rawlings, Lexington; Dr. Doane Fischer, Lexington; Larry Warren, Pineville; Burke Anderson, Lexington; Ben Feltes, Louisville; Ed Ellis, Patti Acquisto, Frankfort: Owensboro; the Rev. Ronald Young, Carrollton; John Clarke, Louisville; Barbara Miller, Louisville; Charles Kinney, Frankfort; Karen Hicks, Lexington; Jill Bohnert, Lexington, and Judge William Graham, Frankfort.

One of the major goals of the conference is to develop strategies to maintain and strengthen services to children and youth in the wake of recent federal budget cuts. The conference will bring together state government, private organizations, voluntary agencies, families and individuals to accomplish the goal.

For additional conference information, write Peggy Wallace, Bureau for Social Services, 275 East Main St., Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or call (502)

The charge for the initial time period is more than the additional time periods because the initial period includes costs of travel and associated work to process the customer's order. according to Willett. Both the initial and the additional periods include a charge for miscellaneous materials. 'Let me stress that these charges apply only when customers require work by an installation technician at their home or office to install inside wiring or jacks, or to connect or change out telephone sets," Willett said.

Willett said company studies showed the average time required for a Bell technician to install a single telephone set is 36 minutes. Under the new pricing arrangement, the charge for a 36-minute installation is $63.60, including charges for a jack and for connecting the line at the call-switching center. Under the old rate structure, this installation would have cost $69.50.

"Obviously some people will save with the new rates, and others will pay more," he said.

'The new structure places rates closer to the actual cost of installing a phone," he continued, "allows folks to pay only for the work actually being done at their home or business.'

"Customers who are moving or who wish to make changes in their phone service can save significantly by using the Bell PhoneCenter," he said. The PhoneCenter nearest you is listed in the front of the local directory.

Bell's Kentucky telephone customers, after October 1, can also provide their own inside wiring, according to Willett. After that date, builders and customers have the option of hiring an electrician or contractor to wire a home or one-line business for phone service. In the past, only South Central Bell was allowed to provide inside wiring for telephone service.

"Inside wiring provided either by a customer or an outside contractor must meet certain quality and workmanship standards," said Willett. "These standards are spelled out in electrical codes, and they are spelled out in a booklet available at the PhoneCenter Stores.'

Willett said the telephone company will be responsible for maintaining customer-provided wiring if it meets required standards. But if wiring is found to be below standard, a customer will be charged for any visits by company technicians to find service problems or correct the substandard con-

PUBLIC NOTICE TO OWNERS OF RENTAL HOUSING

The Floyd County Housing Authority is administering a Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program in Floyd County using funds provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Under this program, owners will rehabilitate rental units which are now substandard or have major building systems or components requiring repair or replacement. The cost of this work, which must total at least $1000 per unit, may be financed by a local lending institution, by the owner, or by any other source available to the owner. The agency does not make rehabilitation loans or grants, but will assist owners

After required rehabilitation work has been completed, the agency and the owner will execute a contract which establishes a rent for the unit(s) that will cover rehabilitation costs, meet monthly operating expenses, and allow a reasonable profit on the owner's investment. For a fifteen year period, the owner will rent the rehabilitated unit(s) to eligible lower income tenants, who will pay approximately 25 percent of their income toward the rent. the agency will pay the remainder of the rent directly to the owner. The initial occupant of a rehabilitated unit may be the owner's present eligible tenant. After rehabilitation the rent(including utilities) cannot exceed the

Blood Center Seeks Full Coverage Here

On Tuesday, September 29, the Central Kentucky Blood Center had a 'special appeal" for blood donors. The supply ran dangerously low after 38 bypass and open-heart surgeries were done the week before and 44 more heart operations were scheduled last week. This puts a severe strain on the banking facilities because each of these requires from 8 to 12 pints of

CKBC wishes to thank the many area citizens who responded to the need. Also, thanks are due WQHY and WPRT who immediately began broadcasting for donors

Central Kentucky Blood Center serves 45 counties and is under contract to supply blood to 38 hospitals in central and southeastern Kentucky. Their main objective is to provide a safe, continuous supply of blood. Normally, each day, 130 pints of blood must be collected to maintain this supply. Tuesday, 330 units were drawn in Lexington, Prestonsburg and

The aim of the donor station in Prestonsburg is to help Floyd county to become a "full-coverage" county soon. To do this we must get 1560 units of blood this year. That goal is based on the county's population and our past isage by residents in the three medical facilities here and others in Lexington. If 4% of our residents donated 1 pint this year, every man, woman and child would be assured of all blood needs

Two mobiles scheduled in Floyd county this month: Prestonsburg Community College Blood Drive, October 15, and McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital, October 23.

How To Land That Job

With graduation imminent, a large number of young people will be entering the job force. With the economy still shaky and unemployment still high, what's the best course to take for getting a job? The jobs most graduates want can be found with employment agencies.

Agencies vary-some offer full time work, some temporary, and some cater to specific industries. An examination of the classified section of your Sunday newspaper will reveal which agencies have the kind of job you want. Before you show up ready to start your career, consider some of the following advice, gleaned from the nation's top employment agencies.

First of all, how do you look? You should dress conservatively-suits for men, a dress or skirt and blouse combo for women. Avoid flashy jewelry. Avoid flashy anything. The workplace is not a disco. Be well groomed. Your fingernails, hair and the shine to your shoes all contribute to that important first impression. The minute you walk through the door, you're projecting what type of person you are-and what type of worker you'll make. Be friendly and positive. Don't enter with a negative attitude, even if you've been rejected at other interviews.

You should have a resume, but keep it short and to the point. Don't be afraid to claim responsibility for projects you've worked on-provided you can back it up in an interview or if they check references. Never write "see resume" on an application form. Agencies feel this indicates an individual who lacks cooperation

Brush up on your skills before you go. If you apply for a specific job and are told you lack certain skills, don't consider it an insult. If it looks as though those skills are going to be required for the type of job you want, get them.

Consider the agency a consulting service. They want you to get a job; they don't get paid if you don't. But don't think you have to take whatever jobs they offer. Go on as many actual interviews as possible, looking for the atmosphere you want to work in. Taking a job you hate helps neither you nor your employereventually you'll quit or be fired, and you'll be right back where you started.

Just how much time it will take for you to get a job depends on many things-your experience, training, and pay expectations. If you are pleasant, skilled and neat, and live in a large metropolitan area, you should get a job within a week. However, if you're looking for a very special job in a particular field, it could take much longer.

While looking for that "perfect job," keep in mind what's available in the market. Entry level jobs with larger corporations are usually a good start, but it depends on the company. Some companies like to promote within their structure. others don't.

The best way to know if the position has growth potential is to ask at the interview. Ask to see a job description of your duties. Often jobs advertised as "assistant to" are glorified secretarial jobs-at much lower pay. Ask about the requirements and timetable for promotion and pay raises. Ask what assistance is offered by the company for further training and schooling that will enable you to grow in the company. Asking questions isn't pushy, it demonstrates that you're inquisitive

While you're considering what questions to ask, remember that the interviewer will have plenty for you. Here's a list of those often asked:

and aware.

Hurrah For Haggling

When it involves wages and hours, it is called collective bargaining. When it involves foreign policy, it is called diplomatic negotiating. But when it involves you and some merchandise, it is called haggling and it can save you money.

The trick is to know when, where, what, and how to haggle. In the United States, avoid supermarkets, department stores, and chains. Fair play are medium-sized shops, chains with few stores, automobile showrooms, and real estate sales offices.

Abroad, haggling is expected - if not considered an art - in southern Europe, Africa, the Middle East, India, and the Far East. Prices are generally "fixed" in Great Britain, Scandinavia, and northern Europe.

Here are a few tips:

. Talk only to the person who has the authority to lower

· Bargain quietly and politely.

· Don't criticize the wares, because sales persons are usually proud of their merchandise. Don't make statements such as, "It's pretty shoddy, but I'll take it if the price is right."

· Put the blame for your not buying on someone else. You might say, "I'd buy it right away, but my wife would never let me pay that much." This gives you a psychological advantage.

. Suggest a lower price if you plan to purchase in quantity or if you have an item to trade-in.

. An opening gambit might be, "I'd like to do business with you because you are in my neighborhood and you have a good reputation. But the price is a real factor. Can you do better?" If the sales person says no, try another shop.

. Don't accept the first offer. After some practice, you'll develop a sixth sense for his final offer.

· Abroad, alter your technique according to the country. In Japan, appreciate the ware's beauty. In Arab countries, try friendly

Holiday Giving — The Personal Touch

Selecting gifts for those closest to you is sometimes the most difficult task of Christmas shopping. Here are some suggestions:

· Bind into a book letters from your spouse, grown child, or favorite relative. Include a title page and dedication.

· Enlarge a photograph of your family or home to poster size and give it to your parents.

· Present your husband or wife with an IOU for some project that he or she particularly wants done. (Include a target date for · Collect the recipes that your children enjoyed when they were young and bind them into a book. You might wish to include comments on recipes that evoke memories of fun times.

· Make a monthly recording on tape or cassette for an elderly relative who lives far away.

· Reupholster your father's favorite chair, or embroider your mother's initials on a blouse.

Computerized Cost Comparisons

Even the brainiest shopper might find him - or herself stumped when trying to calculate which brand is the best buy. The computer industry has come up with an inexpensive solution-hand-held, batteryoperated mini computers.

Models introduced this year at the Consumer Electronics Show in Chicago include wallet-sized calculators that add, subtract, divide, and multiply as well as figure percentages and square roots. The cost is less than $20.

More expensive versions (but still less than $50) can tell time, produce musical tones like a push-button phone, and perform advanced mathematical functions used by engineers and scientists.

Airs New Song Here

MICHAEL JOHNATHON

"It's the only thing like it to come out of eastern Kentucky," Michael Johnathon, songwriter and guitarist, said of his first album-entitled "The Blast"-which is currently being aired

Actually, the composer is out of upstate New York, though the album was recorded at a Whitesburg studio and the other band members-Jim Booth, bass, Doug Hutchens, banjo, Ray Sloan, violin, and Marty Glisson, piano-all list eastern Kentucky addresses.

The album's title song-which depicts the feelings of a survivor of a nuclear power plant explosion-is not a protest song, the author insists. Rather, he said this week, it puts a finger on the "social fear" generated by the proliferation of nuclear energy plants.

Given current publicity surrounding the Diablo Canyon atomic power plant near San Luis Obispo, in California, and recent memories of the Three Mile Island incident, the album's promoters feel it could not be more timely. It is being aired here over WQHY.

Health Board Hears State on 'District' Plan

Two state health department officials came before the Floyd County Board of Health Tuesday night to press their case for "regionalization"-the consolidation of county health departments into districts-a policy Frankfort would like to see implemented statewide and one already accepted by fiscal courts in 87 Kentucky counties but viewed with considerable suspicion by health officials

Whether the board might have changed its previous opposition to the state plan in view of the presentation by Larry McCarthy, acting director of the Division for Local Health, and Dr. Dick King, a sociologist with the department, is unclear. Lacking a quorum-the only members present were Charles Arnett, M.D., Orpha Meece, R.N., and C. E. Tackett, D.M.D.-the board was unable to act on the matter.

Moreover, Dr. Roger Akers, one of those who voiced strong opposition to the state plan at Tuesday's meeting, is no longer a member of the Floyd health

There were ready answers to some of the board's most urgent questions. No, health department employees here will not be fired if the county decides to join a district. Floyd county health taxes will not be spent in other counties. And this county's reserve fund will not be distributed throughout the district.

Regionalization, the state officials argued, is the only way for health departments to economize on scarce money and to bring public health services in all counties up to acceptable

Under the state proposal, each district health department would serve a minimum of 100,000 people. Health districts would generallly follow the same boundaries as the area development districts. Of the proposed fivecounty Big Sandy health district, only Johnson and Magoffin fiscal courts have so far indicated their willingness

A persistent area of concern here Tuesday was the factionalism that some believed would thwart any attempt to establish a health district-'like trying to mix the Hatfields and 'McCoys," Dr. Akers suggested-some conjuring up visions of the health departments in smaller counties "ganging up" on Floyd in important policy issues.

Since membership on the district health board will be in proportion to the county population, larger counties should have least to fear in this regard, McCarthy pointed out.

In any case—and this may well have been the bottom line-state funds, which presently account for about a fifth of the local health department budget, will not be extended indefinitely to counties which do not accept the state plan, he said.

Would Establish Support System For Handicapped

It's rush hour at Wendy's. How does a kid with a serious speech problem order a hamburger?

The doctor is way behind schedule; it will clearly be a long wait. How do you cope with your hyperactive child in the waiting room?

Your teenage child wants to date, but has 'he emotional responses of a sixyear-old. How have other parents of "exceptional children" handled the problem?

These are typical of the questions facing the families of handicapped children, for whom the most routine activities-opening a school locker, making a purchase at a store, having a tooth filled, or getting a haircut-can be a fearful ordeal.

And-according to two women who discussed the matter in Prestonsburg this week-they point to the need here of a "support group" of parents and others concerned about the special problems encountered by these children.

Carolyn Ford, Prestonsburg woman and mother of an autistic child, and Ina Rothberg, teacher of hearing-impaired children in the Floyd schools system, have decided to organize such a group, calling a meeting for that purpose on October 15, at 7 p.m., at the Floyd county library.

Boosters of Support Services for Exceptional Children-or B.O.S.S. for short-will aim at promoting better communication between the parents of handicapped children and teachers and other professionals with whom the children have to deal, the two women

They also hope the group will relieve school teachers of problems not related to education, and will provide a forum for parents to discuss their problems and hear how others have resolved

With the expansion of special education classes in Floyd schools in recent years-every grade school in the county now has a special ed ation class-there is a need for a chizens' group to assist the children in their outof-school needs, Mrs. Rothberg said.

For more information, call Mrs. Ford, 886-3024, or Mrs. Rothberg,

Paring Food Prices

No frills, or "box" supermarkets are one way to beat the high cost of food. One such store recently opened in New York City, several others are operating in the Midwest, and more are expected to open

You can purchase groceries for prices at least 10% below those offered at regular supermarkets. However, there is a limited assortment of goods available and there are no meats, frozen foods, or other perishables that require refrigeration.

One Way Stores in New York City offers about 450 items, most of them well-known popular brands. You can't do all your shopping in one of these stores, but what you can buy there should save you

Prices are reduced because overhead is low. There are no shelves: instead, cartons are opened stacked on skids. Paper bags must be purchased for three cents each unless you bring your own.

Besting Ma Bell

Tired of rising phone bills? Try owning your own telephone rather than renting one from the phone company. The phone that the Bell System "sells" you is just the decorative outer shell; you are still paying a monthly service charge for the inner workings of a phone you "buy" from the phone company.

Under new FCC regulations, you can now buy telephones from independent businesses. They are available in all shapes, sizes, and designs-and the savings can be considerable.

