

THE CROWDS HAVE GONE, and the deer who managed to survive hunting season at Dewey Lake have begun, once again, to leave their forest cover, even by day, and drink along the barren lake shore. These two, shown on a distant point, were photographed Sunday near the Stratton Branch section of the lake.

Miners' Families Ask $52 Million Damages

A total of $52 million is asked in each of two suits filed last Friday against the Adkins Coal Co. and Island Creek Coal Co. by families of seven of the eight men killed in an explosion inside Adkins Mine No. 18, near Topmost last December 7.

The suits were filed almost simultaneously in both the Knott circuit court at Hindman and U.S. district court at Pikeville. Chris Perkins, one of the attorneys representing the families, said the two suits were filed in the event that a question arises over which court has jurisdiction. Once that point is settled, one of the suits will be dismissed, he said.

Only the family of Keith Crager, of Hueysville, shotfirer at the ill-fated mine, was not represented in the damage action. Those who filed are the families of the seven other victims, Dillard Ashley, Tommy Centers, David

Charge Lowered For Youth Held In Knife Slaying

The murder charge lodged against 18-year-old John Drane Hill for the stabbing death at David last June 16 of his brother-in-law, Melton Charles Lindsey, 26, was reduced at last Friday's circuit court session to reckless homicide. His five-year prison term was probated.

Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen commented later that evidence at hand indicated "an almost perfect case of self-defense."

This evidence included statements by the accused and his sister, Edna Carleen Lindsey, who was the wife of the victim, and by Joe Szakos, the David man to whose home young Hill fled after the stabbing. Mrs. Lindsey said her husband and brother were arguing about the merits of a motor vehicle. She was sitting in the truck seat, between the two men, and Hill was driving. Lindsey reached across her and struck Hill twice, one blow breaking his glasses and cutting him about the eye.

Hill stopped the truck, ran to its rear, and Lindsey emerged from the other door, also going to the rear. Hill claimed his brother-in-law "came at him" and that the stabbing resulted.

Szakos told of Hill coming to his home, apparently terrified, asking refuge and that the door be locked against his "brother," who, he said he feared, would kill him.

Hill had no previous court record. The two men, itinerant workers, were residents of Rienzi, Mississippi.

Slone, James E. Gibson, Clarence and Roy Perry and Bobby Slone.

Individuals named as defendants with the two coal companies are Orville Adkins, his son, Adam, and their wives, all of this county.

The complaint alleges that the Adkins family and Island Creek were guilty of negligence and showed "complete disregard" for the victims' lives by allegedly failing to provide the dead miners with a safe working place.

In addition to $17 million in compensatory damages for the seven victims' families, the suit also seeks $35 million in punitive damages—to punish the defendants and to deter them from "continuing such wanton and reckless conduct in the future."

The suit contends that the Adkins family and Island Creek are not shielded from liability by the Kentucky Workmen's Compensation Act because neither was the victims' employer.

Although Adkins Coal was listed in federal records as the mine operator, the dead miners' employer was actually Incoal Inc., a company wholly owned by the Adkins family, the suit contends.

Island Creek provided engineering and other services to Incoal, including underground surveying, mine maps and roof-control plans, the suit alleges.

"Island Creek ... substantially controlled all aspects of the mining operation and had a continuing and ongoing presence" at the mine, the families assert in the suit.

Between 1970 and the date of the explosion at Topmost, Mine No. 18 had received more than 300 notices of federal safety standards violations, plaintiffs in the suit allege.

After the blast, state and federal investigations concluded that illegal mining practices contributed substantially to it.

Those practices included improper and dangerous blasting techniques; insufficient use of rock dust or other material to reduce the possibility of an explosion; excessive accumulations of coal dust; and failure to use ventilation curtains, as required by law.

These violations and others constituted negligence on the part of the defendants, the suit contends.

The defendants should have known that "repeated and flagrant violations" of state and federal mining laws rendered Mine No. 18 hazardous, the families allege in the suit.

They contend that the defendants are liable for damages because they tolerated unsafe practices in the mine; failed to remove those persons responsible for them; and failed to obtain the personnel, equipment and training necessary to make the mine safe.

A DAY TO REMEMBER

As this is being written another Pearl Harbor Day is drawing to its end. It has passed, unrecognized by many, without observance by most. Even the U. S. Postal Service has not closed up shop for this day which, Franklin D. Roosevelt declared, would "live in infamy."

Pearl Harbor Day has, or should have, a special meaning for Floyd county. For one of its own, Walter Karr Bowling, of the USS Arizona, was among the first to die that Sunday morning, 41 years ago.

Former Sheriff Frank Leslie recently expressed the hope that this county would take more than passing note each year of the anniversary of that attack. There is a reason for his feeling more strongly about this matter than most of us.

But for the fact that Navy orders sent his cruiser, the Utah, to sea the day before the attack, he would have been an eyewitness—or possible victim—of the death that the attacking Japanese rained from the skies for almost two hours without interruption.

Mr. Leslie ate lunch with Walter Bowling, the day before the attack. His ship returned to Pearl Harbor, the day after the bombs fell. His friend's ship, the Arizona, had been the first to be hit. All that remained to be seen of the vessel, amid a scene of devastation, were its stacks protruding from the water like monuments to its dead.

Leslie was as close to the real Pearl Harbor Day as that. It's little wonder that he feels that a younger generation, and an older, too, should remember the day by more than a mere mental note.

MORE ABOUT THE WEATHER

Was moved to pose as authority on old-time winters till I heard a youngster solemnly declare, the other day, that winters, these days, are nothing like those he could remember.

Without belaboring the issue, I could tell you there was a time when winter-weather set in around the first of December and we stayed "froze in" till March.

But all of us who specialize in hark-

Free Parking A Holiday Bonus

Beginning today (Wednesday), Christmas shoppers in Prestonsburg will enjoy a holiday bonus of free parking which is being provided through the cooperation of the mayor, city council and Prestonsburg merchants.

Employees of downtown businesses are being asked to use municipal parking lots in order to afford more street parking for shoppers.

Losing Group May Seek Liquor Licensing Probe

UNSUCCESSFUL APPLICANTS for liquor licenses gathered in a special meeting Sunday to air gripes and formulate a strategy for protest. Fred Bingham, a key figure in the "wet" movement in this county (in center of photo), was among the group.

Hires Attorneys For Legal Fight Said in Planning

Liquor licenses issued for this county last week went to "your fat cats in Prestonsburg with the power in Frankfort."

That was the gist of a barrage of complaints aired at a meeting at the Allen Park convention center Sunday afternoon. And the complainants, many of them unsuccessful applicants for the 21 licenses issued in the county by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, vowed to appeal the board's action this week and to challenge it in court.

Federal authorities will be asked to investigate charges of bribery in the issuance of the licenses, the group resolved.

And Sen. Benny Ray Bailey, citing the concerns expressed at the meeting, formally requested the state liquor board Monday to "meet with the people and respond to their questions."

Prestonsburg attorney Gary Johnson, who is representing the group, said Tuesday that some of those denied licenses will request a hearing before the liquor board on the reasons they were passed over and that another group will appeal the issuance of the licenses in Franklin Circuit Court.

He expects to file both appeals by Thursday, Johnson said. Filing the Circuit Court appeal would automatically block—at least until the appeal is heard—any liquor sales under the newly-issued licenses, he said.

A petition for a grand jury investigation of circumstances surrounding the awarding of the licenses is also being prepared, the attorney said.

District 3 Magistrate Ed Caudill apparently spoke for many of those at Sunday's meeting when he said, "Every one of us has been treated dirty."

"There's half a million bucks involved in this damn thing," he alleged.

At one point the hastily-called meeting swelled to near 100 persons but perhaps two dozen of them, who

Needy To Get Help As Fuel Costs Rise

As gas prices rose and temperatures fell to near-normal temperatures, county officials received word this week that another $22,000 in state funds will be available to help needy families cope with the winter chill.

The money, which will be distributed under three state programs identified collectively as Project Warmup and administered out of the county judge-executive's office, is designed to supplement federal funds available under the Home Energy Assistance Program administered by the Cabinet for Human Resources.

The problem facing the state, as Human Resources Secretary Buddy H. Adams explained it, is that the $22 million in federal funds designed to help low-income families pay their winter fuel bills is not enough to do the job.

At an average outlay of $200 per household, the federal money could help some 105,000 Kentucky households this winter. But by the time applications are being accepted on January 3, about 250,000 families are expected to be eligible for assistance.

To help make up the difference, the Human Resources Cabinet is making $1.6 million available to local governments, to be distributed according to the number of low-income families in each county.

Under the County Shelter Program, persons without adequate heat in their homes can be offered temporary shelter. $1 million has been set aside statewide for this purpose.

The County Intervention Program, for which $500,000 is available in all the state, will provide blankets, space heaters and some fuel to households without heat. This program can also help pay utility reconnection fees and deposits necessary to restore utility service.

According to census figures, a quarter of Floyd county's population—or some 12,410 individuals—fall below the poverty line. On that basis, this county's share in the supplemental state funds is reckoned at $14,622 for the shelter program and $7311 for the intervention program.

Floyd Judge-Executive Jerry Lafferty, Jr. said this week that arrangements had been made to house at Jenny Wiley State Park those in need of warm shelter. Most people would not need to spend more than two nights at the Lodge—enough time for the county to place space heaters and blankets in the home or to have utility services reconnected—he said.

Accordingly, he had asked that only $3000 be designated for the shelter

Co-Holder of Liquor License Facing Felony Charges Here

One of those awarded a liquor license last week has three felony charges pending in Floyd District Court and was recently hospitalized for a psychiatric disorder, it was learned here this week.

The day before he was named by the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Board as one of the successful applicants for a liquor license in this county, Willard Stanley, Jr., of Melvin, was due to appear in court here to face two charges of first degree robbery and a charge of wanton endangerment, according to court records.

The case was postponed until February, however, because the defendant is in a mental institution, District Judge Harold Stumbo said Tuesday.

The son of state Mines and Minerals Commissioner Willard Stanley, the younger Stanley and William E. See received a liquor license last Thursday as operators of the S & S Whiskey Store on KY 122 at Melvin.

Among the criteria used to select successful applicants from a crowded and highly competitive field were the applicants' "capabilities," noted the liquor board's general counsel last week.

Arrest warrants issued Sept. 17 accuse Stanley of having stolen at gunpoint a pickup truck belonging to Truman Hall and an automobile belonging to Mrs. Douglas Hicks and of trying to run down State Detective Danny Stumbo.

The warrants were not served, reportedly because Stanley eluded police and was soon thereafter admitted to a Lexington hospital for treatment of a mental illness. On November 19 he posted bond on the three charges, however, with his father standing surety.

