Budget, Decisions by Board Are Subjects of Questioning

The school budget, a controversial property transaction, and the recent decision to hire construction managers to oversee the school building program—these were among the questions with which two citizen organizations peppered the Floyd Board of Education at its Wednesday meeting.

Joyce Everly, representing the Floyd County Citizens Education Council, wanted to know why more than $1.5 million was set aside for unspecified purposes in the working budget recently approved for this year. In five places, amounts are budgeted for items simply designated "other" or "miscellaneous," she noted.

The bulk of the expenditures in question fall under the "instruction" category, where the budget spells out the money to be spent on salaries for principals, supervisors, teachers, librarians, guidance officers, adult education instructors, substitute teachers, secretaries and aides—but also sets aside $1,110,130 under "other" and $245,715 under "other instructional staff/others."

'Other' Expenses, Grigsby Salary Among Targets

Under "other administrative staff," the budget includes $47,262. "Secondary teaching supplies/other" is allocated $52,000. And $75,000 is listed under "miscellaneous." "What is this being used for?" Everly asked.

Noting that the state attorney general recommended some months ago that the Floyd board should consider filing a suit to have its 1982 sale of a Garth property set aside, Everly asked, "When is the board going to deal with it?"

The seven-acre tract was given to the board by coal magnate B. F. Reed to sell, with the proceeds to establish a scholarship fund. The board sold it for $25,000 to a firm owned by Prestonsburg businessman John Allen.

An attorney-general's investigator said it appeared that only Allen and former Superintendent E. P. Grigsby, Jr. understood that there was a property transaction behind Reed's donation and that the Board of Education was apparently shortchanged in the deal.

"The attorney-general's office does not have legal authority to file suit to have the property conveyance set aside but the local board could and should consider it," the investigator said.

Noting after the meeting that time ran out before Grigsby could be prosecuted for allegedly doing business with a Martin firm in which he had a financial stake, Everly asked rhetorically of the Garth transaction, "Are they going to wait for the statute of limitations to run out on this as they did with everything else?"

Mrs. Everly also asked when the board would answer a series of questions she submitted last month. Brackett said she would have her answers by the December board meeting. (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

Court Names 3-Member Board To Monitor County Utilities

A three-member board appointed by Floyd Fiscal Court will oversee the management of all county utilities except those operating within incorporated towns.

The establishment of an independent board was ordered by the state Public Service Commission earlier this month to oversee the operation of East Kentucky Utilities, which recently faced a gas shutoff when it ran up a $443,000 bill with its wholesale suppliers. But Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo said the board will monitor all county utilities and issue quarterly reports on them.

Appointed for a four-year term were Bill Harvey Howard, superintendent of Prestonsburg Utilities, Estill Branham, of the Auxier road, was named for three years and Fred Goble, of the Mountain Parkway, for two.

The PSC instruction followed a finding that Floyd Fiscal Court has not kept a sufficiently close watch on East Kentucky Utilities, which has managed a gas line serving the Right Beaver Creek area for the county since 1979. "Had Floyd county exercised greater responsibility... and provided more effective oversight of the management of its gas system... the financial and physical condition of the system would have been much different during 1980-1985," the commission said.

The regulatory agency acknowledged, however, that steps taken by the county and by EKV have improved the system and agreed that the bond issue proposed by County Attorney David Barber as a way of completing line replacement and paying the system's debts is a good idea.

The commission "will look favorably" on a request by the county to float a bond issue if the county first "demonstrates its responsibility" by making a payment on the Kentucky West-Virginia Gas Company bill and buying some new pipe for the system. Its Nov. 5 order said.

The utility subsequently borrowed money to pay $100,000 on its debt to Kentucky-West and $20,000 on its debt to Southeastern Gas Co. The county has also purchased additional pipeline for the utility. Stumbo said Friday.

A bond issue of about $1 million will be required to complete line replacement, pay wholesale suppliers, and retire $200,000 still outstanding on a 1981 bond issue. Barber said last month. Floating the new bond issue will be one of the principal responsibilities of the new utility board according to the fiscal court order creating it.

