A PARADE, which featured veterans' groups, bands, beauty queens and, of course, Santa Claus, marked the official opening of the Christmas season, Saturday, in downtown Prestonsburg. Mrs. Edith F. James, founder of the Highlands Folk Festival and well-known folklorist, was parade marshal for the event.

When liquor licenses were issued here a year ago after a 30-year "dry" spell, some feared the worst—boisterous taverns, corruption of youngsters, drunk drivers menacing the highways. But, while alleged sale of alcohol to minors has been a cause for some concern, the county has weathered its first year with relatively few problems, law enforcement officials report.

On December 2 last year, the state Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC) Board announced 21 successful applicants for liquor licenses in this county. In the previous three months, some 80 retail beer licenses were issued here. Of the county's current alcoholic beverage retailers, 18 hold liquor licenses, 15 have both beer and entertainment licenses, and around 50 operate package beer outlets.

Visions of roadhouses bursting at the seams with rowdy patrons led to efforts by the fiscal court earlier this year to fashion an ordinance that would have virtually banned the small tavern. An early draft, which would have prohibited music, dancing and games wherever beer was sold, drew protests from license holders and some ridicule from commentators. A later proposal would have permitted only restaurants and nightclubs to sell beer by the drink.

The ABC board rejected the ordinance, amid charges by Floyd officials that the state panel was evading responsibility for enforcing liquor laws here. To keep at least a loose control over taverns, the county has since relied on its authority to issue entertainment licenses.

Despite the fact that conditions for holding an entertainment license are relatively lenient—premises must pass fire and health department inspections and must close their doors at midnight—roadhouses have generally not turned out to be the troublespots that some had feared.

Economics has played a major role in keeping the peace here, County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. theorizes. "We feared people would be crowding into (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Beer Dealer Accused Of Sale to Students

A Harold beer retailer faced a possible fine or license suspension this week, following charges that an employee sold beer to two Betsy Layne High School students last spring.

In an administrative hearing before Floyd Alcoholic Beverage Control (ABC) Administrator Denzil Allen last week, Penny Wolfe McKenzie, an employee of P. and L. Carryout, on U.S. 23 at Harold, was accused of selling four bottles of Champale, a malt beverage, to two 17-year-old girls on April 19.

McKenzie denied the charge, claiming she did not work at the store that day. The girls, one a junior and the other a senior at the time, were said to have made the purchase around 9:30 a.m. at the store's drive-up window. They were not asked for identification, they said.

One of the students was sent home from school, allegedly drunk, later that day. Her father, an Allen clergyman, filed a criminal complaint against the store clerk, alleging unlawful transaction with a minor.

The case was set for trial in

Youth To Work, Parents To Pay In Restitution

After pleading guilty to nine counts of criminal mischief, Jeffery Allen Lester, 18, of Auxier, was ordered by District Judge Harold Stumbo Monday to pay $884 in restitution. But, because the youth's parents would be paying the bill, the judge also ordered Lester to report to the Floyd jailer for janitorial work on seven Saturdays.

Lester was charged in October with slashing tires on nine vehicles at Auxier. In response to Attorney Gary Johnson's suggestion that his client be allowed to pay for the damage in lieu of a fine, Judge Stumbo noted that the burden of restitution would fall on the parents. "I think he should have to do something, too," said the judge.

"I agree," the boy's father responded from the body of the courtroom.

Homer Jones, Jr. failed to appear in court Tuesday to answer a complaint by Eva Chaffins, of David, that he took her car keys and would not let her leave the car last May. After being convicted of theft and unlawful imprisonment, he was sentenced in his absence to a year in jail and ordered to pay a $500 fine. (See Story No. 5, Page 4)

Murder Plot Defendants Sent By Agreement to Other Jails

When the pre-trial conference in the case of four men charged in the death of Glenda Sharon Marshall is held here Dec. 19, three of the four will be returned here from other jails.

The last two held in jail here—Clyde Douglas Marshall, husband of the victim, and Bobby Gene McGuffey—were transferred Tuesday to other jails on an agreed court order requested by their attorneys. Marshall was taken to the Franklin county jail at Frankfort where his attorney, Ned Pillersdorf, public defender, has indicated he will undergo psychiatric evaluation. His alleged accomplice, McGuffey, was taken to the Clark county jail at Winchester, nearer

September but was dropped from the district court docket at the request of the prosecutor in favor of a hearing before the ABC administrator. County Attorney Arnold Turner, Jr. said this week that the administrative action carries penalties at least as severe as would a court conviction and that he hoped more parents would press charges if their children were not subject to the rigors of a jury trial.

Another effect of the switch is that the focus of the prosecution shifts from the licensee to the employer. Listed as licensee of P. and L. Carryout is Lloyd Johnson, of Prestonsburg. Johnson is only the second alcoholic beverage retailer to face criminal or administrative sanctions here in the 15 months since licensing returned to the county and his is the first establishment to be cited for sales to minors.

Betsy Layne High School Principal Russell M. Frazier said this week he has noticed an increase in drinking by school students since the county went wet. Five students have been suspended this school year for drinking on campus and three or four have been expelled during the same period for selling alcoholic beverages at school, he said.

"It is difficult to control," the principal said. "Boys bring it in their athletic bags. Girls often bring it in for boys in their purses. Just yesterday (Thursday), I had a student pass out in my office."

"It is often hard to say whether they bought it themselves or had someone buy it for them," Frazier said, "but the kids say it's easy to get it, that no one asks for any ID."

While the Betsy Layne school appears to be seeing more alcohol problems, that does not seem to be the case with the schools countywide, said Superintendent E.P. Grigsby, Jr. "Personally, I can't tell any difference (since the county went wet)," Grigsby said. "I can't say I'm hearing any more complaints from school people."

But County Attorney Turner suggested the reason that tavern and package store licensees are not being prosecuted for sales to minors is that the state ABC agency is not doing its job. "The fact that they have come up with

Official Misidentified

A member of the Floyd county Democratic executive committee was wrongly identified in a story in last week's edition of The Times. He is Charles Douglas (Little Crush) Dingus.

UNENVIABLE DISTINCTION of being the county's first alcoholic beverage store to be cited for sales to minors went to this beer outlet, P and L Carryout, at Harold. Licensee Lloyd Johnson this week awaited a ruling by Floyd ABC Administrator Denzil Allen on the charge, which was pressed by the father of one of the teenagers said to have bought beer there. The decision may be appealed to the state ABC board.

Says Bond Between Christians May Heal East-West Tensions

The bond of faith linking Christians in the United States with those in the Soviet Union represents the two nations' best hope of avoiding nuclear conflict, a Presbyterian pastor told a group here Saturday.

Rev. Steve Montgomery, who addressed a breakfast meeting at May Lodge sponsored by the First Presbyterian Church's men's fellowship here, is minister at the Buckhorn Lake Area Church and chairman of the Transylvania Presbytery's peacemaking task force.

He was a member of a Presbyterian peace organization which visited the Soviet Union for three weeks in May at the invitation of the Russian Orthodox Church. The group met and worshipped with church groups in various parts of that country, where Christians are estimated to number 50-90 million among a population of around 270 million.

Citing Albert Einstein, Montgomery noted that, with the advent of the nuclear bomb, "everything in the world has changed except our ways of thinking." The climate of hostility between east and west he traced to the Manichean heresy which surfaced in the early church.

Like the Manicheans, contemporary Americans often view international relations in terms of a conflict between the forces of evil, represented by the USSR and its satellites, and the forces of good, meaning the U.S. and its allies, Montgomery said. Such an analysis "fails to see the good that comes from people in the Soviet Union as well as the depravity in our own hearts," the pastor said.

Because of the fellowship that links their members and the Gospel summons to be wary of all human institutions, the churches can play a reconciling role that governments cannot, Montgomery said. While both Russian and American officials spoke to the group in predictable terms dictated by their governments—"We got two Moscow snow jobs in one day"—the ordinary people they met moved easily beyond ideology and "the party line," he said.

"The church is the best, perhaps the only, hope for a fragmented world in the nuclear age," Montgomery said.

Body of Woman Ruled a Suicide In Jail Exhumed

The body of a 19-year-old Knott county woman who was found hanged in a jail cell here two weeks ago was exhumed for autopsy Tuesday at the request of her family.

Floyd Coroner Roger Nelson said Monday he ordered the autopsy on the body of Mary Vinamae Tackett "to put to rest any rumors that might surface later" regarding the circumstances of her death. He said the examination would probably be performed by Dr. John C. Hunsacker, a forensic pathologist in Lexington, and that he expected to make a complete report on his findings today (Wednesday).

The request for an autopsy was made on the family's behalf by Prestonsburg attorney Gary Johnson. "They haven't retained me to sue anybody," the attorney said, "but to help them find out what happened to their daughter."

The victim, who had just begun a (See Story No. 4, Page 4)

All that forest color that charmed most of us out of our prosaic selves is gone now, true, but any of us who have the energy may yet enjoy what is left. NO SOJOURNER

In the community where I grew up there was an expression often heard when a resident left for other climes and returned as quickly as bad roads and poor means of transportation would permit. "He stayed as long," so the expression ran, "as Pat stayed in the army."

And that, I learned upon inquiry, was only long enough for the legendary Irishman to load his gun.

Now, I hear that they've revived the "saying" since my recent "visit" to where the wild geese fly.

P'Burg Kiwanis Club To Mark 60th Birthday With Thursday program

The Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club will celebrate tomorrow (Thursday) evening at May Lodge, Jenny Wiley State Park, its 60th year of service to Floyd county and Eastern Kentucky, and it will be joined in the anniversary event by representatives of other Kiwanis Clubs from the region.

The entertainment program will feature Miss Lynn Thompson, the current Miss Kentucky, H.C. "Huck" Francis, past governor of the Kentucky-Tennessee Kiwanis district, will be master of ceremonies, and Garry H. Vickers, club president, will preside.

The club was organized Dec. 8, 1923, and Will H. Layne was its first president, with J. Bascom Clarke as its secretary. The only surviving charter member of the club is Curtis W. May, of Prestonsburg.

Agency Pressed To Raise Income

Under pressure from bondholders to raise the income generated by the system, solid waste and county officials met Friday to coordinate plans to update the garbage agency's subscriber lists.

Deputy Judge-Executive Morris Isaac said a bondholders' representative told solid waste officials recently they would have to raise the $6 monthly fee by a dollar unless they could expand the number of paying customers.

About 15 people have begun working in the county to ascertain just who is getting garbage service and who is not, Isaac said. Perhaps as many as 30 percent of those receiving service have never been billed for it, he added.

The deputy judge also acknowledged that some who are being billed are not receiving service.

While Floyd County Solid Waste, Inc., which operates the system, is theoretically independent, the fact that the fiscal court has contributed about $200,000 this year to make its bond payments gives the county a special interest in the agency's welfare, Isaac said.

"There are two things to be gained from making the solid waste system stronger," he said. "First, the county will be cleaner; and second, the money we've had to spend to make their bond payments we can start spending on the roads."

Pleas of Guilty Draw Pen Term For 3 Defendants

A Lackey man pleaded guilty in Floyd Circuit Court Monday to three assault charges stemming from an auto collision at Eastern a year ago. On a recommendation from Commonwealth's Attorney James Allen, Circuit Judge Hollie Conley sentenced him to seven years in prison on each count, the terms to be concurrent.

In other plea bargains this week, a Minnie youth received a four-year sentence after pleading guilty to a reduced charge of reckless homicide and a Martin man was sentenced to concurrent terms of seven and five years after pleading guilty on seven counts.

Anthony Wade Watkins, 21, was charged after the van he was driving crossed the median on new KY 80 and struck a car driven by Franklin Pack near the Allen Central High School exit, last Nov. 30. Both drivers and two passengers in Pack's car, Maureen Hensley and Todd Duff, were injured in the accident.

Pack and Mrs. Hensley, teachers at Wayland grade school where the 12-year-old Duff was a student, were bringing him for treatment of an ankle injury in the whirlpool bath at Allen Central when the accident occurred. The boy was flown to UK Medical Center with multiple injuries and was for some time listed in critical condition.

Watkins was said by police to have been drinking prior to the wreck. In urging Judge Conley to impose no heavier sentence than that recommended by the Commonwealth—each count carried a possible 10-year penalty—Public Defender Ned Pillersdorf said his client has been seeking treatment for alcoholism.

The year Watkins has already spent in jail will be counted as part of his sentence, the judge ruled.

Barry Dean Moore, 19, of Minnie, pleaded guilty to a charge of reckless homicide resulting from an accident on Left Beaver Creek, April 29 last year, in which his pickup collided with a car driven by Parcella Collins, then 39, of East Point. Mrs. Collins died in the accident.

The victim was en route to her uncle's wake when Moore reportedly swung too wide as he rounded a curve and met her car head-on.

Moore was initially indicted on a second-degree manslaughter charge. He has been free on bond pending trial.

Johnny McKinney, of Martin, was sentenced to seven years Tuesday after (See Story No. 7, Page 4)

Special Judge Sought In Trial of Lafferty

Prompted by the complainant's attorney, District Judge Harold Stumbo last week disqualified himself and asked for appointment of a special judge in the trial of Thomas Lafferty, Sr. on charges of harrasing and assaulting a news reporter in March.

The charges stem from an alleged altercation involving Lafferty and Courier-Journal reporter R.G. Dunlop in the parking lot of the courthouse here.

In a Nov. 28 letter, Dunlop's attorney, James R. Higgins, Jr. of the Louisville law firm of Wyatt, Tarrant and Combs, reminded Judge Stumbo that he had not yet disqualified himself or filed for appointment of a special judge in the case, even though the judge indicated his intention of doing so in September.

In a Nov. 30 order, Stumbo cites his relationship with Lafferty, whom he appointed Trial Commissioner in August, as his reason for stepping down.

Child's Curiosity May Lead to Tragedy

A child's delight in tree decorations, pine wreaths, and wrapping paper highlight the season's joys for many families. But a child's curiosity and excitement can lead to holiday tragedy.

Dr. George Rodgers, medical director for the Kentucky Regional Poison Center of Kosair-Children's Hospital, reminds parents about some of the following common dangers during this holiday season.

Colorful berries on the boxwood shrub, Christmas berry tree, hollies, mistletoe, and Jerusalem cherry plant are very harmful if chewed or swallowed. Ivy and Christmas rose plants are also toxic if ingested. Symptoms may include burning of the mouth or skin, nausea, abdominal pain, muscle weakness, convulsions, severe diarrhea and, in some cases, respiratory failure.

Pines may be harmful, but children will probably not swallow sufficient amounts to produce symptoms because of the plant's harsh consistency.

While everyone enjoys the beauty of holiday plants, a careful explanation of their dangers to children may save a young person's life.

Any glass, plastic or styrofoam ornament poses a danger if swallowed. Fragments may become lodged in the throat or lungs.

Other decorations, such as "angel hair" and bubble lights, pose special problems if chewed or swallowed. "Angel hair" is spun glass which may damage the eyes or the intestines, and irritate the skin.

Bubble lights are glass bulbs filled with ethyl alcohol, ethyl ether, or methylene chloride. All of these liquids are very dangerous if swallowed.

Some decorations, however, are not toxic if swallowed. Ingestion of natural and synthetic candle wax, and plastic or aluminium tinsel are usually not harmful.

After children examine decorations with adult supervision, place those decorations out of a child's reach.

Liquors and colognes intrigue children in a special way at holidays. Children easily reach these gifts left open under the Christmas tree, on a table top, or in a low cabinet. But ingestion of even a moderate amount of alcohol by a small child is potentially serious and usually requires immediate treatment.

Symptoms related to alcohol ingestion include nausea, vomiting, respiratory failure, and muscular incoordination. Colognes and liquors should be kept out of a child's reach at all times.

Dr. Rodgers also reminds parents to dispose of the remnants of alcoholic beverages which might attract curious children.

Questions or problems concerning holiday poisoning hazards should be directed to the Kentucky Regional Poison Center of Kosair-Children's Hospital, said Dr. Rodgers. The Center receives calls 24 hours a day, seven days a week, including holidays.

The toll free number in Kentucky is 1-800-722-5725. The Louisville metropolitan number is 589-8222.

WHAT IS AN EPITAPH?

Generally, an epitaph is a phrase or verse inscribed upon a tombstone or marker. It frequently is indicative of the deceased's wit, character, philosophy, occupation or personality.

