

Union Request for Meeting Is Denied by School Board

"They're not slapping the Teamsters in the face; they're slapping you, their own employees," a union official told a group of Board of Education workers Wednesday night, after the board rejected an offer to meet with union representatives.

Jerry Vincent, secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local No. 783, earlier hinted that union funds might be used to support opposition candidates when current board members come up for reelection.

Claiming that a majority of the school district's non-certified workers have asked the union to represent them, Vincent invited the board to "meet and confer with us on matters of mutual interest."

Floyd would do well to follow the example of Jefferson School District, which "made us a partner" in the quest for more state education funds, said Vincent. "We're one of the best lobbying groups in the country," he said.

The Floyd school board's response came in the form of a policy statement issued after the board had met in executive session. The statement, which made no specific reference to the

Union Rep Says Action Anti-Labor

Teamsters noted that the Board of Education, since it is open to input from the whole community, would "not enter into any relationship which is or could be characterized as 'special' or 'exclusive' in nature with any group or organization."

Vincent chided the board for setting up a straw horse. State law already prohibits public agencies from recognizing unions as exclusive agents for their workers and the Teamsters had no intention of breaking the law, he said. "This is the old softshoe routine," he said in an interview later.

(Unlike many union contracts, under which an employer recognizes a union as the exclusive representative of a group of workers, the contract recently concluded between the Teamsters and Jefferson County School District describes the union as the "official" representative of the district's non-certified employees, but avoids the term "exclusive.")

The Floyd board's policy "doesn't change anything. It only tells us what we already knew," said Vincent, who was accompanied by Teamsters organizer Terry Osborne. "The only thing different is we'll now start arranging the players," he said.

Vincent said he and Osborne would consult with the union's executive committee "to ask how nice or nasty they want us to be." A typical response might be to fund opposition candidates, especially against board members who moved and seconded the policy statement rejecting the union, he said.

The board policy passed unanimously on a motion of Ray "Shag" Campbell, seconded by James A. Duff. Their action "tells me that they're anti-union and anti-labor," Vincent said.

"I'm disappointed they took such a small attitude. They're not treating you evenhanded," Vincent told a group of bus drivers, cooks, janitors, clerks, and aides, who appeared to make up the majority of the 85 or so who attend-

RESCUE WORKERS used a mechanical device to gain access to the driver of this compact car, which was hit broadside Friday afternoon by the coal truck at right, but the woman, Brenda Sue Bentley, of Maytown, died of her injuries. Her three-year-old daughter was also injured in the wreck. The truck driver was charged with murder after he allegedly ran a red light at the Allen intersection of U.S. 23 and KY 1428.

City Seeks To Nullify 160-11 Vote

Was last month's lopsided vote against Prestonsburg's annexation of Auxier equal to the 3-to-1 margin needed to defeat the proposal? Yes, ruled the County Election Commission on Nov. 11. No, assert city officials in a suit filed last week in Floyd Circuit Court.

Undisputed is the tally. Of those who voted on the annexation question in Auxier and Cliff No. 1 precincts on Nov. 11 were for it, 160 against it.

Also undisputed is the law. An annexation proposal passes in Kentucky unless it is opposed by at least 75 percent of qualified voters actually living in the area to be annexed. But how many fit into that category?

Annexation opponents came up with a list of 190 names. County Clerk Carla Bolton unearthed 206 names. Even using the longer list, the annexation proposal failed, the elections board ruled, since 75 percent of 206 is 154.5.

But both lists—the one compiled by Dallas Sammons and Frank Branham, the other by the county clerk—were "incomplete, inaccurate, and erroneous," according to the suit filed Thursday by City Attorney Larry D. Brown. Because the votes cast against annexation do not represent 75 percent of the qualified resident voters, the proposal passed, the city insists.

The court should set aside the Election Commission finding and declare the Auxier area to be part of Prestonsburg, the suit says.

Driver Held on Murder Charge In Coal Truck/Car Collision

A Boyd county man was lodged in Floyd county jail yesterday (Tuesday), charged with murder and first-degree assault as the result of a collision at Allen last Friday that killed a Langley woman and injured her three-year-old daughter.

Glennis R. Reynolds, Jr., of Rush, was being held Tuesday in lieu of a $20,000 bond. State police said he was driving a tractor-trailer laden with coal when it slammed into a car driven by Brenda Sue Bentley, 36, at the intersection of U.S. 23 and KY 1428 around 3 p.m.

A mother of three, Mrs. Bentley was later pronounced dead at Highlands Regional Medical Center. Her daughter, Jerri Michelle, was hospitalized in Cabell-Huntington Hospital, where she was reported to be in stable condition. Neither of the victims was wearing a seat belt.

According to witnesses, the coal truck was traveling north on U.S. 23 and failed to stop for a red light, said State Det. Keith Scott. The car, which was headed south on KY 1428, was carried about 60 feet by the impact. The Allen intersection has gained a reputation for being one of the most dangerous in the county.

County Attorney David Barber said that "much consideration was given" to the question of whether Reynolds should be booked for murder or a lesser charge. The more serious charge was made because of evidence that the truck driver "did not even try to stop" at the intersection and showed a "wanton disregard for human life," Barber said.

Maytown Woman Killed; Daughter, Three, Is Injured

Reynolds was reported by some witnesses to have passed cars that arrived at the intersection before him and had stopped for the traffic light, the prosecutor noted.

Born February 10, 1950, at Printer, Mrs. Bentley was a daughter of Leon and Edna Kidd Greer, of Printer. In addition to her parents, she is survived by her husband, Jerry Bentley; three daughters, Susan Renee Bentley, Tammy Lynn Bentley, and Jerri Michelle Bentley, all at home; six brothers, Bobby Greer, Leroy Greer, James Greer, and Johnny Greer, all of Printer, Doyle Greer, of Battle Creek, Mich., and Billy Greer, of Inez; and four sisters, Carlotta Vassallo, of Newark, N.J., Marcella Sparks, of Paintsville, Vickie Meade, of Hueysville, and Becky Greer, of Printer.

Funeral services were conducted at 1 p.m. Monday at the Hall Funeral Home chapel, with Rondal Hayes and Cecil Sherman officiating. Burial was made in the Jeff Hunter cemetery at Printer, under direction of Hall Funeral Home.

Active pallbearers were Billy Dean Greer, Bobby Dean Greer, Doyle Greer, Jody Mullins, Leroy Greer, and James Greer.

Insurance On Agenda At May Lodge Hearing

Eastern Kentuckians will have an opportunity to discuss problems relating to insurance when the Kentucky Insurance and Liability Task Force holds a public hearing in Prestonsburg today (Wednesday), Rep. Greg Stumbo, D-Prestonsburg, said.

The task force was created by the 1986 General Assembly to study problems relating to the rising costs of insurance.

The Prestonsburg hearing, scheduled for 10 a.m. at May Lodge, provides "an opportunity for local citizens, for the elderly, for the poor, for the business people of eastern Kentucky to come forth and explain to the task force what their problems are, and even what their solution might be," said Stumbo.

Hayes Named Mayor As Griffith Resigns

Martin barber Earrit Hayes has been named mayor pro-tem of that city, following a decision by Mayor Raymond Griffith to step down on account of failing health.

A retired railroad conductor, Griffith, 67, was elected mayor three years ago and has a year left of his term. He recently underwent surgery for a blocked artery and may face another operation soon, he said.

"My doctor said it's the stress and strain. I've been outtalking him a year, but now I think it's time," said Griffith, who added that he had accomplished most of the things he had hoped to do while in office.

The rebuilding of the city water system is 95 percent complete, streets have been resurfaced, and a contract has been let for construction of a new

Mrs. Shivel Victim Of Auto Accident

A single-car accident on the Mountain Parkway Thursday claimed the life of a Prestonsburg woman who was a member of one of Floyd county's oldest families.

Virginia Davidson Shivel, 78, died as a result of injuries sustained when the car in which she was a passenger left the highway and struck a tree, 4½ miles west of Salyersville. Injured were her daughter, Mary Jo LaPointe, 50, driver of the car, and Anna M. Mellon, 75, both of Prestonsburg, and Anna G. Boulas, of Lexington.

State police said the vehicle was traveling west on KY 114 when the driver lost control, around 10:15 a.m. The occupants of the car were not wearing seat belts, according to the police report.

Magoffin County Coroner Luther Dunn pronounced Mrs. Shivel dead at the scene. The other three women were taken to the Paul B. Hall Medical Center in Paintsville.

Born Jan. 1, 1908 in Prestonsburg, Mrs. Shivel was the daughter of the late Samuel P. Davidson, Jr. and Laura May Davidson. She was a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, Adah Chapter No. 24, the Prestonsburg Kiwanians, and the First United Methodist Church, where she was a former pianist, a longtime choir member, and a member of the Wesleyan Guild. Her husband, Luther Shivel, died in October, 1980.

Besides her daughter, she is survived by three sisters, Lack Roberts,

Elmo Allen Is Sworn In As New Police Chief, Here

After interviewing nine applicants and consulting with members of the Prestonsburg City Council, Mayor Ann Latta announced the appointment of Elmo Allen, 26-year veteran of Kentucky State Police work, as the new chief of police. His appointment takes effect immediately.

"I'll do the best I know how. We have qualified people here, and I know we can handle the job," Allen told the City Council Monday night after his swearing-in.

The new police chief plans no drastic changes. "I'm here to see that the city gets the protection it needs, and that everything gets taken care of like it should be," Allen replaces Stan Fletcher, who resigned in October.

In her 1986 State of the City address to the City Council, Mayor Latta said it was incumbent upon her administration and the council to eliminate the indebtedness the city inherited from the former administration. "We have cut all spending insofar as possible without reducing city services," she said. "I believe the city is now operating at a better state of efficiency and serving the taxpayers to the best of our ability."

The City Council passed a resolution endorsing a Survey and Planning grant application to the Kentucky Heritage Council for a total project grant of $5,000 of which the city will provide $1,500 as its share. This grant is necessary to qualify as a National Historic District and to be placed on the National Register. Prestonsburg's property owners will then be eligible for tax credits and other assistance.

Approval was given by the council for a Firefighters Training Facility Grant. Application will be made to the Kentucky Department of Housing, Building and Construction. The facility, with an estimated total cost of $9,000, will be used as a training center for Prestonsburg firefighters. "We can teach our own per-

Former Teacher Wins Appeals Court Ruling

A special education teacher who was not rehired by the Floyd Board of Education in the fall of 1984 did not receive adequate notice that she was about to lose her job, should have been rehired, and is entitled to damages, the Kentucky Court of Appeals ruled Friday.

Mary Pamela Precht, 37, had been for four years a teacher at a Dwale school for the multi-handicapped when, in April, 1984, she received a form letter sent routinely to the district's non-tenured teachers each April, informing her that she might not be rehired the following school year.

When she was not rehired for the 1984-85 school year, Precht asked the reason but was given no reply. When she showed up for work in August, she was asked to leave.

Floyd Circuit Judge Hollie Conley refused to enjoin the Board of Education to reinstate the teacher and later ruled that then-Superintendent E. P. Grigsby, Jr. had properly notified Precht that she might not be rehired and that the board had no obligation to rehire her.

In overturning the lower court decision, the three-member appeals panel held that the blanket letter informing Precht she might not be rehired was only provisional and did not constitute adequate notice that she was going to lose her job.

Neighboring Towns Take Part in D' Day

A kick-off luncheon and awards presentation was held Dec. 2 for "D" Day on Trafficways, an intensified DUI enforcement effort, scheduled to run from 4 p.m. Dec. 12 through 5 a.m. Dec. 13.
Representatives from 29 local law enforcement agencies from across Kentucky attended the luncheon which was hosted by the Kentucky State Police.
Gov. Martha Layne Collins was the keynote speaker and addressed the issues of drinking/taking drugs and driving, the "D" Day on Trafficways, and the "Champions Against Drugs" efforts. Justice Secretary Norma Miller, Kentucky State Police Commissioner Morgan T. Elkins and representatives from several Kentucky MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers) chapters attended.
Gov. Collins said, "We want to do everything possible to make sure all Kentuckians have a safe and happy holiday." "We are asking everyone not to drink or take drugs."
"The point of 'D' Day is not to arrest as many people as we can. The purpose is to emphasize safety and preventive measures," the governor added.
Gov. Collins also recognized those local law enforcement officers and Kentucky State Police troopers who had effected the most DUI arrests for their department or post since the first of this year.
KSP Commissioner Elkins said that more than 40 local police agencies have said they will participate in the actual "D" Day enforcement effort this year. Last year 44 local agencies participated along with the KSP. "There were no fatalities during the 13-hour 'D' Day period, which ran from a Friday through a Saturday the same as this year. Normally, that time period averages three fatalities," Elkins said. The KSP, local police and sheriff's departments combined to arrest 140 intoxicated drivers.
The KSP, which originated the "D" Day on Trafficways idea as a kick-off to "National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week," cooperates in the national effort also. The first year, in 1984, 22 states participated; last year, 41 states took part and reported a total of 2,815 DUI arrests. Twenty-five states reported no fatal accidents during the "D" Day period last year. At least 44 states are expected to participate this year.
Elkins said that a person who decides to drink should designate a sober driver in case travel becomes necessary.
Beverage servers at bars and taverns, especially in Louisville and Lexington, will be passing out buttons pushing the "Designated Driver" theme and cards will be placed on tables underscoring the idea.
Actual "D" Day enforcement efforts will include moving and stationary roadblocks and sobriety checkpoints.
City police departments participating in "D" Day on Trafficways are: Ashland, Bardstown, Cadiz, Carrollton, Central City, Cold Spring, Covington, Danville, Dry Ridge, Edgewood, Elizabethtown, Florence, Frankfort, Franklin, Highland Heights, Hopkinsville, Independence, Lawrenceburg, Lebanon, Lexington, Louisville, Madisonville, Morehead, Mt. Sterling, Murray, Nicholasville, Owensboro, Paintsville, Pikeville, Pineville, Richmond, Russellville, Shelbyville, Shively, Somerset, and Vine Grove.
County police departments participating in "D" Day on Trafficways are: Boone, Bullitt, Campbell, Jefferson, and Kenton. Also participating is the Fort Knox Drug Counseling Center.

Kentucky Christmas Trees Boast Several Advantages

Homegrown Christmas trees have definite advantages over imported ones, and Kentucky is home to several commercial Christmas tree producers.
Deborah Hill, Extension forester in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, said one of the principle advantages of homegrown trees is freshness.
"The largest commercial Christmas tree operations in the United States are in the northern tier of states along the Canadian border, and they have to start cutting those trees in October to get them distributed to markets hundreds of miles away," she said.
Kentucky is home to several "choose-and-cut" operations that will provide the absolute peak of freshness. And even those trees that are cut here in Kentucky are likely to be fresher by a month or more than those brought in from out of state.
"The danger of fire from a dried out

Christmas Tree Safety For A Happy Holiday

The Kentucky state fire marshal has issued several guidelines and suggestions to a safe holiday season for all Kentuckians:
Use only Christmas tree lights that have been tested for safety. These lights are identified by the U.L. Label of Underwriter's Laboratories. All light sets should be checked for any loose connections, cracked sockets or damage to wires. Never use electric lights on a metallic tree. A short circuit could cause a severe shock or possible electrocution. Always remember to unplug tree lights when leaving the house.
Purchase the freshest tree available. A fresh tree's needles do not break when bent or fall off when the trunk is bounced on the ground. Place the tree away from heat sources and keep the base of the tree immersed in water.
Hill had these tips for choosing a fresh pre-cut tree, and what to do with it at home:
—Bounce the tree on its end a few times. Limbs should be springy and few needles should fall off.
—Pull a few needles off and bend them between thumb and forefinger. If the needles snap or break, the tree is not fresh.
—Once home, cut an inch or two off the bottom to provide a level base and to provide a fresh surface for better water absorption. Use warm water in the tree stand to begin with. This will help loosen up the tree's water absorption system.
—DO NOT bother to put aspirin, sugar or any other additives in the water in the tree stand, but do keep plenty of fresh water in it.
—Place the tree in a part of the room away from heat sources.
—Limit the use of the tree lights, as even the small ones will hasten drying out of the tree.

Brackett later denied that the school board is anti-labor. "They are trying to live realistically within the dollars they have to spend," he said. "We can't have people telling us day in and day out how we can spend our dollars."

The fact that Jefferson school workers are organized says nothing about the worth or viability of a union for Floyd school workers, said the superintendent, who noted that Floyd's $18 million school budget is dwarfed by Jefferson school district, with a budget of $342.5 million.

When she was not rehired, the teacher was entitled to a written statement of the reasons, the appeals court held. Failing that, her contract was automatically renewed under state law, the court ruled.

At a news conference Tuesday, Precht described the ruling as "an important victory for students and teachers in Floyd county." The ruling means that the Board of Education must in future vote individually on non-tenured teachers it does not intend to rehire, she said.

"The spirit and letter of the law have been violated by the letters that have gone out (to non-tenured teachers) for years," Precht said. One result, she added, is that the county has each summer "lost good teachers" because they were uncertain whether they would be rehired.

The special education teacher, who was earning nearly $18,000 a year when she was let go, said she will claim only her back pay and benefits but that former Supt. Grigsby should be made to pay the bill. "He acted wrongly," she said.

However, her attorney, John W. Mann, said that, since Grigsby was sued only in his official capacity, he could not be personally held responsible for damages.

Asked whether she intends to return to the Floyd school system, Precht replied, "It depends on what job they offer me."

"Borrowing where we can, cutting where we can," is how City Administrator Fred James described the city's current budgetary affairs. After hearing his financial report, the council granted James the power to borrow up to $40,000 to meet the city's January 1 payroll. James, however, expects by March 1, 1987 to have the city's budget nearly balanced and then hopes to start providing growth in city services. A $100,000 loss in revenue sharing funds this year has strapped the city financially.

How Many Have To Be Killed Or Injured?

How many people are going to be killed or injured at the dangerous intersections in Floyd and Pike County before the heavy trucks are slowed down?

Friday afternoon, December 5, a woman was killed and her three-year-old daughter injured in an accident at the intersection of US 23 and KY 1428, the most dangerous intersection in Eastern Kentucky. The woman's car was struck by a north bound coal truck. According to a report in the Lexington Herald, the driver of the coal truck ran the light and hit the car that was crossing the intersection on Ky. 1428. The car was pushed approximately 200 feet.

I have seen loaded coal trucks go through the red light ten seconds after the change with their horns blasting a warning for cars to clear out. If anyone pulls out, they are at the mercy of these drivers who will not be able to stop. There have been numerous accidents at this intersection, US 23 and KY 1428, since the new US 23 was built. The intersection was poorly designed for the amount of traffic using it.

Members of my family use this intersection daily, and I am concerned about their safety and all the other people that use it. What if a loaded school bus pulled out and one of these trucks came speeding through the intersection?

I realize the need for the drivers to haul as much coal as they can but not at the expense of people's lives. I do not have anything against the truck drivers, but I think they should have to obey the traffic laws and have their trucks under control when entering these intersections.

I believe the solution to this problem is the posting of a speed limit of 35 or 40 m.p.h. one half mile north and south of the intersection and enforce this speed limit. Hopefully our law enforcement agencies will monitor this intersection and all of the other intersections on US 23 and enforce the speed limit on trucks and cars. The law is supposed to be for both cars and trucks.

