A WHEELWRIGHT CITY COUNCIL decision to wrest control of the city's utilities commission sparked a protest last week by some city residents. While Mayor Tom Engle supports the commission's independent status, a majority on the city council voted recently to limit the commission's powers. A municipal government specialist with the Big Sandy Area Development District surmised recently that the dispute might be more over personal differences than issues of policy.

Hamiltons File Suit Against Bank, Officers

The Bank Josephine and its president, H.D. Fitzpatrick, Jr., have been named as co-conspirators and "unnamed defendants" in an amendment to a suit filed in January by Teaberry coal operator Sterling Hamilton and his wife, Olga.

The amended complaint, filed Friday in U.S. District Court in Pikeville, alleges that, since 1976, the bank and three of its agents—Fitzpatrick, Earl McGuire, and Tom Stewart—have sold various properties belonging to the Hamiltons without properly crediting their account and have failed to give them a full reckoning of the transactions. Clerical work involved in making the reckoning would cost them around $5000, the bank is alleged to have told the Hamiltons.

The coal operator and the bank clashed in May, 1979, when Hamilton refused to sign over his property in a trust agreement with the bank. Two years later, when Hamilton filed for bankruptcy, the bank moved the court to set aside as irregular 13 property transfers the Hamiltons had made. The court order setting the transfers aside was invalid, the Hamiltons claim in their present suit, because they were not notified of a hearing on the motion.

Some Declare Shutdown Looms If Work Lags

Under vigorous questioning by members of Prestonsburg city council, developers of Prestonsburg Village and their engineers gave assurances this week that work would begin soon on repairing dangerous highwalls at the newly-opened shopping center.

Some city officials apparently remained skeptical, however, and threatened to shut the development down unless remedial action is taken promptly.

In an appearance before a meeting of the council Monday night, Commonwealth Development Corporation's site engineer Kerry McGann announced plans to clear fallen rocks from a bench on the 140-foot highwall behind the Winn-Dixie and Wal-Mart stores. Loose rocks might be dislodged using a high-pressure hose and cables, and the cliff face would be monitored for any unusual movement, he said.

A crane should be available by the end of this month to assist in the cleanup operation, McGann said.

However, the engineers remained uncommitted to cutting another bench into the highwall, as the original design specified, or removing power lines from behind the supermarket and department store, as the city's engineering consultant has advised. Nor would they give any guarantees about the long-term stability of the highwall or about the possibility of safely evacuating stores in the event of a major wall failure.

Asked by council member William O. Goebel about the possibility of an avalanche, Scott Martin, an engineer with Beulah Engineering, of Lexington, said that, in his opinion, an avalanche was "possible in the long term but not in the short," meaning within five years.

Claiming that falling rocks have already struck power lines and transformers, Fire Chief Tom Blackburn predicted that a fall could bring down live power lines. "You take a good rainy season, those trees come down, you're going to have the Fourth of July early," he said.

The engineers replied that the stores are designed to receive power from the rear and that there is no other place to which the lines and transformers could feasibly be relocated.

West P'burg Denied $750,000 Block Grant

A $750,000 Community Development Block Grant for West Prestonsburg flood control has apparently been denied by the state Department for Local Government.

Though city officials had said since deciding to apply for the grant last December that the project was a long shot, they had maintained it was needed here and fell within the CDBG guidelines.

Big Sandy ADD Housing Development Coordinator Bob Meyer said Monday that his office received a call last week from a representative of the Department for Local Government, informing them that no on-site inspection would be made at West Prestonsburg. Big Sandy ADD was helping the city in its attempt to get the grant.

Meyer said that such notification almost certainly meant the application had been rejected, but cautioned that no official word had yet reached the city.

City Administrator David Evans said he was sure the state's reaction meant the grant would not be given, but said the city would not stop its efforts to help West Prestonsburg remedy its problems with flooding. Though it will only reduce flooding there by about 50 percent, Evans said the city will probably go ahead and build an earthen floodwall, a project which could be completed fairly cheaply.

Evans also said the city would begin working on another grant application as soon as official word comes that the application has been rejected.

Meyer said a number of factors might have gone into the state's apparent decision to reject the application. Among these are the amount of need perceived in relation to other applications, the general lowering of state funds available for such projects, and the amount of Prestonsburg's proposed funding match. The city had agreed to put up $152,000, 20 percent of the requested amount.

Evans agreed with Meyer's assessment. He said other funding areas which the city might look toward—the Appalachian Regional Commission, Economic Development Administration and, possibly, Housing and Urban Development—would be studied with an eye toward applying for funds. However, even in the face of the seeming CDBG rejection, the city administrator said that program offers the city its best hope.

Meyer said people in the Big Sandy ADD office had from the beginning felt the block grant application was weak, but he applauded the strong show of support from West Prestonsburg for the project.

"I thought it was real encouraging at the public hearing. It's almost unheard of to get 40 to 50 people who show up for one of those things. It makes it all the more difficult when it doesn't come through."

Lackey Couple Seeks To Halt Apollo Tipple

When the Apollo Coal Company constructed a tipple at Lackey eight years ago, they slipped into town so quietly the mandatory notice announcing their application for an operating permit was published in a Harlan county newspaper. Now that the operators are seeking a permit renewal from the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet, a Lackey couple is determined their plans will not go unnoticed.

Russell and Teresa Wallace were not among the residents who complained to Floyd fiscal court in 1978 that they knew nothing about the tipple construction until after the fact. On the contrary, the coal-loading plant was built on a tract leased from Wallace's mother and Wallace was one of the first to be employed there.

But Wallace, who resigned in 1983 after two and a half years at the plant, says he didn't know at the time what he was letting himself in for; and he feels sure that his mother, who died in 1983, was equally unaware of what it would be like to have a coal-loading facility as a neighbor.

What it is like the Wallaces illustrate by pointing to the gritty black dust that blankets their house inside and out. A shoebox filled with photographs they have taken in recent years show a cloud of dust billowing from the loading operation and diesel fumes spewing

DISPLAYING coal dust wiped from his front porch last week, Russell Wallace told of his ongoing dispute with the Apollo Coal Company, which operates a coal tipple opposite his home and which, he claims, does little to control the emission of dust and fumes from the plant.

Blue Grass Blast

Bill Monroe and the Bluegrass Boys, Ralph Stanley and the Clinch Mountain Boys, and local groups such as the Gum Branch Heartbreakers, will present a Bluegrass Blast at Allen Central High School gymnasium, Friday, March 21.

The high school is sponsoring the event to upgrade the school, particularly tiling of the gym foyer.

The Old Order Passeth In the Name of Progress

Yet another city landmark is going the way of the Garfield Place, the old Johns House and, gone for several years now, the Harkins mansion.

The old Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church building on Front Street is going to be torn down soon to make way for a new building, more useful to the church. The old building has been used primarily for Sunday school and day care facilities since a new sanctuary was built several years ago. It will be replaced by a structure designed to better house these activities.

Pastor Stephen Hopkins said he was saddened by the decision to tear down the old building, but said it came down to matters of dollars and cents.

"Two years ago we voted to renovate (the old church)," he said. "When we got the estimate on renovation, it was going to cost $80,000. We only had $40,000 budgeted. It just boiled down to making more sense to rebuild."

Once the decision was made to replace the old building, church members set upon the task of raising the necessary funds. Calling the fund-drive the "Together We Build Program," the church raised $108,000 in less than a year, exceeding their stated goal of having $100,000 before beginning construction. The entire project is expected to cost about $350,000.

Some major help is coming from the city. David Evans, city administrator, said Rev. Hopkins approached him last Monday, asking about a city policy of tearing down buildings, free of charge, and using the materials for city building needs. Evans checked and found the city could help, with the remnants of the old church to be used in building a new city-garage near the animal shelter at West Prestonsburg.

While Evans agreed the church was doing the right thing by rebuilding, he admittedly was touched by nostalgia at the thought of losing the old church.

"I'm for what the church is doing," said Evans. "They have to keep progressing. But, it's a landmark in Prestonsburg. It's where I grew up, where I was baptized. I've got a lot of good memories there." Evans' parents were the second couple to be married in the church.

The new building, which could be completed as early as the end of this year, will sit back a little farther from Front Street than the present structure, and will have a second story in back, connecting with the sanctuary.

Hopkins said the new building will be "basically providing Sunday school space, with about 900 square feet of floor space. This should provide room for 250-350 Sunday school students."

"That's what our need is now," he added. "We have sanctuary space for that many."

While construction is under way, Sunday school will be held in what Hopkins termed "an ideal location," across the street from the church in rooms above C & R Office Supply. The space was provided by attorney Phillip Damron.

To make sure the old church gets a proper send-off, a special farewell service will be held there tonight. A pot-luck supper at 6 p.m. will begin the evening, followed by a "sharing time," where church members will have a chance to share memories of the old church.

The Annexation Question:

Statement Issued March 10 By P'burg Mayor Ann Latta

The people opposing the city's move to annex the territory north of the present city limits to the Auxier bridge area, I believe, misinformed or misled. Not only will annexation provide many city services to the people of the area, it will result in a savings to most residents.

The city will not only receive revenue from the area. We are going to spend nearly a quarter of a million dollars initially to put these services into operation. This does not include funds that have been expended over the years for services which are already in place, including water and sewage lines and fire hydrants.

The following breakdown will illustrate services and costs to the Auxier Road area residents:

FIRE PROTECTION: We will build a fire sub-station in the area, purchase new equipment and hire four additional firemen. This will be done within the first year of operation, provided the property can be acquired.

Prestonsburg has a Class 4 fire rating for insurance purposes. The Auxier Road area now has a Class 10 rating. Insurance rates vary from company to company, but as an example, average fire insurance premiums on a $60,000 brick home would be $415 per year under a Class 10 rating, and only $174 under a Class 4 rating. The reason our rating is so low—probably the lowest in eastern Kentucky—is because we have a fully-equipped, fully-trained, professional fire department which meets all state standards.

Many homes and businesses in this area are presently subscribing to the Prestonsburg Fire Department for fire protection, at $24 per year for private homes. This expense will be eliminated after annexation. While I do not foresee eliminating that service or raising subscriber fees at this point, it is very questionable as to how long the city fire department can continue to serve areas outside the city, due to rising costs, liability and workman's compensation insurance.

