Bid Laws Not Known, Says Clerk

For Floyd Fiscal Court, it is an unexpected and unwelcome squeeze on their budget, but County Clerk Carla R. Bolton was unapologetic this week about the fact that she will turn over to the court this year only a fraction of what she has turned over the past two years.

In response to a state auditor's report that she has violated bidding laws, however, the clerk pleaded ignorance and took steps at a meeting of the fiscal court Wednesday to mend her ways.

Although Mrs. Bolton has not yet made her annual settlement with the court-by law, it is supposed to be made by March 15-a financial statement published last month shows that the clerk took in $4,364,745 in 1985 and spent all but $13,113 of it. The money left over, known as "excess fees," goes to the

Last spring, the clerk turned over $78,039 to the county and, in drawing up its 1985-'86 budget, the fiscal court anticipated that at least $60,000 could be expected from the clerk's office this year. The main reason the county will not be getting that kind of money from her this year, Mrs. Bolton said, is that she spent nearly $32,000 in 1985 remodeling and refurnishing her office.

Either way-whether it goes to the fiscal court to buy gravel or stays with the clerk to upgrade services-the public gets the benefit of the money, the clerk said. And her first responsibility, she added, is to take care of her own

Improvements in the office, the clerk said, included installation of carpet and ceiling fans, painting and rewiring, and the purchase of a computerized copier and three typewriters. The office was in 'pitiful" shape before the work was done, she said.

A report by State Auditor Mary Ann Tobin, which was presented to the fiscal court on her behalf last week, indicated that the clerk's office paid out $20,114 in 1984 for microfilming services for which no bids were received. State law requires that bids be solicited for purchases over $7500.

Mrs. Bolton acknowledged later that she spent another $19,954 on microfilming, also without taking bids, in 1985, and that the services were sold her by Joe Bolton, then a salesman for Southern Rebinding Co. of Morgantown N.C. and now her husband. Last year's office remodeling, which cost $31,935, was also done without bids, she conceded. The clerk claimed she was unaware of the bidding law until an auditor drew it to her attention last September. Most of the remodeling was done piecemeal, under contracts of less than $7500, and she was unaware that the bidding law applied to total expenses in a given category, she said.

In contracting to have county records microfilmed, she had checked informally on prices and found that the firm represented by Bolton offered the best price, Mrs. Bolton said. This year, for example, Southern Rebinding quoted $16,609 for the job, while its nearest competitor, Keith Jessie Associates, of Campbellsville, quoted $17,636, the clerk said. In response to the auditor's criticism, the clerk asked the fiscal court for authorization to advertise formally for bids on the microfilming this

Bids also figured largely in other fiscal court business Wednesday. Over strenuous arguments by Magistrate (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

Lawmakers, Board Haggle Over Plan

Three Schools Appear Likely; 4th Undecided

Most of the 17 who spoke at a hearing Thursday on a proposal to change the order in which new county schools will be built argued vigorously for positions that are no longer in dispute; the need is dire for new schools at Garrett and Prestonsburg. Nor did anyone quibble with Principal Dan Branson's argument that a new grade school at Allen should be among those next constructed.

The outstanding question, assuming that four building projects could get under way more or less simultaneously as state funds become available over the next biennium, is whether the fourth project should be the expansion of Betsy Layne Elementary School, as Superintendent Ray Brackett argued on behalf of the Floyd Board of Education, or the construction of a new high school on Left Beaver Creek, which two state legislators made it clear they expected.

In the presence of Deputy State Superintendent Dan Branham, the hearing officer designated by the state Board of Education to come up with a recommendation on the change requested last month in Floyd's approved construction agenda, Brackett outlined the local board's argument that the Garrett project should be moved up from ninth place on the list to third, behind a Prestonsburg middle school and a grade school at Allen, and that a proposed high

Prosecutor Dan Rowland said it was immaterial whether the source of the alleged intoxication was ginger stew or Jack Daniels. Bagge Blasts OSM At Coal Meet Here

Doubled Coal Use Predicted During Decade

About 200 area coal producers heard a blistering attack here last week on the federal agency responsible for regulating the stripmining industry and on the environmentalists who have been the industry's most persistent critics.

In the keynote address to the ninth annual meeting of the Big Sandy-Elkhorn Coal Mining Institute at May Lodge Thursday, Carl E. Bagge, president of the National Coal Association, called for a "summit meeting on tyranny and abuse" to counter the regulatory efforts of the Office of Surface Mining, which he said was bent on wiping out surface mining and punishing those engaged in

The coal company executives also heard a prediction that coal use will grow to a billion tons within the next decade, doubling consumption since the 1973 Arab oil embargo forced Americans to seek domestic energy sources.

Bagge urged the operators to bring pressure to bear on OSM through the courts, state legislators, and news media. "Wherever you operate, get after the tyrants. Make the abuses known. Visit a legislator in each and every district," he said. "Take a file drawer of violation notices with you. Go through them. Explain the why and wherefores... Bring in your bankrupt colleagues whose costs have been unnecessarily pushed beyond the price of Bagge insisted the industry is in favor of reclamation. "I'm not here to defend any of these guys playing fast and loose with reclamation. We can't be on that side of the issue," he said, adding, "Why should we be burdened with illegal operators?" But he said federal regulators are more interested in punishment than in reclamation.

Carl E. Bagge

While regulations implementing the 1977 Surface Mining and Reclamation Act call for restoring the original hillside, Bagge said, "If an eastern Kentucky farmer wants his land flatter... and it does no harm, he has a right to it If leaving a roadside highwall gives a poor county 30 new jobs, and does no harm, the jobless have a right to them.' The industry official said OSM undermined the principles of federalism, issued conflicting regulations, duplicated the states' regulatory functions, and unnecessarily multiplied citations. "When the agency is at odds with a state, it buries the miners of that state in violation notices. A direct act or even a mistake that should draw one notice is written up as four or five or six violations; the rule seems to be as many as possible," Bagge said.

The spirit and direction of the regulatory agency, Bagge said, were set by "vigilantes, zealots, guerrillas and malcontents" recruited under the Carter administration at a time when "the country quit worrying about the quality of supper and fixed on vaguer, larger worries like the quality of life." He ridiculed what he called the religious attitude that made the former president and the environmentalists "sit in judgment" on stripminers as "greedy despoilers.'

Cable Co. Promises To Improve Services

Television cable subscribers here should get better reception and the potential for more channels soon, according to Consolidated Communications regional manager Marty Crawford.

Though Prestonsburg's city council voted at its March 24 meeting to void the company's exclusive contract for nonpayment of franchise fees-only the most recent of the city's reactions to the poor quality of TV reception here-Crawford said his company would go ahead with the rebuilding, first proposed in November.

When Crawford and other Consolidated Communications officials met with then-Mayor Harold Cooley and several city council members at that time, all agreed the Prestonsburg system was bad. Crawford said then, as he repeats now, that he wants to upgrade service here. The old administration declined to act on the proposal, deferring instead to the present council. Rather than give Consolidated Communications an answer, said Crawford, the present administration has attempted simply to change the franchise agreement, taking out the exclusivity clause. He indicated his company was tired of waiting.

That's why the rebuilding, which should take about nine months, will begin in earnest May 1. Crawford said the rebuilt system will be the same as the one offered in November, barring technical difficulities. Plans call for three tiers of service, with the most basic a 12-channel package similar to the present basic option.

Likely to be included are WSAZ, WCHS and WOWK, the West Virginiabased NBC, CBS and ABC affiliates Prestonsburg has been receiving for decades; WTBS, the Atlanta "Superstation"; CNN, the 24-hour all news network; ACTS, family entertainment and religious programming; CBN, the Christian Broadcast Network; WGN, a 24-hour independent station from Chicago; WYMT, the Hazard NBC affiliate; WVAH, a West Virginia independent; ESPN, the 24-hour sports network; and KET, the Kentucky Educational Television network.

The next tier, provided for an additional fee, includes the Nashville Network, with country and western entertainment; MTV, a 24-hour rock music station; USA, providing 24-hour sports, children's and women's programming;

Pool Work Delayed As Grant Withheld

Archer Park's swimming pool will probably have to wait a while longer for her much-needed face lift.

A $60,000 matching funds grant from the state Land and Water Conservation Fund, which had been earmarked to refurbish the pool, has been turned down, city officials learned Monday. Had the grant been awarded, the city would have been responsible for supplying $30,000 either in cash, materials or

The rejected application will not affect the pool's operation this year. City Administrator David Evans said that, even if the grant had been awarded, it would have been too late to do the work before the pool opens this summer. When the grant application was made, it was hoped a favorable answer would arrive by January. Plans originally called for the renovation to be completed by the end of spring.

While disappointed, Evans said he wasn't surprised the money didn't come through. He cited as the culprit the general reduction of grant money available, adding that facilities which can be used year-round receive a higher

Application to the fund will be made again, and Evans said other avenues will be explored as well. One such option is the Kentucky Outdoor Park and Recreation Program, administered by the Land and Water Conservation Fund. Also, with the hope of someday building a new pool at Archer Park, Evans said the city will seek help from the Appalachian Regional Commission.

The swimming pool was built in 1962 and has never had major repair work done. The most pressing problems lie within the plumbing system, with a number of pipes and pumps in advanced stages of disrepair.

According to police reports, the incident began about 2:15 a.m. Sunday, when Sgt. Gerald Clark, of the Prestonsburg Police Department, clocked a van driven by Lacy Fletcher, 30, of Tomahawk, at 58 m.p.h. in the 35 m.p.h. zone on U.S. 23 near the high school.

When Fletcher failed to respond to the officer's lights or siren, Clark reportedly initiated pursuit, the van reaching speeds of about 70 m.p.h. along the Auxier Road before turning into the entrance to Jenny Wiley State Park, where it entered a ditch and stopped. Clark left his patrol car there and radioed the police station that the vehicle had wrecked. As he approached the van, however, Fletcher pulled out of the ditch and sped away.

Clark continued pursuit and was joined by officer Mike Meade at the junction of U.S. 23 and Rt. 3. Both cruisers followed the van toward and across Dewey

Clark said the van was proceeding recklessly, crossing into the wrong lane during the pursuit. Finally, as the suspect made a wide right turn, Clark was able to pass, and he and Meade attempted to corral the van between their cruisers. The van struck Clark's cruiser, causing substantial damage to the police car and also causing the van to swerve off the roadway, where it entered a ditch, traveling about 230 feet before encountering a culvert and flipping onto its

MEDICARE COVERAGE

Under the law, Medicare cannot cover custodial care of a patient or care that is not considered reasonable and necessary for the diagnosis and treatment of an illness or injury. Care is considered to be custodial when its primary purpose is to meet a patient's personal needs and when it could be provided by people who do not have professional skills or training.

For example, helping a patient eat, bathe, or dress can be extremely important to the person's well-being, but these services do not require professional

Even if the patient is in a participating hospital or skilled nursing facility, or is receiving care from a participating home health agency. Medicare would not cover care that is primarily custodial in nature.

Care would not be considered reasonable or necessary if the patient is admitted to a hospital or skilled nursing facility when the kind of care required could be provided elsewhere. Furthermore, care would not be considered reasonable or necessary if the patient remained in a hospital or skilled nursing facility longer than his or her medical condition required. Medicare payments would end with further inpa tient care was no longer considered necessary

The decision about whether inpatient care is reasonable or necessary is made in part by Peer Review Organizations (PROs) in each State. Each PRO is made up of local physicians whose task is to review the care provided by their fellow physicians. Medicare hospital insurance cannot pay for any inpatient hospital care that a PRO determines is not medically necessary.

Similarly, visits by a physician to a patient that are more frequent than is the usual medical practice in a given area would not be considered reasonable or necessary unless there were medical complications.

More information about Medicare can be obtained at your nearest Social Security Office, located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in your local telephone directory under U.S. Government.

Graduates From Police Academy

City police officer Chuck Akers graduated from the Police Academy conducted by the Kentucky Justice Cabinet, Dept. of Criminal Justice Training, at the Law Enforcement Training Center on the campus of Eastern Kentucky University, April 11.