Says Report False

On October 16, 1986, the Lexington Herald-Leader quoted me as stating that I was an eye witness to the events leading to the death of Voyné Cannon, October 14, 1986.

I would like to set the record straight. Either I was misunderstood by the reporter or misquoted. In fact, I was not a witness to the event and only arrived on the scene after Mrs. Cannon's fall.

I deeply regret and apologize for any pain and suffering that has been caused by this false report.

State Cap on Classroom Size Poses School Board Problem

A decision by the state legislature to put a mandatory cap on class sizes has left many Kentucky school districts between a rock and a hard place—squeezed by conflicting demands to hire more teachers and balance their budgets—Floyd Superintendent Ray Brackett said last week.

But while officials in some school districts have accused the state Education Department of inflexibility in enforcing the class-size rules, Brackett said he has found state officials understanding of local problems.

Laws passed by the General Assembly this year and in its 1985 special session require that there be no more than 28 students in kindergarten classrooms, 26 in grades 1-3, 30 in grades 4-6, and 31 in grades seven and eight. Where classes are mixed, the restrictions are somewhat tighter.

Exemptions are granted if a school has no space and there is no other school within a 10-minute bus ride to which students could be transferred. Such is the case with the Allen Elementary fourth grade; Betsy Layne first, third and eighth grades; Harold sixth grade; Martin second and fourth grades; Maytown third and fifth grades; and Prestonsburg sixth grades, say Floyd officials, who have requested exemptions for those classes. Exempted classes can have up to two students over the limit.

Earlier denied were exemption requests for Drift and McDowell kindergarten classes. The problem was resolved at Drift by hiring an extra teacher and could be resolved at McDowell if parents of one kindergarten can be persuaded to transfer the child voluntarily to Drift. Brackett said. Failing that, another part-time teacher will have to be employed at McDowell, Brackett said.

Already, 10 extra teachers and several teacher aides have been hired this year to try to meet class-size limits, Brackett said, and portable classrooms have been ordered for Prestonsburg, Betsy Layne and Melvin schools. Mandatory transfers are not a feasible option in a county that has traditionally had open school districts and, in any event, most Floyd schools are separated by considerable distances, the superintendent said.

As of last week, Floyd was one of nine districts with exemption requests pending and one of seven where exemptions had been denied and classrooms were not in compliance with the law. In almost all cases, noncompliant classes are only one or two students over the limit, and the situation varies daily as students move in and out of a district or change addresses within the same district.

Changing demands for Appalachian coal and Michigan autos are matched by an ebb and flow of students here and even the decision of a single family to relocate within the county can put a school in violation of the law. While the overall school population here is barely changed from last year—9291 students are currently enrolled compared to 9283 last year—the distribution of students is in constant flux. "The whole picture changes from day to day," Brackett said.

Reducing class size was a key element in the state's education reform package and Brackett said he has no problems with it in the abstract. "Philosophically, the move to reduce classes is great," he said, "but we're dealing with the realities local school districts have to live with."

In this district, the realities include a $403,000 deficit, itself proscribed by law, which Floyd officials are under mandate to eliminate by the end of the current school year. While class ceilings make that task harder, however, Brackett is not among those who accuse the state of hardheartedness. "They're finally starting to look at some of the realities," he said. "They've been as cooperative and helpful as they can be."

Supreme Court To Review McNally, Gray Convictions

The U.S. Supreme Court agreed Monday to review the conspiracy and mail-fraud convictions of former Cabinet Secretary James E. Gray and Prestonsburg businessman Charles J. McNally. The two were convicted in March, 1984 of conspiring with Howard P. "Sonny" Hunt, Jr., former state Democratic chairman, in a scheme to distribute money from commissions on state insurance contracts. Each was sentenced to 10 years and fined $11,000; they are free pending appeals.

In agreeing to hear the case, the Supreme Court said it would examine whether federal mail-fraud statutes were properly applied to Hunt, who was a close associate of former Gov. Julian Carroll but held no government office himself. Hunt admitted he had directed the insurance kickback scheme from 1975 through 1979, while Carroll was governor. He served 22 months in prison.

Federal prosecutors argued that laws designed to keep government officials honest are also applicable to powerful figures like Hunt, even if they are not public officials. Hunt exercised power, including designating which insurance companies received state contracts, they contended. Lawyers for Gray and McNally argued that, because Hunt was not a state official, the convictions are invalid.

The application of the federal mail-fraud statute has broadened in recent years. Where traditionally a prosecution under the statute typically involved a victim losing money through some fraudulent scheme which involved the mails, the law has more recently been invoked to include corruption cases in which residents of a state are "defrauded" of honest government.

Frank Haddad, McNally's attorney, said he hoped the high court would reverse the trend of broadening the scope of the statute. "It's about time someone put the brakes on," he said. "They've been going ape. About anything you do could be called mail fraud."

Prosecutors said Hunt and Gray set up a company, Seton Investments, through which they funneled $851,000 to party loyalists, including $77,000 to McNally. Defense lawyers described it as typical of political patronage arrangements in Kentucky and insisted there was nothing illegal about it.

P'burg High Is Second In Academic Team Ratings

One might have thought that a ranking of Kentucky's top 20 high-school academic teams that listed Prestonsburg High School in second place would be an occasion of unalloyed jubilation. Not so. Many of the calls generated by the report were from people angry at the local school's second-place rating, said Nell Lawson, a math and science teacher at the school and coach of its five-member quick-recall team.

"It was more a cause of confusion than anything," said Mrs. Lawson of the first ranking issued by the Kentucky Academic Association on the basis of recommendations by academic coaches, a KAA board member, and a KAA staff member. Prestonsburg was listed as second only to Lafayette High School in Lexington, but accompanying statistics gave Prestonsburg's won-lost record as 24-1, compared to Lafayette's 13-1.

That led some to wonder why Prestonsburg should not have been ranked first and a few to hint darkly at prejudice or foul play. But, while the ranking was based primarily on a team's won-lost record, a KAA news release explained, the strength of the team's schedule was also taken into account.

All matches played could be considered part of a team's schedule—including play in academic leagues, KET's Scholastic Challenge, invitational events, and other formal matches—said KAA officials, who promised to release a list of the top 20 teams every two weeks through mid-February.

For Mrs. Lawson, the supposed slight to Prestonsburg was not worth getting upset about, especially since history will tell which is the superior team. "We're scheduled to meet Lafayette in January. We'll know then," the Prestonsburg coach said.

Members of the Prestonsburg team are seniors Scott Wells, Chris Croot and Tony Skeans, and juniors David Spiggle and Mike Rosenberg. The team is currently leading the East Kentucky Academic Conference, which includes 14 schools in a five-county area. Virgie and Pikeville high schools, which are also members of the East Kentucky conference, were listed 9th and 10th respectively in the KAA ranking.

Slate Christmas Party

There was a report of seven members who attended a reception in Inez for the State Assembly President, Frances Fraley.

Mrs. Mable Jean LeMaster reminded members of the annual Christmas party to be held December 16 at 7 p.m. Each member is asked to bring a gift for exchange, and all are encouraged to attend.

The History Corner...

“Establishing A Press In Kentucky”

When the concept of a statehood was nothing more than a gleam in the eyes of early regional leaders, the need for an official state paper became clear. The establishment of a voice for views of area residents would serve to polarize public opinion on the issue of separation from Virginia.

Despite the wandering habits of early newsmen, none had come in to the still rough western portion of Virginia called Kentucky. Thus it came about that the first newspaper in this territory was created by someone with no printing experience.

At a second territorial convention held in Danville in 1785, leaders decided to ask respected businessman John Bradford to set about putting together a printing press. Bradford must have made quite an impression, as he had only come from Fauquier County, Virginia that same year. Still, one must realize that nobody had lived in the fledgling territory for very long, except the Indians.

Bradford was hampered by various obstacles, most of which were the result of the region's isolation. In 1786, the town council for the village of Lexington voted to give a building site to Bradford to expedite the creation of the newspaper. Nonetheless, it wasn't until the following year that Bradford was able to obtain both a printing press, which was hauled overland from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh, where it was transported by flatboat on the Ohio River to Maysville and then carried to Lexington, and an experienced printer, John Parvin.

When the Kentucky Gazette made its debut, August 11, 1787, its entire first issue consisted of an editorial apology for the lateness of the paper's first issue, as well as for its dearth of content, as John Parvin had been ill for some time prior to that publication.

After such an inauspicious start, the Gazette improved greatly, eventually publishing news from the European and Mediterranean countries. Unfortunately, this news was severely dated, with some reports of items which were three to four months old. Much of what was reported from abroad was borrowed from other, out-of-the-region publications and from word-of-mouth.

So the paper fell prey to one of the shortcomings which it was supposed to countermand. Because there were no wire services or satellite transmissions in the good old days, the news from the states and from across the sea was still as stale as it had been when residents had to depend on papers brought in from Virginia. This problem even bled over into local news, as whatever was reported to the Gazette had already traversed the human grapevine.

Despite all this, the Gazette did serve its intended purpose of polarizing public opinion in favor of statehood. It also provided some colorful reminders of the nature of the times during which it was published. Often, it contained notices warning its readers that certain food caches had been poisoned in an effort to thwart the ever-present Indian menace, or that so-and-so was attacked and killed by savages, or highwaymen, or whoever seemed to be causing the most disturbance at the time. Or how about the fellow who advertised requesting that his watch be returned after being taken from a tree stump on Main Street?

Of course, the Gazette was not without competition. Some of the ensuing battles between the various newspapers of the territory, as they fought for supremacy, is reminiscent of the classic Mark Twain short story, "Journalism in Tennessee." We'll pick up with some accounts of these other early papers and clashes between their erstwhile editors in next week's column.

K Mart Brings Cheer To Needy Children

2,100 K mart stores nationwide will open their doors early, Saturday, Dec. 13, to bring Christmas cheer to more than 42,000 underprivileged children. This is the second Christmas shopping spree sponsored by K-mart's Good News Committees, groups of employee volunteers.

At 8 a.m., needy children will take to the aisles of K mart stores across the country and spend over $840,000 on gifts for their families, friends and themselves.

Each child will be able to pick out $20 worth of merchandise of their choice. In addition, children will be treated to breakfast and a gift-wrapped present from Santa.

K mart employees, who volunteered their early morning time, will assist children with gift selections and with staying within their budget.

Locally, each K mart store will sponsor 20 needy children. Additional children may be sponsored by community organizations.

According to K mart's chairman, Bernard M. Fauber, holding the shopping spree for a second year is important for the children in each community where there is a K mart store.

"Last year about 42,000 boys and girls were able to share in the spirit of Christmas. Most of them unselfishly purchased gifts for their moms, dads, grandparents, brothers and sisters," Fauber said. "We're not just giving these children gifts, we're teaching them about caring and sharing," he added.

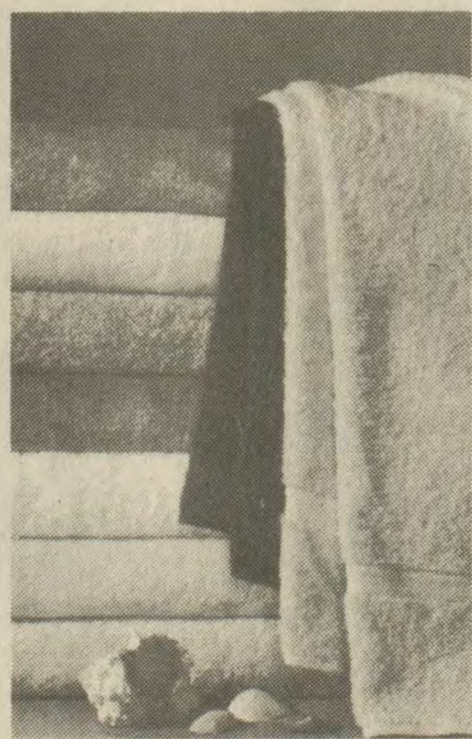

K mart Good News Committees are organized by employees in each store. The committees are actively involved in year-round outreach programs in the communities surrounding their K mart stores.

K mart Corporation is the second-largest retailer in the world, with 1985 sales of $22.4 billion.

Sales Tax Deduction Worth Less In '87

Because of the new tax bill, consumers must act now to take advantage of deductions they won't have next year. Since a large percentage of deductions will be lost or limited next year, you have only this month and December to make decisions about purchases on which you wish to deduct the sales tax, said Bob Flashman, Extension resource management specialist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

What can you do now?
"Consider a shopping spree," said Flashman. "If you plan to purchase a car or other big-ticket item such as a boat or computer in January or February, buy them now. You can deduct the sales tax of these if you itemize on your 1986 tax return. Next year you'll lose out on the deduction for sales tax."

Consumers will lose 35% of the deduction for interest paid on credit cards and other installment purchases next year and even more the following years.

"It's best to pay off credit card debts, then shop around for a card with a lower interest rate and no yearly fees," said Flashman. "Find out if there is a grace period interest-free after you charge something. If there isn't, try to avoid using the credit card."

Other changes in the law and considerations you should make.

Miscellaneous deductions. Next year, only those that exceed 2% of your taxable income will be deductible. For example, if your taxable income is $28,000 you will be allowed to deduct miscellaneous expenses only on the amount above $560.00. Under the old law you could deduct the full $560.00 if you itemized.

Dues for professional associations and unions. Even if your dues don't have to be paid until next year, pay them now. Also, if you subscribe to professional journals or publications directed toward your line of work or investments, renew and pay for them now.

Shift income to 1987 since most taxpayers will be in a lower tax bracket. If you will be receiving a large bonus this year, ask your employer to consider giving you the bonus in January.

Make maximum contribution to retirement plans such as a 401k or IRA.

Consider selling appreciated assets, such as stock, or giving the asset as a gift to a charitable organization. Compare the marginal tax rate to determine the actual capital gain rate you will be paying. Consider nontax factors, too. The market value may be down if other taxpayers are selling for the same reason you are.

Medical expenses. Next year you can deduct medical expenses that are above 7.5% of your adjusted gross income. Under the old law you could deduct expenses that were above 5% of your income.

Charitable contributions will be eliminated next year for those who do not itemize.

Handling the Holidays Is Hard for Grieving Parents

The holiday season inundates us with images of children—opening presents on Christmas morning, decorating the tree, visiting with grandparents.

For families who have lost a young child, reconciling grief with traditional Christmas images hurts. Families who have recently lost a baby to Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS) are especially vulnerable during the holidays.

"A parent who loses a child is going to grieve—no matter what the cause," said Ida Lyons, RN, coordinator of the Kentucky Department for Health Services SIDS program. "But with a SIDS death, the grief is usually complicated by unwarranted guilt about being unable to prevent the child's death."

SIDS, often called crib death, is the sudden, unexplained death of an apparently healthy, normal baby. Years of research have not found a cause for SIDS. It can be neither predicted nor prevented.

"Most of our holiday celebrations center around the family," said Lyons. "Seeing commercials for toys everywhere they look, attending family dinners, exchanging presents with other family children—all of these things put a lot of pressure on parents who are still grieving."

"Coping with the grief and guilt are draining under normal circumstances, but during the holidays with reminders of children and family togetherness, parents suffer even more."

Coping is possible, though. "There is no one thing that families can do to ease their pain," Lyons said. "But usually a combination of things can help. Each family has to find what is right for them."

Lyons advises that families should not ignore the holidays but shouldn't ignore their grief, either. While memories can be painful, many people find that it's easier to accept the memories than to fight them back.

"Crying is all right," said Lyons. "Don't try to fight back feelings just because this is a special time of the year. Talking about your feelings with a family member or friend may help."

Some parents place a special ornament on the tree in memory of their child. Others make a donation of food or money to a charitable organization in the name of their baby.

"Family and friends also can be helpful with shopping, which can be a terrible shock for parents who have recently lost a child," she said. "Or you might want to do your shopping through a catalog."

Families should realize that they have emotional and physical limitations and be willing to accept them, she said. Grieving uses a lot of energy, and families might want to make a list of usual holiday activities and then trim the list to make it more manageable.

"People should also remember that they can make changes in their usual holiday celebration," said Lyons. "Eat at different place or at a different time. Open presents at a different time. Do whatever it takes to make the holidays comfortable for you and your family."

"The only true principle for mankind is justice."

Blood, the Gift of Life

HIS WORK IS HIS THERAPY. Brian Williamson, 28, whose failing kidney requires bi-weekly blood transfusions, is pictured at work last week in the Our Lady of the Way Hospital laboratory, where he is a medical technologist.

If you want to give someone a gift this Christmas, there is no greater one than the gift of blood. If you doubt its value, talk to Brian Williamson.

To Williamson, a medical technologist at Our Lady of the Way Hospital in Martin, blood is a way of life—both professionally and personally.

Williamson was 11, a sixth-grader at Paintsville Elementary School, when, as the result of a birth defect, his kidneys failed. Then followed five months on a dialysis machine before he received a kidney transplant at Mt. Sinai Hospital in Cleveland.

It was touch and go at first whether his body would reject it, but that crisis passed and the schoolboy eventually resumed a normal life.

When he graduated from Morehead State University and faced the choice of a career, medical technology attracted Williamson as a way of making his own contribution to a field from which he had already much benefited. "I had to pay back what had been done for me," he explained.

His transplanted kidney performed for almost 14 years before he became anemic in 1983 and doctors determined the organ was failing. He is now awaiting another transplant, perhaps next summer. But, in the meantime, he has to have transfusions of blood every two weeks at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

For everyone person who needs blood, there must be many willing to give it. Suzanne Totten, a Jenny Wiley State Park worker, came to understand that this summer, when her husband was admitted to the hospital with abdominal bleeding and needed 15 pints of blood. Mrs. Totten is now a regular donor at the Central Kentucky Blood Center's Prestonsburg office.

For Marilyn Tackett, formerly of Melvin, the lesson was brought home when her mother underwent surgery and needed blood but donors were hard to come by. "When you're in a situation like that, it makes you realize," she said. She too is now a regular donor.

The winter months are traditionally a time of blood shortages. "It's the time we need it most and have it least," said Williamson, whose hospital work as well as his personal history has made him familiar with the need. Not only do slick roads mean more accident victims, but the holidays mean people's minds are on other things. "During the Christmas season, people are busy shopping and celebrating and visiting family and they're more likely not to be thinking about giving blood."

After he gets his new kidney, Williamson has other things planned. He is engaged to be married next fall and hopes some day to get his master's degree and go into chemical research. In the meantime, he'll be dependent on continuing transfusions.

If you want to be among those who keep people and their hopes alive by giving blood, the Central Kentucky Blood Center, which serves all of eastern Kentucky, will be looking for you at their Sixth Annual Donorama next week.

The four-day event runs from Tuesday through Friday, Dec. 16-19, from 12 noon to 9 p.m. daily, at the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn. Organizers are hoping to attract 250 donors.

Care packages, T-shirts, and door prizes will be given away. And on Wednesday Santa Claus will be handing out candy to the kids.

Giving blood is simple, is only as painful as the prick of a needle, and takes only half an hour or so. All needles are sterile and they are used only once. There is no way you can contract AIDS or other diseases from giving blood.

Think about it. People like Brian Williamson need it. And it's a great way to say Merry Christmas.

18 Infected Herds Will Be Destroyed

Kentucky Agriculture Department's livestock inspectors have gained the agreement of the owners of 18 brucellosis-infected herds in Kentucky to have those herds slaughtered under the State's new brucellosis depopulation program. This brings to 753 the number of infected or exposed cattle committed to the depopulation effort.