Fifty famous literary and theatrical persons of the day were asked to write their own epitaphs by a popular magazine in the mid-twenties, "Vanity Fair." Among the responses were these examples of epitaphs with a humorous twist:

Here lies
W. C. FIELDS
"I would rather be living in Philadelphia"

JASCHA HEIFETZ
"Killed in action by a flying staccato"
"Age, 23 years, 7 months, 30 days.
So, here are lying his remains;
No more concerts, no more trains."

"Here lies the body of
HARRY HIRSCHFIELD
If not—notify Ginsberg
undertakers, at once."

Epitaphs can be serious, sad or perfectly factual, by giving dates and family relationships, such as this example:

"GEORGE STONE
1910-1978
Loving father, devoted grandfather, loved by all who knew him."

Here's Looking at You, Kids

By INK MENDELSON
Smithsonian News Service

People have been stargazing for thousands of years. Once, all too briefly, the stars gazed back. Garbo, Gable, Dietrich, Davis, Crawford, Tracy, Hepburn and Grant gazed at the world from millions of 8x10 glamour glossies produced by the movie studios in Hollywood's Golden Era.

The heavenly Hollywood fraternity focused its attention and energy on us in the 1920s, '30s and '40s and drew us inexorably into its orbit. As motion picture actors, they had been taught to avoid the camera's seductive eye, to be oblivious to the audience. "But the still portraits were different from the movies," photographer Ted Allan points out. Allan, who photographed such stars as Joan Harlow, Jimmy Stewart, Spencer Tracy and Carole Lombard in the 1930s, explains, "In those photographs the stars appealed to the viewer, saying 'love me, love me.'"

Photographic portraits of the stars were produced, and endlessly reproduced, filling the clamorous demands of newspapers, magazines and devoted fans. Studio publicity departments measured the pictures' worth in pounds. Portrait photographer Laszlo Willinger recalls his first day at MGM: "The head of the publicity department asked me, 'How many pounds of negatives have you done?' Paramount released more than 1,700 portraits of Carole Lombard alone during her years with the studio. Still pictures kept the lights-camera-action world of moving pictures rolling. Yet, the studio portrait photographers who created the original prints were, for years, in the darkroom of public awareness. They have come into the light with the help of "Hollywood Portrait Photographers 1921-1941," an exhibition organized by New York City's Museum of Modern Art with the collaboration of collector John Kobal.

The Hollywood show, based on Kobal's extensive collection of original photographs and negatives, was a smash hit when it played the Smithsonian's National Portrait Gallery in Washington, D.C. "It was our most popular show—ever," William Stapp, the museum's curator of photographs, reports. As many as 5,000 visitors a day, elbow to elbow in the gallery's elegant halls, looked at the stars. And from original prints, some newly made from old negatives by the photographers themselves, the stars returned the compliment.

Now the stars, as stars will, have moved on. "Hollywood Portrait Photographers 1921-1950" has opened in Paris at the Centre Culturel du Marais and will travel to Venice, Florence and Milan in the next two years. In the expanded continental version of the show, a subtitle should not be necessary for one photograph—a portrait of the current president of the United States. In the 1939 photograph by Scotty Welbourne, Ronald Reagan looks, John Kobal says, "like the guy a mother is baking her apple pie for. Ronald Reagan was always your archetypal boy next door," he notes, "a good-looking, small-town guy whom everybody liked, but nobody's fool."

The public's affection for a particular screen personality meant business at the box office. And so, in the 1920s, the studios began to build a multi-million dollar industry on a foundation of stardust. Studios like MGM and Paramount established publicity departments designed to turn contract players into stars. The lead role in this drama fell to the photographers hired by the studios to create glamorous images of their "properties." What was a "glamorous" image? "It had a lot to do with sex appeal," Stapp comments. "These were manipulative images, let's face it."

And face it the Hollywood portrait photographers did. "They were extremely successful in using the close-up to achieve maximum dramatic effect," Stapp says. Willinger, who had photographed psychiatric greats Jung and Freud in Europe, was not fazed by proximity to—as the MGM publicity department boasted—"More Stars Than There Are In Heaven." "Our objective was to make a totally idealized, larger-than-life figure of the stars on which the whole system was built," Willinger recalls.

Willinger, Allan and their colleagues—Ruth Harriet Louise, Ernest Bachrach, Clarence Sinclair Bull, Eugene R. Richee, William Walling Jr., Robert Coburn, Scotty Welbourne and George Hurrell—were trusted and treasured by the stars. Lillian Gish says of Louise, the rabbi's daughter who at age 19 had her own MGM portrait gallery in 1925. "Her photographs were magnificent. I took orders from her as I would have from D.W. Griffith." Before Greta Garbo became a legend, Louise photographed the young actress, a vulnerable newcomer to America, and developed a great rapport with her.

Joan Crawford so trusted her longtime photographer, George Hurrell, that she allowed him to photograph her—freckles flying all over her face—without makeup. Makeup was unnecessary to Hurrell's artistry. He painted the faces of Harlow, Shearer, Lombard and Gable with light and shadow. Photographing the stars with little or no makeup soon became standard practice. Bette Davis, the very essence of a star, today pays Hurrell a supreme compliment: "A great deal of my fame was a result of the great portraits taken of me by George Hurrell."

Katharine Hepburn is just as enthusiastic about the portrait photographers. "Wasn't I lucky to be photographed by these two romantic fellows (Bull and Bachrach)—and what fun it always was! What a way to be remembered." Hepburn praised one of their special talents to John Kobal: "These men, my God! These men are responsible for covering up a lot of faults in a lady's face."

It didn't matter that Harlow had a cleft in her chin, Lombard a scar, Dietrich stubby fingers, Shearer close-set eyes and Gable generous ears. The photographers and the retouchers used their magic to remove visible "defects." The retouchers whisked away warts and wrinkles, straightened teeth, lengthened necks and whittled waists. Entire human beings were remade into the Hollywood ideal of virile men and beautiful women.

Robert Taylor had to be "roughened up," Kobal says, "because he was more beautiful than his leading ladies." Taylor was sent to a gym to build his muscles, taught to ride horses and photographed smoking a pipe and wearing heavy cardigans.

Rita Hayworth's metamorphosis from a 19-year-old pudgy brunette to a "35-year-old" sylphlike strawberry-blond "love goddess" took only one year, thanks to the studio makeup men and the magic of portrait photography. But "Gilda" (1946), the love goddess, was a difficult role for an ordinary mortal to play, day in, day out. Hayworth has said of the partners in her failed marriages, "They all married Gilda, but they woke up with me."

Hayworth hated being photographed. Joan Crawford had a "passion for posing." Clark Gable, James Cagney, Gary Cooper, Humphrey Bogart and Spencer Tracy considered it "sissy stuff." Dietrich once said her still photographs were more important to her than her films. She was, according to William Walling, Jr., "strictly all business. At her request, a full-length mirror alongside the camera permitted her to light and pose herself."

"Jean Harlow was a natural," Ted Allan recalls, "but she was self-conscious in front of a camera with no dialogue. The faster you shot, the better she liked it." From Spencer Tracy, Allan learned the true meaning of fast shooting. "He only gave you 15 minutes." On one occasion, Tracy was having his hair curled for portraits publicizing his role in Captains Courageous (1937). With only one side of his head finished, Tracy became impatient and threw the curling iron across the room. Allan had to shoot him in profile.

It wasn't easy being a star. "It was a 24-hour-a-day job to stay on top," Laszlo Willinger emphasizes. "Joan Crawford was a star. She knew the names of all the presidents of her fan clubs and sent them Christmas cards." To keep her appointments with Willinger at the studio, she rode in a limousine—across the street. "Clark Gable once told me," Willinger recalls, "I have a recurring nightmare: I wake up one morning and I'm back driving trucks."

"Today the star system of the '30s and '40s is dead; television has made everyone so very familiar," the Smithsonian's Stapp says. Familiar is exactly what a star didn't want to be. Loretta Young puts it this way: "I was never photographed in the kitchen. Ever. I'm a movie star. I don't know how to cook. I do 'ke to cook.'"

Glamour—the quality of fascinating by charm and good looks—is a Scottish word once meaning the power to cast a magic spell. In Hollywood today, the spell has been broken. Filmmakers, nowadays, don't bother to wave away life's warts. Machines, spaceships and computers have inherited the magic that once belonged to Garbo and Gable. "I've just been asked to do a glamour portrait of a computer," Ted Allan reports.

Just the same, in the brilliance of the electronic dawn, it's kind of nice to know that, occasionally, we can still exchange gazes with the stars. So, here's looking at you, kids.

More Telephone Users Using Measured Service

A growing number of Prestonsburg area telephone users are paying less than they used to for local phone service—and South Central Bell is helping them get away with it, according to Art Willett, Bell manager.

These folks are taking advantage of Bell's optional Measured Service.

"Measured Service is a good way for people who don't use the phone much—or those willing to control their calling—to save money," said Willett. "More than 650 homes and businesses in the Prestonsburg area are saving with Measured Service already, and the number is growing."

Bell has two Measured Service options to choose from, Willett said. Standard Measured Service offers a 25 percent discount from the flat rate, and includes $4.50 worth of local calls at no extra charge. This equals nearly three hours worth of typical calls to nearby numbers. Home customers could save more than $34 a year with this plan. (Business customers can also choose Standard Measured Service, with $7.50 worth of local calls, and could save more than $87 a year.)

Bell's Low-Use Measured Service option offers a 50 percent discount, with additional charges for each outgoing local call. "You could save more than $68 a year with Low-Use service," Willett said. "It's tailor-made for folks who keep a phone mostly for emergencies and to receive calls."

"Measured Service isn't for everybody—especially folks who make a lot of local calls," he added. "But it's an excellent way for people who use the phone less to pay less."

Measured Service discounts apply only to the local service portion of the phone bill, and don't include charges for telephones, long distance calls, or mileage charges. You can change to Measured Service for free, Willett said, and if you find it's not for you, Bell will switch you back for free.

People wanting to know more about Measured Service should call—toll free—1-745-5042.

these places Saturday nights, but they haven't turned out to be the economic boom that people expected," he said.

A much-publicized plan to prosecute drunk drivers vigorously, including routine monitoring to weed out repeat offenders, never amounted to anything, the county attorney acknowledged. He has not noticed any increase in alcohol-related offenses since the county went wet, he said.

Some problems persist, however, and they might be better known if state ABC authorities were more serious about policing licensed premises here, Turner said. The state agency appeared to take no action on several complaints referred to it by his office, the county attorney said.

Leslie E. Cole, supervisor for the ABC board's eastern district, denied Turner's charge. "We have continuing investigations going on as a result of one allegation or another," said Cole, citing current probes into charges that one Floyd licensee has been doing business on Sunday and that another has unlawfully leased out his premises.

His office has received three complaints during the year alleging sales of alcohol to minors, Cole said. "We have followed through on each case. We have tried to make a case, using undercover agents. So far, we have not been successful," the state official said.

In another case, involving complaints by neighbors of excessive noise at The Warehouse, an Auxier nightclub, Cole said he had recently met with the complainants in an effort to resolve the problem there.

On the question of who has primary responsibility for enforcing liquor laws here, Cole and Turner differ. "They have the personnel and the statutory authority; they should be the 'first line' of regulation," County Attorney Turner said of the state ABC agency. But county and city ABC administrators have the same enforcement authority that he has, as well as being "on the spot," Cole argues.

In fact, criminal or administrative action against licensees on the part of either state or local officials has been a rarity here. Shortly after its conversion from a skating rink, The Warehouse, which is managed by Mike and Rita Wells, was cited for operating without a county beer license. Cloyd and Joanne Elliott, proprietors of CJ's Carryout at Price, paid a $100 fine following conviction in district court for preventing a sheriff's deputy from serving a subpoena on one of their patrons in January. The state ABC board later imposed a similar fine for the same offense.

But state ABC agent Cole acknowledged that investigations by his office have yet to result in a single criminal or administrative action against a Floyd licensee. A hearing conducted last week by Floyd ABC Administrator Denzil Allen on a complaint that a Harold retailer sold beer to two Betsy Layne students (see accompanying story) was the county official's first full scale administrative action. And Prestonsburg ABC Administrator Paul P. Burchett said he has never even received a formal complaint against any licensee.

Sheriff Henry Hale said he believes there are fewer drunk drivers on the road since the county went wet. Moreover, requiring that taverns meet health and fire department standards has insured that "no hole-in-the-wall" is licensed, he said.

The reason for their relative inactivity is simple, say the regulators: by and large, licensees here are obeying the law. "I am well pleased with what I see (in Floyd county)," said Cole. "Complaints have been almost nil."

"It has been pretty quiet and calm. Personally, I can't tell much difference (since the county went wet)," said Burchett. Allen agreed: "For a county with over 80 establishments, we've not had a lot of problems," he said. And Sheriff Hale said, "I think it's going awful good."

Even Turner, who said he would not want to appear to support the return of liquor stores here, acknowledged that "all in all, it has been fairly good."

"We've had no serious problems," he said. "Maybe we underestimated how civil eastern Kentuckians are."

FROM CRIDER BRANCH TO KEY WEST

It's a rather small world, indeed. My son, who owns, or is owned by, a Bluetick hound, was driving recently through Key West, Fla., when he espied ahead something that was almost incredible.

There before him were two rather sedate, stylishly dressed women, and one had a dog on a leash. That brought on a double-take. Could his eyes be deceiving him?

"It's got to be a Bluetick that's on that leash!" he exclaimed. He drew alongside and made discreet inquiry.

"Yes," the woman quietly remarked, "he's a full-stock Bluetick—and the best dog I've ever owned."

But, somehow, the pelicans, herons and seagulls that wheeled overhead didn't belong to the picture. A coon up a palm tree and the hound rippin' and snortin' at the base thereof would have been more appropriate.

THAT'S WHO GOT IT

One of the early ghost stories that turned my body into a goosepimple patch was the one in which the little girl ghost went her wailing rounds, wanting to know, "Who's got my big toe?"

Now, they've modernized the story. It seems that in this one the little girl by some magical circumstance had a Golden Arm and by foul circumstance had lost it. Then she went on her eerie search. It leads toward a room where several children had gathered.

Thump! A tread on the stairway, and a thin, ghostly voice quavered: "Who's got my golden arm?"

Silence. Then thump! A rap at the door, and the voice again:

"Who's got my golden ar-r-m?"

Moments later, the door swings open. "Who's got—"

But these youngsters aren't scared. They know the answers.

"Wrong number, little girl," they chorus. "We know where your golden arm is—the I.R.S. got it!"

month's sentence for shoplifting, was found hanging by a belt from cell bars Nov. 22. No autopsy was ordered at the time and Deputy Coroner Glenn Frazier, who handled the case in Nelson's absence on a deer-hunting trip, ruled in a preliminary report that the death was an apparent suicide.

His deputy performed "a good post-mortem" and had no reason to order an autopsy because there were no bruises or scratches on the victim's body or anything else to suggest foul play, Nelson said.

But Attorney Johnson expressed surprise that no autopsy had been done at the time, in view of the fact that Miss Tackett was scheduled to appear later as a government witness in the trial of a companion on an assault charge. "Even if there was no apparent opportunity for foul play, the fact that there was a motive should have led to an inquiry," the attorney said.

Miss Tackett and C.B. Hall faced assault charges following the shooting in June of a pregnant Knott county woman whose fetus died of its injuries. Tackett was released from Knott County Jail in October after agreeing to testify for the Commonwealth in that case, Johnson said.

Although she talked several times to members of her family the day of her death, she never expressed any thoughts about taking her own life, the attorney said.

Mixed in with various grievances drawn up by nine inmates at the Floyd jail was a claim that Tackett "did not take her own life...It was taken from her by person or persons unknown. There were approximately 10 inmates that heard the lady scream for help."

Clyde Douglas Marshall, described by Jailer Lawrence Hale as the chief author of the jailhouse petition, refused to take a polygraph examination but he was himself going to take the lie-detector test Monday, the jailer said.

Johnson said he will ask for a coroner's inquest, once the autopsy results are available.

An Allen youth, David G. Holbrook, was given a year's probation and fined $100 for illegal use of a blue light on his car.