For example, if you pay a 50¢ service charge each month, you will pay the phone company $6 a year to rent your phone. But you can easily purchase a similar telephone for $30 with a 15-year, service-free guarantee. That averages out to only $2 a year.

There are basically three types of telephone equipment available. The first is termed "registered." This means that the company has submitted its equipment to the FCC for testing, assuring you that the workmanship is satisfactory and that the equipment will not disrupt the telephone network. Each device will have a label stating the registration number and the current needed to activate the ringer. Some telephone equipment was approved by the FCC, but not registered. This is called "grandfathered." But the deadline for legally installing such equipment has passed (July 1979).

The third category of equipment must be connected through protective couplers or black boxes.

Here are a few additional tips for buying telephones:

· If the store cannot tell you whether the telephone is registered, grandfathered, or requires couplers, check with your local telephone

· Try to purchase a telephone with a plug that matches your telephone jack. This will save you the cost of a connector or a telephone company service call.

· Check out the service policy. How long will you be provided with free service? Who pays shipping charges? What are the costs of repairs after the warranty expires?

· Consider buying an extension phone or keeping one rented telephone. This way, if your phone malfunctions, you can find out whether the problem is your phone or the network and avoid a costly service call.

 If you plan to buy a push-button-type phone, make sure that your local telephone company has ESS (electronic switching). Rotary dial telephones present no problems.

· Avoid equipment that must be wired in rather than plugged in. While you are allowed to plug in jacks or phones, it is illegal for you to wire in jacks, telephones, or telephone wiring.

Proclamation

I, Harold W. Cooley, Mayor of the City of Prestonsburg, Kentucky, do hereby proclaim Saturday, October 10, 1981, as Prestonsburg High School Blackcat Marching Band Day.

Signed this 5th day of October, 1981. HAROLD W. COOLEY Mayor

To the Voters of District Two:

We have about four weeks until the final election, to elect a Magistrate to represent ALL the people of this district. Do we want the same service the next four years that we have had for the past eight years? Go to the polls and vote for a man who will treat everybody the same. He will work ALL roads and bridges. The equipment will be worked eight hours a day.

In the Primary election we had several good candidates and the votes were split, so I don't believe the people got a choice in the majority of the votes in this district.

Go to the polls in November and "write in"

Legislative Report...

Retirement System Cutback Not A Cutback At All

Despite a recent announcement that the Brown administration intends to pare $9.5 million from the state Teachers' Retirement System budget, the pension fund won't be feeling any ill effects.

That's because the retirement system simply intends to surrender excess state appropriations that have accumulated in its fund, and the surplus should just about cover the announced cut.

Pat Miller, the agency's executive secretary, recently told the Interim Joint Committee on Appropriations and Revenue that the surplus had accumulated because the state had overpaid its required matching contributions to the fund.

The announcement of the surplus came as a surprise to committee members, who questioned Miller closely about the agency's finances. They questioned how such large surpluses could accumulate in these austere budgetary times.

Miller explained, however, that the state overpayment to the fund occurred because Education Department personnel were cut, teachers' salaries hadn't risen to expected levels and some classroom units hadn't been funded as planned. These factors led to an inflated estimate of the necessary state match, he said.
"Moonshine" for Motorists

Kentucky legislators have been told that by the end of 1981, the Bardstown Fuel Alcohol Co. will be in production at the Willett Distilling Co. in Nelson County. The subcommittee on energy production, marketing and utilization of the Interim Joint Committee on Energy recently visited the site of Kentucky's first alcohol-fuel plant.

During the 1980 General Assembly, lawmakers created tax incentives to help induce such alcohol-fuel development in the state. However, the subcommittee members didn't hold out much hope for future state aid to infant alcohol operations because of budgetary problems facing the Commonwealth.

Rates to Increase

A 38-percent increase in state-employee health-insurance premiums is forcing the state to look toward a "new direction" in such coverage, a legislative panel has been told.

Personnel and Management Secretary George Fisher told the budget review subcommittee on general government that the size of the recently announced rate increase by Blue Cross-Blue Shield had caught Brown administration officials by surprise. He said he and Brown were "extremely shocked by that increase."

Although a one-year contract has been signed with Blue Cross-Blue Shield to provide coverage for the coming year, the state plans to begin studying alternative means of providing health insurance for the 92,000 covered state employees, teachers and their families.

TO HELP CONSUMERS

At Kroger, we believe that consumers should be given information which will help them shop more wisely.

One of the most important informational aids you'll find in your supermarket is nutrient labeling. Kroger customers now find this new shopping aid on the labels of approximately 600 of our own brand products, as well as many national and regional brands. Canned fruits and vegetables, soups, salad dressing, bread, milk, cheese, cereals...and many other foods. There will be more.

How can you use this information to shop more wisely and feed your family better?

First, use nutrient labeling to compare brands. The lower-priced product (such as Kroger brands) which provides the same nutrients represents a better buy. Compare nutrition as well as price, and you'll benefit

Second, look at the nutritional information provided. Calorie count, grams of protein, carbohydrates and fat, as well as the amount of protein and seven essential vitamins and minerals contained in a serving. Become just as aware of the nutrients you are buying as you are of the flavor and the cost. Use this information to plan the meals you serve your family.

Nutrient labeling is designed to help you -- our shoppers. Use it. Read the label . . . and set a better table.

Warnings For Sunlamps

That sunlamp you've been using may not be so hot after all.

Last year, more than 7700 people found themselves in hospital emergency rooms for sunlamp-related injuries. The majority of them were suffering from skin burns and eye irritation.

If that's not enough to alert you to the potential dangers of tanning yourself at home, just remember, repeated exposure to ultraviolet radiation may cause premature aging and skin cancer.

In fact, the number of injuries resulting from sunlamp use has risen so quickly in the past few years that the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has stepped in and created consumer protection guidelines.

prevent a sunlamp bulb from being used in regular light sockets, · enough goggles to offer the maximum number of people who can use the lamp at one time proper The FDA also urges consumers to take careful note of all directions and warnings printed on sunlamp packaging and to take the necessary precautions to avoid over-exposure. At the same time, the agency has also directed manufacturers to label all sunlamps with the warning: "Danger, ultraviolet radiation. As with sunlight, overexposure can cause eye injury and sunburn; repeated exposure may cause premature aging of the skin and skin Labels will also direct consumers to contact physicians before they use the sunlamp if they are taking any medication or if they believe themselves to be especially sensitive to sunlight.

The FDA is also requiring manufacturers to state what constitutes a "safe" distance from the lamp, and to suggest tanning schedules.

These safety measures, do not apply to medically used products.

Similar governmental concerns about the risk of exposure to radiation has also prompted the FDA to look into the affects of radiation on pregnant women and their unborn children.

The agency fears that exposing a fetus to radiation may increase its chances later of getting leukemia or other childhood cancers.

The Equal Payment Plan.

A convenient way to budget for your electric bill.

Some household expenses are fairly steady throughout the year. But your electric bill varies from month to month because your electric usage fluctuates with the changing seasons. The bill is usually higher in the winter. It dips a little in the spring months, then, for most people, rises during the air conditioning season, before dropping again in the fall.

We can't do anything about the weather, but we can help you smooth out the ups and downs of your electric bill. And that's by offering you our Equal Payment Plan.

With the Equal Payment Plan, we bill you a fixed amount each month based on your average yearly usage. Your account is reviewed every six months to see that your budget payment is still as close as possible to your average use. At the end of the twelfth month you'll receive a settle-up bill or a credit. Many of our customers are already taking advantage of the Equal

Reagan Considers Naming Sturgill to Synfuel Post

President Reagan is considering nominating Kentucky Energy and Agriculture Secretary William B. Sturgill, former Prestonsburg man, for the board of directors of the Synthetic Fuels Corp., congressional sources confirmed last week.

Two directors remain to be named to the seven-member board of the fledgling corporation. Sturgill's appointment could be important for Kentucky because the board of directors will have final say over which syntheticfuels projects will get some $17.5 billion in government-backed loans and other assistance over the next four years. Additionally, the directors will specify what form the loans and other help will Companies backing four Kentucky projects-Western Petroleum Corp., W.R. Grace & Co., Rio Verde Energy Corp. and an Ashland Oil-Airco Energy Co. partnership - have applied to the corporation for assistance. They will be competing with 65 others for a share of the $17.5 billion.

In filling the two remaining seats, Reagan must name at least one Democrat or an independent to meet legal requirements.

In either case, in keeping with the administration's political philosophy, the nominee would be a conservative. Sturgill apparently fits the administration's requirements on that measure.

But sources who work closely with the corporation said that Sturgill's chances may be diminished for two

First, the administration apparently intends to name at least one westerner to fill one of the seats.

Reagan had selected seven appointees for the board but decided to name only five after westerners protested that at least one director should come from the West.

Beyond the regional considerations, Sturgill could be hampered by his close association with Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr., these sources said. Brown is seen as a critic of the Reagan administration, they said. Hence some Republicans will counsel against rewarding a Brown cabinet member with a choice post that could help shape the direction of synthetic fuels.

Directors do not work fulltime. They are paid $10,000 a year plus $300 for each board meeting they attend.

Sturgill, a former coal operator, also serves as chairman of both the State Racing Commission and the University of Kentucky board of trustees.

You And Your Car

Look Before You Jump

Dead car batteries are a common problem in the winter, and one that should be approached carefully. Car batteries contain a solution of sulfuric acid and water that, when activated, produces explosive gases which are easily ignited. Improper jump starting or carelessness with a battery can damage the vehicle's electric system and cause an explosion that may result in serious injury to you or whomever is near the battery at the time.

The first thing to do if your battery dies is to check the owner's manual for jump starting directions. Use only the directions for your car. Don't borrow someone else's manual. If you don't have your manual, or if there are no instructions, follow these steps to start your car:

· Do not jump a frozen battery. Before you start, check to see if the battery fluid is frozen.

. Keep all flames away from the battery. Don't smoke and don't use a match or lighter to check the fluid

. Be sure the booster battery and the dead battery are the same voltage. 12 volt batteries normally have six filler caps. Six volt batteries normally have three filler caps. Some of the modern 12 volt batteries have no filler caps.

· Turn off the ignition and all accessories in both cars.

· Place the gearshift or gear selector of each car in the park or neutral position and set the parking

· Make sure the cars do not touch each other.

· It is best to wear safety glasses if they are available, and to remove rings, metal watch bands or any other hand jewelry.

· Remove the vent caps from both batteries. If the battery liquid level is low, add water. If possible, cover the vent holes with a damp cloth. If the caps are of the safety vent type, replace the caps before attaching the jumper cables. After using the cloth, discard it. Be careful not to touch your eyes or skin until you have washed your hands thoroughly.

· Look at the booster cables and batteries to properly identify the cables and connection points. If the cables are tangled, untangle them. The battery terminals are colorcoded or marked with a "plus sign," "P," or "POS" for positive connections, and a "minus sign," "N," or "NEG" for negative connections. Some booster cables are similarly · Connect one end of the positive cable (usually covered in red) to the positive terminal of the booster battery, and the other end of the positive cable to the positive terminal of the dead battery.

· Connect one end of the negative booster cable (usually covered in black) to the negative battery terminal of the car with the good battery. Be sure the clamps do not touch the clamps of the other

· Connect the other end of the negative cable to the engine block of the car with the dead battery, or any other accessible metallic part (other than the carburetor or fan) attached to the engine block that is not chrome plated, heavily rusted or covered with grease. This connection should be made as far away as possible from the dead battery, so that if any sparking occurs it will be away from the combustible gases produced by the battery.

· Check to see that the cables are clear of fan blades, belts or other moving parts of the car, and be sure everyone is standing away from the · Start the car with the good battery. Wait a few minutes, then try to start the car with the dead

· If the car with the dead battery does not start after 30 seconds, stop trying and seek professional help.

· After the car starts (or if it doesn't start) remove the negative booster cable first, starting with the connection made to the car with the dead battery. Then remove the positive cable, starting with the connection made to the car with the dead battery.

FOR THE OLD Betsy Layne High School building (top), regularly inundated by flood waters since its construction in 1938, a chronic problem was keeping the water out. For the building at Stanville which will replace it (bottom), a more urgent problem is getting the water in.

Built high on a bluff overlooking U.S. 23, the new school's sprinkler system will be fed by a high-pressure pump. The pump, and a 12 X 14 ft. building to house it, will cost $55,770, architect Marvin Crider announced this week.

The new high school, construction of which is reported to be 70 percent complete, is scheduled to be open for the next school year.

Board Votes Pupils First Use of Gyms

Students will have prior right to use school gyms, according to a policy adopted by the Board of Education last

The policy came at the insistence of Board Member Ray "Shag" Campbell, who expressed concern at what he said was a common practice of leasing out gym facilities to "outside" civic, sports and church organizations before the needs of students had been provid-

In some instances, several grade schools are dependent on a single high school gym for practice and playing time and competition is keen for the available time, Campbell noted.

Superintendent E. P. Grigsby, Jr. said that, while it had not been formally adopted as policy, it has been generally understood by principals that gym facilities would be made available to non-school groups only after school events were scheduled.

Architect Marvin Crider reported that work on the new high school building at Stanville is running ahead of schedule and is 80 percent complete. The school is scheduled to open for the start of the next academic year.

In order to raise water pressure sufficiently for the sprinkler system to operate, however, a pumphouse will have to be installed, at an additional cost of $55,770, Crider said. By economizing in other areas, that cost could be reduced to $52,000-still $2000 over the $50,000 contingency fund built into the $3.4 million contract-he add-

Assistant Superintendent Ray Brackett presented the close-estimate working budget to the board. The annual budget, which has grown by about $1 million annually since he took office, stands this year at $14.8 million, Brackett noted.

In response to questions from the audience at last Wednesday's board meeting, Brackett said the Floyd schools administration allocates to each county school more in student fees than is required by the state.

While the state decrees that $9.50 be distributed per pupil (based on last year's average daily attendance) in student and library fees, the Floyd school system makes $11 available, he

Responsibility for seeing that the funds are received and used appropriately rests with the school principals, he said.

The board agreed to a proposal by B. F. Reed, of Drift, to establish a trust fund to provide scholarships to Mayo Vocational School for two McDowell High School students each year. The scholarship fund will honor Reed's son,

Perry Co. Sends Prisoners Here

Perry county is in financial trouble, and its jail has been closed.

Prisoners held in the jail have been sent to prisons in other counties-eight of them to the Floyd county jail. Two of the eight brought here last week-Gwinn Harlow and Alvin Cotton Hensley-are held on three murder counts, each. Another, James Blanton, is accused of murder, and a fourth, Ricky Bush, is charged with complicity

Two of the Perry county prisoners, Malcolm Jacobs and James Davidson, are accused of burglary. Danny Shepherd is in jail after having been given a five-year prison term for second degree assault, and Rodney Proffitt is charged with wanton endangerment and terroristic threatening.

