Though Funds Short, Patton Has Project

KENTUCKY 41653

What becomes of Area Development District board members when, longaccustomed as they are to weighing the allocation of federal funds to local development projects, the federal funds dry up? If the Big Sandy ADD is any indication, they turn to philosophy.

Where there are few concrete decisions to be made, ruminations tend to fill the void. Where the future holds little prospect of new projects, speakers reminisce about past glories.

In that regard, Paul Patton, Pike judge-executive and state Democratic Party chairman, proved the exception at Monday's meeting of the ADD board at May Lodge.

Patton had a definite project in mind-the election of a governor to succeed John Y. Brown, Jr. And he proposed a definite strategy to his colleagues on the board. They should try to secure from any gubernatorial candidate an unwavering commitment to retain the present formula by which coal severance tax is returned to the coal-producing counties.

A former deputy secretary of transportation who quit the Brown administration two years ago over his disagreement with the governor's severance tax proposal, Patton acknowledged the irony in his present enthusiasm for the formula.

On account of the severance tax formula, which survived several attempts to amend it in the recently-concluded legislative session, eastern Kentucky is "relatively well off in comparison with the rest of the state," Patton said.

However, local governments in the mountain counties will remain unable to plan long-term projects as long as the severance tax can be curtailed at the whim of a future legislature, he pointed out.

The solution to that uncertainty is to elect one or two more governors willing, like Gov. Brown, to commit themselves unconditionally to the existing formula and to threaten a veto of any legislative attempts to alter it. By that time, Patton said, the severance tax formula might be sufficiently well established to be unassailable.

Area Did Well In Legislature, Stumbo Opinion

"I think Eastern Kentucky came out super," said State Rep. Greg Stumbo this week of the overall results of the General Assembly session which ended last week with tempers flaring in both houses and also in the governor's of-

First of all, he pointed to the success Eastern Kentucky legislators had in holding the line against suggested changes in the coal severance tax. Then he cited his own legislation, popularly known as the truck weight bill, as a winner for Kentucky and particularly this part of Kentucky.

"It will take a few years to accumulate enough money from the tax but it will go to coal-haul roads and, I think, solve a big road maintenance problem," Stumbo said. He estimated that 65% of the tax will be paid by outof-state trucks

Would Intervene In Legal Action; Hearing Sought

The Prestonsburg Gas Consumers Association filed Monday a protest of the heavy gas rate increase proposed by Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company and called on the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) for a delay in the effective date of the increase

The action on behalf of the consumer group was taken by Barkley J. Sturgill, Prestonsburg attorney, in a petition which included the formal protest, a request for permission to intervene and that FERC suspend the effective date of Kentucky West Virginia's "proposed wholesale increase and enter upon evidentiary hearings to determine if such rates are just and reasonable.

Sturgill said a postponement of five months will be asked on the rate increase effective date to give sufficient time for full hearings on the rate situation. His petition represents approximately 1200 persons who purchase gas, retail, from the Prestonsburg Utilities Commission, which first buys the gas, wholesale, from Kentucky West Virginia.

Martin Woman Is One of Four Stabbed in Ga.

A former Martin resident was one of four young women found stabbed to death last Friday in Lawrenceville,

The body of Miss Sherry Lynn Adams, 27, a resident of Norcross, Ga., 20 miles from the scene of the unsolved murders, was partially concealed by a clump of bushes. The other three victims were found in separate spots in and around the town during the day. Relatives of Miss Adams said they did not know if any clues to the killer had been uncovered. The quadruple slayings left the town in shock

Miss Adams was born at Pikeville, Nov. 13, 1954, the daughter of Donald Adams, now of Portsmouth, O., and Helen Jane Hunter, of Norcross. She was a student at the Beauty College of Georgia at the time of her death.

Surviving are her parents and one brother, Stephen Anthony Adams, also of Norcross.

Her funeral will be held at 2 p.m. today (Wednesday) from the chapel of the Hall Funeral Home by Elders Marty Spurlock and Pete Grigsby, Jr., and burial will be made in the Martin cemetery.

Dead at the scene was Deputy Sheriff Randall Cook, 28, of Topmost. Billy Roark, 18, of Magoffin county, was pronounced dead several minutes later at the June Buchanan Primary Care

Two passengers in the Roark vehicle, Jon Brogdon, 19, of Salyersville, and her 15-year-old sister, Penny, were injured in the accident.

Joy Brogdon was transferred to the University of Kentucky Medical Center, Lexington. She was in critical condition. Penny Brogdon was treated and released at the Buchanan center. State Police said the incident occurred when Roark, who was heading north on KY 160 in a pickup truck, apparently ran a stop sign at the intersection of KY 160 and KY 80 and ran into Cook's car. Cook was traveling west on KY 80 in his cruiser. The accident occurred about 2 p.m.

Cook had been deputy sheriff for about four months.

He is survived by his wife, Kitty Cook; a son, William Daniel Cook; a daughter, Marie Lynn Cook; and his parents, Rainie and Willie Cook

Roark was a student at Mayo Vocational School, Paintsville. His body was taken to the Dunn and Kelley Funeral Home, Salyersville.

Some critics of the change here, and of the new gym requirements that reflect it, date it to the replacement last year of Sharon Sammons as faculty sponsor at P.H.S. To Mrs. Allen and Bonnie Spencer-who inherited the job because no one else wanted it, Mrs. Allen says-has fallen the task of enforcing the controversial gym standards. They are also taking the brunt of the resultant criticism.

The "new" rules are two years old, the present sponsors argue in their own defense. It is just that-now that more girls are trying out than are needed for the varsity and junior varsity squads-the rules will inevitably exclude some aspirants. The current gym trials, designed to select next year's cheerleaders, brought a longsimmering controversy to the boil.

The trials were delayed two weeks in the face of a suit threatened by the parents of a youngster disqualified under the gym requirements last fall. When they were finally scheduled last Tuesday, under rules that gym instructor Henry Young labored to interpret with rigorous impartiality, some remained resentful not only that -as they saw it-a youngster might literally risk

Overdue Child Support Payment May Be Taken from Tax Refund

More than 7,000 Kentuckians who were to receive income tax refunds this year may, at best, receive only part of their refund. The Internal Revenue Service (IRS) will withhold all or part of the tax refund from parents who are not paying their child support. Because of a new federal law, states now can collect, with the help from the IRS, past-due child support payments for children receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). In Kentucky, the Department for Human Resources child support division certified that more than 7,000 persons owe

Floods, Topic of Pike Science Series Meet

Ben Ward, chairman of the Mining Technology Department at Pikeville College, will address the subject "Floods, Flood Control and Flood Plain Regulation" today (Wednesday), April 21 at 4:00 p.m. in room 102 of the Armington Science Building on campus. This presentation is being made in conjunction with the Science Seminar Series sponsored by the Division of Science and Technology at the college. Ward will cover everything there is to know about floods and will conduct a slide presentation on flood damages in Knoxville, Tennessee and Pike county.

more than $14 million in past-due payments. The names of persons owing more than $150 in child support for at least three months were referred to the IRS by the department.

According to Grady Stumbe, secretary of the Department for Human Resources parents affected by this project will be notified by the IRS that all or part of their tax refund has been withheld.

"At that time the money will be sent to the federal office for child support enforcement in Washington, D.C., for distribution to the state in which the child lives," said Stumbo. "These notices have already started arriving in Kentucky and other states.

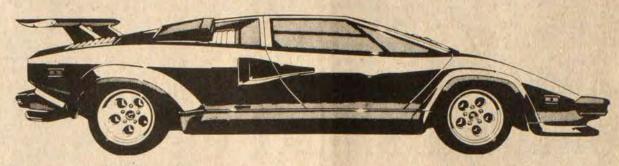

"In Kentucky, over 48,000 families receive AFDC benefits because one or both parents are voluntarily absent from the home," Stumbo said. "Many of these parents are making good livings and yet the public is paying to support their children. The department is working to shift the responsibility for support back to the parents, where it belongs," he said.

Last fiscal year, the department's child support enforcement division located 13,447 absent parents. This represents a 16 percent increase from the number of absent parents located during fiscal year 1980. Also, the division established over 1,500 paternities last year in cases where parents were not legally married, a 73 percent increase from 1980.

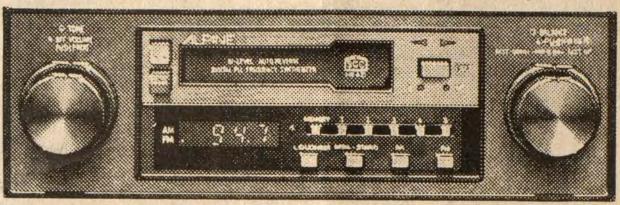

During fiscal year 1980 the department's share of the collections from parents delinquent on child support payments was over $1.3 million. Incentive pay to counties assisting the department was almost $600,000. This year Stumbo expects those figures to be much higher due, in part, to help from the IRS. Also, a similar project for withholding Kentucky tax refunds is being discussed.

The department's child support enforcement division advises any parent who feels his or her income tax refund is being withheld in error to contact the division in Frankfort, at (502) 564-2836.

Cardiologist From U.K. Gives Seminar At Martin

Dr. Anthony De Mario, director of cardiology at the University of Kentucky Medical Center, recently presented a seminar on "Heart Problems-Sudden Cardiac Death" to physicians and nurses at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, Martin.

Dr. De Mario joined the Cardiology Department at U.K. in August, 1981 after several years on the medical staff at the University of California. Dr. Roger Akers, chief of staff at the Martin Hospital, commented that "this is the first time that a Director of Cardiology from any university hospital has come to the mountains." He encouraged continued personal contact among physicians and medical centers

After pointing out the facts about cardiac deaths which total 750,000 per year, Dr. De Mario said that 40% could be managed by better and prompt medical care. He updated the attendees on current diagnostic tools and the strengths and weaknesses of each method. His hour and a half lecture touched on echocardiology, nuclear scanning, CAT scanning, EKG, holter monitoring, and treadmill stress testing Dr. Raghu Sundaram, director of Respiratory Therapy and Pulmonary Medicine at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, was instrumental in setting up the conference. Physicians from Prestonsburg, McDowell, Hindman and Mud Creek, as well as Martin, attended the seminar. About 10 nurses from the hospital also received continuing education.

At the regular monthly meeting of the medical staff of the hospital which followed Katie Isaac received privileges in the allied health professional category to practice midwifery in the OB department. She joins Sr. Roberta Naegele, who is also a nurse midwife on the staff at the Martin OB Department.

Where are the baby-boomers today, and what are their values? Families magazine talked with the author of Great Expectations: America and the Baby Boom Generation, Landon Jones, to get answers to these and other questions.

They have produced among themselves a highly negative atmosphere, he feels. "I had no idea that they would be so hard on one another," Landon comments, "that the competition would drive down the value of a college degree, that they would have trouble getting ahead at work, that they'd become disillusioned, that many of their expectations would be denied.

In the immediate future, Landon looks to a more tranquil period as people settle into their jobs and families, but in the long run, the picture may change once again.

"We'll have a different kind of elderly," he predicts. "Only ten percent of today's old people went to college. As a group, they have the largest number of immigrants, who tend to be conservative. "I DON'T KNOW WHAT TO SAY....."

Does the question of knowing the "proper" thing to say at the visitation keep you from going to a wake or funeral? It shouldn't!

Your appearance at a wake or funeral is always a support and expression of love to the bereaved. The words you express as you embrace or extend the clasp-of-hand can add a sincere feeling of warmth and concern—but the words aren't nearly as important as your "just being there."

Here are some expressions you might consider:

- "John was such a fine person. I will miss him."
- "My warmest sympathy to you and the family."
- "Mary was such a dear friend."
- "Mary enjoyed life and shared her joys so often with others."

You may find it easier to say these words of comfort if you practice them beforehand when you are alone. Sometimes just hearing yourself say the words out loud makes them easier to express to others.

The Gas Rate Increase

At a time when the ordinary citizen is being asked to tighten his belt, keep a stiff upper lip and nobly withstand the rigors of recession the utilities companies on which the life and comfort of that citizen rest are being permitted to increase rates almost at their pleasure.

All this is happening after the federal government "decontrolled" oil and gas, permitting producers to raise their prices as an inducement to them to do more exploratory drilling for these fuels. "Supply-side economics," which involves competition and the principle that a greater supply of fuel will control prices satisfactorily, was offered as an argument for justification of this action. But in actual practise the theory doesn't work. Without additional drilling, there already is a surplus of natural gas at hand, and still the prices mount. Besides, the individual or community depending upon one source for gas can't go shopping for competitive, or better, prices as one can do at neighborhood

The most tragic figure in this situation is the elderly person who depends on a fixed income-Social Security, for one-and already is hard-pressed to make ends meet: food to buy, rent to pay in most cases, water, gas and electric power bills due monthly. Gas bills that were $50 a month during the past winter will be, if the proposed raise stands unchanged, at least $100. Electric power rates already have been escalating.

Shall these people be callously advised to tighten their belts even more?

Equitable Gas Company and its subsidiary, Kentucky West Virginia Gas, have admittedly held the line against price increases longer than others, but that is poor solace, since their gas has taken the latest and the sharpest upward jump. Nor does it help the consumer to know that even these increases leave gas below electricity in cost.

Why did Kentucky West Virginia raise its rates? The only explanation we have had says, in short, that it was because the law, or a court, allowed it. We learn, also, that a company official has cited the need for greater income because of the high cost of drilling into deep formations for gas or oil.

Are we to construe this latter statement as asking for more money from company customers to pay for wells that are not yet drilled, are merely on the drawing board and could never be drilled? This would be the finest insurance known to man against losing on a "dry hole"-and look who's paying the premium!

It is encouraging to learn that the cities of Paintsville and Prestonsburg will file formal protests against the proposed rate increases. It would be more encouraging to know that Congressman Perkins and Senators Ford and Huddleston will work to get this entire rate matter out into the open through public hearings, in or outside Congress.

Public utilities—water, gas, electricity, telephone—are entitled to charges for their services that they can live with, but these charges must also be such the people can continue to

A serious blow to the area, said Dr. Mary Fox, Pikeville public health physician, will be the loss of health planning here, following a recent decision by the Lexington-based East Kentucky Health Systems Agency (EKHSA) to shut down its operation at the end of June. Founded under a 1976 federal law, the agency was designed to review all proposals for new health-care facilities in the eastern part of the state, to ensure that they conformed to an overall plan, met real needs, and did not duplicate existing facilities. The agency funded "subarea health councils" made up of providers and consumers in each AD district, and furnished them with staff assistance, in order to facilitate local input into health-care planning.

Staffing for the subarea councils has already been lost to funding cuts. Now the parent agency itself will close for reasons listed by its board as insufficient money, too much government regulation, and political interference in the health-planning process As an example of the latter, Dr. Fox cited the recent decision by the state Certificate of Need and Licensure Board to issue a certificate of need for a proposed Humana hospital in Lexington, reversing a decision of the EKHSA planners. A similar decision by the planning agency, turning down a bid to build a new hospital at Paintsville, was also overturned later by a licensure-board decision. The demise of the EKHSA and the subarea councils will spell the end of local input in the health planning process, which will be left without protection from the influence of powerful lobbyists at the state level, Dr. Fox her neck to meet the standards but also that many others would be too intimidated by them even to consider a spot on the squad.

Not even the critics are denying that gymnastic skill has its place. Rather, they say, it is a matter of proportion. At the very least, argue Liz Burchett and Donna Combs-two who went public with their criticism in recent letters to The Times-requiring a roundoff backhandspring so early in the season is unnecessary. Other skills, like hand motions, poise and rhythm, are equally important, they contend. And popularity should count for something too. And while no one appears to be arguing for a return to the old selection method-when cheerleading hopefuls performed their routines before the student body and earned their place on the squad by acclamation alone-some insist that the new method of selection, which bypasses student input entirely in favor of rigid gymnastic standards and dispassionate judges, is going too far in the opposite direction.

'The student body would probably support and respond more to cheerleaders they elected," argues Mrs. Burchett, whose daughter was on the varsity squad until her graduation last year. That argument is echoed by Mrs. Combs, a former junior varsity sponsor. "Cheerleaders not only need skills," she says. "They must be well liked among their peers and have a pleasing appearance, too. If that mattered once, it matters less now, others argue. "Cheerleaders are not a bunch of girls jumping up and down and clapping their hands," insists Karen Harris, whose daughter is hoping again for a berth on next year's varsity squad. "Today it's highly competitive. As the "progressive" parents and sponsors see it, cheerleading is maturing. It is marked by a new-found pride and assertiveness. It is a sport in its own right. Even if the basketball team does not make it as far as the state tournament, they point out, the cheerleading squad can make it on its own. Cheerleaders no longer exist merely to stir up enthusiasm for the athletes. the new argument runs. They are athletes themselves.

One matter on which all appear to agree is that cheerleading is underrated, underfunded and unappreciated. It shares a second-rate status in common with girls' sports in general. Just compare the hoopla and community support attending the boys' football team trip to Somerset this season, one is frequently urged, with the silence attending the cheerleaders' trip to Lexington.

It is not a feminist argument. Some women contend that cheerleading, whether on the grade school basketball or big league football circuit, is an affront to women's dignity-the idea of women wearing themselves out to focus attention on male athletes representing the very stereotype of sexist oppression.

But the argument of some cheerleading supporters here, while a good deal less radical than that, is yet an argument for equality-for equal support, equal time, equal facilities.

Theoretically, they have the backing of federal law-Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972, prohibiting sex discrimination in the nation's schools. But the law is not necessarily reflected in community attitudes. And even among those closely associated with girls' sports here-as the current storm over cheerleading illustrates-the question of equality with boys is secondary to that of fair treatment within the girls' own ranks.

Equality of opportunity, a new cheerleading generation is claiming, does not mean that every girl who tries out should make the squad. If gym standards eliminate some, that is the price of competitive success

But if the fit are judged on gymnastic skill, the traditionalists ask, by what right are the survivors called "cheer-

'Clarify The Points'

Since our critics are so wellinformed that they did not feel the need to hear us out by attending the (public) meeting of the board of education on April 7, we find it necessary to clarify the points we have tried to make.

The practice of early dismissals for anything other than an emergency situation is, first of all, illegal under Kentucky School law. Secondly, when classes are dismissed routinely for reasons other than emergencies, even the people in charge of our schools insinuate to students by actions (which speak louder than words) that classroom activities are not first priority. Third, frequent classroom interruptions must take its toll on the effectiveness of classroom instruction, regardless of the quality of that in-

While we do not expect the school system to be totally responsible for the development of our children, we do feel we have a right to expect the system to reinforce our parental instruction that academics are the first priority among school activities. By taking an informal survey of parents from all over the county, we have found the reasons for early dismissals to be many. However, three reasons stand out: 1. Emergencies (the only legal reason); 2. Fundraising activities; and, 3. Sports events.

While an emergency is an excusable reason for early dismissal, it is disturbing to find that because of interlocking bus schedules more than one school is frequently involved. Surely a plan can be developed to keep from dismissing more schools when only one has an emergency

Interrupting classroom instruction with fund-raising activities is inexcusable. While we understand the reasons, we cannot condone them. Children should not be used as a means of financing the system that was created to serve them. Indeed, principals should not be held responsible for providing funds. One of the responsibilities of the board of education is to provide funding for the schools. This is why the law gives it the ability to levy taxes. When we have to send children out to raise funds or we have to sell them junk to raise funds to pay for classroom materials, telephone bills, chalk, paper clips, and necessary operating supplies, then something is very wrong.

As has been noted, the percentage of children who participate in sports events is small, compared to total enrollment. This is all the more reason for preventing its interference in classroom curriculum and placing it in its "proper perspective". Sports events are extracurricular, which means "in addition to" classroom curriculum. When sports events interfere with classroom instruction, for whatever reason, they exceed the definition of extracurricular. In this light, it may be said that they are overemphasized.

Mayor Revives Water Purchase Plan at Martin

"The only alternative is for the City of Martin to utilize and help the Beaver-Elkhorn water system." So stated Martin Mayor Larry Hall last week in an executive order that appears likely to block the city council in its shaky progress toward a resolution of the city's water problems.

Following a recommendation of the Martin Water Commission, the council recently voted to spend federal funds on rebuilding the city's own water system. Mayor Hall has argued that the funds would be better spent on upgrading the neighboring Beaver-Elkhorn system to render it capable of supplying Martin's needs.

In an executive order dated April 16 and addressed to Kendall Seaton, state director of the Farmers' Home Administration, chief funder of the water project, the mayor asks that FmHA "put a hold" on the project pending a resolution of his differences with the Linking Martin with Beaver-Elkhorn, the mayor contends in his order, would "help the city at much less cost to consumers" than would the plan espoused by the council.