In the early afternoon of Sept. 16, according to the story pieced together this week from witness accounts, police responded to a report that Stanley had stolen a pickup at Bypro Junction, spotted the suspect traveling north on KY 122 at Orkney, and pursued him as far as Garrett where, trapped in a cul de sac, he fled on foot.

At that time, Mrs. Barbara Hicks, of Hueysville, was about to drive home with her three children after their appointment with a Garrett dentist. A man brandishing a gun ordered her and the children out of the car, a 1972 Cadillac, and commandeered it, a witness reported.

According to the warrant charging him with wanton endangerment, Stanley attempted to run down Det. Stumbo, who was attempting to block his escape. He then drove the car toward Wayland and Topmost on KY 7, was finally halted near Buckingham, but made off on foot, according to reports.

Court documents indicate that Stanley posted a $5000 bond on each of the robbery charges and $10,000 on the wanton endangerment count. While the case was continued to February, no definite date has been assigned for it.

ROADSIDE GARBAGE DUMPS are nothing new to Floyd county residents. Top a mountain on most any secondary road and you'll see a trash pile. The considerable accumulation of garbage and debris pictured above is particularly glaring, however, since it lies alongside heavily travelled U.S. 23 North near Prestonsburg.

Water Pollution in Magoffin Results in 'State of Emergency'

Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr. last Thursday declared a state of emergency in Magoffin county because of the contamination of water wells by oil and brine.

The contamination is thought caused by oil and gas well drilling operations and has forced residents to buy water commercially or haul it in from neighboring counties.

The order directs state agencies to begin working on a long-term solution to the water problem in Magoffin county—a situation that is also plaguing other areas of Eastern Kentucky.

"The whole situation in Eastern Kentucky is a problem and has been for years," said Tom Ladt, an administrative assistant to Brown who worked on the order.

"It is not just for Magoffin county and Eastern Kentucky but for the entire state," said state Rep. Jim Maggard, D-Jackson, who asked Brown for the emergency declaration.

The order directs the division of water in the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet to develop a regulatory program to protect the surface and subsurface waters of the entire state, not just Magoffin County.

The Environmental Protection Cabinet is working on a set of regulations to govern the oil and salt runoffs from the shallow oil wells that are prevalent in the Magoffin area.

The state now has no regulations to govern runoff from such wells, where salt brine is pumped into the wells in order to force oil from the ground.

The wells, known as stripper wells, produce only about one or two barrels of oil a day. Stripper wells are also located in Johnson, Lawrence and Lee counties.

Brown's executive order declaring the emergency also directs the state Department of Mines and Minerals to strengthen its enforcement of requirements for the cementing and casing of wells to prevent leaks into the water table.

Brown also authorized the state adjutant general to activate the National Guard to haul water to Magoffin county if weather conditions this winter make it impossible for citizens to find water on their own.

Terra Barnett, a spokeswoman for the Division of Disaster, and Emergency Services, said that there will be no immediate effect from the declaration.

"If the situation gets bad enough, troops can go in," Ms. Barnett said. "Basically, that is what it allows for. But as far as changing the situation from yesterday to today, it is the same."

Ms. Barnett said that DES officials will be meeting with the various state

WILL I ALWAYS REMEMBER HIM?

Remembering the deceased is a way of keeping a loved one always alive in your mind.

The full-service funeral is the traditional and time-proved way of making sure your memories are psychologically sound. A full service with your mutual friends and relatives present gives you a final memory of lasting value.

While the immediate memory may be a painful one after the death of a loved one, this poem may give you a new view.

As long as memory recalls, those who die may live.
 Until our mind's eye dims, Immortality we give.
 (Anon.)

It was Cicero who said, "The life of the dead is placed in the memory of the living." And from Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird"—How can they be dead when they live in your memory?"

DIAMONDS

There is a difference in the quality of diamonds.

Are you buying diamond rings at what you think are wholesale or discount prices?

When economic times get tough, a number of predictable things happen. One very unpleasant fact is that too many retailers or so-called retailers or "wholesaler-retailers"—take advantage of consumers' genuine desire and/or need for a bargain to cheat them blind. This is politely called deceptive pricing. In fact, it's stealing.

What these so-called discounters are doing is taking very cheap quality diamonds and marking them up two or three times more than what they are worth. Then they put them on sale and usually you pay more than what the ring is worth to begin with.

If you want to buy diamonds at a fair price and be told the truth about what you are buying, come to Earl Castle's Jewelry in Prestonsburg, Ky.

ANNUAL CHRISTMAS PARTY

Women of the First United Methodist Church held their annual Christmas party Monday evening, at the church, with the president, Mrs. Elizabeth Ramey, presiding.

The room was decorated in keeping with the yule season. A lighted, decorated Christmas tree was surrounded with gifts for the church kitchen, and for the Methodist Children's Home. The serving table held a centerpiece of holly, evergreens, and red and gold satin bells, flanked with silver candelabra holding tall, red candles.

It was decided that a contribution would be made to the church's 100th anniversary fund. Mrs. Ramey announced the names of the officers for the ensuing year, as follows: President, Mrs. Rose Glenn; vice-president, Mrs. Hope Whitten; secretary, Mrs. Roselyn Burchett; treasurer, Mrs. Geneva Carter.

The Rev. Nicholas introduced Russell May, local heritage artist, who spoke on his growth in the Big Sandy valley. Following his discussion, he painted a landscape in front of the group, and answered questions regarding his technique. Mr. May presented members and guests with prints, entitled "Cand O".

Mrs. Elizabeth Ramey presided at the punch bowl, and Mesdames Roselyn Burchett, Vera Ford, Edna Carol Greenwade, Dorothy Harris, and Ditty Tackett served other holiday refreshments. Shopping in Lexington

(An editorial in The Appalachian News-Express, Pikeville)

Thanksgiving Weekend should be the biggest single weekend for retail sales during the year. The day after Thanksgiving is usually the single biggest day for retail sales.

Yet hundreds of people who earn their money from doing business in Pike County spend that money in Lexington (or somewhere else outside Pike County).

The next time your church or sorority or club needs a donation, ask the merchants in Lexington whom you patronize with your dollars. See if they want to buy an ad in your calendar, cookbook or whatever.

Don't ask the store manager in Pike County who won't be able to count Thanksgiving Weekend among his biggest days this year.

We look to our business people to support the communities from which they earn their living. They should be able to look to us for our loyalty as customers—customers who support the business in our own community instead of those in the Bluegrass.

Knott Drys Win By Wide Margin

Knott county voted last Saturday on the wet-dry issue and it remains dry by a margin approximating 3 to 1.

Drys polled 4524 votes to 1608 for the wet cause.

Churches of the county were joined by the Knott County Board of Education in the campaign to reject the legalized sale of alcoholic beverages.

The issue was so obviously hopeless for the wet cause that wet advocates did not show up for the vote count Saturday evening.

The turnout in springlike weather represented 55 percent of the county's 11,000 voters, Knott County Clerk Jim Rose said.

The dry forces captured all but three of Knott county's 29 precincts.

Lawrence Baldrige, co-chairman of Concerned Citizens for a Safe and Dry Knott County, said he was only surprised that the wets won three Beaver Creek precincts, 445-299.

The Beaver Creek precincts, located in the communities of Dema, Topmost and Kite near the Floyd-Knott line, were expressing "a type of rebellion ... against the rest of the county," Baldrige said.

He said voters in that area historically have felt politically isolated from the rest of the county.

Clyde Wicker Sr., president of the Committee for Alcoholic Beverage Control, earlier last week said that if wet forces lost Saturday's election, they would later petition for new elections by individual precincts.

Wife's Shot Wounds Nelson at W. P'burg

A domestic dispute was given as the cause of the wounding of Ambers Nelson, 68, by his wife, Florence, 49, at their West Prestonsburg home early Monday night.

A bullet fired from a 22-calibre revolver passed through Nelson's shoulder and lodged in his face. He was later reported in good condition at the Highlands Medical Center.

Mrs. Nelson told Police Sgt. D. J. Conley, Patrolman Larry Woods and State Detective Danny Stumbo that her husband threw a jar at her and threatened to kill her before she fired the one shot. No warrant had been issued for her arrest, as of Tuesday morning.

were under the impression the meeting was to consider a petition to make Floyd county dry again, left when they realized their mistake.

Even some of those who stayed said they would rather the county was dry than that the present licenses should stand. All agreed that the state liquor board's action should be challenged within the 10 days provided by law and that the U.S. Attorney should be asked to look into the way the licenses were issued.

Attorney Johnson told the complainants they would need to demonstrate that the ABC board issued all or some of the licenses on grounds other than those specified by law.

And he cautioned the group that a federal grand jury inquiring into charges of influence peddling or bribery might turn its attention to those who were not given licenses as well as to those who were.

Catherine C. Staib, the liquor board's general counsel, said there are no statutory criteria for issuing licenses but that the board's policy was to base them on the applicants' capabilities, location of the proposed store and the likely economic benefits of the proposals. With "at least a hundred really good proposals" submitted, it was inevitable that many applicants would be disappointed, she said.

At least some of the successful applicants submitted elaborate plans, complete with architects' drawings and the promise of a substantial capital outlay. The number of jobs likely to be created and the anticipated tax revenue are said to have figured in the board's determination of who got the licenses.

Staib denied that politics or bribery were involved in the decisions, adding that, if there was evidence of any impropriety, she would "join in nailing (the offender's) hide to the wall."

The attorney said the liquor board investigated some rumors of money changing hands at the local level but could not confirm them. "If any of our people took money I would be glad to hear about it and to see they got their just desserts," she said.

The ABC board announced last Thursday the 21 who were being awarded licenses of the 137 who had applied for them. No sooner was the list made public than complaints were heard that it favored the wealthy and powerful, that Prestonsburg-area applicants were over-represented, and that those who had fought hardest for legal liquor sales here were neglected.

Among the successful applicants were the son of state Mines and Minerals Commissioner Willard Stanley, the son of Sheriff Henry Hale, a sister of Floyd County Democratic Chairman Morris Isaac, the executive-director of the Prestonsburg Housing Authority, a member of the Board of Education, the president of the Bank Josephine, and prominent businessmen.

Ishmael Caudill, the Melvin man who petitioned for the local option election held last June, noted bitterly that the third and fourth magisterial districts, which voted wet by solid margins, got few licenses by comparison with District 1, the only district to vote dry. Twelve of the licenses were for premises in the first district and in at least four instances, it was said, licenses were awarded to applicants who live out of the county.

Conspicuous among those denied licenses were some at the forefront of the drive to approve legal liquor sales here, including Sandy Boyd, of Dana, who was chairman of the Committee for Alcoholic Beverage Control and Fred Bingham, of the Auxier road, the wet forces' chief spokesman.