Although the state Department of Revenue was pressing the Floyd Sheriff's Department to collect at least 95 percent of 1985 taxes, the county closed the books with 92 percent collected. Sheriff Henry Hale "has done as good as job as he can," in collecting the taxes, said Judge-Executive Stumbo in recommending that the court accept the sheriff's annual settlement.

Tax collections included $778,846 for the schools; $729,432 for the county; $104,528 for the health department. (See Story No. 5, Page 4)

CRASH TRUCK equipped with a "Jaws of Life" device for freeing trapped auto collision victims will be purchased with an Area Development Fund grant awarded recently to the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad. On behalf of the Big Sandy Area Development District, Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, right, last Friday presented a check for $20,425 to rescue squad secretary-treasurer Onda L. Hunt, Jr., left, and Capt. Chuck Akers.

Teamsters Push To Represent School Workers

"The people want union representation. I'm going to keep pushing and pushing and pushing to get these people union representation," said Terry Osborne, an organizer for Teamsters Local 783, outside the Board of Education meeting Wednesday night.

"These people" are school bus drivers, clerks, janitors, cooks and aides. About 300 are reckoned to work in the Floyd school system and Osborne said more than 200 of them have signed cards asking the Board of Education to recognize the Teamsters as their bargaining agent.

The union organizer said he intended to present the cards and formally request recognition of the union at Wednesday's board meeting but that he was not given a place on the agenda. Supt. Ray Brackett said the union had not filed a formal, written request to be included.

That defect was remedied Wednesday night when Osborne filed the necessary request and the union organizer, who was accompanied by several dozen non-certified school workers, vowed he would be back in. (See Story No. 2, Page 4)

35 Indictments Returned As Grand Jury Adjourns

Among 35 persons indicted last week by a Floyd Circuit Court grand jury is one man accused of blowing up his own house, a youth charged with breaking out of the juvenile detention center five times, and three persons accused of child abuse.

An explosion and fire at the home of Forrest Dean Mitchell in the Goble Roberts Addition on Sept. 29 was planned by Mitchell himself. Prestonsburg Fire Inspector Larry Adams told the grand jury. The brick home was heavily damaged in the explosion; the resulting fire was contained mostly in the attic.

Adams said Mitchell apparently disconnected a gas line feeding a hallway furnace, placed lighted candles at various points throughout the house.

Brothers Draw Jail Sentence, Fine in Trial

Although a defense attorney dismissed the dispute as "an old-fashioned swearing contest between two families," a Floyd Circuit Court jury Monday convicted two David brothers of endangering a neighbor.

Martin Shepherd, 40, was convicted of wanton endangerment after evidence was given that he shot into the home of Rudy and Bonnie Davis on August 26, 1984. He was tried on the charge in June last year but the jury on that occasion was unable to reach a verdict.

Earlie Shepherd was convicted of complicity, the Commonwealth claiming he drove the car from which his brother fired buckshot into the Davis home.

Both men were sentenced to 12 months in the county jail and fined $500. (See Story No. 6, Page 4) then left with his wife, Shirley, for Michigan, and has not been back. The brick home exploded around 1:30 p.m. Mitchell was indicted Thursday on an arson charge.

Also charged with arranging to set his own home ablaze was Raymond Gilliam. Bill Little, Jr., Jimmy Wayne Farmer and Jeffery Dwayne Newsome are also charged in the burning of Gilliam's house. Farmer is charged in addition with setting fire to a car belonging to Jerlie E. Isaac. Both burnings were reported on July 12.

Five escapes are attributed to Tony Manns, who is also accused of twice setting fires at the Juvenile Detention Center and once of getting someone else to do it. He is charged further with destroying a skylight, tearing a bed from a wall, breaking overhead lights, and damaging the concrete walls and floor of a shower cubicle at the facility. In addition, he is accused of stealing a 1977 Oldsmobile belonging to Jennifer Cooley and a 1986 Blazer belonging to Raymond Schoolcraft.