Despite a relatively high breathalyzer (BA) reading, a drunk driving charge against Tivis Neely, of Huesville, was reduced to public intoxication at the request of the Sheriff's Department. A $20 fine was levied. In addition, the defendant was fined $10 for driving without a license.

Under Kentucky law, intoxication is presumed on the basis of a BA reading of .10 percent or greater. Neely registered .26 percent, according to a police report.

A drunk driving charge against Rocky R. Adams, of Minnie, listed as registering .18 on the breathalyzer, was amended to disorderly conduct. Adams, who was also convicted of speeding, was fined $10 and ordered to attend state traffic school.

Convicted of drunk driving were: Delbert D. Mullins, Martin, BA .21 percent, ordered to pay $137.50 in fine and court costs and referred to alcoholic driver education (ADE); Randy A. Hamilton, Beaver, .25, $137.50, ADE; Willis Akers, Dana, .31, 30 days' probation, $200.50; Bobby Gene Burchett, Ivel, .21, $137.50, ADE; Emma Jean Hall, Galveston, .17, $137.50, state traffic school; Johnny R. Prater, Garrett, second offense, 12 months' probation, $147.50; Franklin Keel, Auxier, $147.50, ADE.

Others sentenced, following guilty pleas or verdicts, were: Kenneth Akers, Galveston, carrying a concealed weapon, $62.50; Charles Newsome, Prestonsburg, criminal mischief, resisting arrest, terroristic threatening, 12 months' probation, $257.50; Paul D. Foley, Prestonsburg, no cover on load, $37.50, state traffic school.

no complaint of sales to minors implies one of two things. Either things are awfully good out there or they are not looking very hard. I think it's the latter," he said.

The regulatory agencies should not merely respond to complaints but should actively test beer and liquor retailers by sending minors in to make purchases, the county attorney said. "It's like speeding," he explained. "The state police don't wait for people to make a complaint. They go out there with a radar."

Both state police and ABC officials said it is not their policy to use minors as decoys.

HEALTH LINE

By Ernest Chick, M.D.

Tetanus or "lockjaw," fortunately, is not a common disease: it strikes only about 500 persons in the United States each year. However, when it does occur it can be painful and sometimes even fatal.

Bacteria living in soil and dust cause tetanus, and people with outdoor activities at home, farm or work run a higher-than-normal risk of tetanus (so do children, pregnant women and the elderly). Obviously, those of us in this area especially must make sure we have been immunized against this disease.

Preventing tetanus is easy and inexpensive. You need two or three shots initially (young children get this in their DPT shots), another dose one year later and then a booster every 10 years.

Easy? You bet. And tetanus isn't a disease you want to play around with.

The bacteria enter the soil from animal droppings. When the bacteria enter the body—usually through a deep or puncture-type wound—they start making a poison which acts on the nervous system. If you have been immunized, your body can kill off the bacteria before they do any harm.

It's only common sense to see your doctor as soon as possible for nail puncture wounds or gunshot wounds, which carry the greatest risk of tetanus. This is especially true if they are contaminated with soil, bits of cloth or other materials. In addition to cleaning the wound, your doctor may want to give you an antitetanus shot.

Tetanus can also result from seemingly minor injuries, so it's important to know the symptoms: stiffness in the neck and jaw, muscle spasms and even convulsions. These can appear anywhere between four days and three weeks after the injury. Obviously, you should see your doctor immediately.

Treatment includes giving a booster anti-tetanus shot or even special antitoxin. During an attack, sedatives are given to prevent convulsions. The patient is kept in a dark, quiet room, away from drafts, noises or anything else which may trigger the convulsions. Antibiotics are sometimes needed to treat infection. Fluids and nourishment are usually given intravenously.

Clearly, this disease is one you can do without. So make sure you're immunized, see your doctor for any deep or especially dirty wound, and seek help early if you see the tetanus warning signs.

LETTERS To the Editor

The views expressed here are those of the writers, and not necessarily those of this newspaper. No unsigned contributions will be published.

On the Kennedy Visit

The recent editorials on the Eastern Kentucky visit of Senator Edward Kennedy which speculate on the real motives of the visit and express dismay about the conveyed image of our area, should make us think about ourselves.

This is, as some of us may recall, the season when our hearts should be full of "good will toward man." How quick we are to forget the needs of others when our own needs are satisfied!

Those of us who are fortunate enough to have comfortable homes and steady jobs should take Senator Kennedy's example and spend a few hours exploring the area in a four-wheel drive. Hopefully, there are a few of us who wouldn't be surprised to find that there are still areas of the county that can only be reached in a four-wheel drive, if at all. There are still paths thru the hills that lead to little log cabins. There are still people who live in houses without the "conveniences" of indoor plumbing or modern heating, and still children who walk to the mouth of the hollow to catch the school bus.

The Mud Creek Clinic is one of two federally funded clinics in a five-county area which treats 50-60 indigent patients per day. To insinuate that Senator Kennedy's visit was "orchestrated" to boost the Senator's image is a bit callous.

As to whether Senator Kennedy thinks there are poor people in Boston, the answer is rather obvious. The Senator not only visited Appalachia but also visited Detroit, San Francisco, Pittsburgh and Minneapolis. In these places, he met people who came not only to see "the distinguished senator from Massachusetts" but also had a message to send back to their government in Washington.

In a time when our President tells us about "limited nuclear conflict," "windows of vulnerability," and "our recovering economy"—when the city of New York spends federally funded money to paste pictures of happy comfortable homes on the windows of buildings in the slums to improve the image of the city—when record amounts of the taxpayers' money is being spent on defense—there are people out there who are wondering if their government has forgotten them.

Would Ron Marstin or Linda Neice Lyon have been more satisfied if Senator Huddleston had driven down Arnold Avenue in Prestonsburg to ask the people there what they thought about poverty in America?

Season's greetings!

BARB HALE

Glad Kennedy Came

Ron Marstin's recent commentary on Senator Kennedy's visit made interesting reading. Unfortunately, it had nothing to do with reality.

I find it incredible that Mr. Marstin could criticize the visit on the grounds that Senator Kennedy "knew exactly what he would find here." Assuming this to be true, is there anything wrong with publicizing the plight of those less fortunate?

Senator Kennedy's record is one of caring for those who have less. Unlike our current President, Senator Kennedy understands the very real problems of hunger and poverty that still exist. If his visit did nothing more than remind others of this basic truth, I'm glad he came.

'No Room' for This Gift

A wonderful gift was given to Prestonsburg this past Sunday, but, like the first Christmas, only a few were attentive enough to discover its importance. I am speaking of the presentation of Handel's Messiah by the Community Chorus at Prestonsburg Community College.

The Messiah is a musical treasure that is enjoyed around the world during the Advent season. Singers from Prestonsburg, Paintsville, and surrounding areas work for months to prepare its lovely choruses and solos. Its message is for all Christians—indeed, for all people—at this time of the year. Yet, again this year, the crowd that came to hear the music was disappointing. Are we so involved in family and parochial concerns of our own that we miss one of the finest cultural opportunities and inspirational services available to us in this area? Is the arrival of Santa Claus the only meaning of Christmas we wish to pass on to our children? Is it not the coming of Messiah for which we wait?

It is especially unfortunate that we found "no room" in our schedule for this musical treat when the college is celebrating 20 years among us as a good neighbor that always is offering us outstanding things to enjoy that will enrich our lives. But, like any gift, we have to receive it if we are to enjoy it. We hope there will be more takers another time for this "giveaway" of artistic beauty that money cannot buy.

Have enjoyed our many Floyd County friends since May, but in the near future plan to follow the birds south for another six months. The Lord willing, will resume our good, old mountain living again next spring.

CANDLE NUMBER THREE

THIRD SUNDAY IN ADVENT

Were you there for lighting of the First Advent Candle—The Candle of Hope? Did your heart feel the hope for this world as that young family read together the scripture and lit the candle?

How about the Candle of Preparation? Are we preparing ourselves more for a commercial Christmas—forgetting the true meaning of Christ's birthday?

The Candle of Joy, the third candle, symbolizes our joy for the coming of Christ.

Joy comes in so many ways, such as the joy of a small child as his or her eyes spy the jolly little man in the red suit, the joy of hearing the carolers as their songs tell us of the coming again of Christ.

The joy of knowing that we are free to attend the church of our choice, to participate in the lighting of the Advent Candles and to sing hymns expressing our hope for the future, because we know God sent his only begotten son into this world to prepare the way that we might have eternal life.

Hope to see you in church Sunday for the lighting of the third Advent Candle—The Candle of Joy.

Visit Computer Laboratory

Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr. (left), director of Prestonsburg Community College, and Dr. Charles T. Wethington, chancellor of the University of Kentucky Community College System, are pictured in a recent inspection of the P.C.C. computer laboratory.

Due to the popularity of computer science classes at the college, the Laboratory has been expanded to include 25 mini-computers. This semester, 293 students were enrolled in computer science classes. More students would have enrolled, but the college was obliged to limit class size because of the lack of computers.

Child's Hospital Stay Needn't Be Traumatic

A child's hospital visit can be traumatic for the child, brothers, sisters, and parents. The unfamiliar faces of doctors, nurses, and technicians, the strange equipment, and sometimes painful procedures can leave a frightening lifetime impression.

But it doesn't have to happen. At Kosair-Children's Hospital in Louisville, a pre-admission program takes some of the sting out of hospital treatment for children.

"It's a non-threatening way to introduce children to the hospital," explains Patient Educator Kathy Nugent. "Children have so many fears, and sometimes parents have misconceptions."

Children get a preview of the hospital in a film narrated by public television's Mr. Rogers. Then a tour of Kosair-Children's Hospital is tailored to the special problems of the children.

A child scheduled for surgery, for example, tours the children's Teddy Bear room (pre-op), pediatric X-ray, and one of the nursing unit rooms on the third floor of the building.

After the tour, the children are invited to give "pretend shots and take blood pressure" on large, soft dolls while a nurse takes the parents to another room to answer their questions.

"The parents get a chance to ask questions privately, while the children enjoy putting their hands on the equipment," says Ms. Nugent.

At the end of the hour-and-a-half program, the children receive a hospital coloring book and a certificate.

A committee of nurses designed the program. Hospital volunteers and other staff members help with particular segments of the orientation. Brochures have been sent to pediatricians' and surgeons' offices. Parents interested in the program can register for one of the sessions by calling Kathy Nugent at 502 562-7335.

"Nutcracker" Slated At Pikeville College

Over the years people have come to associate the Pikeville College dance program with grand-scale productions of classic ballet. That began about three years ago when the Pikeville College dancers began its annual year-end practice of performing Tchaikovsky's Christmas classic "The Nutcracker".

Matinee performances for the 1983 production are scheduled for December 7 and 8 at 9 a.m. in Faith Chapel with evening showings on tap for December 9 and 10 at 7:30 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at the door.

Little Inn Now Open in Lexington

One of Lexington's oldest and most popular restaurants, the Little Inn, has recently undergone a $100,000 renovation and is now open for business at 1144 Winchester Road.

The historic Little Inn, first opened in 1930, has been widely known as "Kentucky's oldest prime rib house."

The new co-partners are Thomas J. Gullett, chairman of the Commonwealth Tire Co., Lexington; George H. Helton, a Frankfort accountant; Bill Malicote and John Martin, partners in the Famous Recipe restaurants in Lexington.

Gullett, a former Paintsville and Winchester resident, said, "We are looking forward to the return of the Little Inn's many, many steady customers from throughout central and eastern Kentucky. Our extensive remodeling has created a pleasant atmosphere and our goal is to provide food which is equal to that of the past when the Little Inn was one of the most popular restaurants in Kentucky."

William Douglas served on the Supreme Court for 36 years—longer than any other justice in history.

RICHMOND PLAZA,

DISCOLORED TEETH

Q. Can anything be done about grey-color teeth?

A. Unfortunately, not much! Infection-fighting antibiotics given to children when primary or secondary teeth are forming in the gums combine with calcium and are quickly incorporated in the dentine, the bonelike core of the tooth directly below the enamel. This shows through the thin enamel and produces a stain—tints of grey, yellow, brown or black. These antibiotics, primarily tetracyclines, have many different trade names.

There is no simple treatment for teeth discolored in this way, but researchers are working on finding one. External bleaching has been used; it works fairly well with teeth discolored from other causes, and does help the yellow and brown tetracycline stains. The grey and black stains resist bleaching. Also, stains sometimes return. Plastic materials bonded to the teeth have helped to mask discoloration, but the coating wears off and must be reapplied. Capping can be done for those over age 21, but this is a drastic treatment.

THE BOLDMAN BRIDGE, under construction since this summer, is not expected to be complete for a year. This week, however, pillars on which the new span will rest were complete, and loads of rock and dirt were being trucked. The wooden bridge which has served the community and a heavy flow of traffic for many years can be seen in the background.

Food Stamp Program Automation Delayed

The Kentucky Cabinet for Human Resources has announced a delay in start up of the first phase of the state's automated food stamp program. At the same time, cabinet officials emphasized that the delay will have no negative impact on or result in delays in delivery of the stamps to eligible recipients.

Human Resources Secretary Buddy Adams said, "Wednesday, Nov. 30, this cabinet was notified by the Electronic Data Systems, Inc. that the company would not be able to meet the Dec. 1 start up date for operation of the certification portion of the new food stamp system. Representatives of EDS, Inc. informed this office that the delay is due to significant operational and technical problems involving system testing and computer hardware capabilities."

Adams said, "This delay will in no way create any problems for regular delivery of food stamps to eligible clients and the Department for Social Insurance will continue to operate the existing system for the time being. This delay has not resulted in any expenditure of state funds, as no payments are to be made under terms of the contract until after the system is operational. The original contract and price agreed to by EDS has not been altered."

Adams said officials of the cabinet and the Brown administration met today with representatives of EDS to discuss the next step in keeping the delay as short as possible and bringing the system on-line. "EDS will present to this cabinet by Thursday, Dec. 8, a plan acceptable to the state and a timetable for alleviating the current problems and making the certification portion of the program operational," Adams said. "In the meantime, EDS will continue its developmental testing of the system by bringing Franklin County on line as of Monday morning, Dec. 5. At a later date, additional counties may also be brought on line as part of the increased testing process."

DIAMONDS

There is a difference in the quality of diamonds.

Are you buying diamond rings at what you think are wholesale or discount prices?

When economic times get tough, a number of predictable things happen. One very unpleasant fact is that too many retailers or so-called retailers or "wholesaler-retailers" take advantage of consumers' genuine desire and/or need for a bargain to cheat them blind. This is politely called deceptive pricing. In fact, it's stealing.

What these so-called discounters are doing is taking very cheap quality diamonds and marking them up two or three times more than what they are worth. Then they put them on sale and usually you pay more than what the ring is worth to begin with.

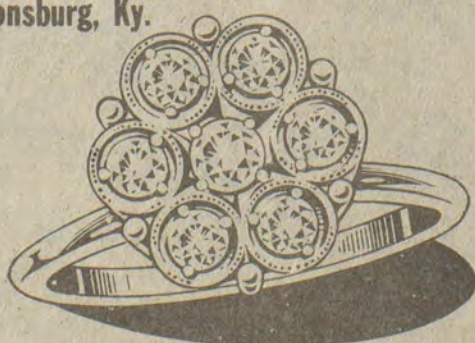

If you want to buy diamonds at a fair price and be told the truth about what you are buying, come to Earl Castle's Jewelry in Prestonsburg, Ky.

Buying a Computer? Choose It Carefully

If a home computer is on your family's wish list this Christmas, you'd better help Santa choose the right one.

Buying a personal computer can be a trying experience, what with all the models and prices, the bits and bytes and other jargon the salespeople will toss around, and the shrill hype of the ads. Even the most savvy shopper can get discouraged.

So plan your purchase before you hit the computer store or electronics section of your favorite department store. Here are some questions to ask yourself and some pointers to help you evaluate computer systems and dealers, courtesy of the Committee on Computers in Extension in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. The committee is a group of Cooperative Extension Service specialists involved in recommending policies on using computers in statewide Extension programs.

Before investing in a personal computer system, you need a basic understanding of the technology of the computer industry. "Personal computers can be powerful tools, but they are designed to be used in highly individual ways," said Dr. Jo Ann Hilliker, Extension home economics specialist in the UK College of Agriculture, who is chairperson of the computer committee. "The more you know about how they work and what they can do, the easier it will be to match a system to your needs."