POLICE: The State Police, primarily concerned with traffic control, provide no coverage of this area after midnight. We will hire two additional policemen, purchase one new vehicle, and provide 24-hour protection. The city police will concentrate on security for homes and businesses, as well as on traffic control. After annexation, we will divide Prestonsburg into sectors, so that every area of the city has maximum coverage.

Benefit Report Corrected

As a result of incorrect information, the proceeds of a benefit dinner at Garrett for Matthew Combs, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Adron Combs, were incorrectly reported by a columnist and repeated in a photo caption in last week's edition of The Times. The benefit raised $2505.35, all of which was deposited in a fund to assist the family of the child, who is suffering from liver cancer. The Times regrets the error.

THOUGH FICKLE MARCH may not be constant, the crocus again keeps its promise of Spring.

Special Meet Called To Name Next Supt.

The naming of Floyd county's next superintendent of schools by the Board of Education will be made at a special called meeting scheduled at 6:30 p.m. tomorrow (Thurs.) Pete Grigsby, and members of the board are this week yet interviewing applicants recommended for the position.

The special called meeting is being held on request of Dr. James D. Adams, chairman of the board.

A Legislative Perspective

House Majority Floor Leader
Gregory D. Stumbo,
95th Legislative District

Legislation measures dealing with campaigns and elections, children and brain death all were addressed by members of the 1986 House of Representatives this week.

A bill to increase the fines and jail terms for using a minor in a sexual performance and for promoting a sexual performance by a minor won easy approval from House members. House Bill 726 would increase such crimes to Class C felonies from Class D if the minor is under age 18; to Class B felonies from Class C if the minor is under 16; and to Class A felonies from B if the minor is injured.

Consistent to the child protection atmosphere that prevails in the House this session, we also approved legislation that would stop the Cabinet for Human Resources from issuing a license for a day-care center to any person convicted of a sex-related crime. Under this legislation, CHR would be required to check the criminal record of applicants for day-care center licenses and require operators of such centers to check the records of applicants for employment.

Committee agendas have been stretched to the limit of their time allowances this week considering legislation posted and ready for final decisions. Members of the House Education Committee got their first sampling of procedural maneuvering when a filibustering attempt was utilized to block passage of a bill that would prohibit public schools from beginning their school year until after Labor Day. Although the filibuster went on for close to an hour, the measure did obtain the needed votes to be sent on to the floor of the House.

Several campaign and election measures were approved by legislators in committee this week. A bill that would prohibit elected statewide officials from actively soliciting contributions to retire their campaign debts while in office cleared the House Committee on State Government. The measure went even farther to prohibit them from taking contributions from people holding state contracts.

House Bill 172 also was approved by the state government panel and would impose new restrictions on electioneering at the polls. In its final version, the bill would prohibit electioneering within 300 feet of the door to a building that has a voting machine inside. Fiscal courts could extend the ban up to 1,000 feet of the door if they so choose.

And, this week the Senate approved our House bill that would raise the limit on individual campaign contributions from $3,000 to $4,000. It would also allow contributions of up to $300, rather than the current $100, to go unreported. The legislation must return to the House for our approval on a Senate Resolution allowing unopposed candidates to file reports annually instead of twice a year.

Dodging opponents' assault a legislative measure providing a definition of brain death succeeded in securing the necessary votes to pass through the House Committee on Judiciary-Civil. The concept of the bill is not foreign to legislators as it has been considered in past sessions but persistence proved to have the necessary formula for success for House Bill 226. Supporters of the bill would not allow doctors to declare a person dead unless there is no heartbeat or, in cases involving use of respirators, there is an "irreversible cessation of all brain function, including the brain stem.

From Dull to Terrific at Haircuts by Holly

When Tyra came to my shop she said, "I want my hair to look thick and sexy. But it just sort of lays there. What can you do with it, Holly?"

The color was as flat as the shape

Tyra didn't want her hair shorter so we had to coax more body into the length she already had. One problem with her hair was that the color was as flat as the shape. Summer highlights were long gone, leaving it drab and mousey.

I suggested highlighting to liven up Tyra's hair and brighten her total look. Coloring roughens the cuticle, thickening each hair strand, puffing it up fatter. And, like a perm, coloring can make limp, lifeless hair stiffer, adding body-building texture.

Like a summer at the beach

Besides literally making hair plumper, professional coloring can give the illusion of more volume. A subtle blend of colors has more depth than one uniform shade. A soft, natural effect depends on achieving the right balance without harsh contrasts.

The best way to get the look we wanted was by color weaving, a process that resulted in gently graduated shades lightening and brightening Tyra's hair like a summer at the beach.

Finishing Touches

After highlighting, I barely trimmed Tyra's hair with techniques that lift hair for extra height and fullness. I layered it lightly, then used chipping (snipping three or four hairs at a time) in the crown where it tends to fall flat. Chipping causes hair to stand up, lifting the hair around it. Then I notched (snipped tiny V's) her bangs and ends so it would look fuller all over. To set it, I used a little gel at the roots, blew it dry, and used a curling iron for a finishing touch.

The result? Judge for yourself. Tyra is very pleased with her new look.

What are you waiting for?

Is your hair dull, outdated or anything less than terrific? At Haircuts by Holly we want you to like the way you look. We take time to help you find the look that's just right for you—your features, your coloring, even your lifestyle.

So call today for an appointment. Or just come by. We promise to make the most of your good looks.

PCC Real Estate Course Grows

In 1972 Prestonsburg Community College started the first real estate classes in this area in response to local requests. The first classes were taught by Floyd Davis and Robert Smith, realtors from Ashland. In 1975, Wayne Ratliff, former Floyd county school superintendent, became the first local PCC instructor in real estate. During the next ten years the program grew in scope and size. Every semester three to five classes of the eleven possible real estate classes are offered at PCC with an average enrollment of 150 students. At present there are 50 students majoring in business management with a real estate option. Dr. C. John Wolfe, Jr., executive director of the Kentucky Real Estate Center in the College of Business and Economics at U.K., stresses that he is "impressed with the enthusiasm and high level of professionalism" in the PCC program.

According to Susan Stauer, executive director of the Kentucky Real Estate Commission, which funds college grants to improve real estate instruction, there are 44 principal real estate brokers in the Big Sandy region and 195 licensed salesmen. The commission and the center sponsor four continuing education seminars each year, usually held at PCC, on topics ranging from finance to salesmanship to tax concerns. The next seminar will be in May. These seminars feature nationally known real estate leaders, and the videotapes of these seminars are made available for students.

Bill Gibson, past president of the Big Sandy Board of Realtors formed in 1980, said membership in the Board of Realtors has increased from the original 25 members to the current membership of 93. He feels that the strength of the local real estate business can be directly linked to the availability of business training at PCC. For more information contact Ron Carter at 886-3863.

from three front-end loaders. Normal conversation is impossible outdoors because of noise generated when the plant is operating, they say.

"They wouldn't want to live here," Teresa Wallace said emphatically of Apollo president George Adams and vice-president Herbert Stapleton, Jr. "They wouldn't want one of their kids living like this." The Wallaces' three-year-old son Tommy cannot play outside without getting covered in the dust raised by the loading facility and she worries about the effect of it on his health, his mother said.

"We went into this to make some money," her husband concedes. "But we thought they'd be courteous. We thought they'd consider our presence. We thought they'd deal honestly. We were wrong."

While the couple intends to seek a hearing before the Natural Resources Cabinet once Apollo completes the application for a renewal of its permit, they have already taken action to halt the tippie operation in Floyd Circuit Court. In a suit filed last year and still pending, they claim the facility is not being operated within the terms of the lease signed by Wallace's mother, Emma Jean Hayes Wallace, in 1978 and that, in any event, she was too ill at the time to understand fully what she was agreeing to. The coal company denies the charge.

Because the issue is in court, Apollo Vice-President Stapleton this week declined comment on the dispute. "We have complied with all the laws we know of," he said.

The company's permit application includes a waiver signed by Russell Wallace in 1978, which is required of any homeowner living within 300 feet of a mining operation—the Wallaces live 251 feet from the tippie site—and the 1978 lease executed by Wallace's mother. The January, 1986 permit application asserts that the lease is "not subject to pending litigation."

The company says it will water conveyor belts, stockpiles and travel areas "at a frequency sufficient to minimize any detrimental effects of fugitive dust" but has no plans to monitor air quality at the site.

Apollo is not the only coal company with which the Wallaces are currently in contention. They are themselves the defendants in an action filed in 1984 by the Elk Horn Coal Company, which claims a right to use their driveway to gain access to coal reserves on property adjoining their 150-acre tract on Mill Branch.

While the Wallaces claim to have the oldest recorded title to the disputed land, Elk Horn stakes its claim on a survey showing that the driveway in fact belongs to the coal company and a quit claim deed purportedly signed early this century by R.B. Hayes, Wallace's maternal grandfather.

To the homeowners, the prospect of a coal haul road within 20 feet of their house is no less objectionable than the existing tippie operation. "It would be ludicrous," Wallace said. "We'd have to leave."

For a family that has been on the property "ever since we drove the Indians off," the prospect of being forced off themselves is unacceptable. "We're not being difficult for the sake of being difficult. We're literally fighting for our existence here," Wallace insists. "They can't just root somebody out of their place."

In initially filing the present suit in their own behalf last month, the Hamiltons claimed that an earlier suit had been dismissed without their knowledge as the result of a conspiracy between their lawyer, Robert E. Owens, Floyd Master Commissioner Marshall Davidson, Prestonsburg attorney William G. Francis, and Lexington attorney James Huggins, Jr., representing the Bank Josephine.

In the earlier suit, the Hamiltons alleged that an advertisement for the court-ordered sale of their properties inflated the value of the properties, scaring off potential bidders and insuring that the properties would revert to the bank, which held mortgages on them.

In filing the amended complaint last week, plaintiffs were represented by Dr. G. Ray Motsinger, an attorney in Winston-Salem, N.C.

(Suits filed in court outline only the plaintiffs' version of the issues in dispute).