Noting that Beaver-Elkhorn already has a main running through the town, Mayor Hall argues that "no one can logically explain a duplication of ser-

Mourns Coal Tax Bill

An unmined minerals tax bill was defeated in this state legislative session, and bankrupt community services in Eastern Kentucky will therefore have to continue to go begging. A great many citizens from the area, including legislators and members of the Fair Tax Coalition worked hard for the measure-House Bill 549-which could have been a first step for simple tax justice in our moun-

The bill would place a fair tax on unmined coal which has remained virtually exempt from tax ever since its discovery here more than 80 years ago. Who has this exemption profited the most? Corporations based outside Eastern Kentucky that have bought the mineral rights out from under the people of the region. These corporations have plundered in two ways: first with the broad form deed at dirt cheap prices, then not paying rightful taxes on this most valuable of our properties.

With everyone knowing that those who own the most evade a tax on their wealth, there is no spirit for taxation of those here with lesser means. We are left without a way to raise adequate funds for local community services.

After a successfull passage through Appropriation and Revenue, HB 549 was sent back to its death in another committeé by the powerful Rules Committee, chaired by Speaker of the House Bobby Richardson and including Speaker Pro Tem David Thomason. These two and others in the House leadership apparently caucus on which bills to allow on the floor, and then the Rules Committee gives a quick stamp of approval. They strangled HB 549 before it could come to a full House vote. And who are these men? Outside of the legislatures they have private law practices. St Joe Minerals is one of Mr. Richardson's representative clients, and Consolidation Coal Co. is one of Mr. Thomason's. These companies are large owners and leaseholders of unmined coal. They would encounter unwanted costs if there were a tax on unmined minerals. Mr. Richardson's and Mr. Thomason's law businesses are dependent to some extent an these companies and they often represent these and other coal interests. When they act to stifle a bill to tax unmined minerals, the question of conflict of interest is raised.

Claims by the House leadership that an unmined minerals tax cannot work, or that severance tax already meets our needs, are a thin veil for their vested interests. Nineteen other states have an unmined minerals tax. In West Virginia 75% of severance tax revenue returns to coal producing counties, while in Kentucky it is a mere 8%.

The people of Eastern Kentucky ask the people of the rest of the state to examine these issues with concern and fairness. Visit our schools and drive our roads if you can, to understand our difficulties. Then work with us to challenge the power brokers in Frankfort and their outside corporate interests. Help end tax injustice in Kentucky. One step on the road to true resource recovery here is an unmined minerals tax, and it would benefit the

On Dismissal Issue

Last week there were numerous letters regarding the sports program and early dismissal policy of our school system. It seems that the issue quickly becomes clouded by emotion. Do we in this county think that if there is anything right about our schools then there must be nothing wrong?

I have watched this group of parents working to improve our local schools for four years now. They don't just look for something to complain about. They started by going to their local principal and volunteering to do whatever was asked. They have studied, listened and informed themselves. They have brought issues before the community and given us all a chance to be more aware of our own opinions. My response to the statement that they are "just a bunch of politically hungry women," is, heavens, let's hope so! What better candidate than one who has worked hard to educate herself or himself for no other gain than the betterment of the county's schools.

As for the role of sports in this area, I am sure they build character for some children, as I am sure they can also bring out the worst in some of us. Giving sports such an exaggerated priority can adversely affect the emphasis placed an academics. However, I suspect even if we do something about making our sports program more equitable and less time-consuming our academic standing will not automatically rise. We still need to take some affirmative action in upgrading our academic training. To do that, we parents need to be more informed and involved.

Defends Cheerleaders

Cheerleading has changed more in the last few years than anyone not directly involved can imagine. No longer is it just a bunch of girls jumping up and down, clapping their hands. It is a dedicated group of young ladies who are talented and coordinated, participating in a competitive sport.

This is not the first year PHS has had gymnastic requirements. This is the first year they have been enforced. This is also the first year in many years that a squad from the 58th district has represented our region. Our girls came in seventh out of over 300 squads in the state.

There have been no closed meetings, practices or skills tests. The girls and their parents who have attended all meetings, taken advantage of gymnastic instruction and enjoy cheerleading want to do everything possible to create a squad any school should be proud of. Do not form opinions from hearsay or rumors. Those who do not involve themselves in school activities under normal circumstances have not earned the right to criticize!

Many thanks to our sponsors. They took this non-paying job when asked and gave their time, cheerleading experience, concern and love to the girls. Many times they put aside their careers, families and homes for the squad. Who else but a parent would do all this? Thanks also to our principal, whose help we can always count on.

Congratulations, PHS cheerleaders, for a great year! May you receive all the respect and recognition you deserve in the future.

Favors Education

The General Assembly's defeat of the "slammer bill", which would have mandated jailing drunk drivers on first offenses, brought out many opinions on how to handle this problem

The Blue Grass Automobile Club, AAA, agrees that strong legislation and enforcement are needed. However, educating the public on problems of drinking and driving has to be the first priority if the situation is to be alleviated. Because many people will continue to drink and drive, there must be long-term city and state concentration to educate the public on how alcohol affects them, both mentally and physically, and how it affects their

Says Board Should Answer For Scores

It appears that after reading several stories in your paper, hearing stories from parents, teachers, and students, and then reading more letters to the editor this week, one may conclude that when we are discussing poor test scores in the schools, we are mixing apples and oranges. Rather than questioning why the scores are low, and what we can do about them, it seems that a bunch of issues are thrown into the pot so as to make a mess-and nobody really deals with this grave situation.

In any event, the issue is quite simple. The scores of standardized tests put our students below the state and national averages. From that, one could conclude that the Floyd County School System is not adequately preparing our students. One would then look at who is responsible for thse inadequacies.

Ultimately, the Floyd County Board of Education is responsible for the academic program in our schools. They have hired Pete Grigsby to carry out that program, and he, in turn, is the person with the job of hiring principals

So, if one looks at it from an unbiased position, without being a basketball coach or someone that has a particular vested interest, he or she would quickly ask what the Board is doing, or plans to do, to remedy these test scores and what is Grigsby's plan to deal with this grave situation?

I guess that I can only suggest that we be a little creative in our approach to bettering our childrens' educations. All too often, we read about, or hear about, power politics in the county. Discussions over low test scores need not be mixed with a variety of other

The issue, again, is simple: we have low test scores, which is commonly accepted as a reflection of a lower quality of education than in other areas that are given the same test. The Board of Education and Mr. Grigsby should be held accountable for these problems. If they are unable to come up with a proper solution, or at least a viable attempt to remedy this situation, then there is only one thing that we can collectively do: get some board members who will deal effectively with the problem and suggest that qualified personnel be hired in administrative capacities, at the county level, to design the necessary programs.

FLOYD COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

By JANE BOND Health Educator

Cervical cancer accounts for almost 11,000 deaths of women each year, yet this type cancer can be one of the most curable of all cancers if it is detected early enough. It can be detected through a simple painless test called the Pap test which takes only a few moments of a woman's time and could save her life.

The Floyd County Health Department is having pap clinics at both the Prestonsburg office and the Wheelwright branch office. The Prestonsburg clinic will take place Friday from 8:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. The Wheelwright clinic will be on Wednesday, April 28, from 9 a.m. till 2 p.m.

These clinics are free services of the health department and any woman who has not had a pap test in the past year is urged to take advantage of this service.

Water Only: Advised For Bedtime Bottle

The Kentucky Dental Association recommends that parents who put their babies to bed with a bottle give only water in the bottle.

"Parents who put their babies to bed with a bottle containing a soft drink or even orange juice or milk are unknowingly doing something that could lead to serious dental problems," Dr. T.E. Logan, Sr., Executive Director of the Kentucky Dental Association, said

Sugar in these liquids mixes with plaque (rhymes with "back") that is in everyone's mouth. Plage is a sticky film made of saliva, cells from the mouth, and bacteria. The sugar and plaque form acids. The acids attack the tooth enamel while a baby sleeps, often causing lasting damage.

The same thing can happen if a baby is given a bottle containing sweetened liquids often throughout the day. This "snacking" gives bacteria a chance to attack a baby's teeth repeatedly.

"The primary or baby teeth are important because they hold the place for the permanent teeth that come later," said Dr. Logan.

Decay of an infant's teeth can cause early loss of the important first teeth. This loss can result in crooked and crowded teeth, speech difficulties, and poor self-image. Chewing may become difficult, so good nutrition may become a problem

The early loss of teeth can also alter the shape of a child's growing face. This causes a permanent change in appearance that can affect the child for a lifetime.

"Parents can help to prevent early decay by following some basic guidelines," Dr. Logan said.

'Babies should be given only water in the bedtime or naptime bottle. Even orange juice and milk-which are both good sources of nutrients your baby needs-contain sugars. These sugars can cause decay if they are given in a bottle often or when a baby is falling

"Juice and milk should be fed to a baby at regular times, and constant or frequent feeding should be avoided. If a baby is thirsty between feedings, water should be given.

"Parents can and should clean a baby's teeth as soon as the first tooth erupts. Using a gauze pad or clean washcloth, a parent can gently wipe away plaque.

"And even a baby can benefit from a dental check-up. Taking preventive measures early can help to minimize problems later.

For more information on how parents can give babies a headstart on a lifetime of healthy teeth and how prevention can help to keep dental care costs low, call the Kentucky Dental Association at 1-800-292-1855 (toll-free)

Hearing on Primacy Restraint Slated Saturday Morning

Johnson Circuit Judge James A. Knight has been asked in a motion filed by the state Department for Natural Resources to dismiss the restraining order which he issued last Tuesday, at least temporarily stalling Kentucky's takeover of primacy in the control of coal mining regulations.

A hearing on the motion to dismiss will be held in circuit court at Paintsville Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

The Department for Natural Resources has also asked Judge Kright to increase the amount of the bond posted by the plaintiffs in the case, R. M. Morris, of Paintsville, Charles Marshall, of Salyersville, and Morris & Marshall, Inc., from $5000 to $70 million.

The restraining order stalling primacy for Kentucky came at the eleventh hour, as Kentucky officials were in Washington to meet with Interior Secretary James Watts for the signing of the agreement. Kentucky, which has been trying for primacy for two years now, actually had received a conditional go-ahead from Washington when the restraining order was issued by Judge Knight.

John Graham Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held its regular monthly meeting April 13 at the Emma Wells May Cultural Center, with the regent, Mrs. Victor Hale, presiding, and Mrs. Opal S. May conducting the ritualistic service.

After consulting with Mrs. Edith James concerning the Highlands Folk Festival to be held in October, it was agreed that the D.A.R. would set up an information booth at the Amphitheatre at Jenny Wiley State Park during the festival.

It was reported that Mrs. Margaret Spradlin, a D.A.R. member, had purchased from the chapter a marker for the grave of her mother, Mrs. Ridda Finlayson, who was a member of John McKinley Chapter, D.A.R., Lexington, at the time of her death, and is buried in the Mayo cemetery at Paintsville.

The leader for the meeting, Mrs. Virginia A. Goble, introduced the speaker, Dr. Robert McAninch, professor of Political Science and Philosophy at Prestonsburg Community College, who spoke on "National Defense" and "El Salvador's Situation." Johnson County Has New Supt.

Johnson county has a new superintendent of schools following the resignation last Friday of Supt. Orville L. Hamilton after holding the office nine years.

The Johnson County Board of Education hired 64-year-old Willis Hershel Conley last Friday to succeed Hamilton. The vote was 3-2. When the board "reaffirmed" Conley's hiring Monday, the vote was unanimous.

The new superintendent has been employed as federal programs administrator in the school board's central office, also for nine years. Ex-Supt. Hamilton said Monday that his brother, Frank Hamilton, will remain as assistant superintendent.

Hamilton blamed "relentless harassment and negativism" toward him on the part of two members of the fivemember board. Both Ervin O'Bryan, of Leander, and Worth Goble, of West Van Lear, the board members who voted against Conley's employment at Friday's meeting, were quoted as saying they thought Conley "can be his own man." Goble said he opposed Conley on the first vote because he would have liked to have had applications from five or six persons before making an appointment.

O'Bryan and Goble have been at odds with Hamilton since their election two years ago. They have two years remaining in their terms. The terms of Woodford Estep and Garry Meeks, both of Boons Camp, who favored Hamilton, expire this year. Clyde VanHoose, board chairman, was listed as pro-Hamilton.

Cleanliness Comes Before Comfort. Magistrates Rule

Benches recently removed from the courthouse on the order of Judge-Executive Jerry Lafferty, Jr. will not be replaced, the fiscal court decided in the course of a special meeting last

County Surveyor Elmer Rice had asked the court to replace the benches, which were originally removed, it was said, in an effort to improve the cleanliness of the courthouse.

Magistrate Gerald DeRossett voted to grant Rice's request but was outvoted by Magistrates Kenneth Roberts and Lowell Samons, who joined Lafferty in denying it.

The court also voted to name the swimming pool and golf course at the Stumbo Park at Allen after George Evans, well-known coal developer, who was instrumental in making property available for the park.

Ky. Power Employees Honored Fifth Time For Safety Record

Employees of the Pikeville Division of Kentucky Power Company have been honored for the fifth consecutive year by the American Electric Power System, of which Kentucky Power is a part, for their safety record.

There has not been a disabling injury in the Pikeville Division since November 25, 1974.

"We are extremely proud of our employees because of their continued consciousness about safety, both on the job and in everything else they do at home and other places. This is a record all of us can be proud of and point to when we discuss safety and what it takes to have one of the best working environments there is," said W.W. Zoellers, manager of the Pikeville Division.

He pointed out safety is a companyside effort at Kentucky Power. "And, the Pikeville employees are a shining example of what it takes to be a safe worker and a safe member of every community in which they live."

The Pikeville employees had worked 2,163,476 safe hours through the end of February-the last date for which figures have been compiled.

New Home Purchase Mortgages Available

Veterans Administration-guaranteed Graduated Payment Mortgages (GPM) are now available with lower down payments for new home purchases.

The new program is part of the Veterans' Disability Compensation, Housing and Memorial Benefits Amendments passed by Congress last

Under the GPM monthly payments are lower for the first few years than the corresponding monthly payments on a traditional mortgage for the same amount. In a GPM mortgage a portion of the interest due on the loan each month is deferred and added to the principal balance of the loan. This is done during the early years. In a traditional mortgage all the interest and a portion of the principal are scheduled to be paid each month.

After a set number of years, the payments become a constant amount for the duration of the loan. From that point on each scheduled loan payment includes all of the interest due plus a portion of the principal, as in a traditional mortgage.

The VA will guarantee only those GPM's which feature annual payment increases of 7.5 percent, implemented on each annual anniversary date of the loan, for the first five years.

On new homes the downpayment with a VA GMP may be as low as 2.5 percent of the sales price or reasonable value of the property, whichever is

In Memoriam

In loving memory of Mother, Mrs. James (Margie Akers) Osborne, who departed this life April 19, 1978. One of our beautiful roses was taken from our midst.

And we loved her and cherished her so dearly!

Mother, we long for you, but we would not, if we could,

Bind you back down on this earth. You wanted to be set free-like a bird Or like a leaf that's let go of the tree.

We try not to begrudge your Heaven-and of all your new joys and activities. It comforts us to know that you are strolling through Heaven with God! You were weak and frail, but now you're strong and free, Precious, precious Mother-wife-and sweet, sweet Mammaw. We wish that you could describe and help us see, All the beautiful flowers-all the beautiful scenes, We hope one day with you we will be ... And with God...And, Oh, our dearly

You are really living now and will live throughout eternity.

We've asked God to release us of this hurting loss of you. But this is such a lonely, heavy, heart-rending grief! Only with and by the grace of God, we can make it through We're happy for you, Mother, but we get a little selfish too. But we know God understands this tremendous love and want of you!

the boxes, the poor man would thus be given a chance in elections and would not need a strong organization to protect him from theft at the polls

By eliminating theft in elections, such a statute would. Mr. Stephens holds, at the same time eliminate the main cause of contest suits, which is usually on the grounds that the defeated candidate has not received a fair count.

Attention is called to the fact that the bill provides for the certification by election officials at the various vot-ing precincts to merely the number of ballots used and unused, thereby prohibiting the raising or the lowering of the vote for or against any candidate, as was done throughout the state in the recent primary The author of the bill also points out that the enactment of such a statute would encourage many of the best citizens to vote, since they would be assured that their votes would be counted for the candidate for whom they were cast. The situation exists in which many upright citizens are inclined not the bill would remedy, By holding up the tabulation of the vote until the meeting of the election commissioners, with the boxes locked proken off or relaid so as to form a change the precinct totals would be practically nil, it is contended. The suggestion is offered that the bill could be amended so as to authorize the leaving of the keys with the Republican and the Democratic election commissioners, each with a key to each of the several boxes, thus avoiding the possicility of what is commonly termed to the returns. Counties having cities of the first, second, or even the third class would of necessity require a greater number of election commissioners in order to expedite vote tabulation The argument is anticipated that the proposed system would retard tabulation of returns, but Mr. Stephens contends that two or three days of suspense would not work even a slight de gree of the harm wrought by election thieves and the resultant contest suits at an expense of thousands of dollars,

Kiwanians Take On Bengals

On a Sunday in January the eyes of the sports world were focused on them as they battled the San Francisco Forty-niners in the Super Bowl. This past Sunday, five members of the American Football Conference champion Cincinnati Bengals were at the high school gymnasium here to take on the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club's "All-Stars" in a basketball contest to raise funds for Area 11 Special Olympics.

to high school regulations, it would have seemed a certain bet that the Kiwanians, made up of mostly local talent, would have faltered against the seasoned world class Bengals. But guess what-the All-Stars won! Of course, they had a "little" help in the form of former UK basketball great Jack "Goose" Givens and UK senior Bo Lanter. The final score in the contest was 64-52

Members of the Bengal team included such familiar names as Isaac Curtis, wide receiver; defensive back Ray Griffin (brother of Archie): M. L. Harris, tight end; Mike Obrovac, offensive guard, and Gary Burley, defensive Teaming up with Givens and Lanter against the Cincinnati onslaught were local "hotshots" Gorman Collins, Jr., Jim Curtis, Tom Mattox, Rob Schissler, Mat Leach, Pat Leach, Paul Hughes, Ron Chaffins, Ed Kegley, and Dean Pack.

Halftime at the game offered the opportunity for the youngsters and notso-young to flock to collect autographs of the football stars, Lanter, and, especially all-time NCAA team member Givens. An official basketball, autographed by the Bengals, the UK players, and the All-Stars, was raffled and won by Melissa Stewart, of Harold. Two other prizes were also raffled and presented to Judith Adams, of Prestonsburg and Hillard Branham, of Weeksbury.

Officials at the game were Barry Howell and Phillip Tucker. P.A. work and statistics were handled by Lennie Grant, clock and score board by Todd Special Olympics is a program which provides organized, athletic competition for handicapped youngsters. Area 11 includes Floyd county schools. A spokesman for the Kiwanis said other fund-raising activities are being planned for the special olympics which is scheduled in two weeks at Pikeville.

The Prestonsburg Blackcat baseball team came up with four hits and three runs in the bottom of the eighth inning to win their first game of the season last Friday over the Magoffin county Hornets. Monday, the Blackcats met the Betsy Layne Bobcats at Z. S. Dickerson Field where they scored their second win, 5 to 4.

Coach Jimmy Cecil's Bobcat nine led 4 to 1 when the Blackcats tied the game in the seventh but in the bottom of the eight, Jay Whittaker walked and was replaced by James Little who stole se-cond and was driven in by John Gilliam's single. James Stanley started and went the distance for the Blackcats. His battery mates were Jay Whittaker and John Burchett. Stapleton, the starting pitcher for Betsy Layne, was relieved by Castle, who was charged with the loss, and on the credit side, scored a solo home run.

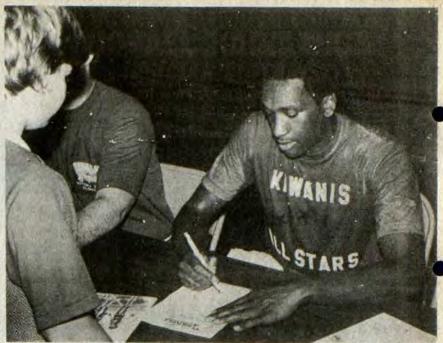

Coach Danny Johnson's Whee!wright Trojans ran their record to five wins with a 20 to 3 defeat of McDowell, Monday. Pitcher Charlie Williams picked up his third win without a defeat; Terry Conley relieved for the Trojans in the final two innings. The Wheelwright duo gave up only six hits, and the Trojans tagged the Dare Devils with 18 hits, including Roger Tackett with 4 for 5, and hitting a homer and double for five rbi's. Sam Smith had 3 for 5, and Whitey Slone, 3 for 4.

Last week, the Trojans and Dorton battled in a 19-all scoring marathon. The game was called due to darkness but will be replayed in a doubleheader to be scheduled later at Wheelwright.

After one week's scheduled meets were cancelled due to cold weather, Prestonsburg High School's tennis squad returned to action over the past week with a big win over an experienced Bath County team.

As it turned out, all three matches were close with one-going to a tie breaker, but Prestonsburg's pairs managed to

Suspect Arrested In Martin Killing

A Martin county man is in the Johnson county jail at Paintsville, charged with murder in connection with the stabbing death of another Martin county man last week.

James Millard Sizemore, 19, of Tomahawk, was arrested after the death of George Spence Jr., 18, also of Tomahawk, according to Kentucky State Police.