The best place to start: familiarize yourself with the terms used in the advertisements and by salespeople. Know what they mean by RAM and ROM, bits and bytes, floppy disks, ports, and modems. Then you can compare different brands of computers and evaluate the features of each.

Consider your own requirements carefully. What do you want to do with this new piece of technology—play games with the kids, balance your budget, keep records, write letters, use educational programs, or even link up to other computers?

"If you expect to play video games, for example, you will need a computer with color graphic capabilities," said Hilliker. "If word processing is your need, then high-quality text display is important." In general, evaluate capabilities rather than specific machines.

A computer's capabilities may not seem all that important as you rush to put one under the Christmas tree, but one that's inappropriate may present unexpected limitations later. Hilliker explained that the memory might not be enough for your needs and may not be expandable, the keyboard or the display might be inadequate, or the software you might want to use later may not be available for that computer.

Take memory, for instance. Referred to as RAM and ROM, memory is measured by the "K" value, or the number of 1,024 units of memory available for use by a particular computer. "Avid computer buffs would soon outgrow computers with memory measured as 4K," Hilliker noted. "Many of the software packages on the market may require computers with memory of 64K."

After determining what you want to do with your computer, you'll have to balance your needs against your budget. Microcomputers can vary in price from "starters" at under $100 to machines with expanded capabilities and price tags well over $5,000.

Be forewarned that there are other expenses in addition to the cost of the basic hardware, since the computer is essentially only the memory aspect. You will need software, such as word processing packages or data base programs, and it can be expensive, so shop around. Some computers come equipped with software at no extra cost, and sometimes dealers throw in extra software when you buy a system from them. User groups and magazines also can be a source of inexpensive programs, so check out all available resources before you buy.

You'll need other equipment, too, including disk drives, storage disks or cassette tapes and a video monitor, and perhaps a printer, cables and paper. You may also want to budget for a book or two or a class to help you get started.

If you have a friend or business associate who already owns a personal computer, there are advantages to buying a similar system. You can share information, swap programs or data files, and help each other use your computers.

Deciding where to buy is as important as deciding what computer to buy. Most people need a dealer who can help them both before and after the sale. Hilliker said, "The person who can set up a working system for you is just as important as the specific hardware and software you choose. You want someone who will guarantee the computer and service it, if necessary."

A local retail microcomputer dealer who specializes in such equipment and stocks several brands is probably your best bet. That dealer can provide expertise, software support, training, a wide selection of books and accessories and repair facilities.

"Microcomputer dealers usually charge the retail price for computer systems or offer only a modest discount, so their prices may be higher than those of their 'discount' competitors," Hilliker noted. "But paying a little more may be worth it after the sale if you have questions or technical problems."

Find out about the dealer's policies concerning payment terms, delivery, repairs, replacement components, warranties and guarantees. Ask the salesperson to let you work with one of the computers, alone, on a program like a word processor or typing tutor that can demonstrate what the equipment will do.

Armed with a basic understanding of microcomputers, knowing your own requirements, and having found a dealer who can help you after the sale, you're ready to buy the system that's right for you.

HRMC Blood Drive Scheduled, Dec. 7

Highlands Regional Medical Center will sponsor a blood drive in the Inservice Classroom, Wednesday, December 7, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The HRMC Gift Shop, operated by the Ladies Auxiliary, has donated a gift for a drawing at the conclusion of the blood drive.
If you have never donated, there are a few things you should know: How the donation process works, what happens to the blood you give, and what benefits are available to donors.
When you visit a blood drive you are asked in confidence for information such as your name, address and telephone number. A brief medical history is taken to confirm you are eligible to donate. Next, you are given a mini-physical to check your temperature, blood pressure, pulse, weight and blood count. Then you are ready to donate. Your blood flows from a small needle in your arm into a plastic bag, taking about 5 to 10 minutes. Then you will relax with refreshments for a few minutes. The entire process takes less than one hour.
What happens to the blood you give? Your one pint of blood may help as many as three patients. It may be transfused to a surgery patient, someone with anemia or a leukemia patient.
The first step is to donate on December 7, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the HRMC In-Service Classroom.
For further information, call Billie Goble at 886-8511.

Four Blackcats Named to All-State Honorable Mention Team

Todd Nairn John DeRossett Brad Hughes Randall Hager

Four senior members of the Prestonsburg Blackcat football team have been named to the Courier-Journal's All-State Honorable Mention team for 1983. They are Todd Nairn, quarterback, John DeRossett, defensive back, Brad Hughes, receiver, and Randall Hager, defensive lineman. Nairn, DeRossett and Hughes were all named to the same team last year.

Boating Accidents Down From Last Year

Kentucky Water Patrol statistics show that 1983 has so far been the second best year on record in successful reduction of boating accidents and fatalities in the Blue Grass state.

"Our records show that drownings and boating accidents were reduced for the second straight year from long-term levels," said Water Patrol Director Larry Hatfield. "Even with this reduction, the numbers are still too high and we're going to work to see that 1984 figures are as low as possible."

In 1983, 17 boating fatalities and 71 non-boating water fatalities were reported in Kentucky, Water Patrol statistics showed. Statistics for 1982 listed 15 boating fatalities and 58 non-boating water fatalities. "While these totals are up for the last year, they are still much lower than our long-term records which indicate that in past years we often had as many as 36 boating fatalities," Hatfield said.

Hatfield said that between 50 and 60 percent of all Kentucky drownings this year involved alcohol or drugs, and that an estimated 40 percent of all boating accidents in the state could be attributed to these two factors.

"Drunken drivers on our waterways are just as dangerous, if not more so, than those on our highways," Hatfield said. "One of our main goals in the upcoming year will be to remove the drunk driver from the water. Alcohol and drugs don't mix with safe boating."

Water Patrol officials remind Kentuckians that though summer is past there are still many boaters on the Commonwealth's waters. They urge all boaters to be prepared for the colder air and water temperatures of the season. "During the winter you need to dress warmly whenever you're on the water and to wear your life preserver," Hatfield cautioned. "Stay with your boat should it capsize and use the boat to keep as much of your body out of the water as possible to avoid hypothermia, or rapid cooling of the body," he said.

"We would also like to remind all parents that this is the time of year when ponds, creeks and streams are freezing over and present a great temptation for children to play in or around," Hatfield added. "Don't let your child become one of our statistics—keep children away from these hazards when playing outdoors, or make sure that they are properly supervised."

Hatfield said that safety is the chief concern of the officers of the Division of Water Patrol. "But safety has to start with the boater and the water enthusiast. We'll help, but our statistics only show those lives we have missed, not those saved by our officers or because of safe boating procedures."

ROTC Scholarships Available at MSU

Those interested in studying physical science, business or social science may be eligible for an Army ROTC scholarship at Morehead State University.

Both two- and three-year full scholarships, which include the cost of books, tuition, fees and $100 monthly subsistence pay, are available.

Applicants must have a grade point average of at least 2.5, be a U.S. citizen, be 25 or younger upon graduation and be in good health.

Fifteen MSU students received such scholarships for the 1983-84 year, according to Lt. Col. Bruce Miller, professor of military science at MSU.

For more information, contact Miller at UPO 1361, Morehead, Ky. 40351. The telephone number is (606) 783-2050.

Mind Your Outdoor Manners

Whether or not you have a place to hunt next year could depend upon how well you mind your outdoor manners this season.

Chances are, you'll hunt on someone else's property. If you behave like a good guest should, the landowner will welcome you back next year. But if you act like a slob, don't be surprised if a big "posted" sign greets you when you return.

The most basic and fundamental act of good outdoor manners is asking permission to hunt, yet it's amazing how many hunters don't observe this simple courtesy. Entering the lands of another without permission is trespassing and could subject you to arrest.

With the amount of rural crime there is today, farmers need to know who is on their land, and why. A strange car parked beside the road might belong to a couple of hunters, but it could also be a get-away vehicle for someone lifting a tractor battery or siphoning gas.

The landowner who has to track you down on his property to see what you're up to isn't going to be in the best frame of mind and will probably chase you off. But if you had asked first, he most likely would have let you hunt on his place.

Once you do have permission to hunt on a particular piece of property, be extra careful that you don't abuse the privilege the landowner has granted you. If you drive onto his land, stay on the roads or trails and don't go cutting across plowed or soft ground just to see if your new mud tires really work.

And don't litter. Pick up the wrappers from your lunch and don't even leave spent shells lying around. In short, act like you are in your host's living room, not his back 40.

Leave gates the way you found them. In particular, don't carelessly leave a gate unlatched. The fellow who has spent a couple of hours rounding up his cattle isn't going to be exactly overjoyed the next time he sees the person who let the critters escape.

And speaking of gates, don't park your vehicle in front of one, then head off for a day's hunting. The reason there's a gate in that fence is so someone can get through, and that someone is generally the landowner with a load of feed for his stock or something equally pressing. If he has to sit there and wait for you to get back to your car before he can go on with his work, he's not going to spend the time thinking kind thoughts about hunters or about you.

It should go without saying that you'll be careful with firearms and won't endanger lives or property by careless gun handling or shooting. Remember that even a .22 bullet will travel over a mile and will ricochet off rocks or off the surface of water. Think about where that bullet might eventually end up before you pull the trigger.

Finally, don't put your mind in neutral. Just because you're on a holiday and out for a little recreation is no reason not to consider the consequences of your actions, not to think ahead a little. And the one thing you should think about constantly is how much good hunting land has been lost because someone didn't think about what he was doing or how his actions affect others or how they reflect upon the sport of hunting.

Nature Trails...

By RUFUS REED

"By Violence They Die"

I have often observed, said my nature study pal, Bob, that those wild armies which kill others by violence often have to die by violence.

"Thus nature pays them back for killing violently."

Then he related the following true story: "One spring I was fishing down on Sandy River. I was sitting on a big rock beside the river, casting my hook into the water. Suddenly as I sat there quietly fishing, I began to see small pieces of doty wood raining down nearby, and as I leaped up I saw a couple of flickers drilling a hole with the side of a hemlock snag."

"Nearby the flickers are called yellow hammers by some. They are large, handsome woodpeckers, very useful on the farm for devouring pests."

"They worked hard preparing their nest in the dead snag, which was about 60 feet tall."

In a short time they completed the hole, and the mother bird laid four eggs. These soon hatched out four baby flickers.

I became interested in this family of flickers and went fishing every day to see about them. Soon four baby flickers were sticking their heads out of the hole. What a busy time the parent birds had to feed four greedy young ones! They flew out constantly to capture insects to feed their young. And my, how they did grow!

I loved those baby flickers and sort of made myself responsible for their safety. So I went most everyday to see about them.

One day as I neared the nest I could tell that something had gone bad wrong while I was a way. The mother bird was circling around the nest crying pitifully. I soon saw what was wrong. When a large pilot blacksnake stuck his head out of the nest. That big snake climbed the tree and swallowed all four baby flickers. I never was so mad.

"Wish I had my rifle," I blurted out, "You beast!"

In a short while the big snake crawled out on a limb of the old tree and stretched out lazily as if to enjoy his sumptuous meal. I could see four bulges in his belly made by the birds he had swallowed. I tried to knock him down with rocks, but had no success. All I could do was to stand there and cuss that snake.

Suddenly, he began to move on the dead limb and a piece of loose bark under him gave away. Down he fell end over and landed on a great flat rock. I ran to stomp him to death, but I soon saw that was unnecessary. He had been gorged with the young flickers he had burst wide open when he landed on the rock. I saw the four baby flickers spill out. He had violently devoured them and by violence he had died!

'83 Hunting Season: So Far, So Good

The deer gun season and the opening of small game season across Kentucky have apparently provided Kentucky hunters with some good sport this fall. Preliminary figures obtained by a survey of conservation officers indicate that our deer herd continues to grow although at a slower pace than the past five years.

The news from the field on small game shows the predictable ups and downs you would expect from one locale to another. Things may change from now till the end of the season but early indications point to somewhat slower rabbit hunting in far western Kentucky. The counties surrounding metro Louisville in the third district can look forward to a noticeably better rabbit season if the trend established during the opening days continues. In much of the state it looks as if rabbit hunting will be on par with 1982 but in at least one section of eastern Kentucky developments may be producing a new generation of mountain rabbit hunters.

Even though it's early in the season and a lot can happen between now and season's end, the reclaimed strip mines of eastern Kentucky seem to promise some better than average rabbit hunting. The number of rabbits checked during the opening days of the season there has almost doubled from last year even though an almost identical number of hunters was checked. Tommy Cantrell, seventh district Law Enforcement Supervisor, says most of this rabbit population increase is occurring on the reclaimed mine lands and predicts good hunting there for the rest of the season.

The quail story across Kentucky will probably be much the same as 1982. The conservation officers in the western half of Kentucky checked more hunters during the opening days of quail season but saw fewer birds. Nonetheless these same officers estimate their quail populations to be about the same or up very slightly from last year. You may expect the usual exceptions, of course; in eastern Kentucky where quail are never generally abundant the grouse population is generally considered about equal to this time last year.

The figures aren't in from the wildlife management areas yet and of course the tally from the bow season won't be complete until after the end of the season but an unofficial count of check station figures indicates that the numbers of deer hunters and deer continue to grow in much of the state. There are local exceptions of course and there appear to be certain areas of eastern Kentucky where the numbers have dropped somewhat. At this point last year the official count had not topped 15,000 exclusive of wildlife areas and it looks like we've passed it this year with room to spare.

All in all it looks like another successful deer season with good prospects for quail and rabbit hunting. If you do your legwork you shouldn't have to stay at home for want of game. One final statistic and a reminder: the number of citations issued this year seems to be up too and we want all hunters to make sure they're properly equipped and legally licensed before they head into the field. Remember, there are no bag limits on game law violators.

Cats Win Opener Here, Friday, 89-63

By LAURA COOLEY

The Prestonsburg Blackcats won their season opener against the Sheldon Clark Cardinals, 89-63, here, Friday night.

It was an aggressive game throughout and a tough defensive battle for the Cats with both teams fired up the first half. The second half, however, was a different story. The Cardinals' fire died down, and the Cats picked up even more steam. The game was theirs with many unanswered shots made by the Cats throughout the second half—the most spectacular being a slam dunk by senior, Kelly Cecil.

The Cats' next action will be in the Pre-Season Tourney beginning Wednesday night at the Prestonsburg fieldhouse.

Bobcats, Lady Cats Win Opening Games

The Betsy Layne Bobcats opened their season with an 83-53 win over Dorton. Saturday, at Dorton. Leading scorer for the Bobcats was senior forward Levi Hamilton who scored 26 points. Also in double figures were Jimmy Parsons with 14 and Lester Newsome, 13. Leading scorer for Dorton was Donnie Hall with 15 points.

Others contributing to the Bobcats decisive win were Jeff Campbell, 8; Dwayne Kidd, Chris Conn, Bret Meade, and Duran Hall, 4 points each; John Lackey, Mike Conn, and Darren Daniels, each scoring 2 points.

Thursday night, the Betsy Layne Lady Cats also chalked up a decisive 61-30 win in their season opener against the Millard Mustangs. Kim Tackett led in scoring with 18 for the Lady Cats followed by Rachel Keathley with 15. Other scoring was by Cassandra Keathley, 11; Chris Gross, 10; Chris Lawson, 6, and Wendy Kaylor, 1. Leading scorer for Millard was Woods with 12.

McDowell Seesaws With 1 Loss, 1 Win

McDowell's Daredevils had an up and down weekend, winning one and losing one. Friday night they trounced Pikeville, 65-5. Saturday night, they lost to Wolf County, 49-45. Both were home games.

The McDowell girls' team played at Paintsville, Friday, where they lost to Johnson Central, 61-33.

FRATERNITY WINS NATIONAL AWARD

Eight members of the Transylvania University Delta Sigma Phi fraternity attended their national fraternity meeting in Dallas, Texas over the Thanksgiving Holidays. David Pitts, president, accepted on behalf of the Chapter, the national first place award for the best small college chapter in the nation. The award included a $135. check presented to the chapter. Also attending from Prestonsburg was Cohen Swiney. While there, the group attended the Dallas-St. Louis football game.

GRIDIRON GRABBERS

Former Minnesota Vikings' defensive tackle Alan Page was the first defensive player in NFL history to be named the league's Most Valuable Player. He was selected in 1972.