When the prisoners underwent the routine search made by jail attendants here upon receiving new inmates, a screwdriver and a mirror were among the items confiscated. The prisoner from whom the items were taken expressed surprise.

He said such articles caused his former jailers at Hazard no concern.

TV Rate Boost, More Channels Get Mixed Vote

City council members received mixed signals Monday regarding public reaction to a proposed rate increase for Prestonsburg cable TV customers.

Cablentertainment, Inc., purchasers of the Flanery and Dingus system, recently proposed adding two channels for an increase of $2.25 per month, or three channels for a $3.25 increase.

City Manager David Evans reported to the council that response to a poll published in last week's Times suggested a solid majority of consumers favored the expansion of services, most opting for the two-channel increase. Several council members reported that their constituents were opposed to any rate increase, however.

City TV consumers were urged to make use of the poll-forms for the purpose will be available at City Hall until October 20-to register their views on the proposed increase.

Roberts Action Asks Opposition By Duff Ended

Kenneth Roberts, Democratic nominee for Magistrate in Magisterial District 2, filed suit in the Floyd circuit court Tuesday to prevent one of his defeated primary opponents. Birchell Duff, from running against him in the November election.

Duff as an Independent candidate for the office has solicited support by write-in votes

Roberts, who is seeking reelection, cites Duff's advertisement which appeared in The Floyd County Times last April 1 in which Duff stated that, if elected, he intended to reduce the salary of the office of magistrate.

Plaintiff claims this constituted violation of the Corrupt Practices Act and that any person guilty of such violation is ineligible to be a candidate in the general election.

The complaint also says that the salary of a magistrate is fixed by

12th Annual Red, White, Blue Day Plans Complete

The town of Martin expects Saturday to be the greatest day in its history when the 12th annual Red, White and Blue Day celebration is held there.

As early as last Sunday street decorations in anticipation of the event were in place. For weeks now citizens and civic, school and church leaders have been meeting with Mrs. Marcella Bailey, founder of the patriotic observance, to plan a varied program and the handling of traffic.

The "Big Parade" of gaily bedecked floats, marching bands festival queens and other groups is expected to be larger than usual. Seven bands, including three from Floyd county high schools-Allen-Central, McDowell and Wheelwright-will take part. Parade entries will be in four categories-grade schools, high schools, colleges and vocational schools and churches, businesses and others. Marching bands representing Morehead State University Military units will be in the line of march also.

The first event of the celebration will be the Miss Patriotic Pageant (contestants, ages 3 to 5) at the Martin Elementary School at 7 p.m. Friday.

The Miss Red, White and Blue pageant will be staged at 7 p.m. Saturday at Allen Central High School when Miss Red, White and Blue, Little Miss and Junior Miss will be named.

Saturday's main celebration will begin at 10 a.m. with the flag-raising and the cutting of what is billed as the world's largest Freedom Cake.

Mining Company Wins Dinwood Tipple Fight

If a coal company wants to operate a tipple in your neighborhood, there may be nothing you can do about it. That was the lesson for a number of Dinwood residents last week, following a judge's ruling that the Dinco Coal Sales tipple, shut down July 20 by a U.S. Office of Surface Mining (OSM) inspector, may resume operations there.

The fact that the tipple was operating within 300 feet of a number of homes without the waivers required by law, or that several residents with lung ailments said operation of the tipple made their condition worse, is beside the point, the judge ruled.

The point, according to Administrative Law Judge David Torbett, is that OSM does not have jurisdiction over tipples-including the tipple owned by George Newsom at Dinwood-that are not located at or near a mine.

The 12 railroad "gons" of coal processed by the Dinco tipple this year have been hauled from a mine which Newsome owns on Bruce Branch, in

Knott county, some 20 miles away. Judge Torbett remarked that "the law is ridiculous on this point' and intimated that his decision in the case did not reflect his personal opinion of its merits, but said the present state of the surface mining law left him with no option but to rule OSM out of order in shutting down the Dinco tipple. The judge's reasoning was vigorously contested by OSM attorney Charles Gault and legal argument between the two men over the meaning of a section of the surface mining law occupied much of the hearing held last Wednesday and Thursday in the district court-

According to an April, 1981 decision of the U.S. Interior Department's) Board of Surface Mining and Reclamation Appeals, Torbett noted, coal processing and loading facilities are subject to OSM's jurisdiction if they are conducted "at or near" the mine site. According to a more recent interpretation, a coal processing facility does not have to be at or near the mine to come under the law, Gault responded, adding that the newer interpretation was upheld by U.S. District Court Judge Thomas Flannery in a May, 1981 opinion and appears in the preamble to the permanent surface mining regulations authorized by former Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus.

Torbett was not persuaded by the argument.

The importance attached to the judge's ruling-which could allow many tipples to slip through the net of federal regulation-could perhaps be gauged by the fact that one of the attorneys arguing Dinco's case here was David C. Short. Until recently a regional director with OSM, this is believed to have been the first case in which he has squared off against his former employer.

David Rubinstein, an attorney representing Dinwood residents. Ivan and Mary Jane Debord, said he would appeal the judge's decision. Gault said that, in order to file an appeal on behalf of the government, he would have to get approval from OSM's regional oftice in Knoxville, Tenn., and from the Interior Department in Washington.

You and Your Car

Self-Service With A Smile

If you're able to use a self-service gasoline station in the present energy crunch, you have a right to be proud of the money you're saving—unless you're neglecting regular maintenance. Don't forget to:

• Check the oil every week, and the radiator coolant, power-steering fluid, brake fluid, and battery water every 2-3 weeks. Keep a rag or paper towels in the glove compartment for checking these levels. Remember also that if the radiator is too hot to rest your hand on, it's too hot to open.

• Test the air pressure in your tires (including the spare) at least once a month with pencil-type gauge (available for under $5). Check the tread wear also for worn-out edges (under-inflation), and worn-out centers (over-inflation).

• Inspect the heater hoses and the top and bottom radiator hoses for cracks, leaks, and bulges, particularly around the hose clamps. When they're cool, squeeze them—they should be flexible, not stiff. Replace them every two years.

• With the engine off, test the tension of the drive belts by pressing your thumb down on the middle of each. If they give more than a ½", have them tightened; if they're frayed or the undersides are deeply cracked, have them replaced.

The Price of Unleaded Gas

Did you ever wonder why is unleaded gasoline, with a lower octane level and no lead additive, more expensive than regular gasoline? The answer lies in the refining process: unleaded gasoline is more costly to produce

At the refinery, crude oil is broken down into various components called fractions. Naptha stocks, the raw material from which gasoline with high octane quality is eventually derived, are produced from the further refining of two of these fractions. At this point low-octane stocks are brought up to usable levels by two methods: either lead is added to the raw gasoline, or high temperatures and pressure are placed on the stocks to which considerable amounts of processing fuel and chemicals have also been added.

The first method, which has been used for over 50 years, produces regular gasoline. The second is a more expensive refinery method since lead cannot be used. Also, less gasoline is produced through this method, requiring more crude oil to yield the original volume of gasoline. This, coupled with costs of investing in separate facilities to produce, blend, distribute, and market unleaded gas, is responsible for the higher price.

Get a (Tax) Break From Car Expenses

Chances are that you're not taking advantage of a lot of tax deductions for personal auto expenses because you just aren't aware of them. But you may be missing important tax breaks that you're entitled to.

If you itemize on Schedule A of Form 1040 next tax season, you may deduct these expenses:

· State and municipal property taxes on your car.

• License plates and registration fees to the extent fees are based on the car's value.

Interest on money borrowed on the security of an automobile.

• Interest on gasoline credit card statements.

 Automobile losses from fire, accident, storm, or theft not compensated for by insurance or otherwise. The first $100 is not deductible, and damages to your car aren't deductible if it's a case of willful negligence on your part.

 State and municipal sales taxes on the purchase of automobiles, accessories, or replacement parts.

One-half of the amount of your car's insurance premiums attributable to medical coverage for you, your spouse, and dependents. Get a statement from your insurance company of the separate amount paid for this coverage.

 The cost of driving your car in connection with charitable or medical activities, such as driving to the doctor's office.

State and municipal gas taxes.

SHOULD THE CASKET BE OPEN OR CLOSED?

This question can only be answered by the family, never by the funeral director. There are several options available to the family. The casket can be open during the hours of visitation and closed during the final rites or it can remain open during the final rites. It can also remain closed at all times.

The customs of the family's faith and the influence of their clergyman's thoughts may help determine what is to be done.

Modern psychologists tell us viewing the deceased helps the family to accept the fact of death, especially when it may have been sudden or unexpected. If, however, the appearance of the deceased cannot be made acceptable, viewing may possibly be harmful.

The family's own wishes on the desired procedure will always be the guideline for the funeral director at our firm. We respect the family's wishes on all particulars of the funeral service as we try our very best to provide a truly personal and meanful service.

TOO MANY CRAPPIE

A dedicated crappie fisherman might not believe there can be too many of his favorite fish, but too many crappie is definitely the case at Grayson Lake in Eastern Kentucky, according to fisheries biologists with the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

The crappie population in this 1,500-acre impoundment has shot up from about 10 pounds per acre in 1975 to over 90 pounds per acre today. While this might seem like good news to fishermen, the bad news is that the majority of these crappie are around four inches long.

As long as their numbers remain as large as they are now, these fish won't grow any bigger. "Some of these small crappie are three-year-old fish," says Ted Crowell, assistant director of the fish and wildlife department's fisheries division. "They should be between nine and 12 inches long."

And the crappie are seriously affecting the bass population at Grayson. Young bass and crappie compete for the same food and in Grayson the crappie, because of their great numbers, are getting most of it. So even though bass spawn each year at Grayson, very few survive this competition to reach catchable size.

Obviously, this is a situation which needs some corrective action, so fisheries biologists have come up with a plan they hope will help restore some balance to the lake

The first step is a rapid drawdown of the lake. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers agreed to help by dropping the lake level as rapidly as possible, beginning right after the Labor Day weekend. The lake will be pulled down to about nine feet below its normal winter pool level and held there until next spring.

Biologists hope this rapid drawdown will "flush" many of the crappie out of the lake. But since this won't remove enough crappie, biologists will spend much of the winter netting crappie from the lake.

By next spring, regulations will be in effect which will (1) remove all creel and possession limits on crappie taken from Grayson and (2) put a 15-inch size limit on bass taken from the lake.

Next April or May, the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will stock 15,000 largemouth bass in Grayson. These fish will be around 10 inches long and will, biologists believe, soon develop a taste for four-inch crappie. The 15-inch size limit will protect them from fishermen through next summer, so they will have an entire season to help restore some kind of balance to the lake by eating crappie.

While they are hopeful about the results biologists aren't sure how effective their measures will be. "As far as we know, these kinds of control measures have never been applied together on a lake the size of Grayson," Crowell says. "We're going to have to take a close look at each step in the process and perhaps do a lot of improving.

It will be about this time next year before biologists assess the results of their efforts at Grayson. But if things to work out as planned, the fishing for all species—including crappie—should be a lot better in the future than it is now at Grayson.

Doctor Who Visited Patients To End Work Here This Week

(BY NELL VALENTINE)

A special day is being planned at Mountain Comprehensive Care Center's central office here Friday to give recognition to Dr. Jerzy Wysocki. He is the doctor who comes from Lexington to Eastern Kentucky several days a week to see patients, but after more than 10 years with MCCC this will be his last week.

Dr. Wysocki was born in Central Poland to nobility who owned a farm where white Arabian stallions were raised, he was graduated from the University of Vilno in 1939, with medical and military training. That was the year Hitler invaded Poland, he can tell many hair-raising stories of his years in World War II during which he was twice captured—and as many times escaped.

After his escape from northern Siberia, he served with the British Corps until the end of the war. Later, he moved to England where he decided to specialize in urology and psychiatry. In 1951, he came to the United States.

It was on a trip to Georgia with his wife that he first saw Kentucky and fell

Blast Rocks Area Near Paintsville; Source Uncertain

An explosion rocked an area north of Paintsville late Tuesday afternoon, severely damaging a number of houses and vehicles, but apparently caused no serious injuries.

The blast occurred about 5:30 p.m. beside U.S. 23 at Turner's Branch, about 2½ miles north of Paintsville, leveling a garage and partially or completely destroying eight houses and an unknown number of vehicles.

A 12-foot crater marked the center of the explosion.

Fires which broke out on both sides of U.S. 23 as a result of the blast were brought under control by Paintsville and rural Johnson county fire departments. A tractor trailer was also reported to be burning in the wake of the blast.

Cause of the explosion could not be confirmed Tuesday night. Early reports indicated, however, that a substantial amount of dynamite was stored—either in a building or a vehicle—at the blast center.

Eight persons were reportedly hospitalized as a result of the incident.
All but three were later released, it was said, and none of the others was thought to be in serious condition.

OUTDOOR CAMERA WEEKEND SET

in love with it. Because of the horses around, it was just like Poland.

Dr. Wysocki moved to Kentucky in 1961, and five years later became staff psychiatrist at Eastern State Hospital. In the original demonstration grant from ESH, he became committed to moving patients out of the institution, and into the community, and providing follow-up-care.

Mountain Comprehensive Care originated in 1967, and according to Thurston Taylor, mental health program director, "He has probably touched the life of every one of Floyd county's patients who have been hospitalized...they have a genuine appreciation of him." And many of the patients know Mrs. Wysocki who currently drives him from Lexington to this county to see 50 to 60 patients. A meaningful effort was made in the past to make home visits to patients who were not active participants in other forms of treatment.

Friday will be special for Dr. Wysocki as patients from Floyd, staff members from all five counties, and anyone in the community who wishes to will have a chance to show their appreciation for "their doctor," complete with a cake, gifts and some tears of affection.

BIRTHDAY DINNER

The family of Harold Layne surprised him with a birthday dinner Sunday at his home. Enjoying the occasion with him were his wife, Virginia, his daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Morrison and Jenny, sons David Keith Layne and Mr. and Mrs. Danny Layne, Crystal and Scott. Later in the evening, ice cream and cake was served while the party watched the football.

Others Are Guilty, Too

Reporting plans of the Kentucky State Police to patrol voting precincts in some counties on election day next month in an effort to control possible fraud and violence, daily newspapers appear careful to report that the most flagrant examples of vote-buying are to be found in Eastern Kentucky

The Times has no intention of defending the record of this section on that score; it is shameful, But it should be noted for the record that the buying and selling of votes is not restricted to county or regional lines.

The same daily newspaper reports that listed this part of the state as the chief offender listed the counties from which complaints of trafficking in the right of every citizen to exercise his or her ballot. And—lo and behold!—among these counties were Breckinridge, Hart, Shelby, Ohio and Lewis, and of these counties which also went astray only Lewis could be said to be anywhere near "benighted" Eastern Kentucky.

Floyd county was not included in the list. It should have been. Votes were bought in this county, too. Plenty of them. Votes were bought and sold in every county of the state, for that matter, if there was an election of any consequence.