Police said Spence was stabbed once in the upper right chest about 2 a.m. He was declared dead at the scene by Johnson County Coroner Brian Fraley.

A jail spokesman said Sizemore also has been charged with burglary, theft by unlawful taking and arson. His bond is $70,000 on all charges, he said.

The killing was linked with the breaking into a church house on Chestnut road, about three miles north of Whitehouse, where the stabbing occurred. Another Tomahawk man, identified as Timothy K. Mollett, 19, was arrested on charges of theft by unlawful taking in connection with the alleged break-in, sheriff's deputies said. His bond was set at $5,000, they said.

The jail spokesman said the church house was set afire and destroyed after the burglary. He said he did not know to which church the house belonged.

Charles Darwin: An Unlikely Revolutionary

By MADELEINE JACOBS Smithsonian News Service

A few years before his death in April 1982, Charles Darwin fondly recalled how he almost lost the race for immortality by a page.

tality by a nose.

The fateful turning point occurred on Sept. 5, 1831. Through a stroke of good fortune, the young man of 22 had been recommended for the position of naturalist onboard His Majesty's Ship Beagle, which was about to set forth on a round-the-world expedition to obtain more accurate longitudinal reckonings and to chart the coastline of South America.

An eager Darwin hurried to London from his home in Shrewsbury near the Welsh-English border for his interview with the dashing Admiralty captain, Robert Fitzroy. Like many fashionable people of his era, Fitzroy believed he could judge a man's character by the outline of his features. Now, as he gazed at the pleasant-looking, broad-browed fellow with sideburns and mild brown eyes, Fitzroy was disturbed.

Darwin's nose, in the naval officer's opinion, showed clear signs of a lack of energy and determination. It was simply not the nose of a man who could endure the rigors of a voyage around the world.

Why Fitzroy overcame his doubts and hired the inexperienced naturalist is lost to history. "But I think he was afterwards well-satisfied that my nose had spoken falsely," Darwin wrote in his 1876 autobiography.

Thus, on such a trifle rested the voyage that changed the course of Darwin's life and forever altered the way human beings think about their lives and other life on earth. For it was on the Beagle's 57-month journey that Darwin accumulated the vast store of plants, animals, observations and notes that led to his theory of evolution. One hundred years after his death, the world is still caught up in this great intellectual revolution.

From outward signs, Darwin was an unlikely candidate as intellectual or revolutionary. He was born on Feb. 12, 1809, into a life of wealth and ease. His father, Robert, a prosperous country doctor, ruled the family as a benevolent dictator. His mother, Susannah, was the daughter of Josiah Wedgwood, founder of the famous potteries.

Darwin's carefree childhood was marred only by the death of his mother when he was 8. By then, the boy had already developed a "taste for natural history" and was busily sharpening the keen powers of observation that would later serve him so well. His passion for collecting knew no bounds: newts from a quarry pool, pebbles, shells,postal franks, coins, minerals, insects—all found their way into his pockets.

Always somewhat self-deprecating, Darwin labeled his early education "a blank" and much preferred the life of the leisure classes—hunting, shooting, partying with his nearby Wedgwood cousins. "I believe," Darwin recalled, "that I was considered by all my masters and by my Father as a very ordinary boy, rather below the common standard in intellect. To my deep mortification my Father once said to me, 'You care for nothing but shooting, dogs and rat-catching, and you will be a disgrace to yourself and all your family!"

Robert Darwin packed his youngest son off to the University of Edinburgh to study medicine but soon realized that his son was unlikely to follow in his footsteps. Young Darwin was next dispatched to Cambridge to study for the clergy, the other respectable profession for the son of the wealthy at that time. This move was a never-ending source of irony to Charles, who in his youth believed in the literal truth of the Bible. "Considering how fiercely I have been attacked by the orthodox," he wrote, "it seems ludicrous that I once intended to be a clergyman."

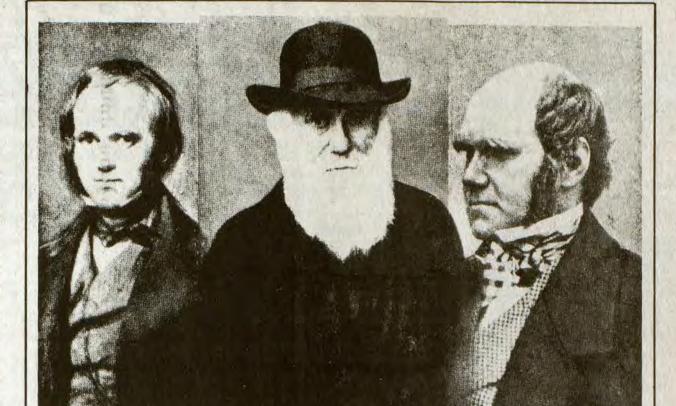

At Cambridge Darwin established a reputation as a happy-go-lucky, smoking and drinking man, an expert rider, lover of Shakespeare, music and unusual foods. (Unwisely, as it turned out, he and fellow gourmets once attempted to feast upon an old brown owl.)

But Darwin also talked and socialized with eminent scientists at Canbridge,

Enlarged Curiosity. "There were islands on which he collected almost every creature that flew, ran or crawled."

Darwin quickly converted his cramped quarters into a miniature lab and museum jammed with jars of snakes and spiders, butterflies and beetles, birds, seashells, fossils, plants and seeds, skins and stones. When he wasn't collecting and digging up fossils or studying his specimens or clambering up mountains on muleback, he recorded his impressions.

dication of future success in life!"

By the end of the trip, he had filled more than 24 leatherbound, hastily scribbled, nearly illegible pocketbooks and written 39 long letters to his family from remote corners of the globe, 1,000 pages of geology, botany and zoology notes and 800 diary pages. From the thousands of specimens he shipped to a colleague in England, Darwin began to gain a considerable reputation in scientific circles.

Meanwhile, his beliefs were altering dramatically. He had begun to question totally the story of creation-to Fitzroy's dismay-and the unchangeable nature of species, a widely accepted tenet in those days. On the Galapagos Islands, Darwin was struck by the phenomenal diversity of life. On one island alone, he counted 26 species of land birds, all unique. "Here, both in space and time," he counted 26 species of land birds, all unique. "Here, both in space and time," he wrote, "we seem to be brought somewhat near to that great fact-that mystery of mysteries-the first appearance of new beings on earth.

On return to England, he took up lodgings in London and zealously devoted himself to classifying his specimens, writing up his research and consulting with established scientists, many of whom because his lifelong supporters. Within months, Darwin began to shape his evolutionary theories, drawing on the wealth of information from his Beagle sojourn.

He also contemplated marriage, although he had no one in mind. Organizing his arguments into two columns, "Marry" and "Not Marry," Darwin noted that marriage could be "an infinity of trouble and expense." But, then, he reminded himself, "One cannot live this solitary life, with groggy old age, friendless and cold and childless... Never mind, trust to chance—keep a sharp look out.—There is many a happy slave—."

His sharp eye paid off, and in 1839 he married his cousin Emma Wedgwood. Shortly afterward, the newlyweds moved to Down House, about 20 miles outside London. Emma became Darwin's "happy slave," providing a tranquil refuge for their 10 children, seven of whom survived childhood, and her now sickly husband. For, by this time, Darwin was experiencing the daily headaches, nausea, vomiting and outbreaks of eczema that mysteriously plagued him the remainder of his life.

Gone forever was the robust, energetic adventurer of the 1830s. He was not, however, replaced by a brooding, ill-tempered person implied by the bearded portraits of Darwin in old age. From all accounts, he was a doting father, generous friend and, by Emma's description "the most open, transparent man I ever saw...and perfectly sweet-tempered."

For the next 40 years, Darwin rarely ventured outside Down House, traveling only occasionally to visit family or to take "water cures." His routine never varied: Up at 7, a stroll on his "thinking path" before breakfast, work in his study, rest. The most important working period of his day was between 10:30 and noon. Then followed another walk, lunch, rest, correspondence, dinner, backgammon with Emma, reading, bedtime at 10:30.

But in his study, his scientific life was tumultuous. He searched indefatigably for still more facts to illustrate how species change, carried out extensive experiments with plants and animals and bombarded his friends with questions on their own work.

In 1844 he wrote an essay outlining his essential theories, but cautious as always, he was not yet ready to publish, despite the urging of friends who feared he would lose priority for his ideas. He might never have published at all had the naturalist Alfred Russel Wallace not come along with an essay containing nearly identical thoughts

Finally, in 1859, Darwin published On the Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection, or the Preservation of Favoured Races in the Struggle for Life. His "abominable volume," which, Darwin said, "has cost me so much labour that I almost hate it," sold out before publication day.

Characteristically, throughout the ensuing debate, Darwin remained above the fray. "He wrote letters of encouragement, gratitude and exhortation to those who had taken up the cause of his theory," biographer Brent relates, "but found himself unable to venture onto the barricades.

Yet, this sickly man laboring away in his study produced more than most healthy people might produce at the height of their vigor. In his lifetime, Darwin wrote 15 books and four monographs, including eight new titles in his last decade.

When he died on April 19, 1882, even his opponents acknowledged Darwin a genius, and he was buried in Westminster Abbey.

Darwin's gifts, according to historians, included "a lifelong gift to see with childlike clarity," an ability to ask searching questions and "a leaping gift for synthesis, for seeing meaning beyond the detail, for making unsuspected connections." And, because his work revolutionized the world, it is tempting to think of him as a rebel.

"The truth is that Darwin was never a rebel, even within the sciences,' Brent says. "The fact that he came to revolutionary conclusions was the result rather of his profound respect for authority"-the laws of nature.

Typically modest, Darwin himself attributed his success-"whatever this may have amounted to"-to his "love of science-unbounded patience in long reflecting over any subject-industry in observing and collecting facts-and a fair share of invention as well as of common sense. With such moderate abilities as I possess, it is truly surprising that thus I should have influenced to a considerable extent the beliefs of scientific men on some important points."

Knott Group Offers Help For Dyslexia Sufferers

A little over two years ago a small group of concerned parents went to Hindman Settlement School, looking for a place to hold a weekly tutoring session. These parents had noticed that their children were having a very difficult time in school, even though they were obviously normal and intelligent

Realizing there was something wrong, they began searching for help. This search led them to the Kentucky Association for Specific Perceptual Motor Disability based in Louisville, an organization founded in 1968 to carry on the work of Dr. Charles Shedd, a pioneer in developing a remedial program fro dyslexic children. (Dyslexia, frequently termed "word blindness" is a visual motor perception disability caused by a breakdown in the central nervous system and resulting in reading, writing and spelling problems.)

With the help of the Kentucky Association for SPMD and support from the Hindman Settlement School and the Knott school system, a tutorial program for dyslexics was begun. Today there are 30 students, 30 tutors and four supervisory personnel working in the program.

During the past six months Lois Weinberg, founder and director of the Knott county program, and Mike Mullins, director of the Hindman Settlement School, have been traveling to the surrounding counties to raise the visibility of this learning disability. Workshops have been provided for reading specialists and special education personnel from the Floyd, Perry and Letcher county school systems and the Jenkins and Hazard city schools. Presentations have been made to various civic clubs and articles and advertisements have been placed in local newspapers. Wednesday, April 21, Mrs. Weinberg will be on Charlie Wilson's call in show on WSGS radio in Hazard. All of this is being done so that other concerned parents can find help for their children.

For a child to be helped, he or she must be screened to see if this learning disability exists. The screenings, which are conducted by Kentucky Association for SPMD personnel, take about two and a half hours per child. Any parent interested in having his or her child screened must send a letter of request to either Lois Weinberg or Mike Mullins, Box Q, Hindman, Kentucky 41822. The next series of screenings will take place April 28 and 29.

The present tutoring program for dyslexics meets on Tuesday afternoons from 3:45 to 7:15 p.m. in the Knott County Human Services Center adjacent to the Hindman Settlement School. There are 13 class sessions in the fall and 13 in the spring. The Knott county program is expanding this summer to include a six-week, eight-hours a-day, five-days-a-week tutorial program. Only 40 students will be accepted, so if a child has this problem, he or she must be screened on either April 28 or 29. No child will be accepted for the summer program without being screened and diagnosed as having the problem.

For further information about this learning disability, call Lois Weinberg (606-251-3240) or Mike Mullins (606-785-5475 or 5024).

Q. I recently had a mastectomy, and I'd like to learn about breast reconstruction. Am I just being vain to want it?

A. No, you are not vain. Breast reconstruction is the procedure used by plastic surgeons to create a natural looking breast shape following surgery. An implant is inserted under the skin and muscle of the chest. Any woman expecting her "new" breast to exactly match the unoperated one will be disappointed. However, plastic surgeons report that few women who choose reconstruction regret their decision.

Reconstructive surgery has become more available in the past few years because it is safe and relatively simple and inexpensive in that many medical insurance plans pay part of the cost.

The American Society of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgeons says that almost any woman who has had a mastectomy can have a breast mound implanted. Reconstruction for the woman who had much of her skin and chest muscle removed is also possible. Such a woman would benefit from discussing the advantages and disadvantages not only with the surgeon but also with women who have had the procedure.

The decision to have any kind of plastic suregery is a personal one. What others think is not important. Your happiness lies in correcting what you regard as a defect. If reconstructive surgery will add to your physical well-being and emotional health, by all means investigate the possibilities.

For more information about this subject, call the Cancer Hopeline toll free at 1-800-432-9321 and ask for a free copy of "Breast Reconstruction." Counselors are available Monday-Thursday from 9-9 and Friday 9-5. You may also write 915 South Limestone Street, Lexington 40536.

Good News Report

By THOMAS W. PAUKEN Director of ACTION

This is the story of a western town that is proving the spirit of the old West's voluntarism is just as vigorous today as it was way back when. Cannonville, Utah, near Bryce Canyon, is not much larger than a postage stamp, but its 158 residents and its enterprising mayor, Laurie Holley, have made it a special place to live. Eight years ago when Mayor Holley was elected, the town needed a new water system; that, or Cannonville was on the way to becoming a ghost town. Through the Mayor's efforts, a federal grant was obtained and local bonds sold. Together they saved the day. Having an ample water supply was an incentive to the townspeople; they were anxious to make Cannonville prosper and grow. Even though there were no more funds available, they decided they needed a community center. As Laurie Holley told Valerie Schulthie, a reporter with the Salt Lake City Desert News, everyone with a vehicle headed for the hills and brought back rocks. Others cut, hauled and peeled logs. A local contractor donated his crew's time and labor to oversee construction. Like an oldfashioned house raising, the town raised the community center and made it an all-purpose gathering place for local and social groups. Inspired, they decided to take on the development of a town recreation park. On their own time and with their own planning and effort, they landscaped, built and installed playground and picnic equipment, planting the area with trees and shrubs.

Next, at Mayor Holley's suggestion, a survey of priorities was conducted by Cannonville volunteers through a Utah State University program. As a result, townspeople agreed to sign up for one of four building and beautification committees. A fire station was found to be the number one priority, and volunteers went forth to raise funds for its equipment.

The fact is that while Cannonville's residents would never change the town's name, it could be called Volunteerville, for the people who live there have found that the best and the surest way to get done what needs to be done is to join in and do it together.

President Reagan has placed a new emphasis on voluntarism, its importance in our society, its value to the community and the sense of personal responsibility it affords. The people of Cannonville, Utah, are an on-going example of what he is talking about.

The secret to keeping medicines fresh, potent and safe is to store them in a dark, cool, dry spot out of the reach of children. Too often, medicines are kept in cabinets above a bathroom sink. Storage in this area is often permeated with steam and provides easy access to a child. It is suggested that a better storage area is the top shelf of your hallway linen closet. Be sure to check all medicines for freshness before using. Check overthe-counter drugs for an expiration date. Spoilage can often be detected as well by a change in color, odor or other physical changes. If you have any doubt about a medicine's freshness or potency, check with your pharmacist.

If you're taking any medication, always remember to follow the directions for proper storage, otherwise you risk spoiling the medicine. At COOLEY APOTHE-CARY we have a full service prescription center. We also carry a variety of convalescent items. You'll find us at No. 2 Town Center Bldg. EAGLES ATTRACTED TO KENTUCKY

The results of January's eagle census show that Kentucky is attracting more and more wintering bald eagles each year, says Jim Durell, an assistant director of wildlife with the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the coordinator of the state eagle count.

"Our observers counted 141 bald eagles this year," Durell says, "and this is an significant increase from the 105 last year."

Since the nationwide eagle population is up only slightly, the big jump in Kentucky eagles probably means that more and more of these birds are choosing to winter here rather than wherever they've been going, Durell

By now, many of the eagles that spent the winter in Kentucky have moved out, according to Durell, and by summer almost all will be gone. Most of them probably spend the summers in the Great Lakes region and move south when lakes start to freeze over there

The largest concentration of eagles was on the Ballard Wildlife Area in far western Kentucky, where 43 were sighted. Next in numbers of eagles was Land Between the Lakes, with 17.

In Eastern Kentucky, the biggest concentration is in the Dale Hollow-Cumberland region, where 24 eagles were counted. One bird was spotted at the Minor Clark Fish Hatchery at Cave Run Lake, the eastern-most eagle in the count.

As far as can be determined, no eagles have nested in Kentucky in recent times, although this situation might change in the next few years. Biologists at Land Between the Lakes are in the third year of a program which could establish a breeding population in the state.

The process, called "hacking," involves raising young eagles in an enclosed, elevated platform with minimal contact with humans. When the young birds are capable of flight, they are released and if all goes accorarea to breed when they mature,

So far, five eagles have been "hacked" in this manner over the last two years. But since it takes an eagle five years to mature, we won't know for at least another three years if these particular eagles will return and nest in Kentucky.

Eagles are, of course, strictly protected by both state and federal laws, as are all hawks, owls and other birds of prey. Populations of many of these birds (particularly fish eating ones like eagles and ospreys) reached critically low levels before DDT and other similar pesticides were banned in this country, but now populations are on the rise.

Making an IRA Work for Your Heirs

Investing in an Individual Retirement Account encourages the creation of a personal pension plan with a secure future. But how can IRAs help plan a financial future for your spouse, children and other potential heirs?

An IRA that allows beneficiaries to receive the funds and the tax benefits should be a key consideration in deciding where to open the personal pension plan, according to Secretary of Public Protection and Regulation Tracy Farmer.

Many Kentuckians look at IRAs because of the individual tax savings. These savings are accrued by depositing up to $2,000 a year, deducting it from income taxes and leaving monies to accumulate untaxed until retirement

At the same time, it is all too easy to overlook how the tax savings affects potential heirs. Areas such as the payment of estate taxes upon death and the possibility of deferred income taxes on any inherited IRA savings should be reviewed BEFORE setting up the account.

"Assuring your heirs' security with IRA savings is just like planning any other part of your estate through a will or an insurance policy," the secretary said. "Seeing that the tax savings for beneficiaries are part of the original IRA contract insures a smooth transfer of funds for all concerned."

Farmer and Banking and Securities Commissioner Morris Smith reiterated that most of the questions about inheriting an IRA deal with estate taxes and tax benefits.

When weighing estate taxes and IRAs, one should remember the following points:

For spouses, federal taxes can be minimized. Currently, there are no federal taxes on money left to a spouse. What's more, there are no taxes if the total value of your estate, including IRAs, does not exceed $225,000 this year. That exclusion rises every year until, by 1987, estates worth as much as $600,000 will owe no federal tax.

State taxes, however, on mediumsize estates are not so clear cut for surviving mates. This is because of death taxes which vary from place to place. The safest way to know how the state taxes affect you is to ask for legal

If the beneficiary of the IRA is someone other than a spouse, estate taxes can be minimized by spreading

Road Contracts Let

The Kentucky Department of Transporation has awarded 111 contracts for $22.3 million for projects in 75 counties throughout the state, including $17.8 million in resurfacing projects as part of the 1982 resurfacing program

Within the past two years the department has cut the paving cycle by more than half, according to Transportation Secretary Frank Metts. Each state maintained road will be resurfaced an average of once every 15 years instead of once every 35 years.

A $476,340 contract was awarded to East Kentucky Paving Corp. of Grayson to resurface 7.7 miles of KY 3, Dewey Lake-Inez Road, in Johnson and Martin counties.

the IRA payments over at least a 36-month period. Legally, these payments are an "annuity." Banks, savings and loans, mutual funds and insurance companies can issue IRAs with this option. Be sure to check.

While limiting estate taxes is possible, paying income taxes when IRA funds are disbursed is inevitable. Thinking ahead lets you plan the best way to pay the taxes. Keep in mind the following points:

Taxes may be deferred by putting inherited IRAs into a new IRA of your own. Or, if the original IRA contract permits, you can incorporate the inherited savings into you alreadyexisting retirement account.

As always, if you open or extend an IRA, the same regulations, rules, benefits and penalties still apply

The secretary and commissioner noted two more features about inheriting an IRA. First, if accepting the IRA money in a lump sum, you owe income taxes on all the money received And, second, if accepting the IRA money in periodic "annuity" payments, you are taxed only on the payments actually received each year.

This information simply highlights topics that demand thorough evaluation before investing in an IRA.