Pittsburgh Steelers' quarterback Cliff Stoudt is the only player in NFL history to qualify for a pension without playing in a regular season game. He paced the sidelines for 56 games before playing.

With 30 members, the Wheelwright Brownie Scout Troop No. 433 is one of the largest troops in Floyd county.

Because of the size of the Troop, new members are not being accepted at this time. More leaders are needed in the Upper Left Beaver Creek area, and especially a Girl Scout leader for girls ages 9 and up. Persons interested in being a leader should contact Mrs. Cathie Martin, 452-4229.

The Brownies have represented their community at the Girl Scout Round-up at Jenny Wiley State Park, marched in the Red, White and Blue Parade at Martin, and attended a Puppet Show at Prestonsburg Community College.

They are now working on monthly badge projects, and will be a part of the Wheelwright Christmas Parade, Saturday. They will present a Christmas play for the Senior Citizens here, Dec. 22.

The Troop received a U.S. flag that was flown over the nation's Capitol from Congressman Carl D. Perkins.

Brownie Leader, Mrs. Cathie Martin expressed appreciation to her assistants, Beverley Blackburn and Alpha Jean Johnson, to each of the mothers for their help, and to local businesses and individuals who have given their support.

Noncredit Courses Benefit Many Adults

All of the public colleges and universities in Kentucky have as one of their important missions the provision of noncredit courses, workshops, and training programs. For the most part, the participants are adults and pay the full costs of these noncredit learning activities. Public colleges and universities generally bear the indirect costs (facilities, etc.) and frequently provide an administrator to oversee and coordinate these programs.

Because so many Kentuckians benefit from these programs, the Kentucky Association for Continuing Education undertook a project to identify just how many citizens registered during the 1982-83 fiscal year and how many clock hours of noncredit instruction our colleges and universities provided.

These figures are not routinely included in reports by the Kentucky Council on Higher Education. The project was undertaken by the Association's Institutions of Higher Education Special Interest Group and was accomplished by forming a network comprised of professional continuing educators from each institution who supplied the data for their respective institutions.

In a time when reports rank Kentucky among the lowest in the percentage of adult population holding a high school diploma and media releases bulge with reports of the declining abilities of the current high school graduates, it is refreshing to note that 803,627 people took advantage of learning opportunities of a noncredit nature in the public colleges and universities of this state last year. This represents almost 30% of the citizens 16 years and over (based on the 1980 population figures). The greatest portion of participants across the state come by way of the Cooperative Extension and 4-H Extension administered by the University of Kentucky in every Kentucky county. Even those participants commuting a reasonable distance to a public college or university totaled 137,933 or over 5% of the total adult population over sixteen years of age. However, it should be noted that participants from other states travel to Kentucky to take advantage of noncredit workshops conducted by our colleges and universities. In some instances, Kentucky's public colleges and universities report greater enrollments in their noncredit programs than in their credit classes.

Several institutions have special noncredit training centers to provide continuing education for particular professional groups. These centers record registration of citizens from across Kentucky and from other states. Many times institutions will present noncredit training workshops off-campus in locations convenient to a particular target group.

The criteria for reporting figures in the noncredit enrollment study required that only noncredit registrations be counted; that participants registered individually by name and either paid a fee or had a fee paid for them by an employer or a grant, and that clock hours of instruction (class hours) provided be reported. All of the state-supported higher education institutions supplied data. The participating institutions are Eastern, Kentucky State, Morehead, Murray, Northern, Western, University of Louisville, University of Kentucky including UK's thirteen community colleges.

Mustangs Defeat Feds Creek, 65-57

Millard High School Mustangs faced stiff competition last Tuesday night when they defeated the Feds Creek Vikings 65 to 57. Feds Creek led 12 to 11 at the end of the first quarter. Millard gained the lead at half time, 29 to 26 and the third quarter scoreboard showed 43 to 41 with Miller holding the lead.

Dwayne Blackburn led the Mustangs with a total of 19 points. Dale Coleman scored 18 points; Sammy Williams, 14; Darren Dorton, 12, and Ryan Ray, 2.

Scoring for the Vikings was Keith Fields, 21, D. Hall, 16; D. Webb, 4; Jeff Looney, 5; T. Pugh, 2; P. Hunt, 2; and Kevin Fields, 7.

Brokers Claim Fees are Due

Hindman real estate auctioneers Ivan and Phillip Childers claim in a Floyd Circuit Court suit filed Friday that two Prater Creek men owe them $6000 in brokerage fees.

The brokers say they sold about two acres of land for District 4 Magistrate Lowell Samons and Romey Spears on August 30. They were to receive a five percent commission on the sale, together with $500 for advertising and handling costs, they said.

The Mountain Parkway property—a 15-lot subdivision between Arnett and Mullins branches of Middle Creek—fetched $110,000 at a public auction.

(Suits filed in court present only one side of the issue in dispute.)

Singing The Blues? Change Your Tune!

For the eight million Americans who are severely afflicted with depression, therapy and medication may be the best route. But for those of us who hit an occasional downdraft of mild or moderate depression, there are a number of self-help remedies that can give a substantial boost.

Joan Heilman, writing in the December Reader's Digest; outlines mood-elevating steps that you can take yourself—"uppers," in effect, without the drugs.

Exercise. The very fact that you're taking action instead of just sitting there helps, but exercise actually changes the level of hormones in the blood.

Nutrition. Some authorities believe that even a single nutritional deficiency can cause depression in susceptible people. Vitamin therapy, when taken in accordance with a physician's instructions, is harmless and can quickly have an effect.

Think Positive. Depressed people view life darkly. Be aware that your dark feelings originate in your head and may not jibe with reality. Work on converting your negative thoughts into more realistic alternatives.

Socialize. The very fact that you feel isolated and lonely is an early-warning signal of oncoming depression. Make a point of seeing friends and keeping in touch with associates.

Check Your Medications. Many prescription drugs, Heilman warns, can cause depression as a side effect. Check with your doctor if you're taking medication.

If you frequently feel down in the dumps, your doctor or a mental-health professional can help you. Depression can be successfully treated.

Antifreeze Poisoning Threat To Animals

If you add antifreeze to your car this winter, make sure you clean up any spills in your garage or driveway. And if there is old antifreeze lying around the garage, get rid of it. Otherwise you could poison your family pet.

Antifreeze coolant for automobile engines (ethylene glycol) which has been set aside to be added to an engine radiator, or has been drained from a radiator, is a hazardous source of poisoning for pets and livestock, said Dr. Louis Newman, director of the Livestock Disease Diagnostic Center of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Poisoning from antifreeze is most common in dogs and cats, but has also been reported in swine and poultry, Newman said. Antifreeze poisoning is especially common in dogs and cats during the fall and early winter months.

"Poisoning most often occurs when animals are confined in a garage or barn without access to water," said Newman. "But dogs and cats may acquire a liking for the sweet taste of antifreeze and actually drink it from gutters and open cans."

The ethylene glycol in antifreeze combines with calcium to form insoluble calcium oxalate crystals. These crystals accumulate in the tubules of the kidney and block the flow of urine.

Animals may show acute clinical signs of poisoning in as little as one to six hours after ingesting antifreeze. These early signs include trembling, convulsions, vomiting and incoordination, followed by coma and death. "Animals may appear to recover and then have a recurrence of more serious signs 24 to 36 hours after ingestion," Newman noted. "Many animals die in this 12 to 36 hour period." Animals which survive longer than 36 hours develop clinical signs more directly related to the urine blockage.

Antifreeze poisoning is very difficult to diagnose on the basis of clinical signs alone, Newman said. The vomiting, weakness, incoordination, convulsions, diarrhea, normal temperature and evidence of kidney failure make it difficult to differentiate from conditions such as arsenic poisoning, garbage intoxication, strychnine poisoning, brain damage, kidney ailments and infectious diseases such as leptospirosis. The diagnosis can be confirmed following a postmortem examination by demonstrating the presence of calcium oxalate crystals in the kidneys.

Once clinical signs of antifreeze poisoning are advanced, treatment is usually of little help. Early symptomatic treatment by a veterinarian is essential if there is to be any hope of saving the animal which has ingested antifreeze, Newman said. "This is a case where being absolutely sure no animals can gain access to discarded antifreeze could save a great deal of grief."

To Exhibit Whitaker Works

PCC art instructor Tom J. Whitaker at his sketching board.

The works of Tom J. Whitaker will be on display at the Prestonsburg Community College library, beginning Dec. 7 and continuing through Dec. 13. The exhibition will show the various styles or phases the artist has gone through since starting teaching at P.C.C. in 1972. Two of Whitaker's newest paintings ("Lady of the Mountain School—Mayo Mansion" and "Summer's Beauty") will be on display.

A reception with the artist present will be held from 6 p.m. until 8 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 7.

Petroleum Engineering Enrollments Declining

Undergraduate enrollments in U.S. petroleum engineering schools are expected to fall this year for the first time in many years, while graduate enrollments are rising dramatically.

Hiring of engineers by petroleum-industry companies has declined for two straight years. Meanwhile, starting petroleum-engineering salaries have leveled off after many years of steep increases.

These are the findings of a panel of experts who studied results of recent surveys by the Society of Petroleum Engineers (SPE).

The petroleum industry employs graduates with petroleum, chemical, mechanical, civil and other engineering degrees. The pattern of engineering supply and demand traditionally is cyclical.

Rising demand for oil and gas increase demand for engineers and leads to greater enrollments. As demand declines, the number of engineering enrollments declines. The industry has been through several of these cycles in the past thirty years.

A.T. Bourgoyne Jr., petroleum engineering professor at Louisiana State University, and John C. Calhoun, former professor in the Texas A&M University Petroleum Engineering Dept., reported results of the most recent SPE manpower supply and demand survey.

Bourgoyne forecasts a ten percent decline in undergraduate enrollments during 1983-84, the first decline in many years. At the same time, enrollments in graduate school will be about 25 percent greater than last year. These trends reflect an oversupply of new engineering graduates during the petroleum industry's current economic downturn.

SPE surveys show that about 85 percent of the 1981-82 petroleum engineering BS-degree graduates entering the U.S. job market found employment in the oil industry by the time of graduation. Preliminary data indicate that only sixty percent of the 1,432 graduates entering the job market in 1982-83 found employment by the time of graduation, and the percentage will be worse this year. "Probably there will be twice as many graduates as there are oil-industry jobs at the end of the current school year," Bourgoyne said.

"Clothes are two-thirds of beauty."

See That Guests Get Home Safely

More than one-third of all fatal and injury-producing traffic accidents involve alcohol. That rate goes up over the Christmas and New Year's holidays when socializing and party-going increases.

So if you're planning on hosting a birthday party make sure your guests not only arrive safely—but get home safely too. There are plenty of ways to do just that:

*Offer soft drinks, coffee, tea and other non-alcoholic beverages as alternatives to alcoholic drinks. Many drink recipes can be adapted by simply leaving out the alcohol.

*If you serve alcohol, offering high-protein foods like cheese or deviled eggs will help slow the absorption rate of alcohol into the bloodstream. But serving non-alcoholic drinks in addition will encourage guests to pace their drinking without leaving them empty-handed.

*A colorful or creatively-decorated table filled with a wide variety of food can be the focal point of a party, rather than the bar.

*Most people can only "burn up" one drink an hour. Going over that amount causes an alcohol build-up in the blood which can affect driving at levels far below the point of "legal intoxication."

*If you notice a guest that's having a "few too many", try to gracefully guide him away from the bar by engaging him in conversation. Introduce him to someone he hasn't met; tell a joke; or if it's his first time in your home, give him a tour.

*Don't rush to refill their glasses. *If you mix the drinks, don't serve doubles. Since carbonation speeds alcohol absorption, use fruit juice or water as a mixer rather than soft drinks.

*A good drink does not have to be a strong drink. Measure alcohol with a jigger glass rather than just guessing the amount.

*Don't let an intoxicated guest drive home or walk home unassisted. Many pedestrians killed in traffic accidents were drunk at the time.

*A guest may insist he can drive but one is not the best judge of one's own sobriety. Either give him a ride home, ask a sober guest to take him home or call a taxi. Another alternative is to invite the person to spend the night.

ENTERTAIN TO DINNER

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Horn entertained to dinner last Friday evening, having as their guests Mrs. Nell Hagedwood, of Prestonsburg, and her houseguest, her sister, Mrs. Carrie Banks, of Ecorse, Michigan.

★ CANCER HOPELINE ★

Q. I have heard that there are seven warning signs of cancer, but I only know three for certain. What are the warning signs, and do they only indicate cancer, or could they mean something else is wrong?

A. The seven warning signs popularized by the American Cancer Society include:

- Change in bowel or bladder habits.
- A sore that does not heal.
- Unusual bleeding or discharge.
- Thickening or lump in the breast or elsewhere.
- Indigestion or difficulty in swallowing.
- Obvious change in a wart or mole.
- Nagging cough or hoarseness.

Perhaps it will help you remember these signs in the future if you note that the first letters of each spell the word CAUTION.

Remember that these are general symptoms and may be related to some condition other than cancer. The existence of one or more of them for longer than two weeks is a signal that you should see your physician. If you do not have a family physician, contact your county medical society, your county health department or your local hospital.

For more general information about cancer and its warning signs, call the Cancer Hopeline at 1-800-4-CANCER, weekdays. Ask for a free copy of "Cancer: What to Know, What to Do About It" and "Cancer: Every Body's Enemy." Letters should be addressed to McDowell Cancer Network, 915 South Limestone Street, Lexington, Ky. 40536-0084.

Wheelwright Christmas Parade, Saturday

Reigning at the Wheelwright Christmas Parade will be: Front—Tiny Miss Snowflake, Leah Shanel Hamilton, daughter of Randy Hamilton, McDowell, and Tammy Hamilton, Wheelwright; Little Miss Snowflake, Deanna Bates, daughter of Bunny and Sherry Bates; rear—Snow Princess, Tanisha Cotton, daughter of Jackie Cotton, and Snow Queen, Kelly Johnson, daughter of Dale and Helen Johnson, all of Wheelwright.

By KATIE NEWSOME

The second Annual Wheelwright Christmas Parade will be held Saturday, beginning at 1 p.m. at the swimming pool parking lot. The parade will go along Main Street to the uptown business district and end at the playground beside City Hall. A reception will be held in the clubhouse lobby, after the parade.

The Wheelwright area, which includes several towns and three schools, will present this combined community effort.

Individuals, groups and organizations from every town located at the southern tip of Floyd County will be represented in this holiday season extravaganza.

There will be two floats; "The First Christmas", a Nativity scene, and "Dreams of Christmas Now," with Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus, a Christmas tree and area children will be the Little Elves and live "toys."

The marching band will feature students from Melvin Grade School, W.D. Osborne Grade School and Wheelwright High School. There will be little majorettes, high school majorettes and cheerleaders from the area schools.

All the Scout troops will be either marching in the parade or riding on flat-bed trucks.

The three fire departments that serve the Upper Left Beaver Creek area will be represented: Southeast Floyd County (Weeksbury), Wheelwright and Left Beaver (Price).

A display of antique cars will be driven along the parade route. Local church groups will be singing Christmas carols and sponsor booths with holiday foods and refreshments.

Citizen Support Asked To Cut Traffic Deaths

Kentuckians are being asked to show their support for a state campaign to get the drunk and drugged driver off the road by driving with their headlights on during the daylight hours, Saturday, Dec. 17.

Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr., made the call for support by proclaiming the week of Dec. 11-17 as "Drunk and Drugged Driver Awareness Week in Kentucky". A similar proclamation has also been issued nationwide by the U.S. Congress, but Brown carried it a step further by urging local citizens to get more involved by also reporting drunk drivers to the Kentucky State Police via the KSP's Action RAP-ID toll free, telephone hotline, 1-800-222-5555.

Drivers who take drugs or drink, or use a combination of both, accounted for at least one-third of the 836 fatalities reported on Kentucky highways last year, he said.

"And the problem is worse at Christmas and New Year's when so many more people are on the highway, and the number of drinking drivers always seem to increase dramatically", he said.

An identical proclamation was also issued by Governor-elect Martha Layne Collins who takes office as Kentucky's newest governor at mid-week during the special observance.