Bingham told Sunday's audience that during the wet campaign he had unsuccessfully sought support from about half of those who were subsequently awarded licenses. "I was treated like a dog," he said.

Boyd attributed the lopsided distribution of licenses to bribery of state officials. "We've got state corruption here that goes right to the top—to Mr. John Y. Brown," he charged.

Anthony Castle, of Hueysville, said he knew of one applicant who was told she could have a liquor license for $50,000. "The money's what got the licenses," he said.

Mrs. Annie Handshoe, of Hueysville, said later a man had told her that $50,000 would guarantee approval of a license for her daughter, Marie Stanfield, of Dry Creek, but that she rejected the offer. Mrs. Handshoe said the man who allegedly made the offer had accompanied an ABC inspector on earlier trips to the family's store on KY 7 but that she did not know his name.

Sen. Bailey, who said early in the meeting that he was a "little bit disappointed" in the distribution of Floyd liquor licenses, was later asked whether he thought the issuance of the licenses had been handled fairly. "Absolutely not," he replied. Both Sen. Bailey and Judge-Executive Jerry Lafferty, Jr. denied suggestions that they had intervened on behalf of particular applicants.

The ABC board's attorney said the board had received many calls and visits from Floyd officials and citizens. Board policy was "not to block local input," she said, adding that the supplicants "generally went away very disappointed."

An ironical footnote: While Paul P. Burchett, Prestonsburg's alcoholic beverage control administrator, was criticized recently for approving only three of nine license applications from the city, only one of those he approved was among the three Prestonsburg operations licensed by the state board.

Betsy Layne auto and beer dealer Malcolm Layne—whose application for a liquor license was passed over although he claims the area's largest retail beer sales—had one idea for resolving the current controversy. Put all 137 applications into a hat and pull out 21, he suggested.

Successful applicants were: Prestonsburg Inn, said to be planned for a site on the western side of U.S. 23 at Katy Friend, owned by H. D. Fitzpatrick, Jr., Dr. J. D. Adams, Jack Absher and Tom G. Dingus; Ed Ousley, doing business as Ousley's Parkway Liquor Shoppe, KY 114, West Prestonsburg; H. R. Burke, dba 23 Liquors, U.S. 23, Harold; Glen S. Anderson, Sr., dba Wildcat Beverage Shoppe, east side of U.S. 23, Prestonsburg.

program here, with the remainder of the allowable money to be added to the intervention fund, where the need is expected to be greater, he explained.

Project Warmup also includes $100,000 designed to fund community projects to help people with their heating needs. Neither county nor ADD officials knew of any community organization applying for a grant under the program, however.

Between Jan. 3 and Jan. 14, households having at least one member who is blind, elderly or disabled may apply for assistance under Project Warmup. All other families facing difficulties in paying their utility bills will be able to apply for help beginning Jan. 17.

Under an emergency regulation, utility companies under the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission are prohibited from cutting off poor families this winter provided they make a reasonable attempt to pay their bills.

Even under normal regulations, a utility must give a customer 20 days' notice of a disconnection and an additional 30 days if a doctor certifies that a utility shutoff would aggravate the illness of a household member.

Pharmacy Footnotes

By HAROLD COOLEY

Many modern medical treatments are rooted in ancient folk remedies. One such example involves the "Ammi majus" plant, a weed that grows along the Nile river and was used for centuries by Egyptians as a medicinal plant. Oil from this plant contains the drug methoxsalen. This compound increases the sensitivity of human skin to longwave ultraviolet light radiation. It was used by ancient peoples to cure skin disorders resulting from a lack of pigmentation. Coupled with sunlight, the drug ridded the skin of white patches. Today, this same photochemotherapy employs the same technique to combat psoriasis.

It is amazing to remember how much of modern medical treatment is based on old folk remedies and herbs. Even today there are herbs used to make various medications. At COOLEY APOTHECARY, INC. you'll find a full service prescription center. We also carry convalescent items. As your neighborhood Pharmacist, your best interest is our best interest. Located at #2 Town Center Bldg. Open Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30; Sat. 9-4. 886-8106

HANDY HINT:

Although psoriasis cannot be cured, it can usually be successfully treated.

Holiday Safety Begins at Home, Is State Fire Marshal's Advice

Christmas and the holiday season is a festive time of year. It should also be a cautious time of year for fire safety in the home, according to State Fire Marshal Gayle Horn.

"Trees and lights brighten the home and the spirits during the holidays," Horn said. "At the same time, Kentuckians need to remember certain rules when buying trees or stringing lights."

Horn said that Kentuckians should take the following precautions when selecting and setting up a tree:

*If buying an artificial tree made of plastic, check for the Underwriters Laboratories label (UL). Some unlabeled trees burn easily.

*When buying live trees, look for the freshest one. Fresh trees are less of a fire hazard than dry trees.

Check for freshness by looking for a deep green color, by smelling for a strong pine scent, by feeling for needles that are firmly attached to the limbs, and by feeling for a sticky, sappy tree butt.

*Once the tree is home, mount it in a sturdy, water-holding stand. Keep the stand filled with water so the tree won't dry out and become a fire hazard.

*At home, keep the tree away from fireplaces, radiators or other heat sources. It should not block doorways or be in the way of traffic.

In addition to trees, Horn explained that lights whether—inside or out—should be used carefully. Be sure to consider the following points before turning on the switch:

*Use only lights that have been tested for safety. Identify these by the UL label.

*Check each set of lights for broken or cracked sockets, frayed or bare wires or loose connections. Discard the unsafe ones.

*Never use indoor lights outside. Before setting up outdoor decorations, make sure the bulbs have been approved for outdoor use. Then, firmly attach the lights to trees or walls to prevent wind damage.

*Use no more than three sets of lights for every single extension. Follow the manufacturer's suggestion on the number of lights permitted in each circuit.

*Always turn off lights and other decorations before leaving home or going to bed. A short in any of the equipment is a fire hazard.

*Never use electric lights on a metallic tree. Instead, use colored spotlights above or beside a metal tree.

*Keep children away from lights and electrical decorations. Children risk shock or injury when they play with the bright lights.

These suggestions merely highlight the safety considerations essential during the season. As Public Protection and Regulation Cabinet Secretary Neil Welch said: "The extra few minutes it takes to find the freshest tree or to read light labels are well worth it. It is much better to observe a preventive route and to enjoy a relaxed and safe holiday."

Welch oversees the state Fire Marshal's Office as well as 13 other agencies within the Cabinet.

For more information on a fire-free holiday, contact the Kentucky Fire Marshal at U.S. 127 South Building, Frankfort 40601 or (502) 564-3626.

Columbia Plan May Help But Not Till Next Fall

Steps proposed by Columbia Transmission Company last week are designed to produce smaller rate increases to customers, but none would come in time to help this winter. Next September was mentioned as the earliest possible effective date.

The plan involves limiting prices paid for natural gas under new contracts with producers and negotiating lower prices for gas bought under existing contracts.

Columbia Transmission spokesman Ben Polis said the company could not predict how much might be saved by the average customer because "so many different factors are involved." Those "pass-through increases" normally are automatically approved by the Kentucky Public Service Commission, because they involve the actual price of gas.

Columbia Transmission, which supplies gas to 71 companies, said the program was intended to keep gas competitive with other fuels, especially oil, and to offset declining sales of gas caused by the recession and conservation. Another factor was complaints from customers about rising gas prices, Polis said.

NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that Martin Gas, Inc. has filed with the Public Service Commission, at Frankfort, Ky., an application for revised schedule of rates to become effective upon approval by said Commission. Hearing is to be held at Frankfort, Ky., at the Commission's hearing room on the 21st day of December, 1982 at the hour of 10 a.m., Eastern Standard Time, on Martin Gas Inc.'s application for interim rate relief.

Said revised rates are as follows:
Class of Service—Domestic and Commercial Rates—for each thousand cubic feet of natural gas purchased:
First MCF $8.50; over 1 MCF $7.28 per MCF; Minimum Bill (zero usage) $8.50.

The rates contained herein are the rates proposed by Martin Gas, Inc. However, the Public Service Commission may after evidentiary hearings order rates to be changed that may result in an increase in rates for consumers other than those included in this notice.

MARTIN GAS, INC.

Box 551
Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653
12-1-82.

Under the program, Columbia Transmission will offer gas producers in the Appalachian Basin $4 for about 1,000 cubic feet of "tight sands" and deregulated Devonian Shale gas produced from wells completed after Jan. 1, the company said.

Columbia will pay a higher price for gas developed from new wells if producers agree to lower prices in existing contracts, the company said.

It is now paying $5.42 for about 1,000 cubic feet of tight sands gas, the highest price allowed by the federal Natural Gas Policy Act.

For other new gas, Columbia Transmission said it will offer from $2.72 to $3.53 depending on the type of gas involved, effective in January. Those prices are also the highest allowed by federal law.

Columbia said it will stop putting price-escalation clauses in new gas contracts, but it will periodically review contracts to see if a price change is warranted.

In addition, Columbia said it will continue its policy of not signing contracts for high-cost gas from the Southwest, a practice that was halted more than a year ago. Columbia bids only on gas reserves that are still subject to federal price controls, provided delivery is deferred for two to three years.

Polis said Columbia officials have met with major gas producers, and the new program "won't come as a surprise to them."

Sales of natural gas have declined because the recession has closed factories, and because conservation has trimmed residential customers' demand for gas.

Columbia originally expected to sell 1.3 trillion cubic feet of gas this year, Polis said, but sales are now expected to total only 1.04 trillion.

Conservation has reduced sales to residential customers by about 10 percent, he said.

"We are concerned about consumer costs, and we want to remain competitive in the marketplace," Polis said. "Our objective is to get our prices down to where they are competitive."

Exposes Cuban Crime Network

A crime network composed of hardened felons who entered the country illegally during the 1980 Cuban flotilla has taken root in several American cities and police warn that the network is spreading, the December Reader's Digest reports in a copyrighted article.

According to Peter Michelmores, author of The Digest's exclusive report, this "criminal force of rogues, men" is concentrated in Florida, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. But police in those states fear that Cubans sent to correctional institutions in Missouri and Kentucky and to halfway houses in Illinois, who are now eligible for release, will link up with their countrymen and "will be dangerous."

Equally troubling, is that for the last two years local law enforcement agencies and courts have had to bear the brunt of bringing these Cubans to justice for the many crimes they've committed since arriving in United States. The federal government has done nothing to help, Michelmores writes.

The seeds of this new Cuban underworld were planted by the administration of President Jimmy Carter, who during the Spring of 1980, permitted Cuban dictator Fidel Castro to send to the U.S. boatload after boatload of his country's least desirable elements—vagrants, ex-convicts, black-marketeters, and thousands of prisoners who were simply released from jail and dumped on American shores.