"To create a truly stable future, you have to plan for all situations,' Farmer said. "The commissioner and I want to encourage any Kentuckian interested in Individual Retirement Accounts to check all options-for themselves and for their family and movie that was attracted to the state by the Kentucky film division, could be said of all film makers, according to one state official.

"When a major film producer arrives to do a film with stars like Eddie Albert and Jill St. John, the state-the whole area used for filming-will profit," said Steve Wilson, deputy commissioner of the Department of Arts and director of its film division.

'That is why we put so much effort into attracting movie producers here. It's a big boost to our economy." For example, explained Wilson, "Bless 'em All" producer Sig Shore of Cine U.S. brought a crew of 35 people to Louisville and the surrounding area to stay for a month or longer. "I'd estimate a major film being done in an area means more than $500,000 to that area," said Wilson.

Kentucky's First Lady Phyllis George Brown is an active leader in the effort to attract film production here. She heads the non-profit Kentucky Film Foundation that works closely with Wilson's division. Last year Mrs. Brown was instrumental in planning a National Film Forum that brought industry leaders like Jack Valenti and Alan Friedberg.

Bob Wussler and director Allan Carr to Lexington for a two-day exchange of film-related ideas.

This new movie being filmed in Kentucky, a story of robbery and high-level corruption, stars Eddie Albert, an imprisoned union leader who is visited by a presidential aide, played by Robert

Artisans Need Reserve Berea Craft Fair Space

Craftspeople planning to take part in the 1982 Berea Craft Fair scheduled for July 16-18 should be reserving space with Berea Craft Enterprises Inc., according to that group's president, Lila Bellando.

The popular craft fair, held each year at Indian Fort Theater, draws over 100 craftsmen from Appalachia and the Eastern United States for a three-day celebration of the crafts heritage and a festive outdoor musical performance.

Berea's first craft fair was held on Berea College's commencement day in 1897, and is memorialized in a mural in the Berea Post Office.

The fair will be open to the public from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday through Sunday, with an admission charge of $1.50 for adults and 50 cents for children. Traditional functional Appalachian crafts and contemporary adaptions will be displayed, demonstrated and sold during the fair, and a full schedule of regional music will be performed in the 2,000-seat ampitheater

Indian Fort Theater, three miles east of Berea, includes ample free parking, full visitor services, picnic areas, hikng trails and the natural splendor of Indian Fort Mountain.

Cost to fair participants is $125 and two people may share a booth. A $50 non-refundable deposit is due before May 30 with the balance payable when booth space is claimed. There is a $15 discount for pre-payment in full.

For official contract and other information, write Berea Craft Enterprises, Inc., P.O. Box 528, Berea, Ky. 40403. For room reservation contact Donna Farr, coordinator summer hotel, Berea College, CPO 2268, Berea, Ky.

stars Jill St. John and Pat Hingle. Although the movie is fiction, the union boss is patterned after missing Teamsters leader Jimmy Hoffa, and the president is modeled after Richard Nixon, according to film division members. The robbery is similar to

"We've had no trouble finding extras for crowd shots or hit players either," said Wilson. "Everyone seems to want to be in a movie." Wilson talks to movie scouts about all the good things Kentucky has to offer-fine weather, varied countryside from mountainous to flat and rolling, lots of lakes and rivers, big city and lush green country. 'We also have an abundance of historic homes and buildings that movie people love for period pieces,' he said.

Once their location-scouting teams are here, we can usually find a good place to please them, Wilson pointed out. "But, since film production is so attractive, there is a lot of competition for their business.'

Portions of several successful films have been made here in Kentucky over the past few years. "Coal Miner's Daughter" was filmed around Loretta Lynn's home in Eastern Kentucky; parts of "Steel" were filmed in downtown Lexington and "Stripes," a service oriented comedy was made at the Army base at Fort Knox.

Attracting film business into Kentucky has become serious business and Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. and First Lady Phyllis George Brown are both keenly aware of the value of film business to their state, and are equally committed to attracting filmmakers here.

*Our Fragile Earth

By DR. JERRY HOWELL Department of Biological and Environmental Sciences Morehead State University

This article is the 400th in this series, originally intended not to exceed about 50 installments. It is the last one, at least in this format. We have been sending weekly articles to newspapers, organizations, and individuals for nearly eight years (the first one appeared in August, 1974).

I think they have worn well over the years, even though the last several have been reprints of earlier installments. It certainly was not a lack of subject material which prompted me to decide to forego writing the series regularly. An overabundance of material is and was available; human foibles, greed, and frailties insured a steady flow of material. Time permitting, I could have penned five such articles per week, so rich was the availability of material

Nor was a lack of enthusiasm for environmental subjects a factor in the demise of this series. The environmental movement is still very much alive, especially in recent months, spurred by governmental appointments and actions perceived detrimental to the environmental cause by the public. For example, during the past year, fed by attacks on existing regulations and the appointments of James Watt as Secretary of the Interior and Anne Gorsuch as Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, membership rolls have swelled by about 30 percent in the National Wildlife Federation and the Sierra Club, two of the nation's leading environmental groups. My enthusiasm has been similarly bolstered.

Also, I have never suffered from nonsupport. The people in our Office of News Services and our secretarial staff have been faithful in treating these little articles with care; the recipient newspapers have graciously allowed space, sometimes sacrificing articles of more local interest; university administrators have always encouraged these installments; and comments from readers have steadily trickled in. Money was not a factor in the decision; I have never received any money for doing the series.

My greatest enemy is time. Changing roles and increasing commitments have taken their toll and deadlines seem to come quicker each month.

We have not given up entirely the concept of a semi-regular series. We are presently mulling over a proposal to continue the series, but to make it irregular and more in-depth, perhaps by occasionally releasing a 2,000 or soword article on one environmental topic. Thanks.

AIRLINES

'Vacation season is approaching, and many Kentuckians have already made airline reservations for their trips," says Attorney General Steven L. Beshear. "Air travel is usually fast, efficient, and pleasant, but unfortunately, travelers sometimes encounter problems with their flights."

When problems with airlines do occur, effective complaining can lead to satisfactory results. Airlines listen to their customers' complaints-and to their compliments. By focusing on problem areas, they can determine how they can best improve their service. Although regulations do exist, airlines have much discretion as to monetary compensation in response to consumer complaints. Therefore, how effectively you complain is directly related to how satisfactorily you will be compensated.

Often, the airline itself will be able to handle your complaint. Customer service representatives for the airline can give you on-the-spot relief; for example, by making hotel arrangements for stranded passengers or writing compensation checks for passengers denied boarding.

When on-the-spot relief is not possible, Beshear suggests that one should file a written complaint with the airline's consumer office. To make your complaint convincing, be clear and concise as to what happened. Use only relevant information and stay away from petty gripes. Also, keep all records of flight information (ticket receipts, boarding passes, etc.) and take notes of the incident, including the names of people with whom you dealt.

Keep a business-like tone to your letter. Begin by stating the type of reservation you held, the ticket office and airport with which you dealt, the flight upon which the incident occurred, and an explanation of the problem. Give the names of all the people with whom you dealt-both those who were helpful and those who were not. Inform the airline of any inconvenience or monetary loss you suffered. Be sure, in closing, to state what amends you expect the airline to make. Be reasonable in your demands so that your complaint does not earn you a polite apology and a place in the airline's crank file.

If you do not get satisfaction from the pairline, but still feel you deserve compensation, you can file a written complaint with the Attorney General's consumer protection division. The consumer protection division mediates consumer complaints and provides a variety of consumer information. You can write to them at 209 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky. 40601 or call the toll free consumer hot line: 1-800-432-9257.

Appalachian Women Photo Essay Theme At McDowell ARH

McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital is presenting a photographic essay called "Appalachian Women: Three Generations" in the hospital's main hallway from April 14 through April 25.

"Appalachian Women: Three Generations" is the work of Wendy Ewald, a member of the multi-media collective Appalshop in Whitesburg. As Nancy Schram Dye describes the exhibit in her preface to the accompanying brochure, "In photographs and interviews, five women tell us, straightforwardly and candidly, about growing up, loving, and working in the mountains of eastern Kentucky.

"Although each woman emerges in these photographs and interviews as a strong, unique individual, their stories, taken together, tell us much about women's lives in Appalachia-about changes that have taken place over the course of the twentieth century and about themes that run continuously to the present.'

Wendy Ewald, who grew up in Michigan, moved to Whitesburg seven years ago. The five women featured in the exhibit are both her neighbors and friends. The difference between her own experience and her neighbors' was the inspiration for "Appalachian Women.

Admission is free to "Appalachian Women: Three Generations," and the exhibit will be open daily during hospital visiting hours from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Can Expect Delays In Getting Copies Of Past Tax Forms

Taxpayers who do not have copies of their previous years' tax returns and need to request them from the Internal Revenue Service, can expect a six week wait to receive a copy of the forms, the Internal Revenue Service said. This wait is due principally to the large number-approximately 1.8 million-of copy requests expected by the IRS this year.

Some of the reasons why taxpayers may need to request copies of previous years' returns are for income averaging, student loans, and mortgage purposes. Taxpayers needing previous years' tax returns should prepare a Form 4506, "Request for Copy of Tax Form," for each return requested. The forms should be sent to the service center where the return was filed.

With the increasing demand for past tax records, the best way to avoid delays in the future, the IRS said, is keep previous years' tax returns as part of permanent tax records. Good records will save time and make filing current returns easier. More information on recordkeeping can be found in the free IRS Publication 552, "Recordkeeping Requirements and a List of Tax Publications," available from local IRS offices.

Finance Expert Says Centralized Funding Is Good For Schools

This is a volatile time for funding public schools but Kentucky seems to be faring very well as compared to other states, according to a national school finance expert.

During a meeting in Frankfort on April 12, Dr. Kathleen Adams said Kentucky has a highly centralized system for funding schools which she believes to be the best approach. Dr. Adams is a public finance specialist with the Education Commission of the States in Denver, Colo.

Kentucky's financing process is highly centralized in that 69.6 percent of money going to the elementary and secondary schools comes from the state level, she said.

This state share figure is much higher than the national average and figures from the surrounding states. Nationally only 49 percent of the money contributed to schools comes from the state level with many states coming in well below the national

Ohio, for example, contributes 41.7 percent at the state level while asking for 50.2 percent of school money from the local event. In Kentucky, only 18.5 percent of school money comes from the local level.

"I think that Kentucky is doing an extraordinary job keeping the growth in property taxes down," Dr. Adams said. "The local level of tax burden is very low as compared to other states.

According to figures supplied from the U.S. Department of Commerce, the national growth in local property taxes from 1975 to 1980 showed a gain of 4.6 percent while Kentucky actually showed a loss of .2 percent.

"The only way a lot of states will be able to pull out of the financial crises that they now face is through tax reform," explained Dr. Adams. "But there is now a stall in the ability to reform because of the flux in the economy

"The effort to maintain the centralized nature of schools that Kentucky has is very important in times such as these," she added.

Dr. Adams also had high praise for Kentucky's percentage of state revenue generated from severance

Figures from 1980 show that Kentucky receives 8.3 percent of its revenue from severance taxes, largely from coal, ranking the state sixth in the

Dr. Adams came to Kentucky to address key legislators and those affiliated with elementary, secondary and higher education who were attending a seminar sponsored by the Education Commission of the States,

Comments On Child Abuse

(This is the final article in a series on child abuse, provided by Mountain Comprehensive Care Center.)

Child abuse is a vicious circle, usually handed down from generation to generation. What can be done to break the circle, and to prevent it from persisting in the future?

Prevention means stopping the abuse before it happens. Preparation and education are important aspects of prevention which are now receiving more support in the community. The following are some ways prevention is being accomplished.

High schools have begun to offer family life courses to familiarize young people with the realities of parenthood before they become parents.

Change is occurring in hospitals to provide family-centered maternity care. This type of care allows mother, father, and siblings maximum time with the newborn to establish strong family bonding. Encouragement and support from the hospital staff give new parents positive feelings about their ability to be good parents. The hospital is an ideal setting in which to provide parenting education.

Parenting skills training courses teach the stages of a child's development, ways to strengthen parent-child communication, and alternative methods for guidance and discipline. These are usually offered by mental health agencies, or through community service courses. In the home, parent support groups offer a relaxed setting where parents can socialize, ventilate their feelings, and encourage each other in the challenge of raising

In some communities, volunteer efforts are organized and phone numbers are publicized. Individuals show that they care by listening and talking to troubled parents, directing them to helping services, and volunteering to help with household chores and child

A special opportunity to help the mistreated child is foster parenting. With love and attention, the circle of abuse could be broken in that child's

Forest Fires Set By Arson, Negligence, Are Campaign Target

Smokey Bear's plea to prevent forest fires gets extra help in the south where a special campaign is aimed at a problem peculiar to the region-forest fires that are set maliciously or caused by debris burning.

Known as the Southern Cooperative Forest Fire Prevention Program (SCFFP), the campaign is almost 25 years old. In that time, the number of acres of forest land under protection in the south has increased 62 percent and the number of fires per million acres of protected land has decreased 11.5 per-

The southern forest fire prevention effort is the only regional program supported by the Advertising Council. The Council is a non-profit organization through which business advertising and the media contribute their skills to help solve national problems.

It was back in 1958 that a group of people got together to try to decide what to do about the South forest fire problem. More than half the forest fires in the nation were occurring in the south and about 75 percent of those were either set deliberately or resulted from burning of debris.

The national Smokey Bear program was aimed at the public in general and had special appeal for children. But adults were the problem in the south and it was felt a special program was needed, one which could complement the national campaign.

The theme of the first southern program was "Every Time A Forest Fire Strikes, You Get Burned". The theme was changed through the years but the underlying message is the same-wildfires are costly and the major causes of such fires in the south are arson and debris burning. This year's theme is "When Our Trees Go Up In Flames, Our Dollars Go Up In Smoke"

About 75 percent of the forest fires in the south each year still are set deliberately or result from debris burning. The rest are caused mainly by carelessness in the woods.

In 1960, 155 million acres of forest land in the south were classed as being protected. This meant that if a forest fire occurred, there would be firefighters available to help put it out. By 1980, the number of fires per million protected acres had dropped from 320 in 1960 to 283 in 1980.

Spring and fall are the major fire seasons in the south and the SCFFP uses television, radio, newspapers and magazines to get its prevention message across during those seasons. Usually, the public service announcements for radio and television and the advertisements for newspapers and magazines go out twice a year. They reach more than 2,000 newspapers and radio stations. about 300 television stations and 75 magazines.

The program is financed and administered by the Southern Group of State Foresters and the U.S. Forest Service with coordination handled by the Staff Director of the Cooperative Fire Protection Staff, Southeastern Area, State and Private Forestry, An eight member committee directs the program. There is a volunteer coordinator from industry and a volunteer advertising agency which produces all the campaign materials. Liller Neal of Atlanta has been the volunteer advertising agency since the beginning of the program. Dick Hodges, Chairman of Liller Neal, was the campaign's first Account Executive. The services of the Advertising Council and the volunteer advertising agency are free. They are reimbursed only for actual expenses involving production and distribution of materials.

168 Examined At Clinic Here

One hundred sixty-eight persons from 10 Eastern Kentucky counties and one in West Virginia were examined by physicians from the University of Kentucky Medical Center, Lexington, at the semi-annual regional heart clinic held at the Floyd County Health Department here last week. The clinic was sponsored by the Floyd, Pike and Martin county health departments and the Bureau for Health Services, Frankfort.

The number of patients seen from each county is as follows:

Floyd, 121: Martin, seven: Johnson. 21, Pike, six; Magoffin, two; Knott, five; Morgan, two; and one each from Greenup, Lawrence, Powell, and Mingo county, West Virginia.

The American Heart Association is no longer affiliated with these clinics which are wholly supported by the local health departments and the Bureau for Health Services. As in former years, the Prestonsburg Kiwaniannes and Kiwanis Clubs coordinated and served lunch to the patients and doctor at the clinic, and local church women prepared the sandwiches. A spokesman for the local health department said these efforts are greatly appreciated by those attending the clinics and by the department.

Martin County Reading Program In One School Wins 'Rave' Notice

Editor's Note: The state of Iowa, which leads the nation in pupil reading scores, employs the reading program known as Exemplary Center for Reading Instruction (ECRI), and in Kentucky only one school of one county, Martin, uses the program. Extending the program to four other schools in Martin county-Tomahawk's is the first-, the Martin county school board recently compared reading scores from an unnamed county to show improvement, if any, since 1965. Although, according to one Martin school board member, that county had spent $5 million in federal money on its Title I program during that time, there was "no significant improvement." The following, written by Ann Clayton Brandt, editor of EdNews, Frankfort, Ky., tells the story of the "new" reading program in the Tomahawk Elementary School.

You have to travel a long and winding road with S-shaped curves around bends overlooking steep drop-offs down the mountainside to get to Tomahawk Elementary School in Martin County.

When you arrive, you notice the parking area is unpaved, the building is old (built in 1937) and the floors in the hallway are eroding.

But inside the school's eight classrooms, there's a new and innovative method of teaching reading, writing and spelling going on for kindergarten through sixth grade.

The reading program, Exemplary Center for Reading Instruction (ECRI), is a first for Martin County-and the only program of its kind in Kentucky. It's also happening in California, Ohio, New York, Michigan, Maine, North Carolina (29 states in all), and in the country of Japan.

ECRI was developed by Dr. Ethna Reid in 1966 on the theory that "no child should fail and that all children can learn if they receive proper instruction." ECRI, based in Salt Lake City, Utah, was validated in 1971 as part of the National Diffusion Network.

Dramatic results have occurred in states operating the program for a year or more. Students are reading significantly above grade level, and there is less need for remedial work. For example, in schools in Grove City, Ohio, ECRI techniques in kindergarten reduced the number of students identified as needing Title I assistance in first grade ECRI is a "mastery learning" process in which the student is expected to master certain skills before going on to the next level. Students must achieve 100 percent in reading and spelling and 85 percent in comprehension before advancing, explains Tomahawk Principal Gary Phillips.

The teacher follows step-by-step procedures and detailed sequences to present learning activities in a definite time frame and on a minute-to-minute, hour-to-hour and day-to-day basis. This keeps the student moving along at tasks for longer periods of the instructional day and cuts down on wasted

ECRI offers a "more systematic approach" to learning, explains Tomahawk sixth grade teacher Linda Webb. "Students know exactly what is expected of them. If you overlook something, they remind you."

The mastery learning technique has three major facets: skills time which includes reading a story, writing a story, teaching words and comprehension and strategy; practice time in which the teacher checks vocabulary, spelling and comprehension (later this will include grammar); and back-up skills time which includes spelling, penmanship and dictation.

Tomahawk students spend 21/2 hours each morning in language arts. They work in groups and individually. In the the county's other six elementary schools next fall. This may be phased group learning, students spell and pronounce words rapidly. Then they make in over a two-year period starting with a sentence using the word with each K-3 and then including grades 4-6. student saying the sentence out loud. During this school year, Tomahawk They must think of their sentences has been visited by all the elementary quickly. Then looking at the teachers in the county as well as some ters are missing from a word. Students read lists of their spelling words, repeating each word rapidly three times. Teachers use stopwatches along with students all over Kentucky. to time how long the "spell and read" process takes for a group of words. The vocabulary level of students is quite chalkboard, they tell what letter or let-impressive with second graders spelling "rhinoceros," "compassionate" and "Ankylosaurus." As Phillips explains, moving quickly in the reading instruction reduces lag time and thus saves instructional time. Instead of the teacher holding up a card with a word and asking, "Who knows this word?," she holds up the card and all students respond immediately, reading and spelling the word. Group study reduces embarrassment sometimes caused by calling on one student, and group responses offer security to nonresponsive students. Also, there's no time for students to become inattentive.

Besides the group work, students work on their own, reading and writing stories. While the teacher works with one group at a certain level, the other students work independently reading and writing stories at their level. Each class has three groups of students organized according to their levels of achievement.

Once or twice a week, each student reads aloud privately with the teacher so that the teacher can detect any speech or reading problems. Teachers have conferences once a week with each child.

Students keep their own folders and records at the same time the teacher keeps records on each student. Taking an active part in their language arts instruction, students let the teacher know when they are ready to take their mastery tests.

Independent mastery tests are given daily depending on when students are ready to take them. Tests are given at different numbered levels. A student has to recognize and read a word in one second and then spell the word. The teacher times the student. The theory is that if the student can recognize and repeat the word in one second, then he or she has learned it, says Phillips.

Limited supplies are required in using the ECRI system. Teachers use aids such as an opaque projector, the chalkboard, easel boards with written words and notecards with spelling words on them. Any basal reader may be adapted for use in the ECRI technique. Tomahawk is using the Ginn series which includes 15 books and covers 15 levels.

Implementing the ECRI system at Tomahawk has cost over $10,000 including a federal basic skills grant of $7,715 with the rest being made up in local funds. A large part of the cost is in training teachers for the ECRI system.

The key to the ECRI system is modifying teacher behavior, taking the burden of learning off the student and putting it on the teacher, Phillips explains. Teachers are evaluated by the principal.