Brucellosis is a disease which causes abortion in cattle and appears in humans as undulant fever. It is the target of a nationwide eradication effort. Commissioner Boswell reported Wednesday to the Joint Legislative Agriculture Subcommittee that the depopulation work so far will bring to 91 the number of infected herds in the state, once the 18 now under the depopulation plan are destroyed.

"That is still far, far too many infected herds, since our goal is to rid the state completely of this dread disease," Commissioner Boswell said, "but this is the smallest number of infected herds we have had on record in Kentucky in a long, long time."

Commissioner Boswell told the legislators that the Federal Government has warned that it is planning to phase out its assistance to states in their brucellosis eradication efforts and that it behooves Kentucky to act very quickly to become disease-free. "Also, all other states are giving off signals that they will blacklist cattle coming in from other states in which brucellosis is still prevalent," the Agriculture Commissioner said, "and so it is extremely important to Kentucky cattle producers' continued ability to market their cattle that we attack this disease full-bore."

The Department of Agriculture notified legislators last month, upon approval by the Kentucky Board of Agriculture, that it intended to commit about $600,000 in unbudgeted funds to the State's depopulation program. This followed acceptance by the Board of emergency regulations through which the program is being implemented. Those regulations were signed by Gov. Collins three weeks ago.

The agreed-to expenditures so far on the 18 infected herds headed for slaughter total $49,300. The buyout plan pays $75 for graded or registered adults and $50 for heifer calves. The Federal Government has had its own incentive program in place for a number of years.

Sub-Committee Chairman Rep. Clay Crupper of Dry Ridge expressed praise for Commissioner Boswell's efforts at ridding the Commonwealth's farms of brucellosis. "Your efforts have been extremely effective, and I know that because of the work of the Department of Agriculture in the livestock disease eradication area in recent years, we are a lot closer in Kentucky to the day when we will indeed be completely free of brucellosis."

Meanwhile, Kentucky Department of Agriculture livestock inspectors continue to contact owners of herds exposed to brucellosis, encouraging them to voluntarily enter the depopulation program. The herds under the program and headed for slaughter so far are located in the counties of: Livingston, Pulaski, Muhlenberg, Jessamine, Carlisle, Mercer, Woodford, Hopkins, Montgomery, Green, Crittenden, Monroe, Logan and Garrard.

Those farmers will receive payment upon proof that their cattle have been slaughtered. They must also have signed an agreement which specifies the manner in which their premises must be dealt with in terms of disinfecting barns and similar precautions.

Commissioner Boswell will fully explain the brucellosis eradication program at the 67th Annual Kentucky Farm Bureau Convention in Louisville at the Executive West at 2 p.m. Thursday, Dec. 11.

Employers Are Offered Tax Credit For Hiring Hard-To-Place Workers

Tax breaks. The new federal tax bill hasn't eliminated all of them. In fact, Kentucky employers, large and small, can still claim a significant break under the Targeted Jobs Tax Credit (TJTC) program.

Congress included TJTC in the Tax Reform Act, made it retroactive to Jan. 1 and extended it through 1988.

This program, administered in Kentucky by the state Department for Employment Services, offers a tax incentive to employers who hire people, on a full- or part-time basis, from certain target groups.

"It serves a two-fold purpose," said Employment Services Commissioner James Daniels. "Some people who have difficulty finding work included handicapped persons, youth from low-income families, people receiving Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) benefits and recipients of federal Supplemental Security Income benefits. Employers who hire people from these and other target groups can qualify for a tax credit under this program."

An employer can claim a tax credit of up to $2,400 for the first year someone is on the payroll. This credit can be applied, until exhausted, to taxes in the current year, the past three years or the next 15 years.

Although the program expired nearly a year ago, state officials hoped it would be reauthorized by Congress.

"While the program was in limbo this year, we continued to accept requests from employers to certify potential employees as eligible for this program," Daniels said. "Employers who filed these requests should contact one of our local offices and schedule an appointment with the TJTC coordinator."

Employers who want to determine if hiring a certain job applicant will enable a company to claim a tax credit also should call one of the department's local offices.

"An employer who thinks a job applicant may be eligible for the program should send us a written request for certification. This request must be postmarked or delivered in person to one of our local offices on or before the day that person starts work," Daniels said.

"Many people from the TJTC target groups already are being identified as eligible to participate in the program. They use this as a selling point during a job interview," he explained.

"The important thing is to make sure applicants are certified for the program before they begin working. Sometimes an employer hires someone from one of the target groups and later asks our local office staff if the employee is eligible for the program. In many cases the employee would have been eligible if the employer had made a written request that the individual be certified before the first day on the job," Daniels said.

The program also offers a special incentive to employers who give summer jobs to youth from low-income families—a credit of up to $2,550 for each eligible worker.

Employers who need additional information about the program should contact one of the local Employment Services offices or call the department's toll-free number, 1-800-JOB-NEWS (1-800-562-6397).

IRS Community Outreach Program Helps Taxpayers

The Internal Revenue Service has a year-round program to inform taxpayers about federal tax law changes and filing requirements, and to give guidance in the self-help preparation of tax returns. As part of the Community Outreach Program, arrangements can be made for an IRS employee to talk to your group or organization about federal taxes, including information on the Tax Reform Act of 1986, and how to complete the new Form W-4 for 1987.

Although the Outreach Program is available the year around, most groups will be interested in the service during the tax filing season. Now is the time to schedule a seminar or self-help session.

Arrangements can be made for meetings at various times, including evenings and weekends.

Those interested should call the IRS Outreach Coordinator for Kentucky toll free at 1-800-424-1040. In the Louisville area one may call 582-6259.

Get ready for the next tax filing season by making your arrangements for assistance now.

Teachers To Be Selected

Fifteen teachers in the state's public and private schools grades K-12 will be selected to participate in a Kentucky Humanities Council seminar, "Race Relations in Comparative Perspective," at Centre College June 21 through June 3, 1987.

Participants will receive up to $750 for seminar expenses, including books, mileage, room, board and spring and fall workshops. Participants will be required to live at Centre. Campus housing will be available.

The seminar leader will be Dr. Donley T. Studlar, associate professor of government at Centre.

The seminar will examine the similarities and differences in race relations in the United States, South Africa and Great Britain. Emphasis will be placed on how the values of individuals, groups and institutions have shaped race relations in the three countries.

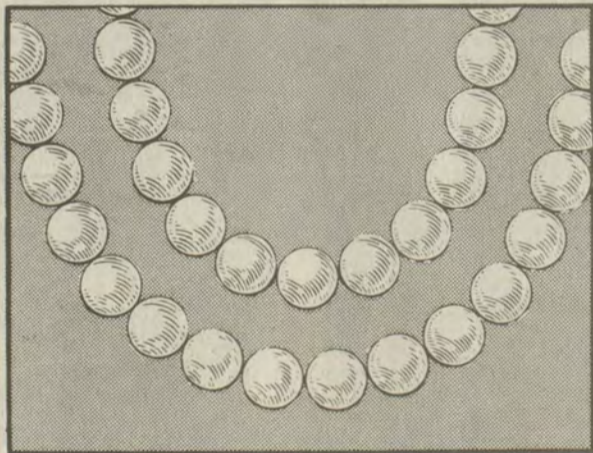

The nature of these values will be examined through literary works such as Ralph Ellison's Invisible Man and Alan Paton's Cry, the Beloved Country, scholarly works such as Race and Racism and The Politics of Race and films such as "My Beautiful Laundrette" and "The Search for Sonda Lange." There will also be guest speakers.

The application deadline is February 2, 1987. Applicants from grades 7-12 are preferred, but strong applicants from lower grades will be considered.

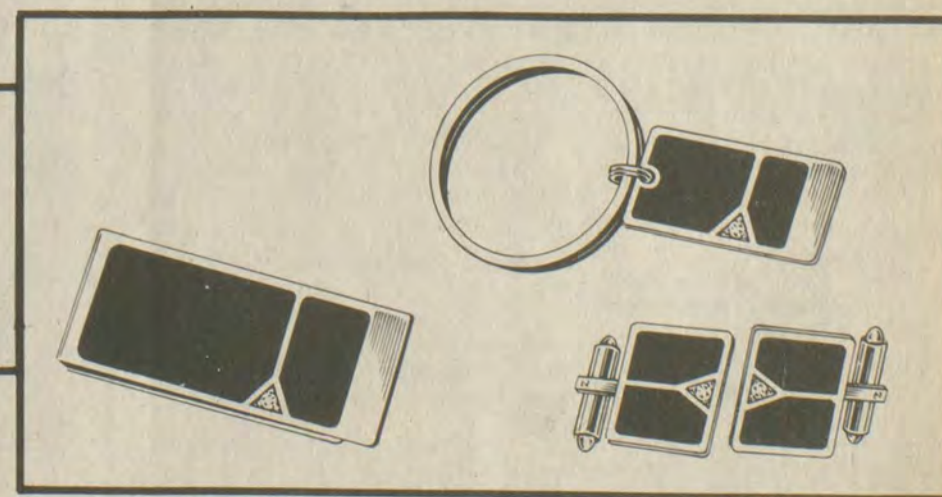

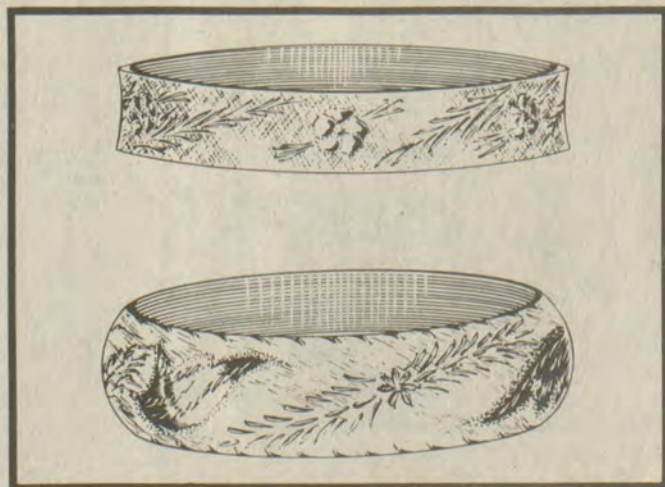

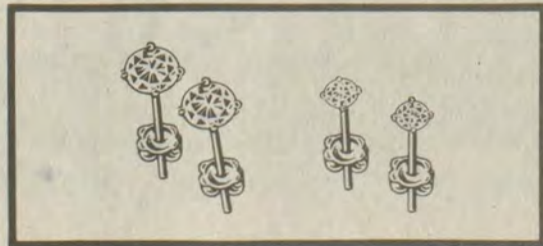

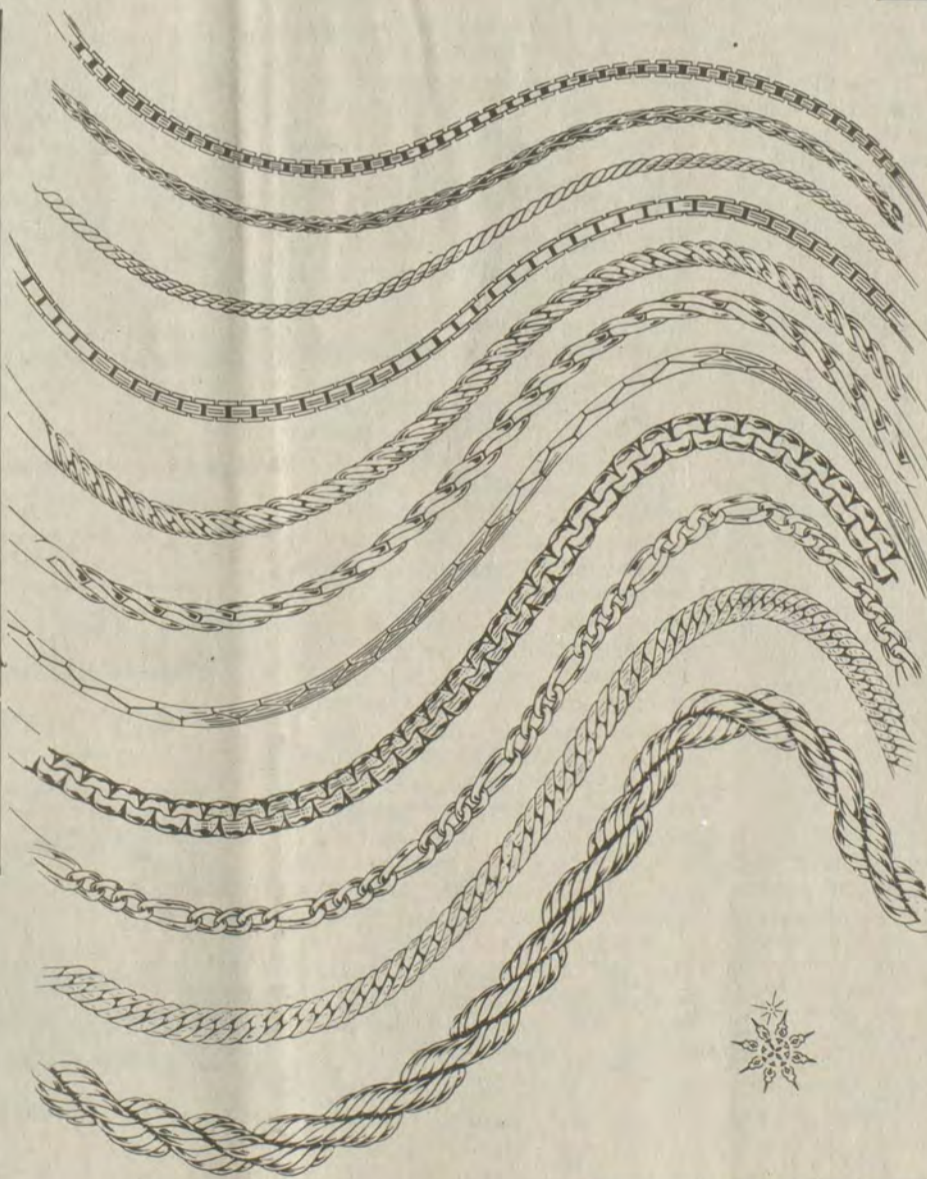

For applications and further information, contact Dr. Donley T. Studlar, Centre College, Danville, Kentucky 40422, phone (606) 236-5211, ext. 343.

Board Moves To Refinance Bonds For $438,558 Savings

The Board of Education last week joined a tide of public agencies taking advantage of lower interest rates to refinance bonds floated when rates were high. The strategy could realize a saving of $438,558, a banker told the board—more than enough to offset the school district's $403,278 deficit.

Changing tax laws lent urgency to the decision. In order to reduce the amount of bonds to be floated next year, when new legal strictures will be in effect, the board should refinance its 1980 series this month, said Terrell Ross, a representative of Prescott, Ball & Turben, Inc., the investment bankers who will be handling the sale.

The new federal tax law limits to $10 million the amount of tax-exempt bonds which may be floated in a given year, Ross explained. With a major construction program under way, the Floyd school district will soon be looking to sell $14 million in bonds.

Of the school district's four outstanding bond issues, only the most recent—the $3.9 million issued in 1980 to build Betsy Layne High School—is worth refinancing, Ross said. Under the restructuring, the existing interest rate of 8.8 percent could be reduced to around 5.7 percent, he said.

Of the remaining bond issues, the 1968 series is all but paid off, and no significant savings would be realized by refinancing the $1.8 million 1974 series or the $710,000 1975 series, the banker said.

In special session Tuesday, Floyd Fiscal Court gave first reading to an ordinance authorizing a new $4.2 million bond issue on behalf of the school district. Final passage of the bill is expected at the court's regular meeting on Dec. 19, the date on which the bonds are scheduled for sale. (The fiscal court voted recently to finance on its own behalf a 1979 housing mortgage bond issue and, on behalf of the county solid waste system, a 1980 issue of $1.5 million.)

Movement was evident on the selection of sites for new schools, an issue that had been stalled by divided communities and reluctant property owners. The board officially moved to purchase a Goose Creek site from T&K Mining Co. for the consolidated Garrett/Wayland school, and to seek state appraisals for sites at Hi Hat and Allen.

If the sales go through, a 30-acre tract owned by Hattie Mitchell, Gordon Meade, and Alma Jean Meade, just above the station at the mouth of Clear Creek, would become the site for a consolidated McDowell/Wheelwright high school and a 13-acre tract adjoining the state highway garage at Allen and owned by Graham Burchett and Charles Harris would be home to the new Allen Elementary School.

The board accepted a bid by Kentucky School Boards Insurance Trust for six months' coverage on school buildings and boilers. The trust, which was the only bidder, offered the policy for a $36,947 premium.

Hired were: Emogene Caldwell, certified substitute teacher; Melvin Frasure, Melanie Jane Elliott, Hugh H. Henegar, Gail Muriel, Dewey S. Hackworth, and Bonnie Mullins, emergency substitute teachers; Ted Stumbo, Joseph Snyder and Willie Bailey, substitute bus drivers; Anita Mullins teacher aide at Osborne Elementary, and Joan Storey, EHA teacher aide at Clark.

Martin County Coal Offers Employees KET Study Program

"When you drop out of school, the first year it won't really bother you. But later, you will wish you had finished." Thirteen years after she dropped out of school, Debbie Branham is studying to get her GED, thanks largely to her husband's employer, Martin County Coal Corporation.

Martin County Coal Corporation, of Inez, offers its employees and their families a chance to better their education and earn a high school equivalency certificate through the KET/GED Study-At-Home program.

The company purchased a complete set of videotape lessons produced by KET which they show at an on-site training center twice a week. (The lessons also are broadcast on KET.) All expenses for workbooks and exams are paid by Martin County Coal, and company volunteers, including President Raymond Bradbury, provide tutoring to guide participants through the lessons. The incentives—including a $300 program completion bonus—apply to all enrollees, including employee spouses and children.

"We felt a sense of loyalty to the employees and their families, and we wanted to put something back in the community that can last for years to come," said J. Mack Preece, personnel manager of Martin County Coal Corporation.

"Our commitment to the GED program says we're not interested in just an immediate fix, but rather than a long term investment in the future of Inez, and of our employees and their families. Martin County Coal Corporation has been committed for some time to improving our community through various efforts. There's no better way to do that than through education," stressed Preece.

Ruben Bowen is one of 32 people enrolled in the KET/GED Study-At-Home program through Martin County Coal. Over 25 years ago, Bowen left school, but he decided to earn his high school equivalency when Martin County Coal presented the opportunity.

"I had started to do it before. I kept telling my wife I was going to," explained Bowen about his decision to take advantage of his company's program. "I felt there was something missing in my life. Earning my GED will make me feel better about myself and help give me a better outlook on life."

Debbie Branham also had been wanting to earn her GED for a long time, but running a household made it difficult for her to go back to school. "This really makes it easier. I have talked to people I know who didn't finish school to encourage them to get their GED through the Martin County Coal program," she said.

Unlike some of his co-participants in the program, Joe Staton hadn't really thought about earning his GED until Martin County Coal offered the KET program. Now he thinks getting a better education is a good idea. "I'd only had an eighth grade education, so it was harder for me than I thought," said Staton. "But seeing it on TV and having the tutors makes it easier."

Marian Sue Bowen says she may want to go to college after earning her GED. Through the KET/GED Study-At-Home series she has watched at the Martin County Coal training center. Bowen has been introduced to subjects she never studied in school 26 years ago. However, she is confident she will earn her certificate.