We are pleased to learn that some preventive action is planned by the Kentucky State Police. At the same time we are naive enough to hope that the day will come when punitive action against both the buyers of votes and the sellers will be taken in the courts to make unprofitable the marketing of voting rights, for all concerned with no exceptions made.

nounced its intention of applying for a state permit to operate the tipple, a move which may trigger another round of hearings

While Kentucky's surface mining law has yet to take final form, at this stage it does not contain any language suggesting that only those tipples at or near a mine would be regulated. However, some observers doubt whether state mining officials would seriously assert jurisdiction over tipples deemed outside the jurisdiction of the federal mining agency

Among those testifying at last week's hearing. Mary Jane Debord said she is allergic to coal dust and suffers from headaches and dizziness when the dust is thick. Her husband has respiratory problems that are worse when the tipple is operating, she said. The Debords live 290 feet from the tipple

Doug Moore, whose house is 110 feet from the tipple, said noise from the operation makes it hard for him to sleep, and his mother has difficulty breathing because of the dust. McIntire Risner said that diesel fumes from trucks being weighed a mere 35 feet from his house make it impossible for him to use his front porch.

Dr. Ellen Joyce testified that noise and dust from the tipple would aggravate respiratory illnesses, allergies

On the other side, Hershel Hale, a former foreman at the tipple, said he never saw dust spewing from the site, and that no resident ever complained to him about it.

In any event, the inclusion of the 300-feet provision in the law indicated that Congress has already decreed that tipples within 300 feet of occupied dwellings are health hazards, Torbett

In another ruling, the judge held that Dinco did not have pre-existing rights to operate the tipple at the time the federal surface mining law took effect in 1977. The company had sought to show there had been a tipple on the site continuously for about 45 years.

OSM attorney Gault contended the site was vacant of everything but a railroad siding between 1974 and 1977 and that the present tipple was not built until the spring of 1979.

Area School Boards Hold Regional Meeting

John Stumbo was re-elected 1982 chairman of the Eastern Kentucky (South) Region of the Kentucky School Boards Association (KSBA). Stumbo, chairman of the Floyd County Board of Education, will also serve on the KSBA Board of Directors, the governing body of that statewide service organization. The annual meeting, held at Jenny Wiley State Park, was attended by approximately 40 school board members, superintendents, and other administrative personnel from the sevendistrict region. Also in attendance were local legislators and KSBA officers and staff. Topics of discussion at the meeting included an overview of KSBA programs, a review of the impact of recent federal and state budget cuts, the 1982 KSBA legislative program, liability insurance, and state and national conventions. Ray Campbell, a member of the Floyd County Board of Education, was re-elected vice chairman of the Eastern Kentucky (South) Region, and E. P. Grigsby, Jr., Superintendent of Floyd County Schools, was reinstalled as secretary for the region.

The KSBA Eastern Kentucky (South) Region is composed of Floyd, Johnson, Magoffin, Martin, and Pike school districts and the independent school districts of Paintsville and Pikeville.

What Is Yellow, Black,

And Now Red All Over? People in the Big Sandy area will see red when they thumb through the Yellow Pages in the new Big Sandy telephone directory scheduled for mailing October 22, according to Art Willett, manager for South Central

"For the first time ever, the directory for Big Sandy will use red ink in the Yellow Pages," Willett said. "The use of the second color will benefit both our advertisers and customers.

Willett said the red ink will enhance Yellow Pages advertisers' ads by providing more "impact" and creating more attention. Two-color ads-with red and the traditional black ink-"are naturally more expensive than onecolor ads for our advertisers who choose to use them," Willett said.

For callers who use the Yellow Pages, the use of red makes ads more readable, since basic information-firm name, telephone number and address-usually highlighted in red, according to Willett.

NESTLED AMONG HOUSES in the community of Dinwood, just south of Martin, a coal tipple operated by Dinco Coal Sales Inc. won the right to resume operations last week, an administrative law judge ruling that the U.S. federal Office of Surface Mining, which shut the plant down in July, does not have jurisdiction over the tipple.

An OSM inspector had cited Dinco for operating the tipple within 300 feet of several residences without getting the waivers required by law. Several area residents have long complained of noise, dust and diesel fumes associated with the plant.

Disappointed With Board

It was disappointing to me and to others who attended the Board of Education's recent hearing on next year's tax rate, and the ensuing Board meeting, that the Board elected not to set the maximum allowable rate of approximately 23c per $100. Instead, the Board felt satisfied to set the rate at 18.3. This is actually a slight decrease from last year's rate of 18.4. Because of increases in assessments and new growth, it will produce 4% more revenue than last year, a total of $655,694

Had the Board set the maximum rate, it would have been able to raise an additional $190,000. The tax burden on the individual property owner would have been small. The owner of property assessed at $50,000, would only have had to pay an additional $25 in taxes.

What could have been achieved with an additional $190,000, when the total school budget is over $14 million this year? Among other things, the Board could have alleviated the district wide problem caused by Governor Brown's reduction of fee money from $15 to $5 per student; several school buses could have been purchased and drivers paid to alleviate overcrowded buses; and the Board could have rehired one or more of the school nurses, of which this district now has none; or the Board could have done many other things.

We are told the district is now in the black, and perhaps the Board will do some or all of these things on its own with its surplus funds, but it is understandable that some reserves are needed. That is why it is disappointing to see the Board fail to take advantage of this available opportunity to increase its funding.

The only reason given for the Board's failure to set the maximum rate was its fear that voters would petition to revoke the increase and that the Board would have to bear the expense of a special election.

Obviously, there is a limit on the burdens of taxes on property. But it is clear that property taxes are needlessly low in our area. In Fayette county the school district tax rate is 40c per $100-in ours, it is 18c, and much of our property is still undervalued.

Certainly changes are due in taxing property more equitably. It is time to restore the tax on coal under the ground, so that the surface owner does not have to bear the entire burden. The citizenry must come forward and assist the PVA's in updating assessments and in reporting new construction so that the burden is shared equally. Changes need to be made in House Bill 44 to make it easier to obtain reasonable increases in property tax revenues at the local level when they are justified to the voters. Perhaps some severance tax funds need to be allocated specifically for education. These are things for all citizens to work

In the meantime, however, it is hard to understand why the Board would not risk this permissible step of maximizing its property tax revenues. Hopefully, the property owners of Floyd county will let the Board members know that they are willing to accept nominal increases in taxation in order to help provide a quality education for our children

Your Help Needed

The American Cancer Society has a new program this year to educate the citizens of Floyd county on the warning signals of cancer.

Our new program, P-A-C-E (Priority Activities in Cancer Education), has set a goal of reaching 1,666 adults and 4,996 youths with films and qualified speakers this year

In the adult group we need clubs, organizations, work places, homeneighborhood (this includes churches) and health agencies. The young people must be reached through schools.

I cannot stress the importance of early detection of cancer, except to say what it has done for me, as a recovering cancer patient myself. Because of early detection of the warning signals (which I recognized), I was able to get surgery in the early stages, resulting in two years (as of now) of complete recovery without chemotherapy. radiation or any of the unpleasant treatments following more advanced

If anyone in the above-mentioned categories is interested in helping us to reach our goal of presenting a 15-minute film with speaker, we are interested in hearing from you, to set up a date with your club, work place, public housing, PTA, church, school, nursing homes or health agency-any place in Floyd county

These films are very educational. Our speakers are professionals. Education for early detection of cancer could save a life-YOURS and these are free to the public. How can you turn down this opportunity'

To schedule a program, please contact me. Let's go over the top with our P-A-C-E goal and be proud of our county. Our total goal is 6,662 people. We need your help!

'More Money Than Brains

I want to commend the editor for his excellent article informing his readers of the excessively high cost of the juvenile detention center and the ridiculous plan of the Department for Human Resources for expansion of that center. (Floyd Co. Times, Sept. 2).

The editor admits he cannot reconcile these plans with plain practicality. Who, with an ounce of common sense, can? With the cuts in education and more than 30 first-graders in most Floyd county classrooms with one teacher, how can anyone have the brass to suggest one-on-one care for juveniles'

Statistics prove that most juveniles are extremely poor readers and underachievers. Smaller classroom groups would go a long way toward eliminating this situation. Why not spend more money in the first three grades, cutting each teacher's class load to 15-18 children so that all children could have the individual attention they need to master the basic reading skills? As Poor Richard so wisely said, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

I am convinced that plush surroundings and an additional $200,000. in the detention center annual budget for more employees will do nothing to solve the juvenile problem and very well may, as Mr. Allen suggests, en-

Most of People Polled Opposed Reagan Cutbacks

Replies to a questionnaire sent to his constituents in the 27-county Seventh district last June by Congressman Carl D. Perkins indicate that President Reagan's proposals to cut deeply into many programs was not popular at that time, the Congressman reports.

The father and son had driven from Prestonsburg on their way to Nashville, Tenn. during the night and he pulled off highway I-65, in the vicinity of White House, in northern Tennessee. After the younger man had told his father he thought someone was following them. Young Leslie left the car and did not respond to his father's repeated calls later. Memoriam

In loving memory of my wife and our mother, Josephine Wright, who passed away Oct. 11, 1980.

One sad and lonely year has passed Since the day you went away. Our lives are oh, so lonely. For we miss you more each day. Some may think we have forgotten you And sometimes may see us smile, But they will never know the heart-

That we live with all the while. Our home is so lonely here without you. Things can never be the same If we could only hear your voice once

It would ease the hurt and pain. If the world was ours to give, We would give it all and more Just to see the face we loved so much Come smiling through the door. Oh, you suffered much in silence And of death you lost the fear When your sweet voice gently whispered.

'Are all the children here?" Yes, you knew they all were with you Holding on to Daddy's hand Showing just how much they loved you As you viewed that heavenly land. Now we wander by the graveside And sometimes we seem to hear As you whisper to us

I'm at rest, so have no fear. We will always have your memories Deep within our hearts will keep Until we meet you in that city Where no one will ever weep. When our burdens get so heavy Only prayer helps stand the test But we know that Jesus loved you more And you're safe with him at rest Here the circle has been broken It was so sad for us to part But God has you in his keeping And we have you in our hearts. We are sure you're very happy In that glorious land so fair And you're waiting for your loved ones Where we'll meet with no more cares. Our home seems so empty since you left us,

And here sits your vacant chair, But within our hearts you're present, And God will wipe away all tears. SADLY MISSED BY HUSBAND AND FAMILY OF EDGAR T. WRIGHT, JR.

Did you know that of a total of twenty-six amendments to our Constitution, three are directly concerned with insuring the right of citizens to vote? This is evidence that the Constitution is a working basis for government-not just a static document. The Daughters of the American Revolution urge you to celebrate Constitution Week, September 17th through 23rd, by resolving to be a citizen who votes responsibly. Read your Constitution.

The "Molly Maguires," a secret society of Irish miners in the anthracite fields, first came to public attention in 1862. The "Mollies" were charged with acts of terrorism against mine bosses and went out of existence in 1876 when 14 of their leaders were imprisoned and 10 were executed, according to a publication of the U.S. Department of Labor.

Art Exhibition In Last Days

Eagle setting down is one of several large canvasses in the exhibition of Elliottsville painter Ken Ratcliff's works, which finishes at the Floyd county library on Saturday.

Ratcliff is the son of Buddy and Mona Ratcliff, of Martin, and has an MA in art from Morehead State University.

Kentucky Loses Ground In Average Teacher Pay

Kentucky's average salary for classroom teachers last year fell shorter of reaching the average for the seven bordering states than it did the previous year.

The difference between the Kentucky figure of $15,753 and the bordering states' average of $16,198 (an average of their seven estimated averages) is $445. For the previous year the difference was $329.

The difference may change when final figures are received for average salaries in the seven states.

Reaching or exceeding the average salary of classroom teachers in the seven bordering states has been a longsought goal of the Kentucky Education Association (KEA), which publishes the annual research bulletin.

In expenditure per pupil in average daily attendance Kentucky also is falling farther behind the average for surrounding states. For Kentucky the 1980-81 estimate is $1996, compared with a seven-state average of $2149. The difference is $153, nearly three times as much as the previous year's difference of $55.

For 1980-81 Kentucky ranked 36th among the 50 states in per-pupil spending, down from 32nd place the previous year. In average teacher salary Kentucky ranked 28th, the same rank as the previous year.

The per-pupil amounts come from state, local, and federal funds.

Estimated national averages in 1980-81 were $17,264 for average salary of classroom teachers and $2445 for per-pupil spending.

SMITH IS NAMED SAFETY DIRECTOR

Kenzie Jones, president of Island Creek Division of Island Creek Coal Co., annonced that Carl Smith, Jr. has been hired as director of safety. Smith was previously employed by Coal Arbed as safety director. He was also employed with National Steel as safety trainer, inspector and supervisor; and was with Eastern Associated Coal. He and his wife, Patsy, and children, Bryan and Neil, reside at Paintsville, Kentucky previously ranked second in the nation (after Hawaii) in percent of revenue-not amount, but percent-its public schools receive from the state level. But for 1980-81 Kentucky ranked fourth in that category-after Hawaii, California, and Washington. The Kentucky figure was 70.46%, up from 69.69%.

Only 17.86% of Kentucky's revenue for elementary and secondary schools comes from local funds, ranking Kentucky 45th in the nation. Kentucky received 11.68% of its public-school revenue from the federal level, which put the state in 15th place.

Nationally, states put in 49.67%, local governments 41.37%, and the federal government 8.96%.

This is in regards to an article in your paper about 2 weeks ago about Jailer Lawrence Hale. Mr. Hale is probably a decent person, but he's not a saint. As a jailer, he leaves a lot to be desired. If he is the inmates' best friend, then they don't need any enemies. He's there to do his job, fairly well, and at the least expense possible.

Let's look at conditions of the jail. It's alive with cockroaches; about 3 of the sewer lines are stopped up, it stinks to high heaven; most of the food consists of carbohydrates, and our bodies cannot live on carbohydrates alone. Most of the carbohydrates they get to eat are plain macaroni with tomato cauce or cheese. Some of the time they get vegetable soup plain, which is a little more healthier for our bodies, fruit, canned apples or pears,. Their meals consist most of the time of macaroni with tomato sauce, canned apples and a small cake, the small cakes you buy 10 for 89c, and believe me they're small. This is what's served most of the time at 4 p.m., and they're not served anything else till 8 a.m. Where's the proteins we need for our bodies which come from meat products? Where's the calcium and vitamins from the dairy products? Believe me, plain cheese that's served on macaroni, about twice a week is not enough. You can survive on this diet barely, if you can force yourself to eat it. But your health will not be at it's best, that's for sure.

What about a Federal prisoner that was locked up for 30 days without a shower, or change of clothes? I personally washed this inmates' clothes last week. I washed them three times and they still smelled, where he had to wear them so long. What about medical treatment for inmates?

There's one inmate with a medical problem. He's losing the use of his left arm and even with a doctor's order, Lawrence Hale and Judge Conley refuse to do anything about the problem. The inmate's sentence is for a year; his health and the use of his arm is for a life time. Most people treat their dogs better than this.