Many of these refugees, called Marielitos, named after the Cuban harbor from which they departed for Florida, were hardly fit to live free in society after the abuse they had suffered in Castro's prisons and jails.

"Of the 125,000 Cubans who crossed from Mariel before Castro closed down the harbor in September, it was later unofficially estimated that about 25,000 were criminals," Michelmores writes. What Castro did was to "set among an open society a vicious new criminal force. The scope and predictable effect of this infamous deed should have been detected early but it was not. To this day, Castro's outlaw invasion has not been recognized, or confronted nationally."

Most of those who could be identified as criminals, or who confessed to a criminal past were sent to the federal penitentiary in Atlanta. The State Department tried to get Castro to take some back, but he refused. Of the remaining refugees, about half were released to family and friends and the rest were transported to live-in processing centers at Florida's Elgin Air Force Base, and at the Army bases of Fort Chaffee in Arkansas, Fort McCoy in Wisconsin and Fort Indiantown Gap in Pennsylvania.

"There they remained until relatives or other volunteers were located to sponsor them. Sponsors had only to register their names and addresses, guarantee lodging and promise to introduce the newcomer to American society," says Michelmores. Not long after, he adds, "an underworld of Marielitos took root with amazing speed. The word was passed, and they knew exactly where to go to join their own kind. And, in turn, they sponsored comrades from detention camps."

"Some wormed their way into the narcotics business as runners and hit men for Colombian bosses. A few hired out to auto-theft rings. Mostly, however, they ran in their own packs. With the proceeds of crime, they armed themselves with shotguns and M-1 carbines."

In the early days after their arrival in Florida, many of the Marielitos were involved in acts of street violence directed at each other instead of the general community. That soon changed as Marielito crimes—beatings, robberies, shootings, unprovoked attacks and vicious murders—began spreading throughout Dade County, Fla. Similarly, police in New York began reporting equally violent crimes involving Marielitos.

However, by early-1981 no one in law enforcement was fully aware just how far this crime wave was spreading. "Apart from the Justice Department, there is no agency in American law enforcement equipped to detect patterns of criminality on a national basis and thereby warn state and city police departments," writes Michelmores.

Michelmores makes it clear that the problem has become so enormous that help from the federal government is the only way it can be effectively combated. "The Justice Department should assume responsibility for the incarceration of Marielito felons who are now doing time in city jails and state prisons. The Department of Justice must also direct one of its agencies to establish a central file of arrest records that can be tapped by all police departments, or, alternatively develop the METS data bank in Harrisburg to its full potential."

What is all comes down to, he says, is: "The federal government let the criminals into America; the government must either get them out or put them where they can do no further harm."

Wells Leaves Labor Post To Lead Stumbo Campaign

Floyd countian John C. Wells last Thursday resigned as state labor commissioner to manage the campaign of another Floyd native, Dr. Grady Stumbo, in his race for the Democratic nomination for governor.

His resignation will take effect Friday. Wells became commissioner of labor in October, 1981 after Commissioner Eugene Land had resigned. Before that, he was appointed by Dr. Stumbo, then secretary of the Human Resources cabinet, to be commissioner of manpower services.

After submitting his resignation to Governor Brown last week, Wells said the governor "never, ever once said anything to me about my support of Grady." In the past Brown has encouraged state officials to resign their posts in his administration if they became involved in next year's statewide campaigns.

The 37-year-old Wells and Dr. Stumbo have long been friends, and of his top post in the Stumbo bid for the governorship he said, "I'm very pleased that I have been asked by Grady to take this position."

Wells has had political experience at the state level through his associations with U.S. Senator Wendell Ford and George Atkins, secretary of finance.

Almost at the same time that he announced the role he will play in the Stumbo campaign, Wells said another former Labor Department official, Phil Kessack, also has resigned to work for Stumbo.

Earlier, another former Human Resources official resigned to work for Dr. Stumbo. Barbara Hadley Smith, cabinet director of communications, left that post to become press secretary for his campaign.

Mrs. Smith became public-relations chief for the Human Resources Cabinet in July 1979 under former Secretary Peter Conn. She remained in the job when Stumbo was selected as Human Resources secretary by Brown.

Before coming to Frankfort to work in state government, she was Louisville Mayor Harvey Sloane's press secretary during the last 14 months of his first term.

She also worked for about six months as a top Sloane campaign aide when he began running for governor in 1978. But she left the campaign after a disagreement with Sloane's wife.

Sloane, now serving his second term as Louisville mayor, is running again for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, which he lost in 1979 to Brown.

The third announced Democratic candidate for governor is Lt. Gov. Martha Layne Collins.

Acid Rain Effect in Kentucky More Each Year, Says Howell

Acid rain, recognized as a serious problem in Canada, is affecting Kentucky more each year, according to a Morehead State University ecology professor.

"Ashland, Louisville and Covington are the most heavily industrialized areas in the state," says Dr. Jerry Howell, head of MSU's Department of Biological and Environmental Sciences. "With the air pollution and acid rain, they're getting a double-barreled problem."

Acid rain is caused when sulfur and nitrogen dioxides, discharged into the atmosphere in pollution from coal burning industries and automobile exhaust, combine with water in the air. When this water falls to the earth as rain, it increases the acidity of the soil and lake waters.

"Acid rain kills fish," Dr. Howell explains. "But that's not the only problem in Kentucky. It has also caused a decrease in farm crop production. It's hard to tell how much, though, because erosion and poor farming methods also have contributed to the problem."

Kentucky is extremely vulnerable to acid rain, according to Dr. Ted Pass, professor of biology at MSU, because pollutants from the Pittsburgh area blow over the state.

"Rainwater in Kentucky is running above the normal acidity of PH 5.6," says Dr. Pass. "It averages PH 4.4 in Louisville." A lower PH number means a higher degree of acidity.

Although the acid content of rainfall in most cities has been determined, little research has been done in rural areas several miles from industry. Dr. Pass is working on a study covering the eastern half of the United States that will determine the effect that acid rain is having on small towns and the countryside.

This study is financed by the Electric Power Research Institute, an arm of the Edison Electric Institute whose members include Kentucky Power, East Kentucky Power Cooperative, Kentucky Utilities Company, Inc., and Louisville Gas and Electric Company.

After each rain, Dr. Pass tests the water from a site in Clearfield for acidity and for electrical conductivity which shows the approximate level of dissolved salts in rainwater. His test results and samples are sent to a central monitoring station where more tests are run.

"When the testing is completed in October, 1984, we will know what impact the wind from highly industrialized areas has on non-industrialized places," says Dr. Pass. "We will also know the impact that electric power plants have on the acidity of rain in a given area of the Eastern U.S."

To Wed, Dec. 18

Ben and Janice Johnson, of Wheelwright, announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Stephanie Kandi Johnson, to Collie Tackett, son of Demus and Josie Tackett, also of Wheelwright.

The wedding will take place December 18 at 7 p.m. at the Pentecostal Church of God at Burton. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Glen Dusina and a reception will be held in the church fellowship hall immediately following the ceremony.

A pound of tea makes about 125 cups.

The goal of the study is to "establish what the problem is now, how much fossil fuels such as coal contribute to acid rain, and what we can expect in the future," explains Dr. Pass.

"This study is something the electric companies aren't required by law to do," says Dr. Pass. "It's all voluntary. We're establishing baseline data which in five or ten years from now can be compared to 1981 acid rain levels."

He concluded: "If the problem is worse, this data can be used to show if the electric power industry is responsible in part. And if it hasn't gotten any worse, it will show that the industry isn't having much of an impact on acid rain."

Cancer Hopeline

Q. I've been having a lot of tests and x-rays because there's a chance I may have cancer. Now my doctor wants me to see a specialist. Will I have to go through all this anxiety, time, and expense again?

A. Certainly, any specialist would want to see the results of tests you have already had. Ask your doctor to either give you all of your records and test results or send them to the specialist prior to your appointment.

Once the specialist has examined you, he/she may decide that some additional tests are necessary or that some of the ones you've had must be repeated in order to get more complete or specific information. If you don't understand why a particular test is being recommended, it is your right to ask for an explanation.

Remember, however, that tests to diagnose an illness such as cancer are in your best interests. As soon as definite information is obtained, you will be able to be treated or else relieved of the anxiety by knowing that you do not have cancer. Do you have questions about cancer? Do you wonder about tests or treatment? Has dealing with cancer seemed to take over your family and push everything else aside?

Counselors at the Cancer Hopeline can help with information and practical ways to meet every-day problems of living with cancer. They also are compassionate listeners. Call toll free 1-800-432-9321 from anywhere in Kentucky any weekday from 9-5. Send written requests to 915 South Limestone Street, Lexington, KY 40536.

THE ADVENT SEASON

Second Week
PEACE

This is the second in a series of articles submitted by the Council of Local Church Women of Prestonsburg.

Scripture: Luke 2:4-7.

"Shalom" is a way of saying hello and good-bye in the Hebrew language. It means peace. To the prophets and to Jesus, shalom also meant justice, righteousness, freedom—everything that would bring final harmony among all human beings, all living creatures and God. Shalom is the ultimate salvation for God's creation. Is this an impossible dream? Not if we believe that the Word is the full creative energy of God at work in the world.

Prayer: Dear God, as we try to get our own lives together, help us glimpse the master pattern of harmony that You intend for Your creation. Shalom, God! This is our greeting and this is our prayer. AMEN.

★ CANCER HOPELINE ★

Q. I quit smoking three months ago, but I sure do miss it. I'm thinking about chewing or dipping, but my wife says they're just as bad as smoking. Is she right?

A. She's absolutely right. Smokers greatly increase their risk of lung cancer and heart disease. Research indicates that chewing tobacco or dipping snuff is an invitation to mouth and throat cancer and a variety of dental problems. In addition, the person with a mouthful of tobacco juice and needing to spit is not particularly attractive.

It is unfortunate that smokeless tobacco products do not carry the Surgeon General's health hazard warning as cigarettes do. It's still tobacco, and it's still habit-forming and a carcinogen.

Leukoplakia is one of the risks of chewing and dipping. With this condition, leathery white patches form in the mouth. They are caused by the continued irritation of tobacco juice. About five percent of leukoplakia cases develop into oral cancer.

The March 26, 1981, issue of the New England Journal of Medicine reported on the association between snuff dipping and oral cancer among women in the southeastern United States. It was found that there was a four-fold increase in the risk of oral and pharyngeal (throat) cancer among snuff users. Long term snuff users increased their risk of gum and cheek cancer 50-fold.

Chewing or dipping also results in a lessening of the sense of taste and smell. Thus, people who chew and dip need to use more salt and sugar than normal, both of which are unhealthy if used in large amounts.

Receding gums, greater wear on tooth enamel, more tooth decay, more bad breath, and discolored teeth are dental problems faced by those who chew and dip.