Teachers must learn to elicit responses from the student, give praise and find something positive about a student's work. With the emphasis on teacher responsibility, everyone can learn, the slow learner as well as those who pick up things more quickly. As one teacher commented. "It may take more practice time, but you keep working at it until students master the skills so they won't just fall through the cracks.

Tomahawk's teachers participated in workshops last spring and in December with Dr. Reid who came to work with them and meet with the school board.

At first, teachers were reluctant to learn and apply the new method, Phillips says. But after seeing the progress students have made since September, they are very enthused about the program.

One veteran teacher who had been apprehensive about the new system now says she "wouldn't teach words any other way.

A parent, Myrtle Maynard, has seen the change in her son Tommy's reading since he was in the first grade. Tommy started in ECRI in second grade last year and is now under the system in third grade. His was the only class to start last year, having been taught by Peggy Phillips who came to Tomahawk with her husband and had been previously trained in the ECRI system. That particular class scored in the 65th percentile on achievement tests last year. The mean score for Martin County is the 42nd percentile.

'This is the best thing to happen in school since I came to school here,' said Mrs. Maynard. "I wish they'd had something like this when I was learning," she added.

Although a native of Martin County, Gary Phillips moved away in the fourth grade. Two years ago, he returned to his roots, so to speak. The Phillipses were familiar with ECRI having used it in the South-Western city school district in Grove City, Ohio.

The program is showing such positive results that Martin County Superintendent Dr. Dan Branham is planning to expand the program into

Who, Me???

Does the thought of giving blood bother you? What are some of the excuses given by people with cold feet? The most common excuses given are:

I only have enough blood for me! Nonsense. The average person has between 10 and 12 pints of blood in his or her body. You won't even miss the one pint of blood you are asked to donate.

I'll pass out! Now you've heard one of the myths that we deal with every day. Giving blood is safe and easy. Eligible donors should have no adverse effect. You can go back to work or play as soon as you've rested a few moments and had a refreshment.

I'm too busy! I just don't have the time! If you come in to donate blood at a blood center or a mobile, chances are you'll be on your way home or back to work in 45 minutes.

I don't like needles! No one does but it hurts a lot less than you think.

Forget the excuses and look at the following facts: You can donate blood at regular intervals during the year, most healthy people between the ages of 17 and 66 can give blood, all blood types are needed continuously and the rarest type is the one the blood center doesn't have.

It's up to you. If you are gambling on the fact that you may never use blood, the odds are against you. If you won't give blood, how can you expect someone else to donate it when you need it?

The Prestonsburg Donor Station is located on the second floor of the Municipal Building. The hours are:

Tuesdays, 10 a.m.-6 p.m. Thursdays, 12 Noon-8 p.m. Saturdays, 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Two Blood mobiles coming soon are a blood drive sponsored by Our Lady of the Way Hospital at the Mormon Church in Martin, Tuesday, May 4, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 4-7 p.m. Hospital personnel and area residents are urged to support this drive.

The next day, Wednesday, May 5, the mobile will be in the employee lounge of the South Central Bell Telephone Office on Chloe Road in Pikeville from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. The members of the Big Sandy Pioneer Council may donate for their group at the mobile or at the local donor station.

Children's Theatre Performance Slated

The Children's Theatre class of Prestonsburg Community College invites everyone to an evening of intrigue. A one-act play, "A Case For Two Detectives" is slated for presentation at the Pike Auditorium of P.C.C. on Thursday, April 29 and Friday, April 30 at 7:15 p.m.

Fifteen children are involved in the show, which Director Keith Conn describes as a "very entertaining" comedy.

The devotionals were given by Mrs. Mary Lou Layne, who based her discussion on Psalms 24, Verses 1 and 2. Mrs. Elma Jessen introduced Miss Tina Willemsma, who discussed "The Commission on Religion in Appalachia." She discussed land ownership patterns, and said, "What happens to land is not only important to God but also to His people." Miss Willemsma asked the group to co-sponsor a workshop here, with its goal to "reflect theologically on land." Since the idea of such a workshop was new to the members, it was decided that they should consult first with the local ministerial group before making a definite decision. Mrs. Jessen and Mrs. Eva Collins were appointed as a committee to meet with

RETIRED PERSONS MEET

The Jenny Wiley Chapter, American Association of Retired Persons, held its regular monthly meeting at the First Presbyterian Church here, April 15, at 2 p.m. The president, Jack Freed, presided. Mr. Freed stressed the fact that several people of this area belong to the national A.A.R.P., but need to join the local chapter. It was announced that B. F. Reed will represent the chapter on the Legislative committee, and that Mrs. Virginia S. Goble will be one of the chapter's representatives at the A.A.R.P.'s first workshop at the Ramada Inn, London, Ky., April 19. Also representing the local A.A.R.P. chapter at this workshop were Fred A. James and Glenn Anderson.

Chalmer Frazier introduced the speaker, Homer D. Neeley, who is associated with the Kentucky West Virginia Gas Company, here. Mr. Neeley discussed safety as a primary concern on the job. He, in turn, introduced Jerry Hueseman, a Ky. W. Va. employee, whose topic was "Defensive Driving." Following Mr. Neeley's and Mr. Hueseman's discussions, a film on "Defensive Driving" was shown.

Due to the resignation of Mrs. Mildred Horn, Mrs. Otelia Smiley was elected to serve as secretary of the chapter.

Mr. Freed shared with the group his opinion that Social Security benefits would be increased, beginning this coming July.

The next regular meeting will be held at the same location, at 2 p.m., Thursday, May 20, with James Kelly, director of Social Security in this area, speaking on "Medicare." The next board meeting will be held May 10, at 7 p.m., at the First Presbyterian Church here.

During Thursday's meeting Mrs. Otelia Smiley served refreshments to guests, Jerry Heuseman and Homer D. Neeley, and members, Jack Freed, Opal S. May, Norma S. Stepp, Dollie Branham, Lula Wallen, Tobie G. Hendrick, Ruby K. Price, Louise Elkins, James E. Goble, Virginia S. Goble, John R. Auxier Student Hurt In Mishap

The mishap probably looked a lot worse than it was, but when Billy Osborne, Auxier Elementary eighth grader, "split his forehead wide open," as one witness described it, while getting off the bus Monday afternoon at the Prestonsburg grade school turnaround on Lake Drive, there was some excitement, to be sure.

Osborne, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Osborne, of Lancer, apparently struck his head on the metal above the bus exit door, according to bus driver, Marie Harmon. Mrs. Harmon alerted Jim Lafferty, Prestonsburg policeman on duty in the vicinity, and soon an ambulance and members of the city's rescue unit, Squad 6, as well as other policemen were on the scene.

Mrs. Harmon commended the quick response of the units and the emergency first-aid which was administered.

Young Osborne was treated and

Congressional Resolution Honors Nurse-Midwives

In recognition of health care providers whose history goes back to the beginning of civilization, the U.S. Congress has unanimously passed a resolution naming April 19-26: "National Nurse-Midwifery Week." Citing the record of certified nurse-midwives in reducing infant mortality, the Congress said, "There is a need to further recognize the unique contribution nurse-midwives have made to mothers and infants in the United States during the past half century."

Certified Nurse-Midwives are professionals educated in both nursing and midwifery. They take care of healthy women during pregnancy, deliver babies and manage newborn care, conduct classes in preparation for child-birth and parenting, provide family planning and do gynecologic checkups. Most certified nurse-midwives work in hospitals, many work in birth centers and a few attend births at home. There are approximately 2,500 nurse-midwives in the U.S. today and they delivered at least 35,000 babies last year.

Eastern Kentucky has had the service of nurse-midwives since 1925. One of the first schools for nurse-midwifery in Eastern Kentucky is the Frontier School of Midwifery and Family Nursing in Leslie county. The school has graduated more than 500 nurse-midwives.

Presently, seven counties in Eastern Kentucky have midwife services available. Locally, serving Floyd and Magoffin counties, through Big Sandy Health Care, is Sister Roberta Naegele, CFNM. Working for East Kentucky Health Services Center in Knott county is Katie Isaacs. Both of these midwives have delivery privileges at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, at Martin.

Speaker Scores County's Rating In Council Talk

Of Kentucky's 120 counties, Floyd ranks 33rd in tourist income, and John McCann, for one, is not happy with that

"There is no reason we can't be closer to the top of the list," McCann, general manager of the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theater, told members of Prestonsburg city council Monday. The county's attractions-not least, Jenny Wiley State Park and the summer music theater itself-have not been sufficiently advertised in the past, he said, outlining a current campaign to sell the area more aggressive-

Compared to Bardstown, where the town boosts the theater and where "The Stephen Foster Story" plays to near-capacity audiences, town and theater here have remained relatively isolated from each other, with the result that the theater has customarily played to audiences of only 45-50 percent capacity, McCann said.

This season's productions will use more local talent; one production, "The Music Man," will feature different high school bands from the county; three modest scholarships in the performing arts will be offered to

Leslie Resigns, Per Agreement At Convention

On Monday at "high noon"-in the words of the motion that made it official-leadership of Floyd Democrats passed from Prestonsburg physician Larry Leslie to Martin coal operator Morris Isaac.

On its surface, the change in leadership was merely the realization of a pact concluded between the two men in 1980 when it became apparent to delegates to the county convention that neither could command a sufficiently large majority to claim the chairmanship without seriously risking party

The deal-according to which Leslie would be chairman for the first two years of the four-year term and Isaac for the remaining two years-was urged as a means of keeping the party

Technically, Leslie resigned the position in the middle of his term and Isaac was named by the executive committee to fill the vacancy. Dividing up an elective position by agreement could hardly have survived a court challenge, a number of Floyd Democrats noted when the idea of a deal was first proposed.

In any event, it may have effected only a semblance of unity. For, accor-

Local Phone Rates May Rise Two-Thirds

South Central Bell's rate hike request would mean nearly a 67 percent increase in phone rates here.

The phone company, which serves about 750,000 customers in 79 Kentucky counties, asked the state Public Service Commission (PSC) Friday to approve new rate schedules that would generate additional revenue of $66.1 million a year.

The commission is not expected to rule on the rate request until October. If it approves all the company is asking for, the basic monthly service charge for a home line in Prestonsburg will rise from $11,26 to $18.76. Cost of a business line, now $28.53, would go up to $46.90.

Rates are somewhat higher out in the county, depending on the subscriber's distance from the central exchange.

The phone company has asked for smaller interim increases of $1.25 for home lines and $2.50 for business lines to be put into effect on May 13, with the full increases to be adopted October 13.

To sweeten its rate increase proposal, the company proposed to increase the discount offered customers who use measured service, a system that offers lower rates for basic local service but charges them for local calls above a certain number. And it introduced a "low use" measured service that will benefit customers who make very few calls.

Company officials cite inflation and increased capital costs as reasons for the rate hike request. "People who invest their hard-earned savings in us reasonably expect a return that outpaces inflation," said Stanley S. Dickson, Bell vice-president, adding, "The rates of return authorized by PSC last August-11.34 percent on net average investment and 13.25 percent on equity-are not realistic in today's market."

The PSC is expected to hold hearings on the request

Explosives Pose Threat as Two Caches Found

Discovery of two caches of explosives in the Prestonsburg area over the past week which, if detonated, could have caused serious injury and extensive damage to property, has spurred investigations by state and local law enforcement officials.

The largest stockpile, which has most baffled investigators, was accidentally discovered Saturday during the landscaping of the lawn of James Calhoun at the mouth of Mayo Branch, between Prestonsburg and Lancer. Because the dynamite had crystallized, officers of the sheriff's department decided against attempting to move it. Sunday, an explosives expert of the Kentucky State Police and Deputy Sheriffs Paul Hunt Thompson and Chuck Akers destroyed the following

Fifty-four sticks of dynamite, 124 sticks of primer booster (described as more volatile than dynamite), 1000 feet of primer cord, a stick of crystallized explosive gelatin and several dynamite

WE PASS THE BUCK

As you may have been aware, we failed to warn the public last week of the time change just ahead. We blame that on Clifford Wright, who has been our official timekeeper since the hapless day, some years ago, when I got a week ahead, somehow, and had folks getting up and going places on "fast" time while it was yet "slow." The fact is, I am told, Father Time threw Mr. Wright a changeup and he himself struck out, so to speak, on the date when this latest thorn in the flesh was due to afflict us.

SPRINGTIME WITHOUT THE RED-

Strikes me, now that I have taken a closer look, that I may have been a bit premature last week in mentioning the redbud as being among the hillside beauties of the season. The cruel fact of the matter is the redbuds are almost invisible this year. Their failure to bloom removes from Eastern Kentucky hills that purple delight to the eye that I never expected to fail us, any springtime. They contrasted so beautifully with the white of the dogwood which is at its most beautiful this

Sheriff's Dept. To Use Dog In Drive Against Narcotics

PART OF A CACHE of explosives found Saturday near Lancer. The materials, which had deteriorated and were considered too dangerous to move, were destroyed at the scene

School students and others using illegal drugs in this county may be in for a surprise. The sheriff's department here last week introduced its newest recruit-a dog trained to sniff out marijuana, cocaine, hashish and heroin-and vowed the dog would soon be put to use in a countywide crackdown on illicit drug possession.

by police officers.

On the order of his handler, Chief Deputy Paul Hunt Thompson, the ninevear-old German Shepherd, named Lobo (that's Spanish for "wolf"), put on an impressive display of his skills before a courthouse audience last Friday, quickly locating marijuana hidden in the courthouse and in a vehicle parked nearby to identify any particular area as the primary focus of the dog's activity, Magistrate Kenneth Roberts, who initiated the fiscal court decision to acquire the dog, indicated that the schools would be a special target of Lobo's investigations.

While Sheriff Henry Hale was loath

(Photo by Chuck Akers)

According to County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr., the courts have ruled that trained dogs may be used to establish a "probable cause" needed for the issuance of search warrants on private property

Searches of school lockers, not usually regarded as private property, would generally be held constitutional even without a search warrant, he said.

Turner acknowledged that some uses (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

FLOWERS AT FUNERALS

In ancient days, fragrant flowers and strongly scented spices were ever-present at funerals. Wild flowers lent a natural beauty to the tribal funerals along with a "living" tribute to the departed tribesman. Flower and spice fragrances "perfumed"

Today, flowers have retained an important place in funeral service. Today we can't always pick our own flowers so we have florists who design and produce breathtakingly beautiful floral pieces.

Flowers add a bright, colorful beauty to a setting which may seem somber to some, but flowers still add beauty to a casket and provide a hint of delicate fragrance. Floral pieces treat kindly our senses of sight and smell. Still a "living" tribute, they are an emotional contribution to the comfort of the surviving family, a testimonial that the funeral, indeed, is for the living!

As an expression of sympathy and love, flowers serve admirably when the sender cannot be present to offer condolences. Most florists have developed special floral arrangements for funerals.

Labor-Management Meet Set May 4-6

The Sixth Annual Kentucky Labor/Management Conference will be held May 4-6 at Kentucky Dam Village State Park at Gilbertsville.

Co-sponsored by the state Department of Labor and the Kentucky Commerce Cabinet, the conference brings together leaders from labor and management to discuss a problems in a relaxed setting.

Between 400 and 500 participants are expected to attend the conference which will feature seminars on such subjects as mock negotiations, the establishment of local labor/management committees, and the cooperation needed for economic development. Golf, tennis and fishing tournaments will also be held.

A banquet will be held Wednesday evening, May 5, with Gov. John Y Brown, Jr., scheduled as guest

IRS Can Apply Refund to Child Support Pay

Some Kentucky taxpayers who have delinquent child or spousal support obligations may have their individual federal tax accounts frozen from refund action. Some part or all of an expected federal tax refund may be offset to the state, and not sent to the in-

The Internal Revenue Code provides for the offset of income tax overpayments for delinquent child and spousal support. Names of individuals who are delinquent in child support payments are referred to the Internal Revenue Service from the federal Department of Health and Human Services (HHS). A letter called a "Notice of Offset" will be sent to each taxpayer when a refund is applied to a delinquent obligation. This letter will inform taxpayers that all or a part of their tax refund was kept to fully or partially satisfy a past due support obligation referred from HHS. The letter will also include the address and telephone number of the state agency to which the offset has been paid. This state agency may be from a state other than Kentucky.

The Internal Revenue Service is authorized to offset only the unpaid child-spousal obligations that are certified and referred by the Department of Health and Human Services.

If a taxpayer does not agree with the Notice of Offset, contact should be made with the state agency shown on the Notice of Offset, and not the IRS.

ding to a number of observers, the party here remains sorely split among fac-

According to the agreement, Leslie was permitted to choose half the members of the executive committee-now swollen to 15, the maximum permitted under party rules-and Isaac the other half. Yet another ingredient was added to the mix last year when Jerry Lafferty, Jr. bested Dick Leslie in the judge-executive's race.

For Dr. Leslie, taking first turn at the chairmanship apparently proved useful in securing his election to the state central executive committee-as one of five representatives of the Seventh Congressional District-a position he will hold for four years. He was also named alternate delegate to the national Democratic convention which sought unsuccessfully to return Jimmy Carter for a second term as Isaac will have the advantage of party leadership here during next year's ampaign for governor, when the candidates-so far Human Resources Secretary Dr. Grady Stumbo, Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins, and Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane are said to be interested in the job-will presumably be wooing support in this Democratic stronghold.

Whether that advantage amounts to much is a matter of opinion. It didn't hurt Floyd to carry the banner for Bert Combs and Ned Breathitt in years past and, theoretically, support for a successful candidate next year could reap some benefits for the county or at least for Isaac's supporters-though few, if any, jobs at the county level now owe anything to the governor's favor, and the very concept of political patronage has recently suffered a public drubbing at the hands of Gov. John Y. Brown.

According to some, the split in Floyd Democratic politics itself reduces whatever leverage the party here might have on state officials. Having one figure here who can credibly claim wide voter support-or even having, as in the old days, a recognized patronage broker here-might count for something in Frankfort; a divided organization is in a distinctly weaker bargaining position, it is argued.

At the meeting last Tuesday of the Floyd executive committee which ratified his succession to the party leadership, Isaac's supporters were also able to turn aside a bid by Leslie to name a replacement for committeeman Fred Conn, of Dana, who was said to have tendered his resignation. Isaac will presumably now be in a position to name his own replacement for

To what extent the new chairman will be able to consolidate his position, however, may depend to some extent on Judge-Executive Lafferty, who is not universally included among Isaac's admirers, and on the inevitable role of the Board of Education, which appears closer to Lafferty than to Isaac.

For his part, Dr. Leslie says he now wants out of the fray. His sights are set on a different trophy-the state senatorial seat currently held by Lowell Hughes, of Ashland, whose 25th District-since the recent realignment of boundaries-now includes the major part of Prestonsburg. Hughes has reportedly indicated he will not seek re-election to the seat.

Questions To Answer

I am very tired of hearing and reading about the poor performance of the Floyd county schools and especially who is to blame for the problem. I have read everything from basketball games, early dismissals, poor teachers, and even Pete Grigsby were responsible for low performance in our

Stop and think and answer these questions. How much can children learn when there are 40 children in one room? How much can they learn when we have inadequate rooms to teach in? How much can they learn when they are allowed to spend most of their time playing video games and watching Home Box Office? How much can they learn when they come to school with only four to five hours sleep? How much can they learn when they habitually come to school late or leave school early? How much can they learn when families are fighting and splitting up? How much can they learn when they miss days a month simply because they don't want to come?

It is very clear to me that there are a lot of people to blame-parents, students, teachers, administrators, society, and our government. We all worked together to create the problem. Now, we need to work together to solve the problem. Instead of sitting around writing letters we need to be working. Join your school's PTA and then attend the meetings. Attend the Board of Education's meetings monthly. Talk positively about our teachers and school systems. Why should a child try to succeed in a system you have dubbed a failure? Take a working interest in your child. Contact their teachers, work with the teachers. Above all, don't write-ACT.

May has been proclaimed High Blood Pressure Month. But don't blame this one on any preacher. It has to do with the American, the German and the P-(representative of a much-maligned and sorely oppressed land) who were 'saddling up' for a trip across the desert. The American had a jug of water; the German, some food, while the third carried an old car-door.

They checked their supplies. "I have water to drink," the American said. 'And I've brought food when we get hungry," quoth the German.

"But what is the car-door for?" the third was asked. 'So that when it gets hot I can roll the window down," he blithely replied.

Defends Parents

I just want to say that I admire the concerned parents in our county who care enough and have the courage to question the quality of education our children are receiving.

The sad part is that some people label them as trouble-makers or "politically hungry." I don't see them this way. It's been my experience that if you stand up for something you believe in, this automatically makes you a trouble-maker. If you don't do anything, then you're accused of not caring enough to get involved. If these people care enough to stand up for our children, we should support them instead of calling them names. After all, don't we want the best possible education for our children? It's our tax dollars that is paying for this education. We, as parents and taxpayers have the right and duty to see that our children get the quality of education they're entitled to.