He completed 400 hours of course work in 10 weeks, and has been assigned to night patrol now that he's back on duty. Akers graduated with a very good average, and should be commended. commented Police Chief Stan Fletcher.

'I'm very proud of his accomplishments. It reflects greatly on the type of person Chuck is, and I'm glad to have him back," added the chief.

In addition to completing the standard academy program, all city police officers must complete 40 hours of inservice training each year at EKU.

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Warning Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

The following nine symptoms involving back pain or strange sensations are often the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these may spell back trouble:

(1) Paresthesias (see above) (2) Headaches (3) Painful joints (4) Numbness in the arms or hands (5) Loss of sleep (6) Stiffness in the neck (7) Pain between the shoulders (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back (9) Numbness or pain in the

These signals may indicate your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will likely become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these warning signals...call for in-depth consulation in Layman's terms.

Ask The Pharmacist

QUESTION: I have had a sore throat each time I've had the flu this winter, What is recommended to help the pain? ANSWER: A sore throat is a common alment which can be quite uncomfortable. Each swallow of saliva, food, or drink can serve as a cruel reminder of the irritated, raw throat tissue. The most common cause of a sore throat is infection by a virus. (i.e. "flu"). The majority of sore throats are harmless and can be safely treated at home. However, the familiar "strep throat" can be very serious. When left untreated, this bacterial infection can lead to heart or kidney damage.

There are numerous medications and dosage forms available to treat a sore throat. These include lozenges, sprays, mouthwashes, gargles, and even chewing gum. With the exception of lozenges, the amount of contact time between the drug and the irritated throat tissues is relatively brief. As a general rule, lozenges are more effective than liquids. However, the effect of the lozenge quickly disappears once it is dissolved and the drug is washed away by saliva.

The value of gargling as a means of helping a sore throat is questionable. During the act of gargling, the tongue rises to the roof of the mouth, thus the liquid gargle does not reach the irritated tissues on the back wall of the throat unless some of the gargle is swallowed. Sprays are much more effective than gargles or mouthwashes for delivering drugs to the irritated throat tissue.

Products advertised as antiseptic do little to cure or prevent an infection. Any "antiseptic activity" of these products is momentary at best, because of the impossibility of sterilizing the mouth and throat. The best that can be hoped for when suffering from a sore throat is temporary relief from the pain.

While medicated lozenges and sprays are very effective for temporarily easing the sore throat pain, other measures may be equally effective. Warm salt water (1/2 teaspoon of table salt in 80z of warm water) is recommended both as a gargle and a mouthwash. This mildly concentrated salt solution may help reduce the painful swelling and soothe the irritated tissues. Sucking hard candies between the use of lozenges and/or sprays can also help soothe the sore throat. In addition, aspirin taken by mouth may be very helpful in relieveing the pain. Topical aspirin (for example aspirin-containing chewing gum) is probably as effective as aspirin tables, but is much more expensive and any analgesic effect results from the aspirin being swallowed and absorbed in the stomach.

Most cases of sore throat are benign and do not require a visit to the doctor's office. But a sore throat should not always be ignored. It may signal a serious condition that requires immediate attention. If the sore throat persists more than a couple of days or is accompanied by high fever, check with your doctor.

Farmland Values Show Nationwide Decline

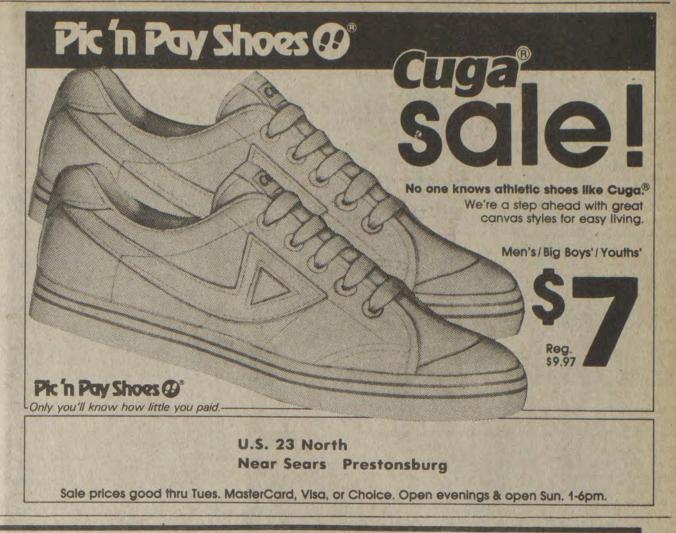

Kentucky farmland values, following a national trend, have declined 4 percent from 1985, according to figures from the Kentucky Crop and Livestock Reporting

"This decline also puts Kentucky farmland values 18 percent below the peak they hit in 1982," said Agriculture Commissioner David E. Boswell.

In Kentucky, the average farmland value on Feb. 1, 1986, was $870 an acre as compared to $906 on April 1, 1985.

Farmland values across the nation have declined for the fourth consecutive year. Average farmland value for the nation, Feb. 1, was $596 per acre, down 12 percent from April 1, 1985, and 28 percent below the peak of $222 in 1999.

"What could not be done in writing the law—the abolition of surface mining—could be advanced by regulation," Bagge said of the environmentalists' intentions. "At the bottom of that attitude is hate, not only for coal and for the system, but for all things American."

A provision that OSM must pay courtordered attorneys' fees for those who sue the agency has proven to be "a relief bill for the professional environmental lobby," said Bagge, who suggested that coal operators seek to recover their legal fees from the agency. "The next time you collect a litter of violation notices, go to your nearest federal district court for an order to block the process while the thing is sorted out, and demand legal fees for having been put to the trouble."

"If settling this takes another fight, let's start today." Bagge said. "The chaos and shaking have gone on for long enough."

Another speaker on the opening day of the two-day conference, Oak Ridge National Laboratory official Ronnie A. Bradley, predicted that, regulatory problems notwithstanding, the next decade would see a sharp rise in coal use with the development of non-polluting methods of burning it.

Many utilities are considering new technologies, Bradley said, noting that a pilot coal-gasification plant has operated successfully in southern California since 1984 and a fluidized-bed combustion generating plant is being operated by the Tennessee Valley Authority near Paducah. "It is the responsibility of the coal industry to accept the challenge to utilize technologies that will be acceptable to the public with respect to their environmental emissions." he said ed $1000. Second-offense convictions were logged against Vernon Akers, 36, of Prestonsburg, ordered to pay $407 in fine and costs; Billy Johnson, 26, of Martin, who was also convicted of driving on a suspended license (60 days, $1200 in fine and costs); and Roe Ousley, 67, of Martin, also convicted of driving on a suspended license, $907.

Gary L. Kidd, 23, of Betsy Layne, decided to take his DUI case before a jury and act as his own attorney. The panel convicted him and recommended two days' in the county jail "to think about not drinking and driving."

Others convicted of or pleading guilty to drunk driving:

Barbara McKinney, 29, of Printer, two days, probated, $200 fine and costs; Ida Mae Tibbs, 31, of Harold, $200 fine and costs: Edward A. Moore, 31, of Prestonsburg, $357; David L. Little, 20, of Melvin, two days' public service for Wheelwright Fire Department, $207; Chester D. Little, five days, $407; Clayton B. Cummins, 26, of Betsy Layne, $407; John P. O'Connor, of Paintsville, $407; Russell Ousley, 42, of Prestonsburg, $357; Michael Ward, $407; Joseph Brian Isaacs; Joe Fitzpatrick, 57, of Galloway, Ohio, two days, $407; Charles Slone, 32, of Blue River, two days' public service, $207; Freddie A. Burchett, 42, of West Prestonsburg, five days, $447; Allen Dagget, 33, of West Prestonsburg; John M. Turner II, 38, of Wayland, $357; Larry Fairchild, 24, of Staffordsville, $207; and Mark Alan Leslie, 30, of Pocahontas, Va., $400.

A DUI charge against Michael Adkins, 39, of Dwale, was reduced to public intoxication because of his relatively low blood-alcohol reading (.07 percent). An identical charge against Gary R. Johnson, 25, of Prestonsburg, was reduced because the arresting officer was unable to place the defendant behind the wheel of the car and failed to read him his rights.

Two Melvin women charged each other with assault following a fight which began last March when Janice Berger accused school bus driver Rhonda Puckett of putting her child off the bus too early. A district court jury found for Mrs. Puckett, ordering Mrs. Berger to pay $109 in fine and court costs.

Wallace Collins, 32, of Stanville, was sentenced in his absence to 20 days in jail and ordered to pay $557 for reckless driving, carrying no insurance, and having no driver's license. Burl Marcum, 35, of Turkey Creek, was sentenced to five days and fined $157 for driving on a suspended license. Convicted of speeding and driving on a suspended license was Lee J. Caldwell, 24, of Salyersville, who was sentenced to five days and ordered to pay $247.

Ronnie Hall, 27, of Galveston, was sentenced to 30 days and ordered to pay $57 after being convicted of criminal trespass.

A separate fee would be charged for each of the channels in the next tier. These premium channels include Home Box Office, Cinemax, The Movie Channel, The Disney Channel, Showtime and The Playboy Channel. All specialize in movies and other features.

Crawford reiterated a November pledge that Consolidated Communications would not promote The Playboy Channel, though supplying it to those who requested it.

The rates for the basic package would go up by around $3, but not until the system renovation is complete.

The city council's opposition is not the only obstacle likely to be faced by Consolidated. At next Monday's council meeting, Jo Cash, of Middle Creek, plans to submit a petition signed by a number of residents of that section asking that the contract be voided. A spokesman for a group of Rough and Tough residents came to the March 24 meeting with a similar request.

If the cable company still holds their exclusive contract here after January 1, they will be free to set their own rates. The cable industry is to be federally deregulated then.

Mayor Ann Latta, when asked to comment Tuesday on the rebuilding plans, said she had just been informed herself and had not yet had time to discuss options with City Attorney Larry Brown. She added, though, that she was happy the system was being rebuilt.

The county will pay $52,655 for the Fiat-Allis, which will first be used to build a golf course at Allen Park. The Caterpillar would have cost $75,600

Magistrate Owens acknowledged later that his brother, Joe Owens, works as a diesel mechanic for Whayne Supply and that he once worked for the firm himself. But he favored purchase of Caterpillar equipment only because of its mechanical superiority and the readier availability of parts, he insisted.

Polley and Trent, of Bardstown, bid successfully for reconstruction of bridges over Mink Branch of Mud Creek and over Middle Creek near Clark Elementary School. The Mink Branch bridge will cost $53,450. Bid price on the Clark bridge, $35,940, was reduced by $2000 when the court undertook to do the preliminary fill work. Even so, the county will have to make up the difference between the contract price and the $32,393 which the state Bureau of Highways has committed to pay for the Bids received for playground equipment for recreation parks on Mud Creek and Left Beaver Creek will be studied before contracts are let, according to a fiscal court decision.

Oscar rice was recalled as supervisor at Allen Park at a monthly salary of $1250. Hired for the road crew were Carl R. Bays, Ricky L. Prater, Randy McKinney, Travis D. Hall, Billy Merritt, and Bill Marsillett.

Goble-Roberts Bridge Said Nearer Reality

Goble-Roberts Addition residents can look forward to a new way in and out of their neighborhood.

A bridge connecting that subdivision with Ky. 1428 near Knotley Hollow moved substantially closer to reality last week, as Prestonsburg acquired deeds on two of the four parcels of land needed before bids could be taken and construction begin. Verbal commitments have been acquired on the other two.

While negotiations have been complex, City Administrator David Evans said the property owners have been very cooperative. "They've sincerely tried to work with the city," he said.

The new bridge, which should be completed within 18 months, will replace an old wood-and-steel structure, unused for years, now almost ready to fall of its own accord. It will afford a second access to Goble-Roberts—significant, said Evans, in the event of a train derailment or other such calamity which could block the Lancer-Watergap entrance.