These are the facts about smokeless tobacco. Now you must choose between use of these products with their related health problems and better health, pleasant breath, and a more attractive appearance.

If you're licked the smoking habit, your body is repairing itself to full health. Why set yourself back?

If you have questions about cancer or anything related to it, call the counselors at the Cancer Hopeline toll free from anywhere in Kentucky weekdays from 9-5. Call 1-800-432-9321.

Salute To Bands

How could we have had Red, White and Blue parade without our bands?

What a vital part music plays in the lives of all of us—all the years through. When we were mere infants, it was the lullabies that spelled the love and security we needed. In later years, it is "School days, dear old Golden Rule days" and all our school pep songs that add enthusiasm and give loyalty to our school. Our Commencement exercises are set to the music of a beautiful march. Imagine trying to hold a class reunion without "Hail, Hail the Gang's All Here," and how could we ever get the candles on the cake lighted without "Happy Birthday to You," and also the Wedding March that adds happiness to the glorious wedding day.

The dance bands, the jazz, rock and roll, the waltzes satisfy our restless feet. As the grand old man of music, Jesse Elliott, so beautifully said, "As I look into each individual face, I see everyone of you as a musical note, each person a personality, a style of music, and if I were only wise enough, I could find among you, the ones whose lives will be recorded in the likeness of a great concerto."

How very simple, but drab, life would be if we were to all live it in the key of C. No sharps or flats to give it tone and feeling. No man has ever truly made a mark upon this world of ours unless his life has been filled with many sharps and flats.

As Abe Lincoln began his life in Minor Key of Flats—poverty, awkwardness and ill health—he transposed and made his own original arrangement in all sharps—high character, ambition, self-education, and love of mankind. We know the more sharps and flats in a piece of music, the more difficult to play. Perhaps that accounts for rich tone range and meaning that music has upon the lives of all of us.

Our very own Floyd county band directors, along with their band members have been so devoted, so dedicated, and have worked such long hours preparing for every festivity and performing so faithfully and skillfully for every school and community function.

Let's ask ourselves, Have we given our band directors and members of the bands, the praises and honors they so richly deserve? Have we really supported our bands as we should have?

Let's not forget a big salute to parents of these students that have sacrificed so much that their children might have the instruments and music so necessary for a successful band. We surely, by now, realize that Floyd county is certainly blessed with some of the most talented and dedicated band directors that are doing such a marvelous job of working with our music students.

We will find some great, outstanding, musical talent in every band in Floyd county that we trust will be recognized and not be neglected.

Floyd county schools and communities—let's recognize all this loyalty, faithfulness and long hours of hard work, and give our bands and directors the recognition that is so long over-due.

A "Big Salute" to All our Floyd County music students and their directors—You are doing a great job for us!

Complains About School

When Allen Central High School was dedicated, I planned to attend. But like so many good intentions, they were never realized.

After debating with myself for the past two weeks, I decided to write you, members of the Floyd County Board of Education and the people of Floyd county about my experience in visiting Allen Central High School in November, 1982.

When the Drift Woman's Club (of which I am a member) and the Wheelwright Woman's Club received invitations from the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club to attend their annual Inter-Club Dinner to be held at the Allen Central High School, I was happy. I thought—great! At last, I will get to see this marvelous school which we have in Floyd county.

As I entered the lobby I could not believe my eyes! I saw holes in the ceiling tiles, missing ceiling tiles and stained ceiling tiles. Then I looked down at the floor—the rug was filthy with globs of chewing gum stuck in the rug. The baseboard, a cheap plastic substance, is peeling away from the walls.

We then went into the lunchroom where the dinner was to be held. I saw wallpaper or whatever was used on the walls, peeling. The corners of the dining room tables were for the most part broken off. As I looked around at the shoddy workmanship of the building, all I could think of was, what a waste: I understand the school is less than 10 years old.

What kind of janitors do you hire??? What kind of man is the principal??? Does he not have any pride in his school, which is really his home away from home.

The lunchroom personnel are to be commended on the cleanliness of the kitchen and the food was well-prepared.

I must admit I did not see the entire school but if the entrance is a sample, I shudder to think what I might have seen.

I have a suggestion to you and the members of the Floyd Board of Education. Instead of holding all of your meetings in Prestonsburg, why not meet at the various schools in Floyd county? You can see for yourselves the conditions of the schools and you won't be surprised when the parents complain about them. Don't be like ostriches with your heads in the sand, convincing yourselves that all is well.

If you would like to show your janitors an example of good house keeping—please take them on a tour of the Garth Vocational classrooms.

You owe the citizens of Floyd county better stewardship than this. You ran for office and wanted the job, so do a good one!

SOPHIA V. CAHILL

IN A RARE APPEARANCE BEFORE HER DEATH, PRINCESS GRACE OF MONACO stars in the first of two specials Thursday, December 23, on KET. In "The Nativity" at 8:30 p.m., the late Princess Grace welcomes viewers to a half-hour of music and dramatic sequences at St. Peters in Italy and St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York.

A NEW "CHRISTMAS AT POPS" WITH THE BOSTON POPS ORCHESTRA, conducted by John Williams, follows "The Nativity". The Tanglewood Festival Chorus joins the orchestra for an hour of Christmas music and fun, complete with Santa Claus and an audience sing-along.

A Matter of Syntax

In the piece, "Revenue Bonds for Housing in Floyd and Johnson Seen" (Floyd County Times, 1 Dec.). I was ambling along attempting to digest the financial intricacies of the piece when I stumbled abruptly over paragraph 7. My copy reads: "Compared to a conventional downpayment of 20 percent, those borrowing under the revenue bond program will be required to put down only five percent, and the value of the land may be applied to the purchase of the house on which it stands."

My churl is not with finance but syntax. Reread that sentence. Under the pressure of deadlines, this sort of thing is understandable in an initial draft, but it is a little surprising that this syntactic bananapeel did not twang the synapses of whoever copy-read it (or does the Times use a copyreader?). It obtrudes itself into consciousness much as would an ink blot on the wedding dress. It has been said that newspapers are a low definition medium, and their writing should not be so structured that communication depends upon the correct placement of a comma. That rule applied would tend to produce a very straightforward and uncomplicated prose. My guess is that the author here was so caught up in the drama and majesty of the peroration to that sentence that he forgot to reread it critically.

I draw attention to it partly for fun and partly to nudge those whose typewriters inundate us in the public prints in the direction of greater attention to the words they use.

Yours for purity in journalism,
JOHN WM. NEWSOME

A Question for All

In the issue Nov. 17, 1982 on the editorial page you had an editorial asking that if Frank Metts announced his candidacy for governor, he be asked why US 23 was not in the plans to four-lane from Prestonsburg to Paintsville.

I would ask any candidate this question, both parties.

Moving here in July and driving to Huntington every week for three months, I've seen the need and the very real danger.

I was shocked when the Governor and Mr. Metts came to Louisa for ceremonies for the phase they are finishing up and the start of a new phase from Louisa.

At this ceremony it was stated that it would not be four-laned from Prestonsburg to Paintsville.

We should all get together and really push for an answer to why not a car, truck, school bus or any one around. You only need to look up at these rocks to know that it is only a matter of time. With all the traffic, freezing and thawing, there are some very big cracks in this wall now.

Let's hope when it falls, there isn't a car, truck, school bus or any one around. You only need to look up at these rocks to know that it is only a matter of time. With all the traffic, freezing and thawing, there are some very big cracks in this wall now.

Let's be sure we ask who ever the candidates are this question:
Why not four-lane from Prestonsburg to Paintsville?

Two Weekend House Fires Reported at Martin

(Photo by Ken Peters) A rash of house fires in the Martin vicinity have kept firefighters busy in recent weeks. In the above photo a Martin fireman directs a jet of water into flames which ruined a frame structure at the mouth of Stephens Branch near Martin, early Friday night. The house was owned by Mason Moore, it was reported. Maytown firefighters joined in battling the fire. A second fire, Sunday at about 4 a.m., called out Martin trucks to a frame house in Martin. Although considerable damage resulted from smoke and water, the house was not structurally hurt. Clinton Barnett, who resided in the house, was not home at the time of the blaze, according to a Martin Fire Department spokesman who also said arson is suspected in the fire.

Blue River Schoolgirl Missing Since Friday

Whereabouts of 17-year-old Candy Lee Arnett, of Blue River, were being sought this week by the Sheriff's department after she had been missing since last Friday. Miss Arnett was reported last seen at Prestonsburg High School, which she attended, about 3 p.m. Friday. Deputy Sheriff Holbrook said he was told. Foul play is possible but is not suspected at this time, he said. Miss Arnett, who lives with her aunt, Ocie Pitts, at Blue River, was described as being 5 feet in height, weighing about 110 pounds, with black hair and blue eyes. When last seen she was wearing blue jeans and a green jacket.

Receive Flag for School

Wiley Matthew Elliott and Chris Collins, who recently wrote to Congressman Carl D. Perkins requesting a flag for their school, with their fourth grade teacher, Mrs. Pauline Conley, display the flag, above. Representative Perkins answered their letter and sent the school the flag which has been flown over the Capitol in Washington, D. C.

School Board Defines Rights of Bus Drivers

As a last resort, school bus drivers may put a rowdy student off the bus as long as the student is left in a safe place and his or her parent is notified, according to a policy revised by the Board of Education last week.

Bus drivers had sought a clarification of the rule, claiming there was some confusion about the extent of their authority. Prestonsburg driver John Clevenger said the issue came to a head when parents of a girl he had put off a school bus for fighting complained to school officials about his action.

"If I don't have enough authority to put a child off the bus when the lives of the others are endangered, I don't want to drive," he said.

At the request of Transportation Director Wayne Ratliff, the board adopted a policy based on a state rule which requires a driver to put off the bus any pupil persisting in conduct that endangers "the lives or morals" of others. "This should be done only in extreme cases and as a last resort to protect the safety of the pupils," the new rule cautions.

The driver must report his action to the school principal immediately and the offending student is to stay off the bus until student, parent, driver and principal have met to discuss the situation, according to the revised policy.

On the advice of its attorney, Woodrow Burchett, and over the objection of at least one of the drivers present, the board also specified that a student may be put off only at a "safe" spot—"a house, store, or public place"—rather than by the side of the road, and that one of his or her parents must be notified immediately.

The board approved a proposal by Prestonsburg High School boosters that the U.S. Army Reserve and Corps of Engineers be asked to fill a 30-foot section at the river end of the high school playing field. If it were extended, the field could accommodate a regulation-size running track, it was explained.