Martin County Coal Corporation is among several companies offering incentives and programs of varying degrees designed to encourage employees to enroll in the KET/GED Study-At-Home program.

"With technology changing so quickly, we need a better educated workforce," Preece said, "so I guess if there had to be a selfish reason for a business to get involved in the GED program, that would be it."

Preece added, "Industries looking for sites on which to locate often consider education as a factor in their decision. Kentucky is lacking in that regard. By supporting the KET/GED Study-At-Home program, Martin County Coal can do something to help our community develop and create an economic base for the future."

Since enrollment began in September 1985, a total of 3,656 adults across Kentucky have enrolled in the KET/GED Study-At-Home program. There are three enrollment periods during the year: January, April, and October.

Ten deer were taken during the hunt, none of them very large. The biggest, an eight-point buck with a field-dressed weight of 139 pounds, was shot by Thomas Waddle. Hunters were restricted to bucks with at least four inches of visible antler, with a bag limit of one.

Reports from the hunters suggest that the Dewey Lake herd is "still young and growing," Pais said. Plenty of does were sighted, though no animals older than 2½ years.

Hall is awarded Achievement Medal. Spec. 4 John D. Hall, son of Charles E. and Peggy S. Hall, of Wayland, has been decorated with the Army Achievement Medal at Fort Ord, California. The Achievement Medal is awarded to soldiers for meritorious service, acts of courage, or other accomplishments. Hall is a military police specialist with the 571st Military Police Company.

Are PTAs, Boosters Squeezed Too Hard?

While the school board at its Wednesday meeting was mostly preoccupied with high finance, citizens' questions focussed on the more mundane issues of budgets and books.

John Rosenberg, father of a Clark Elementary seventh-grader, expressed concern at the district's apparent reliance on voluntary organizations, like booster clubs and parent-teacher groups, to pay the bills for basic classroom supplies.

Clark PTA, which has spent $3,500 this year on workbooks and other school supplies, "can no longer keep up with the requests for money," Rosenberg said. Nor is the group happy about having to pay for essential supplies.

"The quality of education for all children should not depend on how efficient the principal or PTA is at fundraising—that should be equal for all," said Rosenberg, who is director of a legal services agency here. "We're glad to raise money but it should be for fringes, not the basics."

Superintendent Ray Brackett said later that all Floyd schools are receiving all funds for instructional supplies—reckoned at $12.50 per child—authorized under state regulations. But the superintendent acknowledged that the allocation is often insufficient to meet the schools' basic needs.

Sales of pop and candy at the schools and fundraising by citizen organizations "have always helped with supplies and materials," said Brackett. "I'd be the last to say that the schools are funded as well as they should be, either at the state or local level."

A rapid-fire barrage of code numbers, line items, and dollar amounts was Brackett's response to a series of questions on the school budget posed at recent board meetings by Joyce Everly, of the Floyd County Citizens' Education Council. Everly later described the response as "very condescending."

The superintendent's reference to code numbers was not calculated to inform citizens who have no ready access to the budget code, said Everly, who charged that Brackett's administration is no more open than his predecessor's. "It's absolutely the same as under Grigsby," she said.

Brackett insisted he had answered Mrs. Everly as clearly and completely as he could.

Tuscarora Indians Make Plea For Help

The Indians at Tuscarora Indian Tribe are appealing to the general public for assistance. The Tribe at Drowning Creek Reservation are in dire straits, with little money or food, clothing and other necessities. Chief Wise Owl who heads the Tribe and doubles as their Medicine Man is making an urgent request for help.

The Drowning Creek Reservation residents get no public assistance, either state or federal. To eke out a bare existence, the Indians make authentic design blankets. Each is 72x90" and comes in a choice of blue or brown. Similar blankets sell for $150, but to raise much needed funds, the Tribe is selling the blankets for $39 postpaid.

Many persons are sending for blankets because they truly appreciate the loyalty of the American Indian, who have always worked hard against tremendous odds. Blankets may be ordered directly from Tuscarora Indian Tribe, Drowning Creek Reservation, Route 2, Box 108, Maxton, NC 28364. Each blanket will be blessed in the Indian tradition. However, if there is a special prayer that you would like Chief Wise Owl to recite over the blanket, the request will gladly be met.

PET SELECTION

COPYRIGHT 1986 KVMA

Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association You've just read your child's list of Christmas wants and found he or she wants a pet. You agree that it might be a good idea—pets do teach responsibility and make good companions.

But choosing the wrong pet can be a disastrous experience, so here are some suggestions to consider before making a purchase.

If you live in a city, especially a city with strongly enforced animal control laws, a large dog might not be appropriate. Large dogs need exercise, and if you have an apartment without access to a lawn, you may have trouble with a dog that becomes restless and unhappy. You might also check to see if the apartment house has regulations against animals. Many do. In some cases, a small dog might be allowed and would be better managed, in others it might not be possible at all.

If you have an older relative who lives alone, you might be considering a pet to keep him or her company. Recent studies have shown that the companionship of a pet often makes a significant contribution to the well being of older people. But be sure the pet is one which that older relative can easily care for. Perhaps a dog is perfect—but perhaps not, because dogs have to be allowed outside. You might consider a cat, a gerbil, a bird, a hamster, even fish.

Personality conflicts occur between people and animals as well as between people, so consider whether you are thinking of a "dog person" or a "cat person" or another kind of personality. Some few really don't like animals at all.

Also consider the age of the person. A small child might not be able to feed a dog, but could feed a bird or fish. An older person might not have the strength to handle a highly active large animal. Among older people, some may need companionship and others may need protection.

Consider the reputation of the supplier of the animal. Whether a friend or a commercial supplier, be sure they have a reputation for having health animals. You wouldn't want to give someone an animal that was about to become ill or die.

For those who already have pets, you might consider giving them a series of vaccinations against common diseases. Most veterinarians can provide you with a gift certificate for such a present.

And avoid giving exotic animals. Few people are equipped to give adequate care to unusual animals, and some are illegal in certain areas or even in the country.

Your veterinarian will welcome a chance to discuss these things with you before you make such a purchase. He knows the peculiar traits of certain animals, he knows how much specialized care is needed, and can make a reasonably good guess at matching personalities. He can recommend reliable suppliers and give you an estimate of how much it will cost to properly care for that animal.

Just because you live in a wealthy neighborhood, it doesn't mean you are immune from health problems caused by toxic waste. According to International Wildlife magazine, a study by the Council on Economic Priorities found that middle-income neighborhoods, not the poorest neighborhoods, have the highest levels of toxic waste and related cancer deaths. One of the worst places to live is Short Hills, New Jersey, with an average household income of $91,000. The best place is probably Beverly Hills, California, which has virtually no toxic waste.

In District Court

Sentenced in Floyd District Court, following guilty pleas or verdicts, were: Auddie Hall, 26, Minnie, drunk driving (DUI), seven days jail, $57.50 in fine and court cost; Rita Little, Prestonsburg, theft by deception, fined $57.50 and ordered to stay out of Sundry store for one year; Billy Ray Conley, Allen, theft by unlawful taking, assault 4th degree, 60 days probation, $257.50; Larry Little, Weeksbury, assault 4th degree, 10 days probation, $200.00 restitution and ordered not to go within 500 feet of Brenda Hunter's house; James S. Roberts, 28, Thelma, drunk driving, seven days, $557.50; Huey Hurley, 35, Mallie, drunk driving, $357.50; Clifford Conn, 49, Allen, drunk driving, $419.50; Debbie Coleman, Regina, theft by unlawful taking, $57.50 and five days probated on condition she stay out of Walmart for one year.

Most people estimate the speed of a roller coaster as being 80-100 miles per hour; really it's only 24-35 miles per hour.

Crager Named M.S.U. Coordinator

Buford Crager, Floyd county native and assistant professor of health, physical education and recreation at Morehead State University, has been named MSU's coordinator of special observances.

Crager, a former vice president, also will continue to teach, according to MSU President A.D. Albright. Crager assumed his new post on Nov. 1.

"Buford Crager is well known in the region and we are very pleased that he has so enthusiastically accepted these additional responsibilities," Dr. Albright said.

Working with other MSU administrative staff members, Crager will be involved in planning many of the University's special events, including Founders Day and the Athletic Hall of Fame induction ceremonies.

"I am honored to have this opportunity to work with President Albright, the students, staff and faculty in this new role," Crager said.

A three-time graduate of MSU, Crager began his professional career at MSU in 1967 when he was named dean of students and later became vice president for student affairs, a post he held from 1976 to 1984. Prior to joining MSU's staff, he taught and coached in the Ohio public schools.

A member of Phi Delta Kappa professional fraternity for educators, Crager is also active in Phi Kappa Phi honor society, Southern Association for College Student Affairs and National Association for Student Personnel Administrators.

A charter member of both the MSU Quarterback Club and MSU Parents Association, Crager is active in the Morehead United Methodist Church. He is married to the former Jenny Kay Ball, of Ashland. They are the parents of two children. Crager is the son of Mrs. Marietta Crager, of Prestonsburg.

Buzz Kulik's story of the filming of 'Women of Valor'

By Lynn Hoogenboom

The CBS movie "Women of Valor" (airing Sunday, Nov. 23) tells a story that producer/director Buzz Kulik feels needs to be told. The film, starring Kristy McNichol and Susan Sarandon concerns a group of Army nurses in the Philippines during World War II.

"I, male chauvinist that I am, knew the whole Philippine situation — the long march and all the rest of it — but I didn't know that women were imprisoned," he says. "That kind of touched it all off. I thought that story — that there were women who were there and were heroic, as heroic as men — should be told."

It was filmed on location in the Philippines, and during pre-production, Kulik found himself smack dab in the middle of an equally stirring story when the Philippine people refused to accept Ferdinand Marcos' "victory" in an election marred by massive corruption.

"We sent some of our people to Hong Kong when we weren't sure whether it would turn into a civil war," says Kulik. "We brought them back after a couple of days, and I flew in. When Corazon Aquino took over, there was euphoria in the country like I've never seen before."

One would suspect that anti-Americanism also would be rampant. Not so, says Kulik: "It was exactly the opposite. They love Americans." Even the insurgents didn't seem to harbor any animosity. "A couple of people in our crew decided to go up north on a holiday," says Kulik. "They found themselves with some insurgents. They were made guests of the village where the insurgents were for three or four days and had a wonderful time."

Filming in the Philippines did cause a few unusual problems, though. "We were filming in the jungle area for a number of days," says Kulik. "The first day of shooting, the sound mixer came to me and said, 'This is terrible. All I hear are chickens in the background, and they're getting into the sound track.' So I went to the production manager and I said, 'Listen, the only thing we can do is for you to go out and buy up the chickens, and we'll move them somewhere else.' So he went out and he bought up about 80 chickens from various people in the area."

Problem solved? Well, not quite. "You have to understand that the Filipinos are extremely poor," says Kulik. "The next day, there were even more chickens, because all the people discovered that these crazy Americans were paying money for them. We kept buying up chickens, but every day there were more of them."

Kulik has nothing but praise for his actors. "All the girls were working and living in less-than-ideal conditions. If anyone had told me that I wouldn't have problems with them, I would have laughed. But there wasn't one problem."

Tennessee Says No To Japanese Beetles

Outbreaks of Japanese beetles across Kentucky in recent years have prompted our neighbors to the south to take protective action against the ornamental-plant-eating pests.

Kentucky nursery operators and producers of our highly prized state namesake, bluegrass, will have to have their plants and sod certified as free of Japanese beetles before they can be shipped into Tennessee.

Dr. Rudy Scheibner, deputy state entomologist and professor of entomology at the University of Kentucky, said the quarantine by Tennessee will be of greatest concern to Kentucky sod producers, who sell acres of turf to Tennessee every year.

Although some parts of Kentucky have been relatively unaffected by Japanese beetles, sod cannot be certified as uninfested even if it came from an area in which there has been little or no problem with the iridescent insects about the size of a man's little fingernail.

"The infestations here in Kentucky in the past two years have been so intense and so widespread that the entire state is considered to be infested," Scheibner said.

"These insects have appetites much larger than their body size would suggest. A handful of them can reduce a rose bush to stalks in a couple of days. That's why Tennessee is concerned about preventing their spread into the state. They'll eat just about anything in the lawn or shrub line that a homeowner is likely to have planted. They definitely are not picky eaters," Scheibner said.

Sod growers planning to ship into Tennessee should treat the sod with chlorpyrifos, marketed under the trade name Dursban, or isofenphos, marketed under the trade name Oftanol. The application of either of these insecticides will have to be monitored by a Kentucky regulatory official or attested to in a notarized statement.

Further information about restrictions and limitations on the interstate movement of Kentucky agricultural products due to Japanese beetles can be obtained from Scheibner by writing to him at Room S225, Ag. Science North, University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky. 40546-0091, or calling him at (606) 257-5838.

Latest clip crop boasts new and improved techniques

By Barton Weiss

Just when you start thinking that music videos are wasting good talent, along comes a rich harvest of clips that revitalize the spirit.

Falco

"The Sound of Musik," by Falco, helps put this mysterious man into perspective.

The clip opens in a German beer-hall environment, which is used to tie in Falco's cultural roots (and the pastoral imagery of "The Sound of Musik"). But he is wearing a tux, which implies a classic, rather than folk, perspective. And the audience is dressed in full punk regalia. Somehow it all works.

Improved technique
It's been quite a while since we've heard anything from Kraftwerk, one of the founders of techno-video pop. The group's new video, "Musique Non-Stop," takes the use of a spinning computer-generated face one step further. Here we see the construction of band members' faces. They start off as computer skeletons, evolve into solid busts, then have the edges smoothed out to give them a more natural look.

But by now, we've seen plenty of computer-generated faces that speak and sing. What's new is that someone finally got some expression in the eyes of the spinning, merging electronic busts. It's a bit ironic that Kraftwerk has done it first, since Kraftwerk's performance style is emotionless and machinelike. Here we get the machine putting some emotional life into these machinelike people.

Lush colors
Only the B-52s could perform a song called "The Girl from Ipanema Goes to Greenland" and get away with it. Director Paul Tassie, who did the animation sequences for Talking Heads' "Road to Nowhere," weaves a tale of sorcery and magic with a colorful landscape for the band to wiggle in front of. The backgrounds were photographed in black-and-white, and the lush colors were added in post-production.

Technique perfected
In Howard Jones' "You Know I Love You ... Don't You?" director Wayne Isham perfects the xeroxed-looking animation technique pioneered by What Is This and made famous by a-ha. Isham incorporates color and considerably more subtlety into the technique than we've seen before.

Miss Henson, Mr. Lovern Wed

Miss Sheila Renae Henson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard L. Henson, and Mr. Ernest Ray Lovern, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lovern, were united in marriage during a candlelight ceremony November 15 at the Fitzpatrick First Baptist Church. The Reverend John Woods officiated.

Cheryl Stone and Teresa Henson presided over the guest book as Anthony Castle and Kathy Jo Blair presented the nuptial music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a traditional gown of white satin and lace, with a veil of white satin roses and pearls. She carried a bouquet of fresh blue-tipped carnations and miniature white roses with baby's breath and royal blue and silver streamers.

Jennifer Powell Sullivan was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Rona Lawson, Chris Thornsberry, and Kim Moore. Jennifer Henson, sister of the bride, served as flower girl.

The best man was Rondall Lawson, II and groomsmen were Greg Henson, Jerry McBrayer, John Henson, and Mark Henson.

A reception was held in the church annex following the ceremony.

The three-tiered white wedding cake displayed a fountain of royal blue water beneath and was decorated with royal blue roses and silver leaves. Two stairways lead to separate cakes extending on each side. The wedding cake was created by Dianna Adams, and was served with nuts, mints, punch, and relish trays.

The couple extend their thanks to everyone who helped with the planning, decorating, and with the reception.

Following a wedding trip to Hidden Trails in Huntington, W. Va., Mr. and Mrs. Lovern reside in Prestonsburg.

Civic, Business Leaders Take Turn In Classroom For A Day

Community involvement and creative teaching methods are highlighted in this week's edition of "Education Notebook," a television production of the Kentucky Department of Education. At Middlesboro Intermediate School in Bell county, community leaders and business people participated in a substitute teaching program for one day. Classes were conducted as usual, with the substitutes handling all duties of the teachers.

Organizers of the program say the purpose was to educate people in the community about the intricacies of a teacher's job. This program also serves the need for role models as influences on students.

Middlesboro Intermediate is also the scene of creative teaching methods. As a part of the recent National Book Week observance, teachers donned costumes representing well-known storybook characters.

During the school day, classes were taught by teachers in the guises of Alice in Wonderland, Little Red Riding Hood, Pocahontas and a variety of other characters. Teachers say this is a good way to bring the stories to life and add some excitement to the regular school routine.

Another segment in this week's "Education Notebook" deals with the Concerned Alcohol Server Education program.

The Department of Education has devised a curriculum that will educate alcohol servers about legal liabilities and recognition of the level of intoxication. Courses will be organized by the Office of Vocational Education within the next few months.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald says the program will add a new dimension to the state's drug and alcohol-abuse prevention projects. "Education Notebook" will air at 6 a.m. Sunday, Dec. 7, on WLEX-TV in Lexington; and at 3:30 p.m. Friday, Dec. 12, and 10 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 13, on KET. Check local listings for additional air dates and times on cable channels.

Lady Bobcats Survive Stiff Challenge To Capture Pre-Season Tourney Title

Before this year's pre-season tournament festivities began, Allen Central coach Bonita Compton said Betsy Layne was definitely the district's best team, but Compton's own players apparently didn't hear their coach's comments.

The Lady Rebels gave a strong Betsy Layne team all they wanted and more than anyone had expected. Although Allen Central never led in the contest, Compton's youthful Lady Rebel squad battled from behind on several occasions to keep the outcome in doubt until the final minute of play.

Entering the fourth quarter, Betsy Layne held a nine-point lead but saw their advantage disappear as the Lady Rebels scored six consecutive points to begin the final stanza.

Freshman Allen Central center Joann Conn scored 10 of her team's high 18 points in that exciting final quarter, but when the horn signaled an end to this battle, the Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats were once again preparing to climb that all familiar championship ladder.

After the Lady Rebs came back to challenge, Betsy Layne once again turned up their scoring fire, coming away with a 53-49 victory and another pre-season tournament title.

Even with the victory and title sealed away and the trophy in hand, the Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats weren't exactly satisfied, especially coach Diane Robinson.

"We saw some bright spots, but at the same time, we saw some things that we have to work on," Coach Robinson said of her Lady Bobcats' tournament play.

"I'm not pleased with the fact that we had to struggle," Robinson continued. "We turned the ball over too many times, and we have to increase our intensity a great deal. That's the biggest thing for me."

In the final and deciding contest, the Lady Bobcats were led in scoring by senior forward Ladonna Parsons, who tossed in a game high 21 points, while Sandy Flannery reached double figures with 10.

Betsy Layne forwards Tammy Hall and Yolanda Keathley added nine apiece while guards Sandy Hamilton and Sherry Parsons chipped in with a field goal each to aid the Lady Bobcat cause.

Allen Central was led in scoring by freshman Joann Conn's 18 and Michelle Floyd came off the bench to spark the Lady Rebs with 15 points. Jennifer Stephens added nine while Tonya Brown and Tony Kester accounted for seven points to round out the Allen Central scoring.