In signing his proclamation, Brown noted that the observance has special meaning for Kentucky where, with less than one month to run before the year ends, "we are on the verge of achieving a record, 22-year low in traffic deaths." Currently, the death toll stands at 716. If the present trend continues, the state is expected to end the year with the fewest number of fatalities reported since 1961 when the number killed was 717.

Both Brown and state police attribute the turn-around in fatalities to growing citizen awareness of the drunk driver threat to their safety on the highway; and the highly-publicized work of such groups as the (MADD) Mothers Against Drunk Drivers and the Governor's Task Force on Drunk Driving to convince legislators that new, tougher anti-drunk driving laws are needed.

State police say that one measure of increased citizen awareness of the problem can be seen in the way local citizens are using the KSP's Action RAP-ID hotline to report drunk drivers. Established just a year ago, it already has handled 2,485 calls resulting in the arrest of 239 motorists on drunk driving charges.

The KSP also reports that their "life-saving difference" and "safety belts are the best defense against a drunk driver" campaigns are helping keep the death toll down too by winning over more of those drivers and passengers who never used to buckle up. Compliance with the state's new child restraint seat law also seems to be on the increase.

Passed in 1982, that law requires that all children 40 inches and under in height be kept in a child restraint seat at all times while riding in any motor vehicle.

Although state police are reluctant to predict just how much higher the death toll may climb between now and the end of the year, they are hopeful that the experience of the past six years will not be repeated.

According to a special, trend-examining study just completed by the KSP Records and Communications Division's Fatal Accident Reporting System (FARS), an average 82 persons died in traffic accidents annually over the six-week period between Thanksgiving and New Year's 1977-82. "Contrast that with just 716 fatalities during the same period

Davis Resigns at Western U.

Western Kentucky University Vice President for Academic Affairs James L. Davis announced recently that he will be returning to the classroom as a professor of geography at WKU effective July 1, 1984.

Davis, who is in his eighth year as vice president, announced his resignation at a press conference. "I have really enjoyed these years, but I equally enjoy teaching and research," he said.

During his term in charge of administering WKU's faculty and academic programs, faculty achieved the highest level to date of scholarly research, creative activity and funded projects.

Last year WKU attained the highest percentage in the school's history (74 percent) of completed doctorate and other terminal degrees among the teaching faculty, and under Davis' supervision WKU continued to make progress toward meeting affirmative action goals for minority faculty, staff and graduate assistants.

"Dr. Davis has shown strong, innovative leadership during his eight years as academic vice president," said WKU President Donald W. Zacharias. "He has done a superb job of bringing highly talented academic administrators and faculty to Western during a time when resources have been scarce, and Western's academic reputation has grown significantly because of Dr. Davis' high standards," Western's president said.

Dr. Zacharias said a search committee will be appointed immediately to find a successor by July 1.

Miss Noel, Mr. Webb

The marriage of Miss Doris Jean Noel, of Louisville, to Mr. Michael Ray Webb, of Crestwood, Ky., was solemnized at 2 p.m., Saturday, June 18, at the Buckner Baptist Church in Buckner, Ky.

Preceding the wedding, selections of music were presented by Michael Toon, vocalist, Frances Thacker, organist, and Sandy Powell, pianist.

The bride wore a traditional wedding gown, fashioned of white satin and lace, and made by her mother-in-law, Mrs. Kay Webb.

Mrs. Jennifer Noel, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Donna Henry, Lisa Stewart, and Michelle Webb, sister of the groom.

Best man was Mr. Robert C. Widman, and groomsmen were Thomas S. Noel, brother of the bride, Michael A. Toon, and Andrew J. Browning. Ushers were William K. Robinson and Andrew J. Browning.

Brittany Leigh Noel, niece of the bride, was flower girl, and Chad Dehart was ringbearer.

The bride is a graduate of Male High School in Louisville and is attending the School of Hair Design. Mr. Webb is a graduate of Oldham County High School and attended Louisville Technical Institute where he graduated in 1980. He is employed by Project Heating and Cooling.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was held at the church. The couple is now residing in Crestwood, Ky.

Among those attending the wedding were Mrs. Ruby Alice Stratton, grandmother of Mr. Webb, and Mrs. Joanne Browning and family, from Michigan.

Byrd hopes he'll hit high note as 'Boone'

By Joan Crosby

Tom Byrd

Tom Byrd has been overwhelmed by the amount of mail he's received — considering that he's a TV newcomer whose series, "Boone," has not scored high ratings. "I'm getting letters from people in Arkansas, Oklahoma and South Carolina and it makes me realize there are really people out there," says Byrd. "I have answered all of them and sent signed photos. I try to write something personal for each one, based on the letter to me because I find the mail touching."

"Boone," about a young Tennessean who wants to become a singing star during the early 1950s, was developed by Earl Hamner Jr., who also created "The Waltons." Like that show, "Boone" also stresses family values, which means the show should have a wide appeal. But initial ratings haven't been high.

Byrd, who was born in the Philippines and raised in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. (his father was a Navy man), has a strong background in music and acting. He studied at Northwestern University's school of drama.

"I came to Los Angeles two years ago," Byrd says, "and I worked an average of every two months. Just as my money would start to dwindle and I'd think 'Oh God, now I have to get a job', another acting assignment would come along."

Asked how he got the role in "Boone," Byrd's answer is to the point: "I auditioned."

So did a lot of young actors but Earl Hamner says Byrd had the quality that was "right."

Since Byrd's training was for theater, he found he had to make adjustments in technique for the camera. Byrd, who sings up to four songs a show, brushed up his guitar skills for the role of Boone Sawyer.

"The first day on the 'Boone' set I was anxious but as soon as the cameras began rolling I was OK. I have gotten good about putting anxiety and pressure aside when I am working."

His voyage and the controversy that resulted from his claims is dramatized in "Cook and Peary: The Race to the Pole," an "ITT Theatre" special, airing TUESDAY, DEC. 13 on CBS.

Everything's harmonious beneath Jazz' dissonance

By Connie Passalacqua

When Jazz Jackson first appeared on "The Young & The Restless" last May as a large black man who was the rather frightening henchman of mobster Tony DiSalvo, he didn't quite fit into the glamorous, moneyed world of Genoa City.

It wasn't until Jazz strangled Tony (who had been making murder attempts on "Y & R's" hero detective team, Paul Williams and Andy Richards) that viewers saw the soft underside of Jazz.

"There's a little Jazz in everyone," says Jon St. Elwood, who portrays Jazz and who was overjoyed to sign a long-term 'Y & R' contract right after the fateful murder. "Even the meanest of people usually have hearts underneath. Bad times do things to people. But the good comes out eventually. I should know. It happened to me."

A native of Phoenix, Ariz., St. Elwood worked many different low-paying jobs to keep himself afloat before he decided to be an actor in 1978. He attended the Phoenix Police Academy, but decided instead to pursue medical-related jobs. At one point, he even worked at the city's morgue. After appearing in a TV movie filmed in Phoenix, St. Elwood decided he wanted to act, took the TV movie director's advice and moved to Hollywood.

Jon St. Elwood

But life as a struggling actor in Hollywood isn't easy.

"I did just about anything — I moved rocks, washed windows, moved furniture and for a while I was even a plumber's mate. I also worked as aouncer."

After performing in a few Los Angeles-area stage productions he landed his first significant role as a football player in an upcoming movie, "Against All Odds."

"The title is like the story of my life — being of larger stature and black kind of limits the roles I've been chosen to play."

But St. Elwood demonstrated his considerable acting ability the first two months he played Jazz, so the powers that be at "Y & R" decided to expand his role. Says St. Elwood, "One of our associate writers, Elizabeth Harrower, said to me 'If you weren't a good actor, you would have gone with Tony DiSalvo.'"

Literacy Program Urged Statewide

The Kentucky Coalition for Literacy's Board of Directors has set a goal to have literacy programs for every county in Kentucky. A new concept to Kentucky and the nation, the Coalition was formed as a private, non-profit corporation which will help expand programs for literacy in the state and provide linkages with public and private agencies which are creating new programs to teach adults to read.

Meeting for their first workshop at Shakertown of Pleasant Hill, the Coalition Board represented the geographical areas of Kentucky, state agencies and programs providing services for literacy, industry, churches and private citizens. The 15-member board and its staff developed a work plan to assist in the delivery of services to the over 400,000 estimated illiterate adults in Kentucky.

Speaking for the Board members following the workshop, Sue Reid Draper, Executive Director, spoke briefly concerning the goals of the Coalition and the literacy problem in Kentucky. "The concept of the Kentucky Coalition for Literacy was created by our need to coordinate the many efforts to combat illiteracy in this state. We needed to have some impartial third party to work with everyone who shares a concern for this grave problem so that all efforts will be amplified through a coordinated attack on literacy."

"The citizens of Kentucky must work together to defeat the problem of illiteracy in our adult population," Ms. Draper continued. "Our adult population earns wages, consumes products, votes for our leaders, makes policies for our citizens and parents of our children. Kentucky's progress depends on the abilities of our citizens. Since we know that many Kentuckians are illiterate, we must face the fact that we are losing dollars, productivity, human rights and even lives. We, the Coalition, urge all Kentuckians to become actively involved with helping to raise the literacy rate in the Commonwealth by contacting existing literacy groups in their area or volunteering to work through the Coalition to establish services where none are available."

The Kentucky Coalition for Literacy is currently housed at the Kentucky Department of Libraries and Archives until their offices are secured in the Frankfort area. Further information about the Coalition may be obtained from the Frankfort office (502-875-7000) or through the Board members listed below:

Health Educator

A nurse from the health department will be in Wayland at the Methodist Church on Monday December 12 from 10:00 until 2:00. She will offer T.B. skin tests, urinalyses, anemia screenings, blood pressures, and immunizations. This clinic is a service of the Health Department and the public is welcome.

There will be glaucoma screening clinics at the Health Department on Monday and Wednesday December 12 and 14. These clinics are open to persons of all ages but those persons age 40 and over are especially urged to be screened regularly for this disease since this is the high risk age for the disease. These clinics are free services of the Health Department.

A glass fire screen will keep warm air in a room from going up the chimney but allow warmth from the fire to radiate through the glass.

The Missing Day

Account reported by Wilmay
Years ago the following article appeared in many papers, including THE TIMES, but many of the new generation have never seen or heard of it. One of the deacons in our church referred to it recently. Next day I ran across an old copy, which is submitted here. Our nation is largely comprised of Bible-believing people but children today are hearing so much false teaching this article should prove there is no conflict between scripture and science. Never has been. God is author of both!

The Day the Sun Stood Still

(Copied from the EVENING WORLD)

Did you know that the space program is busy proving that what has been called a "myth" in the Bible is true? Mr. Harold Hill, president of the Curtis Engine Co., in Baltimore, Md., and a consultant in the space program, relates the following development:

"I think one of the most amazing things that God has for us today happened recently to our astronauts and space scientists at Green Belt, Ind. They were checking the position of the sun, moon, and planets out in space, where they would be 100 years, and 1,000 years from now. We have to know this so we don't send a satellite up and have it bump into something later in its orbits. We have to lay out the orbit in terms of the life of the satellite, and where the planets will be, so the whole thing will not bog down. They ran the computer measurement back and forth over the centuries, and it came to a halt. The computer stopped and put up a red signal, which meant that there was something wrong either with the info fed into it or with the results as compared to the standards. They called in the service department to check it out and they said, 'It's perfect.' The IBM head of operations said, 'What's wrong?' Well, we have found there's a day missing in space in elapsed time. They scratched their heads and tore their hair. There was no answer.

"One religious fellow on the team said, 'You know, one time I was in Sunday School and they talked about the sun standing still.' They didn't believe him, but they didn't have any other answer so they said, 'Show us.' So he got a Bible and went back to the book of Joshua where they found a pretty ridiculous statement for anybody who has common sense. There they found the Lord saying to Joshua, 'Fear them not, I have delivered them into thy hand. There shall not a man of them stand before thee.' Joshua was concerned because he was surrounded by the enemy, and if darkness fell they would overpower him. So Joshua asked the Lord to make the sun stand still! That's right! The sun stood still and the moon stayed... and hasted not to go down about a whole day.' The space men said, 'There is the missing day! Well, they checked the computers going back into the time it was written and found it was close but not close enough! The elapsed time that was missing back in Joshua's day was twenty-three hours and twenty minutes.—not a whole day. They read the Bible and there it said, 'About (approximately) a whole day.'

These little words in the Bible are important. But they were still in trouble because if you cannot account for forty minutes you will be in trouble 1,000 years from now. Forty minutes had to be found because it can be multiplied many times over in orbits. Well, this religious fellow also remembered somewhere in the Bible where it said the sun went BACKWARDS. The space men told him he was out of his mind. But they got out the Book and read these words in II Kings, Chapter 20: Hezekiah on his death bed was visited by the prophet Isaiah who told him that he was going to die. Hezekiah did not believe him and asked for a sign as proof! Isaiah said, 'Do you want the sun to go ahead ten degrees?' Hezekiah said, 'It's nothing for the sun to go ahead ten degrees, but let the shadow turn backward ten degrees.' Isaiah spoke to the Lord and the Lord brought the shadow ten degrees BACKWARD. Ten degrees is exactly forty minutes. Twenty-three hours and 20 minutes in Joshua, plus forty minutes in II Kings make the missing 24 hours the space travelers had to log in the log book as being the missing day in the universe! Isn't that amazing? Our God is rubbing their noses in his TRUTH! That's right!"

Note from editor of the EVENING WORLD: The King James Version account is as follows: "In those days was Hezekiah sick unto death. And the prophet Isaiah came to him, and said unto him, Thus saith the Lord, set thine house in order for thou shalt die and not live. Then he turned his face to the wall, and prayed unto the Lord. And it came to pass that the word of the Lord came to him, (Isaiah) saying, 'I will add unto thy days fifteen years.' And Hezekiah said unto Isaiah, 'What shall be the sign?' And Isaiah said, This sign shalt thou have of the LORD, shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees? And Hezekiah answered, 'It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees, let the shadow return backwards ten degrees... and he brought the shadow ten degrees backward.' II Kings 20:1-11.

Note: Joshua 10:12,13,14 gives the account of the day the sun stood still. 'And there was no day like that before it or after it.'

Ky. Artists' Work Shown in Frankfort

The work of 108 Kentucky artists from all parts of the Commonwealth will be exhibited through January during "Kentucky Revisited: 1983," at the state Capitol Gallery in Frankfort.

Sponsored by the Kentucky Department of the Arts, the show will feature the works of 108 artists from all parts of the Commonwealth—works of art selected by William Hull, director emeritus of the Museum of Art at Pennsylvania State University.

This art show echoes a similar statewide survey exhibition, "The Face of Kentucky," that was shown on the balcony of the capitol rotunda in 1967. That exhibit was also arranged by Hull, then serving as the first executive director of the Kentucky Arts Commission.

"It seemed appropriate, after 16 years, to hold another statewide survey exhibit," said Arts Commissioner Kay Lowe. "We are especially happy that William Hull could return to help us showcase the rich talents of today's artists and to reaffirm the Commonwealth's commitment to the visual arts."

She noted that the special art exhibit had been timed for the Inaugural events and the 1984 legislative session. The exhibit will run through Jan. 31.

Hull, who made his selections for "Kentucky Revisited: 1983" from over 1,000 entries submitted to six regional centers throughout the state, noted that the variety in the exhibition is really the essence of the exhibit.

"This exhibition is one in which several faces of contemporary realism are represented, together with non-objective works and naive expressions," Hull said. "The principal consideration for the inclusion of any work in the exhibition was the artists' freedom from the statements and influences of others; or to put it another way, to determine the essential integrity of the work as a truly personal statement."

Nuclear protesters block missile-parts factory

CARDIFF, Wales — About 300 anti-nuclear campaigners staged a sit-down protest yesterday at the Cardiff Royal Ordnance Factory, where Trident missile parts reportedly are being manufactured.

The protesters blocked the main entrance and urged arriving workers not to build the submarine-based missiles, which are scheduled to replace Britain's aging Polaris missiles in the next decade.

Torrey To Head Job Corps Here

Gerald E. Torrey, 51, of Syracuse, N.Y., has been appointed director of the Prestonsburg Job Corps Center, it was announced last week. He replaces Thomas E. Hummer, who resigned recently after nearly three years as center director.