Development of a third major subdivision here was under way this week on May Branch where grading and landscaping of 12 large home sites was begun by Ed Music and Dr. George P. The Highlands Medical Center began preparations Tuesday to close in the face of a threatened strike of union employees. Although Floyd county's crime rate increased two percentage points more than the 18 percent state average for the first nine months of 1975 over the same period in the preceding year, the county showed a drop in the number of murders and in three other crime categories. Teams of firefighters in Floyd and surrounding counties received a significant "break" Friday morning in the form of rain which helped subdue the fires which have burned an estimated 40,000 acres, mostly in Eastern Kentucky, during the past two weeks. Three liquor arrests highlighted the week's activities of law enforcement officers in the county. The 82nd birth anniversary of twin sisters, Mrs. Eliza Taylor Blackburn and Mrs. Elizabeth Taylor Spears, was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glen H. Blackburn, Feb. 29 (though their birthday was February 26). A partial power failure affected parts of Prestonsburg southward to Lancer Tuesday, from about 10:15 p.m. till shortly before midnight. The Betsy Layne Bobcats won the 58th district basketball championship at the Allen Central High School gym Saturday night by defeating the McDowell Daredevils, 76-67. Construction of a theatre building designed to be the largest in the Big Sandy valley was started this week by H. L. (Taggett) Allen, to occupy a part of the lot between the Baptist Church and the home of the late Hiram Harris, on Court street here. Thieves broke into the office of Miss Ella Noel White here and stole most of the Red Cross supplies that had been accumulated there for distribution among the poor. The sub-station of the Inland Steel Company at Wheelwright was destroyed by fire Thursday morning, resulting in an estimated loss of $15,000. There died: Daniel Jones, 73, at his home on Middle Creek, last week; R. L. Ousley, of Maytown, at the Beaver Valley Hospital, Martin, last week; A. E. Whitt, 59, at his home at Garrett, Thursday; Bob Ousley, of West Prestonsburg, Monday at the Paintsville General Hospital.

THE OLD IRENE COLE MEMORIAL BAPTIST CHURCH will be just a memory soon. Demolition is scheduled to begin next week, thus making room for a new, more efficient building to be used by the church.

Pressed by council member Bobby Ranier to explain how construction of stores could have been approved before the highwalls were stabilized, the current engineers denied responsibility, explaining that they were hired after the initial decisions were made.

Ranier was not appeased. "Everybody connected with the place knew there was a great possibility (of a highwall failure) and yet they put half the population of this county and the surrounding area in jeopardy," he charged.

For Mayor Ann Latta, a major concern was the developer's ability to fund the necessary reclamation. Engineer McGann insisted that funds would be forthcoming from one of the development firm's New York partners. He conceded, however, that the prospective contractors for the remedial work—Scaff Engineering and Weddington Trucking Corporation—are refusing to sign a contract until they get a guarantee of payment.

(In a Feb. 19 letter, Joe Weddington, Jr. noted that his firm had submitted a joint bid with Scaff Engineering for removal of debris from the highwall and bench, although not for sealing fractures in the wall. "No work will be initiated on this project until they bring their accounts with us to current status," Weddington added.)

While Mayor Latta said she was prepared to accept that the developers were "operating in good faith," other city officials were unconvinced. Code enforcement officer Paul Chaffins, who before Monday's meeting accused the developers of "just putting on a show," said after the meeting that "they just beat around the bush; they didn't give us any more answers."

"The way I see it, they're just going to decorate the highwall. That's not the answer," Chaffins said. More radical suggestions have included sealing and reshaping the highwall.

"I really feel they presented themselves rather poorly," City Manager David Evans said of the engineers. "They came across as non-committed. They seemed kind of confused."

Councilman Ranier was more blunt. "If they don't comply we'll shut them down," he warned. "We've got a pending disaster on our hands."

HONORED ON ANNIVERSARY

Paul and Linda Smith, choir director and pianist at the Community United Methodist Church, respectively, were honored with a surprise anniversary reception in Fellowship Hall there following Sunday night's services. Their many friends expressed to them love and best wishes on their 19th wedding anniversary. On behalf of the church, John Paul Leslie presented them with a large silver tray and silver casserole.

The kitchen committee, Mesdames Sherry Tucker, Cheryl Sexton, and Sue Dillon, served orchid-decorated cake, orchid mints, and other refreshments, and Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Simpson presented them with a bouquet of fresh orchid roses and baby's breath, which was later used to decorate the refreshment table.

HRMC ARRIVALS

February 25—a son, Thomas Dean Yates, to Donna and William Yates, of Prestonsburg, February 28—a daughter, Elizabeth Renae Puckett, to Donna and Cray Puckett, of Salsersville; a son, Stanley Ryne Poe, to Donna Poe, of Licksburg, March 1—a son, Michael Thomas Walters, to Amanda and Stephen Walters, of Offutt; a daughter, Santana Lee Allen, to Sandra and Wayne Allen, of Hendricks; a daughter, Dana Marie Skaggs, to Diane and Timothy Skaggs, of Lowmansville.

City Council Meet Views Varied Issues

Though the wrangle with Commonwealth Development took center stage at Monday's Prestonsburg city council meeting, other issues were addressed as well.

To open the meeting, Kermit Berry, director of the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center in the Goble Roberts addition, introduced himself to the present council. Berry, who brought several senior staff members to the meeting, told the city officials the Job Corps stood ready to help the city in any way that it could.

In addition to acquainting council with some of the local center's achievements, such as having the 15th best completion rate and the 25th best placement rate among Job Corps centers across the United States, Berry commended fire and police chiefs Tom Blackburn and Stan Fletcher, calling them "outstanding."

Councilman William O. Goebel, III, asked Berry the status of a proposal made several years ago to make the Job Corps here co-educational.

Berry said he had "kind of shelved going co-educational," because of the number of federal budget cuts recently which rule out programs requiring additional funding. He added, however, that he hoped the center would accept females at some point in the future.

"I still believe co-education is the only way to fly," he said. "This is the fifth Job Corps Center I've run, and the first not to be co-educational." Berry said the co-ed centers presented fewer discipline problems than all-male centers.

In other action, Mayor Ann Latta recommended the adoption of three separate city boards: a building codes appeals board, for those taking issue with complaints made against them by the city building inspector; a community advisory board, to deal with such matters as downtown beautification and attracting industry, and a revenue sharing task force, to help deal with problems caused by the end of the Federal Revenue Sharing program.

In recommending the task force, Latta mentioned the city's proposed Auxier Road annexation. She said that if opponents succeed in making the question go to the November ballot, it could delay needed revenue. In an attempt to give the Auxier Road residents a clear idea of what the annexation means, both to them and the city, Latta issued a statement, printed in its entirety in this issue of the Times, detailing the benefits she says people in that section will receive.

Council opened bids from the Blue Cross, Mutual of Omaha and Golden Rule insurance companies for writing health insurance for city employees. City Administrator Dave Evans was instructed by the mayor to study all of the bids and recommend one at council's next meeting.

Gov., Reagan Talk Of Coal, Farm Rules

Federal regulations affecting coal and farming in Kentucky were the two primary topics of discussion when Governor Martha Layne Collins met with President Ronald Reagan, last Wednesday in Washington.

During the meeting in the Oval Office of the White House, Governor Collins told the President that there was a need to "keep the lines of communication open between Kentucky and Washington" in regard to federal requirements being placed on the state's surface mining inspection effort.

The state signed an agreement one year ago with the federal Office of Surface Mining (OSM) requiring the state to hire 408 surface mine regulators. That goal was met, and Governor Collins said she is not trying to back down from that agreement.

"However, I expressed my concern for needed flexibility in the requirements imposed on us by OSM in several areas," said Governor Collins. "Those requirements should be based on real needs, and Kentucky should have a larger voice in the process which develops agreements we have to sign."

The Governor said President Reagan was responsive to her concerns and that she is encouraged that the state and federal government will soon be working together to resolve any differences.

A meeting was quickly scheduled between Governor Collins and top Interior Department officials for Tuesday, February 25, in Washington, D.C.

In addition to coal industry regulation, Governor Collins brought up the need for expanding markets for coal and Kentucky agricultural products.

"I'm trying to get a national energy policy based on coal. I also tried to make President Reagan aware of the plight of Kentucky farmers," said Governor Collins. "We have a growing number of tobacco farmers who are now planting alternate cash crops due to cuts in the federal tobacco price support system. If the federal government expects our farmers to survive this devastating blow to our state's number one cash crop, there should be an equal amount of positive support for developing new markets for other crops."

Here are four good reasons why Hylton Homes is the best place to buy your mobile home.

Meet Reason #1

Meet Morris Hylton Jr. The Top Dog. The buck stops here.

He's been selling mobile homes to families here in eastern Kentucky and the surrounding area for seventeen years. That's a long, time.

For the first eight years Morris Hylton worked for other companies. He learned a lot. Enough to know when he established his own company that, to be successful, you can't just sell a mobile home, count your money and forget it. You have to provide your customer with the caliber of quality and service that will keep him as happy with his home years later as the day he bought it.

This business isn't like the grocery business where, if a customer gets a tough turkey, she can buy her next turkey someplace else and never be missed. Here, survival depends on "once a customer, always a customer." (By the way, we don't sell turkeys.)

When Morris Hylton established Hylton Homes nine years ago, he made a commitment to give families real value in the home they buy. That means a well built home at a good price with reliable service you can count on. And then he put together an organization of capable, get-the-job-done professionals with this commitment as the foundation for day-to-day dealings

This isn't just being Mr. Nice Guy (though he is a nice guy.) This is plain good business. Because when a customer is genuinely happy with his home (when he knows he got a good deal in a well constructed home with dependable service), then he'll be quick to recommend Hylton Homes to his sister, his neighbor and his friends at work.

Morris Hylton is very proud of the fact that many newlyweds who bought their "starter" home from him during his first years in business are now trading those in for new ones with more room for their growing families. And customers who bought permanent homes keep sending their relatives and friends.

I guess that's why in just nine years Hylton Homes has grown from a brand new babe to a full-line, full-service leader in this region's manufactured housing industry. But, more importantly, that's probably why hundreds of customers scattered throughout these mountains will tell you that Hylton Homes is the best place to buy your mobile home.

If a new home is in your future, come browse through our fine selection of mobile homes, sectionals and permanent-foundation modular homes. Come meet our get-the-job-done professionals who want to keep you satisfied. We want your business. And we look forward to meeting your sister, your neighbor and your friends at work.