Coming in at a projected cost of $1 million, the bridge is being funded through a Federal Bridge Replacement Program matching funds grant. Prestonsburg is responsible for providing $200,000—20 percent of the total cost.

One of the biggest pre-construction tasks involves the Community Freewill Baptist Church there. Design plans call for the bridge to go through what is now a section of their kitchen. Church members have indicated they will move the building rather than rebuild.

The bridge has been under construction for about two years, but formal approval didn't come until almost a year

Health And Fitness Questions Answered

Which is more healthful: a fast-food hamburger or a baked potato with cheese? How do you know when you're exercising too much? Why do heart attacks occur more frequently in the morning? How can you make sex more enjoyable?

Geared to everyone's secret desire to make the most of what they've got, "A Bodywatch Special: In Search of the Perfect Day" offers truly realistic answers to a host of health and fitness quiz questions. This one-hour special will be aired on KET Monday, April 7, at 7:00 p.m.

Taped live before an audience, the "Bodywatch" special features veteran talk-show host Dick Cavett, joined in taped segments by "cowboy" Dr. James H. "Red" Duke, Jr., professor of surgery at the University of Texas Medical School at Houston; Dr. Judith Rodin, professor of psychology and psychiatry at Yale University, and T. George Harris, editor-in-chief of American Health.

American Health.

The program tackles four major subject areas: stress, exercise, nutrition, and sex. Viewers take a tour of a typical American day, showing how a range of daily choices can radically affect our lives. In the realm of stress management, for instance, viewers learn how their reaction to traffic jams can mean the difference between a "little hassle" and "the commute that kills."

school to replace those at McDowell and Wheelwright should be bumped to fifth spot, behind the 12-classroom addition at Betsy Layne Elementary.

The new School Facility Construction Commission decided Friday that, of $15 million in debt service money to be distributed statewide, Floyd will receive $1.1 million. Assuming that each dollar available for repaying debts can generate $10 in bonds, the state money should finance $11 million in construction here. In addition, perhaps an additional $2.3 million in bonding potential will result from an anticipated property tax hike here.

The top four projects favored by the local board would cost about $10 million to build and would house 2457 students. some 36 percent of the elementary school population, Brackett said.

More planning needs to go into the location of a Left Beaver high school and, in any event, a single high school would itself consume up to $6 million of the newfound building funds, Brackett told Branham. in justifying the Floyd board's demoting that project to fifth place on the construction list.

Don Hart, representing the state Education Department's building and grounds division, noted that, while consolidated high schools are expensive, they are also "politically dangerous to board members" and likely to become "more dangerous and volatile" the longer they are put off.

He had no problem with the inclusion of Garrett in the top four, because the school there had obviously deteriorated since state education officials last surveyed Floyd school buildings in 1984 and, although he would have preferred that the McDowell/Wheelwright project be left in third position, he would recommend that the state board approve the amendment proposed by the local board, Hart said.

Two Left Beaver residents put in a word for keeping a high school among the top four projects. In a written statement, Anna Hunt, of Halo, said that "if the change the local board has proposed is allowed, Wheelwright might as well be closed." And Virgil Hall, president of the Academic Boosters' Club at Wheelwright High, reminded the hearing officer that, when the local board voted to edge the Left Beaver project out of the final four, board member Dr. Mary Hall was not present.

"I hope it was not because of her stand on the superintendent," said Hall, a pointed reference to Dr. Hall's support for ousted superintendent E.P. Grigsby.

The Left Beaver high school project also got a boost from House Majority Leader Greg Stumbo, who said that school construction funds voted by the legislature last summer were intended for projects as they were then listed. He warned that the state's whole school construction program could get bogged down in litigation if a school district tried to switch the priorities around.

Senator Benny Ray Bailey said the same, noting that "in the summer of '85 we knew what we were voting on" and adding that he "would not approve a plan that does not include a secondary school on Beaver Creek."

Both legislators urged inclusion of Garrett in the upcoming round of construction, explaining that additional monies had been appropriated for that purpose in the legislative session just ended. Rep. Jim Rose added his support to the Garrett project, as did half a dozen citizens who have been prominent in the eight-month effort to have that flood-ravaged school replaced.

In response to state legislators' argument that construction monies were intended for projects already specified, Brackett noted recently that the same legislators that voted the new construction monies in a special session of the General Assembly last summer also established the process—including public hearings of the kind held in the Prestonsburg Elementary School auditorium Thursday—by which changes could be made in a school district's construction agenda.

Branham said he expected to make his recommendation on the Floyd proposal at the state Board of Education's May 4 meeting.

Half of all oil and gas severance taxes collected by the state are returned to the counties where they originated. The county receives 90 percent of the return; the remaining 10 percent is shared by incorporated cities within the county based on their respective populations.

On a statewide basis, KIPPA said, the state returned $7,607,815 to local government in the form of shared oil and gas severance tax revenues for calendar year 1985.

This was 7.6 percent more than the $7,069,844 paid out to cities and counties for calendar year 1984.

For the fourth quarter of 1985, a total of $2,186,805 was returned to local government, up 22.7 percent from the $1,782,901 distributed for the fourth quarter of last year.

Appalachian Studies Scheduled at Berea

Berea College's Appalachian Center has scheduled a summer program in Appalachian literature, resource materials and music, featuring three of the region's most knowledgeable teachers and writers.

The course, designed primarily for teachers who would like to introduce Appalachian Studies courses or units into their schools, begins June 9 and will continue through June 27 on the Berea campus. Three hours of graduate or undergraduate credit will be available through the University of Kentucky's Off-Campus Programs and College of Education.

Noted author and teacher Wilma Dykeman will lecture on the works of the best and most influential writers who have used the Appalachians as a setting.

Dr. Gerald F. Roberts, head of the Weatherford-Hammond Mountain Collection and Southern Appalachian Archives at Berea College, will discuss sources for the study of Appalachian history and culture and will trace the development of Appalachian holdings in the region's libraries.

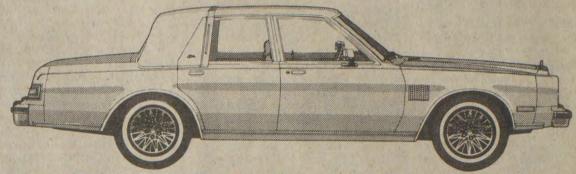

Folk artist Jean Ritchie will emphasize the main musical traditions of the region—ballads, folk songs and instrumental music—and will discuss their use and meaning.

Cost for attending the program includes room, board, tuition and some books.

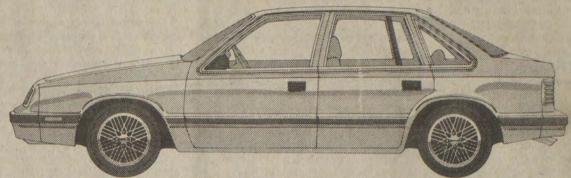

Applications and additional information can be obtained from the Appalachian Center, CPO 2336, Berea College, Berea, Ky., 40404.

ASCS Will Stake Measure Acreage

To assure farmers that they are in compliance with the 1986 acreage reduction requirements and eligible for farm program benefits, the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service provides pre-measurement and other land measurement services.

"At the request of the producer, we will stake and measure any type of acreage, or portions thereof." said county ASCS official Sharon Conley. To be certain that program requirements are met, she said farmers are required to plant within the stakes that are placed when the land is pre-measured, and to report their crop acreages to ASCS after

The 1986 farm programs require farmers to reduce their wheat and upland cotton by 25 percent and feed grains by 20 percent. Mrs. Conley said pre-measurement is important in helping farmers plan the amount of land to devote to the acreage conservation reserve (ACR) and planted acreages of program crops. The ACR is cropland removed from production and put into conserving uses under the 1986 acreage reduction programs.

To be eligible for price support loans, deficiency payments and other program benefits, producers must certify actual planted acreages.

Other ASCS producer services include measuring total cropland, field or subdivisions to be planted and land acres for other purposes. Fees vary, based on the type of service rendered.

Foster Grandparents Prove Their Value

For grandparents, some of the most they're thinking about. One happy look special times of their lives are those spent with their grandchildren. For more than 160 Kentucky "grandparents," time spent with their "grandchildren" gives added meaning to the word "special."

As part of the Kentucky Foster Grandparent Program, individuals such as Nannie Calhoun, of Louisville, and Edna Gaddis, of Somerset, spend up to four hours a day with children of no family relationship, except through the human

They spend their volunteer hours working with one to two residents at the intermediate care facilities for the mentally retarded in Dawson Springs, Louisville and Somerset, which are administered by the Kentucky Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services, and with clients of community mental health programs in Louisville and Maysville.

'This program has been a miracle to me," said Calhoun, a foster grandparent at Hazelwood in Jefferson county since the program began about 12 years ago. "It makes me feel good because I have something to get up for in the morning.'

She is one of 33 foster grandparents working with 68 Hazelwood residents, according to Pat Travis, coordinator of the program at Hazelwood. "Each grandparent has a specific program or set of goals to work on with each child," she said. "Since most of our residents are severely or profoundly retarded, many of the foster grandparents concentrate on developing motor skills or strengthening the child's ability to Gaddis, who last year became a foster grandparent at Oakwood in Pulaski county, said the program has helped her avoid loneliness.

'I just got tired of staying home, so I called and asked for an interview," she said. "I love trying to help people and now I feel like I'm doing something to help myself and the ones I work with.'

Although all of the program participants are volunteers, there are some qualifications which govern eligibility, according to the statewide program director, Ritchey Yost of the department's Division for Institutional Care.

"A foster grandparent may not have an income in excess of 120 percent of the official poverty level and they must be at least 60 years old," Yost said. "They receive a stipend of $2.20 per hour, with most of them working about 20 hours per week." The program is funded by AC-TION, the National Volunteer Agency.

Doris Marcum, foster grandparents program coordinator at Oakwood, said that 16 of the 46 grandparents there work with children in classroom situations. Others, said Marcum, "do whatever grandparents do with their grandchildren, including shopping trips and

Mowing Your Lawn Can Be Dangerous

Mowing the lawn is so routine that many people forget how dangerous the task can be. But power mowers pose a hazard, as is evidenced by estimated 1,130 mower-related injuries in Kentucky in 1985.

"If people would stop and think about using a power mower, they would realize the importance of taking precautions," said E.P. Convers of the Department for Health Services. "A power mower is designed to cut, and it cuts whatever happens to get in its path, whether that be grass, sticks or fingers.

"Some mower blades revolve at the equivalent of 200 miles per hour." he said. "A small pebble thrown from the blades at this speed can easily injure someone. And projectiles can travel for surprising distances.

Statistics show that the number of small children injured by mowers has declined in the past five years. Convers said. Of the estimated 1.530 mowerrelated injuries in 1981, 219 were among children under age five. That number has dropped consistently-to 17 in 1985.

"Safety features and cautionary labeling on newer mowers probably have contributed to the decline," said Conyers. "as well as people's awareness of the importance of keeping children away from mowers and the area being mowed.

Adults account for the majority of mower-related injuries. "The only year in which we had a significant drop was in 1983 when the number of injuries in all age groups fell to 944," said Convers. "But that decline is attributed to neardrought conditions that kept the grass from growing.

Despite warnings, many mowerrelated injuries are caused when people get their hands or feet under the mower deck while the blades are running.

"Do not try to unclog the discharge chute until the mower is turned off and the blades have completely stopped," he said. "Height adjustments should be made with the mower turned off.'

Other injuries occur when people touch hot mufflers or motors. Gasoline explosions are also a danger.

'Gasoline should be added to mowers only when the motor is cool," Conyers said. "And cigarettes should be put out before adding fuel.

Many people do not know how to properly mow a hill. When using a push mower, mow across the slope, Conyers advises. On a riding mower, go up and down the slope, he said.

The proper clothing is important, too. 'Since mowing is a hot job, people are tempted to wear short pants and sandals, but these types of clothing can be dangerous," he said.

Conyers advises wearing long pants to protect legs from projectiles and sturdy shoes to protect feet. Avoid loose clothing, he said, because it can be caught in the machine. Long hair should be covered for the same reason.