Torrey has been for the past six years on the staff of a Job Corps facility in Glenmont, N.Y., a suburb of Syracuse, most recently as deputy director of education and training.

"For all the things being said these days about improving the quality of education, there will always be a percentage who are not able to make it in that system," Torrey said. Job Corps is designed to pick up students who drop out of regular high schools, he said.

"There are few out there who can't be developed into upright citizens," he said. "With a little bit more effort on our part, they can get their GED, learn some vocational skills, or go on to college."

The Prestonsburg center, which opened here in January, 1981, is operated by the Singer Corporation under contract with the U.S. Department of Labor. Designed to house 165 students, it has a current enrollment of 155, most of them from Kentucky, North Carolina and Tennessee.

In response to recent allegations that the facility has been dirty and that discipline has been lax, Gene A. Baker, regional director in Singer's education division, said that, while the Prestonsburg center is at least average in those respects, there is yet room for improvement.

Baker said he supports the controversial pass system instituted by Hummer, a system which allows students who maintain certain standards of class-work and behavior to take unsupervised recreational excursions off campus. "The purpose of Job Corps is to train them to hold a job. When they're working, they are going to be living in town. We need to teach them to respect privileges," he explained.

"Also, the Prestonsburg center is somewhat unique in that it lacks recreational facilities—there is no gym or swimming pool," Baker said. "Students here should be treated like average 16- and 17-year-olds."

The Job Corps program was created in 1964 as an element of President Lyndon Johnson's "Great Society." First funded on a year-by-year basis, it is now a permanent program of the Department of Labor. About 40,000 students are currently enrolled in the program nationwide, most of them for a period of six or seven months.

Average cost of training a Corps member is put at $7000 a year, a sum that is soon recouped as graduates find work and pay taxes, Baker said.

The new center director is the father of five children. He will be joined by his wife and 10-year-old daughter as soon as he finds housing here, he said.

Filipinos defuse bomb found at U.S. facility

MANILA, Philippines — Philippine army experts defused a crude bomb at a recreational facility for U.S. government personnel early yesterday.

Police said they had no idea who planted it.

Embassy spokesman Al Croghan said the bomb, found inside a sea-front compound about 2½ miles from the U.S. Embassy, was "not large enough to cause much property damage or personal injuries."

How to Shop for The Perfect Tree

It's coming on Christmas, and time to shop for the perfect tree to be the focal point of your holiday decorations. Usually choosing the Christmas tree is a family venture and everyone sees the tree for different value.

Several criteria will help in this year's choice, so before you and the children climb in the car to shop for the perfect Christmas tree, consider these tips from Douglas McLaren, Extension forestry specialist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. He is headquartered at the UK Robinson Substation at Quicksand.

Consider first that you have other options besides the trees that are cut and sold at lots around town. This year, suggested McLaren, you may want to choose from live balled trees, those that can be planted in your landscape after the Christmas season.

Also consider the opportunity of selecting your own tree at a Christmas tree farm. "These trees, while still growing, are easier to view from all sides," said McLaren. "And the added adventure of cutting it down makes the trip more enjoyable as a family outing."

The beauty of the tree finally chosen is in the eye of the beholder, but species selection is important because of the needle and branching characteristics. Short-needled trees such as spruce tend to have more rigid limbs, making for sturdier support for decorations, said McLaren.

"Scotch pines, with needles approximately 2 inches long, tend to be a more popular choice," he said. "White pine trees, with needles in bundles of five, have the longest needles—about 6 inches in length—and if not pruned properly, tend not to support decorations adequately."

Coloring of trees varies according to species. Scotch and Virginia pine can vary from yellow green to a rich green. Many Christmas tree producers spray trees to achieve an acceptable green color just prior to cutting them for market, McLaren noted.

The freshness of the Christmas tree you select will determine how it will hold up over the holiday season. Many trees that are shipped to various markets are cut in early and mid-November, McLaren said. "Early needle drop of a tree cut then is possible even if you adequately water it."

You can determine freshness in some cases by bending the needles, he suggested. If they are brittle and they break, it would be best to consider another tree.

If you purchase a cut tree, McLaren advises leaving it outside in a bucket of water until you are ready to decorate. To keep the tree as fresh as possible, before placing it in the holder with the water reservoir, cut about an inch from the original cut to open the pores for water absorption.

When looking over the selection of sizes, colors and shapes, don't overlook an essential Christmas tree characteristic. Check to see that the base of the tree is straight, which makes it a whole lot easier to place in a stand. Many novice tree shoppers buy trees with crooked bases, which might mean cutting off a considerable amount from the original size to get it to stay up in the stand.

And consider the height of the tree you've fallen in love with. You might not be able to have a good perspective of height when you're outside and looking at several trees at once. Then you might bring home a monster tree only to discover that you must chop off a few feet to accommodate your ceiling. Remember that most trees are sold based on the total height.

If you need to remove some limbs from the tree, McLaren suggested using these trimmings to make other arrangements in your home. "And when you buy your Christmas tree," he added, "check with the dealer to see if they have any additional trimmings from trees that have been pruned."

Blood, it doesn't grow on trees. Help fill the need by donating blood.

Report Child Abuse By Toll-Free Number

Effective today, Kentuckians who find themselves facing a potential situation of child abuse may pick up the telephone and call a toll-free, 24-hour-a-day hotline and receive immediate short-term counseling and referral to the proper agency for long-term assistance.

The hotline is being funded by the Cabinet for Human Resources and operated by professional staff and trained volunteers of Parents Anonymous of Kentucky Inc. in Lexington. The hotline number is 1-800-432-9251.

Social Services Deputy Commissioner Anna Grace Day told reporters at a Lexington news conference that the hotline addresses prevention, whereas previous efforts have concentrated on reporting acts of abuse to law enforcement authorities. "During the past fiscal year alone, there were almost 20,000 reports of child abuse in Kentucky. Abuse touched the lives of some 50,000 children across this state," Day said. "The frightening figures are on the rise in part, I believe, because of the emphasis that has been placed in recent years on reporting suspected cases of abuse to the police. We need to have all suspicions of child abuse reported, but we also need to prevent the abuses so they don't even happen," Day said. "By helping Parents Anonymous expand their existing hotline, we can place professional guidance only a free call away from people who want and need this help at the time it will do the most good."

Parents Anonymous executive director Brenda Riddle said the organization's hotline has been operating in northern Kentucky since 1980 by accepting collect long-distance calls. Riddle said the number of collect calls requesting help increased 14 percent in 1981 and jumped by 45 percent in 1982.

"This year, because of the high cost of collect calls, we haven't been able to publicize the hotline," Riddle said. "The collect call system also has another drawback: a collect caller must give his or her name to the operator for the call to be put through. With the funding provided by Human Resources, we can offer the crisis counseling with total anonymity, no cost to the person needing the help, and the toll-free number will be listed in directories across Kentucky."

An additional $9,000 will be allocated to an existing contract between the cabinet's Department for Social Services and Parents Anonymous to cover operation of the hotline from Dec. 1, 1983 through June 30, 1984. The project has been included in the department's recommended budget for fiscal 1984-86.

Riddle said the funding would provide for purchase of necessary equipment, installation and cost of the WATS line service, and listing in the telephone directories, as well as for training for the volunteers who will help provide the 24-hour service. Volunteers will be receiving minimal reimbursement at a rate averaging less than a dollar an hour.

"Our staff and our volunteers will already have a counseling background plus additional training in counseling by phone to help the people who call," said Riddle. "Together with the staff of the Department for Social Services and the Comprehensive Care Centers around the state, our hotline staffers will be able to do more than just talk to our callers and defuse a crisis. We can recommend some professional help which is readily available in the caller's home community."

Human Resources Secretary Buddy Adams called the hotline "one way for this department to use a minimum amount of dollars to maximize a service that is already available and functioning." Adams said the service should reduce barriers to immediate help for people who want to stop or keep from abusing a child.

"This is a positive alternative to child abuse," said Adams, "and an attempt to keep some potentially abusive situations from getting out of control."

Again, the toll-free, hotline number is 1-800-432-9251.

Conservation News

If everything goes according to plans Allen Park will have improvements ranging in the value of $30,000 this spring. These improvements include tiling for 15 acres, vegetative cover for two acres of critical area, and a grassed waterway with a rock rip-rap outlet.

The project is designed to improve the general appearance of the area and reduce inconveniences rescheduling, and excessive maintenance of ball fields. At present Allen Park gives up an average of 30 days use due to rain and poorly drained fields during the playing season.

Plans are now for advertising and taking bids for the project in late winter January/February and construction to start in March/April.

The Floyd County Conservation District and the Soil Conservation Service provide technical assistance on drainage problems such as the Allen Park situation as well as for private landowners and businesses. Interested parties are invited to call the conservation district office at 886-3128 for more information.

More people are picking up their cross-country ski poles and heading for the countryside every year. According to the December Reader's Digest, there were one million cross country skiers in 1970 but by 1982 the number had increased to 5.5 million. The United States now has 600 commercial areas for cross-country skiing; four-fifths of them opened between 1970 and 1980.

You Can Double Your Car's Life

Americans often give up their automobiles after only 60,000 or 70,000 miles. That's low mileage to auto expert Ross Olney, who says a car properly maintained and driven with care can be made to last 120,000 miles and more.

Olney, who has written over 50 books on car repair, shares his tips for extending the life of a car in the December Reader's Digest.

Olney recommends changing the engine oil and oil filter frequently. Some owners of high mileage cars do this as often as every 2000 miles, using premium oil for long engine and valve life. A chassis lubrication with every oil change will substantially extend the life of ball joints, springs, linkages and other critical parts, he adds.

Engine coolant, transmission fluid, power-steering-oil, battery water and brake fluid levels should be checked regularly—usually when filling-up with gasoline at the service station. Most of these checks, Olney writes, can be done by a service station attendant.

Olney's maintenance program also includes replacement of fan belts if they're frayed, worn or cracked; changing the air filter according to the owner's manual schedule; draining and flushing the cooling system yearly; and regular tune-ups.

Besides maintenance and repairs, the other key to extending a car's life is to develop good driving habits. Olney says it's not necessary to warm up modern engines. Instead, start the car, give it a few seconds to be sure all the fluids are circulating, then drive away slowly and carefully. Never race a cold engine. Also, it's best when having difficulty starting a car not to grind the starter more than 10 seconds, and to allow a few seconds between 10-second bursts.

To help forestall the cost of a brake system overhaul, don't ride the brake pedal, he writes. Avoid hard stops by anticipating a stop well in advance. And when stopping, brake, release, then brake again gently to minimize heat in the brake system.

Olney also advises care when using the clutch in a manual transmission. Don't ride the clutch pedal when the car is moving, and also shift into neutral when stopped for more than a few seconds.

If milk or cream spills on furniture, wipe it up quickly. Dairy foods act as mild paint and varnish remover. If spots show, clean with white liquid wax.

McConnell Task Force Endorsed by Judges

Kentucky Task Force on Exploited and Missing Children Chairman Mitch McConnell announced last week that the Kentucky Association of County Judge/Executives had unanimously endorsed the 18 proposals contained in the citizens group's final report.

According to McConnell, who is the Jefferson County Judge/Executive and former president of the Association, the endorsement reflects the organization's strong concern for the safety of the children of Kentucky.

McConnell noted that for many of the Commonwealth's judge/executives the endorsement vote was not their first involvement with the Task Force. "There were three of us on the Task Force itself. In addition, when I visited Kentucky's 120 counties last year trying to find people to help organize fingerprinting programs, I found that my fellow judges were the program's strongest supporters. In fact, the judges are serving as local point persons in over a third of Kentucky's counties," he said.

McConnell added that the Task Force's proposals had received endorsements from daily newspapers across the state and from John Walsh, whose story about his son's abduction was the subject of the NBC movie "Adam".

The judges were meeting in Louisville last week in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Kentucky Association of Counties.

Reform Law Bite Can Be Costly

Some long-term care facilities in Kentucky are finding out that the Kentucky Long-Term Care Reform Law of 1982 now has teeth, and the bite can cost a violator thousands of dollars in fines until a facility's problems are corrected. In fact, since the new regulations became effective in July, a total of 18 facilities around the state have received citations from the Division of Licensing and Regulation in the Cabinet for Human Resources.

Division director Sara Pratt said the violations cited under the new law fall into two main categories. "Type A violations are the most serious, indicating imminent danger and substantial risk of death or serious injury to a resident. Type B violations are those which have a direct or immediate relationship between the problem and the health, safety or security of residents, but which do not constitute imminent danger. To date we have written seven Type A citations and 11 Type B citations against long-term care facilities," she said.

Of those 18 citations, eight have resulted in the division imposing fines, ranging from as little as $200 up to the top fine of $5,000. "Imposition of a fine is not the last step. Once a citation has been issued, the facility is given a specific number of days to correct the problem. If the deadline passes with no corrective action, then additional fines may be assessed per day until the facility acts to remove the threat to the safety of the residents," said Mrs. Pratt. Beyond the fines, the division may go to court to seek corrections of the violations. In one case, such action ended in a court directing the facility to make the required corrections.

While fines are being assessed in some cases, Pratt said, not all investigations or even citations call for that penalty. "Fines are imposed only when a situation exists which can directly have a negative effect on the health or safety of the resident.

Once a citation involving a penalty is given to a facility, an appeals process is available. Eleven appeals have been filed to date, and each of the appeals has been heard by an impartial hearing officer. Thus far, three rulings have been issued, all upholding the decisions of the Division of Licensing and Regulation.

"These new regulations give the state, for the first time, the ability to directly address individual situations on a timely basis," said Pratt. "In the past, the state had to show a facility had a history or pattern of violations before any action could occur, and most times that action was termination of a license.

To March In Inaugural Parade

The Allen Central High School Band has been selected to represent Floyd County in the Governor's Inaugural Parade, December 13, in Frankfort. Only one high school band from each of the 120 counties of Kentucky will be permitted to attend.

Allen Central received first place in the Jenny Wiley Festival for the second consecutive year; was runnerup in the Red, White, and Blue Parade; the Black Gold Festival, in which they have placed second for the past two years; and two first place trophies, first overall and first place flag squad, in the Maytown Fall Festival Parade. They have also participated in the Gingerbread Festival in Hindman, and the Maytown Halloween Parade. The group is under the direction of Marcia Thompson.

★ CANCER HOPELINE ★

This question and answer column is provided as a public service by the McDowell Cancer Network. Questions are answered by appropriate specialists associated with the Network and represent some of the inquiries made by callers who use our Hopeline.

The Cancer Hopeline is a toll free consultative telephone service available to any Kentuckian who has a cancer-related problem. Qualified counselors take calls Monday-Friday from 9-5 and return recorded messages the next working day. They do not diagnose cancer, recommend treatment for individual cases, nor dispense money. Counselors do provide consultations with specialists as well as support and understanding. Because of its designation by the National Cancer Institute as Kentucky's Cancer Information Service, the Hopeline has rapid access to the latest cancer information. All matters are treated confidentially. Call the Cancer Hopeline toll free at 1-800-4-CANCER, or write us at McDowell Cancer Network, Chandler Medical Center, Lexington, Kentucky 40536-0084.

Q. I've smoked for 20 years, and so far none of my attempts to quit have worked. Can the Cancer Hopeline help?

A. The Hopeline has tried and tested quit smoking materials available free to the public. In addition, the American Cancer Society will be sponsoring their annual Great American Smokeout on Thursday, November 17. On this day, smokers are urged to exert their best effort to quit for one day.

In 1982, just over 19 million American smokers attempted to give up cigarettes on Smokeout Day. According to a Gallup survey, 4.5 million succeeded for a full 24 hours. One to eleven days later, the survey indicated that 2.3 million reported still not smoking.

Larry Hagman, J.R. of "Dallas" fame, is back for his third consecutive year as National Smokeout Chairman. Last year, he introduced would-be quitters to his "Larry Hagman Special Stop Smokin' Wrist Snappin' Red Rubber Band." Thousands of Smokeout participants wore the rubber bands and gave them a healthy snap each time they felt the urge to smoke. By popular demand, the rubber bands will be back for the '83 Smokeout.

Perhaps you will benefit from Hagman's suggestion and ask a non-smoking friend to adopt you for the day, provide lots of sympathy and understanding, and steer you away from cigarettes. Other helps are included on a Quit Tips suggestion sheet.