Why can't the Floyd county board members, administration, parents, and teachers all work together to achieve this goal? Just imagine what our schools could be like if we all worked together instead of having so much friction. If we're concerned about our children's education as we should be, we wouldn't be having this problem We'd all be working together-for our

Blood Pressure Aid

Everyone of us probably knows someone who has high blood pressure because it's such a common condition. And when we help people who have high blood pressure to keep it under control, we are helping them to reduce their risk of early death or disability.

Recent studies conducted by the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute indicate that a great deal of progress has been made nationally through the combined efforts of local community high blood pressure programs across the country.

-Where 10 years ago, relatively few Americans knew much about high blood pressure, now almost 75 percent of the total population knows that high blood pressure is a serious condition.

-Millions now know that high blood pressure increases the risk of heart attack, stroke, and kidney failure. -And more than 80 percent know that high blood pressure cannot be cured, but can be controlled with

A variety of health professionals and dozens of volunteers contribute to our local high blood pressure control efforts. And High Blood Pressure Month this May gives the community a chance to recognize and acknowledge the work these people are doing to bring this sometimes debilitating condition under control. We have made a lot of progress. And to continue our work, we need support from the community and our local legislators.

Coal Industry Influence On State Legislators Is Subject Of KET Program

KET's nightly news program, Kentucky Journal, which features in-depth looks at topics of interest in the state, will be exploring the influence of the coal industry on Kentucky's legislature. This program will air tomorrow (Thursday), at 7:30 p.m.

Featured guests will be State Rep. Joe Clarke, D-Danville, chairperson of the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee, former State Rep. Steve Cawood, D-Pineville, and Joey Childers, an attorney for Concerned Citizens of Martin County, which is affiliated with the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition. Childers was an active advocate for an unmined minerals tax bill during the 1982 General Assembly.

The program will focus on revenue and taxation measures and how the coal industry fared this past session. The program will also examine the legislature's new independence and what it means.

Many Complain, But Few Testify In Liquor Cases

People who complain to police about illegal liquor sales should be prepared to back up their allegations in court. That was the complaint of Assistant County Attorney Eric Hall last week, after a man accused of bootlegging was acquitted by a district court jury

The acquittal last Thursday of James "Dukie" Poston, 41, of McDowell, who was arrested in February on a charge of illegal possession of alcoholic beverages, marked the second bootlegging charge in a week to be thrown out by a jury here. On April 15, Hubert C. Stephens, 55, of Manton, was found not guilty of an identical charge.

The jury decisions visibly angered Hall, who said he felt the prosecution made convincing cases in each instance. Both defendants had been the subject of neighbors' complaints and police officers recovered quantities of liquor in each case, but none of the complainants could be persuaded to testify in court, he said.

Following "numerous complaints," sheriff's officers raided an apartment building on Frasure's Branch, near McDowell High School, on February 8, recovering 21 cases of beer and six pints of liquor. They arrested Poston, who lives in the apartment building. Poston's wife, the only witness called by Public Defender Ned Pillersdorf in the case, testified that the beer-most of which was found in a hallway closet-belonged to other occupants in the apartment building. The whiskey, which sheriff's deputies said they found under the cushions of a couch in Poston's apartment, was intended for the family's personal use, Mrs. Poston

About a dozen cases of beer and 12 pints of liquor were recovered by State Trooper James Rederick during a search of a house on Stephens Branch, near Martin, on January 30. Stephens, who said he was a caretaker of the unoccupied dwelling, had a liquor price list in his pocket at the time of his arrest, Rederick said. Called by Pillersdorf for the defense, Clarence Martin said the beer was being stored in the house for his son, who intended to use it for a party. As in the McDowell case, the Stephens Branch raid followed a number of citizens' complaints, it

Prosecutor Hall said that, in his four years with the county attorney's office here, no citizen has been willing to take the stand against an alleged bootlegger. In his experience, district court juries are reluctant to take the uncorroborated word of police officers, he

Hall said he believes potential witnesses sometimes fear reprisals if they testify against accused bootleggers. The pending local-option election here also seems to be having an influence on juries, who appear unwilling to convict persons for liquor sales that could become legal here, he said.

The explosives were hidden beneath a concrete watering trough. It was surmised that the materials may have been stolen from nearby mining opera-

The week's second discovery of explosives came late Tuesday afternoon when the Prestonsburg Fire Department checked into a report that several sticks of dynamite were stashed in the bed of a pickup truck parked along North Lake Drive here near Lloyd's Hardware.

Prestonsburg Fire Chief Tom Blackburn removed eight sticks of dynamite and a cluster of approximately 50 highly explosive blasting caps from the bed of the truck, believed to be a vehicle repossessed by a local bank. Blackburn also found five more sticks of dynamite in the front floor of the truck's cab.

Although no details were confirmed as of Tuesday night, Blackburn said it appeared that the truck may have been used by a mine employee and the explosives, related to mine work, simply hauled away as the vehicle was repossessed. He said empty casings for transporting nitroglycerine-derived explosives such as are used in mining were also found in the truck.

The dynamite, which Blackburn pointed out was of a low-percentage variety, commonly used in deep mine blasting, as well as the blasting caps, were burned by the fire department.

IN MEMORIAM

In Memory of our Mom and Dad, Cora B. Newsome Fraley, who died April 30, 1967 and George W. Fraley, who died April 29, 1981.

We miss you both so very much, Mom, it's been 15 years now since you were called home; Dad, it's Leen one long and lonesome year since you join-

Mommy, your sweet, soft touch and beautiful smile could warm any heart, and your reassuring and loving arms would always comfort us. You were there when we needed you.

Daddy, your big strong shoulders, a will, just as strong, your joking ways, and your big, broad smile made you unforgettable to anyone who was ever lucky enough to have known you.

We miss you both so very much, but we know that it's in God's plan for you to leave your eight children here

Now you have 21 grandchildren and 4 great-grandchildren. How we wish you could see them, and we know that you'd be overjoyed just to meet them. We also hope that some day with the mercy of our great and loving God that we'll see you on his beautiful shore.

Hillary Leads Trip Up Ganges On KET

Sir Edmund Hillary leads an adventurous trip up the Ganges River in India on "Hillary's Challenge: Race To The Sky," airing Wednesday, May 12 at 9 p.m. (ET), on KET.

Hillary, the first man to stand on the summit of Mt. Everest, travels upstream on the Ganges River to locate its origins high in the frozen glaciers and snowfields of the Himalayan mountains

The expeditionary crew, christened "Ocean To The Sky" team, encounter threatening white-water rapids on the river and village elders, yogis and Royal Bengal tigers on the land. Finally their arduous journey brings them to the foot of the 18,000-foot mountain, Nar Parbat, which they proceed to climb in a raging snowstorm. Only two members of the team complete the hazardous climb to achieve their quest: a view of the origins of the Ganges River.

Should I Vote For The Sale Of Alcoholic Beverages?

READ THIS AND DECIDE

FACTS

Alcohol is involved In:

- Over ½ of the fatal auto accidents
- ½ of all drownings
- 1/2 of all murders
- 1/3 of the suicides
- The current report of the National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism shows approximately 11 million alcoholics, 3.5 to 4 million problem drinkers between the ages of 14-17.
- According to the Associated Press report in March, 1982, alcoholic beverages causes more accidents on the highways than all disabilities combined.
- The more chances
 Johnny has to buy
 alcohol—with "legal" joints on every corner—the more dangerous Johnny becomes to himself and to you.

Mary is the victim of an epidemic . . .

The greatest crippler and killer in the nation —

It's called "drinking."

Mary was crippled for life in an auto accident. The driver of the other car was driving after a couple of drinks. But they were enough to cause a mistake in judgment. And now Mary can't walk.

She's just one of over 500,000 people injured or killed each year in an auto accident involving drinking drivers

FACTS

Alcohol is involved in:

- 36% of Rape
- 42% of all assaults
- Over 50% of child abuse
- Alcohol is possibly the third leading cause of birth defects, physically, and mentally.
- Alcoholism is one of the four leading health problems and third leading cause of death.
- "We can't stop bootlegging," they say, no, nor can we stop stealing—but we don't legalize a little stealing

WITH LOVE AND UTMOST RESPECT WE DEDICATE THIS ARTICLE TO MRS. PHYLLIS RANIER. THE LORD LAID ON THIS DEAR SAINT'S HEART THE DESIRE TO DONATE OUR COMMITTEE $2,500.00. WE SAY, THANK YOU, MRS. RANIER, THANK YOU, AND WE BELIEVE GOD WILL BLESS YOU IN A MIGHTY WAY FOR USING HIS MONEY SO WISELY.

FACTS

- 2. Floyd County will not receive any TAXES on the sale of Alcoholic Beverages.
- 3. The tax on sale of Alcoholic Beverages will go to the state of Ky. and the Federal Government.
- 4. Floyd County will only receive the license fees as revenue. Maximum charge is $600.00 annually. The Ky. state law will not allow a county to impose a sales tax on Alcoholic Beverages.

- 6. There is no way a citizen can know who will receive a liquor or beer license or where the BEER JOINTS or TAVERNS will be located. They could end up beside your home or church.
- 7. Restaurants would be allowed to sell Alcoholic Beverages. Your young children would see others drinking alcoholic beverages while they were eating in restaurants.
- 8. There is BOOTLEGGING and the illegal sale of Alcoholic Beverage in EVERY COUNTY in KY, WET or DRY. THE LEGAL SALE of ALCOHOLIC BEVERAGES WILL NOT get rid of BOOTLEGGERS in Floyd County.

had been harsh and cold.

The story of the Pilgrim Fathers is known to most students, but it is necessary for me to give some of the highlights of the story of these hardy and courageous people, who braved hardships and danger for the sake of religious freedom.

Aboard the Mayflower were 102 persons- 41 men, the rest women and children.. After a hazardous journey of 66 days across the stormy Atlantic, the Mayflower reached Cape Cod Bay on Nov. 12, 1620. But as the poets later wrote, it was a "stern and rockbound coast," and the bleak land looked harsh and uninviting.. So the Pilgrims didn't go ashore there. They spent almost a month, sailing along the coast of Massachusetts, looking for a more suitable place to establish their colony. At length, on Dec. 26, 1620, they landed at Plymouth harbor and went ashore to view the land. Here it seemed was a suitable place to establish their colony. There were signs of previous habitation. There was a clearing where it appeared that crops such as corn had once been grown. There was also a hill overlooking the site. This hill could be used for the location of a fort. This place had once been an Indian village, but the dread disease, smallpox, had wiped out the entire village.

Here the Pilgrims went to work and established their colony. They formed The Mayflower Compact for governing the colony, and chose John Carver as the first governor.

The winter of 1620-21 was a bitter one for the Pilgrims. Disease, hardships, inadequate food took a heavy toll of the colony. Almost half of the colony perished.

The Mayflower was scheduled to sail shortly back to England, and many of the remaining colonists, beaten and discouraged by hardships, declared their intention of going back to England when the Mayflower sailed.

About the middle of March, one of the Pilgrim fathers was exploring the hillside above the colony, looking for signs of spring. He began to detect subtle signs that spring was near at hand. The air had lost its bitter sting and the sun had a warmer glow; mother earth was getting her first touch of warm sunshine and would soon be waking up from her long winter sleep.

Suddenly the pilgrim spotted a cluster of knee-high flowers standing boldly in a sunny spot. He ran to the flowers and got down on his knees to look at them closely. To his delight, he found a number of pretty, rose-pink blossoms, each with five petals forming a tubular corolla. He scratched

Wildlife Group Offers Free Publication On Acid Rain

A "primer" on acid rain-its formation, its impact, and how citizens can help pass legislation controlling it-is available free of charge from the National Wildlife Federation. The publication discusses, in language that the non-scientist can understand, how acid precipitation has come to destroy the fish and aquatic life in hundreds of lakes across the country.

It also summarizes statistics on where acid rain (formed when sulfur dioxide emissions combine with moisture in the air) is doing the most damage. For example, 212 Adirondack lakes in upstate New York are already fishless because of acid rain and more than 10,000 lakes in Michigan are susceptible to acidification. The publication points out that acid precipitation isn't always in the form of rain; in Los Angeles, it's "acid fog," with an acidity like that of vinegar, that blankets the city.

Finally, for the citizens who wants to support the Fedration's efforts to enact legislation controlling acid rain, the booklet explains how he can help. To get the publication, write to the Naitonal Wildlife Federation, Department No. 40, 1412 Sixteenth Street, NW, Washington, D.C., 20036.

The comparable national unemployment rate for March this year was a nonseasonally adjusted 9.5 percent.

Kentucky's civilian labor force during March was 1,590,400, down 5,300 from February. The civilian labor force includes persons currently employed and unemployed persons actively looking for jobs.

According to the department's labor market analysis section, persons are continuing to drop out of the labor force due to the lack of available jobs and many are exhausting their unemployment insurance benefits.

tuckians during March numbered 169,600, which is 14,100 less than in February and 22,700 more than were unemployed during March 1981, according to department statistics.

The department's statistics also indicated that the state's highest monthly unemployment rate during the 1975 recession year was 8.3 percent for June of that year. During 1981, Kentucky's average unemployment rate was 8.4 percent.

Leaders and "Little People": Close Encounter in Frankfort

(An editorial in The Lexington Herald)

Those many Kentuckians who have journeyed to the capital city to present the views of the "little people" to their state legislators can sympathize with Joyce Everly's eye-opening experience on Tuesday. The Prestonsburg resident had come to the Capitol building-along with other members of the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition-to support legislation that would establish a meaningful tax on unmined minerals in the state.

After meeting with legislative leaders, she assessed the General Assembly in this fashion: "This is the first time I've been in Frankfort," she said, "and, you know, it never dawned on me before I walked into that room that the little people who pay most of the taxes in Kentucky have little to say about what happens here.'

Well, we've never denied that travel is broadening. And welcome to the world of General Assembly, Joyce Everly. It is a world where legislative leaders play parliamentary games to stymie the passage of legislation that is supported by a fair number of their colleagues.

In this instance, it is legislation that is sorely needed-legislation that would compel the mega-corporations that control much of Kentucky's coal reserves to contribute their fair share to the coffers of state and local government. It is legislation that would take some of the unfair tax burden off the shoulders of those "little people," whose voices are drowned out by the blandishments of special-interest lobbyists.

House Bill 549, which would let the state and local governments tax unmined minerals at the same rate as other property, was approved 11 to 1 by the House Appropriations and Revenue Committee.

Customarily, that would mean the bill would come before the full House for a vote. But the House Rules Committee, composed of the chamber's leadership, instead sent the bill to languish in the House Agriculture and Small Business Committee. Now, the legislation is expected to die in the waning days of this session.

Apparently, the House leaders were afraid the bill might pass if it came to a vote on the floor.

One of the chief opponents of HB 549 is House Speaker Bobby Richardson, D-Glasgow. He told the delegation from the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition that the revenue problems of the coal counties that stand to benefit from the bill could all be solved if local property valuation administrators did their job, and assessed property at its fair value.

Now, there is little doubt that PVAs in Eastern Kentucky could do a better job in assessing the thousands of acres of land owned by absentee corporations. The fact that two years ago a subsidiary of Norfolk & Western Railroad paid $76 in property taxes on 81,333 acres of land valued at $7.6 million is sufficient proof that land is not assessed quite properly in the

But Speaker Richardson's further contention that coal is paying its fair share of the tax burden in Kentucky cannot be taken seriously. The state's 4.5 percent severance tax hardly pays for the damage done to state roads by overweight coal trucks-let alone covering the cost of repairing the environmental damage that results from coal mining.

Local governments are prohibited from levying a separate tax on unmined coal, and the state tax of 1/10 of one cent per $100 is so ludicrously low that the state doesn't even bother trying to collect it.

Nor can much credence be given to Mr. Richardson's argument that a 1976 attempt to impose a tax on unmined minerals "completely and utterly failed"-implying that any new attempt would fail as well. The 1976 law relied heavily on voluntary actions by the owners of coal reserves; the new proposal does not. Indeed, HB 549 has the teeth to make a tax on unmined minerals work, as it has worked in other states.

We think a tax on unmined minerals would help bring some necessary equity to taxation in mineral-producing areas of the state. As proposed in HB 549, it would produce $21 million annually for the state, and $43 million each year for local governments. That is $64 million that ought to be paid by the corporation that own the mineral reserves, but is now being paid by the "lit-

All in all, it's a sorry spectacle in Frankfort: The "little people" are asking for relief, but their voices aren't being heard by the House leaders.

We miss you so much Mom And it makes us so sad, To see your favorite flower The beautiful tulips of red. You suffered so much Yet, you were so brave, And worried about your family Because, by your side we stayed. We know you are with Jesus In heaven above, Waiting for your family With open arms of love. Mrs. Warrix Cited For Quilt Entry

Mrs. Maudie Warrix, of Rt. 2, Prestonsburg, has won a ribbon at the Kentucky Quilts '82 Contest at the Kentucky Horse Park in Lexington, it was announced this week.

Her Double Wedding Ring quilt was judged third in the traditional category in the contest which is sponsored by The Kentucky Heritage Quilt Society.

Thirty-four quilts are currently on display at the Kentucky Horse Park in the John Gaines Room and will remain there through May 10. The quilts were all blue ribbon winning entries in the regional quilt contests that were held over the state in March and these quilts then competed at the state level contest in three categories-traditional, contemporary and group.

While Sunday's rain was welcomed by most the slippery roads it produced help send a Left Beaver Creek woman to the hospital.

A car driven by Irene Johnson, about 35, of McDowell, overturned in a ditch around 10 p.m. on Ky. 122, in front of the Hall Funeral Home, sending her to Our Lady of the Way Hospital in nearby Martin. But not until she had been trapped inside the car for 40 minutes.

Because no one saw her Chevette skid from the road, some time passed before a car stopped to check out the still-burning lights. Doug Mullins, Pam Sword, Bobby Howard, Jeff Howard and Mimma Howard, all of the Hunter-Printer area, stopped to help and called State Police.

Responding to the emergency, in addition to State Police, were Floyd County Emergency & Rescue Squad and members of the Martin Fire Department.

McDowell High Students See Nat'l Government CLOSE UP

(Photo by Willie Elliott)

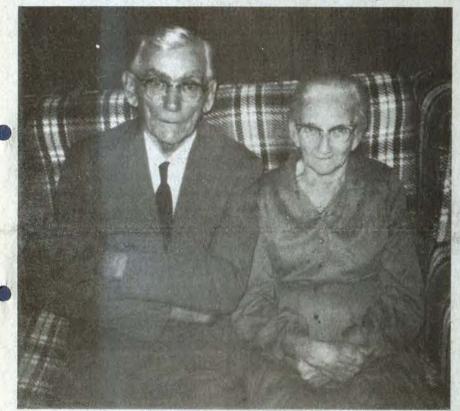

These McDowell High School students who took part in the CLOSE UP government studies program went to Washington, D.C. where, from March 28 through April 3, they and 200 other students and teachers from the tristate area did just what the name implies. Through interviews and talks with some of the top names and behind-the-scenes people in our government, they saw the way it works close up. At the end of the day, students continued their study of national government in small discussion groups groups held by members of the CLOSE UP staff.

They were accompanied by Gary Frazier, teacher at the McDowell school, who organized the program and who took part in a parallel program designed to assist teachers in their classroom instruction. Commenting on the program, Frazier said, "CLOSE UP creates a vast open classroom in Washington and promotes interest in government among students from a variety of backgrounds."

This is the first year that McDowell High School has been invited to take part in the program which is open to students in grades 10, 11, and 12 regardless of grade point average. In addition to fellowship funds made available for teachers and low-to-moderate income students, McDowell High also held fund-raising drives to help offset tuition costs of the program.

Synthetic Fuel Plant In Pike a Lost Cause

Pike county's multi-million-dollar plant designed to convert coal into gas is as dead as the proverbial dodo.

It died, as did other synthetic fuel plants across the country, in the wake of a decision by the Reagan administration that synthetic fuel production is not commercially feasible. Worse, its demise portends ill for other development at Douglas Park, the Robinson Creek site, eight miles south of Pikeville.

More than $18 million of state, federal and county money has been invested in the 60-acre Douglas site, and the county may have its troubles with the state holding onto the location. The property, a former waste area for road construction, was conveyed by deed by the state for seven years, and the seven years will be up in September. The deed provided that all of the property not used for industrial development would revert to the state. But the state may relent if the site is used for public housing, it was said.

A nursing home begun there with $5.2 million in Pike County Building Commission bond money needs completion, but the fiscal court has had trouble leasing it. The matter of meeting $470,000-a-year payments is vexing, too. Would-be lessors want a year's free rent while they test the potential of

On the plus side, there is a 14-story apartment building ready for opening next month, and a fire station and sewage are ready for use.

Moreover, the Department of Transportation has the site in its fiveyear plan which envisions construction of a road to close the five-mile gap between Robinson Creek and Pikeville.

The grand plan for using Pike county coal and converting it into gas was conceived during the administration of Judge-Executive Wayne B. Rutherford, who was defeated last year by Judge Paul Patton. Now, much of that blan is Patton's headache.