"Mowing grass, of course, is a necessity," said Conyers, "and it can be done safely.

For more information about power mower safety, contact Conyers at the Department for Health Services, 275 E. Main St., Frankfort, Ky. 40621. His telephone number is (502) 564-4537.

On Campaign Trail, Dr. Stumbo Claims Coal Gasification Is The Way To Go

Dr. Grady Stumbo, a Democratic candidate for governor, traveled to the Mojave Desert in California last week to take a closer look at a new coal-fired plant that could revitalize the nation's

The Knott County physician, who pushed for an aggressive coal research initiative in his 1983 campaign, called the new cool water coal gasification plant the solution to the environmental cost of burning coal.

"The technology in place at this plant will virtually eliminate the environmental impact of burning coal," said Stumbo. "It will replace costly scrubber systems and bring the damaging effects of acid rain under control.

Stumbo asked the plant managers at the site, which is located midway between Los Angeles and Las Vegas, to test both east and west Kentucky coal.

Since the desert plant's start-up in June 1984, it has successfully burned some of the nation's highest sulfur coal while keeping emissions significantly below stringent federal air quality regulations for coal-fired plants.

PHONE: 886-3630

Often cited as "the world's cleanest coal plant," its emissions are only onetenth of the federal limits for coal-fired units. In addition, the coal slag from the plant has been found to be nonhazardous, and its operation requires only about one-third of the water needed to supply scrubber systems.

"Because most of the nation's major utilities are interested in this technology, Kentucky's coal industry should get a real shot in the arm in years to come, but we need this technology now," said Stumbo. "Thousands of coal miners are out of work and local economies throughout the state are in trouble. As governor, I would push for cooperative investment in this technology in an effort to put miners back to work and put this state's economy back on the move.

The nation's first successful commercial-scale power plant, the cool water coal gasification plant converts coal to synthesis gas and uses the clean gas as fuel to generate electric power in an integrated combined-cycle system. According to Dr. Stumbo, the process combines technologies that have long been available but have never before been successfully merged.

Using 1,000 tons of coal per day, the plant generates 120 megawatts of electricity, enough to serve about 100,000 homes. A recent study showed that a commercial plant of similar design could produce electrical power for four to five cents per kilowatt hour, which is competitive with other fuels.

Corporations that own equity in the plant include Southern California Edison Company, Bechtel Power Corporation, General Electric Company, the Japan Cool Water Program Partnership, and the Electric Power Research Institute, a research arm of the U.S. utility industry which has made its largest contribution ever to the project.

Nation's Gun Owners Score Victory

The nation's gun owners won a resounng victory in the U.S. House of Representatives with a 292 to 130 vote for series of major revisions of federal firearms statutes

Offered by Missouri Democrat Harold Volkmer, the measure was a mix of stiff mandatory jail penalties for criminals who misuse guns in crime and reforms eliminating elements of current law seen as civil liberties threats to lawabiding gun owners.

Key anti-crime provisions in the Volkmer bill are five to 10-year mandatory sentences for either using or carrying a firearm in a drug trafficking crime. Neither offense is covered with a mandatory penalty under current federal statutes. Additional penalties are targeted against black market gun suppliers.

Reforms affecting law-abiding citizens include a definition clarifying who does and does not need a federal firearms dealers license. The present lack of such a definition has caused a legal grey area confusing both law enforcement and collectors. Gun owners

Early Detection Means Cervical Cancer Cure

Cervical cancer is almost completely. curable-if detected early. That's a message that the Department for Health Services wants Kentucky women of all ages to understand, especially during National Cancer Control Month in April.

'The key to detecting cervical cancer in its early stages is to have regular Pap tests," said Ward Hinds, M.D., state epidemiologist. "The tests can even identify pre-cancerous lesions. With current technology, we really should not have women dying of cervical cancer.

In fact, Kentucky's cervical cancer death rate has declined steadily and continues to do so. In 1971, the rate was 8.4 deaths per 100,000 females. In 1984, the rate was 3.6 deaths per 100,000 females.

Contributing factors to the decline, Hinds said, are increased cervical cancer screening efforts by health departments and private physicians and women's awareness of the screening's

"It's important to point out," said Hinds, "that the decline in Kentucky has not been as rapid as that seen nationally. That means we still have a lot of work to do to see that more women are screened for cervical cancer.

Pap tests are offered through health departments in three different programs, according to Alma Jones, R.N., manager of Health Services' Chronic Disease Branch.

'Many younger women have access to cervical cancer screening through family planning programs or prenatal services in health departments," Jones said. "So another program, cancer control, concentrates on women age 45 and older who wouldn't be in the other two

"In addition to doing the Pap tests, we teach women to do breast selfexaminations, which are important in the early detection of breast cancer, said Jones. "And recently, we've begun to identify among health department clients those who smoke. We give these people information on cancer risks caused by smoking and encourage them to attend smoking cessation classes offered by some health departments and various other agencies.

"We also give them a pamphlet on warning signs of other types of cancer.'

For information about cancer detection, Pap tests, breast self-examinations and smoking cessation classes, contact the nearest health department.

Mine Guide Available

Willard Stanley, Commissioner of the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals and Secretary/Treasurer of the Kentucky Mining Institute, has announced that the Kentucky Underground Coal Mine Guidebook is now available for sale. The book, published by the Kentucky Mining Institute, contains sixteen chapters in 187 pages, and also includes over 100 photographs and graphics. The book has a dual purpose: to train future mine foremen, and to be read and studied by all people engaged in the Kentucky underground coal industry.

Stanley was instrumental in publishing the book, citing a need for a reference material that could be used by all individuals involved in mining Kentucky's underground coal. Stanley said, "We expect a great deal from all people employed in the Kentucky underground coal industry, especially the foremen and other management people. We entrust them with the safety of our most valuable resource: our miners. It is my hope that everyone who uses this book will study the principles within and make a new dedication to safety in our

The majority of photographs were taken by Wayne Collett of the Department of Mines and Minerals, and the graphics were produced by the Kentucky Center for Energy Research. The book is unique in that in addition production and safety information, chapters related to structure, law. management, history, and the future are and hunters traveling across state lines for legitimate purposes-in transit to competitions, a hunt or simply moving residence from one state to anotherwould be allowed to do so without fear of prosecution under local gun ban ordinances. A measure requested by federal enforcement authorities would eliminate cumbersome regulations requiring dealer record keeping of centerfire ammunition. This exemption was requested after research showed such record keeping was irrelevant to the fight against crime.

A major change to current federal law is the interstate sales of rifles and shotguns. At present such a sale, even if allowed by the would-be purchaser's state of residence and the state of purchase, is forbidden by federal law. The reform legislation would permit a sale by a federally licensed firearms dealer if all legal requirements of the purchaser's state of residence and the dealer's state are observed. Current restrictions on handgun sales remain

The Volkmer bill awaits similar action by the U.S. Senate to reconcile differences between it and a version that passed the Senate last July by a margin of 79-15.

Honored For Service

In recognition of his 17 years' service to disabled veterans of this area, Monroe Vanderpool was presented a trophy by more than 200 members of the Seventh District, Disabled American Veterans at a meeting held April 12 at the Bowen Elementary School near Stanton.

Mr. Vanderpool, merchant and postmaster at Hippo for 38 years, devotes much of his spare time to volunteer work of helping veterans and their families. He has served as adjutant of Chapter 128, Disabled American Veterans at Garrett for 15 years, has been the chapter's volunteer service officer, and has been elected or appointed to various posts in the Department of Kentucky, D.A.V. for the past 12 years. He has also served as aide to the National Commander of the D.A.V.

During World War II, Vanderpool served in the 15th Infantry Regiment of the Third Division and holds the European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign medal with five bronze campaign stars, Good Conduct medal, World War II Victory medal, Combat Infantry Badge, Bronze Star medal, Bronze Arrowhead for five amphibious landings, Presidential Unit citation with cluster for Colmar and San Fratello, French Croix de Guerre with Palm for Colmar, and the French Fourragere.

The motto of the 15th Infantry Regiment is "Can do," and Vanderpool was honored by his fellow D.A.V. members who say he still lives by the motto of his old regiment-doing more than his share and always with a smile.

Nat'l Student's Writing Contest

Kentucky schoolchildren are being invited to take part in a national writing competition celebrating the reopening of the Statue of Liberty on July 5, Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald announced.

Students throughout the country will compose essays or poems on the theme "Our Statue: Teacher of Liberty," she said. The national competition has been dedicated to the memory of teacher Christa McAuliffe, who died in the launch of the space shuttle Challenger.

The National Association of State Boards of Education is sponsoring the competition in cooperation with state boards of education.

One student from each state will be selected to take part in the reopening ceremony, which will coincide with the 100th anniversary of the Statue of Liberty, said Ann Bardwell, a member of the State Board of Education and vice president of the national association.

Each teacher in Kentucky is being asked to select the best essay or poem from those written by his or her students, McDonald said, and to mail a postcard entry form listing the student's and the teacher's names to the State Board of Education. The deadline for entries is April 21.

The state board will hold a drawing from the postcard entries at its May meeting to determine the Kentucky winner, Bardwell said.

The winning student and teacher from each state will be the guests of the Statue of Liberty-Ellis Island Foundation at the July ceremony. One winning work will be selected to be read during the ceremony.

"This competition will give Kentucky students an opportunity to reflect upon their heritage, to gain a greater understanding of the rights and obligations of a democracy and to appreciate the legacy that has been passed on to them," McDonald said.

Six Rules for Water Safety

The outdoor season, which is just around the corner, always includes the unnecessary tragedy of "accidental" drowning.

The Army Corps of Engineers believes that you can return home safely from a water outing by following some common-sense precautions. Six simple rules will help you and your family or friends to play it safe and stay

1. Stay sober. People flock to the lakes to enjoy the sun and the water. But the combination of sun and water plus alcohol can be deadly. Alcohol affects coordination and judgement. Two out of three drowning victims in the U.S. were affected by alcohol or other drugs. Alcohol makes non-swimmers out of

2. Use an approved life vest or life jacket. People in the water safety business call these Personal Flotation Devices (PFD's). The PFD can save your life, but only if you have it on. The newer PFD's are lightweight, comfortable and stylish. Many are designed to double in use as hunting or fishing vests. Investigation shows that two out of three drowning victims had no intention of ending up in deep water, so wear your

3. Know your boat. Most boat-related deaths are preventable drownings. Learn the basic rules of boating, and don't overload your boat. Poor swimmers, non-swimmers and those with alcohol in their system are in the greatest danger in an overloaded boat.

4. Don't go alone. Most drownings occur 10 to 30 feet from shore. Water is dangerous, and you can drown quickly. It's always safer to have a companion in the water or in a boat, preferably a

5. Watch the children. One out of 10 drownings victims are between the ages of one and four. Most of them were not being constantly watched. Children move fast and can get into trouble as soon as you turn your head.

6. Learn to swim. Two out of three drowning victims can't swim. Knowing how to swim is the first defense against drowning. It can help to avoid panic, and keep you afloat long enough to get help. Even good swimmers need to be careful, since many lakes and streams have dead trees, debris or rocks along the

CANCER 1-800-4-CANCER CANCER HOPELINE

- Q. My husband's brother has cancer of the colon. Is my husband likely to get it too? What precautions should he take?
- A. A person whose parent, brother or sister has had colon cancer does have a greater risk of developing this disease than someone with no family history of colon cancer. That doesn't mean that your husband is "likely to get it", only that his risk is greater than average.

When colon cancer is found and treated early before it has spread, it can be surgically removed and cured in 75 percent of cases. That's why regular colon examinations are important for your husband and for everyone over 40. Your husband should tell his doctor about his brother's cancer. The doctor will recommend a checkup schedule.