The 1983 goal of the Great American Smokeout is to get at least one in every five smokers to give up cigarettes from midnight to midnight on Thursday, November 17. Of course, those who get a late start on Thursday are both permitted and encouraged to extend the 24 hour period as long as necessary past the midnight deadline in order to get in a full day.

Contact your county American Cancer Society office for your Red Rubber Band and assistance quitting during the Smokeout. Or call the Cancer Hopeline toll free at 1-800-4-CANCER, and we will mail you a quit smoking kit. You may also write to us at McDowell Cancer Network, Chandler Medical Center, Lexington, Ky. 40536-0084.

City of Wheelwright Audit for 18-Month Period Ending June 30, 1983

HENSLEY, ALLEN & COMPANY
CERTIFIED PUBLIC ACCOUNTANTS

1888 ALEXANDRIA DRIVE
LEXINGTON, KENTUCKY 40506
606-255-7124

Mayor and City Council
City of Wheelwright
Wheelwright, Kentucky

We have examined the combined financial statements of the City of Wheelwright, Kentucky, as of and for the eighteen-month period ended June 30, 1983, as listed in the table of contents. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and, accordingly, included such tests of the accounting records and other such auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

The City has not maintained an adequate record of its general fixed assets and, accordingly, the combined financial statements referred to above do not include financial statements of the General Fixed Assets Group of Accounts, which should be included to conform to generally accepted accounting principles.

As more fully described in Note 2, the combined financial statements referred to above do not include the financial statements of the City of Wheelwright Utilities Commission, which should be included to conform to generally accepted accounting principles.

In our opinion, except that the omission of the financial statements described above results in an incomplete presentation, the combined financial statements referred to above present fairly the financial position of the City of Wheelwright, Kentucky, at June 30, 1983, and the results of its operations for the period then ended, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

Our examination was made for the purpose of forming an opinion on the combined financial statements taken as a whole. The schedules listed in the table of contents are presented for purposes of additional analysis and are not a required part of the combined financial statements of the City of Wheelwright, Kentucky. The information has been subjected to the auditing procedures applied in the examination of the combined financial statements and, in our opinion, is fairly stated in all material respects in relation to the combined financial statements taken as a whole.

The accompanying notes are an integral part of the financial statements.

1. Accounting Policies

The City of Wheelwright maintains its accounting records on the cash basis. Accruals were made from memorandum records to conform to generally accepted accounting principles which requires the modified accrual basis of accounting for governmental fund types.

General fixed asset purchases are recorded as expenditures in the appropriate fund at the time of purchase.

Property taxes are recognized at the date of levy with a reserve for uncollectibles for the portion estimated to be uncollectible.

Grant revenues restricted in use are recognized when eligible expenditures are incurred. Amounts received but unearned are reported as deferred revenues.

2. Scope

The scope of our examination did not include the Wheelwright Utilities Commission, which is administered by a separate commission appointed by the Mayor and City Council. The Commission operates under the supervision of the Mayor and City Council and therefore, its financial statements should be included in the combined financial statements to conform to generally accepted accounting principles. The Commission is audited by other auditors.

3. Compliance with Local Government Economic Assistance

The City of Wheelwright received and expended funds from the Commonwealth of Kentucky's Local Government Economic Assistance Fund (LGEA) program. As outlined in the Local Government Economic Assistance Fund Manual each city is required to hold public hearings on the proposed uses and the budget to be enacted. Each city is required to publish legal notices of these hearings. We found no evidence that the City published such notices for the LGEA program. Further, the required annual report of LGEA receipts and expenditures was filed for the twelve month period ended June 30, 1983 instead of the audit period.

Four Kentuckians Noted Geographers

"The Evolution of Geographic Thought in America: A Kentucky Root," is the title of a book written by five nationally-known geographers including two at the University of Kentucky who also edited the book.

The book explains the contributions of Kentucky geographers to the development of geographic ideas and the varied landscape of Kentucky to America's understanding of geography.

For example, the book describes the work of Samuel N. Dicken, a Fleming county native, who made substantial studies of Kentucky's karst topography. "Kentucky's role in the development of the science of geography is not generally known," said Dr. Pradyumna P. Karan, UK professor of geography and one of the writers and editors.

Along with another geography professor, Dr. Wilford A. Bladen, Karan persuaded John Fraser Hart of the University of Minnesota; Preston E. James, professor emeritus at Syracuse University; and Cotton Mather, also of the University of Minnesota, to write chapters for the books.

Survey Seeks Data On Hired Farm Workers

The U.S. Bureau of the Census will conduct a regular survey on employment and unemployment in this area during the week of December 12-17, according to Joseph S. Harris, Director of the Bureau's Regional Office in Charlotte.

In addition to the usual questions on current employment, the December survey will include others concerning hired farm workers. Some of the questions that will be asked concern the number of days hired farm workers did farm and nonfarm work, their wages for farm and nonfarm work, and the number of farm wage workers migrating to other counties and states to do farm work.

Households in this area are part of the sample of 72,000 across the country scientifically selected to represent a cross section of all U.S. households.

The book is dedicated to four well-known geographers who were either born in Kentucky or conducted outstanding research in Kentucky and their work is explained in the book.

The geographers, all deceased, are:
—Nathaniel Southgate Shaler, a Campbell county native, who, for a time, was a Harvard University professor and director of the Kentucky Geological Survey at the same time.
—Ellen Churchill Semple, a Louisville native who taught at the University of Chicago and Clark University. Semple is probably the most important of the four geographers, said Bladen. Her research sought to prove that the history and destiny of the country is influenced by the environment. She rode horseback throughout Eastern Kentucky to learn how isolation has shaped the social customs of the area. Her works are considered classics in the geography discipline. She donated her awards and papers to UK and the Ellen C. Semple School in Louisville was named for her in 1932.
—Carl Ortwin Sauer. This geographer founded the University of Michigan Field Station at Mill Spring, near Burnside, and directed the station for several years. His work on Kentucky's Pennyroyal Region also became a classic.
—Fred Kurt Schaefer, a geographer at the University of Iowa, who made a plea for more concern with the development of theory.

The book also refers to J. Russell Whitaker, a native of Cynthiana, who did not work in Kentucky but is a prominent geographer. He is now retired and lives in Nashville.

The volume is available at the UK Campus Book Store and other stores in Lexington.

Sees Patient No. 45,000

Dr. Midkiff and 45,000th patient.

Dr. Hal Midkiff, who has practiced optometry for nearly 30 years in Prestonsburg, saw his 45,000th patient, Nov. 18. The "milestone" patient was John Michael Roe, of Blue River.

Dr. Midkiff spent his childhood in Huntington, W. Va., and married Miss Geraldine McVey in 1939. During World War II he served as a gunnery instructor in the U.S. Air Force. After the war he, his wife, and daughter, Leslie, moved to Memphis, Tenn. for his optometric training. After graduation, he moved to the Prestonsburg area and bought Dr. John Simpson's practice. During his early years here he had offices in Prestonsburg and Wheelwright. Today, he practices at 13 Court Street in Prestonsburg.

There have been rumors that he has retired, but at 66 and in excellent physical health, he hopes to examine 45,000 more patients. He has three children, Leslie, Stephen and Stephanie, and four grandchildren.

Blood Drive Set Today at HRMC

Highlands Regional Medical Center will have a blood drive in the Inservice Classroom, today (Wednesday), from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. All donors are eligible for the drawing of a gift certificate donated by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

These donations provide the blood necessary for transfusions over the holidays. Many people are alive today because someone donated before it was needed. It only takes a little time but your blood donation is the gift that keeps on giving.

The Prestonsburg Donor Center will hold its third Christmas Donorama on the second floor of the Municipal Building, Tuesday, December 20, and Thursday, December 22, from 12 noon to 9 p.m.

Coal Men Are Told, 'Time To Cooperate'

It is time for the environmentalists and the coal companies to stop fighting and learn to cooperate.

This is what Jackie Swigart, secretary of Kentucky's Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet, told coal industry officials at a "New Lands for the Future" conference, held recently at Morehead State University.

"We don't need a 'we and they' situation," said Swigart. "What we need is to talk about what is best for Kentucky." Environmental laws are here to stay, she continued.

"And there is no question about it, they are costly; but the cost on the other side—if we don't think about the environment and plan ahead—is much more.

"I think it's funny the environmentalists now have money. Before it was the coal companies who had the money and they were fighting all the environmental laws," Swigart said.

The current balance between the coal industry and environmentalists is important, she said, adding that, "What we are trying to do with these laws is to minimize the damage to the environment and protect the land for the future."

Conferences such as this one are important for this, Swigart said.

"Providing useful land for development and at the same time protecting the environment for the future is very timely," Swigart commented. "And I am very glad to see MSU involved in this important pursuit."

The "New Lands for the Future" conference was sponsored by MSU's School of Applied Sciences and Technology.

Our word "aroma" was the ancient Greek word for "spices."

Seminar For RN's Slated at MSU

A seminar for registered nurses, "Legal and Ethical Issues in Health Care," will be held at Morehead State University, Dec. 14, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The seminar will cover such topics as new laws and decisions and standards regarding nursing, as well as current bioethical issues.

Presenters will include Timothy Lowe, of Dehner and Lowe, Attorneys at Law; Sister Mary Judeann Lueken, assistant administrator at Saint Claire Medical Center in Morehead; and Dr. George Dickinson, head of MSU's Department of Sociology, Social Work and Corrections.

The seminar is scheduled in Reed Auditorium. A registration fee covers the seminar, handouts, a luncheon and coffee breaks.

Student nurses may attend the seminar free. The cost for the luncheon is extra.

- Stick these ideas on your refrigerator.
- MAGNET GOES HERE
- The more you use, the more energy you'll save.
- Whenever possible, use a toaster, toaster-oven or an electric frypan instead of your large oven or range.
 - Never use the oven as a heater.
 - Place pans on the surface units of your range before you turn on the heat.
 - Use a small amount of water when boiling eggs and vegetables. Use tight-fitting lids, too.
 - Place the most often used items in the front of your refrigerator shelves so you can get to them quickly.
 - Make sure refrigerator door seals are tight, free of grease.
 - Don't wash your dishes until you've got a full load. That's usually after dinner.
 - Turn off the lights, radio and TV before you leave.
 - Don't let the hot water run while you're shaving. Fill the sink halfway instead.
 - If you can, use an electric razor. It uses less energy in a year than the hot water your hand razor uses in a week.
 - Set your water heater's temperature at a moderate 140°F or as low as possible to allow for enough hot water.
 - Take shorter showers.
 - Wash and dry only full loads of clothes.
 - Keep your thermostat at 68° or less in the winter, at least 78° in the summer.
 - In winter, open drapes and shades to let sun heat your home. When sun sets, close them.
 - In summer, close drapes and shades to keep your home from getting overheated.
 - Don't heat or cool unused rooms. Close them off.
 - Keep the damper on your fireplace closed when not in use.

Colorado Field Lab To Detect Radiation

A field laboratory is being established in Colorado by Oak Ridge National Laboratory (ORNL) to survey some 8,000 residential, commercial, and public properties in nine western states which are possible locations of low-level radioactive contamination from the use of uranium mill tailings in construction.

The three-year effort is designed to identify those properties on which remedial action is required by the federal government to meet standards established by the Environmental Protection Agency for human radiation protection.

The U.S. Department of Energy-sponsored project, operating out of DOE's Grand Junction (Colorado) Area Office, is part of the uranium mill tailings remedial action program.

Field surveys by the six-member team from ORNL's Health and Safety Research Division will be conducted in and around Grand Junction, where some 6,800 of the uranium mill tailings properties are located, at other locations in Colorado, and in portions of Arizona, Idaho, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Texas, Utah and Wyoming.

From 1943 to 1970 in these states, uranium was mined and milled, producing several million tons of residue known as mill tailings containing low levels of radium.

The remedial program is being carried out under the Uranium Mill Tailings Radiation Control Act of 1978.

Preliminary surveys will begin in the Grand Junction area during November, at which time an ORNL-developed mobile scanning van will be driven along roads and highways bordering the suspected properties to detect the weak gamma radiation given off by radium.

Properties identified from this initial survey will be examined directly, with permission from the owners, using even more detailed survey techniques and hand-held instruments which can detect very small amounts of radioactive material.

For detailed examinations of soil samples, a high resolution laboratory housed in a 36-foot semi-trailer parked at DOE's Grand Junction offices will be used, since it is centrally located with respect to the sites to be surveyed.

In addition to the mill tailings properties located around Grand Junction, other surveys will take place at: Monument Valley and Tuba City, Arizona; Durango, Gunnison, Maybell, Naturita, New Rifle, Old Rifle, and Slick Rock, Colorado; Lowman, Idaho; Belfield and Bowman, North Dakota; Lakeview, Oregon; Edgemont, South Dakota; Falls City, Texas; Green River and Salt Lake City, Utah, and Converse County and Riverton, Wyoming.

MEETING THE MEDIA—Jerry F. Howell Sr. of Jackson, right, chairman of the Morehead State University Board of Regents, and Robert M. (Mike) Duncan of Inez, vice chairman, listen to a reporter's question at a press conference following the board's approval of a search process for MSU's next president. Applications will be accepted until Jan. 31.

MSU Planetarium Offers Celestial Show

Suspended in the heavens, the body floats down...down into a deep pool of darkness. Suddenly stars erupt and the gaze is drawn upward, and inward, to the future or the past.

Reality is held at bay during presentations in Morehead State University's Planetarium.

More than 2,000 people transpose themselves into this dream-like world each year.

"Programs we have shown here, in some cases, have been considered better than the Cincinnati Planetarium," said Drew Henderson, an assistant in the planetarium and a junior at MSU.

One of these shows, according to the Goshen, Ohio, native, is "The Star of Bethlehem," a Christmas program scheduled this year at 7:30 p.m. on Dec. 8, 13 and 15. A 4:10 p.m. showing also is scheduled on Dec. 6, 7, 12 and 14.

In addition to this program, there are five other celestial offerings: "The Universe of Dr. Einstein," "The Sky of Charles Messier," "Cosmos: The Voyage to the Stars," and "The Loneliness Factor."

It is appropriate that one homemade program is also offered, since the planetarium itself is virtually homemade as well. The man with the idea was Dr. C.J. Whidden, professor of physics at MSU. The concept began when he was asked to teach astronomy.

In 1974, armed with less than $10,000, Dr. Whidden designed and constructed the planetarium. Located in Lappin Hall, Room 212, there is little indication of all the work involved.

The frame is made of 47 wooden arches which form a 12-foot, dome-shaped ceiling. The walls are covered with quarter-inch sheet rock and carpet 4½ feet up from the floor. The room is elliptical in shape, with a seating capacity of 30.

Henderson, who spends 10 hours each week working with the equipment, says there are approximately 20 projectors in the Planetarium.

"I spend most of my time building projectors and setting up the planetarium programs," he added.

Dr. Whidden, because of his class schedule, usually shows these 60 or 90-minute programs by appointment only. A limited number of public shows are scheduled throughout the year, and various classes use the facility for special projects.

Additional information and appointments for showings can be obtained by contacting Dr. Whidden at (606) 783-2917.

Grateful for Help

My campaign for Kentucky Attorney General was a long and hard one. It was the help and support of the voters of Floyd county that kept me going through the long months of my campaign. Pikeville College will be offering several night classes during the 1984 spring semester, however, the curriculum will include a greater variety compared to previous schedules.

"We want to attract more non-traditional students, those who may be in the work force, and those who can only attend classes at night," Vicki Brown, registrar, stated. Of the 96 part-time students enrolled at Pikeville College, 21 attend evening classes only, with 14 attending day and evening sessions.

Courses scheduled for the spring semester include Introduction to Biology-Non-major; Introduction to Biology Lab-Non-major; Behavior In Organization; Second Year Ballet; Second Year Tap; Second Year Jazz; Introduction to Communication Disorders; Teaching of Social Studies; Composition I; American Novel Since World War II; Educational Media; Math Application for Nursing; Modern Math; Calculus III; Safe Mine Supervision I; Mine Operations & Law I; Mine-Maps Graphics; and General Physics.

Registration for these classes will be held January 9 in the Armington Science Building from 8:30-11:45 a.m. and 12:30-4 p.m. Classes begin January 10. For additional information call 432-9332.