After discussing the cases in closed session, the board voted to expel three students. A 16-year-old Prestonsburg High School girl was accused of fighting, disturbing class, insubordination, and threatening Principal Robert May. She had been suspended earlier for drinking, abusing behavior and profane language, it was said. Two 15-year-old seventh graders at Betsy Layne Elementary, accused of insubordination and unruly behavior, had previously been suspended several times.

A contract for 32 typewriters was awarded to Home Office Supply, of Hazard. The typewriters will cost $420 each.

Hired were:

Elizabeth Sue Bingham, adult education teacher at Prestonsburg; Wayne Layne, phys. ed. teacher at Betsy Layne Elementary; Deborah Johns and Wallace Ratliff, certified substitute teachers; Jeffery H. Burchett, Stephen C. Boyd, Deborah Allen Shepherd, and Rick Hale, emergency substitute teachers; Johnny Johnson, Donnie Perkins, Patricia Shepherd, Bill Blackburn and Harold W. Dixon, substitute bus drivers; Rose Slone, cook at Melvin, and Crystal Spurlock, cook at McDowell.

The New Vehicle Title Law

Kentucky's automobile owners will get more than a new license plate when they register their cars in 1983.

For the first time, car owners will receive separate title and registration documents.

The change is a result of the state's first title law passed by the 1982 Kentucky General Assembly.

"The title law was created to protect consumers," said state Transportation Secretary James Runke. "It's a weapon against forged titles and odometer rollbacks. It will also prevent thieves from dumping stolen cars in Kentucky."

This year when a person registers a vehicle, he will receive a certificate of title and a registration card.

The registration card is simply permission to travel on Kentucky roads. It is a receipt for the taxes paid to maintain and improve the state's highway system.

The title certificate is a document showing proof of ownership.

"The law has always required car owners to keep their registration in the car at all times. That was a boon to car thieves, because the proof of ownership was on the same document," Runke said. "If the car was stolen, the certificate could be filled out on the back. The owner could have a hard time proving that his car was stolen and not traded."

Refrigerate over night for maximum flavor. To serve, hollow out a large head of red cabbage and fill with dip. Serve with raw vegetables.

Closed Johnson Nightspot May File for More Damages

Star Musicland, the nightspot outside Paintsville which featured appearances by big-name musicians, has gone bankrupt and closed its doors, and its owners blame Johnson county Sheriff Gene Cyrus and other enforcement officers for its plight.

Bill and Bonnie Burke, operators of Musicland, have already filed a U. S. district court suit against Cyrus and five of his deputies and a constable for $200,000, alleging violation of their civil rights, and now say they are contemplating asking more damages.

The Paintsville Herald, in its Dec. 1 edition, reported:

Star Musicland closed to the public on October 3 as a result of financial woes the Burkes claim were brought about by Cyrus.

"We had to close down, we went bankrupt, he ruined our business," charged co-operator Bill Burke. "We've lost money on everything we did since Cyrus took over as sheriff."

The Burkes claim that potential patrons stayed away from performances at Star Musicland because of "over protection" by police.

"It's hard to draw a crowd with six or seven police cruisers on the parking lot," Burke said. "We couldn't make enough to clear. I think he over-protected us a little. People would come, see the police cars on the lot, and turn around and leave. They thought something was wrong."

The Burkes said they had "lost about $11,000" on a George Jones concert the night before a decision was reached to close down the entertainment center and that a Kris Kristofferson concert "cost us about $12,000." They have charged that "the word was spread that the sheriff would be here in force and people refused to come. They didn't want to be embarrassed."

In their complaint the Burkes contend that Cyrus had made a campaign promise "to shut us down," a charge flatly denied by the sheriff.

"There is absolutely no truth to that charge," Cyrus said and anybody who says I made a promise like that is not telling the truth."

Cyrus also denied that his department had performed illegally during visits to Star Musicland, adding, "there's no way we ever violated the law up there. The only reason we ever went to Star Musicland was to investigate complaints and because state statutes said we had to be there."

The sheriff said allegations made by the Burkes were "false" with the exception of two claims.

"The only things they got right," he said, "was when I was elected and that I have been to Star Musicland."

Cyrus and other defendants in the suit filed a counter measure in early October claiming that Musicland "is a nuisance" and "increases the risk of harm and danger" to the officers. They asked the court to award damages in the amount of $175,000 in their behalf.

The sheriff countered this week claims that he was responsible for the financial failure of the entertainment center, remarking "I'd say that bad management is responsible for their bankruptcy. I can't help it if they don't know how to run a business."

A trial date in the suit has not been set but a preliminary hearing on the case is scheduled for March.

Hospital Gets Go-Ahead On Nuclear Medicine

Hospital Administrator E.L. Crozier announced last week that state approval had been received for the installation of nuclear medicine services at Louisa Community Hospital. Gareth Thomas, department manager, commented that scans such as lungs, brain, liver, bone and thyroid will be done with the new service. The equipment should be installed and in use by late December, according to hospital officials. Officials at the hospital also announced that installation of a State of the Art-Heart monitoring system has been completed. The system, called "Pecgasys," is a Datamedix Programmable Electrocardiographic Analyser, according to Jim Ellison, hospital associate executive director. The physician is provided with the capability for extended monitoring and analysis of a patient's ECG (electrocardiograph) and an extensive report on what was observed during the monitoring period.

Festive Wrappings Make Holiday Goodies Special

Food gifts are welcome anytime, but particularly during the Christmas holidays when festive wrappings and pretty containers make them special. "With the high cost of gifts and speciality food items, you can help your own budget and that of friends when you give food gifts for Christmas," says Sue Burrier, foods and nutrition Extension specialist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Some food gifts require planning early in the year. "You might want to can extra jars of pickles, relishes or chili sauce, jams, jellies or marmalades for holiday gift giving," suggests Burrier. Other food gifts, such as breads, cookies, cheese balls, herb and spice mixtures and snack mixes can be made at holiday time and packaged for giving. Burrier noted that good nutrition should not be abandoned during the holidays. "When you look through your recipe file, choose some recipes for gifts that will provide more nutrition with fewer calories, fat, sugar and salt," urges the specialist. "Many people tend to gain weight during the holidays due to eating more foods that are rich in calories," adds Burrier. "Some food gifts that are not laden with extra sugar and fat will be a welcome change during the Christmas season."

servicing or menu suggestions," adds Burrier. If foods need to be refrigerated, frozen, thawed in the refrigerator, heated in the oven or can be prepared in the microwave oven, include this information on the label, too.

MAILING FOOD GIFTS

"You'll need to take special care with the gifts you mail," reminds Burrier. She says to choose foods that will travel well and avoid delicate cakes, pies or foods that spoil easily. Avoid yeast breads, which become stale quickly, items that must be refrigerated or frozen, heavily frosted baked goods and foods in glass containers.

Food gifts for mailing should be sealed in plastic wrap, foil or a plastic bag. Select a plastic, cardboard or metal inner container and a heavy cardboard outer box. Food should be arranged in single layers with crumpled waxed paper or cardboard between each layer. Fill in top and any spaces with additional paper or foam pellets to prevent the container from moving around inside the box during shipping.

The sides and top of the box should be labeled "fragile" or "perishable." For more specific information or special instructions, contact your local post office or shipping agent.

Extension News

In order to insure a beautiful rose garden next year, it is very important that we give our roses proper protection during the cold winter months.

After a hard frost or two, but before the ground freezes, prune all of the canes on your hybrid tea, floribunda and grandiflora roses back to 18 inches. This makes it easier to work around them in providing winter protection and prevents them from becoming battered by the wind and ice of winter.

After this has been done, remove all dead stems, leaves, and debris, raking carefully around each plant. Spray the entire plant and surrounding soil with a good fungicide and insecticide to prevent carrying over of diseases and insects on and about the plant.

Mound a pile of loose earth up, over and around each plant to a height of about 12 inches and firm. Prune the rose canes so that only 4 to 6 inches of the tips remain, exposed after mounding. Loose compost or aged sawdust may be used in place of soil. Don't use leaves, grass clippings, manure or other materials that would remain wet. This type of material will only promote disease growth.

The purpose of this mounding is to protect the plants from rapid changes of temperature and to guard against the winter wind and ice damage.

The mounds should be carefully removed in the spring after danger of frost is past. Don't be too anxious because new tender shoots can be injured by a light freeze. It would be wise to keep some straw or mulching material handy to cover plants in case of late frost.

A Bull Market for Teddy Bears

By INK MENDELSON
Smithsonian News Service

Stocks go up and stocks go down, but in toyland, there's always a bear market. Primarily responsible for this state of affairs is an almost-octogenarian bear cub named Teddy. In a fast-paced, fad-oriented and fickle-minded society, the forever young Teddy Bear remains one of America's all-time favorite toys.

"Never in the history of Wall street was the country more at the mercy of bears than it is today," cried the toy industry's trade magazine, Playthings, in 1906. "Stuffed plush Teddies are fairly rampant, and indications show prospects of a long and continued reign."

How right they were. Fleeting fame has come to other stuffed animals. Lions and tigers have tried on occasion to push Teddy off center stage in the toy store window. One year, unicorns, true to type, tried to horn in on Teddy's act. Nonetheless, "our retailers tell us the Teddy Bear is still numbered one," Donna Leccese, Playthings' current associate editor, says. Douglas Thomson, president of the Toy Manufacturers of America, agrees. "There's no decline in this species. The Teddy is on the increase."

First among equals perhaps—because each bear owner naturally thinks his or her Teddy is best—is a seldom seen Teddy Bear who lives at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. This delightful chap, with his honey-colored coat covering a rather rotund belly, has bright black shoe button eyes and a wisdom-of-the-ages (if slightly smug) expression. He only meets his public occasionally.

"We've had lots of requests for him, and he's been on view a number of times," Herb Collins, formerly the Smithsonian's chief curator of political history, says. "But we have to be careful; his joints loosen with handling

"THE BOYS CHOIR OF HARLEM IN CONCERT" winds down the Christmas fare on KET at 6 p.m. The internationally-acclaimed choral group performs a selection of songs spanning centuries of European and American history. The program also takes a brief look at the boys' after-school rehearsals and tutoring program with comments by Walter Turnbull, the founder and director of the choir.

This delightful chap is an original Ideal Toy Company Teddy Bear whose home is now the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C.

and his coat fades in the light." Actually, for a bear who's been around since the turn-of-the-century, he's in excellent condition. And the Smithsonian Institution wants him to stay that way because he's one of the first Teddy Bears made in America.

It was Herb Collins, now the executive director of the Smithsonian's National Philatelic Collection, who personally brought his Teddy to the Smithsonian in January 1964. President Theodore Roosevelt's grandson, Kermit, his wife and their children had been presented with the Teddy Bear, one of the originals from the Ideal Toy Co., by Benjamin Michtom, son of Ideal's founder. Michtom dated the bear to 1903, the year his parents went into the toy bear-making business. The Roosevelts decided that the Teddy Bear, named for the president, should go to the Smithsonian.