The inmate that has the medical problem has the injury in the muscle, which will deteriorate. waste away. There's no repair for muscles after they've wasted away. If you're interested, ask your doctor or look at a stroke patient.

Also not all of the inmates are there for stealing or being dishonest; not all of the inmates deserve to be there, and some of them do, but they're still human beings, and there's some that's out walking the streets, that need to be inmates. For example, you can kill two people, pull two years and you're free. A lot of the inmates that are in our jail now, their crime is nowhere as great as that, and they're pulling a lot more time. So where is our sense of justice?

"CHARGE IT"

Collecting Taxes: Questions Answered

Q. I thought I had enough taxes withheld from my pay, and now I've received a notice from the IRS saying I owe more. How can that be?

A. There may be several reasons. You may not have had enough tax withheld from each paycheck, or perhaps an error was made in the preparation of your tax return. If you are self-employed you may have missed making the required quarterly estimated tax payments, or if you are a business taxpayer, you may not have made your regular deposits of employment taxes.

Q. The IRS says I owe more tax, but I don't agree. What can I do?

A. If you think that the bill is wrong, the best source is to notify the IRS immediately-in writing, by telephone, or in a personal visit to a local IRS office. Be sure to have any records which support your claim, such as cancelled checks or tax returns, available for the IRS to review.

Q. Do I have to pay the entire amount of delinquent tax immediately?

A. If possible. The employee handling your collection case will review financial information which you provide to the IRS and determine whether the full amount can be paid at once, or if you qualify for an installment payment plan.

Q. What if I don't pay the IRS after they notify me that I owe delinquent taxes?

A. When an individual owes more tax, a bill is sent with payment due within 10 days. In practice, several notices and, in some cases, telephone calls are made to a delinquent taxpayer before any further action is taken. If a taxpayer neglects or refuses to pay taxes or to make satisfactory arrangements for payment, a levy may be issued against the taxpayer's salary, wages, bank accounts, or commissions, for example. During the levy process, if the tax bill is paid in full or an acceptable installment agreement is reached, ordinarily the levy will be released.

Q. What rights do I have during the collection proceedings?

A. You, as a taxpayer, have several basic rights during all collectionrelated activities. They include representation, the transfer of a tax case to another geographical area, receipts for cash payments and contractual agreements, confidentiality of tax matters, and the elimination of a penalty with reasonable cause.

Q. Where can I get more detailed information about the collection pro-

A. More information is available in IRS Publication 586A, "The Collection Process (Income Tax Accounts)", and Publication 594, "The Collection Process (Employment Tax Accounts)" or Kentucky tax-payers who want to order either of these publications or want to ask questions about the Collection Process may call IRS at 584-1361 in Louisville, 255-2333 in Lexington, 628-0055 in Covington or toll-free 1-800-428-9100 elsewhere in Kentucky. The publication may also be picked up at most local IRS offices.

KET Airs Special on Nazi War Criminals

Almost four decades after the Holocaust in which millions lost their lives, the search continues for those responsible for the systematic murder of innocent people. A public television documentary, "The Hunter and the Hunted," reports the results of the worldwide search for these Nazi war criminals Wednesday, October 21 at 9 p.m. on KET.

Jose Ferrer narrates the hour-long special, which was produced by Phonic Films of Australia. Investigative reporter Bill Bemister, who conceived, wrote, and reported the documentary. traveled to South America, Austria, West Germany, Israel, and France to film this story.

The film features interviews with Simon Wiesenthal, the world's foremost hunter of Nazi criminals, and Beate Klarsfeld, a German non-Jew who has dedicated her life to bringing these criminals to justice. Wiesenthal and Klarsfeld work for the Jewish Documentation Center, an organization which assembles evidence against Nazis for the purpose of bringing them to trial. During the past 34 years, the center-under the direction of Wiesenthal-brought nearly 1,000 Nazis to

Former SS officers now being hunted for their roles in the Holocaust include Dr. Josef Mengele, "the Angel of Death"; Walter Rauff, alleged murderer of 250,000 people; and Klaus Barbie, "the Butcher of Lyon."

In the feature, Bemister tracks down and confronts Rauff, who allegedly devised and operated the mobile slaughterhouses in which the trucks' exhaust fumes were funneled back into

Counselor Suggests Communication Tips

It is generally agreed that open lines of communication are basic to a solid marriage. It is not generally agreed on how you go about maintaining them. Fallen lines, busy signals and noanswers are common problems. How do couples best get through to each

Dr. Laura J. Singer has been a practicing psychotherapist specializing in marital consultation for more than 20 years. In that time she's developed a repertoire of communication tips, and she shares them in the November issue of Families, a Reader's Digest publica-

Start a dialogue without launching an attack. If you're really steaming, wait until you cool down. Use whatever words are comfortable for you and inviting for your partner. Such as, "I know this isn't a problem for you, but it really is for me. If we could talk about it together, it might help me a lot.'

Help a reticent person tell you how he or she feels. It's often just a matter of saying, "I think if I were you, I'd be (or depressed, or heartbroken).'

Work on "feedback." This is a technique of repeating what you've just heard-or, in some cases, what you think you've heard. Go over it with your partner until both of you are clear about how you feel. Even the simplest message can be misread and inadvertantly hurtful.

"I-message" language takes the sting out of criticism. Instead of 'You're always criticizing me," try "I feel as if I never please you.'

Finally, Dr. Singer suggests, deal with problems when they come up. "What's bothering one spouse may not even have occurred to the other as a problem," she writes. "We all have a tendency to imagine that if someone really loves us and is close to us, he must know how we feel. But of course this isn't necessarily so.'

Drift Church Plans Silver Anniversary

The Drift Presbyterian Church will celebrate its 25th anniversary as an organized congregation, Sunday, November 22. The congregation, organized in 1956, met previously in the Drift school. It was a daughter church of the First Presbyterian Church in Prestonsburg, and was begun as an outreach of the Presbyterian Church in the Left Beaver section of the county.

Plans for the silver anniversary include music by the Pikeville College Choir, a harvest dinner, and a special service of Thanksgiving. For many years, Pikeville College professors served the church at Drift, and the college has always been one of the special benevolent interests of the church.

The congregation invites all members and friends to attend the anniversary activities, especially those who are no longer residents in the area. It is endeavoring to contact all charter members who participated in the founding of the church. Any one interested may contact the clerk of the session, James Reed, at Drift, or the pastor, the Rev. Timothy Jessen, at 22 Bevins Street, Prestonsburg.

Corps, Forest Service Make Land Transfers

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Forest Service have signed a joint agreement whereby the Forest Service will assume management of federal lands around North Fork of Pound Lake at Pound, Virginia, next year.

The Forest Service, in turn, will transfer a 764-acre parcel of land to the Corps' Huntington District at the nearby John W. Flannagan Dam and Reservoir project.

The transfer of lands better meets the land management objectives of both federal agencies. The agreement is effective next October.

The Corps, faced with current and future manpower and budget reductions, already has abolished two fulltime positions in face of the pending ac-

In turning over 5,087 acres of land at North Fork of Pound Lake to the Forest Service, the Corps will retain the dam and the land necessary to operate the structure as a unit in its Ohio River Basin flood control system.

KSP To Patrol Voting Places

Kentucky State Police will patrol some polling places during November's general election to try to stem voting irregularities.

Justice Secretary Neil Welch and State Police Commissioner Marion Campbell agreed to the unprecedented action after state police investigated 183 charges of voting irregularities in 14 counties after last May's primary elections, according to Lt. Col. William Lewis, director of field operations for state police.

Lewis said that this is the first time state police have decided to patrol election grounds.

"In the past, if we had done that kind of thing, it might have been alleged that we were involved in politics," he said

"By reviewing these cases we're involved in now, however, we see a real need to make it safe for people to have access to the polls without being intimidated, harassed or molested by drunks."

Lewis acknowledged that the surveillance also might reduce charges of vote-buying or vote-selling near polling places.

Gene Peter, deputy secretary of the Justice Department, confirmed the new policy, but said that it is still in the planning stages.

"There's no plan of having state police at each poll because there's not enough manpower for it and no need for it," Peter said. "They'll just be in areas of high complaints."

The biggest number of complaints in May came from Bath county, according to Lewis, followed by Magoffin, Owsley, Whitley, Breckinridge, Hart, Clay, Knott, Letcher, Lawrence, McCracken, Ohio, Rockcastle and Shelby.

Peter emphasized that the patrols do not mean state police will be the primary source for filing election com-

In the past, complaints have been filed with each county's three-member election board, he said.

"We don't intend to intervene in that process in any way, shape or form," Peter said. FALL FESTIVAL

A Wine Lover's Holiday

While a seminar may not be your idea of a summer vacation, what if that seminar consisted of sipping German wine and touring that country's vineyards and wine cellars?

Both introductory and advanced curriculums of just that are offered by the German Wine Academy in Kloster Eberbach. In the six years of their existence, the seminars have graduated more than 1,000 people, almost half of whom were Americans.

The courses are in English and last for six days. Wine tastings are a part of each day's agenda with some 180 different wines available to the "students." There will also be field trips to seven of Germany's wine producing regions.

The cost of the beginners course is about $595. In addition to the seminar activities, the price includes lodging, meals and local transportation. The first seminar begins May 4. Four others are slated between then and late September. Graduates can enroll in the advanced section, which costs $30 more and is scheduled to meet Oct. 12-18.

Information is available from the German Wine Information Bureau, 99 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10016 (send a self-addressed, stamped envelope).

In Search of Stripers

From the beaches of Cape Cod to the shadow of the Golden Gate bridge, the surf caster strikes a solitary figure, wading in the tide at all hours of the night dreaming of the big bass.

It is an art of being in the right place at the right time. The spring or late fall are best if you want to avoid crowded beaches. And, though the reason is unclear, night fishing usually produces the biggest yields.

Along the East Coast, bluefish and striped bass are the primary targets of surf casters. Among the best locations in the northeast are Cape Cod and Martha's Vineyard in Massachusetts; the Narragansett Bay islands in Rhode Island; Sandy Hook and Island Beach State Park in New Jersey and Montauk Point on Long Island.

Striped bass and bluefish are available all along the southeastern coast. Particularly noteworthy are bluefish runs along the Delaware Bay coast in the early fall and the appearance of spotted sea trout along the Georgia border in late fall. Florida is a year-round haven for the surf caster, and the Louisiana Gulf Coast offers a variety of fish including spotted sea trout, channel bass, Spanish mackerel, bluefish and tarpon. There are no bluefish on the West Coast; however, legend tells of the relocation of stripers from New Jersey to the San Francisco Bay, and sea bass and sea perch are common. Top spots include Point Bonito, Point San Pedro, Half Moon Beach, Bakers Beach, Mussel Rock and Salada Beach.

The beginner should equip his tackle box with a collection of hooks, sinkers, leaders, plugs and jigs. A nine-foot spinning rod is needed with a reel sufficient to handle a 250-yard, 20-pound test line. Different baits are used in different areas: eels, squid, mackerel, alewives and sandworms on the eastern seaboard; kelp worms, clams, crabs and herring on the West Coast. The initial outlay for equipment should run about $150.

Experienced surf casters will tell of the idiosyncracies of the fish in a given locale. The advice of local fishermen is, therefore, much sought after in choosing the types of plugs, sinkers and baits to be used, as well as the fishermen's strategic approach to the surf.

> Rhinestones were first made in Germany and are named for the River Rhine. They're artificial stones.

Refund Policies

Attorney General Steve Beshear says Kentuckians should shop carefully and be aware of refund and exchange policies before making any

According to Beshear, "There is no Kentucky law that requires a store to refund or exchange merchandise, even if the merchandise has not been opened or used.

If the established store policy is not to allow any refunds or exchange, there is little a consumer can do to force a business to refund the money or exchange the item. Most reputable stores, however, are reasonable about taking things back for good reasons.

'Smart consumers ask about the store policy regarding exchanges or refunds before making a purchase," Beshear notes. "Many stores post signs stating their policy on returning items. If there is no sign, you should ask the clerk or manager if they allow exchanges, give refunds or have other special procedures for returning merchandise. Also, the sales receipt, layaway contract or retail installment agreement may include information regarding the return policy.

Whether you are purchasing an item for yourself or for someone else, it is always wise to keep all receipts and to mark each one so you will know which receipt corresponds to each item, the attorney general said. No matter how carefully you plan and shop, there is always the possibility of having to return or exchange merchandise. To make an exchange, you will need to have the sales receipt to verify the purchase amount for the item, he adds.

Some return policies include a full refund regardless of the reason for return. Other merchants will not give refunds but will give you a credit slip or due bill for the purchase of other merchandise in the store. This procedure is legally acceptable, and purchasers should keep this in mind when buying gifts for others, Beshear said.

If you purchase a defective item, you should expect an exchange or refund, but again, this depends on the store's policy. If the item is under warranty, the manufacturer may require you to mail the item to the factory for repair or replacement, rather than deal with the local business. If you buy clothing that does not fit or is the wrong color, do not wear it: most stores will not allow the return of worn clothing.

Beshear warns consumers not to abuse store policies. "If you abuse a return policy, the cost of replacing the item is passed on to all customers. Furthermore, a store may decide to be stricter with its policies in the future," he says.

The attorney general's division of consumer protection wants to help solve your consumer problems. If you have any other consumer complaint, write to the Office of the Attorney General, Division of Consumer Protection, 209 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky.

Can Your Family Cope With Crisis?

A strange thing about crises. They can come at any time and in any shape—loss of a job, fire or flood, accidental homicide, chronic illness, rape—but the one common denominator is the fact that a crisis can be devastating to the family. Some families crack under the pressure: abuse alcohol, shun friends, break up. Other families, faced with equally staggering circumstances, survive—and often emerge from the ordeal stronger and closer to each other.

Why some families appear relatively crisis-proof and others not is beginning to interest family sociologists. From their findings author Morton Hunt identifies helpful criteria marking families that pull through disaster.

Writing in the November issue of Families, a Reader's Digest publication, Hunt points out that "many families react to a bad situation with stoicism and denial, in the belief that dwelling on it only makes it worse. The evidence shows they couldn't be more wrong. Instead, they should work to air their troubles, among themselves, with their neighbors and friends—with outside organizations that can possibly help them.

Research further shows that democratic families tend to do better with problems than autocratic ones. Although it's true you can't hold committee meetings when the house is burning down, in a democratic family it's the one with the skills needed at the moment who takes charge.

A key quality in a family of survivors is hope. "When hit by a disastrous problem, they manage to work out a view of it that dispels hopelessness," Hunt writes. "The families that cope can redefine the situation in manageable terms," seeing it as something they can deal with. This is not an act of pollyannaism and self-delusion, researchers conclude. "The evidence shows that when families define a crisis as survivable, they gain the strength to solve problems or at least adjust to them."