Saturday's championship contest was the third game in four days for Allen Central and could have been one reason why they hit on only five of 15 free throw opportunities. On the other hand, Betsy Layne appeared to be more rested, playing only once in the tournament.

During their flight to the finals, Compton's Lady Rebs knocked off McDowell in the tournaments opener, Wednesday, and came back Friday night to turn back Wheelwright.

Joann Conn topped all scorers both nights, tossing in 21 against the Lady Devils, a personal tournament high. McDowell was paced in points by Gloria Mullins' 13.

The talented freshman came back Friday night and scored 13 points to lead the Lady Rebs to a 47-38 victory over Wheelwright. April Reeves paced the Lady Trojans with 12 points.

Betsy Layne didn't have much difficulty in getting to the championship game. The Lady Bobcats defeated Prestonsburg, 57-48, in their only pre-final action.

Ladonna Parsons and Tammy Hall topped all scorers with 16 points each while Shon Burchett led the Lady Blackcats with 15 points.

With another trophy safely tucked away in their rapidly growing case, Betsy Layne now turns their attentions to regular season and conference action. The Lady Bobcats proved they are the team to beat in the Floyd County Conference race, and Diane Robinson thinks her team will be even better when last year's all-conference performer, Piper Presnell, returns.

Robinson says Presnell is her best outside shooter, and with her return some time next month, the Lady Bobcats will have an added weapon.

"Without her, we have to go inside because we don't have an outside shooter so we're looking forward to having her back," Coach Robinson said.

Coach Robinson also feels that her squad will improve as the season grows older, and Betsy Layne's inexperienced players become seasoned performers.

For Bonita Compton and the Allen Central Lady Rebels it isn't exactly back to the drawing board, but the Lady Rebs will have to find a way to improve their already impressive form if they are to challenge Betsy Layne and an expected strong Prestonsburg squad.

Like Coach Robinson, Bonita Compton said inexperience was a problem area for her youthful Allen Central team. However, this is a problem that can take care of itself as the Lady Rebs venture into this long basketball season.

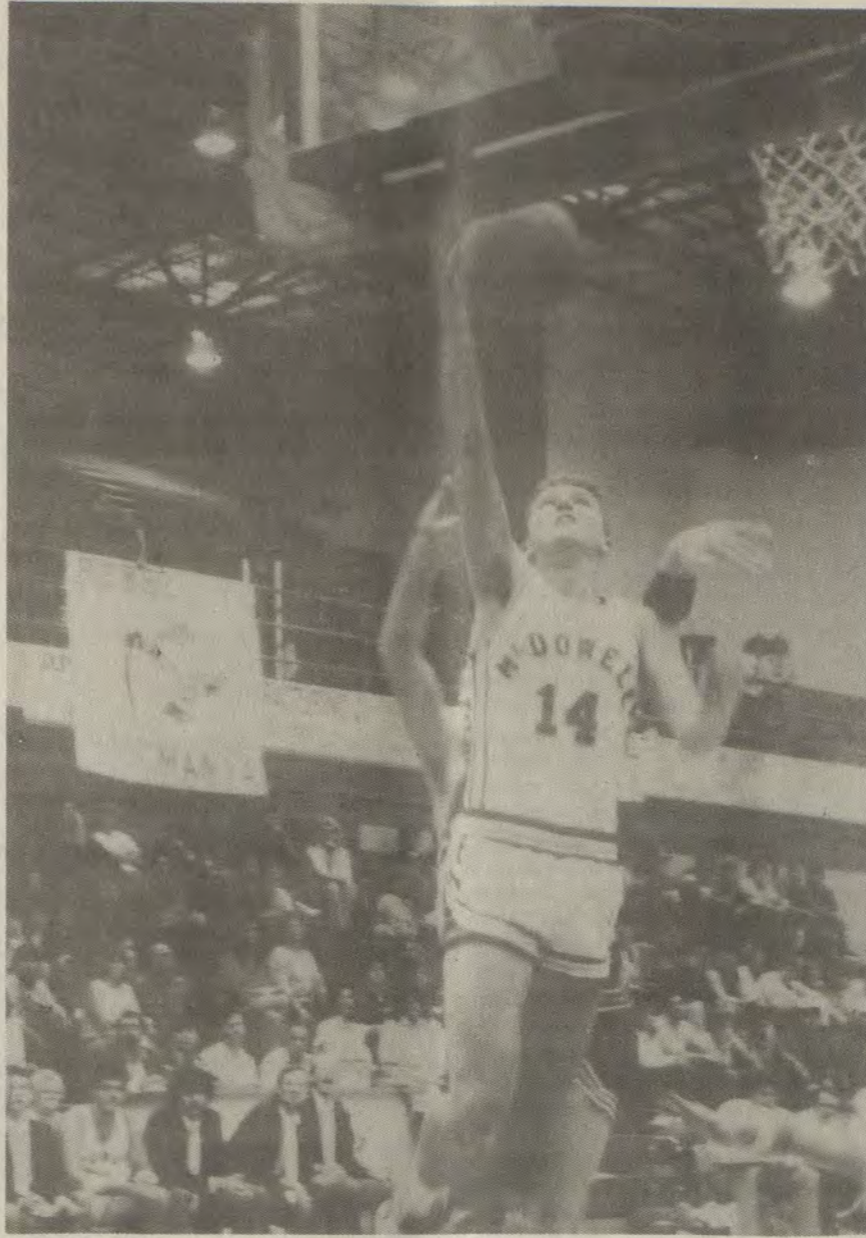

Although most coaches viewed this tournament as what it was, pre-season action, the first indication is that women's basketball in the 58th district is certainly more balanced than that of a year ago, and before this season comes to an end, the conference title may be a five-team race.

Area Fans Are Biggest Winners In Pre-Season Tournament Play

Betsy Layne High School took home two first place trophies following this year's pre-season tournament but Betsy Layne wasn't the biggest winner in tournament play.

With three of the four games being decided by three points or less no players or coaches received more than did Floyd county basketball fans.

One of the most exciting games of the entire tournament came in the opener when Allen Central slipped by a much

NOT THIS TIME: Brian Hall is denied the basket here but Hall scored a single game high of 21 points.

THE SPORTING TIMES

It seems that every year at this time I'm trying to explain why North Carolina will lay claim to another national basketball championship, and here we go again.

Now, last season my memory is still fresh when I said Dean Smith had the best college basketball team, and if the Tar Heels didn't win it the team that beat them last would.

Hey, was I wrong? No way. Louisville stopped North Carolina's run to the finals, and I'm sure you remember what followed. This year it is a whole new picture and a new season. 1986-87 could very well be remembered as the season of the little man's championship.

With the arrival of the three-point play, college basketball this year's most valuable player is a guard who can shoot a 20-foot jumper.

Now teams without three seven-footers and guards who can dunk it with their feet have a legitimate shot at a national championship.

Of course it doesn't hurt to have a David Robinson underneath, but even the best college basketball player won't win any big games because when Robinson scores, it counts for only two, but when Jeff Lebo scores, more times than not, three will be added to the score board.

Lebo, a 6' 2" Tar Heel guard, will get more playing time this season due to the graduation of Steve Hale and the sophomore guard certainly can play.

Along with Kenny Smith, North Carolina has possibly the best back court in the nation and throw in 6' 10" Dave Popson and 6' 10" Joe Wolfe to haul down some offensive rebounds and take some pressure off Smith and Lebo, and what you have is a national championship team.

Dean Smith and staff also came up with one of the best freshman classes of any school in the country, but what else is new. North Carolina always has great success in this area, the lone reason why they will always be among the nation's top contenders.

Many of you may be saying, don't forget about Louisville. Well, I haven't, but don't you forget that the Cardinals are without a quality set of guards. Oh yea, they have tremendous athletes playing this position, but they aren't college guard material.

Last year, Denny Crum did the unbelievable in winning the national championship but gone from that crew is Milt Wagner and Jeff Hall. However, back is one of the top big men in America, Pervis Ellison, along with Kenny Payne and Tony Kimbro, but who can play guard?

The Cardinals have struggled early this season but they did the same last year. This group of Red Birds may be the best, athletic wise, of any Crum has had, and if his guards rise to the occasion, Denny might just repeat.

The University of Nevada-Las Vegas could be a strong challenger this season as Jerry Tarkanian prepares his troops for battle. The Runnin' Rebels took top honors in the Big Apple NIT and displayed vintage UNLV style.

Tarkanian will have more competition out west this season as UCLA and Oklahoma appear to be tougher than usual. However, playing in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association isn't exactly the toughest task in the world so the Runnin' Rebs may have to wait until tourney time to prove their basketball worth.

Bobby Knight has probably the best guard in the country in Steve Alford, and if his supporting cast can survive some stormy Knights, Alford may carry the nation's lead role.

Indiana is always tough and with Alford they have an offensive threat. Don't worry about the Hoosiers other players, Knight will teach them to play

Sturgill's Shot Does It As Betsy Layne Sweeps Tourney

With seven seconds remaining and Betsy Layne trailing by one point, Bud Newsome launched a 15-foot jumpshot that rimmed out but luckily for the Bobcats, Todd Sturgill had gained inside rebounding position, putting the missed opportunity back up and in to give his Bobcats a 50-49 victory and a pre-season tournament championship.

Betsy Layne, who led most of the way in the first half, saw their advantage disappear in the third quarter when Allen Central's Roger Horne shot his Rebels back into a lead.

Horne scored eight points in the third stanza as Allen Central came from a four-point halftime deficit to a five-point fourth quarter lead, but Betsy Layne wouldn't be denied, at least not on this particular night.

The Bobcats' cry for victory was answered when Bud Newsome caught fire, scoring 10 of his team high 16 points in the final minutes, but Newsome's biggest shot of the night was a miss. However, thanks to Sturgill, Newsome and Betsy Layne were given a chance to celebrate.

Coming into the tournament, not many basketball people had given Betsy Layne High praise. The inexperienced Bobcats had been voted as this district's fourth team, and their title didn't come easy.

With 14 seconds remaining in the championship contest, Kevin Webb connected on a baseline lay in while drawing the foul. The solid sophomore calmly sank the free throw, putting the Rebels up by one, but for Allen Central the rest is a disappointing history.

Not many people expected Betsy Layne to claim a championship, especially this early in the '86-'87 campaign and with good reason. The Bobcats were undersized in both their games and had only three players with any varsity experience, but Craynor Slone knew his team would give their best possible effort.

"We knew the kids would play hard because they have the tradition and they want to win," Slone says. "Junior Newsome has started an excellent tradition here, and that is what won this one for us."

Slone's club did establish their tremendous ability to play defense and with shooters such as Jimmy Stumbo and Duran Newsome the Bobcats were impressive indeed.

"We played pretty good defense, and I think it affected Allen Central's shooting but at the same time they affected our offense with their defensive pressure," Slone said.

Earlier in the year, Slone expressed his concern about the Bobcat way of playing defense while stating that Betsy Layne's shooters were in fine form, and no one was finer than Bud Newsome.

The Bobcat point guard tossed in 16 points to lead Betsy Layne, six of those came with less than three minutes left.

Jimmy Stumbo, a proven shooter, hit double figures with 11 while Todd Sturgill accounted for nine. Duran Newsome added seven points and Jamie Little pitched in with five. Mike Vance also hit the scoring column with two points.

In winning the pre-season tournament, Betsy Layne proved they can challenge for another regional appearance, but to do this Slone says his team will have to be a patient one.

"We're the type of ball club, with our size, that we have to be patient, take the good shots, and hit them," Slone explained.

Slone says winning this tournament was important for his basketball team's future which will now be to try and stay on top, a familiar position for Betsy Layne.

To stay on top in the 58th district may be difficult for any team, especially when conference play arrives in full force.

Coach Johnny Martin knows how tough being number one is. County coaches selected his Rebels as this district's top team, and Allen Central proved themselves worthy, at least until they met Craynor Slone's group.

Coach Martin expressed his disappointment on the Rebel bench, but one thing Allen Central can provide their coach this season that they didn't last year is bench strength.

The Rebel head man didn't hesitate to go to his younger players during tournament play, and sophomores Rady Martin, Todd Duff, and Kevin Webb did nothing but earn more respect.

Coming into the tournament, Martin was concerned with having to play four games in five days, and this was even before Ronnie Ousley and Stanton Bentley suffered ankle injuries in the Rebels' Tuesday loss to Magoffin County.

with his prize guard.

The surprise team come NCAA tournament time will be Western Kentucky. The Hilltoppers gave UK all they wanted last season, and four of their top players are back. Kanard Johnson and Tellis Franks are true players, but Western goes much deeper than two players.

Down on the Hill they may have Kentucky's best team, and in Kentucky this could be the best compliment available anywhere.

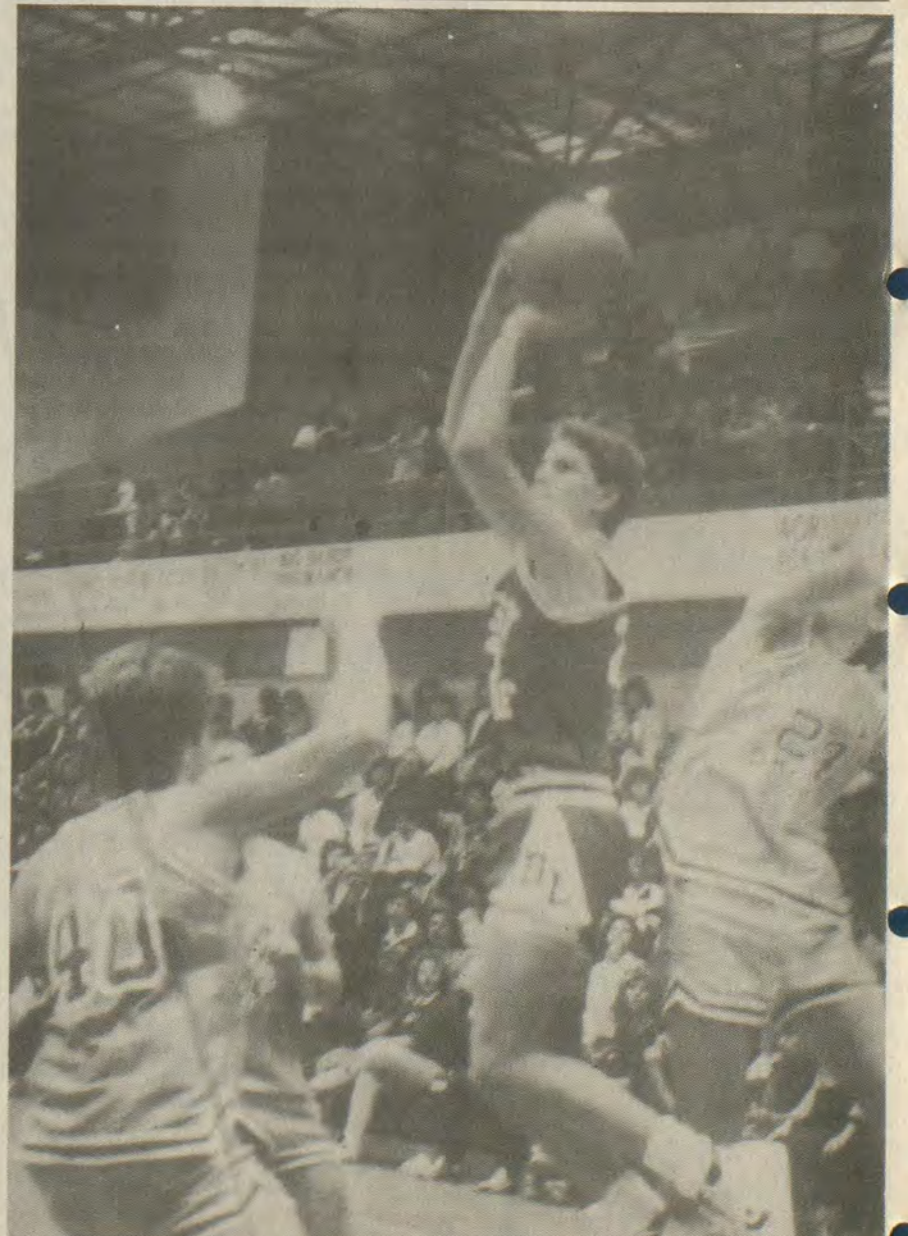

College basketball has a long way to go before the best team is determined, but before it is all over rest assured of one thing, the three-point will play a major role in the outcome of many games.

This short three-pointer will not only give an extra point per shot for any team that executes it successfully but will open up the entire court defensively.

Certainly the newly adopted line will enhance outside shooting, but at the same time, if one team shoots with success the defense will have to expand in order to stop the gift point.

Obviously, when the defense expands, big men will have more room to work. Now, not only will a guard have an opportunity to shoot, but a quick pass inside could be effective.

"Vision is the art of seeing things invisible."
Jonathan Swift

FIRES BETSY LAYNE TO FINALS: With 18 points against Prestonsburg Jimmy Stumbo shot his Bobcats to the finals and here splits the Allen Central defense.

TOUGH SHOT: Prestonsburg's Shon Burchett goes up against Betsy Layne's Tammy Hall during Thursday night action.

A REPEAT PERFORMANCE: Ladonna Parsons topped all performers in the final contest with 21 points. This came on the heels of a 16 point game Thursday.

News And Notes From The NFL

The one thing that makes professional athletics so interesting is the unexpected, and the best way to sum up week fourteen of the NFL schedule would be to borrow an old Gomer Pyle line, surprise, surprise, surprise!

No less than five upsets were recorded this week in professional football, and most had a critical bearing on the upcoming playoff picture.

The biggest winner of the day could have been the Cincinnati Bengals who completely dominated the New England Patriots in Foxboro.

Cincinnati, who had recorded over 400 total yards in their past five games, exploded behind hard-running James Brooks. The Bengals racked up a total of 575 offensive yards, the most ever in their history and the most ever given by New England.

Brooks accounted for 264 of those yards, 161 on the ground. The Bengal defense also enjoyed great success in shutting down an explosive Patriot offense. Eddie Edwards and Ross Browner and company sacked Tony Eason six times, also a season high for the Bengals.

For their efforts, Cincinnati keeps their playoff hopes very much alive, but they need a victory over Cleveland this Sunday. The Bengals control their own destiny, and if they can win their remaining two contests, Cincinnati will own a divisional title.

The only AFC team to have already clinched a playoff spot is the Denver Broncos who locked up the Western division despite being demolished by Kansas City.

However, the Broncos got lucky for the second week in a row when Seattle embarrassed Los Angeles, Monday night.

Four spots remain open in the AFC playoff picture and unbelievably the Central division has an opportunity to send two representatives to post-season play, but both Cincinnati and Cleveland will have to win their final game.

The National Football Conference tells a different tale as all but one playoff spot has already been determined.

The Chicago Bears are going to postseason action as the Central division champion and the Bears will be joined by New York and Washington. The only thing in doubt here is which team will play at home and which will go as a wildcard team.

The Los Angeles Rams also have a playoff spot reserved as either a divisional champion or a wildcard team, probably as a champion. Any other fashion would mean that Los Angeles will have to lose their final two games while San Francisco wins both of theirs.

In the NFC East, the Giants are all alone at the top after Phil Simms threw for three touchdowns as New York thumped Washington, Sunday, in RFK. If these two end in a tie, the Giants get the division all nod because of their two victories over the Redskins.