There are some warning signs or symptoms of colon cancer. These symptoms can also be caused by other conditions or diseases, but they should never be ignored. These are the signs your husband should be

- Bleeding from the rectum or blood in the bowel movement
- Loss of weight when there's been no change in eating habits or activity.
- Diarrhea or constipation that lasts for more than two weeks.
- Frequent abdominal discomfort, cramping or pain.
- Loss of appetite or nausea that lasts for more than

- Q. My wife stopped smoking when she was pregnant, but after the baby was born she started smoking again. Can her smoking be harmful to the baby now?
- A. YES. Your wife's smoking may affect the baby in two

The milk of nursing mothers who smoke may contain less vitamin C than that of mothers who do not smoke. Also, nicotine can be found in milk even five hours after the last cigarette is smoked.

Exhaled smoke and the smoke from the burning end of a cigarette can irritate a child's eyes and nasal passages. This "secondhand smoke" can contain more tar. nicotine and carbon monoxide than the smoke that the smoker inhales. As a result, children of parents who smoke are more likely to have colds, bronchitis and pneumonia than children of parents who do not smoke.

Share your concerns about her smoking with your wife. Since she already quit once, support and encouragement from you can help her to quit again - for good.

Disposable Lighters A Peril To Children

Disposable lighters are killing and injuring our children. That's the message of Diane L. Denton, R.N., burn prevention educator at Kosair Children's Hospital. Denton is trying to do something about it.

On April 29, 1985, she expressed her concern about disposable lighters to the safety committee of the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Ms. Denton had seen a number of children burned while playing with the lighters. She asked that such lighters be redesigned to make them more difficult for a child to light. Proof that one person can make a diference came in January of this year when the CPSC requested a year-long study of the hazards of disposable lighters to children. Denton's petition had made it happen.

Denton cited local statistics to make her point about the lighters.

Locally our firefighters are finding very young children starting fires with disposable lighters. Within the city of Louisville in 1984 there were recorded 88 incidents of fires with children where matches or lighters were used. These incidents resulted in eight injuries, five deaths and enormous monetary losses."

Denton's years as a nurse in the Kosair Children's burn unit have made her an ardent advocate of safety and prevention of burns. She is pleased with the action of the CPSC, but satisfaction will not come until "something is done to protect young children from their own curiosity about easy-to-operate lighters." She is concerned that the year of study means more children must be hurt or will die to prove an already known fact—that children are suffering and dying because of disposable

For now, Denton spends her time warning parents and teaching children

how to prevent burns. Brightly colored lighters, which are easy to operate, attract children. They are mistaken for toys. Because they don't understand the danger, some parents even give lighters to children as by the Kentucky Chapter of the American Guild of English Handbell Ringers, held their meeting last Saturday at the Convention Center in Frankfort. This workshop included 300 ringers, from around the state. The adult handbell choir from the First United Methodist Church participated in the day-long event which concluded with a concert. Those from here who attended included Misses Dee Dee Moore and Ann Callihan, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Snavely, Mrs. Dorothy Stover and son Tommy, Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Yeager, Miss Elizabeth L. Frazier, director and the church's pastor, the Rev. Quentin Scholtz, Mrs. Scholtz and their two children, Ginny and Adam Scholtz.

MEET HELD IN FRANKFORT The Kentucky Spring Ring, sponsored

Denton continues her campaign to make adults understand how dangerous lighters can be by asking how many they own and where they are. Many times they are easily available to children. All too often children find a lighter, play with it, and end up hurting themselves. other children and family members or destroying property and lives. Denton hopes the federal government will help stop the pain and death. Until then, she tells the story to all who will listen. The disposable lighter issue and Diane Denton were featured on CBS Morning News early in March, and every day in schools, at meetings with parents, even in super market check-out lines, Diane Denton warns "keep lighters away from children.

Neeley failed to inspect the apartment between renters, as required by city ordinance, plaintiffs claim. As a result of their being bitten, they all needed to have a series of rabies shots and have subsequently been susceptible to infections, they claim.

"The Governor's Scholars Program continues to attract interest and stimulate excitement because of what it offers students intellectually and personally," Governor Collins said. "It is a Kentucky program that has established a tradition of excellence."

"It is encouraging that Kentucky has so many outstanding young people who are willing to make a commitment for five weeks of their summer vacation for academic enrichment," the governor

The Governor's Scholars Program is free of charge to students. It is financed by a partnership of state government, including the Office of the Governor, and a number of private businesses and foundations

The 1986 scholars will represent 115 of Kentucky's 120 counties. The scholars approximate the population of high school juniors in Kentucky—27% will come from eastern Kentucky; 30% from western Kentucky; 18% from central Kentucky; 14% from Jefferson county; and 11% from northern Kentucky.

Governor Collins noted that the Governor's Scholars Program raised its standards for admission this year and yet received even more applications than in the past. The program is now in its

"The caliber of the applicants was so high," she said, "that the blue-ribbon statewide committee who selected scholars from the pool of candidates accepted more than the 600 scholars that plans call for."

Students will be evenly divided between the Centre and UK campuses. Each scholar chooses a major course of study from 11 areas ranging from mathematics to creative arts, including such subjects as cultural anthropology and philosophy. In addition, students elect seminars in subject areas different from their major course.

Scholars are challenged by a wide range of enrichment and extracurricular activities. Nationally known speakers and performers come to campus, experts meet informally in seminars with students, there are numerous field trips—including a Saturday with the Arts in Louisville in which all the major Louisville art groups from Actor's Theatre to the Louisville Orchestra, participate. There are also intramural sports, numerous clubs and other activities, often arranged by the scholars.

Each school district is allowed to make a specific number of nominations that corresponds to the district's size. To meet 1986 program requirements, students had to:

•score in the 96th percentile or above

on the KEST (statewide achievement test);

•take the PSAT/NMQST—which is the write, and be judged, on an essay on one of several topics;

•receive very high recommendations from at least two teachers in the liberal arts areas who rate students on qualities ranging from intellectual curiosity and breadth of interest to attitudes toward other students, and;

•demonstrate characteristics of superior students included on a list in the criteria mailed to each school district.

School districts select nominees for the program with the help of specified committees. Some exceptions to the criteria are allowed when students demonstrate exceptional ability in specific areas.

On the state level, selection of scholars from the pool of candidates is made by an impartial statewide selection commitee which includes admissions directors and assistant directors of major Kentucky state colleges and universities and many independent colleges; vice presidents and academic deans of Kentucky colleges and universities; representative college professors, and state education specialists in gifted and talented programs.

You never know who's going to pop up on the small screen. That guest star could be next year's hot new face, a well-respected character actor or even a major Hollywood star.

Dorothy Lamour

On "Crazy Like a Fox" a few weeks back, for example, viewers were treated to an appearance by Dorothy Lamour, the sarong girl in those South Sea Island pictures from the '30s and 40s, and the star - along with Bing Crosby and Bob Hope — of the "Road" pictures.

Of course, viewers may have had trouble recognizing her. Miss Lamour was playing a bag lady. "I did it completely without makeup with one of those stocking caps on and oversized clothes," she says.

It was a far cry from her sexy sarong days, but Miss Lamour didn't seem to mind. "This one I jumped at because I've always wanted to do a part like this," she says. "It's the complete opposite from anything I've ever done. And it was fun."

But she's found television today very different from the Hollywood of yes-terday. "Television is so fast," she says. "There was a time in motion pictures when a camera man wouldn't do a close-up of a woman until around 11 o'clock in the morning. Never late at night or early in the morning. Now they just grab whatever they can grab. They've got to."

Still, "if the right series would come along, I'd love to do it," she says. "I love to work."

One thing Miss Lamour does not intend to do is to join the burgeoning throng of celebrities who have written tell-all biographies. "You're going to hurt someone when you do something like that," she says. "Maybe I'm a prude, but I just don't believe in

"I did do one," she adds, "but it was clean. It was called 'My Side of the Road.' It sold like hot cakes to begin with, because evidently people thought I was going to say something terrible about Bob or Bing." Does Miss Lamour have any favorites among her pictures? "I love those 'Road' pictures," she says. "And then I love the picture I made with Tyrone Power, 'Johnny Apollo.' And the South Sea Island pictures — I'll always be grateful to them.

'I've done about 60 motion pictures, you know. I look at the list and say, Oh, did I work that hard? No wonder I'm so tired.

SPENSER: FOR HIRE

When his one-time boss and current police connection is suspended from the force, because he won't talk about his involvement in a gambling raid gone wrong, Spenser (Robert Urich) puts his own life on the line to clear his former boss of charges of wrongdoing. The "Internal Affairs" episode of "Spenser: For Hire" airs TUESDAY, APRIL 29 on CTV.

FIRE WITH FIRE (Paramount) Starring Virginia Madsen, Craig Sheffer, Kate Reid. *

By J.T. YURKO

Variations on a theme is the motif for "Fire with Fire," with the accent on the variations.

Virginia Madsen plays Lisa Taylor, a student at a very restricted Catholic girls' high school. She wears a cute little uniform, attends daily church services, and lives a life just short of that of a cloistered nun - with one major exception. As a counterpoint to all the restrictions (or perhaps in spite of them, we're never really sure) Lisa acts out her powerful romantic fantasies by - get this - taking sensual erotic photos of herself, inspired by famous art works.

This Juliet is fated to meet her Romeo, Joe Fisk (Craig Sheffer), an inmate at an honor detention camp. He's there because he decided to run his mom's car through the window of his local Sears Service Center.

While competing in a crosscountry track meet, Joe spots Lisa, and the rest is passion, adventure and a yarn that not even a mother could love. Certainly the Mother Superior of the high school has a few words to say about the affair. That role is played by Kate Reid, a very capable actress who deserves a better agent.

She in turn is counterpointed by Jon Polito, who is known only as "Boss" in the movie. He's the head of the probation camp and runs the joint like a Nazi commandant.

Of course it's ridiculous that a man like this would be in charge of an honor camp; it's ridiculous that one of the other nuns should aid the young lovers (like the Friar of "Romeo and Juliet"), it's ridiculous that one of Fisk's fellow inmates just happens to be a mapmaker and helps them in their escape. In fact, the entire premise is ludicrous.

There may be some greater meaning to all this, but no less than four writers couldn't come up with one. First-time director Duncan Gibbons is a veteran of MTV videos, including "Smuggler's Blues." But he doesn't seem to know what to do when characters speak, so he relies on excessive styllzation for mood.

This isn't a triumph of style over substance. It's style substituting for substance.

GROOMING

COPYRIGHT 1986 KVMA Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association

A certain sign of spring is that the horse shows start up in Kentucky. Saddlebreds, walking horses, hunters and jumpers, ponies. You name it, it will likely be shown in your county at least once before the leaves turn brown.

If you're a new or novice rider or owner, you'll experience for the first time the intense competition involved, and hopefully the thrill of winning your irst ribbon

It's a good time, too, to learn that good grooming improves your horses chances of winning a ribbon-and of staying healthy as well.

Start grooming your horse by working on its feet and legs first, while you are still fresh. A horse's feet and legs need good care. Everything the animal does depends on them. When grooming your horse, face the horse and then slide your hand down its leg and pull the foot up. The horse learns quickly what you are

Use a hoof pick to dig out manure and foreign matter. The entire sole of the foot should be visible when you have

Each hoof should be carefully cleaned to be sure there are no small stones or rocks or other foreign material trapped in the hoof which could bruise the 'frog," which is the soft undersurface of the hoof. Bruises of the "frog" can make a horse so sore he will not place his weight on the foot, and you'll have a lame horse.

Regular picking of the feet also gives you an early warning if your horse is developing thrush. This hoof disease causes a foul odor to come from the hoof and the "frog" will begin to flake. Usual causes are standing in dirty stalls on straw soaked with urine or feces, or in muddy pastures.

Best preventive measure is cleanliness, both of the horse and its Grooming the horse's body requires a currycomb, a soft brush or two, some sponges and some towels. Use the currycomb to loosen and remove dirt from the animal's coat. Start on the left side and brush against the lay of the hair.

Use the brushes on the more tender areas of the horse, his face, belly and the leg areas beneath the knee. Small dampened sponges are recommended around the eyes and nose, and use of a separate sponge around the dock (the base of the tail)

Finally, rub him down with a soft, clean towel. This spreads the oil through hair and gives the animal a healthy, sleek appearance.