You never know how your family will react to crisis until one strikes. But once your family has survived a crisis, you have the conviction that yours is a family that can rise to any occasion.

Dealing with Dealers

Ask a seasoned art collector for advice and he'll give you one word to keep in mind before buying: caution.

Even the most honest art dealers make mistakes, so make sure that you're investing in the real thing, not a good copy. Ask if the signature on a print, for example, is genuine. Find out why the dealer is sure that the antique or art work is real. When you buy, ask for a receipt with verification of authenticity.

And do some reading on the period of art you're interested in-if you know the background of a particular work, you can evaluate the dealer's claims more realistically.

Get your transaction in writing, with a detailed description of the purchase and of the price you paid for it. This might help you get your money back in case of dealer error, intentional or otherwise. And to avoid the latter, patronize a reputable dealer in the first

A Weighty Matter

You can find them at antique stores, flea markets, auctions, and rummage sales, and for as little as $5, you can indulge yourself with a piece of pure Americana. What are they?

They're souvenir paperweights from the 19th and early 20th centuries-clear glass enclosing pictures of the White House, the ferris wheel at the Chicago World's Fair, and of famous people like Abraham Lincoln. Some were remembrances of notable events, others were political keepsakes, and still others were commercial ads, such as the paperweight with a picture of an early typewriter sold by the Badger Typewriter and Stationery Company of Milwaukee.

They come as ovals, circles and rectangles, appropriately heavy, with the image (often a tinted photo) pasted to the bottom or held fast by a base filler. Damage is not uncommon, but there are still so many examples on the market that the collector can usually find a perfect specimen of any particular pattern.

Whatever the price, size, and type of antique paperweight you choose, you can be sure that while it holds your papers down, it's going up in value.

Don't Lose Your Marbles

Playing marbles is as much a part of an American childhood as baseball and hot dogs. But did you know that little balls used for the game have been found in the tombs of Egyptian pharoahs? That Roman legions were the ones responsible for spreading the game throughout Europe and from there throughout the world? Even the Aztecs played a form of marbles.

The very early marbles were made from stones, polished nuts, clay, or wood. Through the years they have been fashioned from porcelain, baked, painted, glazed, and fired clay, brass, iron, steel, glass, marble, agate, limestone, alabaster, and lately, plastic. Modern marbles have different purposes, depending on their size or weight. "Ducks" and "hoodles" are the marbles shot at, and "moonies," "shooters," and "bowlers" are the marbles used to do the shooting.

There are any number of ways to play marbles. Among the more common:

. Chase games, where players try to hit and win the opponent's

· Enclosure games, where the contest takes place in a circle or square outlined on the ground.

· Hole games, in which players try to get marbles into, out of, or at a certain distance from a

And, believe it or not, there's actually an annual National Marbles Tournament, which traditionally takes place in New Jersey during the month of June. Champions selected from elimination bouts throughout the country spend a week in serious competition. After about 80 games, a girl and a boy champion are selected to receive $500 scholarships.

'Little Cats' Win 6th in a Row

Blackcats and Bobcats Win; Idle Trojans Pick Up Forfeit

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON

The Prestonsburg Blackcats won their fifth game and their first district encounter Friday night by defeating the Lawrence County Bulldogs at Louisa, 20-14. The Betsy Layne Bobcats picked up their first win by defeating Mullins at Mullins, by 42 to 0. This game was Mullins' homecoming and was a part of the second annual Harvest Festival at Betsy Layne.

Wheelwright had the week-end off, but picked up a win by virtue of a forfeit by Pikeville High School. KHSAA ruled that Allan Roop was ineligible at Pikeville and declared Wheelwright the winner in Wheelwright's earlier loss to Pikeville. Wheelwright's record is now 3 and 3. Pikeville won easily over Jenkins 48 to 6. Because of three games lost by forfeit after playing an ineligible player, Pikeville, which has actually lost only one game while winning six, has a record of only 4 and 3.

The Paintsville Tigers suffered their first loss of the season, losing to the state's No. 1 Class A team, the Paris Grayhounds, 34 to 31. The Tigers all season have had a one-man team. Against Paris they ran into another one-man team. James Clark scored all five touchdowns in that game. Tony Mays, who can do it all, had two touchdowns for the Tigers and for the season he's had 14 touchdowns for a total of 84 points.

The Blackcats had to come from behind to win over Lawrence County. The Cats got on the boards in the first quarter as Steve Rice scored on a onevard plunge, and B.J. Sturgill's kick was good. The Cats' second touchdown was scored by Gilliam, also on a oneyard run. The kick failed. So at the end of the first quarter the Cats led, 13 to 0. But in the second quarter the Bulldogs scored two touchdowns and led at halftime, 14 to 13.

The Cats' defense really went to work in the second half, holding the Dogs scoreless. The winning touchdown was scored by Steve Rice on a one-yard run. B.J. Sturgill's kick was good and the Cats won, 20 to 14. With the two touchdowns against Lawrence County Steve Rice has a total of 12 touchdowns and 72 points.

In the annual Harvest Bowl game Betsy Layne went on the scoreboard early on a pass from Dwayne Lykins to James Hall. Steve Case scored the twopoint conversion on a pass from Lykins. The second touchdown in the first quarter was on a Lykins pass to Steve Case. The try for extra point failed. The third touchdown was a pass from James Hall for the fourth touchdown. Lykins' pass to Hall in the end zone was good for the two-point conversion. The half time score was Betsy Layne 28, Mullins 0.

Betsy Layne in the third quarter never let up. Lykins again hit his favorite target, James Hall, for a touchdown. The two-point conversion was good on a run by Elmer Hamilton. Betsy Layne did its final scoring in the third quarter on another pass from Lykins to Hall. Neither team scored in the fourth quarter. The Betsy Layne defensive team was outstanding. The defense was led by James Hamilton, who had six tackles, 10 assists, one intercepted pass and one recovered fum-

Betsy Layne, now 4 and 1, will travel to Johns Creek, (6-2) this Friday.

By C. "OLLIE" ROBINSON The Prestonsburg junior varsity football team won its sixth straight game without a loss Monday night, defeating the Morgan County junior varsity, 22 to 8.

The Little Cats went to the air early in the game on a long pass from quarterback Gordie Ratliff to Brad Hughes to set up the first touchdown, and Bryan Pace went over from the five-yard marker. Chris Hooker ran the ball for the two-point conversion. The second touchdown was on a 50-yard pass play from Gordie Ratliff to Brad Hughes. The two-point conversion was a pass from Ratliff to Hughes. In the quarter Morgan County scored and at halftime Prestonsburg led, 16 to Bryan Pace made several fine runs to set up the third touchdown and scored on a five-yard run. Pace also made the two-point conversion for the final scoring. He led the team in yardage gained and was a standout on defense. The Prestonsburg freshman and sophomore team will travel Thursday to Jackson to face Breathitt County, squad game time is 6:30 p.m.

PUBLIC NOTICE TO OWNERS OF RENTAL HOUSING

The Floyd County Housing Authority is administering a Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program in Floyd County using funds provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Under this program, owners will rehabilitate rental units which are now substandard or have major building systems or components requiring repair or replacement. The cost of this work, which must total at least $1000 per unit, may be financed by a local lending institution, by the owner, or by any other source available to the owner. The agency does not make rehabilitation loans or grants, but will assist owners to obtain financing.

After required rehabilitation work has been completed, the agency and the owner will execute a contract which establishes a rent for the unit(s) that will cover rehabilitation costs, meet monthly operating expenses, and allow a reasonable profit on the owner's investment. For a fifteen year period, the owner will rent the rehabilitated unit(s) to eligible lower income tenants, who will pay approximately 25 percent of their income toward the rent. the agency will pay the remainder of the rent directly to the owner. The initial occupant of a rehabilitated unit may be the owner's present eligible tenant.

After rehabilitation the rent(including utilities) cannot exceed the

The Family Forum

Put Your Child on TV

If your child is a natural ham, loves performing in front of audiences, and isn't scared of strangers, then perhaps you have considered helping him or her enter show business.

Of course, the entertainment field for children is competitive. Does your son or daughter have a distinctive look or mannerism? Is he or she easy going? Self-assured? Then perhaps your child stands a chance.

There are various expenses to consider. First, you will need professional photographs. Choose a photographer who knows what an agent or casting director is looking for: a relaxed, clear, smiling head shot. The photograph should be black and white and will later be converted into an 8 x 10 glossy photo with the child's name and vital statistics underneath. A resume is attached to the back of the photo. The resume should include the child's special talents, vital statistics, training and experience. Photographs and resumes will cost about $115, but this is tax deductible.

A child may make one commercial and one radio spot before joining a union. After that, membership in the Screen Actors Guild or in the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists is necessary. Union dues are expensive, but they can be easily covered by the income from just one commercial—and union expenses are tax deductible. Training may also be advisable, although some agents prefer that a child has no previous training or experience.

Your child is going to need an agent. Don't even try to market him without one. Try to meet all agents who are reputable and who specialize in children. Do not hesitate to ask about fees or commissions. Have a lawyer look over your contract.

The agent usually collects 10 percent of the child's earnings, and for that he sends out pictures of the child to the appropriate casting directors and advertising agencies. He arranges auditions and negotiates favorable contacts.

Even if your child doesn't make it in commercials, he can still be on TV. Why not put the family on a game show? Most are produced by independent companies. If you are interested in participating in one, write to your local TV station and ask for the name and address of the production company of the game show in which you want to appear.

For more information on getting your child into show business, send $2.95 to Pilot Books (347 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10016) for a 40-page paperback entitled "Getting Your Child Into TV Commercials."

Winning the War Over Spinach

When your picky eater grimaces at his vegetables for the 1000th time, perhaps it's time to change your approach. Even a youngster knows what he or she likes and doesn't like to eat

However, children must give the food a fair trial. Introduce new foods on their plates a little at a time, and ask them to reserve judgement until they've sampled a few mouthfuls. If they still say "Yech," then they legitimately don't like the food. Not eating it won't kill them, especially if you can take the food and conceal it in a soup, a casserole, or a dessert.

Remember, children go through phases. What they refuse to eat today they might consume frantically next week. So relax.

Set a good example for your kids. Eat good food, and snack as you would have them snack. Don't encourage your children's sweet teeth. Serve nutritional desserts, such as fruits and cheese, yogurt, or custard. And use dinner time as a family time. If a child is not watching television as he eats, he'll be more likely to watch what he's eating, and will probably appreciate the food on the table more.

It makes good sense to have a family physician. Practical considerations would be his reputation in the community, the type of practice he has developed and his availability. If you are new to the area, consult the local medical society. One "clue" to a physician's reputation would be membership on the medical staff of a good hospital, especially one that may be affiliated with a medical school. After making the choice, and when he has your medical records, it is a good idea to meet with him. Of course, call the Doctor only when there is adequate reason.

When you are looking for a family pharmacist, look no further than COOLEY APOTHECARY INC, 2 Town Center Bldg. We offer the finest in professional service without sacrificing personal attention. We maintain an up-to-date supply of thousands of prescription items to fill your needs when you need them filled. Remember, as your neighborhood pharmacy, we see your best interests as our best interests. We're open Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30; Sat. 9-5. 886-8106.

Autumn Decorating

There's a world of things you can do with old, dried wheat, pussywillow, roots, leaves, goldenrod and branches lying right outside your door this fall. Why not decorate your home with some of nature's discarded plants? You and your family can go on a hunting expedition to collect all the necessary materials.

After you collect these lovely dried blossoms and grasses, put them together in old jars, vases, glassware, pottery, pewter or any other unusual container. Arrange and combine them to make a house decoration that suits your tastes. You may need to use wire or string to secure the arrangement.

If the plants or weeds are still wet when you pick them, air dry them by tying them together in small bundles and hanging them upside down on a line, or on nails or hooks in a cool, dry place for 1-4

After the plants are dried, separate them. Put them into a vase for a mantle decoration; or you can tie them together, add some pine cones, acorns or even a feather, and hang them on the wall. You could also put them inside a wicker basket and hang that. Let your imagination run wild.

Seeing Stars

Even the sky is not the limit when you decide to build your own observatory to gaze up at the stars, moons and planets that fill the horizon on a clear night. Using some basic material, or some professional optical supplies, you can enjoy hours of star gazing in your own back yard.

Binoculars will cost you about $60 to $80. You can clamp the binoculars onto a tripod and watch the changing planets of Jupiter and Venus, as well as the configurations of the Milky Way.

Telescopes are of two types, either reflector or the more expensive refractor. The cost is about $200 and up.

The most important part of any telescope is the eyepiece, so make sure the optics are good by focusing on a bright light to get a clear image. Then test its sturdiness on the mount. Before you become a genuine astronomer and invest a lot of money building your own shed for an observatory, make sure you shop around. Talk with other amateurs and check their telescopes. Call your local planetarium to ask for advice, and consider taking classes, offered by many astronomical societies and planetariums.

Go Fly A Kite

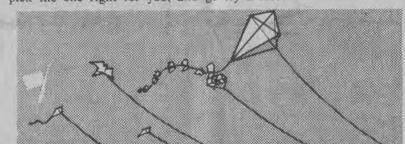

Go fly a kite? Sounds like kid's stuff, but it isn't. Kite flying, which dates back more than 2,000 years, is fun for the entire family, and unless you go in for the really extravagant models, it's quite

In fact, you can even make your own kite from a brown paper bag. Almost any craft or "how to" store has designs for making a basic kite that you can enjoy for hours at a time.

Named for the soaring hawk-like bird, kites were used in the Far East to ward off evil spirits. Benjamin Franklin used his famous kite to bring electricity from the clouds. Still later, kites were used to study weather conditions and lend examples of air conditions for gliders, the precursors of today's airplanes.

Kite flying is simple. For the most part, all you need is a decent breeze, some energy for a run to get it off the ground, and lots of string. The kite soars off to great heights and you are the master, barring crashing or entangling in trees or wires.

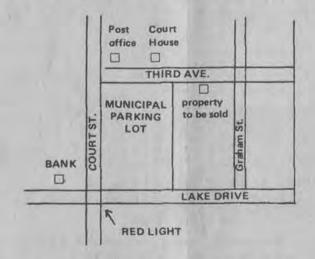

Kites are available in a number of shapes, designs and fabrics. Just pick the one right for you, and go fly a kite.

NO FRILLS, NO GIMICKS,

TAX FREE INCOME INCOME MAKES GOOD FINANCIAL SENSE

"All Savers Certificates", offering Tax-Free income, are available as of October 1st, 1981 through December 31st, 1982. These certificates have a one year maturity and provide a once-in-a-life-time maximum tax exemption on interest earned up to $1,000 for individuals and $2,000 for married persons filing a joint return.

The interest rate paid on your "All Savers Certificate" is equal to 70% of the average yield on the most recent auction of one-year U.S. Treasury Bills. Important! Unlike Cash Management funds, the interest rate on your "All Savers Certificate" is fixed for a one year term... and there is no risk because your investment is insured to $1000,000 by the FDIC (Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation).