No tie is possible in the West, but if San Francisco wins the division then LA would also go to the playoffs, and it is bye bye Dallas and Minnesota.

It's probably bye bye Dallas anyway, because they have to play Chicago the last week of the season, and if you think their million dollar duo in the backfield have struggled already, just wait until the Bears show up.

San Francisco could be on the all-but-out list due to their back to back games against New England and Los Angeles so Minnesota appears to have an inside playoff track.

The Vikings have Green Bay and Houston left, two teams they should be able to handle with ease but remember that Gomer said.

Some notes of interest: New Orleans rookie runner Ruben Hayes broke the 1000-yard barrier with his 202 yards against Miami while Erick Dickerson recorded his 10th 100-yard rushing performance, Sunday night.

The Kansas City Chiefs intercepted five Denver passes this week, four of which were thrown by John Elway, and the New York Giants piled on Jay Schroeder to the tune of six sacks.

The Indianapolis Colts gave Ron Meyer a good welcome with their first victory of the season, but never fear Colts' fans you still lead in the run for Vinny Testaverde.

SHORT SPORTS

The Jenny Wiley Invitational basketball tournament will be held December 11-13 at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse. This year's tournament will feature six teams with two games nightly.

In Thursday's opening game, host Prestonsburg Blackcats will entertain Powell County and highly touted forward Steve Ginter. This game will also include an interesting coaching matchup when Lonnie Morris brings his squad to town.

Morris is a former Alice Lloyd basketball coach where one of his players included a bruising forward by the name of Jeff Burchett, now a Blackcat assistant.

Allen Central and Lee County will do battle in the second game scheduled to tip off at 8:45. The semi-final round is set for Friday with Thursday's first round winner taking on Mullins. The second semi-final contest will pit the Allen Central-Lee County winner against Lexington Catholic.

This year's Jenny Wiley Tourney will conclude Saturday with the consolation game set for 6:30 while the championship contest is scheduled for 8:15.

Former Prestonsburg Blackcat head football coach Philip Haywood was recently voted this State's Coach of the Year in 3A football.

Haywood also received five first place votes for overall coach of the year honors, finishing sixth state-wide.

Haywood led his Belfry Pirates to their second consecutive state championship appearance and an 11-2 record.

To no one's great surprise, Vinny Testaverde was awarded the Heisman Trophy this past Saturday. The Miami quarterback led the nation in passing efficiency while directing the Hurricanes to a number one ranking.

Testaverde easily outdistanced second place vote-getter Paul Palmer, creating the biggest winning spread since 1968 and OJ Simpson.

The Heisman Trophy is given annually by New York's Downtown Athletic Club after being started in 1934 in honor of a college coach by the name of John H. Heisman.

Eastern Kentucky University head football coach Roy Kidd has always marched to a winning drum, and his Colonels have made 1986 just another successful beat, maybe even louder than in recent years.

Kidd has compiled a 161-65-7 record in 22 years at Eastern, and EKU has added 0 victories to that list this season with the latest coming Saturday over Eastern Illinois.

Eastern downed the Panthers, 24-22, in the NCAA Division 1AA quarter finals and advance to this weekend's semi-finals against Arkansas State.

The first of 18 bowl games will be held this Saturday afternoon as Miami of Ohio tangles with San Jose State in the California Bowl to be held in Fresno, California.

Miami of Ohio, 8-3, took top honors in the Mid-American conference while San Jose State captured the Pacific Coast Athletic Association championship, finishing at 9-2.

World Boxing Association heavyweight champion Tim Witherspoon will put his title on the line Friday night in Madison Square Garden when he goes face to face with Tony Tubbs.

Witherspoon comes into the bout with a 25-2 record and 17 knockouts while Tubbs boasts a 22-1 record and 15 KOs.

The Paintsville Tigers proved why they had been ranked as Kentucky's second best basketball team by winning the Begley-Hilbrook classic in Lexington.

The Tigers of Bill Mike Runyon blitzed through the state's tougher teams to a final round matchup with Henry Clay and Sean Sutton.

Sutton, however, didn't impress Paintsville as the Tigers, led by talented guard Mike Minix, downed Henry Clay, 67-63, Saturday night.

Marcus Allen Drives For Back-To-Back Trophies

How can Marcus Allen match a season in which he amassed more combined yards from scrimmage than any player in NFL history?

The Raiders' star running back has the answer. Allen is aiming to top his storybook 1985 campaign by becoming only the second player to ever win the prestigious Schick Trophy in back-to-back years.

The award, presented annually by Schick razors and blades to the National Football League's Most Valuable Player as voted by the Professional Football Writers of America, is football's ultimate individual achievement. Inaugurated in 1975, it has gone to many of the NFL's all-time greatest players, including Fran Tarkenton, Walter Payton, Dan Fouts, and Earl Campbell, the only two-time winner.

Allen locked up the award last year after he punctured NFL defenses by collecting an NFL record 2,314 combined yards from scrimmage, leading the league in rushing, and tying an NFL record by rushing for 100 or more yards in nine straight games.

Bassin' With The Pros...

How To Handle "Tacklebox Shock"

By TREY FOERSTER

At the start of every season, I used to eagerly look through the latest Pro Bass spring catalog and dog ear the pages for my shopping list. The perennial procedure produced what I term "tacklebox shock." Just after the prized new additions arrived by UPS—Ron, an avid bassman, didn't hesitate to chide me on the package size—I started stripping the lures out of their protective covers and commenced on my cleaning routine. Then, the "shock" set in: which lures do I cast aside? Or should I just go buy a larger tacklebox?

Well, I've solved my syndrome much in the same way as the pros: I have various tackleboxes for various purposes. In this column, two of those pros share their tacklebox wisdom with us.

"Your tacklebox should be chosen just like everything else," explains Randy Fite, Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member. "It's based on how often you are going to use it. If you only go fishing occasionally, don't go overboard with the tackle because you can always add to it."

"I would start out with a moderately sized box and I wouldn't buy too much of any one thing," Fite instructs. "I would get a few top water baits, a few shallow running baits, and then a few deep divers. Stick with good basic colors, which are determined by the lakes you're going to be fishing. For off-color water choose chartreuses and whites: for clear water, the more natural finishes. Try to pick out some of the so-called favorites, the popular colors. The plastic worm and my personal favorite, the jigging spoon, would have to be in there. And a person ought to have a half-dozen spinnerbaits in their tacklebox too."

"I use two different types of tackleboxes," explains Ken Cook, Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member. "One is kind of a catch-all. It's a pretty good-sized box in which I have one of everything, except some plastic worms. I carry an extra box which is totally for plastic worms. I've got a third box that stays in my boat all the time because I've got everything from top water baits to deep divers to jigging spoons, Little Georges, a few spinnerbaits, jigs—a little bit of everything. If I get out in a situation that I don't expect, I've got something that will do almost anything in the box. It's important to have a box of that nature."

"I also have a box of spinnerbaits that I carry in the boat most of the time. I have other specialized boxes: one in which I keep plastic worms that are small, four inches or so, and another box that's my 'not normal' plastic worm box where I have five inches or so, and I have still another one with eight-inch worms and up for my Florida trips." As you can see, there isn't one formula for buying or stocking your tacklebox.

But there is one rule of thumb: buy a tacklebox that fits your needs for fishing the way you do, one which handles the lures and equipment you use frequently. A subsidiary rule would be to keep all plastic baits like worms in a separate box in case of a breakdown of the plastic and the subsequent "oil spill" which could ruin other lures.

Before putting your boat up for the winter, take time to examine the condition of your propeller, advise the service experts at Outboard Marine Corporation. Check for deep nicks and bent blades, which can hurt performance and damage the gearcase. Small nicks on aluminum props can be filed flat. For more extensive work, see your dealer or a good prop shop. While the prop is off, check for monofilament line that may be wrapped around the prop shaft. This can ruin the seal. This is also a good time to touch up nicks and scratches in the painted finish of your motor and head off corrosion problems. According to OMC, Johnson and Evinrude dealers carry a complete selection of touch-up paint to match most motors.

Lady Blackcats Blitz Virgie

The Virgie Lady Eagles came to Prestonsburg flying high as one of the 15th region's top basketball teams but they left with their wings clipped.

After jumping out to an early 8-0 lead in the first quarter the Lady Blackcats, behind the trio of Paula Harris, Caroline Short, and Shon Burchett, rolled to an easy 68-49 victory Monday.

Harris led the Lady Blackcats with 20 points while Short added 14 off the bench. Burchett tossed in 13 points but Coach Bridgett Clay says her defense was the biggest asset.

"Her defense proved to be a key for us," Clay said. "She had several key steals in the second quarter when we outscored them 21-11."

Prestonsburg gained a 13 point half-time advantage and increased it to 22 during second half play to gain an important 19 point win.

"We took them out of their offense with good defense and we never let up," Coach Clay explained.

The Lady Blackcats, before the home folks, gained their first victory of the season and Bridgett Clay says her team looked much better than they did in pre-season tournament play.

"We looked good," Clay admitted. "In the pre-season people thought we had a good team and we didn't show it but against Virgie, we played like the team everyone thought we had."

Kentucky Afield...

Trapping Season In Progress

The 1986-87 trapping season began November 20 in Kentucky and will continue through January 31.

The sport of trapping has received mixed reviews over the past several years. However, this sport is as important and beneficial as the taking of game by other methods such as hunting and fishing. The species that can be taken by trapping are raccoon, fox, muskrat, beaver, mink, opossum, weasel and skunk.

According to Tom Edwards, furbearer program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, trapping is a necessity in helping control overpopulation of certain animals which can lead to property damage, the spread of disease and potential public health problems.

Western Kentucky is currently experiencing problems with beaver, which are damming up waterways and flooding farm and timberlands. To help control this trend, an extended trapping season for beaver has been scheduled for February 15-28 of next year.

The most commonly trapped furbearers in Kentucky are muskrat, raccoon and fox. This year, the gray fox was removed from being classified as a varmint (such as groundhog which can be taken year round) and put on the furbearer list. Indications of declining gray fox numbers in the western and central part of the state led to this change.

Edwards said that properly set traps of the proper size will seldom catch or injure other than sought-after furbearers. "Trappers need to realize the importance of doing everything by the book," said Edwards, "from setting traps correctly to releasing unwanted animals in the best possible condition."

"It takes skill and knowledge from experience with trapping to effectively use the equipment and learn the habits of the animals to be trapped," added Edwards. Trappers who make an effort to study the sport thoroughly before taking part will find it much more rewarding. There will be less possibility of injury to unwanted captures, while at the same time will be helping to promote this beneficial technique of wildlife management.

Prices for furs, with the exception of red fox, have increased this year, which Edwards said may attract many newcomers to the sport. He suggests novice trappers either contact the Kentucky Furtakers Association or the conservation officer in the county where trapping will take place for information about the sport.

These sources can provide names of trappers in the same county who may be able to help new trappers learn and understand the regulations, as well as the best ways to set traps and what to expect.

The law requires trappers to purchase a trapping license and then provide local conservation officers with a written description of the location of the trapline. Traplines must be run at least once every 24 hours and all captured animals removed or released. All traps must be tagged with the trappers name and address. Traps found without proper tags are considered contraband and can be confiscated immediately.

Trapping on private land requires written permission from the owner. It is always good to remember landowners are as important a resource as the animals being pursued. Losing either one will deny trappers the right to enjoy the sport as it was meant to be enjoyed.

Outdoors With Andy...

"Squirrel Surprise"

By A.G. SPENCER

It has often been remarked that we covet what we do not or cannot possess. You know, such gems as "The grass is always greener on the other side." So it was no great surprise that I could think of only one thing as I settled back against an old white oak on that chilly morning. Warmth! I could remember being warm, curled up in my bed—say, what possessed me to brave this frigid weather, anyway?!

My HotSeat helped some, but nothing can completely countermand the combination of ten degree temperatures and the inactivity of waiting on a stand. And the lack of sleep began to take its toll, my head nodding drowsily.

Despite the cold, hypothermia, that sudden and often fatal loss of body temperature which claims the lives of several outdoorsmen every year, was not a real threat. Two pairs of long-johns, insulated boots, and the combined wonders of wool and goose down had taken care of that, so I was only slightly uncomfortable. Most importantly, I had on a fur-lined men's hat that looked as though it was fresh from the streets of Moscow. While such a topper might have made me the butt of a few jokes from other squirrel hunters, should any of them be equally foolish to have ventured forth on such an icy dawn, I smugly recalled an article claiming that 90 percent of body heat is lost through the top of the head. Evidently, the old adage that suggests putting on your hat when your feet are cold is right on the mark.

After several minutes on stand, dozing, I was abruptly jolted out of my slumber by the piercing scream of something that sounded very large, close by and extremely irritated! Just as thoughts of such headlines as "Local predator becomes first victim of large predator believed to be extinct" were running through my skull, the scream sounded again. This time, somewhat more awake, I quickly identified the noise as a screech owl, which, though fairly numerous, isn't quite as common in this area as a hoot owl or a barn owl.

Despite the reassurance of having identified the source of the disturbance, which, incidentally, was perched about twenty feet straight above my head, I couldn't for the life of me get back to sleep. It was really just as well, as the predawn blackness was giving way to the morning's first light. My stand, which commanded well-worn game path and a group of hardwoods overlooking a large cornfield, had been carefully selected, and I didn't want to waste any of my precious hunting time, let alone have to endure the bitter cold any more than was necessary.

Two hours later, I still hadn't done anything toward putting together a squirrel gravy breakfast when I heard a familiar rustling sound. From experience, I knew that the sound was caused by a bushytail moving slowly, intermittently on the ground, scratching under leaves in an effort to locate more acorns for its winter larder. Not moving anything but my eyes, partly because I didn't want to spook the squirrel and partly because I seemed to have been frozen in place by the cold, I waited until the object of my pursuit came into view.

He finally came over a small rise, a fat old fox squirrel. I am always happy to add one of these to my freezer, as they have at least twice the meat on them as a gray squirrel. Only one problem—I usually shoot for the head so as not to waste any of the succulent ribs, but this one's noggin was obscured by a log. After my impatience got the best of me, I finally put the scope's crosshairs low behind my target's foreleg and squeezed off a shot. Chalk up one cornfield raider.

Maybe fifteen minutes later, I added a gray squirrel to my game bag. After a little bit, I sensed movement out of the corner of my eye. Swiveling slowly, I gradually eased up my rifle. A look through the scope revealed the source of the movement to be pileated woodpecker. As I moved back around, I heard a staccato bark just as I caught a glimpse of a bushytail riding out along a tree limb. Without really thinking about it, I swung the little Browning .22 Auto ahead of the fleeing squirrel and fired. My second shot brought him down, the first having ineffectively slain a large tree branch behind the target.

The game pouch in the back of my hunting coat was sufficiently heavy for me to return home with the next morning's breakfast. Besides, in spite of my love for the outdoors, I had put up with the cold as long as I possibly could. That, along with thoughts of hot chocolate and real heat, got me moving. Another good day. Until next week, be safe and happy hunting.

Duck season runs from Dec. 14-Jan. 18, 1987. The daily bag limit is determined by the point system. Look for an update on goose hunting regulations in next week's column.

SQUIRRELS IN CREAM GRAVY

Cut squirrels into serving pieces, roll in flour seasoned with salt and pepper and a pinch of thyme. In a heavy skillet with tight fitting lid, melt butter and drippings and brown the meat on both sides. Add one cup of sour cream and one can of cream of mushroom soup along with diced green onions. Cover tightly and simmer on low heat until the meat is tender (sour cream tends to separate if it is brought to the boiling point). Add flour and stir occasionally until the gravy has achieved the proper consistency. Pour over the meat, which should have been boned at this point, and add a sprinkle of paprika and/or cayenne pepper.

IN MEMORIAM

In memory of Lizzie Judd.
 Its been a year mom since you went away, and oh, how I missed you more each day. How my mind wonders back in youth; how I would hear you pray, for God to keep your children safe and to meet you in the home above. Where you and dad will meet some day.
 And now you're gone I missed your touch and your smiling face. When I would come into your room, a smile would come upon your face. I knew you knew that I was yours by the look upon your face. My heart is sad because you're gone but, I know you're resting in Jesus's arms and your pain and suffering is all gone. I know I'll meet you mom and dad in Heaven's beautiful place.
 Sadly missed by daughters and son,
 Written by daughter Irene Reitz

Week Will Focus Awareness On Drunk, Drugged Driving

National Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week
December 14-20, 1986

The holiday season is a time of celebration for many Kentuckians. But too much celebration can be deadly.

Many people attend business and office parties and celebrate with a few drinks—which can turn into a few drinks more than intended. And drivers with more than a few drinks under their belt can turn a joyous season into a disaster.

Drinking drivers in Kentucky were responsible for 14 of 28 deaths during the traditional Christmas-New Year's party season in 1985. To help increase awareness of the problem of drunk drivers, Gov. Martha Layne Collins has declared Dec. 14-20 as Drunk and Drugged Driving Awareness Week in Kentucky.

"Last year, four of every ten persons who died on the state's highways were involved in alcohol-related accidents," said Director Mike Townsend of the Division of Substance Abuse in the Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services. "During the holiday season, that figure increases."

"Overall, however, the number of alcohol-related deaths on the state's highways is showing a decline," said Townsend. "Last year, there were 11 percent fewer deaths in accidents where alcohol was involved than in 1984, while the number of injuries was down by the same margin—11 percent."

Townsend noted that the number of fatalities during holiday periods dropped from 55 in 1984 to 36 in 1985, a decrease of one-third.

Several positive steps are being taken to help reduce the number of drunk drivers on Kentucky's highways, he said, including increased emphasis on traffic surveillance during holiday periods.

"The stiffer penalties imposed by the 'Slammer Bill' passed by the 1984 Kentucky General Assembly have made Kentuckians more cautious about driving while intoxicated," said Townsend. "Organizations such as Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) and Students Against Driving Drunk (SADD) also have drawn national attention to the problem."

"But individuals and community groups are organizing their own efforts too," he added. "Public forums are being held that call for an end to such promotions as 'happy hours,' 'two drinks for the price of one' and 'all you can drink for one price.'"

Programs that advocate serving non-alcoholic beverages or limiting the intake of alcoholic drinks are quickly gaining in popularity, Townsend noted. Many party hosts now insist on getting a taxi for friends who have had too much to drink or having a non-drinking friend to drive them home.

Other programs such as the Traffic Alcohol Patrol and toll-free telephone numbers to report drunk drivers have sent a message to the public that drunk drivers will not be tolerated or excused as they were in the past, he added. Many employers and businesses are limiting the serving of alcohol at office parties, and bartenders, waiters and waitresses are being urged to refrain from serving patrons who have had too much to drink.

"By supporting programs that keep drunk drivers off the road, pushing for strict enforcement of drunk driving laws, and calling for stiff penalties for persons convicted of DUI, we can send a message across the state—sober driving is in; drunk driving is out," said Townsend.

To report a suspected drunk driver, call the Kentucky State Police toll-free at 1-800-222-5555. For information on how to keep the "life" in your holiday party, call the Drug Information Service of Kentucky at 1-800-432-9337.

As early as the 27th century B.C., the oldest known medical text, the Nei Ching, attributed to the Chinese Emperor Huang Ti, stated that wind, cold, drought and excessive wetness can cause disease.