Also accused of escaping from the detention center is Julian David Tackett. He is charged in addition with robbing detention center worker Wanda Miller of her keys and money and of stealing her 1979 Chevrolet wagon, and of stealing a 1986 Caprice Classic from Tom Lemaster, a 1985 Camaro belonging to Cynthia Cooley, and a 1982 Grand Prix owned by N. B. Bailey.

Charles Martin, 42, of Wayland, is charged with assault in the scalding of his girlfriend's two-year-old son on Oct. 9. Danny and Tammy Ratliff, of Lackey, face identical charges in the alleged beating of their two-year-old daughter on Oct. 5.

Others indicted on assault charges: Cecilia Caudill, accused of shooting Maryon Hutchinson in both legs with a .38 revolver on Sept. 26; Carl Edward Hall, for allegedly shooting into the home of Larry Dean Isaac and hitting him on Oct. 1; Finley Hall and Finley (See Story No. 7, Page 4)

FOURTEEN LOW-INCOME FAMILIES in Floyd county were among the 97 whose homes were weatherized November 8 in a joint effort between the Kentucky Power Company and local Community Action Agencies. Jackie Chaney, secretary, and W. W. Zoellers, Pikeville division manager, shown caulking windows, are just two of the 195 Kentucky Power employees who volunteered their time and efforts to this first weatherization day.

Despite heavy rainfall over the 20-county area, 97 homes will be more comfortable this winter, with families from Auxier in the lower part of the county to Garrett in the upper Right Beaver section benefiting from the joint effort.

RR Commission Joins KY 80 Investigation

Its chairman, Jimmy "Gabe" Turner, of Drift, announced last week that the Kentucky Railroad Commission will join in the investigation of the recent collapse of KY 80 near Martin. The focus of his attention, Turner indicated, will be the C&O railroad.

"It is clear to the commission that C&O played an active role in the actual construction of the tunnel. I have not seen in my lifetime the use of a galvanized drainpipe to support this kind of weight and pressure," Turner said. "This kind of construction cannot be tolerated."

Turner added that federal regulations require that concrete and steel be used in constructing tunnels of the kind needed to accommodate the Bucks Branch rail spur.

In a secondary matter, Turner noted that, when traffic was routed through Martin as a result of the highway collapse, it became obvious that the railyard there "is kept in poor condition, reflects an unsightly scene to the community, and further reflects upon the lack of interest of C&O in being good corporate citizens of Floyd county."

In the meantime, state highway department documents indicate that problems with the corrugated steel culvert appeared even before construction of the highway was complete and reappeared in October last year, according to a Lexington Herald-Leader report.

(KY 80 was opened in November, 1981; the steel culvert was installed in 1980. Manufactured by a division of Armo, Inc. and marketed as a "Super Span," it was 120 feet long and 28 feet wide.)

Three months before the road opened, according to the report, C&O requested that support struts be placed in the tunnel, which was beginning to flatten at the top. The leveling of the arch was attributed to the ground under the tunnel settling more than had been an-anticipated. A March 17 memo cited by the Herald-Leader said the steel pipe was refitted less than a year after it was installed.

In another memo the Transportation Cabinet's geotechnical branch reported on April 16 that subsurface material at the site was about 50 percent silt and clay. "It is our understanding the project was designed for sandstone subgrade," the report said.

By October, 1985, the tunnel had "flattened to a point deemed critical by Armo structural engineers," the March 17 memo said. In the memo, which was sent to assistant state highway engineer A. R. Romine, state engineer director George W. Asbury wrote that "poor fill material as well as poor design and construction supervision all seem to be pieces of the puzzle."

The pipe was installed under supervision. (See Story No. 4, Page 4)

Smokeout of '83 Helped Technologist 'Kick Habit'

Brian Williamson was a three-pack-per-day smoker. But because of the American Cancer Society's 1983 Great American Smokeout, he's a non-smoker today.

"I started smoking in college when I was under pressure," said Williamson, a medical technologist who lives in Prestonsburg and works at Our Lady of the Way Hospital. "I thought it would help but it just made things worse. After I got hooked, I realized I didn't really like it. It's a nasty habit...but it was a habit. I also felt responsible for Mom and Dad starting back (smoking) after they had quit for 18 years."