He almost didn't make it. A letter from Mrs. Roosevelt to Michtom advised: "I was about to get in touch with the Smithsonian about presenting them with the original bear when the children decided they didn't want to part with it yet." Happily, Mark and Anne Roosevelt, the president's great-grandchildren, changed their minds. Several months later, the Smithsonian and the American people got their bear.

Theodore Roosevelt, however, didn't always get his. On Nov. 14, 1902, the president was on a hunting expedition in Smedes, Miss., and had had no luck. Anxious that the president bag a bear, some of his party chased down and stunned a 235-pound black bear. The hunters roped the bear and tied it to a tree. A messenger was dispatched to summon the president so that he might shoot the animal and go home with a trophy. When the president arrived, he refused to shoot the exhausted and tethered creature. A Washington Post article the next day informed its readers in turn-of-the-century style:

—President Called After the Beast Had Been Lassoed, but He Refused to Make an Unsportsmanlike Shot.

The shot not fired was heard around the land. Three Press Association representatives were with the hunting party and a small army of reporters was following the president's trail. On Nov. 16, 1902, a cartoon by Clifford Berryman illustrating the incident appeared on the front page of the Washington Post. The American public immediately responded to the story and the cartoon, presumably finding in them the heroic and sportsmanlike qualities it saw in its president.

Shortly, however, the whole matter took on a more whimsical tone. A subsequent Berryman cartoon of the same hunting episode, dated 1902, depicted the bear as smaller than the one in the first cartoon—a worried-looking and very appealing cub. Berryman's little bear was a great success and appeared in his cartoons of Theodore Roosevelt for years afterwards. In fact, Teddy's bear was everywhere. Observed historian Mark Sullivan:

The "Teddy Bear," beginning with Berryman's original cartoon, was repeated thousands of times and printed literally thousands of millions of times. Toy-makers took advantage of its vogue; it became more common in the hands of children than the woolly lamb.

At least one person, however, was immune to his charm—Theodore Roosevelt's daughter Alice Roosevelt Longworth. When offered one of the original Teddy Bears in exchange for posing with the Teddy on the occasion of the bear's 60th birthday, she refused, asking tartly, "What does a 79-year-old doll want with a 60-year-old Teddy Bear?"

Get instant relief for your pocketbook with our Equal Payment Plan.

Winter is here. And with its chilling winds comes the most expensive time of the year. Bills from the holidays, snow tires, cold and flu expenses, taxes—the list is long.

And winter is also the highest electric usage period for most of our customers. That means higher energy bills come right along with everything else.

To help ease the overall winter drain on the pocketbook, Kentucky Power is offering "instant relief" for customers with good bill-paying records. It's called the Equal Payment Plan (EPP). By going on EPP now, qualified customers can defer part of each winter electric bill to spring and fall when usage is less.

Here is how it works — if for example, your current bill is $150 but your average bill (based on last year's usage) is $75 per month for a year, you would have to pay only the $75 when you go on EPP. Over the first 11 months you would pay $75 per month. (If there is any difference between your estimated and actual usage, we'll make an adjustment in your monthly EPP amount after six months.) On the 12th month, we'll settle up any differences.

EPP is that simple. You pay less than what you actually use during these heavy-use periods, then pay the company back (with no interest) during the low usage months.

EPP is of most benefit to heating and air conditioning customers whose bills fluctuate seasonally, but the program is available to all residential customers.

If the idea of leveling off your electric bills sounds good to you, come in or call your nearest Kentucky Power office. We have an EPP specialist waiting to talk to you.

We give it our best.

Remarrying Widown, Widowers May Still Get SS Benefits

Under a change in the Social Security law that some may not be aware of, widows or widowers age 60 or older receiving Social Security benefits may remarry and still get their Social Security benefits, according to Jim Kelly, Social Security District Director for the Big Sandy Area. However, remarriage of widows and widowers under 60, will continue to result in the termination of benefits.

This rule was designed to make it easier for older people to marry without the risk of a loss of income. For many, Social Security continues to be the primary source of income, Kelly said.

For all other persons receiving dependent or survivor benefits following the retirement, disability, or death of a worker who has worked long enough under Social Security, the rules regarding marriage or remarriage still apply. This includes children, disabled widows or widowers, dependent parents, adults disabled in childhood, and divorced spouses or surviving divorced spouses.

However, if the subsequent marriage ends, a spouse or surviving divorced spouse may become re-entitled to a benefit on the former deceased spouse's work record. The renewed benefits may begin when the subsequent marriage ends, whether by death, divorce, or annulment.

"Widows or widowers 60 or over who remarry may also receive a benefit on their new spouse's record if that would result in a higher benefit," Kelly said.

The rationale behind the termination of benefits for beneficiaries under 60 who marry or remarry is simply that they are no longer considered dependent upon the earnings of the insured workers. The new spouse is expected to assume that obligation. This presumption is not considered as sound in the case of widows and widowers over 60, since the primary income of both parties is likely to be Social Security and other retirement income, Kelly said.

More information about Widows or widowers who remarry can be obtained at the Big Sandy Area Social Security office, located on U. S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in your local directory under U. S. Government.

Rotate Garden Crops To Cut Down Disease

One of the simplest methods for reducing disease problems in the garden is to rotate vegetable crops. Many diseases, such as early blight of tomatoes and club root of cabbage, can overwinter in the soil and multiply from year to year if the same host plants are grown continuously.

A four year rotation is probably reasonable for most gardeners, says Dr. Jean English, Extension horticulturist at the University of Kentucky's Robinson Substation in Quick-land. Potatoes, tomatoes, eggplant and peppers can be grown in one plot. These crops require highly fertile soil and are subject to the same diseases.

The following year these so-called Solanaceous crops should be moved to a second plot, and the first plot should be limed if necessary and planted with legumes, such as beans and peas and brassicas (cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, kale, and kohlrabi).

In the third year, this plot can contain vine crops and salad crops. Finally, root crops, such as carrots and beets, can be planted the fourth year.

Just as one plot holds this rotational scheme for four years, three other plots can contain different stages of the rotation, explained English. "A five year rotation, with a legume green manure during the fifth year, would be ideal," she said. The legume will shade competing weeds for subsequent crops if thickly sown.

Legumes also provide nitrogen if inoculated and bring essential nutrients to the top layers of garden soil if deep rooted, such as alfalfa.

PROUD TRADITION

If the third Thursday in November doesn't mean anything special to you, then you're probably not a Kentucky hunter. This day has traditionally marked the opening of small game and furbearer seasons in the commonwealth.

This year isn't any different and most hunters are eager to get out, if not on opening day, then at least for the opening weekend. For others, the first hunting trip must wait until the long Thanksgiving weekend, when a visit to relatives in the country, coupled with a day or so of hunting, is a family tradition.

On the whole, hunters do seem to care about tradition, about the little forms and ceremonies (perhaps unconsciously followed) which add immeasurably to their sport. Many hunters develop certain rituals which they follow year after year and which become, in the final analysis, the most meaningful feature of each annual hunt.

In addition to these personal rituals, hunters as a group have a strong tradition as the nation's leading conservationist, a tradition about which they can be justly proud. Without the dedication and concern of sport hunters, many now-plentiful species might well be extinct today.

At the turn of the century, after decades of unregulated shooting (often for commercial markets), white-tailed deer were scarce in the east, wild turkeys had disappeared from all but the most isolated areas and several waterfowl species, including the wood duck, were considered early candidates for extinction.

But sport hunters who cared about wildlife banded together and got tough state and federal laws through often-reluctant legislatures. And more important, they asked that they be taxed to pay for conservation.

Those taxes took the form of the now-familiar hunting license, something which we take for granted today but which was a revolutionary concept in its day. In most states (including Kentucky) license money may be used only by the fish and wildlife agency for wildlife research, management, habitat acquisition and law enforcement.

On the federal level, hunters played an important role in the passage of a law placing an excise tax on sporting arms and ammunition. The money collected from this tax is distributed back to the state for use in approved wildlife projects.

Over the years, sportsmen have provided by far the bulk of what financing wildlife programs have had. Through 1981, according to the Wildlife Management Institute, U.S. sportsmen have paid more than $3.3 billion for state hunting licenses, have contributed another $1.2 billion in excise taxes on sporting equipment and have provided over $226 million for waterfowl through the sale of duck stamps.

Last year alone, hunters and fishermen provided almost $622 million for fish and wildlife conservation. This money went for scientific research, for restoration projects, for law enforcement, for teaching hunter safety and ethics, for educational projects in the public schools, for acquiring rapidly disappearing wildlife habitat, for protecting threatened and endangered species—the list could go on and on.

Yet, sportsmen have a strong tradition, one they can be proud of and one they can safely challenge any other group which professes a concern for wildlife to try and match.

Second Birthday

Joseph Ryan Owens, son of Joseph and Teresa Owens, of Garrett, and grandson of Margaret Conley, also of Garrett, and the late Virgil Conley, and Molly Owens, of Langley, and the late Ralph Owens, celebrated his second birthday Nov. 19 with a Muppets party. Attending were Mrs. Margaret Conley, Shelby Conley, Kathy and Tara Shepherd, Molly Owens, Sandy and Allison Conley, Freeda Horne, Rhonda Horne, Ina and Shawn Robinson, Hattie and Jackie Owens, Shirly Combs, Jeri and Kelly Combs, Sarah and Aron Jackson, Kathy Scott, Krystal Scott, Becky and John Creighton, Bob and Lema Bradley.

★ Country Music Country

One night in 1946, Pee Wee King and Redd Stewart were driving the luggage truck for a Louisville band called "The Kentucky Wildcats" and listening to the strains of Bill Monroe's "Kentucky Waltz" on the radio.

Redd commented that it was odd nobody had written a Tennessee waltz song. "So we took an old melody that we were using as our theme—"No Name Waltz"—and Redd started writing the lyrics on the back of a matchbook cover," King recalls.

The result was "The Tennessee Waltz"—a song that would be recorded more than 300 times and sell over 40 million records.

Charles Wolfe, English professor at Middle Tennessee State University, recounts the writing of this famous song—and hundreds of other country music anecdotes—in his new book, "Kentucky Country," just published by The University Press of Kentucky.

Wolfe's book reveals that singers, composers and instrumentalists from more than 60 Kentucky counties are stars of yesterday and today's country music world.

"Kentucky has produced an inordinate number of good and influential musicians," Wolfe writes. "In fact, Kentucky has contributed more stars to country music than any other state except Texas."

Among these are Loretta Lynn, Crystal Gayle, Bill Monroe, Grandpa Jones, Red Foley and Merle Travis—all Kentucky natives.