ADVENT
(From "Advent: A Calendar of Devotions" published by Abingdon Press)
Advent is a Latin word meaning to come. Christians should prepare themselves both mentally and spiritually for Jesus to come into the world. We celebrate the birth of Christ on Christmas Day, but our preparation starts with Advent. Advent is the first season of the Christian year, and it begins four Sundays before Christmas Day.

It is easy for the real meaning of Christmas to be forgotten in the rush of the holiday season. The beauty and wisdom of Advent is the opportunity it gives us to stand back and experience the many spiritual joys of Christmas. How marvelous it is to consider that families all over the world are drawn closer during this Advent time because of God's loving gift—Jesus Christ.

There are many ways we can help ourselves remember that Advent is not simply a way to celebrate Christmas earlier. Make an Advent wreath out of a circle of plastic foam or wood. Equally space four candles around the circular base. Attach evergreen cuttings to cover the base. Place a larger white candle in the middle of the wreath.

The wreath's round shape symbolizes God's never-ending love. The evergreens represent everlasting life. The candles can be any color, but purple represents royalty and is a traditional symbol of the Advent season. The larger white candle is called the Christ candle and represents the purity of Jesus. It is not lit until Christmas Eve.

The Council of Local Church Women encourage you to enjoy the season of Advent, as you prepare for the celebration of Christ's birth on Christmas.

FINANCIAL PLANNING

GIVE NOW OR LATER?

Because the Tax Reform Act of 1986 changes the rules on contributions, every charity-minded taxpayer should review his/her plans for giving before the end of the year.

1986 is the last year that charitable contributions can be deducted by non-itemizers. Also, tax rates will drop next year for most taxpayers, so the tax benefit for any charitable contribution decreases next year (assuming you're in a lower tax bracket in 1987). To illustrate, if you're in the top tax bracket (50%) in 1986, a $5,000 charitable contribution will cut your 1986 tax bill by $2,500. The same contribution made in 1987 (top bracket, 38.5%) would cut your tax bill by only $1,925.

Donating appreciated property has been a tax-wise move and remains so for 1986. If you have stock, for example, that you purchased several years ago for $1,000 and today it's worth $10,000, you can give it to your favorite charity and take a deduction for $10,000. The $9,000 appreciation goes untaxed. However, beginning in 1987, that untaxed appreciation is considered a "preference item" and could trigger the 21% alternative minimum tax.

When you deduct donated property valued at more than $5,000 ($10,000 for non-publicly traded stock), you must provide a qualified, written appraisal. Appraisal costs are fully deductible as a miscellaneous deduction in 1986 if you itemize on your tax return. In 1987, such costs are combined with your other miscellaneous deductions and can be deducted only to the extent they exceed 2% of your adjusted gross income.

The timing of your contribution is important. If you make a pledge to contribute to a charity, you get the tax deduction when you actually make your payment. If you use a charge card to make a charitable contribution, you get your deduction in the year of the charge rather than in the year of payment. A charitable contribution made by check is considered delivered and deductible when put in the mail. Gifts of real estate are considered complete and deductible when legal title changes hands.

Old Profs Never Die...

They Just Find New Audiences

College professors who have retired are now sharing their knowledge with elementary and secondary students through "Ask a Professor," a volunteer program administered by the Council on Aging at the University of Kentucky.

"Some of these professors retired from the classroom 10 years ago, but they still enjoy teaching and the interaction with students," says Phyllis Hanna, coordinator of the program. "Once a teacher—always a teacher."

The project began three years ago in Fayette County, providing that county's school system with a previously untapped educational resource. "Ask a Professor" may expand its services to provide speakers for local civic organizations, says Hanna.

What is the attraction for the former university professors?

"It gives me a chance to show off," jokes Gifford Blyton, a former professor of communications who retired from UK in 1975.

"It wasn't that hard to get back into the swing of teaching, but it did require adapting my material to the younger audience," says Blyton.

In one of his most popular presentations, 10-year-olds are treated to a view of how it was to be their age in the early part of the century as Blyton takes them on a journey back through time.

"We talk about things I did when I was their age—school, what we ate, our entertainment and the little things of daily life," says Blyton.

"I spent my first six or seven grades in a one-room schoolhouse," he says. "They say their favorite food is pizza and I never even had a pizza until I was 40."

"I don't lecture to them as I did adults," says Blyton. "I emphasize questions. If they don't ask me, I ask them."

"I retired early and miss teaching school," says Lucille Boyd. She and her husband, Robert, another former educator, entertain classes as a duo in the program.

As a professor of English for over 20 years, she now sings ballads for her young audiences and Robert reads his original poetry.

The couple are also world travelers

National PTA Advises: Protect Family from TV

When elementary school children were asked, "If you had to give up one of these for the rest of your life, which would you give up: watching TV, or talking to your father?" Half of the children answered, "Talking to my father."

People have allowed television to reshape their personal lives more than any other technological innovation of the 20th century, says Thomas Lickona, developmental psychologist and professor of education at Cortland College in New York. Writing in the December 1986/January 1987 issue of PTA Today, the National PTA's magazine, Lickona adds that we may have even allowed television to replace parents as children's primary moral teacher.

"Television can take over as our children's moral educator in two ways:
 by shutting down family communication and by inundating our children with shoddy values," says Lickona. Children learn kindness, honesty, and respect for others through human interactions.
 Television steals precious communication time from parents and children by reducing crucial dialogue, Lickona believes.

Face-to-face communication with adults is especially important, the author notes, because it is how much of children's moral learning takes place and their character is formed. One second-grade teacher told Lickona that children who are deficient in basic manners and interaction skills tend to come from families that have the television on while they eat.

Television also presents negative moral models to children, he says. During prime-time programming, children are exposed to muggers, rapists, embezzlers and drug dealers whose actions affect children's perceptions of what is normal human behavior.

A report summarizing more than 2,500 studies found "overwhelming evidence" that television increases children's aggression. Lickona said, "Even if youngsters don't copy the violence they see on the screen, watching it tends to produce a ho-hum attitude toward violent behavior."

What can we do to keep television from dominating our family life and taking over as our children's major teacher of morality? Lickona's article suggests the following.

—Set a good example. Research shows that parents who watch little television tend to have children who watch less.

—Require children to ask permission to watch television. Make it clear that watching television is a privilege, not a right.

—Regulate what your children watch.
 Sit down with your children and watch the shows they're watching. Explain why you want to eliminate objectionable programs by saying, "These programs go against the values we believe in as a family."

—Reduce the amount of time the set is on. Designate one or two nights a week as "quiet time" when the set stays off all evening.

—Brainstorm alternatives to TV.
 Take 10 minutes as a family and list all the possibilities. Post the list on the refrigerator and refer youngsters to it when they're bored.

—Try to make television a special event rather than a daily routine.
 Establish a "specials only" policy in which no one turns on the set unless there is a special program worth watching. That way turning on the set becomes a deliberate decision rather than a mindless habit.

Lickona believes that schools can help as well. "Some principals send a letter home asking parents to restrict television to one-half hour a night," he says.

Other topics covered in the December/January issue of PTA Today include how parents can help improve their children's writing, creating a reading environment at home, and how computers can improve children's writing skills.

Copies of the December/January issue of PTA Today are available for $1 each by sending a check or money order made payable to the National PTA, 700
 N. Rush St., Chicago, IL 60611.

 Hold Bike-A-Thon

A bike-a-thon was held recently in Auxier to raise money for the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. Approximately $850 was raised which goes toward daily treatment of children with catastrophic illnesses and also research into the cure and prevention of these diseases.

Bicycles were awarded to Jessica
 Music who collected $149.35 and to Chris Music, who raised $88. Jason Burke, 53, and Chrystal Powers, 50, rode the most miles. All riders received a certificate and those who raised $25 or more will receive a T-shirt. Those collecting $75 or more will also receive a tote bag from St. Jude.

Bicycles were donated by the Pres-tonsburg Rotary Club and also by the Auxier Community.

Eat, Drink And Be Wary,
 AAA Party Guide Advises

If you're throwing a party over the holidays, the Blue Grass Automobile Club-AAA, reminds you that your responsibilities as host go beyond seeing that everyone has a good time. According to AAA, the host's first priority should be to see that their guests return home safely.

To help hosts out, AAA is making available to the public its "High Sobriety Party Guide". It's part of the Club's "First a Friend, Then a Host" campaign which promotes the sensible use of alcohol during the holiday season.

The pamphlet includes party tips, recipes for non-alcoholic drinks and snacks which slow the absorption of alcohol, ways to determine if a guest has had too much to drink and how to estimate blood alcohol level.

The non-alcoholic drink recipes were provided by bartenders who participated in previous No-Proof Mix-Offs.
 The High Sobriety Party Guide is available at the AAA office, 155 Walnut Street. Copies can be obtained by stopping by or calling 233-1111. The pamphlet will also be distributed at the Mix-Off, December 12, 10 a.m. to noon at the Festival Marketplace.

Austin City Limits Stars Conley, Gill

From deep in the heart of Texas, the beat of country music goes on when the public television series "Austin City Limits" airs Saturdays at 10:00 p.m. Earl Thomas Conley and Vince Gill are the featured performers in the January 3 edition, taped before a studio audience.

Conley has become well known in Nashville music circles for highly introspective and personal songs, including "Heavenly Bodies" and "Somewhere Between Right and Wrong." His progressive style, with its searing guitars and driving keyboards, ignores the more traditional boundaries of country music.

In Nashville, Conley attracted attention as a writer with hits sung by Conway Twitty and the late Mel Street. Conley scored a number one hit with "Fire and Smoke" and has been recording ever since.

Although his most noted successes have been with pop music, Gill was raised on country music and in 1981 decided to devote full time to it. It was then that Rosanne Cash and Rodney Crowell hired him to become a member of their Cherry Bombs Band.

Gill signed with RCA Records in 1983 and the result was the single "Turn Me Loose." He later produced an album for RCA.

Grethel Homemakers News

The Grethel Homemakers met December 1 at 6:30 p.m. at the Grethel Baptist Church annex.

The meeting was called to order by President Arietta Hall.

Devotions were led by Glenna Evans on the topic, Sing Praise To Him, in the form of a word search puzzle from different scripture verses.

The group voted to pay for the church annex tablecloths from the treasury.

The annual Christmas nibble party consisted of walnut squares, six layer bars, butterscotch bars, chocolate-covered peanut butter balls, carrot cake, marshmallow brownies, cream doodles, and raw vegetables with dip. Recipes were exchanged.

The January meeting was scheduled. Decoration of May Lodge by homemakers was scheduled for December 9. The homemaker Christmas program at the May Lodge will be held December 12.

Homemakers present were Christine Crisp, Arietta Hall, Glenna Evans, Barbara C. Newman, Shirley Hamilton, Flora Tackett, Susan Spurr, Brenda Hall, Eileen Martin, and Frances Pitts.

UNDERSTAND NEED IN TEACHING EFFECTS-OF DRUGS

FREE SEMINAR

Dear Parents:

DRUG EDUCATION IS A MUST! Through education we can learn the things to look for in our children and detect the best methods of correcting the drug problem.

Without education, drug use in our young will grow even more rampant than it is now. Where is our drug problem? It is in all ages and in every walk of life, from professional sports to politicians, from your local paperboy to the most powerful corporate executive.

Everyone is vulnerable to drug use. Education is the only thing that is going to stop the problem. It will not go away without it.

U.N.I.T.E.D. is dedicated to the PREVENTION OF DRUG ABUSE through awareness and community involvement.

We are conducting a Drug Awareness Seminar for parents in Floyd County. The Seminar will focus on parental awareness for detecting whether or not our children are participating in illegal drugs, and if so, how to go about combating the problem.

The Drug Awareness Seminar will be held at Prestonsburg Community College, Dec. 18, 1986 from 7:00 to 9:30 p.m. in the Pike Building.

Schools Receive Flags of Progress

Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald presented a Flags of Progress to Maytown Elementary and Wheelwright High schools at the University of Kentucky Center for the Arts, November 12, during the annual Flags of Excellence and Progress Program.

Pupils representing 288 Kentucky schools came to Lexington, November 12, to celebrate what State Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald called "a rising tide of excellence in Kentucky's public schools."

The schools received Flags of Excellence and Flags of Progress in a recognition program co-sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Education and the Kentucky Educational Foundation Inc., a private organization providing support for educational reform in Kentucky.

In a ceremony at the University of Kentucky Fine Arts Center, 100 schools were honored for attendance rates of 95 percent or better, dropout rates of 5 percent or less, higher test scores and no accreditation deficiencies. The remaining schools received progress awards for improving in these areas by specific percentages.

Ninety of the 228 schools received both excellence and progress flags for significant improvement and for reaching the excellence levels.

U.S. Senator Wendell Ford addressed the pupils, principals, and superintendent of the honored schools and assisted State Superintendent McDonald in the presentation of flags. Fifth Congressional District Representatives Hal Rogers also assisted in the presentation of flags.

Also speaking was G. Ted Smith, senior vice-president of Texas Gas Transmission Corp. in Owensboro, and Foundation vice-president Larry Leatherman of Louisville was master of ceremonies.

The number of schools reaching excellence levels has more than doubled since the first recognition program two years ago, McDonald said. Progress awards have increased 50 percent over last year.

"The natural competitiveness of Kentuckians was going for us to motivate the schools to reach for higher levels," McDonald told the audience. "We knew that the spirit that makes for great horse races and great basketball rivalries would generate interest and competition for these awards."

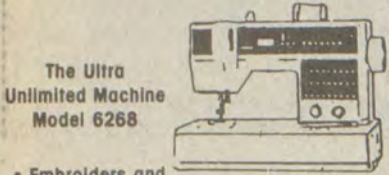

The rapidly-growing number of schools earning flags "shows that when we focus on specific goals increasing attendance, cutting dropouts, and raising test scores, we can and will work effectively to improve educational performance," McDonald said. "Excellence is the result of leadership and hard work by superintendents and board members, by principals and teachers, and by parents as well as students."

New Period For Listing
Property Jan. 1-Apr. 15

Taxpayers have previously been required to report all intangible property to the Property Valuation Administrator (PVA) in their county by March 1 of each year. This deadline was not compatible with the interests of taxpayers and tax preparers.

Effective January 1, 1987, the new listing period is January 1 until April 15. The Intangible Property Tax Return should either be filed locally at the county courthouse with the PVA or forwarded to the Department of Property Taxation. It should not be filed as an attachment to income tax returns.

For further information about intangible personal property, write or call the Department of Property Taxation, Revenue Cabinet, Frankfort, Kentucky 40620, (502) 564-6730 (toll).

Small Business Says Gov't Should Stick To Governing

"The government should stick to governing and stop competing with small businesses," said a spokesman for the National Federation of Independent Business. According to results of a survey released recently by the NFIB/Kentucky, small-business owners overwhelmingly favor legislation that would curb unfair government and non-profit competition.

Of the 1,245 Kentuckians responding to the NFIB poll, three out of four small-business owners want not-for-profit groups and government agencies to stop operating commercial sidelines with untaxed resources.

Ed Bowman, NFIB's director for Kentucky, said, "Although there is strong support from small-business owners for reform, no affirmative action has been taken yet."

This issue is likely to resurface in the statehouse when the Legislature convenes next year," Bowman added.

Small-business owners believe that not-for-profit groups have an unfair advantage. For example, to support programs, some not-for-profits run commercial ventures.

Although such ventures are taxed, not-for-profits use untaxed space and equipment to reduce the cost of their for-profit activities.

According to Bowman, small-business owners believe this unfair advantage is driving tax-paying businesses bankrupt by loosely defining "directly related activities."

"Our effort to reduce government competition with the private sector continues to be a major priority for NFIB/KY," Bowman said.

FISCAL COURT OF FLOYD COUNTY, KENTUCKY SUMMARY OF ORDINANCE

The Fiscal Court of Floyd County, Kentucky, gave first reading on December 9, 1986 and stated its intention to give second reading and adopt on December 19, 1986 at 11:00 a.m., E.S.T., an Ordinance entitled:

An Ordinance of the Fiscal Court of the County of Floyd, Kentucky, providing for the issuance of $4,325,000 principal amount (which may be increased or decreased by the amount of $430,000) of County of Floyd School Building Refunding Revenue Bonds of 1986, dated November 1, 1986 (The Refunding Bonds) in accordance with sections 162.120 through 162.300 and sections 58.010 through 58.140 of Kentucky Revised Statutes, for the purpose of refunding all or prior to their respective maturities all of the outstanding County of Floyd School Building Revenue Bonds, dated November 1, 1980, (The Prior Issue) through the deposit and investment in escrow of all of the net proceeds of the Refunding Bonds; providing for the payment of the principal and interest on said prior issue as same mature or by redemption in advance of maturity; providing for the creation of certain funds to effect the defeasement of the rights of the holders of the Bonds of the prior issue and the transfers of certain amounts into certain funds; providing for the payment of said Refunding Bonds and the interest thereon, providing for the rights of the holders of said Refunding Bonds and the enforcement thereof; and providing for an advertised public competitive sale of said Refunding Bonds.

The Ordinance authorizes the issuance of $4,325,000 of County of Floyd School Building Revenue Bonds of 1986, dated November 1, 1986, (the "Refunding Bonds") pursuant to the provisions of KRS 162.120 through 162.300 and KRS 58.010 through 58.140.

The proceeds of the Refunding Bonds, together with required funds of the Board of Education, will be escrowed and invested to pay at or prior to the stated maturities thereof the outstanding County of Floyd School Building Revenue Bonds, dated November 1, 1980 (the "Prior Issue").

The principal amount of Refunding Bonds actually issued may be adjusted upward or downward by $430,000 in order to obtain maximum interest cost savings to the County and Board of Education.

The Refunding Bonds mature as to principal in each of the years 1987 through 1999 and are to bear interest from their date at rates to be established by Resolution on December 19, 1986 following the advertised, public, competitive sale of said Refunding Bonds.

The Refunding Bonds do not constitute an indebtedness of the County but are payable only from revenues derived from the lease of the school improvements constructed from the proceeds of the Prior Issue Bonds to the Board of Education of Floyd County, Kentucky, in accordance with the terms of a Contract, Lease and Option, dated as of November 1, 1986, by and between the County and the Board.

A copy of the complete text of the Ordinance is available for inspection in the office of the County Court Clerk. This summary was prepared by Henry M. Reed III, Bond Counsel, Louisville, Kentucky.

NOTICE OF ENACTMENT AND SUMMARY OF ORDINANCE

I. TITLE

AN ORDINANCE RELATING TO THE AUTHORIZATION AND EXECUTION OF A FIRST SUPPLEMENTAL TRUST INDENTURE AMENDING THE INDENTURE AUTHORIZING THE COUNTY OF FLOYD, KENTUCKY, RESIDENTIAL MORTGAGE REVENUE BONDS, SERIES 1979, DATED APRIL 1, 1979.

II. SUMMARY

As required by Chapters 67 and 424, I hereby certify that an Ordinance, the title of which is the foregoing, was enacted by the Fiscal Court of the County of Floyd, Kentucky, at its special called meeting on November 26, 1986, and that the following is a summary of the provisions of said Ordinance. The Ordinance:

A. Authorizes and approves the participation of the County in a proposed restructuring program (the "Program") of the County of Floyd, Kentucky Residential Mortgage Revenue Bonds, Series 1979, dated April 1, 1979 (the "Bonds"), for the purpose of freeing up and making available to the County certain residual funds at the present time which would otherwise become available to the County in future years.