You can participate in The Bank Josephine's "All Savers Certificate" program for a minimum deposit of $500. However, we strongly suggest you consult with a Bank Josephine advisor to help to determine the benefits of these Tax-Free certificates as it applies to your specific financial position.

Important! "All Savers Certificates" are subject to penalty for early withdrawal just like regular time certificates of deposit.* In addition, any interest earned prior to early withdrawal will be considered taxable income by Federal law.

The Bank Josephine offers no frills, and no gimmicks. We're simply offering a chance, for many of us, to "catch up a little" on inflation.

*You have contracted to keep your funds on deposit for the stated maturity: in the event of early withdrawal, Federal Regulations require that you shall forfeit three months interest on the amount withdrawn at the nominal rate being paid on the certificate.

Money Market Certificate Conversion to "ALL SAVERS"

If you currently hold a Bank Josephine Money Market Certificate, you can convert it to a Bank Josephine "ALL SAVERS" with no penalty for early withdrawal. Converting to an "ALL SAVERS" Tax Free certificate could provide improved after tax earnings. Ask your Bank Josephine advisor for a conversion evaluation.

New Lamp Shade Concept Lamp shades and lighting fixtures with coordinating fabric, wall paper, shelf paper and cushions have been introduced in the US by a British company, Sublime Lighting Ltd. The shades are in printed cotton-with large and small flowers, twin prints, gingham checks and designs for children-Nottingham lace and eyelet embroidery. All are mounted on plastic coated frames and are washable.

The shades are mostly mob cap style with a frill or fringe. They come in six sizes, ranging from 8" to 20" and retail from about $10 to $100. The shades fit lamp bases, ceiling fixtures and swag sets.

The fabrics to mix and match with the lamp shades are available in 15 and 30 yard lengths. The wall and shelf papers are protected by an invisible acrylic coating which makes them washable.

Sublime's cushions come in two sizes-20" square with a frill or 15" square with a plain edge. They are zippered, with the inner cushion filled with polyester fiber.

A group of children's lights is also available. These are parachutes and balloon lights. The parachute comes in red, blue and brown polka dot. The balloons come in blue or red

Well, kiss the mad dashes goodbye . . . and the missed phone calls. Thanks to the wizardry of electronics, you can now answer on the first ring, no matter where you are-up to 400 feet from your home that is. From your hammock, your garden, your pool, even from your bathtub.

How so? Because there's a new kind of extension phone on the market-cordless. It's not attached by wire to anything and it operates much like a walkie talkie. Besides, it's so small it will slip into your

No catch to getting the phone to work with your home phone, either.

A separate base unit that comes with the cordless extension hooks up to your inside phone using the standard phone company jack and AC power.

There's an interesting plus, too.

The phone can be used as an intercom. If someone answers your inside phone, you can be alerted outside. The intercom conversation can't be heard because the call is automatically placed on "hold."

The "answer only" phone retails for under $100; the "dial-out," for under $150. They're great as gifts, and they are available at most stores that carry consumer-electronics products.

Greenup County Man Honored As Outstanding Tobacco Farmer

Ralph Hall has the distinction of being Greenup County's youngest fulltime farmer. "I'm the only man under 50 who farms full time in the county,' said Hall, 29.

He also may be the county's most innovative farmer, the first to try notillage corn and to bale his tobacco. Other farmers may think he's crazy, he says, but he'll try anything once.

Hall has earned vet another distincition. He has been named an Outstanding Young Tobacco Farmer for October in an awards program sponsored in Kentucky by Philip Morris, U.S.A. and the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Each year the program honors 24 tobacco growers under age 35 from eight tobacco-producing states to recognize their sound tobacco production practices and strong community leadership. Seven Kentucky burley growers are chosen each year.

Hall farms on the family-owned and rented land 12 miles south of Greenup, near Tygart's Creek. He owns nearly 1,000 acres in partnership with his father. Burtee Hall, and leases another 100. Besides tobacco, Hall produces 125 acres of corn, and 75 acres of hay, and runs 250 head of cattle. He has 125 brood cows and feeds out 125 head to low-choice grade

But tobacco is Hall's major cash crop and the main source of livelihood for him, his wife, Sharon, 29, and their children, James, 8, Nathan, 5, and Rachel, 2.

"We run a lot of livestock, but tobacco brings in more money," said Hall. 'It's more dependable.'

Hall had 19 acres of burley this year-12 of which he grew, seven grown by a workhand-which yielded an average 2,300 lbs. an acre.

Burley is part of Hall's family tradition, as his grandfather and father grew the crop before him. "Ever since I can remember, I was in a tobacco patch," he said. "It's part of the culture around here. Kids start early."

At age 12, Hall had his first share of the family crop, a half-acre yielding 1,000 lbs. By 15, he was working and earning the profit from nine acres and 2,500-an-acre yields. He continued producing burley, though not as much, while he earned his associate degree in agriculture from Morehead State

His own sons, his "shadows" as he calls them, now help him set plants. His wife is involved in the entire operation, and is the manager at tobaccostripping time.

Hall is fortunate not to have the labor problems some Kentucky tobacco farmers face. Besides family members, he has a reliable source of labor, for which he pays $2 and $3 an hour, and sometimes provides meals. He employs a full-time hand, some part-time hands or high school boys. and a few women to strip the leaves.

Hall would like to expand his burley production in coming years, if he is able to lease poundage from other farmers in Greenup county. "It's hard to lease quotas in this county, and it's expensive, because everyone wants to grow their own tobacco," he said.

His current goal is to maintain his present production and keep down costs, which he estimates run about 92

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO MINE

In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that: Triple Elkhorn Mining Co., P.O. Box 140 Ivel, Kentucky 41642, intends to file an application for the surface disturbance mining of approximately 143.0 acres, located northwest of Printer in Floyd County. The proposed operation is approximately 12 mile northwest of State Route 122's junction with Stumbo Br. Road, and located west of Left Fork of Beaver Creek, latitude 37° 32' 32'', longitude 82° 43' 43". The surface of the area to be mined is owned by: John M. Osborne, Leonard Hall, Claude Sammons, Seynour & Peral Sammons, Namon & Bertha Sammons, Marion Taylor, Phillip Meade, Merlin Crum, John B. Conn, Turner Elkhorn Coal Corp. A brief description of the kind of mining activity proposed is: mountain top removal with hollow fills. The application will be filed at the Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, Prestonsburg Area Office, South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Kentucky,

Persons wishing to file written objections and/or request a formal administrative hearing in regard to the above described surface mine should notify the Department of Natural Resources and Environmental Protection within 30 days of the date of this notice. A copy of the newspaper clipping, must be attached to the written objection. The objection or request will reference application number 036-0077. Such objection or request must be in accordance with KRS 224.081 (2) and must be forwarded to the Director of Permits, Bureau of Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement, Capital Plaza Tower, Frankfort, Kentucky, 40601. 2. Notice is hereby given provided pursuant to 30 CFR 715.13 (d) (10) and KRS: 350 that the proposed post mining land use does not constitute a change from the pre-mining land use. Public comment regarding a proposed change in land use may be submitted to the address listed above.

cents a pound. He has adopted several innovative methods to become more efficient and to cut costs.

Baling his tobacco has proved to be a real cost-cutter for Hall. He estimates that baling has saved him nearly 40 percent of his labor costs for stripping. He has baled all his burley for the last three years.

He was able to bale his entire crop, he said, because he picked up the unused quota for baled tobacco in the county when many growers chose not to

Hall also plants his tobacco in 12-row sections with two rows between left unplanted. This practice enables him to spray the fields with a small sprayer mounted on the back of a tractor. Using the small sprayer, which can spray six rows at once, does the same job and saves the expense of a large sprayer. he said.

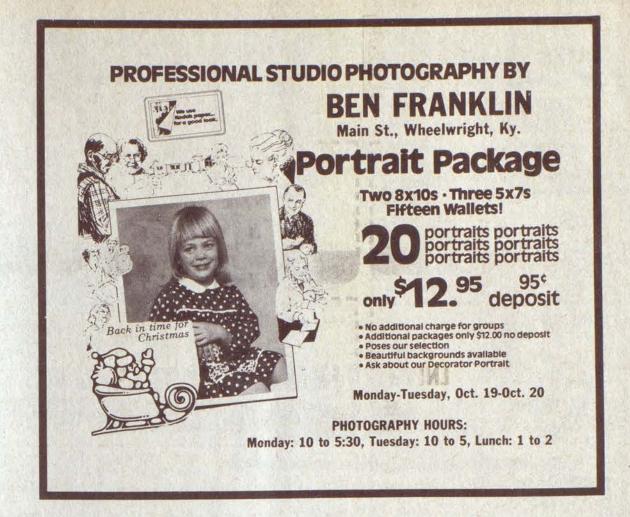

Leaving two rows unplanted every 12 also allows more air flow in the field to reduce moisture and helps prevent the lower leaves from falling off the plants. "I can take a three-acre field, and leave roadways every 12 rows, and get almost the same yield as I would planting the field solid," he said.

A way Hall has found to improve poundage is to spread cattle manure-which he has in abundance from his feedlot-over the tobacco fields twice a year.

To prevent problems with blue mold, Hall uses Ridomil, which he incorporates in his tobacco ground. Although it is an extra expense many farmers do not want to pay, using Ridomil is worth it, Hall believes. "I can't take a chance," he said, "since I've got to have my tobacco to pay my Besides trying to produce and market quality tobacco, Hall involves himself in the tobacco activities in his county. He is a member of the county Farm Bureau, and has been its president and vice president.

As an Outstanding Young Tobacco Farmer, Hall will receive a $400 cash award from Philip Morris, U.S.A. and an expense-paid trip to Richmond, Va., in February for him and his wife.

These ideas were avidly read by American intellectuals and statesmen—among them Tom Paine, Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and Benjamin Franklin—who would frame the intellectual basis for independence and, later, the state and federal constitutions. (Coming full circle, the leaders of the 1789 French Revolution would borrow heavily from American thinking and draw inspiration in writing the French Declaration of the Rights of Man from the constitutions of the individual states, particularly Virginia's bill of nights.)

And JANET DECOSMO

(Smithsonian News Service)

But political idealism was not the only reason the French-American connection was so solidly welded. There were practical considerations as well, and there was the not-so-small matter of French pride injured by the humiliating treaty of 1763 that ended the Seven Years War and stripped France of most of her colonial empire.

France of most of her colonial empire.

In a revealing memorandum written in April 1776 by a key member of Louis XVI's circle, the reasons for France's future involvement in the American cause were put directly. "If we accede to the desires of the Colonies," the document began, "it appears that the following advantages will result: first, the power of England will be irreparably diminished and ours will increase in proportion; second, her commerce will be irreparably damaged; third,...we could recover a part of the possessions which England took from

Then, too, French trading companies craved more direct access to American markets than the British had allowed earlier. And the French intelligentsia looked upon the colonies as a laboratory for testing their political theories.

The king and his court, however, were not unsympathetic to the intellectual foundation upon which the Revolution was being built. Louis XVI, after all, had warmly welcomed two of its chief conceptualizers, Adams and Franklin, at the luxurious court of Versailles. Because the Declaration pictured the British king as a despot and tyrant, "the French could support it," Idzerda writes, and Louis could support it "for he would not wish to be considered a tyrant."

For the Americans, the alliance with France was a grave necessity. As the war with Britain escalated, the Colonies grew desperate for outside assistance—for supplies, equipment and experienced military leadership.

As early as 1775, the Colonies had cast aside their deep mistrust of foreign alliances—"they would entangle us in future wars in Europe," in Adams' words—and sent out feelers for help in France and elsewhere.

France began aiding the American cause secretly and in a limited way in 1776, but once the Colonies declared independence, the French government began meeting officially in Paris with

Yorktown:

The French Connection

more French aid, despaired: "Without a foreign loan, our present force, which is but a remnant of an army, cannot be kept together in this campaign. We are at the end of our tether, and now or never deliverance must come. Deliverance did come. In 1781, the French court responded to accounts of French officers who had seen American conditions first hand. ("Incredible that troops almost naked and poorly paid should behave so well under fire," said one.) France sent 5,500 seasoned soldiers commanded by Gen. Rochambeau, new artillery and a large supply of gold francs. And most important to the war's eventual outcome, Louis' foreign minister assured the Colonies that a fleet commanded by Adm. de Grasse would be available for action off the Atlantic coast that fall.

Meanwhile, stymied in the north, the British forces had looked to the south for victory. Trying to split the southern from northern Colonies, Gen. Cornwallis moved into the Carolinas, but his force was unable to control much territory in the region. Feeling that southern Colonies could not be held until Virginia came under control, Cornwallis set out for strategically located Yorktown, near the Chesapeake Bay.

When the enemy's position was discovered, Washington and Gen. Rochambeau, saw their long-awaited opportunity. Earlier plans for an attack against British forces in New York were scrapped. They told Lafayette to keep Cornwallis occupied in Yorktown, confirmed de Grasse's intention to move to the Chesapeake to prevent the British from escaping by sea and then began moving their own armies south. "The Yorktown campaign was a miracle of coordination," the Smithsonian's naval curator Lundeberg says. "Things worked out in a providential fashion.

De Grasse's fleet arrived at the Chesapeake first and, on Sept. 5, drove off the British in a sea battle that historians consider key to Yorktown-and the entire war. "Without the naval victory of de Grasse," the late historian Samuel Eliot Morison has written, "it would not have been the capitulation of Cornwallis but that of Washington that history would have registered.

Hemmed in by the French-American force commanded by Washington, Cornwallis' troops surrendered at Yorktown on Oct. 19. The next day, the defeated general wrote British commander Henry Clinton, based in New York, "Sir, I have the mortification to inform your excellency that I have been forced to give up..." And two months later in London, Lord North, George III's foreign minister, moaned when he heard the news, "Oh God! It is all over!

As a postscript to this story, it should be pointed out that the once cordial, working relationship between the French and Americans cooled considerably following Yorktown. First, despite the terms of the 1778 alliance, the Colonies signed a preliminary peace treaty with Great Britain late in 1782 without even informing the French. Then, the new nation defaulted on both the principal and interest of loans for the war effort (although it was not pressed by the French for repayment).

Finally, the new republic seemed determined to put as much distance as possible between itself and France, as the French Revolution became more radical and bloody after 1789. On April 22, 1793, President Washington declared the United States neutral in French affairs.

Washington went even further in his 1796 Farewell Address to the nation, warning the states "to steer clear of permanent alliance with any portion of the foreign world." Despite those words and despite America's off-andon-again flirtation with isolationism, the sentimental alliance with France repeatedly has been buttressed over the decades with cultural, economic and military links. And it is appropriate that the paramount symbol of the French Revolution, the key to the Bastille, sent to Washington and carried across the ocean by Tom Paine, holds a place of honor at Washington's home, Mount Vernon.

Coonhound Event Comes To Kentucky

There's probably no way coonhounds could be considered an agricultural product, but the Kentucky Department of Agriculture was definitely instrumental in bringing the first national professional coonhound championship to Kentucky.