Marching Band Here Has Ardent Promoter

PRESTONSBURG HIGH band members surrounded Band Director Susan Newsome, at piano, during a rehearsal this week. Band should be, like school itself, "hard work but fun," said Mrs. Newsome, who is in her first year as band director here.

Susan Compton Newsome is a promoter. An enthusiast. A tireless pusher of her cause.

Her cause is the Prestonsburg High School marching band.

Band director there only since the beginning of the current school year, she will not be happy until the Marching Blackcats are double their present number, decked out in snappy new uniforms, accomplished performers, and covered in glory.

"We already have an outstanding football team and honor choir, but the band has never achieved its potential," she said in an interview Monday. "As far as the band program is concerned, I want to put Prestonsburg on the map." She said it with the assurance of someone accustomed to achieving her goals.

Her resume, about which she feels no need to feign modesty, conveys the same impression. A presidential scholar at Pikeville College, she graduated summa cum laude with a bachelor of music education degree in 1977. That was followed by a master of music degree at Eastern Kentucky University; again, summa cum laude. She was named outstanding graduate student in music education at ECU, from which she emerged with a Rank I in music and elementary education. She subsequently earned an education specialist degree from Morehead State University in administration and supervision.

Certifications? Mrs. Newsome holds them for elementary principal, secondary principal, supervisor, elementary education teacher, music from kindergarten through college. She is working toward certification for superintendent.

Instruments? She plays "all of them" but claims fluency only in piano and woodwinds. For the third year in a row, she is regional manager of keyboard competition for the piano festival conducted annually by the Kentucky Music Teachers' Association.

Teaching music, Mrs. Compton said this week, is her "first love and desire." The younger the students, the better. "To build a successful (high school band) program, you have to start in the grade school. I love little kids. I've already seen them start to build their enthusiasm," she said.

Parents have noticed it, too. Those with youngsters at Prestonsburg, Clark and Auxier grade schools, at each of which Mrs. Newsome puts in at least a half-day a week, report a newfound love of music in their children.

That's as it should be, their teacher insists: if she had her way, music would be a vital part of the program in every county school. "You need to teach the basics. That's the cake," she explains. "But the band is the icing on the cake."

In Garrard county—she was the first woman band director at Garrard County High School—Mrs. Newsome was named "Teacher of the Year" in 1983. She is Prestonsburg's first woman band director, too. She has other firsts in her sights.

But if there is a professional teacher

Rescue Squad Members on Call

A willingness to help others has brought the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad a "generous" donation from a Catlettsburg businessman. The local group was asked by Carroll "Willie" Wilson, an official with Merdie Boggs and Sons, of Catlettsburg, to help drag the Ohio River for the body of Clifford Elwood Groves, 23, also of Catlettsburg, a Boggs and Sons employee who fell from a company river-barge Feb. 22 and apparently drowned.

According to rescue squad member Onda L. Hunt, the squad was called in after other search efforts had failed and it was determined an experienced team might have the best chance of finding Groves' body. Before the Floyd group was called in, members of the Lawrence county, Ohio, sheriff's department, the Chesapeake, Ohio, fire department, and the Ashland police department participated in the search. An Ashland police officer was injured while searching in the then-swollen and swiftly-moving river.

Hunt said that by Sunday, when the Floyd group was there, conditions on the river had improved a great deal. "When Groves fell in, the river was eight feet higher and six to ten miles per hour faster. There were rather adverse conditions then. It was a lot calmer Sunday."

Hunt speculated rapid currents the day of the accident may have carried Groves' body quite a distance, making recovery efforts difficult at best. The rescue squad was only able to recover a green cap and a work glove near where the victim fell into the water. It couldn't be confirmed the items belonged to Groves.

"If they find anything definite or something to go on, they'll call us back and we'll come back," said Hunt. "But Bud (Capt. Bud Alexander, rescue squad leader) told them it'd be like looking for a needle in a haystack, because it had been two weeks since he fell in, and because of the adverse conditions."

Hunt said Wilson was surprised to learn the rescue squad didn't charge for their services. To thank them for coming, he presented the squad with a donation of an undisclosed amount, which Hunt would only term "generous."

Hunt declined to name the amount because he felt other potential donors might think the rescue squad wouldn't need their donations as well. Not true, he said. The rescue squad is supported entirely by private donations and is constantly in need of funds to repair old equipment and buy new. This donation will go toward purchasing two new boats. The boats they now use are so old, said Hunt, their metal hulls are starting to wear thin.

Teen Health Seen Deteriorating

Their blood-pressure levels are elevated, their cholesterol measurement is high, they perform poorly on physical-fitness tests. And we're talking about teen-agers?
 Yes, asserts the March Reader's Digest. Since the early 1960s the general health of adolescents has declined. Dr. Joseph Zanga, chairman of the American Academy of Pediatrics' Committee on School Health, says, "Kids today are flabby. They don't have the proper cardiovascular tone. If you put them on a treadmill, they run less than we would expect. They are not physically fit."

to their children. Without adult help and guidance it is hard for a youngster to know how to cope with the constant pressures pushing them toward alcohol, drugs, sex.
 The remedy appears plain—parents need to be more involved with their own children and put pressure on school boards to reinstate health and physical-education programs to help ensure the health of America's teen-agers. Health practices acquired during adolescence persist throughout life.

Experts blame those findings on a combination of bad habits—insufficient exercise, poor nutrition and inadequate sleep.

School budget and staff reductions have curtailed gym programs, despite the recommendation of the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports that youngsters have 30 minutes or vigorous physical activity daily as a minimum.

Health classes have also declined in number and quality. Teen-agers may be unaware of the importance of a healthy, well-balanced meal or the dangers in overloading on fast food. The puberty growth spurt requires an increase in quality food, and youngsters are often not getting it. Even at home, statistics show that increasing numbers of families don't sit down together for a meal. The children become more snack-oriented.

Improper sleep habits are also taking their toll. Most teens of 17 and 18 need as much sleep as 12-year-olds, but they don't get it. Bouts of sleepiness and inattention during the school day are the result.

Adolescence is a stressful period and parents are not dedicating quality time

IN LOVING MEMORY OF JAMES MONROE HUNT, HUNTER A Special Father

If all could have known him,
I want you to know
His heart was big as the mountains,
And I love him so.
His help as a father
In words can't be told,
He was so full of giving,
He was precious as gold.
I was with him in baptism,
And oh, what a sight,
His eyes were as bright,
As a big ray of light.
I know God has chosen him
To be in his flight.

All who came and saw him,
Were blessed in many ways,
Your thoughts and your kindness,
Was appreciated in every way.
By being there with the family,
When they put him away.

Sadly missed by his loving daughter,
Linda Shelton.

Health Departments Offer Broad Range of Services

What do immunizations, nutrition counseling, restaurant inspections, home health services, health education, cancer screening, insect control and consumer product safety monitoring have in common? They're all services offered by Kentucky's county or district health departments.

"The Department for Health Services is responsible for promoting and protecting the health of Kentuckians," said Phil Spangler of the Department for Health Services. "That broad charge requires many programs, which are carried out on the local level by health departments.

"Health departments provide a wide range of public, environmental and personal health services," said Spangler, director of the Division for Local Health. "You might find a nurse who is a diabetes counselor working alongside an environmentalist who inspects restaurants and grocery stores."

All 120 Kentucky counties are served by a health department. There are 31 single county health departments and 18 district health departments that serve 89 counties. Services offered by individual departments vary according to the needs of the area, the decisions of the county and district boards of health, and funding levels.

The Division of Local Health and other offices within the Department for Health Services provide technical assistance, monitoring and supervision for the county and district departments.

For example, if a health department wants to conduct a safety-seat loaner program, it must operate within a set of standards formulated by Health Services. And the department in Frankfort provides training and interpretation of policy and program standards for the health departments.

The Department for Health Services acts as a "funnel" for federal and state funding for health departments. Local funds and fees also go to support the departments.

"Many health department programs are 'preventive' in nature," said Spangler. "In other words 'the programs' goals are preventing illness and needless disability—counseling hypertensive patients on the correct diet, educating people about early cancer detection, providing prenatal services and well-child clinics, teaching people about proper nutrition."

Among health department efforts to promote the health of Kentuckians are cancer and tuberculosis screening, dental health services, nutrition counseling, and prenatal, well child, health education and safety seat loaner programs.

The other emphasis is protecting the public health, which is accomplished primarily through various "environmental programs."

For example, health departments ensure safe food in food manufacturing plants, restaurants and grocery stores by inspecting them regularly. Departments also inspect schools, youth camps, hotels, motels, and mobile home and recreational vehicle parks for sanitary conditions and for adequate insect and rodent control. Teams of inspectors monitor retail stores for unsafe or falsely advertised consumer products.

"A Kentuckian who never goes through the doors of a health department nevertheless benefits from the combined state and local efforts to provide health services to the people of the state," said Spangler. "Everyone in the state is on the receiving end of health department efforts to control communicable disease, to assure a safe and sanitary environment, and to promote health through education programs."

For information about specific services offered in your area, contact the nearest county or district health department.

Kentucky's 1986 Hunting Seasons Set

Kentucky's 1986 hunting season dates and bag limits will be virtually unchanged from last year, according to regulations adopted by the Fish and Wildlife Commission at its quarterly meeting in Frankfort March 2-3.

The squirrel season will open on the third Saturday in August (Aug. 16) and will run through Oct. 31, with the second phase of the split season scheduled to open on the third Thursday in November (Nov. 20) and continue through Dec. 31.

The opening date for quail, rabbit, grouse and furbearer seasons will again be the third Thursday in November. Quail and rabbit seasons will run through the third Sunday in February, grouse through the last day of February and furbearers (hunting and trapping) through Jan. 31. No changes were made in bag limits for any small game or furbearer species.

The commission voted to add the gray fox to the furbearer list. Formerly this species has been classed as unprotected and could be taken year-round, but in the future, gray foxes may only be taken during the furbearer season.

Other species on the furbearer list are mink, muskrat, beaver, opossum, red fox, raccoon, weasel and skunk.