SUPPORT STOCKINGS

Varicose veins are a problem from which many people, especially women, suffer. The condition is caused by sitting or standing too long in the same position. Blood flowing too slowly through an artery causes it to bulge out. Some people simply complain that their legs feel tired all the time. This could be caused by poor circulation. In either case, a doctor may suggest the wearing of a support stocking. Do not be put off by this. Support stockings are no longer ugly and unfashionable. In fact, they are available in styles and colors to compliment any wardrobe. There are even support panty hose. When planning to purchase support stockings, do talk it over with the pharmacist. Accurate measurements of the foot and leg are required to be assured of the right size.

Here at COOLEY APOTHECARY, we aim to offer you the finest professional service available. We're in the business of helping you stay healthy. We are always readily available to answer any of your concerns and look forward to being of service to you in the near future. Lacunae Don't Sit Well With MSU Tape, Record Collector

By MELISSA OFFUTT
MSU Student Writer

Sometimes it pays to be somewhat of a packrat. At least it did for Dr. Michael J. Biel, associate professor of radio-television at Morehead State University, when a colleague in the National Broadcasting Company's research department called him for help with a problem.

The problem was in preparing for "The Today Show at Night #2" aired earlier this fall by the network. NBC-TV couldn't find an early ABC logo in its archives.

That's where Dr. Biel came into the picture. A fanatic collector with a feeling of obligation to completeness, Dr. Biel possesses his own library of film and videotapes. An associate at NBC knew of his extensive collection and called Dr. Biel asking if he had any footage of an early ABC logo. Not only did Dr. Biel provide NBC with the missing logo, he also loaned them footage with logos from NBC and CBS, which were 10 years older than those NBC had in its library.

"I got the ABC logo when I was in graduate school," Biel said. "It was the original. You have to go back to originals for the best picture quality," he explains.

The television special on the 1986 fall season included a history of early network shows. Dr. Biel's footage of the early logos was used to essentially open the show and he was given special thanks in the ending credits of the program.

A native New Yorker, Dr. Biel has numerous collections. Besides old radios, phonographs and "other assorted stuff" he has more than 600 video cassettes, a book collection of more than 5,000 volumes and his record collection exceeds 30,000.

Possessing a phenomenal memory, he constantly cites dates and specific historic events with knowledge stemming from ongoing pursuit of information. He notes that he is uncomfortable with an incomplete series in a collection. Dr. Biel stores his library of television and film history in two warehouse spaces, his garage, and three rooms in his house. "Actually four, if you count the bedroom as video storage," he added.

He hasn't always collected only records, as a child he also had a stamp and baseball card collection. He is quick to add that he still has many records from his childhood. He now has a children's record collection which fills more than three shelves in his home.

Dr. Biel explains his interest in records by saying that he enjoys having items of historical and cultural significance. Dr. Biel believes records contain a piece of history. They are "cultural artifacts," he says.

A member of MSU's faculty for eight years, Dr. Biel received his B.S. degree from Temple University and both the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Northwestern University. He currently is serving as president of the Association for Recorded Sound Collections and is a frequent columnist and speaker at conventions.

He and his wife, the former Sheila Kaplan of Teaneck, N.J., have a daughter, Leah Rebekah.

Housing Affordability Index Recorded At Eight-Year-High

The Housing Affordability Index rose 1.1 percentage points from September to October to 108.1—the highest level since May 1978, the National Association of Realtors reported today.

The October improvement followed an increase of 3.3 points in July, a decrease of 2.2 points in August and an increase of 5.3 points in September. The October 1986 index was 10.5 points higher than the October 1985 index of 97.6.

"With the October index at an eight-year high, and assurance that the new tax law preserves incentives for homeownership, ideal conditions exist for first-time buyers to realize their homebuying potential," said William M. Moore, president of the association.

Moore, a realtor from Denver, Colo., added that homeowners who were unable to trade up to a larger, more expensive home during the high-interest rate period earlier this decade also should be encouraged by today's affordability picture.

Moore was elected president of the association at the organization's 79th annual convention in New York last month. He succeeds Clark E. Wallace, of Moraga, Calif. Moore will serve as president for one year.

"Lower interest rates are the primary reason for improvements in the NAR Housing Affordability Index this year," Moore said. The average effective interest rate on loans closed for existing homes fell to 9.97 percent in October, the lowest level since November 1978 and the first time this decade that this interest rate, which is used to compute the index, has been below 10 percent.

Moore noted that when interest rates were below 8 percent in February 1972, the index reached its peak of 153.1. Nine years later, in September 1981, the index hit bottom at 63.9 as the interest rate climbed to 16 percent and higher.

The index has been above the 100 mark every month so far this year, except March and May when it slipped to 99.3 and 99.8, respectively.

The 108.1 index in October meant that a family earning the median income had 108.1 percent of the income needed to qualify for a mortgage covering 80 percent of the median-priced resale home that month.

Based on U.S. Census Bureau statistics, association analysts estimated median gross family income in October to be $28,956 per year. This was more than $2,000 above the $26,790 annual income needed to qualify for a loan on a median-priced resale home in October, which cost $79,700.

Based on lending requirements set by the Federal National Mortgage Association, principal and interest payments by a borrower making a 20 percent down payment should be no more than 25-28 percent of yearly gross family income. NAR economists calculate the Housing Affordability Index assuming that a borrower devotes 25 percent of family income to principal and interest payments.

In October, monthly principal and interest payments for a median-priced resale home would have come to $558, representing just 23.1 percent of a typical family's income.

A family earning the median income could have qualified for a mortgage on a home costing $86,200—$6,500 more than the median-priced home.

Under the October affordability conditions, a family earning $20,000 per year could have qualified for an 80 percent loan on a $59,500 home, while a family with a $30,000 income could have afford-

Costello To Coordinate State-Wide Math Test

Patrick Costello, an Eastern Kentucky University professor has been chosen as the American High School Mathematics Examinations (AHSME) coordinator for Kentucky in 1987.

Dr. Patrick Costello, assistant professor of mathematics, statistics and computer science at ECU, will supervise the 38th annual exam, which will be held on March 3.

High school students from across Kentucky will compete for local and national awards, he said.

The annual AHSME was first offered in 1950 and is currently sponsored by a variety of professional groups, including the Mathematical Association of American (MAA), the Society of Actuaries, and Mu Alpha Theta.

Costello said the exam, covering precalculus mathematics, is designed to spur interest in math and to develop mathematical talent through competition.

Last year 2,991 students in Kentucky took part in the exam.

Registration for the competition closes Dec. 22, he said.

For more information, contact Dr. Patrick Costello, Department of Mathematics, Statistics, and Computer Science, ECU, Richmond, Ky. 40475, or call (606) 622-1925.

MYTH: Waterbeds puncture easily leaving water everywhere.

FACT: Waterbed punctures are very rare and the water always stays in the mattress or the liners.

MYTH: Waterbeds can make you seasick.

FACT: The new waterbeds with baffles are very still, and the rest is so deep there is little body action to cause waves.

MYTH: Waterbeds are so heavy they'll damage my floor.

FACT: Waterbeds weigh less per square foot than your own two feet! They weigh much less than a refrigerator.

FACT: Sleeping on water will improve blood circulation and may help back and leg pains.

National PTA Reminds Parents To Encourage Children's Independence

When children tie their shoes for the first time or brush their teeth and make their bed alone, they are becoming independent. As children grow, parents need to know how to help them become self-reliant and make responsible choices drawn from their own inner resources.

Children will learn to act independently if parents allow them to act on their own, according to Saf Lerman, author and leader of parenting and leadership training groups. In the December 1986/January 1987 issue of PTA Today, the National PTA's magazine, Lerman notes, "If a parent always does for a child what the child can do for herself or himself, then the child is deprived of chances to grow." However, there are times when children need help with one part of a task and then can forge ahead.

The article suggests that parents give every child in the family a chance to act responsibly so each one can develop skills, competence and confidence. Children should take on responsibilities appropriate for their age and capabilities.

Young children can help out at home in a playful way, so they feel they're participating. "As children gain experience, they will begin to be of real help and will become more responsible," says Lerman.

Older children will recognize certain obligations as their own such as placing their clothes in the hamper or hanging up their coats. Lerman says parents should help older children find ways to remind themselves of jobs, responsibilities and appointments. It is also good to assign them jobs that affect the entire household.

"Children need to see that their parents notice and value their efforts to be cooperative and responsible," Lerman points out. When children show a sincere effort to do their best, parents should not expect perfection. The author advises parents to comment proudly on a job well done.

It is also important for parents to avoid pushing children. "A child who is capable of doing something may not always want to be quite so independent," says Lerman, adding, "In this case, a parent can lend a hand." Sometimes, children want Mom or Dad to help them as an expression of extra loving care.

Parents should also avoid giving children responsibilities they are not yet ready to handle. "When too much is expected of children, they resort to teaching themselves—often incorrectly, haphazardly or incompletely," warns Lerman.

While helping children to act independently is part of a parent's responsibility, they must also help them to think on their own. Lerman suggests parents encourage children to make choices, give them leeway, allow them to express themselves, and show belief in them.

The December/January issue, entitled "Helping Children Grow," contains articles on helping children cope with change, teaching kids to say "no" to peer pressure and Is Obedience Enough?

Copies of the December/January issue of PTA Today are available for $1 each by sending a check or money order made payable to the National PTA, 700 N. Rush St., Chicago, IL 60611.

Tax Tips For 1986 Individual Returns

These helpful procedures may speed the processing of your 1986 individual income tax returns.

- ★ Check to see if filing separately on a combined form will result in a tax savings.

- ★ Encourage clients to prepare for early filing.

- ★ Generally, K-2s (wage and tax statements) must be given to employees by January 31, 1987.

- ★ Do not alter wage and tax statements. If the K-2 is incorrect or not legible, the taxpayer's employer must issue a corrected copy. Do not file a return until a client has received all wage and tax statements. To avoid processing delays, do not use substitute wage and tax statements unless repeated efforts to secure a K-2 from the employer have failed. The cabinet will not accept returns with substitute wage and tax statements until after March 1.

- ★ Remind clients to keep copies of their state and federal returns.

- ★ Ask clients to provide the mailing label attached to their income tax packets. Use the label in the name and address block on the return if the information is correct.

- ★ Ask clients to provide envelopes included in the packets. If other envelopes or boxes are used for mailing, send returns with payments to ZIP Code 40620 and all other returns to ZIP Code 40618.

- ★ Complete all forms in legible handwriting.

- ★ On wage and tax statements, mailing labels, returns and schedules, check all names, addresses and Social Security numbers for accuracy.

- ★ If clients are given two completed returns (one to file, the other to keep), write "COPY" in large letters across the face of the return that the taxpayer is to keep. Some taxpayers send both copies to the cabinet. If a copy of a federal return is also attached, identify it as a copy.

- ★ Send completed returns to the cabinet on a regular basis. If returns are submitted in box lots, mail no less than weekly.

- ★ Answer question on Kentucky Schedule B as to whether an intangible property tax return was filed.

- ★ Verify the amount of federal income tax actually refunded to clients.

- ★ On the 740 and 740-S forms, indicate the client's telephone number where he or she can be reached between 8:00 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

- ★ Report all depreciation on Form 762, Kentucky Depreciation.

- ★ Use a Kentucky Schedule D to report capital gains and losses.

- ★ Use Kentucky Schedule E for reporting supplemental income from rents, royalties, partnerships, estates and trusts.

Foster Home Role Changing, But The Need Still Persists

1986 marked a turning point for Kentucky's programs dedicated to the care and protection of abused and neglected children. Child protection caseworkers emphasize preservation of the family and, whenever possible, avoid disruption of the natural home by removal of the child.

At the same time, the move towards "family-based services" is altering the way Kentucky uses its "volunteer parents"—better known as foster parents.

"The concept of family-based services carries a different role for our foster homes, but it doesn't eliminate the need for them," said Anna Grace Day, commissioner of the Department for Social Services, the state agency which recruits, trains and works with Kentucky's 1,600 foster families.

"Now we attempt to focus the use of a foster home as a short-term alternative to a problem situation in the natural home," Day said. "Foster homes should normally be an important but temporary step in a child's path either for return to the natural home, successful adoption or placement in a juvenile treatment program."

Since Kentucky began an aggressive recruitment campaign in June 1984, foster families in Kentucky have increased by more than 725.

However, during that same period, another 600 Kentucky foster homes have closed, for reasons including families leaving the state, voluntary withdrawals from the program and decisions by the state Department for Social Services that some homes should no longer be used as a temporary family for a troubled child.

"Over the last five years, we have averaged an annual increase of more than 100 children in Kentucky's foster child population," said Day. "There are presently more than 3,100 children in Kentucky with a very real need for the love, caring and stability that our foster families provide."

"Obviously, those number dictate that we must actively continue searching for new families who are willing to open their homes, and their hearts, to these children."

Foster children are often described as "troubled" children, but few of their "troubles" are self-created.

"Two out of every three of our foster children are in state custody because of maltreatment in the natural home," Day said. "In fact, fewer than one-tenth of our foster children have been placed with the state because they committed some offense."

"These are children who, for the most part through no fault of their own, have been denied the ability to grow and develop in a stable environment."

Kentucky's campaign to recruit new foster families has resulted in the dedication of special teams of social workers in each of the Department for Social Services' 14 districts stretching across the state.

"We have to have a full-time effort," said Day, "and that means speaking to civic organizations, school groups and any other audience where there is possible interest in helping children."

Other key ingredients in the future of Kentucky's foster care program are new training directed to the special challenges of foster care and special financial support for homes caring for siblings or a medically-fragile child. Techniques are employed to help foster parents with frustrations unique to caring for, loving and being an authority figure to someone else's child.

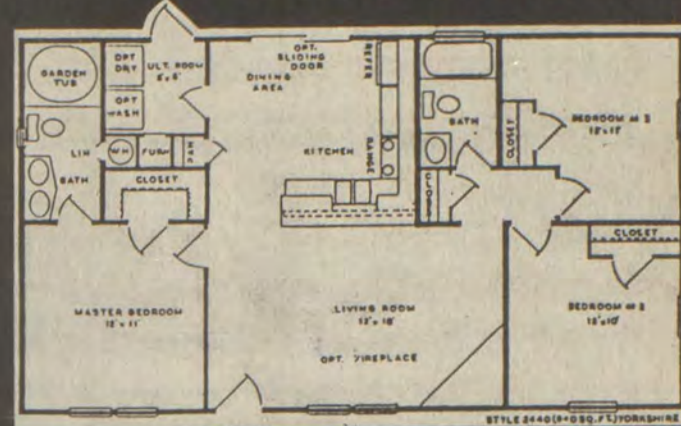

"Kentucky is very fortunate to have the several thousand foster parents who are working with and caring for our foster children today," Day said. "But we'll always be in a situation to the recruiting slogan for the Marines—we're looking for a few good homes."

Kentucky Law and Cold Checks

By Attorney General
DAVID L. ARMSTRONG

Cold checks are considered a theft by deception according to Kentucky law. Anyone who issues or passes a cold check in the amount of $100 or more is guilty of a Class D felony. This offense is punishable by imprisonment for not less than one year or more than five years. According to the law, if the check issued is for less than $100, it is a Class A misdemeanor carrying a sentence not to exceed 12 months in prison. In addition to possible imprisonment, a person may be required to make restitution to the person or business the check was given to or to pay applicable court costs.

A person is guilty of theft by deception when he or she gives a check or similar "sight draft" (such as an I.O.U. or endorsed note payable to someone) for the payment of money knowing that it will not be honored by the bank. The issuer of the check or order (other than a post-dated check or order) would not be paid if: (1) the giver of the check had no account with the bank at time the check was given, or (2) payment was refused by the bank for lack of funds, upon presentation within 30 days after being issued, and the giver failed to make good within 10 days after receiving notice of refusal by the bank.

The law also states that someone who gives a check in payment of all or part of any tax payable to the Commonwealth knowing that it will not be honored by the bank is guilty of theft by deception.

Knowingly writing a cold check in Kentucky is a serious matter not taken lightly by the law. For more information concerning cold checks, contact your local county attorney's office or local police department.

MSHA Rule To Update Explosive Standards

The Labor Department's Mine Safety and Health Administration (MSHA) has proposed new requirements for testing and approving explosives. The proposed rule appeared in the Federal Register on Nov. 12, 1986.

Only explosives approved by MSHA may be used in underground coal mines. To receive an approval the explosives must meet requirements specified in the regulations.

The proposed rule would address hazards that could result from the use of unsafe explosives and would incorporate technological advances such as new types of explosives.

The proposed rule includes approval requirements for "sheathed explosive units," which are explosives covered by flame-inhibiting material and encased in sealed coverings. Because of hazards associated with methane gas and coal dust, firing of unconfined explosives is not currently permitted in bituminous coal mines and carries restrictions in anthracite mines. The sheathed unit is designed for breaking boulders, dislodging slabs, and other applications where an unconfined shot could help in improving mining conditions.

At MSHA's request, the Bureau of Mines developed the prototype sheathed explosive unit that can be fired unconfined without igniting methane and coal dust.

Under the proposed rule, all explosives would be required to perform safely at a minimum temperature of 41 degrees Fahrenheit and could be tested at lower temperatures, if specified by the applicant.

The deadline for written comments is January 12, 1987. Interested persons or groups should send comments to Jeffrey Doranz, acting director, Office of Standards, Regulations, and Variances, Room 631, Ballston Tower No. 3, 4015 Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Va. 22203.

Consumers Should Be Familiar With Store's Refund and Exchange Policy

Now that the holiday season is here, many consumers are purchasing gifts for Christmas. It is a good idea to find out the exchange/refund policy of each store before you buy to prevent inconvenience or confusion later should you wish to return or exchange an item.

According to Attorney General David L. Armstrong, there is no Kentucky law on refund or exchange policies. "Stores generally set their own policies," Armstrong said. "That means a retailer can offer you a cash refund, credit, an exchange, or nothing at all for your merchandise."

Many stores post their policies in a conspicuous place or a salesperson will inform you of their refund or exchange policies. If not, it is your responsibility to ask.

Some stores that offer refunds or credit for merchandise may only offer the amount of the current selling price at the time of return, regardless of the amount originally paid. Items purchased at the regular price may go on sale before or after Christmas and the store will be willing to give credit for, or refund, only the sale price. Consumers are frequently unaware of such a policy until they attempt to make an exchange. Again, the best protection is to find out the store's policy BEFORE you buy.

To assist you in obtaining refunds or exchanges, be sure to keep all receipts. It is a good idea to mark them so you can recognize which receipts go with which items. Keep all receipts together in case an exchange becomes necessary. Examine merchandise carefully as soon as you get home from the store, if possible. Don't wait until December 25 to check if parts are intact and working properly, or that sizes and colors are correct.

If you have any questions or problems with a purchase you are considering or have already made, contact the Office of the Attorney General, Consumer Protection Division, 209 St. Clair St., Frankfort, Ky. 40601 or call the toll-free Consumer Hotline at 1-800-432-9257.

Bus Maintenance Is Seminar Topic

Preventive maintenance will be emphasized at a regional seminar on school bus maintenance at the Floyd County School Bus Garage at 5 p.m. on Dec. 11.

The maintenance clinic will be conducted by the Kentucky Department of Education's Division of Pupil Transportation. The clinic is one of a series being offered throughout the state.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald said the clinics are designed to help local school districts improve their maintenance programs and operate their school buses safely and efficiently.