State To Resurface Road On Toler Creek

The state Department of Transportation announced last week that it will resurface 2.2 miles of KY 1426, the Toler's Creek road, this summer. The road will be resurfaced from the Left Fork of Toler Creek to KY 979. Bids will be accepted for the project April

The project is part of the state's $23.5 million resurfacing program for this year. The program includes 666 miles of roads throughout the state.

Within the past two years the department has cut the paving cycle by more than half, according to Transportation Secretary Frank Metts. Each statemaintained road will be resurfaced an average of once every 15 years instead of once every 35 years. More frequent resurfacing reduces the need for costly repairs and saves the taxpayers' money, Metts said.

Our Fragile Earth

By DR. JERRY HOWELL Department of Biological and Environmental Sciences Morehead State University

The last article discussed some widespread insect attacks that plagued the U.S during 1978. The spruce budworm, eastern tent caterpillar, range caterpillar, screwworm, mountain pine beetle, birch leaf roller, fall army worm, gypsy moth, Japanese beetle, and potato beetle were mentioned. This article, originally released in January, 1979, explains that these insects were not the only ones to proliferate during 1978. Other insects experiencing record population explosions were grasshoppers, stink bugs, mosquitoes, crickets, and mayflies.

A grasshopper plague, described by some entomologists as the worst in two decades, was prevalent in several states. The Colorado legislature voted two million dollars for the state's share of a federal spraying program for grasshoppers. The number of grasshoppers in Colorado was estimated to be six times more numerous than during a "serious infestation." In north central Texas,

Burchett Named To Head Scouts Here

Randy Burchett, of Prestonsburg, has accepted to serve as Floyd County Boy Scouting chairman for the Lonesome Pine District, according to Paul Patton, district chairman.

As county chairman for the Boy Scouts of America, Burchett will be responsible to recruit county committee members to assist cub scout packs and boy scouts troops in various functions. The county scouting committee is one part of the Lonesome Pine District committee that serves Johnson, Pike, Magoffin and Martin, counties as well as Floyd county. There are nine cub scout packs or boy scout troops, with over 280 boys involved, in Floyd county.

Burchett, an architect, is married to the former Sandra Roberts and they have two sons, John and Mark. After graduating from Prestonsburg High Schol and Prestonsburg Community College, he received his bachelor's degree in architecture from the University of Kentucky, A member of Saint Theodore Catholic Church, he also teaches parttime at P.C.C.

As a boy, Burchett earned the Eagle Scout Award as a member of Boy Scout Troop 27, Prestonsburg, and attended the 1965 Valley Forge National Jamboree. "With his strong scouting background, we are looking forward to Randy helping us really strengthen Floyd county's Boy Scout program," stated Patton.

Out Of High School? Apprentice Program May Be Worth A Look

What do you do if you're just out of high school, don't plan to go to college and military service isn't too appeal-

Well, you could try your luck in the job market or you could apply for an apprenticeship.

According to Tracy Farmer, secretary of the state Public Protection and Regulation Cabinet, about 3,201 Kentuckians have already opted for apprenticeships. Young men and women serve as apprentices in many of the state's 693 programs registered with the Kentucky Department of Labor, one of 13 agencies in the Public Protection Cabinet.

As an apprentice in a registered program, a person:

—is paid while in training;

-receives regular pay increases as skills progress; and

-learns a skill that increases his or her job marketability.

"Apprentices realize other benefits, too," Farmer said. "However, they are not the only ones who gain from these programs. Employers get dedicated, serious workers for wages that start at approximately half the pay of experienced, skilled employees.'

Communities and the state also benefit from apprenticeship programs. Skilled workers become property owners and taxpayers. Consumers are assured of better goods and services when workers are carefully trained.

"We believe that our apprenticeship system is one answer to the very difficult economic times we are now experiencing," said state Labor Commissioner John C. Wells. "This department, along with Kentucky State Apprenticeship and Training Council, the state Education Department and representatives of the labor and management communities, are working together to meet Kentucky's needs now and in the future.'

Wells and an official of the Education Department serve as ex-officio members of the Apprenticeship and Training Council, a body comprised of three representatives from labor and three from management. The council and the Labor Department are responsible for registering apprenticeship The council sees that proposed programs meet standards recognized by industry and public agencies that insure the development of skilled operators.

And those operators, once trained, can enter such diverse fields as computer technology, bricklaying, and air conditioning installation and repair.

Apprenticeship applications may be made to an employer, a labor union, a local Joint Apprenticeship Committee, or a local State Employment Service

More information about apprenticeships is available from the Kentucky Department of Labor, 127 Building, U.S. Highway 127 South, Frankfort, Kentucky, 40601.

NATIONAL CONSUMERS' WEEK According to Attorney General Steven L. Beshear, the week of April 25 to May 1 has been proclaimed National Consumers' Week by President Reagan and Consumers' Week in Kentucky by Gov. John Y. Brown Jr. The overall goal of Consumers' Week is to focus attention on the entral role of consumers in our economy.

"More than ever before, consumers need to be informed of their rights and responsibilities in the marketplace," said Attorney General Beshear. "Futhermore, consumers must be made aware of the potential pitfalls they may encounter in order that they might invest their money wisely. I believe that Consumers' Week is an excellent opportunity to strive to meet these goals."

Enhancing consumer awareness is the primary goal of Consumers' Week. This includes not only information on goods and services, but also awareness of existing government agencies, community organizations and business groups that assist consumers.

One such agency is the Attorney General's division of consumer protection. According to Attorney General Beshear, "My consumer protection division provides many important services for Kentucky citizens. It enforces Kentucky consumer protection laws on behalf of the Commonwealth; it serves as a mediator between businesses and consumers when disputes arise; it provides a variety of educational services; and it intervenes on behalf of consumers in utility rate cases

A third bill was passed that requires professional fund raisers who are engaged in charitable solicitations to file with the Office of the Attorney General detailed disclosures to assist consumers in making informed decisions about their charitable donations.

The fourth bill makes technical changes in the Small Claims Act so that the Small Claims Court is more accessible to everyone.

Finally, the Office of the Attorney General was successful in getting a new motor vehicle arbitration bill passed. This bill will make an informal dispute resolution system available to consumers with complaints concerning their automobiles. Each manufacturer will be required to set up such a procedure at no cost to the buyer by January 1, 1983.

Endangered Species Law Good For People, too, Claims Group

With some experts claiming that a million species-or about a quarter of those on earth-will become extinct during the next 30 years, the U.S. Endangered Species Act, up for Congressional renewal this year, has taken on a new significance for many Americans. Conservationists contend that we're losing too many species too fast, and most agree that much more is at stake than the fate of the Tecopa pupfish-the first species officially stricken from the Endangered Species List by a finding that it is extinct.

Nevertheless, the upcoming debate over the ESA will be a "very tough battle" for the act's proponents, says the current issue of National Wildlife magazine, the bi-monthly publication of the National Wildlife Federation. To win, conservationists will have to dispel some popular misconceptions about the law itself and buck the momentum behind the Reagan administration, which tried to cut the Endangered Species Program budget by some 43 percent last year.

For one thing, says the magazine, the public needs to understand that the Act never sought to bring a halt to development. It instead established a consultation process to come up with alternatives that wouldn't affect threatened species.

Statistics bear out the contention that the law doesn't stymie development, says National Wildlife. In cose to 1,000 consultations between the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and federal agencies implementing the ESA since 1979, only 150 proposed projects posed a danger to an endangered species or its habitat. In the "great majority" of cases, says the magazine, "reasonable alternatives" were developed. For example, the magazine points out, mineral exploration in Montana's Cabinet Mountains was allowed to proceed with only slight modifications to protect grizzly bears.

Other parts of the law haven't worked so well, according to National Wildlife, and that's where the legislation need strengthening. One of the most criticized aspects of the law is the procedure for adding endangered or threatened species to the official list. When this part of the act was amended in 1978, the entire process was simply made more cumbersome and inefficient, conservationists say. Ther result-a mere 15 species were added to the list the year after the amendment took effect, compared to the 65 species listed the year before.

Now, under the Reagan Administration, says National Wildlife, the listing process has "ground to a complete halt." Not a single species has been proposed for the threatened or endangered list since Reagan took office, though some species that were proposed under President Carter have been added to the list

Working against a more efficient listing procedure, says the magazine, is a slashed budget. A cut of nearly half in the current federal budget for listing activities reflects "not only the Administration's cost-trimming campaign, but also a downgraded emphasis on listing," says the magazine report. In addition, the Administration proposed a 20 percent reduction in funding for programs that help restore a species' numbers, the recovery programs that have helped save the whooping crane and the California condor, among others.

The Endangered Species Act is being attacked on several fronts, many of which involve critical provisions of the law. Conservationists will have to remind the American people, says National Wildlife, that without the security blanket of the Endangered Species Act, many more species would have preceded the tiny Tecopa pupfish down the road to extinction.

The more that road is travelled-the more the "web of life" is broken by dropouts-the closer man himself comes to being endangered

A cold is an upper respiratory infection caused by a virus. Its most common symptom is a "runny nose". Other symptoms typically associated with colds include fever, chills, muscle aches and congestion. Coughing can also appear as a result of postnasal drip. A dry, hacking cough will further irritate a scratchy throat caused by many cold viruses. These symptoms can often be treated with medications known as decongestants. Ingested orally or applied topically (nose sprays and drops), they can treat the blocked nasal passages and secretions of a cold.

If you have come down with a cold, remember there are many over the counter medications that can help you get over the symptoms. At COOLEY APOTHECARY you'll find everything to treat that cold, plus a full service prescription center. We're small enough to know you and large enough to serve you. You'll find us at No. 2 Town Center Bldg. Open Mon.-Fri. from 9-5:30 and Sat. 9-5. 886-8106.

HELPFUL HINT:

Because colds are caused by viruses, antibiotics have little to no effect.

Area Electric Power Growth May Slow Over 10-Year Period

Kentucky Power Company last week released its new 10-year forecast of load growth, and although down slightly from last year's forecast it remains considerably higher than both the national and American Electric Power System forecasts.

Robert E. Matthews, president of Kentucky Power, said that the company's revised forecast projects a 5.8% annual growth over the next 10 years in peak internal demand, compared to a 6.0% forecast last year.

"This forecast remains higher than the national prediction of less than 1% for 1982, as well as the 3.5% being forecast over the next 10 years by AEP (Kentucky Power is one of eight operating companies which make up the AEP System)", Matthews said.

He also said that Kentucky Power has lowered its forecast of internal energy requirements from 5.8% to 4.9%, but compared this to the AEP System projection of 3.1%.

Matthews added: "While Kentucky Power's higher-than-average projected load growth in the face of the nation's general economic downturn is a real tribute to the relative stability of business in our 20-county service area, it also points up another fact.

"By the winter of 1992-93, the end of the 10-year period, we project demand of 1,785 megawatts. Our present generating capability at Big Sandy Plant is 1,060 megawatts. This is why the company is acquiring a portion of the Rockport Plant, and we will be sharing in the generation of that plant by late 1984.

Meantime, the American Electric Power System announced a new way of expressing its forecasts for the entire System as a single entity.

Citing continuing economic uncertainties, AEP announced a 10-year forecast of electric power and energy requirements that involves a threelevel range of economic growth patterns

W.S. White, Jr., chairman of the board and chief executive officer of American Electric Power Company, Inc., said a range of forecasts was developed because of the persistent economic uncertainty and the wide divergence in the results of prominent econometric studies about future development of the economy

"While it is important to stress that there will be economic growth in the years ahead," White said, "we must also bear in mind that there is no solid consensus on the amount of growth, the form it will take, or when it will

As a result, he continued, "prudent planning requires that we try as best we can to anticipate the various levels at which development may take place and plan our activities within that framework."

The AEP base, or reference, forecast is predicated on the assumption of moderate economic growth during the next 10 years. It calls for an annual growth rate of 3.5% in winter peak internal demand and of 3.1% in internal energy requirements across the AEP System. That projection compares with last year's forecast of an annual growth rate of 3.8%, both in winter peak internal demand and in internal energy requirements.

By comparison, a "pessimistic" economic projection anticipates an average annual growth rate in winter peak internal demand of 2.8% and in internal energy requirements of 2.2%. An "optimistic" economic projection visualizes a 4.4% annual growth rate in the winter peak internal demand and a 4.3% annual growth rate in internal energy requirements.

PUBLIC NOTICE TO OWNERS OF RENTAL HOUSING

The Floyd County Housing Authority is administering a Section 8 Moderate Rehabilitation Program in Floyd County using funds provided by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. Under this program, owners will rehabilitate rental units which are now substandard or have major building systems or components requiring repair or replacement. The cost of this work, which must total at least $1000 per unit, may be financed by a local lending institution, by the owner, or by any other source available to the owner. The agency does not make rehabilitation loans or grants, but will assist owners to obtain financing.

After required rehabilitation work has been completed, the agency and the owner will execute a contract which establishes a rent for the unit(s) that will cover rehabilitation costs, meet monthly operating expenses, and allow a reasonable profit on the owner's investment. For a fifteen year period, the owner will rent the rehabilitated unit(s) to eligible lower income tenants, who will pay approximately 25 percent of their income toward the rent. The agency will pay the remainder of the rent directly to the owner. The initial occupant of a rehabilitated unit may be the owner's present eligible tenant.

After rehabilitation the rent(including utilities) cannot exceed the following Maximum Rents:

	BEDRO	OM SIZ	E
	2		4
206	244	282	319

The agency's current funds will allow rehabilitation of 35 units of rental housing as follows:

has hosted two visiting artists, and more are scheduled in coming weeks. Potter Mike Imes, of New Haven, Ky. shared his skills with Maytown Elementary students during his stay in this county, April 6 and 7. In addition, Imes conducted a workshop for beginning and advanced students as well as pottery guild members.

Last Tuesday and Wednesday, sculptor Joanne Hofelich travelled to the Auxier Elementary School where she demonstrated the inflation and launching of small hot air balloons before a fascinated group of seventh and eighth graders. She also sent up two of the balloons, which are shaped into varied forms and designs, at Maytown Elementary.

Gwen Hefuner, who heads the program here, said The Reel World String Band, a nationally-known female group which performs traditional mountain music, will present a concert at Osborne Elementary at 9 a.m., April 26. She stressed that the public is welcome to attend this performance.

The Artists in the Schools Program is funded through the Kentucky Arts Council and the Floyd County Board of Education with some funding and workshop space provided by Prestonsburg Community College. Through the program, Ms. Hefner and visiting artists are able to share their particular talent with elementary students in all parts of the county.

KENTUCKY'S NATIONAL CHAMPION TREES

What does a Bourbon County bur oak have in common with a Boyle County blue ash tree? They are two of a group of nine Kentucky trees unique in their status as national champions, according to the American Forestry Association's 1982 Register of Big

Each year the AFA compiles an updated Register of Big Trees and this year's list includes the following Kentucky national champions, whose status is determined by a point total based on circumference, height, and spread of the crown. The trees are listed according to species, county where found, circumference at 41/2 feet, and height: blue ash, Boyle Co., 14'4", 86'; Ohio Buckeye, Casey Co., 11'11, 146'; bur oak, Bourbon Co., 26'6'. 95'; pin oak, Livingston Co., 17'4", 134'; swamp white oak, Monroe Co., 20'7' 104'; sassafras, Davies Co., 17'3", 100'; sycamore, Estill Co. 39', 96'

To give you an idea of the size of these trees consider the Casey County Ohio buckeye which is taller than a twelve story building. Or consider the fact that it would take seven men, each six feet tall, to reach around the Estill County sycamore. Early settlers told of sycamore trees which could shelter more than 30 men and it is apparent that Kentucky can still grow them big.

A yellow buckeye which was 12'10" around and 140' high and a pawpaw with a circumference of three and a half feet have reportedly been felled, even though they remain on the official list. Four trees currently being considered for nomination include a bigtooth aspen, slippery elm, striped maple and a pear tree. Allowing for the two champions lost this would bring Kentucky's total to 11 champions.

The blue ash, pin oak, and swamp white oak all share their championships with trees in Indiana, Illinois, and Michigan. It is also interesting to note that Kentucky has a champion buckeye, usually associated with Ohio, while one of the co-champion Kentucky coffeetrees is located in Ohio. The other two are found in Michigan and Pennsylvania.

While one might suppose these champion trees would flourish only in places inaccessible to man, the fact is that many of them are right under our noses. The same goes for champions yet undiscovered, simply because we take them for granted. The champion sassafras is right on one of the main thoroughfares in Owensboro, Kentucky's third largest city, and is a local tourist attraction.

If you would like more information about the big trees or would like to place a tree in nomination, send a letter to: National Register of Big Trees, American Forestry Association, 1319 18th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C.

'Olympics Of The Mind' To Test Schoolchildren

"Challenging children to come up with unusual solutions to a variety of problems" is the way Correspondent Bill Moyers described the "Olympics of the Mind" featured on his "Creativiy" program on PBS recently.

Students form teams and compete in much the same way as athletic competition, explains Susan Leib, program manager for gifted education in the Kentucky Department of Education.

For the first time, Kentucky students are taking part in this event along with 25,000 students worldwide.

Several local school districts are selecting local teams to send to statewide competition to be held Saturday, May 8, at 1 p.m. at Thomas Jefferson Middle School, 4401 Rangeland Road, Louisville. Some 200 Kentucky students are expected to participate. State winners will be eligible to compete in the "Olympics of the Mind" world finals in Glassboro, N.J., May

Students will be solving problems developed by the "Olympics of the Mind" organization in Glassboro. An example might be to get across a body of water 10 feet wide without a boat, without swimming, and without using anything propelled by electricity or Another problem might be to build a structure out of balsa wood to hold in excess of 600 pounds. Primary students might be asked to get artificial fish out of a huge bowl without using a fishing rod. Other students might be asked to alk to a dollar bill for two minutes.

"The problems are exercises to challenge any student's creativity," said Leib.

Local school districts tentatively scheduled to compete in the state finals include Bellevue, Campbellsville, Covington and Dayton independent districts; and Daviess, Grant, Jefferson, Laurel, Lincoln and Lyon counties. Only a elementary and junior high students will be competing in Kentucky his year.

Mt. St. Helens Tragedy Is Investigated On KET

"Mt. St. Helens: Why They Died" probes one of the most tragic natural disasters in recent history. KET airs this 30-minute report on the deaths caused by Mt. St. Helens' volcanic eruption Wednesday, May 12 at 8:30

Former Washington Governor Dixie Lee Ray talks candidly about the inadequate danger zones established by her staff. Of the 60 people killed in the smoke and ash of the eruption, 57 died in open, unzoned lands on the north and west sides of the mountain.

Ray is joined by two chief scientists, a victim's family and Seattle filmmaker Otto Sieber, to determine whether the state chose economic interest over public safety. Seiber, one of the first to discover the faulty zoning, joined with the families of victims to demand an investigation of this tragic

"Mt. St. Helens: Why They Died" examines the roles of scientists and government in planning that could affect many lives during similar occurances in the future.

The program was produced by KPBS/San Diego.

Dr. Stumbo Delays Decision To Enter Race for Governor

Floyd county's Dr. Grady Stumbo, getting encouragment from others, secretary of the state Department for Human Resources, is mentioned as a possible candidate for governor but he said last Friday that he has not made a final decision about the race, and, instead, is concentrating just now on running his department.

Stumbo said he did not tell Democratic members of Kentucky's congressional delegation that he would announce his candidacy soon when he met with them in Washington earlier last week

"I never said I was going to make a decision in two weeks. I never said when I was going to make a decision," Stumbo said

"Ninety-nine percent of my time is spent on departmental issues," he said. "That is all I want to concern myself with until way up in the fall."

Stumbo said he has not set a timetable for making a decision. "That is a question I have not answered," he said. "I am just going to see how much the support and interest continues."

Dr. Stumbo said he did not think that either of the candidates mentioned most prominently for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination-Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins and Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane-have established definite leads or demonstrated the ability to raise large amounts of stocking cap in winter are economical ways to add comfort. But there is a better way. And it starts with natural gas heating and central air conditioning. When you consider equipment life, year round efficiency and comfort, you'll find gas heat with central air will cost you less than any other system. With a highly efficient natural gas furnace, little heat is lost or wasted, so you get more heating value for your energy dollar. And during the cooling season a typical central air conditioner costs less to operate than compromise units which are used for both heating and cooling. So for comfort and efficiency, you'll find natural gas heat with central air a lot easier to live with, all year round.

The Wayland varsity cheerleaders won first place in the county competition held recently at the Garrett Elementary School. This group of girls has not lost a county trophy since being elected to the squad. Wayland's cheerleaders have won this trophy eight out ten years. The 1981-82 squad also won first place trophies at the Garrett, Wayland, and Martin invitational basketball tournaments.

Tennis Team Wins 1, Loses 1

Last weeks' trip to Bath county was not a successful one for the Prestonsburg tennis squad. Bath county's Coach Teresa Taylor and her team were ready and anxious to avenge their loss to PHS in a previous meet and the singles matches did not get off to a good start for Prestonsburg when their two top seeded players were defeated soundly Prestonsburg's No. 3 player, Ted George, whom Coach Lois Crum is calling her most consistent player on the team right now, won his singles match with no trouble. His win was followed with wins by Todd Johnson and David Spradlin. Spradlin moved into the No. 6 position this week due to a vacancy created by the absence of Aaron Crum. The three of six singles wins meant pressure was on the doubles teams once again. Three straight losses for the doubles teams gave Bath county a solid victory with the final score being Bath county 6, and Prestonsburg 3.