The commission also approved placing the wild hog on the unprotected list. This species, which occurs only in a few Southeastern Kentucky counties, can create ecological problems if it becomes too numerous. The other unprotected species are coyote, groundhog, crow, English sparrow and starling. Coyotes and wild hogs may be taken by licensed deer hunters during the gun deer season. Other unprotected species may be taken at any time except from Nov. 1 through the third Wednesday in November.

In other action, the commission established seven deer hunting zones for the state's upcoming deer season, set to open the second Saturday of November and run for three, five or 10 consecutive days, depending upon the hunting zone.

In Zone One, hunters are limited to antlered deer during the first seven days but may take any deer (antlered or antlerless) during the last three days of the 10-day season; in Zone Two, any deer during the last two days of the 10-day season; in Zone Three, any deer during the last day only. Zone Four will have an antlered-only 10-day gun hunt, while Zone Five will have a five-day season and Zone Six, a three-day season for antlered deer only. Areas in Zone Seven will be closed to all deer hunting.

Bow hunters in Zones One through Four may take any deer during the Oct. 1-Dec. 31 archery season but are limited to bucks only in Zones Five and Six. Floyd county is in Zone Six.

Happy Ending

Evangel's Mark Martin—with eyes closed—finishes home career with victory over SBU

By SCOTT PURYEAR
The Leader & Press

With six seconds left and Evangel clinging to a 53-51 lead over Southwest Baptist, EC senior guard Mark Martin stood at the free throw line...

...With his eyes closed.
"When I was standing at the line, I kinda closed my eyes and thought, 'hey, these are the last shots I'm ever going to shoot in this gym,'" Martin said with a grin. "...I was sure glad those two went down."

Martin canned both free tosses to seal Evangel's 55-53 upset win over visiting Southwest Baptist Thursday night in college basketball action before 1,830 in the EC gym, Springfield, Missouri.

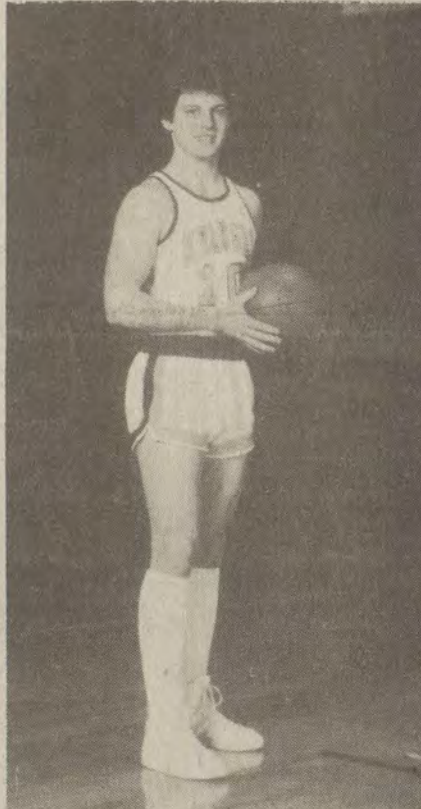

The contest marked the final home performance for the 5-foot-11 Martin, the lone EC senior.

"(Thursday) I just thought a lot by myself, kinda getting up for the game," said Martin, who scored 13 points and dished out 11 assists. "I'd had a bad game at SBU (a 72-47 loss Jan. 18), and I wanted to prove to (SBU) Coach (Dennis) Phillips that I was a little better player and I had a lot more character. "For me it was kinda special. Being a senior, I wanted to go out nice."

Martin's "nice" performance drew the praise of both EC coach Steve Jenkins and SBU's Phillips.

"It was his best game of the season," said Jenkins. "His numbers may not show it, but his floor leadership was outstanding."

Said Phillips: "I have a great deal of respect for Coach Jenkins' program."

The kids here always play hard, and Steve's really done a good job. Mark Martin has come a long way. His leadership has been really outstanding... That was a great way for Mark to go out tonight.
Mark is the son of Lowell Martin, of Wayland. 1tpd.

Dairy Cheer Presents Trophies

The Prestonsburg Dairy Cheer presented trophies last week to several players on its softball team for their accomplishments during the 1985 season. Trophies were awarded to players having a batting average of .500 or better. Tim Shepherd led the team in hitting with a .586 average with Larry Osborne finishing a close second, batting .582. Others receiving trophies were Don Hurt, Sammy Carter and Robert Staggs. Pictured are Dairy Cheer owner Larry Wells, manager Carl Hall, Tim Shepherd, Don Hurt and Larry Osborne.

Good News Outweighs Bad at School, Here

The good news is that the vast majority of 38 fire code violations for which Prestonsburg Elementary School was cited by city fire inspectors last summer have now been remedied. The bad news is that one of the few remaining violations is a major safety hazard that will cost more to remedy than the school district can currently afford.

All the window frames in the 46-year-old school are decayed and panes have already begun to fall with alarming regularity, said Prestonsburg Fire Inspector Larry Adams. Several windows were out when Adams and schools maintenance supervisor Volney Allen inspected the building Monday and Adams pointed to glass fragments littering the base of the exterior walls as evidence of fallen panes. "We're worried about the safety of the kids," he said.

Acting Superintendent Ray Brackett said this week there are no funds in the current budget for replacing the windows, a job for which he has as yet no cost estimate. But "prospects are good" that funding for the work will be included in the 1986-'87 budget, he said. The double-hung wooden windows will be replaced with steel or aluminum casements, he said.

The opening of the school year was twice postponed last August while emergency repairs were made at the grade school here. Asbestos was removed from boiler room pipes, the school has been completely rewired, the alarm system upgraded, and a new sprinkler system installed in the kitchen, Adams said. With the removal this week of materials stored in the basement, virtually all of the school's fire code violations have been corrected, except for the windows, he said.

Windy weather increases the risk of falling glass and window air conditioners are an added stress on the rotting frames, Adams said. Apart from the safety factor, the school would realize significant savings in heating and cooling costs by installing better insulated windows, said Adams, who appeared reconciled to the fact that the work will not be done during the current fiscal year.

Prestonsburg High School, which was also subject to numerous fire code violations last year, has been free of violations this year, said Adams, who had praise for the schools maintenance department as for the acting superintendent.

"Under your leadership," Adams wrote in a March 7 letter to Brackett, "the schools in our city have achieved more toward compliance with national fire codes than at any time in the past several years."

Rebekah Lodge Meets

Miriam Rebekah Lodge No. 31 held its regular meeting, March 4, with Vice Grand Loretta Akers presiding. Those in need of sympathy and those who are ill were recorded, and cards were signed for them. She was also made an honorary member of Betsy Ross Rebekah Lodge No. 95, of Louisa.

Mrs. Virginia Goble, program chairman, presented a skit pertaining to the forming of the Rebekah Degree and its founder Schuyler Colfax. Those assisting her were Mesdames Dorothy Osborne, Lorena Wallen, Mabel Jean LeMaster, Norma Stepp, Sue Wells and Dotty Lafferty.

Refreshments were served prior to the meeting, and members presented their gifts for the kitchen.

Disaster Costs Up, Red Cross Seeks Aid

Cost estimates for disaster victim relief following devastating floods in Northern California and other parts of the northwest United States have increased to $5,233,000. Eight shelters remain open to provide for the individuals and families still displaced by the storms.

Completed American Red Cross Damage Assessments show a total of 9,116 families affected by the disasters in California and Nevada. More than 1,500 families have already applied for immediate assistance from the organization. Service Centers are operating in nine counties to handle the estimated 6,500 families that will apply for Red Cross assistance. Red Cross has assigned over 200 volunteer and paid staff to support the 21 chapters in the stricken areas. During the peak of the operation, over 21,000 evacuees were housed in 71 shelters.

To date, the Red Cross has provided mass care assistance and services to 66,377 victims and emergency workers. Over 10,000 meals, three times a day, are still being served in two cities.

This latest estimate adds additional responsibility to the already strained disaster coffers of the American Red Cross.

"An unprecedented number of disasters have depleted the disaster budget to the breaking point, and the American people are being called upon to help their neighbors," emphasized Robert Vessey, Director of Disaster Services, National Headquarters for the American Red Cross.

"We must raise $40 million to meet the needs of the people who through this most distressing year have been left with terrible problems due to the disasters in their communities," he said. "Over 5.6 million Americans have been affected by disaster in the past 12 months. To date, over $18 million has been raised throughout the United States to help in the relief effort."

All aid through the American Red Cross Disaster Services is an outright gift, and includes provisions for food, shelter, clothing and other basic necessities such as eyeglasses, dentures, medications and occupational supplies and equipment.

If you wish to aid victims of disaster through a financial contribution, send a donation to your local Red Cross chapter of the American Red Cross or to Field Services, American Red Cross, P.O. Box 1675, Louisville, Ky. 40201. Pledges are also being accepted at a toll free number, 1-800-453-9000.

AVOIDING ALCOHOL

Unless your doctor specifically approves, it is not a good idea to drink alcohol when taking any medication. Alcohol mixed with any of the following drugs could result in loss of consciousness: antihistamines, sleeping pills, narcotic analgesics and phenothiazines (major tranquilizers). Oral anti-diabetics, griseofulvin (an antifungal agent), metronidazole (for treatment of vaginal infections), and nitrofurantoin (an antibiotic) mixed with alcohol can produce flushing, headaches, nausea, vomiting and chest and abdominal pains. In addition, alcohol dissolves the outer coating on the time-release pills of some cold and diet capsules, which can result in a single large, possibly toxic, dose. Always ask the doctor or pharmacist about the possible side effects when given a prescription.

All prescription items and over-the-counter remedies are available at COOLEY APOTHECARY. Learn for yourself why your friends and neighbors already rely on us. We are located at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Although we never play doctor, we do render assistance, offer alternatives to a problem and advise when first aid is appropriate. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

HANDY HINT:

Avoid dairy products when taking antibiotics.

CUSTOM ANTENNA

On Thursday, March 6, 1986, there was a hearing by the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications. Those of us who enjoy access to C-SPAN via Satellite were privileged to see our congressmen at their very best. This committee has tackled the problem of satellite scrambling with great zeal.