It will take about 30 minutes a day, but the benefits are well worth it. For one thing, the grooming stimulates the horse's circulation and improves his appearance. For another, the time spent with the horse each day makes you more familiar with the animal's characteristic behavior and appearance, and you'll stand a better chance of detecting problems earlier.

Of course, you know to call your veterinarian if you have problems. But he can also advise you on good, preventive care that will save you money and worry down the road. He considers preventive care the best treatment of all, but he needs your cooperation.

Beta Club Activity Benefits Hospice

When Prestonsburg Elementary eighth-grader Joe Burchett cast around for a charity the school's Junior Beta Club might assist, he didn't have far to look: why not the organization that had helped his aunt and family through the final struggle with cancer? Together with other Beta Club officers—Joe is secretary of the group—he presented Hospice of Big Sandy last week with a check for $150, the fruit of what club sponsor Janice Allen called "many, many hours of work

The 31 members of the Beta Club—an organization of academically successful students with a penchant for community service—raised the money for Hospice by organizing a dance and a parent-faculty basketball game. Hospice, which helps persons who are terminally ill and their families, is only the latest group to benefit from the student organization, which was chartered only last December but has already served dessert to school teachers during American Education Week, sent Christmas cards to all the patients at Riverview Manor Nursing Home, given toys to 68 children in kindergarten and grades 1-3; organized an Easter egg hunt for the kindergarteners; and conducted an 8th grade "superlative" contest for their peers.

"It is a very active group," said Mrs. Allen, who noted that it is responsible for raising and lowering the flag at school each day; it recently observed sessions of the state House of Representatives and Senate and toured the old and new capitol buildings in Frankfort; and it is on the lookout for new projects.

Raising the money for Hospice gave special satisfaction, explained Dustin Haley, club president. "We wanted to beat the high school club," he said, "and we did." Prestonsburg High School Beta Club earlier contributed $100 to Hospice. Commented Chris Conley, Hospice executive-director, "That's the kind of competition I'll encourage.

According to Randy Fite, two-time winner of the Lone Star bass tournament and Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member, water clarity "is very important in determining what kind of pattern exists on the lake. The clearer the water, generally speaking, the deeper the fish will hold. The more off-colored or stained the water, the more shallow you'll find the fish.

But what about those lakes that are 'gin clear'' for 20-25 feet? It all depends upon the penetration of sunlight into those depths.

'Fish will bite real well in clear water just like they do in other types of water, but in different parts of the country it affects them in different ways," comments Jerry Rhyne, one of the best spinnerbait fishermen in the country. "I can go out West and catch fish in water that I can see 20-25 feet down in, and not have a problem doing it. But yet, I can go back in the East and find water that I can see 20 feet down or so in, and fishing becomes extremely hard.

Clarity, like fortune, is a state of mind. It all depends on what you've use to: gin clear, slightly stained, cloudy, or coffee. In all these types of water, fish bite and it's getting to know what the water's like during the seasonal changes that spells success for the angler.

'If a lake stays clear year 'round," stresses Rhyne, "it's easier to catch fish out of that clear water. But if it changes a lot-if it goes real muddy in the spring and winter, and then clears gradually as the warm weather comes in—then when it gets extremely clear, those fish do get harder to catch.

Water clarity and light penetration are crucial elements in the selection of a lure. The clearer the water, the more important your bait selection and presentation are.

All pros agree that the more you are acquainted with a certain body of water, the more keyed you will be to the feeding patterns of bass throughout the year. Gaining an insight into the feeding behavior of bass can mean the difference between going home with a full stringer and getting skunked. Randy Fite sheds some light on this:

"Feeding sprees can be very important and can be affected by shallow water conditions, which can create a feeding spree or lack of a feeding spree. For example, early in the morning and late in the evening are prime times to fish, especially when you're dealing with shallow water. In these periods of low light intensity, it is easier for the fish to see his prey. He is more likely to be roaming around in a feeding spree situa-

Hagans Finishes 5th in Tourney

Paul Hagans, at right, and Tee Watkins did right well in the Operation Bass' Redman Tournament qualifer held at Lake Cumberland, recently. Hagans, of Warco, finished fifth in a field of 235 with a nine-pound, three-ounce catch using floating worms in main lake pockets. He also banked a tidy $450 in prize money making his catch worth almost $50 a pound.

Watkins, of Little Paint, used worms rigged Texas style on drops in Wolf Creek to catch a seven-fish limit and finish 12th.

Top winner Robert Cox, Jr., fishing his second bass tournament, ever, ended up winning $2290 and first place. Cox, a Burnside welder, used L.C.'s lures and flipped the lower end of the lake where he found and caught his five bass weighing 101 pounds 11 ounces. In addition to the cash, he won valuable Red Man All-American points.

Dave Smoot, of Frankfort, landed three fish on Bill Norman stick baits to capture second place and a $1430 paycheck. He was fishing a slider pattern where he caught his 10 pounds 5 ounces of fish.

Terry Disney, 40, of Corbin, took third place with a four-fish catch weighing 10 pounds 1 ounce. He banked $830. Kent Shearer fished black shale banks with cover. His pattern produced four keepers that weighed 9 pounds 3 ounces. Fourth place earned the Albany man $510.

In addition, with Hagans in fifth place, those rounding out the top 10 positions were: (6) Al Cox, Burnside, five fish, 8 pounds 5 ounces, $390; (7) Mark McKinney, Broadhead, four fish, 7 pounds 13 ounces, $330; (8) Jim Elmore, Albany, four fish, 7 pounds 10 ounces, $270; and tie (9) Gilbert Ingle, Sevierville, Tennessee, five fish, 7 pounds 9 ounces, $162.13 and John M. Bray, Mt. Vernon, two fish, 7 pounds 9 ounces, $162.13.

Second place finisher Dave Smoot also took big bass honors with a 7 pound 10-ounce lunker. He caught the fish in Clip Creek on a Bill Norman stick bait. Smoot won an extra $1000 and one week's vacation for the catch.

The next stop along Operation Bass' Red Man Tournament Trail for Mountain division anglers will be May 4 on Cherokee Lake at Hambin County Dock. Entry deadline for this event is April 23.

The top 24 anglers after six events will advance to a regional classic where they will meet 96 other anglers from four other divisions and compete for a Chevrolet truck, a fully-rigged Ranger Boat, plus an additional $15,000. The top 10 from each regional advance to the $150,000 Red Man All-American, where the first place prize is $100,000.

Mt. Christian Academy Something To Brag About First Athletic Banquet

The First Annual Mountain Christian Academy athletic banquet was held Saturday, April 12, in the school gym. Dean of students, Sister Judy Yunker, opened the program following a meal served by the students to their parents

Dean Yunker spoke on the need for athletics in the school curriculum as a means to develop character and discipline in both school and later in life; leadership values learned in sports to develop future leaders of business, commerce, government, and education

Both Dean Yunker and Randy Burchett of the Boosters Club emphasized that the academy was striving for the perfect person not athlete

Awards presented during the evening included one to the first team at Mountain Christian Academy, the 1984-'85 Elementary School girls team. The plaque was accepted by Dean Yunker for Fran McCloud who is now teaching

Team trophies were presented and awards then went to current year teams at elementary level, with coaches Joe Dipre and Jeff Stratton handing out individual awards.

The program moved to the varsity team awards, with coach David Hall, and assistant handing out the individual and team awards.

Coach Hall impressed on the boys their need to realize their contribution as the first varsity team at Mountain Christian Academy; from their first practices outside on the gravel of the parking lot to their first win over the coaches and parents.

The only victories in high school and elementary competition were by the 'B" team elementary, coached by Joe Dipre and Jeff Stratton, which won three

Coach Hall said that the important part of his whole season was that whether they won or not, he and coach Duddleson wanted to end the season with their pride and their whole team

Cheerleading awards were then given to all cheerleaders by sponsor Karen Salisbury as well as plaques to statisticians, score keepers and helpers.

Kentucky Fishing Report

Franktort, Ky., April 21-Another cooling trend, heavy rain showers and windy conditions made surface water temperatures dip at most of the states' lakes although some good catches of crappie, rockfish, largemouth bass, bluegill, muskie and rockfish/white bass hybrids were reported during the April 19-20 period covered by this report. Good catches were being made on tube jigs and and minnows over stumps and brush along secondary creek channels and fallen trees. Deadline Nears for Boat Registration

The Kentucky Water Patrol, a division of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet, reminds boaters that 1985 boat registrations expire April 30, 1986.

Col. Joe Kelly, director of the Kentucky Water Patrol, advises that water patrol officers will be citing boaters failing to renew their registrations before

Again this year, boaters renewing their boat registrations will receive two registration decals, instead of one. According to Kelly, the issuance of two decals will enable water patrol officers to confirm current year validation from either side of a boat, thus reducing the number of boats stopped solely for spot checks on current year registration. Kelly asks boaters to display their registration decals in line and six inches toward the rear of the boat from the registration number. The United States Coast Guard and most states issue two decals when registering boats.

Anyone with questions regarding boat registration should contact the Kentucky Water Patrol at 107 Mero Street, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601, or call

The Oleika Shrine Circus has come and gone with much success. Thanks to all who gave in road blocks, bought tickets and came to the circus, to the Police Department, Fire Department and Rescue Squad, Mr. May and many more. Thanks again to those who help Shriners do for the Crippled Children and Burns Institutes. Here is a poem we would like to pass along.

Hi, Hillbilly

What on earth are Shrine Hillbillies?, a cynic said to me-It seems men's time could be better spent than in such frivolity! I let him grumble, then I said--On one thing we agree--

The Hillbilly Clan is the craziest Clan you'll probably ever see! And the Clowns are funny people--silly clothes and painted face, Surely one like you would wonder why a man would keep this pace. Then I whispered, Go a minute? Please sit down and talk awhile. Let me tell you all about these "foolish men" who bring a smile.

Have you ever seen a baby,-body burned beyond belief? Have you ever watched a child on crutches, wracked with pain and

Seen a little boy at a ball game, glove in hand and ready to bat? but he won't be called in this game - a wheelchair holds him back. Or a darling little angel - sweetest smile and curly head? the birth defect she suffered keeps her shackled to her bed

Oh there's hope for these dear children - mercy sent from heaven above. For the "Red Fez" of a Shriner is a symbol of his love. These "foolish men" you speak of have a heart programmed to give.

And the fruit of all their labor helps these little ones to live. Live like other children-free to run and play and touch, Oh these little ones deserve it - free to walk without a crutch.

But it's not without a "price tag"-it takes sweat to do this task, Seeing broken bodies mended, is all the payment they will ask! The cynic sat as if in thought - eyes closed with head bowed low, the first words that he uttered were the words, "I didn't know." I didn't know there were still men who took the time to share,

I didn't know a heart could bleed for a stranger with a care. I didn't know that there were men who would hold a little child. These worthwhile things I thought has passed in a rush that seems so

Thank you, he said - The next parade I see coming down the street, I'll applaud all you "Hillbillies," "Clowns" and "Units" that I meet. And when the "Red Fez" passes by - I'll smile and give a nod To show I'm proud-I'll tip my hat-and then give thanks to God!

STUMBO PARK NEWS

By OSCAR RICE, Director A light schedule last week found McDowell going 3 and 1 in high school baseball at Stumbo Park with wins over Virgie, Allen Central, and Fleming Neon, their lone loss coming to Prestonsburg on a cold Thursday night.

The Betsy Layne Bobcats established themselves as the team to beat for the regional crown as they defeated fifth ranked (in the state) Paintsville, 8 to 7. Junior Bud Newsome outduelled John Pelphrey in this game highlighting two of the premier pitchers in the state. Duran Hall's bases-loaded single in the bottom of the seventh inning won it for the 9-0 Bobcats, with Paintsville slipping

The second game of last Tuesday's double header saw McDowell defeat Allen Central, 6 to 1, with Kip Kidd tossing a one-hitter and striking out 10 in the seven inning game. Floyd county, no doubt, is back in baseball in eastern Kentucky, the fine baseball learned in the Babe Ruth League at Stumbo Park has resulted in excellent high school programs and players with every team in the county benefiting with players who graduated from this league.