Scores for the meet were:

Singles-D. Adams/S. Rawlings 2-6, B. Hamilton/G. Conyers 1-6, T. George/D.Grimes 6-0, J. Cook/D. Thompson 4-6, T. Johnson/S. Clarke 8-6, D. Spradlin/J. Ray 6-4.

Doubles-Adams-George/Convers-Clarke 4-6, Hamilton-Cook/Rawlings-Grimes 5-7, Johnson-Spradlin/Clarke-Thompson 4-6.

Last week's loss to Bath county was softened considerably, Monday, as Prestonsburg scored an overwhelming victory over Pikeville.

Winning all six singles matches against the Pike squad (three of whom are women), Prestonsburg was able to relax in doubles competition and won two of the three doubles matches. Final score in the meet saw the PHS players on top, 8-1.

Scores for the match follow:

Singles-D. Adams/S. Malenpati 8-2, B. Hamilton/M. Goss 8-3, T. George/S. Malenpati 8-0, T. Johnson/N. Scott 8-4, J. Cook/R. Neeley 8-2, D. Spradlin/M. Hall 8-1

Doubles-Adams-George/Malenpati-Goss 6-8, Johnson-Hamilton/Malenpati-Scott 8-0, Ousley-Cook/Neeley-Hall 9-7.

The median weekly earnings for women employed full time in 1981 ranged from a high of $442 for operations and systems researchers and analysts to $318 for librarians, the U.S. Department of Labor reported.

Surface Mine Effect On Streams Accented In Hydrology Report

A report, one of a series describing the general hydrology of coal in the Eastern Coal Province, the basins of the Kentucky, Upper Licking and Red Rivers has been prepared and released by the U.S. Geological Survey in response to the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977. It is designed to assist mine owners, operators and consultants in implementing the requirements of the Act for defining the impact of surface min-ing on the general hydrology of the

According to the 82-page report, coal mining in an area of 4,432 square miles in Kentucky's eastern coal field has shifted from underground to surface operations. About 65 percent of the 38 million tons mined in 1978 came from surface mines. Mining activities directly affect the chemical and physical characteristics of streams draining the area. These effects are especially important in the area because nearly all public water supplies are developed from lakes and

In streams draining mined areas, dissolved solids such as sulfate, iron, manganese, and some trace metals are much higher than in streams draining undisturbed areas. According to Ferdinand Quinones, senior author of the report, "Lowering of pH in streams receiving mine drainage is not readily evident. Acid waters have pH values varying from 6.2 to 8.3 units. Limited suspended-sediment data from mined areas show tenfold increases in the sediment load as compared to nonmined areas."

The report, "Hydrology of Area 14, Eastern Coal Province, Kentucky", U.S. Geological Survey Water Resources Investigation 81-137, by Ferdinand Quinones, Donald S. Mull, Karen L. York and Victoria Kendall, is available from the District Chief, U.S. Geological Survey, Room 572, 600 Federal Place, Louisville, Kentucky

TRIM UP YOUR SPRING FASHIONS
Trims are everywhere this spring—on blouses, pants, skirts and jackets.

Since many of today's new metallic trims are bulkier than most lace trims and cannot be applied easily by machine, overcast them in place with matching metallic thread or invisible thread.

Apply cement glue to the ends of metallic trims to avoid raveling. Then work the ends into appropriate seams by hand stitching for a professional finish.

Here are some ideas for using today's trims:

Necklines and cuffs come alive with the application of wide pregathered lace, metallic braids, cording, piping or soutache (a type of braid).

Flat metallic trim can be woven through lace trims that have eyelet centers.

Hemlines accented by several rows of metallic braid, cording, soutache or flat trim gain new attention with a border effect. Try creating a pattern by varying the spacing of the trims and mixing a few different styles.

You can transform a plain bodice front into a work of art with vertical rows of pre-gathered lace, metallic braids, rick-rack or soutache.

A bodice with a button placket can have lace on either side or rows of trim on both sides of the placket.

To outline yokes, stitch thinner cording, rick-rack or metallic piping in the

To outline the entire edge of a jacket, sweater or wrap you can use metallic piping, braid or cording. These are also great for outlining the edge of patch pockets and slant pockets or western pockets.

Sewing metallic trims by hand gives you cleaning and fashion advantages. They can be easily removed before dry cleaning or laundering since some metallic trims tend to tarnish and/or stain the garment. They also give your fashion versatility—as they'll come off as easily as you put them on.

By JACK M. FRIAR County Extension Agent CATERPILLARS BEGINNING TO APPEAR

Two insects that are yearly indicators of spring weather have begun to appear across west Kentucky. Specimens of the canker worm and the Eastern tent caterpillar have been collected from Caldwell and Marshall counties. So far, all collections have been of very small worms, less than 34 inch long.

These insects are very easy to identify. The Eastern tent caterpillar is a dark, hairy worm with light blue "keyhold" shaped marks in a line down its back. Also, the white silken tent on the trees is a indicator of the presence of this worm.

The canker worms move in a looping or inch-worm fashion. They will also move through the tree by "spinning down" on silk strands. These insects often become so numerous that you can hear them in the trees.

The cold weather in early April may have killed many of the worms this year. But if you see many of the insects feeding on your trees, you may have to take some control measures.

Both the Canker worm and the Eastern tent caterpillar are controlled easily, especially if sprays are applied before the worms reach ½-inch in length. Control usually is not necessary in large, well-established shade trees and ornamentals. As a rule of thumb, if the tree is too large for you to spray, don't try.

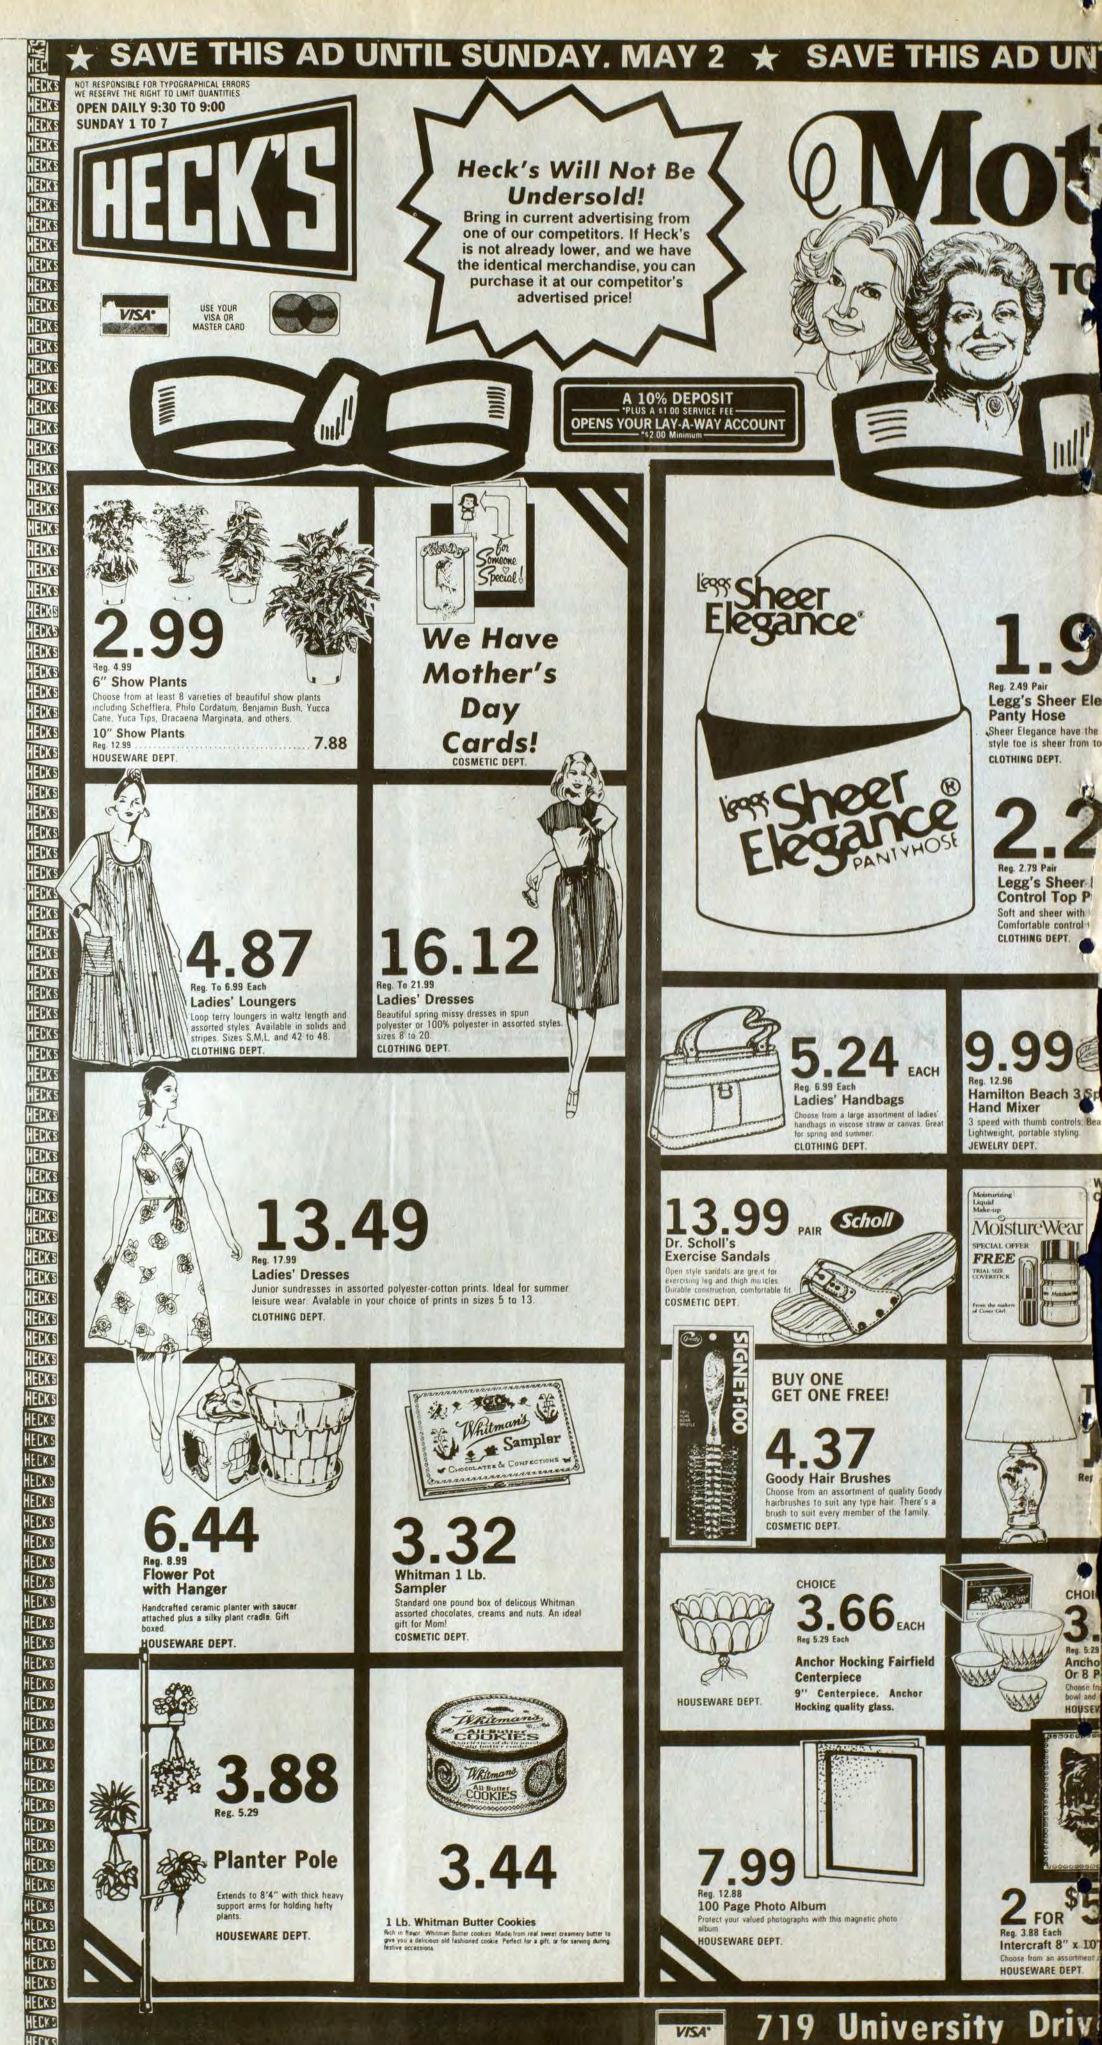

If you have an infestation of either insect in fruit or nut trees, you should apply some type of control. Any of the typical insecticides available to homeowners will do the job. Formulations of Bacillus thuringiensis, commonly called B.t., is especially good for use around the home, because its active ingredient is a bacteria harmful only to larvae such as the Canker worm and Eastern tent caterpillar. B.t. is completely non-toxic to humans, animals and those important pollinators, honeybees.

If you use an insecticide other than B.t., do not spray trees in bloom, since this may kill honeybees. And if you are using Sevin, do not use it on apple trees until at least 12 days post bloom or the insecticide will cause thinning of blooms and young apples.

For further information on controlling Canker worm and Eastern tent caterpillar, consult your county Extension agent for agriculture.

Attend Beckley Meet Of Jehovah Witnesses

A delegation from the Allen congregation were among the 1583 that attended the circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses at Beckley, West Virginia. The program used the theme, "Blameless as Lightbearers Amid a Twisted Generation." The two-day session included a variety of talks on Bible subjects, demonstrations and experiences to show how persons may face up to the problems confronting this generation. A baptism of 18 new ministers took place Saturday morning, according to William Wells, spokesman for the congregation.

Good News Report

By THOMAS W. PAUKEN Director of ACTION

This is a good new story from Bryan, Texas, in Brazos County; the kind of story worth telling everywhere. Back in 1976, the Brazos County Senior Citizens Association was organized as a non-profit corporation whose purpose was fellowship, recreation, education and a place to outlaw loneliness.

The problem was the association didn't really have a place it could call its own to do those things. More than that, it didn't have any money to buy or build one. That is until Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lester, well-known citizens in Bryan, stepped up and said, "I'll tell you what we're gonna do..."

What they did was deed over an acre of land to the seniors, and everybody rightly thought that was a special kind of neighborliness. But that still didn't answer the problem of a gathering place. Well, the Lesters had an idea for that, too. They'd be willing to put up $50,000 for a building fund if the senior citizens would form a posse of sorts and ride out and lasso an equal amount of money on their own. And that's just what the elders of Bryan did. By letter, by telephone, on foot and maybe on horseback, and they had the money raised in less than two months.

Well, they figured they had it made until they hired an architect to draw up plans for an activity center that would serve all the senior citizens in the county. Then they learned it would cost more than double of what they estimated. That riled them up but it didn't scare them off. They just went back to selling the idea everywhere they could until they had what they needed to start construction. Of course, they hadn't calculated that it would be necessary for them to build a street or pave a large parking area, but it was, and as Willie Bell Bogard, president of the association, says, "We had faith we could do it and we did it without any government money, but through the help of our local people." When it came to the cost of landscaping, which was estimated between $10,000 and $14,000, the seniors said that's far enough. We'll do that job ourselves. And, of course, they did.

Today, Bogard declares, with justifiable pride, the association has the most modern and convenient facility of its kind in the State of Texas. It's commodious, it's heated, it's built of steel and brick. There's a meeting room that will seat 250, a large kitchen, two offices, four craft rooms, and a spacious lounge. Provisions have been made for handicapped seniors, and there's a gift shop where the members sell their craft items made at the center. Those sales along with bake sales and other social affairs, keep the association in good financial health. During an average month, approximately one-thousand senior citizens of the county come to the center.

As Bogard sums up the cooperative venture, "We saw a great need and did something about it through our own efforts and determination and without federal assistance. We believe that what we did can be done throughout our country if we are only willing to shoulder the responsibility and work together."

Martin Hospital To Change Hands

Sponsorship of Our Lady of the Way Hospital at Martin may soon pass from the order of Catholic nuns which founded the hospital to another religious order, a hospital spokesman said last

The Sisters of Divine Providence, the community of religious sisters which built the hospital in 1947, is said to be negotiating the transfer with the Cincinnati-based Sisters of Charity. Sisters of the Divine Providence community, which has its headquarters in Melbourne, Ky., managed the hospital themselves until two years ago, when they contracted with yet another religious group, the Alexian Brothers, to run the 39-bed facility.

Robert Rigel, appointed by the Alexian Brothers as administrator of the Martin hospital in December, 1979, was transferred this week to Signal Mountain, Tenn., where he will manage the Alexian Village of Tennessee, a lifecare community.

He has been replaced here by Tom O'Halloran, from North Dakota, who will manage the hospital while the transfer is being finalized. The changeover is expected to take several

The National Weather Service has inaugurated a national call-in weather report for travelers. The 24-hour service began November 23, and offers two easy-to-remember numbers: 1-900-976-EAST for conditions east of the Mississippi; 1-900-976-WEST for weather west of the river.

The 55-second recording describes dominant weather-basic conditions such as rainy or fair-and temperatures for major cities. The east call-in line includes weather details for Atlanta, Boston, Cincinnati, Miami Beach, New York and Washington, D.C. Dallas, Kansas City, Los Angeles and Las Vegas are among the cities in the western report.

Weather condition reports are updated at least daily, with additional updates made as major storms and important conditions develop.

A call to the National Weather Service weather update costs 50 cents, plus tax, and is billed by the telephone company.

And, many times, the Bevinsville resident will tell you, it's not so much the value of the things you find, but the oddity of things dropped and long ago forgotten that makes the effort worth

Auxier Cub Scouts Win Parade Honors

Auxier Cub Scouts display the banner they carried in the parade (left), while other members, in "hillbilly" attire, walk along the parade route through Pikeville.

At the invitation of the Pikeville Chamber of Commerce, Cub Scout Pack 876, of Auxier participated in Pikeville's Hillbilly Days parade, April 17.

With the pack's more than 30 members dressed mostly in stereotypical "hillbilly" garb and leading the annual parade, they were instant favorites with the crowd. Two goats which walked the route with the pack doubtless added to the "down home" appearance of the scouts.

The presentation of four trophies to the pack, including honors for first place in marching and flags as well as outstanding pack, came as a pleasant surprise, especially in view of the fact that the pack, which is made up of members from both Auxier and Prestonsburg, was organized only a couple of months ago.

No, no, no,

Yes, yes, yes!

For the past several months, we've had to say "No, no, no" when customers asked if we had many Hondas in stock. But the "No, no, no" days are over and the "Yes, yes, yes" days are here!

If you visit our lot during the next few days, you'll find an outstanding selection of Hondas, especially the popular Accords and LX models.

So, if you've been waiting to buy a Honda or simply wish to testdrive one, come on in. The Hondas are here, but probably not for long.

Want to attract some small birds-even bluebirds-to your backyard?

All it takes, says the current issue of Ranger Rick's nature magazine, is a little creativity and almost no expense. You can transform trash-milk cartons and other throw-away containers-into Detergent Dream Houses, Milk Carton Cabins, Coffee Can Cottages and Margarine Tub Man-

Houses made from trash are perfect alternatives for birds who nest in tree cavities, says the monthly children's publication of the National Wildlife Federation. If you decide to build, keep the following tips in mind:

Spray the interior of any container with black enamel paint, which will make the house seem more like the inside of a tree.

Most small birds need an opening about 11/2 inches across. Keep the opening small or you'll attract starlings and other large birds.

Make 6 to 8 drains holes in the bottom of the house.

The house will probably be better off without perches, which can attract sparrows and starlings-the "pests" of the bird world.

Paint the outside of the house if you want it to last longer. Exterior latex paint is best, says Ranger Rick, and white paint is preferable if the house will be hung in a sunny spot. (White will reflect the sunlight and keep the

To keep rain out of the entrance hole, hang each house so it tilts slightly toward the ground.

As soon as the young birds have "fledged," or flown from the house, clean it out to get rid of lice, mites or other animals that set up shop in birdhouses. All of these "homes from trash" should be cleaned or thrown out before winter comes, Ranger Rick reminds his readers.

Now that you've got the basics, here are instructions for building three of the homes described in the magazine:

The "Coffee Can Cottage" will provide birds with a home for many years, says Ranger Rick. Drill two holes three inches apart in the bottom of a one or two-pound coffee can. (Use a onepound can for wrens and a two-pound can for larger birds.) Then drill holes in a mounting board, drill drain holes on the bottom side of the can. Cut an entrance hole in the can's plastic lid, snap the lid onto the can, and nail the completed house to a post or tree.

One of the easiest houses in the magazine is the "Detergent Dream House," built from an empty detergent bottle. This one doesn't even need