Chairman Tim Worth declared in his opening statement, "In recent months, consumers have become increasingly confused and alarmed by the announcements of many programmers, as well as networks, that they intend to scramble their signals. Many observers predicted that the skies appeared to be going dark to backyard dish owners. I believe that the satellite dish industry will flourish. Simply put, it is too important a technology, providing too many benefits to the consumer to be squelched." Chairman Worth went on to state that the rights of the backyard dish owner must be protected by insuring that scrambled programming will be available at reasonable rates even if congressional legislation becomes necessary.

Congressman Max Sweeney of Texas has proposed a bill, HR 3989, which will address most of the problems encountered. This bill covers four points which are necessary.

1. Uniform standards for one decoder set up by the FCC.
2. The decoder will be available within 60 days of order by the dish owner.
3. The decoder will be of reasonable price.
4. Break the monopoly which the cable operators now have marketing programming to dish owners.

This bill is being co-sponsored by Rep. Carroll Hubbard of Kentucky's First Congressional District. Rep. Hubbard gave much valuable input on behalf of the dish owners of his district.

Congressman Worth asked that input concerning these matters be received by all representatives from their constituents prior to the next hearing which will be sometime in April.

We must all communicate with Rep. Chris Perkins and let him know our feelings on this matter, and that we wish him to contact Rep. Sweeney and become a co-sponsor of HR 3989.

Become involved today and secure your rights.

Urich played Bob Sanders in the ABC sitcom "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice" in 1973 and moved on to ABC's "S.W.A.T." from 1975 to 1976. In 1977, he played Peter Campbell, the handsome tennis pro who was murdered after he bedded down most of his female pupils, in the popular sitcom "Soap." That same year, he had a stint opposite Lisa Hartman in the short-lived comedy "Tabitha." In 1978, he hit it big as a dogged gumshoe in the detective drama "Vega$. That series lasted until 1981. Then, from October 1982 to March the following year, he played Robert Gaviilan in the NBC adventure series "Gavilan."

Urich was born on December 19, 1947. Fan mail should be sent c/o "Spenser: For Hire," Nightwatch Productions, Warner Brothers, 4000 Warner Blvd., Burbank, CA 91522.

Did Olivia Newton-John star in a movie called "Xanadu"? — B.T., Cookeville, Tenn.

She sure did, along with Michael Beck and Gene Kelly. The Electric Light Orchestra appeared in this 1980 film and performed the tune "Magic," which was a hit for Olivia.

My friend says Rock Hudson was never on "Dallas" or "Dynasty." I say he was. Who is correct? — W.E., Stockton, Ill.

You are. Hudson appeared on "Dynasty" last season. He never appeared on "Dallas."

Is Kirk Douglas related to Mike Douglas, the talk show host? — L.B., Blissville, Vt.

Kirk Douglas has a son named Michael, but he is not the Mike Douglas of talk-show fame. Michael Douglas (Kirk's son) appeared in the TV series "The Streets of San Francisco," and his movie credits include "The China Syndrome," "Romancing the Stone," "Jewel of the Nile" and "A Chorus Line."

'Dallas' and 'Knots Landing': Two full-time fashion shows

By Constance Pace

To watch a nighttime soap opera is really to view two shows in one — a drama filled with convoluted plot twists and a fashion show presented in a not-too-subtle manner by splendidly decked-out female leads.

Bill Travilla, the very talented, very experienced costume designer of both "Dallas" and "Knots Landing," knows just about everything there is to know about decking out glamorous females. His long movie and TV career dates back to the days when he designed Marilyn Monroe's immortal billowy white halter dress in "The Seven Year Itch."

"When I design for a character, it has to be like the character went out and bought the outfit herself and put it in her own wardrobe," he says. "When I first started doing these shows two years ago, all the actresses were taking their things out of the same closet. That's ridiculous! Every character has her own personality."

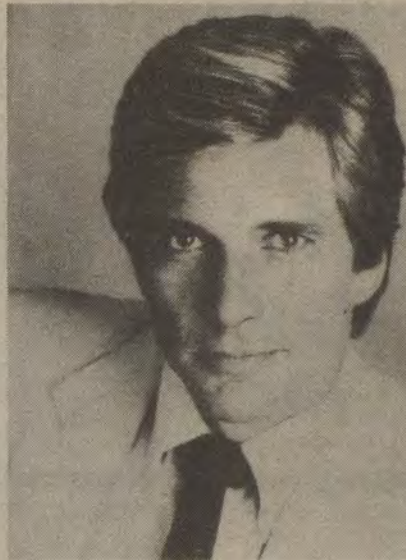

On "Dallas," for example:

"Jenna Wade (Priscilla Presley) is an owner of a boutique," Travilla explains, "so I concentrate on beautiful items for her — beautiful sweaters and belts and embroidered items. Donna (Krebs, played by Susan Howard) comes from both a business and political background, so her clothes are tailored, but still feminine. She has a certain crispness about her. Sue Ellen (Linda Gray) is a very, very sensuous lady, so I dress her softly to bring that out in her."

Dressing the women on both shows is an enormous undertaking. "There are nine women on each show, and each has an average of four changes per show, so that's about 72 outfits every week," he says. "And I only get the scripts about a week ahead of time, because the writers are very, very secretive about what's coming up next. So I work fast." Travilla is aided by his staff at both studios, and, if needed, he'll dip into his own private collection, which is sold in retail stores all over the country. "But I usually modify the designs," he explains. "I'll call downtown to my factory and say, 'I need style 673, but instead of the white lace, give it to me in purple organza.'"

Travilla believes that when he dresses an actress he helps her deliver her dialogue. "If there is a character you can't trust, I'd never put her in colors like white, pink or pale, pale blue," he says. "Then you'd be tempted to believe whatever she says. Instead I'll put her in khaki, olive or black."

A woman he can dress in practically anything is Barbara Carrera, who plays Angelica Nero and wears television's most outrageous clothes. "Angelica's my idea of a dragon lady, a lady from Mars. I adore dressing her! Barbara's just like a young Marlene Dietrich. She's a designer's dream."

THE A-TEAM

Faceman (Dirk Benedict) is surprised by a government pardon and immediately sets off on the talk-show circuit to discuss his new book. But the free ride comes to an abrupt halt when a Viet Cong general has other ideas. The "Mind Games" episode of NBC's "The A-Team" will air TUESDAY, MARCH 18.

Jobless Rate Rises In State

Seasonal job losses forced Kentucky's unemployment rate upward in January, but the state still opened 1986 with a slightly brighter employment picture than it began 1985.

A reduction in trade jobs following the holiday shopping season and a temporary shutdown at automobile manufacturing plants in Bowling Green and in Louisville pushed the state unemployment rate up from a revised 9.5 percent in December to a preliminary 11.6 percent in January, according to figures released recently by the Cabinet for Human Resources.

"In spite of the increase, we're still better off than we were a year ago, when the rate jumped from 9.5 percent in December to 11.9 percent in January," said state labor market analyst Ed Blackwell.

Nationally the rate remained at 6.7 percent for the third month in a row. The comparable state and national figures are not seasonally adjusted.

An estimated 1,472,200 Kentuckians were working in January, down 75,500 from the December figure of 1,547,700 and 26,400 below the January 1985 report of 1,498,600.

The state's unemployed in January totaled an estimated 192,800, up 30,800 from the December figure of 162,000 but 10,600 fewer than in January 1985, when 203,400 were out of work.

Kentucky's December and January employment reports represent the annual revision of federal calculations used in determining state-by-state employment activity.

"The latest labor force report reflects more up-to-date figures collected by the U.S. Census Bureau," Blackwell said. "This information is used to measure employment trends. With data from numerous census surveys each year, the federal Bureau of Labor Statistics revises its estimates to more accurately project the number of Kentuckians working as well as those looking for work."

Maytown Grade School News

Maytown Grade School P.T.O. has rescheduled its regular meeting for Wednesday, March 12 at 7 p.m. in the school cafeteria. Parents are encouraged to attend.

During February, students participated in an American Automobile Association Poster Contest. Work from the following students was chosen for judging at the National Poster Program Headquarters in Falls Church, Virginia: Jason Isaac and Larry Hicks, kindergarten; Jeffery Chad Martin, second grade; Michelle Castle, 4th grade; and Michael Ousley, 5th grade.

In March, students were asked to express their feelings about the ill-fated spaceflight in the form of short stories, poems and art work to be presented to the Christa McAuliffe Memorial Edition of Kentucky Writing. Winning work will be published in the Spring 1986 issue of Kentucky Writing. Copies of the memorial edition will be sent to all school and public libraries in the state, school counselors and English departments, school superintendents and members of the Kentucky State Board of Education.

The following students work was submitted:

Rob Castle, kindergarten; April Howard, second grade; Timothy Shawn Robinson and Shane King, third grade; Brian Reed and Kenneth Bradley, fourth grade; Patty Baldrige, Michael Ousley, Heather Kimberly, Mary Gayheart and Jenny Wiley, sixth grade; and Darnelle Bradley, seventh grade.

The following students have been chosen to participate in the second annual Allen Central math challenge to be held April 5: Wesley Fritts and Kelly Hairston, eighth grade; Teresa Martin, seventh grade; and Curtis Cornett, sixth grade. Alternates are Toby Martin (8th); Tim Slone and Courtney Greenleaf (7th).

Darnelle Bradley, seventh grade, was the school spelling bee winner, with Larissa Hicks, placing second.

Social Security Taxes

Almost all self-employment is covered by Social Security, Jim Kelly, District Director for the Big Sandy Area, said recently.

A self-employed person pays Social Security taxes if his or her net earnings amount to at least $400 a year, Kelly said. Even a person with annual earnings of less than $400 may report earnings by using an optional reporting method. Net earnings for Social Security purposes are the gross earnings less allowable business deductions.

Earnings from self-employment are reported on Form 1040 (U.S. Individual Income Tax Return) and Schedule C (or Schedule F) (Profit or Loss from Business or Profession). The amount of Social Security tax payable is shown on Schedule SE (Computation of Social Security Self-Employment Tax). These forms and any payment due must be forwarded to the Internal Revenue Service by April 15 of the following year for calendar year taxpayers.

More information about self-employment income can be obtained at the Big Sandy Area Social Security Office, located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in your local telephone directory under U.S. Government. A free leaflet, if you're self-employed—Reporting your income for Social Security, is available there.