Kip Kidd has to be one of the finest pitchers in the state with that 90-milean-hour fast ball; Bud Newsome has consistently beaten the top teams in the state since Little League; Roger Horne, Danny Tuttle, Tim Trusty (the freshman who beat McDowell Thursday) Greg Shepherd, all these and more, have impressed this writer as being definite college prospects as pitchers.

This week features Betsy Layne vs. Virgie at 4:30, Monday; Betsy Layne vs. McDowell, 4:30, Tuesday; Allen Central girls softball vs. Sheldon Clark, 7:30 on the Little League Field; Betsy Layne vs. Prestonsburg, 4:30, Wednesday; Prestonsburg vs. Allen Central, 4:30, Thursday; Allen Central vs. Flem Neon, 4:30. Loss of Body Heat Danger to Boaters

One of the main causes of death in the water involves a word that many of us can't even spell. A lot of people who refused to wear a life jacket are dead because they didn't know about it. The word is hypothermia.

It means your body heat is lower than normal and it results from the body losing heat faster than it can produce it. It can occur indoors or outdoors. It can strike suddenly if you fall into the water, even if the water temperature is 70 degrees. Even if you're a champion swimmer, hypothermia can cause your

Let's say you're in a boat, fishing, and you hook the big one. You stand up to begin outwitting the fish. The boat tips over and you're in the water. It's too late to grab the life jacket.

Most people try to swim to safety as hard as they can, or use an equal amount of frantic energy trying to float. There's no need for this kind of effort if you're wearing a life jacket.

Water is a good conductor of heat. It takes away body heat much faster than air. And most of the heat is lost through the head, neck, sides and groin where main blood vessels are close to the Wind is another factor. Hypothermia outdoors generally is caused by exposure to wind and wetness, especially when it's cool or cold.

Hypothermia is indicated by shivering, an attempt by the body to generate heat. Other symptoms are confusion, stiffness, slurred speech and (if you're on land) unsteady walk.

For treatment, give the victim some form of shelter. Remove wet clothes and wrap him in a sleeping bag or blanket, and get him the fastest possible medical

She added that this group also contributes to the Ministerial Association's help for transient persons.

Copies of the revised by-laws were distributed.

In keeping with President Reagan's stand against pornography, it was suggested that a letter be written to the local paper, urging families of the area to read good literature.

The next meeting will be Friday, June 20, at 10:30 a.m., at the Community United Methodist Church.

ASSEMBLIES OF GOD OPPOSES GAMBLING

Noting the proliferation of lotteries in various states, Assemblies of God General Superintendent G. Raymond Carlson issued a statement expressing the opposition of the Assemblies of God to gambling, even when it is legalized by government.

He said, "The Assemblies of God declared its firm opposition to gambling in any form in a position paper released in 1983." That paper declares, "A careful reading of Scripture makes it clear there are numerous Biblical principles which indicate gambling is an evil to be avoided."

Gambling is defined in the position paper as, "any activity in which wealth changes hands, mainly on the basis of chance and with risk to the gambler." Several reasons are cited why gambling is wrong for Christians: 1. Gambling is wrong because it is a disregard of responsible stewardship;

2. Gambling is wrong because it involves a chance of gain at the expense and suffering of others; 3. Gambling is wrong because it is inconsistent with the work ethic of Scripture;

4. Gambling is wrong because it tends to be habit-forming." The paper concludes with this statement: "Those who want to live according to Scripture will refrain from participation in any form of gambling...They will also do all within their power to discourage the legalization of gambling, whether to raise

Minnesota Public Radio's "A Prairie Home Companion," brings his whimsical brand of humor to KET in a special two-hour program. "A Prairie Home Companion" will be aired on Saturday, April 26, at 9:00 p.m., and is a televised presentation of Keillor's radio show to be taped live at the World Theater in St. Paul. Minnesota.

"Prairie Home Companion"

Garrison Keillor, host and creator of

Will Be Aired On KET

Celebrating the grand opening of the newly restored theater, the permanent home of the program, the special will feature all of the favorite elements of Keillor's popular radio show, including Keillor's stories about Lake Wobegone. Minnesota; appearances by guest artists yet to be announced; and music by pianist Butch Thompson, who has earned a reputation for his dry comebacks to Keillor's questions.

"A Prairie Home Companion" was conceived by Keillor in 1974, when he was assigned by New Yorker magazine to write a story on the last performance of the Grand Ole Opry in the old Ryman Auditorium. Shortly thereafter, "A Prairie Home Companion" debuted on Minnesota Public Radio to a local audience. Today, the popular radio show is distributed nationwide by American Public Radio to more than 260 public radio stations, drawing there to four million listeners each week. Lake Wobegon, Minn., is the setting for Keillor's engrossing stories about "the little town that time forgot, that the decades cannot improve, where all the women are strong, all the men are goodlooking, and all the children are above

In "A Prairie Home Companion," Keillor spins his tales about life in this mythical yet seemingly real small town in America's heartland, evoking images of people and places so vivid one is sure they exist. "Commercials" from Lake Wobegon's leading establishments punctuate Keillor's genial tales, which on any given program might include "advertisements" from Bob's Bank, the Chatterbox Cafe, and Powdermilk Biscuits. These trademarks of Keillor's humor lend the show a neighborly appeal; those places might be just around the corner in Anytown, U.S.A.

"A Prairie Home Companion" is distributed by PBS.

Standby Draft Board In Training Session

The United States no longer has a military draft, but about 15 people met at Jenny Wiley State Park on Saturday to get the latest training on the operation of a Selective Service Board.

The individuals are members of three "stand-by" boards covering 10 eastern Kentucky counties, including Floyd. Kentucky Army Guard Col. Mike Molloy is the manager of the area.

When the draft was abolished, a new requirement to maintain a system that could be reinstituted on short notice was established and a group of people working within National Guard headquarters in each state was given the responsibility of organizing and training local boards. The military staff is composed of National Guard and Reserve officers and serves only one weekend per month and two weeks once each year.

The local boards are made up of community leaders representing many fields and all serve as volunteers.

'This training is very important,' Molloy said, "because it allows the board members to keep up on laws and procedures they would have to implement if the draft is ever reinstitued.'

Molloy noted that the training program is developed at the national headquarters and is given on a regular basis.

AT-HOME TESTS

Two new types of at-home medical tests bring the latest in biotechnology advances for women. One is aimed at predicting ovulation, which is also a woman's most fertile time. The other confirms pregnancy as early as the first day of a missed menstrual period. Both tests have recently been approved for over-the-counter sale by the FDA. The key to their reliability is monoclonal antibodies. These are chemical reagents that "search out" specific substances in the urine. In short, hormones which are normally present just before ovulation or during pregnancy are looked for. These tests are reliable alternatives to expensive, complex professional tests.

Our pharmacists at COOLEY APOTHECARY are highly skilled in their field and take great pride in being able to provide you with at-home medical tests and prescription medications at everyday low prices. First call your doctor, and then have him call us. We maintain complete patient profiles so we can protect you against drug interactions and as an convenience for you in obtaining proper credit at income tax time and for insurance purposes. Taylor To Conduct Course at Centre

Peter Taylor, acclaimed by critics as America's greatest living short story writer, will be writer-in-residence at Centre College April 28-May 9.

The Tennessee-born author, who studied with some of the pre-eminent 20th-century Southern writers and critics including Kentucky native Robert Penn Warren, will give a reading at 8 p.m. Tuesday. April 29, in the Weisiger Theatre of the Norton Center for the Arts. The event is free and the public is

During his two-week residency. Taylor will teach Centre students in a course, "Creative Writing," as part of the college's six-week spring term. He will be assisted by Dr. Mark T. Lucas. an assistant professor of English at Centre and a specialist in Southern litera-

Unlike most prose writers who reputations rest upon novels. Taylor has concentrated on short fiction. For years his stories have appeared in such publications as The New Yorker, but despite his superior craftmanship, his high standing in the literary world has not been paralleled by broad public recognition.

"Quite simply, there is not a better writer of fiction now at work in the United States," Jonathan Yardley of the Washington Post wrote in 1984. "That so few Americans are aware of this-that Taylor goes unknown and unread while vastly inferior writers perch on magazine covers, win prizes and chat up the talk shows-is a national embarrass-

Walter Clemons of Newsweek, in a review of Taylor's latest work, The Old Forest and Other Stories (1985), said: 'Like Poe's purloined letter, Peter Taylor is hidden in plain sight. He is one of the best American storytellers now or ever, and yet it's not hard to find literate friends who don't know his name.

Warren, recently named the nation's first Poet Laureate, has observed that Peter Taylor has been, and is, in this century, one of the real, and probably enduring, masters of the short story.

Taylor's spare but elegant style reveals deep psychological insights into the mores and family life of his native South in the years before racial integration. Memphis and Nashville are the settings for much of his writing.

Taylor has taught at several institutions, including the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Indiana University, the University of Chicago, Harvard University and Kenyon. In 1967, he joined the faculty of the University of Virginia, where he retired in 1983 as the Henry Hoyns Professor Emeritus of Creative Writing.

In 1943, Taylor married the poet Eleanor Ross. They live in Charlottesville, Virginia

Some of Taylor's best known works are: The Collected Stories of Peter Taylor (1969), In the Miro District and Other Stories (1977); and his latest collection, The Old Forest and Other Stories, which has been nominated for a P.E.N.-Faulkner Award.

Taylor has won Guggenheim, Fulbright, and Ford Foundation fellowships, as well as a $25,000 fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts in 1984 for "extraordinary contribution to American litera-

PLANNING

NINETY-FIVE PERCENT ARE BROKE

Ninety-five percent of all Americans at retirement age are dependent on the government, charity, or their relatives for financial support.

Most of us can accomplish great things when we put our mind to it. If you have the discipline to do a little planning and a little saving, you'll be well ahead of the pack at retirement time.

Whatever our current station in life, we can all live with 10% less current consumption. If you will save (invest) ten cents out of each dollar you earn and follow a few simple rules, you'll have the retirement money you need.

So where do you start? Right now, and for each year from now on, make a list of everything you own and everything you owe. This allows you to determine your net worth. The change in this net worth from year to year is your measurement of how well you're doing on your retirement kitty. If you don't do as well as you had hoped in the first two or three years, don't give up. Just as dieters do, you have to keep at the program to be successful.

Next, you should draw up a statement listing your sources of income and your anticipated expenses over the next year. Determine from this how you can save 10% to put into the savings program. Individual Retirement Accounts are an excellent place to start for the small investor. The earnings on your contributions are tax-free until retirement time. If you're currently buying a house, don't treat the entire house payment as part of your 10% savings. The interest portion of your house payment is very much like rent; you should consider it a current expense.

Most importantly, don't procrastinate. A dieter is not going to lose weight thinking about the pounds he wants to lose. You must put a program in action and have the discipline to stick with

If you can't get the ball rolling on your own, ask your accountant for assistance.

MARY ANN TOBIN AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY

Capitol Annex Suite 158 Frankfort, KY 40601 502-564-4333 (Res.)

March 6, 1986

To the People of Kentucky Honorable Martha Layne Collins, Governor Honorable John M. Stumbo, County Judge/Executive Members of the Floyd County Fiscal Court

We have examined the statement of receipts, disbursements, and excess fees of the County Clerk of Floyd County for the year ended December 31, 1984. Our examination was made in accordance with the Standards for Audit of Governmental Organizations, Programs, Activities, and Functions, issued by the Comptroller General of the United States, and accordingly, included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we consid necessary in the circumstances.

The Sheriff has contracted Stephen R. Allen, Certified Public Accountant, to examine the statement of receipts, disbursements, and excess fees of his office.