It all started, according to one department spokesman, when Agriculture Commissioner Alben W. Barkley, II got recorded on television doing his coonhound imitation. It will end with a national event which could bring over a million dollars into Kentuck; 's economy.

The Professional Coonhound Association will hold its National Championship Hunt and Sale, Oct. 22-24, at Hillman's Ferry Campground, Land Between the Lakes (LBL), near Gilbertsville, KY.

"We expect several thousand participants and spectators, maybe ten thousand of them," said Don Vinson of the department's division of pesticides and an avid coonhunter himself.

Vinson said he became involved when Commissioner Barkley expressed an interest in bringing a national event to Kentucky. "The commissioner wanted to support Kentucky and the economy, and coonhounds seemed the natural thing," Vinson said.

Following the first round of the hunt on Friday, the 14 finalists will be put up for sale at auction. Buyers know that one of those dogs will win a large portion of the $25,000 total purse when they compete again on Saturday, Vinson said, and prices are expected to be high. "These are not your $35 dogs."

We hope a lot of people will come out for this event," Barkley said. "LBL is beautiful, there are camping facilities there.

The Salisburys moved from Floyd county in 1946 where the surviving six sons own and live on farms within a short distance of the family farm which is operated by the Rebecca Land Corporation formed after the death of the father, Dial, in 1967, and named for

There were four daughters in this family. One died at birth, and the remaining three are Judy Colvin, Springfield, Ohio; Helen Webb, Langley and Shirley Stewart, presently living at home with her mother.

This family story began when Dial Salisbury married Rebecca Hagans April 7, 1921, at Langley, with the Rev. Frank Allen officiating, witnessed by Eliza Henson and Eunice May. Mr. Salisbury was the son of P. L. and Mary Turner Salisbury who lived on Turkey Creek, near Maytown. FLOYD COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

By JANE BOND Health Educator

Having a pap test regularly is the only sure way for a woman to protect herself from cervical cancer. This cancer can be one of the most curable of all cancers if it is detected in time. The Floyd County Health Department is having a Pap clinic Wednesday, October 14, from 8 until 11:30 and from 1 until 2. This clinic is a free service of the health department and any woman who has not had a Pap test in the past year is urged to take advantage of this Glaucoma is the second leading cause of blindness in adults in the United States. When the disease is discovered early enough and treatment is started, progress of the disease can be checked. Persons over age 35 are more likely to develop glaucoma than those who are younger. One check up is not always sufficient. You may not have the disease at age 35, but it could develop by the time you are 40. It is recommended that you have a regular check up every two years.

The Floyd County Health Department is having a glaucoma screening clinic Monday, October 19. This clinic is open to persons of all ages, but those over age 35 are especially urged to take advantage of this free service of the Health Department.

A nurse from the health department will be in the Wheelwright branch office of the health department on Monday, October 19, from 10 until 2. She will be offering immunizations, T.B. skin tests, blood pressures, and urinalyses. This clinic is a free service of the health department, and the public is welcome.

Legislative Summary

Amer months of study and discussion-and three public hearings in cities across the state-a legislative panel has rejected permitting banks to conduct cross-county operations in Kentucky.

The subcommittee on banks and industrial loans voted instead to endorse strengthening the current system of correspondent banking, under which smaller banks purchase from larger banks the services they can't afford to provide themselves.

Proposals for various forms of statewide banking have aroused fierce opposition from smaller banks in the state, with bankers from those institutions saying they would be put at competitive disadvantage-and maybe out of business-if the changes were ap-

Big-city bankers, who generally supported statewide banking, said they were being unfairly restrained by current prohibitions on cross-county operations, and said they could in many cases provide more and better services for small-town customers.

Although the subcommittee's refusal to endorse statewide banking would appear to kill the issue in Kentucky for now, subcommittee Chairman Rep. Bruce Blythe, R-Louisville, warned that changes now imminent in federal banking laws could alter that situation radically in a very short time. Off-Track Betting Endorsed

A special legislative task force studying thoroughbred racing has adopted in its entirety an industryprepared list of proposals for reversing racing's sagging fortunes in Kentucky. One major recommendation: Offtrack betting should be established in the state.

Other recommendations, prepared by an ad hoc committee representing various segments of the racing industry and adopted by the task force in a 4-3 vote, include:

-Some use of therapeutic medication should be allowed, although the ability to detect illegal drug use in race horses should be improved.

-State parimutuel taxes should be "substantially" reduced, and more money should be funnelled into purses. -State aid to the financiallytroubled Latonia and Ellis Park tracks should be continued.

The task force proposals will now be forwarded to the Interim Joint Committee on Business Organizations and Professions, which will consider the recommendations for possible legislation in the 1982 General Assembly. Special Courses Get Attention

Teachers of environmental and citizenship courses testified against a bill that has been pre-filed by a legislative committee on education.

The bill repealing current law requiring courses on the environment. consumerism, careers, and alcohol and drugs was approved by the Interim Joint Committee on Education last

Representatives from the Kentucky Conservation Council, the Center for Environmental Education, Murray State University and the Kentucky Coalition for Consumer Education pleaded with legislators to save 'worthwhile' programs for Kentucky school children.

Autumn brings to the Cumberlands a pleasant change in weather, the haze of Indian summer and a beautiful array of color. With cooler weather comes the need for more complete and satisfying meals. It is almost impossible for me to separate thoughts of autumn from thoughts of food and the coming

Wrapped up in my earliest childhood memories are the delicious aromas of warm gingerbread, pies and cookies cooling on the kitchen table and homemade bread fresh from the oven. failed to realize as a child that not everyone was as fortunate as I in having a mother who baked and cooked

At home my older sisters helped Mother with the regular cooking and I concentrated on baking pies and cakes. This was a mistake. When I married and moved to the farm, I wasn't prepared to cook everyday meals for a hungry husband whose mother was an excellent cook. This was just following the Depression and money was very scarce. Nevertheless I managed to buy a highly rated cookbook. It proved to be useless to me. I either didn't have the right ingredients on hand or they were too expensive or we didn't like the food after it was prepared.

My mother-in-law had an old Household Searchlight cookbook. I borrowed it constantly and finally bought one for myself. I learned to cook from this cookbook. Occasionally I used other cookbooks but this one was my favorite. Even so, I made my share of failures. The old cookbooks lacked details that make the difference between success and failure.

During my busiest years of rearing four daughters and working full time as postmaster I saw a need for a cookbook containing recipes for everyday meals and for special occasions,

When I compiled the recipes for my cookbook I made it the kind of cookbook I wish I had had when I began to cook. Behind every good cook are failures but I wanted to minimize the chance of failures. The cookbook contains recipes for the inexperienced, the experienced and the expert cooks. I especially treasure the letters from young brides who have cooked their first holiday meal using recipes from the cookbook. After all is said and done the most rewarding career, memorywise, is to provide a happy home for a family and delicious homecooked meals.

October is apple month and a time for apple festivals. At some festivals apple butter is made outdoors in huge iron kettles over open fires. It must be stirred constantly to keep it from scorching. I have never made apple butter in an open kettle. I poured my apple butter into gallon crocks and cooked it in the oven to thicken it. This eliminated standing over a hot stove to stir it. A more recent method is to make it in a crock pot. The flavor improves with the slower cooking.

The following recipe for apple butter is from an old canning book. I added the part about the oven as that is what I did and it improves the flavor in addition to eliminating all the stirring. An easier way is to use a crock pot.

Apple Butter

Select full flavored tart apples that cook into a mush easily.

BOIL until reduced to one half: 1 gallon sweet apple cider

4 gallons apples, peeled, cored and Cook slowly until apples are cooked into a mush and are beginning to thicken. Stir frequently to prevent scorching. Run apples through a sieve to remove any lumps. THEN ADD:

8 cups sugar

1 tsp. all spice 1 tsp. cinnamon

Note: If you like more spices, add very small amounts of ground cloves, ginger and nutmeg. Remember, it is easy to get too much spice. It is much stronger after the applebutter is cold. Pour apple butter into deep flatoottomed roasting pans or gallon crocks. Bake in 325° oven until thickened. You will need to stir the apple butter only 2 or 3 times an hour. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

If you have never tasted a fresh apple cake you are missing something. For many years I never made any of the heavier cakes. Now they are my favorites. Remember this about heavy cakes: you can use the mixer to cream the shortening and sugar, but after that mix by hand or you will have a crumbly cake.

Fresh Apple Cake

2 cups white sugar 11/2 cups cooking oil

3 eggs Beat well with mixer. Do not use mixer for balance of cake. SIFT TOGETHER:

Add to first mixture, small amount at a time. Mix only until blended. THEN ADD:

Save Food for Wildlife When You Cut Firewood

People who are well-organized and on top of things cut this winter's firewood last January and have been letting it dry all summer. But a lot of other folks wait until the approaching cool weather before sharpening up the chain saw and taking to the woods.

If you're cutting your firewood now, keep in mind that many species of trees bear valuable wildlife foods. If you have a choice, spare these trees in favor of species with little value to wildlife, says Jim Durell, an assistant director in the Director of Fish and Wildlife Resources' wildlife division and an expert on wildlife foods.

Durell recommends that anyone cutting firewood take a few minutes to examine his woodlot and pick out certain trees to save for wildlife. Durell says the following species, which are common over much of Kentucky, have high wildlife food value: hackberry, white ash, white oak, chinquapin oak, red mon, paw paw, black haw, beech, gum or hazelnut. Durell recommends that you choose nearby trees for cutting, since this will provide more growing room for these prefered species.

If you're wondering by now if there's anything left you can cut, Durell says that the following are poor food trees and can, from a wildlife point of view, be safely cut: sycamore, elm, maples, yellow popular, basswood, redbud and hemlock

There' a final category, Durell says: the "pest" trees, those which have little wildlife food value and which grow so fast and so abundantly that they crowd out more desirable species. Trees in this group include box elder, bitternut hickory, honey locust and sometimes even otherwise desirable trees such as persimmon and black locust.

Also remember that trees provide homes as well as food for many wildlife

about lawlessness in Knott county, so the Kentucky State Police staged what has become known as "saturation patrol" the weekend of Oct. 2-4, with the cooperation of county officers.

The results: One hundred eleven arrests, including 46 drunk drivers, and a full jail. Of "saturation weekend" Ron Daley reported in the Troublesome Creek

Eleven state policemen from other counties joined the three troopers serving Knott county and the sheriff's department over the weekend to help out in law enforcement. They arrested 62 Friday night, 39 Saturday and ten on

Beginning at 4 p.m. on Friday, the effort started with twelve state police cars, an unmarked patrol car and a truck racing to three reported bootleg operations on Right Beaver Creek. One man charged with possession of alcoholic beverages for the purpose of sale said, "Gee, I thought an army was coming, I never seen anything like

After the raids, the police cars dispersed throughout the county and set up road checks. Primarily through those road checks, 289 citations were written, 213 vehicles inspected, 85 warning notices issued, 23 charged with drinking on the highway, 37 lodged for public intoxication and 46 charged with driving under the influence.

"It scares me to think that we caught 46 drunk drivers in Knott county over this weekend," said Danny Webb, state police sergeant and coordinator of the 'saturated patrol." "The roads are very dangerous in the county on weekends because of these drivers.

Sheriff Thomas Adams said the program was good for the morale of the state police in Knott county and his department. "It was a good feeling to be working together, supporting each other and we will continue to do so," he said. "I'm about ready for them to arrest me," Adams said on Monday, "so I can get some sleep.

Adams, members of the jailer's staff and the pre-trial release officer, Claude Conley, barely had time to catch catnaps during the long weekend. Claude Conley reported that at one time 22 persons were led to the jail by the state police. Conley turned over an estimated $10,000 in bonds to the circuit court clerk's office that in turn will be sent to Frankfort because of the arrests:

County Dries Up Several people noted that the roads and presence of troopers "dried up the county." "You couldn't get a beer anywhere, especially on Beaver Creek," said one person. The state police reported that one Floyd countian that was stopped said he was on his way back to his home county because the four places he stopped at would not

The three loads of beer and whiskey scated at the Beaver bootles operations (34 cases of beer, 53 halfpints of whiskey) was small compared to their normal weekend stock room supply. According to one of the arrested. "We knew we would get it this weekend since you raided that fellow down the road-it was our time.'

The raids had been set up Thursday night when an undercover state policeman bought at the locations.

The telephones and C.B.'s were busy as friends, relatives and customers warned the bootleggers of the likely raid when they saw the stream of state police cars.

One of the men charged said he had a good ten minutes to run but said, "What's the use, I broke the law and deserved to be caught. Besides you

They had had numerous complaints treat the police right, they are just doing their job, and they'll treat you right. "Don't do the crime unless you are willing to do the time," said one bootleg operation owner as his workers were sequestered in the back seat of the police car.

Tongue-in-check, he added, "We need this law enforcement. There are too many bootleggers on the creek. Hope I see you before you see me," he said waving to the departing police of-

Arrested in the raids and charged with possession of alcoholic beverages for the purpose of resale in local option dry territory were Topmost residents, Roy Hall, Clifford Hall, Mitchell Slone, Denver Hawse and David Johnson.

Knott jail escapee, Adam Blackburn, was picked up by state police in Vicco where he was giving a constable a rough time. He escaped from the Knott jail while being held on a wanton endangerment charge and on three felony charges in Michigan. He escaped again a few weeks ago from the Knott county jail. The state police took him to the Letcher county jail.

items at your neighborhood Goodwill outlet-there are about 1000 across the country-but you're sure to find good values in all kinds of quality merchandise.

Goodwill industries has become bonanza. increasingly selective about the kind of items accepted to be repaired and re-sold. Increasingly, its stores are in middle-income neighborhoods, where more and more middleincome shoppers need to stretch their shrinking dollars.

The most common donations are clothing, furniture, small appliances and housewares. The merchandise will often be in better condition, and priced lower, than items found in an antique or second-hand shop. Refurbished furniture can be an especially good buy because the price of new furniture. escalating dramatically.

Obviously, shopping at a Goodwill store is a double value: while saving money, you contribute to an outstanding service operation.

Some people also find values in the tax deductions they get. For instance, they can deduct the fair market value of a "gas guzzler" that they no longer want.

Sometimes it seems impossible that a shopper will turn up in the right place at the right time. There's a 251/2-foot cruiser awaiting a new owner for $5000 in Milwaukee. A stuffed bobcat sold for $35 in Gulfport, MI. A Columbus, GA store received a Shetland pony, and the Youngstown store is hoping to find someone who needs a blueprint copier and 10,000 square feet of vinyl floor covering at a value of $6,000.

Anyone might pop into a store, from the wealthiest people in town to the odd fellow who comes in daily for radios and toasters to tinker with. One high school girl voted bestdressed in her class bought her whole wardrobe at Goodwill. A man in Maryland furnished a mansion with items from the Erdaman, MD store.