Avoiding, Dealing With Accidents, Focus of Poison Prevention Week

Would you know what to do if your child swallowed bleach or ate a handful of pills from the medicine cabinet or breathed dangerous fumes?

Many people wouldn't. Gov. Martha Layne Collins has designated March 16-22 as Poison Prevention Week in Kentucky, which coincides with the 25th National Poison Prevention Week. During this week, health officials want people to become aware of how to handle an accidental poisoning and how to prevent poisonings.

"The first thing to remember, as in any emergency situation, is to stay calm," said E.P. Conyers of the Department for Health Services. "Call the Kentucky Regional Poison Center's toll-free number or your physician. Have available for the doctor the kind of poison involved and the victim's age and weight."

"If a person swallows a poisonous substance, do not induce vomiting unless you are told to do so by the Poison Center or your doctor," said Conyers, manager of department's Product Safety Branch.

If poison is breathed, the person should be taken away from the fumes into a fresh-air area. Windows and doors should be opened to allow fresh air inside.

If poison gets on the skin, rinse the area with water for 10 minutes. Wash with soap and water. Poison in the eyes should be gently rinsed out for 15 minutes with body-temperature water.

The Kentucky Regional Poison Center or your physician will give instructions on the next steps to take, Conyers said.

"The Poison Center operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week, year round," he said. "It has a staff trained to handle emergencies and inquiries." The center's toll-free number is 1-800-722-5725. In Louisville, call 589-8222.

"Nearly 95 percent of all poisonings could be prevented by taking certain safeguards," Conyers said. "Although poisonings occur among people of all ages, most involve children under age five."

Most people are well aware of the need for keeping cleaners, detergent, medicine, insect spray, paint, weed killers and antifreeze out of the reach of children. But other everyday products are poisonous and need to be safeguarded.

Cosmetics, colognes, mouthwashes, alcoholic beverage, cigarette butts and house plants can be harmful if ingested or sprayed in the eyes, Conyers warns.

"Young children eat many things, so parents must be very careful," he said.

One mistake that some parents make, he said, is calling medicine "candy." "They believe it's candy, and when they find a bottle of pills in grandmother's purse or their uncle's bedside table, they eat them like candy," Conyers. "Children should be taught that medicine is medicine."

Adults should avoid taking medicine in front of children, he said, since children tend to imitate adults.

Another way to poison-proof homes is to leave all products in their properly-labeled original containers. "A small child who finds a product stored in a soft drink bottle or a plastic cup might drink or eat it, believing the item is food," Conyers said.

Conyers also cautions people who might have young visitors in their homes. "Many poisonings occur because children find medicines and other poisonous items in a relative's home," he said. "Everyone—not just parents of small children—should be aware of this problem."

To Air Japanese Tour Of "My Old Kentucky Home"

The music of Stephen Foster is familiar to the people of Japan—the children even study it in school. In September of 1985, the company of "The Stephen Foster Story," an outdoor musical which has played for 27 years in Bardstown, Kentucky, was invited to tour in Japan, and a tape of that musical tour will be aired on KET. "My Old Kentucky Home: A Japanese Perspective" will be aired Wednesday, March 19, at 9:00 p.m.

Each year, more than 300 people audition for this three-month production, and 55 are chosen for the cast. The 1985 cast is the first to ever perform the musical outside of Bardstown in 27 years. The 19th century costumes were taken to Japan, and the sets were duplicated there and transported to the cities where the cast performed. The television production was seen on 31 Japanese stations.

Headed by Stanton Garr as Stephen Foster and Colette Delaney as Jane McDowell, the cast performs all of the familiar Stephen Foster melodies, and many lively dances are also included in the program. The commercials which ran in Japan, including Kentucky Fried Chicken and Coca Cola, have been left in for the Kentucky audiences, as have scenes of the rolling green fields of Kentucky which introduce the production.

"My Old Kentucky Home: A Japanese Perspective" was produced by TV Asahi, Japan.

Transylvania Seeks Appalachian Scholars

Applications for Transylvania University's Bryden Scholarships for Appalachian students will be accepted through March 15, university officials have announced.

The John R. Bryden Scholarship Fund was established by Transylvania University in 1984 and is directed toward promising students from the Appalachian Region. Scholarships through the program help cover the expenses of attending Transylvania University and are awarded to qualified students from Appalachia on the basis of need. The criteria for selection includes academic performance and personal achievement.

Dr. Charles L. Shearer, president of Transylvania University, described recipients of the Bryden Scholarships as tomorrow's leaders in Appalachia.

"It is the hope of this scholarship program that the recipients will return to their hometowns after graduation and apply their acquired knowledge and experience to the betterment of life in Appalachia," Dr. Shearer said.

The scholarship program is named for John R. Bryden, a graduate of Transylvania who served as the institution's dean from 1964-76 and is a member of the Transylvania Board of Curators.

For information on the Bryden Scholarship Program contact the Office of Admissions, Transylvania University, Lexington, Kentucky 40508, (606) 233-8242.

Current scholarship recipients are Betsy Arnett, Paintsville, Margaret Duff, Somerset, Brad Fields, Hazard, Lisa Harris, Printer, Sheila Johnson, Jenkins, James Lambert, Belfry, and Kim VanHoose, Paintsville.

Cow Creek News

Mrs. Diane Goble was in Ashland on business last Tuesday.
Bob and Dorothy Harris have returned from a month's visitation with friends and relatives in Georgia and Florida. Dr. Max Jones, with whom they spent some time, asked about his many past patients from this area and sent his regards to them.
Mary Dawn and Paul Philip Goble are among the many sick in our community. We wish them a speedy recovery.
Boyd and Aunda Holbrook were dinner guests of Don and Ellen Holbrook at Jerry's March 1, honoring Mr. Holbrook on his birthday.
Mrs. Lizzie Goble was in Huntington W. Va. last Thursday. She was accompanied there by her daughter, Dixie Frasure.
Mrs. Betty Bralley, of Lakeland, Fla., is a house guest of her sister, Edith Burchett, for a few weeks. The two of them visited Mrs. Burchett's grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. Tim Scott and Scotty, last week. Mrs. Tamara Burchett is a patient at HRMC.
The Cow Creek Community Club met in regular session March 3. It was decided to have the Easter egg hunt again this year.
Our sympathies to the Goble family in the passing of Millard Goble.

Future Of Antibiotics Looked At In "NOVA"

During the years in and around World War II, scientists were in the "Golden Age of Antibiotics" and thought they had found the cure for most infectious diseases. However, a frightening pattern has emerged since the 1950's: The more antibiotics are used, the more the germs they are designed to fight become resistant to their power.
Physicians around the globe are questioning if the future will find antibiotics useless. NOVA examines this significant medical issue in "When Wonder Drugs Don't Work." This episode airs Sunday, March 30, at 8:00 p.m. on KET.
Bacterial resistance to antibiotics is the direct result of the overuse of antibiotics. Evidence of this resistance is most apparent in hospitals. A viral epidemic in an Australian hospital is examined on the program.
The episode looks at the effects of Staph Aureus—a bacterial organism called the golden staph—which normally lives harmlessly on human skin. However, once absorbed into the bloodstream, it becomes toxic. Hospital patients, weak and ill, are vulnerable to these toxins. At Royal Melbourne Hospital, where NOVA visits, an infection control team was called to action to pinpoint and contain the large staph outbreak.
"NOVA" talks with officials at the Australian hospital as well as Dr. Stuart Levy of Tufts University Medical School in Boston. Levy discusses the relevance of the Australian outbreak to conditions in American hospitals.
"When Wonder Drugs Don't Work" was produced by the B.B.C. "NOVA" is a WGBH/Boston production.

FINANCIAL PLANNING

CASH DISCOUNTS (Benefits and Cost)

Many businesses offer cash discounts to their customers for prompt payment of invoices. Whether you are the buyer or the seller, you should understand cash discounts and be able to calculate their cost or benefit to you.

Consider this example. You purchase supplies and are invoiced for $1,000. The invoice states that if you pay within ten days, you can subtract a cash discount of 2%; otherwise the full $1,000 is due within thirty days. To calculate the annual rate of interest for the value of the discount, use this formula:

$$\text{Interest} = \frac{\text{Discount}}{[\text{Gross Invoice} - \text{Discount}] \times [\text{Days}/365]}$$

"Days" represents the number of days between the final discount date and the date full payment is due.

Putting the numbers from our example into the formula gives you:

$$\text{Interest} = \frac{$20}{[$1,000 - $20] \times [20/365]}$$

As the buyer, this discount offers you a 37.24% annual return on your $1,000. Unless you can get a higher return on your money somewhere else, you'd be wise to pay early. Even if you must borrow to pay within the discount period, you're ahead by the number of points between 37.24% and the borrowing rate. Another factor is that prompt payment will earn you preferred customer status and a good credit rating.

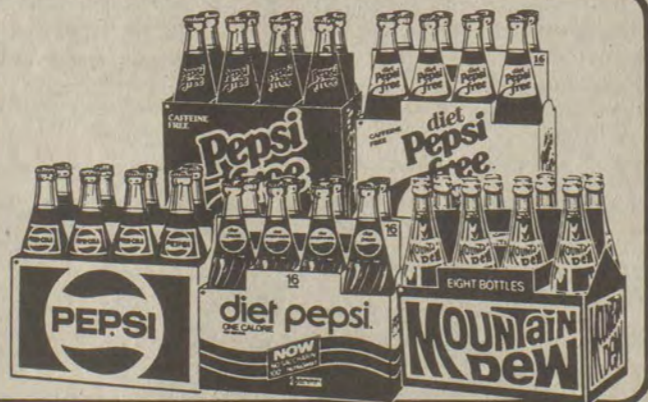

If you were the seller in the above example, the discount would cost you 37.24%. If you can obtain funds from other sources at lower rates, perhaps you shouldn't offer the discount. However, other factors may make offering such discounts worthwhile. Perhaps they are expected in your industry, or perhaps they help promote the sale in the first place. Offering discounts will probably accelerate the cash flow in your company and keep more of your receivables from sliding into the bad debt category.

Now you can heat your home with an air conditioner.

The new Heil heat pump not only heats your home efficiently in the winter, it cools your home in the summer.

Basically an air conditioning unit, the heat pump "reverses" its cycle to heat in the winter time. Most importantly, it consumes less electrical power than resistive type electrical heating systems.