As recommended by the State and Local Finance Officer, pursuant to Kentucky Revised Statute (KRS) 68.210, the accompanying financial statements are prepared primarily on a cash basis. Consequently, certain revenues and the related assets are recognized when received rather than when earned, and certain expenses are recognized when paid rather than when a liability is incurred. Accordingly, the accompanying financial statements are not intended to present financial position and results of operations in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

In our opinion, the accompanying financial statements present fairly the receipts, disbursements, and excess fees of the County Clerk for the year ended December 31, 1984, in conformity with the accounting system described above, applied on a basis consistent with that of the preceding year.

We also conducted tests of compliance with state laws and regulations, and unless otherwise noted below, the tested items were in compliance with applicable state laws and regulations. During our examination, nothing came to our attention to cause us to believe that the untested items were not in compliance.

We did not conduct a study and evaluation of internal accounting control as we concluded that the audit could be performed more efficiently by expanding substantive audit tests. Therefore, we placed very little reliance on the internal accounting control system.

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

Our comments are intended to be constructive. The purpose of each is to point out areas for improvement. The absence of extensive comments of a complimentary nature does not imply the County Clerk's accounting and compliance procedures are deficient or unsound. Accordingly, we offer the accompanying comments and recommendations:

In the prior year audit report, we reported two areas of noncompliance that have not been corrected and are commented on in the current year audit findings. The noncorrected findings are as follows: 1) The County Clerk did not maintain records as required by the Uniform System of Accounts.

2) The County Clerk did not publish an annual settlement of receipts and disbursements as required by KRS 424.220.

We also reported the County Clerk did not issue receipts as required by KRS 64.840; and the County Clerk did not present an annual settlement of receipts and disbursements to the fiscal court by March 15 of the following year as required by KRS 64.152. These noncompliances have been corrected and are not commented on in the current year audit findings.

Current Year

1) The County Clerk Should Maintain Complete Receipts And Disbursements Ledgers

The County Clerk does not maintain complete receipts and disbursements ledgers. This is required by the Uniform System of Accounts. We recommend the County Clerk maintain these ledgers and post to them daily.

2) An Annual Statement Of Receipts And Disbursements Should Be Published

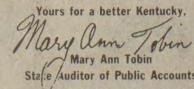

The County Clerk did not publish an annual statement of receipts and disbursements as required by KRS 424.220. We recommend the County Clerk comply with this statute by publishing this settlement within sixty (60) days after the end of the year.

3) Bids Should Be Obtained For Expenses Over $7,500

The County Clerk's Office paid out a total of $20,114 in 1984 for microfilming services. There were no bids obtained for this expense. This is in violation of KRS 424.260 which requires bids to be obtained for purchases over $7,500. We recommend the County Clerk comply with this statute.

The excess fees reported herein have been paid to the County Treasurer.

We are confident the above findings and recommendations will be useful to the County Clerk in managing the operations of her office in a manner consistent with effective accounting and compliance controls.

The above transmittal letter accompanied the audit report presented to fiscal court and is published pursuant to KRS

Copies of the complete audit report are available upon request by contacting the State Auditor of Public Accounts, Suite 158, Capitol Annex, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601.

On the other hand, most of the state is suffering from an unusually dry season, according to figures from the Kentucky Crop and Livestock Reporting

'April is usually one of the wettest months of the year, but most areas are well behind normal this year," said Agriculture Commissioner David E.

Statewide, soil moisture is rated 90 percent short and only 10 percent adequate.

"Rain is badly needed right now to foster growth of tobacco plants, hay and pastures, and to allow germination in newly planted fields," Boswell said.

Tobacco bed planting is virtually completed, compared to 95 percent at this time last year. Plants are up in 38 percent of the beds, slightly behind the 39 percent at this time last year. The lack of rain is slowing growth, and many growers are watering the beds.

The recent frosts, however, do not appear to have done any significant

Corn progress this year is rivaled only by the very early season of 1976. Statewide, planting is 20 percent complete, compared with 10 percent last year at this time and only 4 percent on the five-year average.

Corn planting is most advanced in the western and south central parts of the state. Farmers in a few of these counties are nearing completion.

College Upgrades Top Two Scholarships

Two of Pikeville College's most prestigious scholarships are getting a facelift. These scholarships, the Presidential and the William Wade & Helen Record Walker Scholarships, are increasing by $1,570 and $350 respective-

The Presidential, Pikeville's highest academic award, is being increased by up to $1,570 per year. The scholarship formerly covered tuition, fees, and dormitory costs. For any student living in the college dormitories, the scholarship now covers tuition, fees, room and board. For students choosing to live off campus, the scholarship will cover tuition and fees, up to $3420 per academic year. The Presidential Scholarship award, over the four years necessary to complete a baccalaureate degree, can be worth as much as $22,680.

This scholarship requires a minimum 3.5 point average (on a 4.0 scale) and either a 25 ACT Composite or 1010 combined Math/English SAT score.

The William Wade & Helen Record Walker Scholarship is the next highest academic award. This scholarship, for incoming freshmen only, is available to any eligible student ranking either first or second in their graduating class at any time from the end of the junior year through graduation. For a ranking of number one, the scholarship is up to $1,500; a second place ranking receives up to $1,300. An increment of up to $850 is added to the tuition break for any student living in a campus dorm room. The Walker Scholarship is worth up to $9,400 or $8,600 over the course of four years of study, depending on the class ranking. Pikeville College's academic scholarship deadline is April 1, which means that all transcripts, applications, financial assistance applications, and letters should be received in the Offices of Admissions and Financial Aid no later than that date.

For more information about these two scholarships, or any of the other academic/performance scholarships, contact the Admissions Office at 432-9322, or stop by Room 111 of the Administration Building, Pikeville College.

Forest Fires Spare State Parks System

Kentucky state-park land was virtually untouched by the recent forest fires that broke out in eastern Kentucky, and all parks in the region are operating normally, Tourism Secretary G. Wendell Combs said recently.

With Gov. Martha Layne Collins' recent cancellation of an emergency order closing eastern Kentucky woodlands, all park hiking trails have reopened.

Parks Commissioner June Hudson pointed out that, even during the height of the outbreak, park guests were mostly unaffected by the situation. "Most of our facilities, such as golf courses, marinas and campgrounds, are on developed land and, therefore, weren't covered by the emergency order," she said.

Few room cancellations were reported at the seven resort parks in the affected region. "We thought that concerns might be raised outside the state that our parks were closed, but apparently that didn't happen, fortunately," she said.

Park personnel will continue to keep a watchful eye out for fire outbreaks. The department maintains a fire-control system that includes close communication among parks, local fire departments, and the central department offices in Frankfort, and established procedures for reacting to a fire.

Army Now Offers Two-Year Stint

Young men and women deciding their future plans may find the Army's special two-year enlistment program an outstanding offer. To help them find our more information, the local Army office will be conducting a special awareness campaign during the next few weeks.

"The two-year enlistment program could prove to be a viable choice to those who don't want to make a three or four year commitment, but want to spend a worthwhile two years enjoying the Army's wealth of opportunity," said Sergeant Robert Gordon of the Army Recruiting Station in Prestonsburg.

"We find many young people are facing their first major question, the question of what am I going to do with my future?" he said. "The two-year enlistment program may be the answer for them.

He said that the two year program allows young men and women the opportunity to accumulate a considerable amount of money for college or technical school, learn a valuable skill and have time to consider the next step in their

"In most cases, the two years prove very valuable. Soldiers mature and grow confident so the next step isn't so hard any more," he said.

The two-year enlistment includes a variety of benefits, including the G-I Bill and the Army College Fund. In this program, two-year enlistees are eligible to accumulate up to $17,000 toward a college education. Those with an Associates degree or equivalent college credits are eligible for up to $21,000 and start out at a higher rank.

"Paying for their education," said Sergeant Gordon "is a burdensome fact of life for many. Many of these young people will be faced with long-term

There are as many as 60 special skills from which two-year enlistees can choose to learn. These skills, which range from combat engineer to food service specialist and from communications to mechanics, are taught by experts with hands-on training.

And for those who like a challenge, the two-year program also offers the Army Airborne option or the European option

There are some immediate benefits as well. Two-year enlistees who want to continue toward a degree during their off-duty time, have a choice of collegeaccredited courses right on most Army installations. Army Education Centers are frequently affiliated with local colleges which operate educational programs on post. Benefits such as advanced promotions, a full medical and dental plan and a salary that goes farther because food and housing are paid for, are also to be considered.

For more information, call Sergeant Gordon at 886-9431 or stop by his new office at 38 North Lake Drive in Prestons

Don't "Adopt" Wildlife as Pets

The temptation to "adopt" wild creatures is especially great in the springtime when fox pups, whitetail fawns, bobcat kittens, baby cottontail rabbits, raccoons and opossums are venturing out from their dens and hiding places

More often than might be expected a walk in the woods leads to the mistake of picking up a young animal which is believed to have been abandoned by its parents. It's perfectly normal to feel a need to nuture a baby critter-take it home, give it tender loving care and make a pet of it. But it's a mistake and the reasons for resisting such temptations are many feeding and care, or their aggressive behavior.

These would-be "good samaritans" find that they not only possess an unmanagable wild critter, but they also are in possible violation of the law for keeping wildlife without a permit.

Kentucky law requires that anyone holding any native or exotic wild mammals or wild birds as pets or for propagation purposes obtain a permit from the department through the local conservation officer who will determine if the animal was obtained legally and if adequate facilities are provided. A free transportation permit is also required to ship wild birds and mammals into Kentucky from other states or counties, and such shipments must be accompanied by a veterinarian's certificate stating that the wildlife is free of symptoms of

An even worse potential problem from 'adopting" wild animals is finding out too late that the reason the "orphan" didn't scamper off when first approached is because it has rabies or some other disease. This is more common than most people realize, and too often they find out the hard way. Rabies is a dreaded disease and to undergo the painful series

Odyssey Of Conscience Is Documentary Topic

"Witness to War: Dr. Charles Clements," airing Tuesday, May 13, at 9:30 p.m. on KET, tells the story of Dr. Charles Clements' journey from pilot in Vietnam to doctor behind rebel lines in El Salvador.

Clements had the "right stuff." He was the top of his class at the Air Force Academy, and he was headed for a distinguished career when his conscience caught up with him and he chose to dedicate his life to healing and non-

As the anti-war movement escalated in the United States, Clements was becoming increasingly disillusioned with the daily carnage he was witnessing in Vietnam. Finally, refusing to fly any more missions, Clements returned to the United States and spoke out about his experiences in Southeast Asia at an anti-war rally. The Air Force, uncertain how to handle him, incarcerated Clements in a psychiatric hospital for six months before he won an honorable discharge.

Subsequently Clements entered medical school. It was during his residency in California that he began seeing refugees from the war in El Salvador. As the war there escalated and the U.S. Government dispatched advisers to that country, Clements saw many similarities with previous U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia.

Changes In Spain Examined On KET

How has Spain progressed in the last ten years since the death of its last dictator, General Francisco Franco? Former Madrid Bureau Chief for the New York Times John Darnton will provide observations and interviews when 'Spain: Ten Years Later/A Reporter's Notebook" airs Wednesday, April 2, at 9:00 p.m. on KET.

Darnton, a Pulitizer Price-winning writer, will offer a glimpse into Spain's recent political transition. Now the Times' deputy foreign editor, Darnton spent 1982-1984 in Spain. His return came during Spain's tenth year as a democracy and the year of its national referendum on NATO membership, to examine just how much the country has changed during the last decade.

'Spain: Ten Years Later/A Reporter's Notebook" is a story of critical importance, for elements of Spain's successful transition may hold lessons for other countries-notably those in Latin America—currently taking steps toward democracy. The program traces Darnton's travels from Madrid's urban sprawl through the tradition yet diverse towns of the country-encountering along the way individuals who represent the spirit of "Spain: Ten Years Later/A Reporter's Notebook" also examines the powerful influence of the Catholic Church in Spanish affairs Darnton also comments on the results of the crucial NATO referendum which will be held March 12. Within both NATO and the Reagan administration, there is great concern over the referendum, because a decision by Spain to withdraw could set a disturbing precedent.

Spain: Ten Years Later/A Reporters Notebook" is a production of The Press & The Public Project.