CAR SAFETY SEATS

According to Attorney General Steven L. Beshear, effective July 15, 1982, all children under 40 inches tall, traveling in passenger vehicles, should be secured in a child restraint device. Failure to comply may result in the driver being stopped by a state trooper.

This law was enacted by the Kentucky General Assembly in an effort to help curb the number of children who are either hurt or killed in car accidents each year. In 1981, the automobile accident death rate for children under four years of age died as a result of automobile accidents in 1981. For these reasons, Attorney General Beshear wants all consumers to be aware of the facts concerning child safety restraints.

"Many adults do not realize that in case of an accident, even the strongest person cannot protect a child by holding him/her in their arms," said Attorney General Beshear. "The pull against the adult's arms would be more than 750 pounds, or four times the weight most women can hold onto and more than twice what most men can restrain."

All occupants of an automobile should be restrained to protect the body in case of an accident. The chances of death are 25 times greater if a body is thrown from the car. The force of a collision can throw a human body 15 car lengths. A child's body is more vulnerable to injury than an adult's. The head is heavy in proportion to the body, making it more likely to go head-first through the windshield. A child's skull and skeletal structure is fragile and provides little protection for internal organs. The delicate chest and abdominal area make use of an adult seat belt unwise unless other protection is unavailable.

The best protection for infants and toddlers riding in automobiles is a child car safety seat. Before buying a safety seat, Attorney General Beshear offers these buying tips:

1. Look for a label or tag that indicates the device has been crash tested and meets federal standards effective January 1, 1981. These seats are designed to give children the same level of protection as an adult wearing a combination lap and shoulder belt.
2. Child restraints are held in place by seat belts. For this reason, test them in the car for proper fit before buying.
3. When choosing a safety seat for a child, look for a model that corresponds to the child's weight and height. The seat should be comfortable for the child.
4. The restraint should be easy to buckle without being uncomfortable for the child. A federal study revealed parents may select a restraint that is easy to fasten, then discover it is not comfortable for the child.
5. Read the directions before buying. Some restraints are more difficult to install than others. The restraint will not fully protect the child if it is installed incorrectly.

★ Cancer Hopeline

Q. I've had a mastectomy. I found the lump early because I examined my breasts each month (BSE). I want to continue BSE, but what do I check for on the operated side? And what about my daughter, age 16, learning BSE?

A. It is wise to continue breast self-examination (BSE) after a mastectomy since women who have had breast cancer are at greater risk of having it again. Just as you did before, check for any lumps, discoloration, discharge, thickening, or scaly skin on your remaining breast and on the operated side.

Dorothy Hollis, RN, a mastectomy patient herself, has written an excellent brochure, "Self-Examination After Breast Cancer Surgery," published by the McDowell Cancer Network. It is available free from the Cancer Hopeline. Illustrations and a careful text explain the technique of BSE for post-mastectomy patients.

The best follow-up care by a physician is no replacement, Miss Hollis states, for the assurance of regular monthly BSE. With BSE, any woman, but especially the mastectomy patient, works in partnership with her doctor and takes responsibility for her own health.

All women over the age of 15 are urged to learn the simple BSE technique and to practice it regularly once a month so that they know what is normal for them and can quickly detect anything unusual.

Women whose mothers, sisters, or aunts have had breast cancer are particularly at risk. They not only should practice BSE regularly but should also advise their physicians of their family history.

The Cancer Hopeline has two brochures which explain BSE for the woman who has not had breast cancer: "Questions and Answers about Breast Lumps" and "Breast Exams: What You Should Know." Another brochure offering much to any woman concerned about breast cancer is Rose Kushner's "If You've Thought About Breast Cancer." All are free from the Hopeline.

BSE isn't complicated, and it's a brief procedure that could save your life. Call the Cancer Hopeline toll free at 1-800-432-9321 weekdays from 9-5, or write to 915 South Limestone Street, Lexington, KY 40536 for the brochures mentioned.

Dr. Fox, Mr. Martin on ARH Board

Researchers have discovered that "buckled-up" children are better behaved than unrestrained youngsters. Infants usually adjust well to being in a restraint. They sleep or can be easily distracted by a toy tied to the restraint.

The toddler may, at first, feel uncomfortable with the restraint. The car seat should be a special gift to the child. Let the child play with seat around the house. This will make him/her feel more comfortable when in the restraint.

Attorney General Beshear would like all consumers to be aware of the great danger a car accident poses to a small child. If you have further questions or consumer complaints, contact the Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601, or you may call the toll-free Consumer Hotline 1-800-432-9257.

Dr. Mary Fox, director of the Pike County Health Department, has been elected vice-chairman of the Appalachian Regional Hospitals' board of trustees. Dr. Fox, an ARH board member for eight years, also chairs the board's Joint Conference committee that monitors physicians' credentials and quality assurance.

Mary Evelyn Rogers, also from Pikeville, and Julius Martin, of McDowell, were elected to first terms on the not-for-profit hospital system's board.

Former West Virginia Governor Cecil H. Underwood was elected chairman of the board. Underwood is currently chairman of the board of Princess Coal, Inc., of Huntington, W. Va., and has served on the ARH Board for eight years.

Also elected as officers were Vernon J. Cole, of Harlan, as treasurer, and William G. Allen, of Lexington, as secretary.

Other new trustees elected to the ARH Board include Mary Anne Furrow, of Phelps, and Everett Thompson, of Williamson, West Virginia. Trustees re-elected to the board include Howard L. Bost and Thomas P. Dupree, both of Lexington, Earl Burchfield, of Middlesboro, Forrest E. Cook, of Whitesburg, and Earl Reed, of Caney, Kentucky.

Highlands Gets X-Ray Through Bond Program

The Kentucky Development Finance Authority has made its first loan through a program aimed at helping hospitals obtain below-market-rate financing for expensive equipment.

The authority lent $296,332 to Highlands Regional Medical Center in Prestonsburg for the purchase of an advanced x-ray machine. Through the Hospital Equipment Leasing Program, the funds will be lent at 10 1/4 percent, substantially below current conventional loan rates.

The program is financed by a $25-million bond issue. The program's trustee, First National Bank of Louisville, began taking applications Sept. 1. So far, 26 applications have been received.

While the transaction may be viewed basically as a loan, it is technically a leasing arrangement in which the authority buys the equipment and leases it to the hospital. At the end of the leasing period, the hospital assumes ownership of the equipment.

Roger Peterman, finance authority executive director, said of the loan, "Highlands is well known for its outstanding medical care. I'm pleased we're able to help them obtain state-of-the-art equipment at a substantial savings over commercial rates. I'm optimistic about the overall impact of this program statewide."

He noted that the program is open to hospitals of all sizes.

FIVE DAYS ONE SUMMER, from Warner Bros. Directed by Fred Zinnemann, screenplay by Michael Austin. Starring Sean Connery, Betsy Brantley, Lambert Wilson. Rated 'PG' ★ ★

By J.T. YURKO

Director Fred Zinnemann has firmly entrenched himself in film history with such films as "High Noon," "From Here to Eternity," "A Man for All Seasons" and most recently, "Julia." His newest film, which he produced and directed, is based on a short story he read more than 40 years ago, long before he made any of those movies. "Five Days One Summer" has many of the same themes and concerns as Zinnemann's other efforts, but it will not be ranked as one of his or film history's classics. Having much the feel of a short story, the film is slowly paced and of one tone. It hasn't the rhythms of modern movie-making and TV shows where a car has to blow up every 15 minutes to keep you interested. The mood is as important as the events here, so one man's slowly paced movie may be another's easy and elegant movie. Decide for yourself, but know what you're getting into. Sean Connery plays a doctor who is on holiday with his wife in the Swiss Alps. His wife is young, which causes some talk among the townfolk. This is the 1930s after all. It seems the townfolk are right — the woman is not his wife, and in fact, turns out to be his niece. Together with a young (and handsome) guide, they set out to do some mountain climbing. The grandeur of the Swiss Alps makes for some great scenery, and also acts a triangle/mountain metaphor for the relationship that develops. There are some fine shots of mountain climbers clinging to the face of a vertical precipice, and that's about as exiting as the film becomes. Nor is the film as engrossing as it is meant to be. If you're tired of all the blood-and-guts horror movies and want to see a well-made, relaxed little movie that seems like an extended episode of "Masterpiece Theater," this film's for you. As for the mountain climbing sequences, it seems as if the movie made about the making of this movie would be more exciting than the movie itself.

Named to ALC Hall of Fame

William Hughes, Martin Elementary School principal, above, congratulates Jimmie D. Hopkins, who is a teacher and basketball and football coach at the school, on his being named to the Alice Lloyd College Basketball Hall of Fame during Homecoming ceremonies at the college, November 13. Hopkins, a graduate of McDowell High School, was among those who initiated the basketball program at Alice Lloyd and was a member of the first team. He was responsible for naming the team the Alice Lloyd Eagles and recommended the name because the office of Alice Lloyd, founder of the college, was known as the Eagles's Nest. Upon completing two years at Alice Lloyd, Mr. Hopkins attended Morehead State University where he received the AMED degree. He resides at Wayland.

PHS Begins Regular Season Schedule

By WENDE BUCHANAN
The Prestonsburg Blackcats harnessed the Magoffin Hornets last Tuesday, 67-46 and the Lady Cats defeated Dorton in an impressive 70-38 victory. Later in the week, however, the Blackcats lost to powerful Sheldon Clark, 77-51.
In discussing the Sheldon Clark game, Prestonsburg's Coach Roberts pointed out that the game "was much closer than the score indicates." Sheldon Clark led the 'Cats by only four points at the half and six points in the third quarter, for example, although a fourth quarter "cold spell" stymied the PHS netters. Coach Roberts praised his team, saying: "When we get everything together, we will be hard to beat."
The Lady Cats are also confident this year and are determined to improve on the 4-18 record of last season. Speaking of the Dorton game, the PHS girls' coach Hopkins said his team was "aggressive and played a good floor-defensive game." He said a "team effort" was the key in the win over Dorton, Thursday night.

ITALY RETAINS SUSPECT IN POPE'S SHOOTING

The Italian government said this week that a proposed exchange of a Bulgarian charged with complicity in last year's shooting of Pope John Paul II for two Italians being held in Bulgaria on espionage charges is "totally unacceptable."

Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo said the Italian government "would consider inadmissible any attempt to make the fate of Gabriella Trevesin and Paolo Farsetti conditional on the outcome of the proceedings against Ivanov Antonov."

Antonov, 35, an employee of the Bulgarian state airline office in Rome, was arrested on Nov. 25. He is accused of being a conspirator in the May 13, 1981, assassination attempt, in which Turkish terrorist Mehmet Ali Agca shot and wounded the pope.

Trevesin and Farsetti were arrested in Sofia, Bulgaria, in August.