The Heil heat pump is the most efficient answer to the majority of heating and cooling needs. For more information, call us today.

Forest Fires Mean Long-Term Losses

Every year for the past 35 years, it is estimated one out of 75 Kentucky woodland owners has had fire in his woods. During that period Kentucky has averaged over 2,000 forest fires each year. In 1985 Floyd county had 151 fires that burned 3,006 acres.

Even though a burned hillside may become green again, there's more danger from a forest fire than meets the eye. The critical result of these fires is the loss in quality of damaged timber, which becomes infected, stained, and decayed by insects and diseases which gain entry into the tree through fire scars. An average of 6½-7 million of Kentucky's valuable trees are irreversibly damaged this way every year. For every acre of woodland that burns, the loss in timber related values averages $27 every year thereafter, until the burned-over stand matures.

For the average forest fire in Kentucky, this future loss in forest related values during the 75 years following the fire eventually exceeds $87,000. Due to fires, the average yearly future loss in Kentucky's forest related values during the 75 years following the fires eventually exceeds $160,000,000. This equals an average of $43 for every man, woman, and child in the state. Over the 75 year period, five full-time jobs in the forest industry are lost to Kentuckians for every 100 acres of forest fires. This is employment that will never become available because of the damage fire causes to the timber resource. For more information or to report a fire contact the Kentucky Division of Forestry at 886-8562; or Rick Bevins at 874-2926. Remember, Smokey Bear says, "ONLY YOU CAN PREVENT FOREST FIRES."

NUMB ARMS, LEGS Warning Signals

There may be misalignment of vertebrae in the spine causing pressure on nerves, yet the patient experiences no pain in the back. Instead, a variety of sensations may be felt in other parts of the body. These include tingling, tightness, hot spots, cold spots, crawling sensations, electric shock sensations, stinging, burning, and others.

The following nine symptoms involving back pain or strang sensations are often the forerunners of more serious conditions. Any one of these may spell back trouble

- (1) Paresthesias (see above)
- (2) Headaches
- (3) Painful joints
- (4) Numbness in the arms or hands
- (5) Loss of sleep
- (6) Stiffness in the neck
- (7) Pain between the shoulders
- (8) Stiffness or pain in lower back
- (9) Numbness or pain in the legs.

These signals may indicate your body is being robbed of normal nerve function. Until this function is restored, you will, in some degree, be incapacitated. The longer you wait to seek help, the worse the condition will likely become. Don't wait! Should you experience any of these warning signals...call for in depth consultation in Layman's terms.

Offers Guarantees Army Delayed Entry

An enlistment in the Army's Delayed Entry Program can offer a wide variety of guaranteed options for today's high school students who are looking for skill training, an opportunity to travel or advancing their education.

The Delayed Entry Program (DEP) is designed specifically for high school seniors. Under the DEP, enlistees are guaranteed in writing the Army skill training program of their preference. Or they may be able to select an assignment guaranteed to Hawaii, Europe, Alaska, Korea or Panama, or to stay within the continental United States.

To join the Army under the Delayed Entry Program, candidates must be qualified high school seniors and they must graduate before reporting for active duty. After Army aptitude and ability testing, candidates meet with Army guidance counselors and select a skill to balance both the individual's and the Army's needs. Active duty begins when preferred skill training positions become open.

"The Delayed Entry Program is a fine way for young people to develop and grow," said Sergeant Robert Gordon, of the Army Recruiting Station here in Prestonsburg.

"The opportunities to travel through the world are certainly rewarding and the skill training program provides soldiers with marketable skills when they return to the civilian workforce."

DEP enlistees can take advantage of other Army programs, such as the New Army College Fund, where qualified high school graduates who enlist in specified skills can earn up to $25,000 for college. And in their off duty time, soldiers can study at nearby colleges or vocational-technical schools and the Army pays up to 75 percent of the tuition costs.

There's also a wide assortment of benefits available to soldiers. Enlistees begin with a starting salary of over $590 a month, plus room and board, 30 days paid vacation a year and all medical and dental care provided.

For more information on the Army's Delayed Entry Program, call Sergeant Gordon at (606) 886-9431 or stop by his new office at 38 North Lake Drive in Prestonsburg.

First Grade, Kindergarten Entertain PTO

Our Lady of the Mountain School's Kindergarten and First Grade provided entertainment and refreshments for the school's January P.T.O. meeting. In addition to group songs and recitation, each student spoke individually. The Kindergarten arranged cut-up vegetables into butterflies for a healthy snack. ## AIDS No Danger To Blood Donors Concern about Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) in the past months has caused unwarranted fears among many people who donate blood. The belief that AIDS can be spread through donating blood has severely affected blood supplies.

But AIDS cannot be contracted through donating blood, one of several points that state health officials will emphasize at the Kentucky Health Professionals AIDS Conference on March 14. "We included in our program a talk about safety measures taken at blood and plasma centers," said Reginald Finger, M.D., of the Department for Health Services, "because we know that many people still believe that they can get AIDS by donating blood. We want to dispel that myth—especially during Red Cross Month in March."

Finger likens this myth to "believing that you can get rabies by petting a dog."

"No one would believe that you could get rabies by petting a dog," he said. "There's no way for the virus to get from the dog to the person. And in donating blood, there's no way for the AIDS virus to get into a donor's body."

When donating blood, the needles, tubing and plastic bags used to collect blood are used once and then thrown away, according to Anne Kellogg, M.D., associate medical director of the Louisville Regional Blood Services of the American Red Cross.

"The needles and bags are not made to be reused, so they couldn't be used more than once," said Kellogg.

All attendants at Red Cross blood donation centers are medical professionals who get Red Cross training on blood-collection procedures.

"As in all medical procedures, everything is done in an extremely clean manner," said Kellogg. "This prevents all kinds of infections. Once a donor's arm is cleaned, nothing touches the point where the needle goes in except for the needle. The attendant's hands don't touch that area once it has been cleaned."

Kellogg is scheduled to speak about measures of protection at blood and plasma centers during the March AIDS conference. However, many other subjects are on the conference agenda.

"We'll also be discussing concerns about AIDS transmission in medical settings, the latest AIDS research, the extent of the problem in Kentucky, AIDS testing, legal aspects of AIDS and other topics," said Finger.

Persons interested in registering for the conference to be held in Louisville should contact James T. Soder, Kentucky Hospital Association, P.O. Box 24163, Louisville, Ky. 40224. The

Rose Sponsors Bills On Utilities, Mining

State Rep. Jim Rose, D-Hindman, has sponsored two legislative measures that will benefit East Kentuckians.

House Bill 860 will require utility companies to release to the public their customer rating system, if one exists. The measure directs the utilities to make known the system used in determining a customer's payment reliability.

Secondly, the bill allows for a twenty percent discount for customers over 65 years of age who have proof from the Cabinet for Human Resources that they meet poverty guidelines.

The bill has been assigned to the House Committee on Energy.

Rose said that Kentucky's senior citizens are locked into so many monetary restraints, due to set retirement benefits, that a fuel adjustment during the winter might make the difference between eating or not.

Rose is also co-sponsoring legislation that would transfer court jurisdiction for mining violation hearings to the circuit court of the county where the alleged violation occurred rather than Franklin County.

Wild Turkey Flock Grows So Does Hunter Interest

Kentucky's wild turkey flock is scattered around the state in localized populations in such diverse habitat as riverbottom hardwoods along the Ohio River in western Kentucky's Ballard county and Appalachian highlands on the Virginia-Kentucky border in Harlan and Letcher counties.

Each year more and more Kentuckians are discovering a rite of springtime which long ago captivated outdoorsmen of the southern forests. Since Kentucky's wild turkey restoration program began in the late 1970s, interest in wild turkey hunting has increased dramatically. Between 1981 and 1984, Kentucky Department of Fish & Wildlife Resources' records show that the sale of turkey hunting permits increased by 240% from 1,338 in 1981 to 3,214 by 1984.

The popularity of turkey hunting in Kentucky is snowballing as evidenced by an improving hunter success ratio (10.38% in 1985), steadily climbing statewide harvest (353 birds, up 29% in 1985), and a threefold increase in the population estimate (to about 14,000 birds) since the early 1980s.

Through landowner cooperation and support for the program, a selective habitat evaluation process, an intensive stocking program of birds imported from Missouri and Iowa and the protection of developing populations from poaching, flocks have become established in areas which did not support any wild turkeys at all just a few years ago.

And what about the outlook for the upcoming 1986 turkey season in Kentucky? George Wright, the department's Wild Turkey Program Coordinator, said that "last year's hatch was a real good one," and that the newly-opened areas would offer the best opportunities since the birds haven't been hunted yet. While there's usually a higher density of turkeys close to their release site, individual birds have been known to travel up to five miles in just a matter of weeks. Wright said that in the future many new areas would be opened to hunting. "We stocked 15 new areas last year and have already put turkeys in 12 new areas in 1986."

Kentucky's growing army of novice wild turkey hunters are quickly learning that the sport is challenging—that the key elements to success are patience, convincing calling, camouflage clothing, a tight patterning shotgun, and the proper selection of a "blind" site.

While it's never too early to scout for sign, turkeys travel and feed in sexually segregated groups throughout the winter until late March. In early April the toms go their separate way, stake out a roosting tree and start gobbling to attract female companionship.

Wright said that a common mistake novice hunters make is attempting to call up turkeys when scouting prior to the season. "Once you fool him, that old gobbler will get smart and be harder to call up the next time," Wright cautioned.

When the hunting begins and you've picked your spot near his roosting tree, don't move from it. However wary, convincing calling and just the right amount of hesitancy will bring a lovesick tom in close every time. Try to position your blind so that you're at the same elevation or higher than your turkey's roost tree. Once you've started calling and the turkey has answered back, put your back to a tree and your knees under your chin so that your shotgun can be pointed out ready to shoot. And whatever you do don't give up on a gobbler until you scare him off or shoot him. Be patient and wait him out.

The centuries-old ritual of women bringing rich dowries to a marriage is somewhat common among humans, but in the animal kingdom, it's the male who bears the gifts before mating. According to International Wildlife magazine, lady spiders can expect a large ball of silk while a female katydid is allowed to feast on her mates hind legs.