In 1969, Williamson had a kidney transplant. When kidney problems reoccurred in 1983, his doctors told him that smoking wasn't causing his kidney problems but his five-year-old, three-pack-per-day habit would certainly add to them.

By the time the '83 Smokeout came about, Williamson had already tried twice to quit. Those first attempts "just lasted 12 to 14 hours" and seemed to lead to increased smoking.

"The Smokeout just gave me a goal..." said Williamson. "After I got through one day I asked myself 'Why not quit for good? Why put yourself through all this agony for 24 hours and then go back to it?'"

The Smokeout also provided support. Employee Health Nurse Judy Hamm and the emergency room staff "adopted" Williamson for Smokeout Day and provided important encouragement and snacks.

Williamson's personal quit-smoking program followed the Smokeout format. Each day he concerned himself only with getting through the next 24 hours without a cigarette. Co-worker Linda Stiltner remembers him bringing lots of bubble gum to work.

"I chewed about a pound of bubblegum a day," cracks Williamson. "Now I can't stand it."

When the urge to smoke came, Williamson reinforced his quit-smoking efforts with the thought "Why put yourself through this torment just to go back to it?"

Williamson confides that "there were some very long days." But the benefits have exceeded the sacrifices.

During the three months which followed the '83 Smokeout, Williamson gained ten to 15 pounds.

"But I went back to better eating habits," he explained. "When I was smoking, I wasn't eating at work. I was living on cigarettes and coffee."

Today, through no special efforts, Williamson's weight has returned to what it was while he smoked.

Williamson is quick to list other benefits.

"I have a better blood pressure. I breathe better. I have more energy. I feel better. I don't wake up with a terrible cough or (feeling) that my throat's going to burn up before I get another cigarette."

Williamson also has one less health worry now.

However, the urge to smoke still returns, admits Williamson, when he's under severe stress. Others, especially his mother, have helped him by refusing to give him a cigarette.

Williamson is supportive of Our Lady of the Way Hospital's plan to celebrate the 1986 Great American Smokeout, Thursday, November 20. The hospital posted informational and promotional displays November 14. Smokeout activities for November 20 include: a "cold turkey" raffle for employees; the offering of adoption certificates, brochures and stickers for quitters and adopters to employees and visitors; and the availability of healthy "munchies" throughout the day to encourage smokers to substitute them for cigars and cigarettes.

Williamson said he believes those who want to quit can, if mentally they really want to stop. To those who do smoke, he'd like to say, "Think about what it's doing to you. You have to be the one to quit."

McDowell Students Attend State Meet

Danita Hall, Brian Hall, Kevin Hall; Lenny Hall, Kitty Moore, Paula Kidd, Alicia Allen, and Steve Jones were selected to represent McDowell High School at a statewide conference on "Project Graduation," sponsored by the Kentucky State Police Division of Highway Safety and the Kentucky Department of Education. This project is promoted by the Student Advisory Council of Superintendent Alice McDonald.

"Project Graduation" is a concept for planning, publicizing and producing chemical free graduation or spring parties that attract large numbers of students. It is a movement to reduce the number of teenagers who might drink and drive at this special time in their lives. This movement is receiving positive, lifesaving results in Kentucky with teen fatalities down 33% last May and June in comparison to the same time period a year ago before Project Graduation was initiated.

These eight student representatives along with Janet Lawson and Libbi Hall, sponsors, attended a two and a-half day training conference in Louisville November 5, 6, and 7. Training sessions included budgeting, fund-raising, publicity, prizes, food, entertainment, securing volunteers and promoting community involvement.

"Anne of Green Gables" Encores In Two Parts

Megan Follows stars in the classic story of a young orphan adopted by an elderly bachelor farmer (Richard Farnsworth) and his spinster sister (Colleen Dewhurst) in the Emmy Award-winning "Anne of Green Gables," "A Wonderworks Special" encoring in two parts beginning Sunday, December 7, at 11:00 a.m. on KET. "Wonderworks" repeats Saturdays at 7:00 p.m.

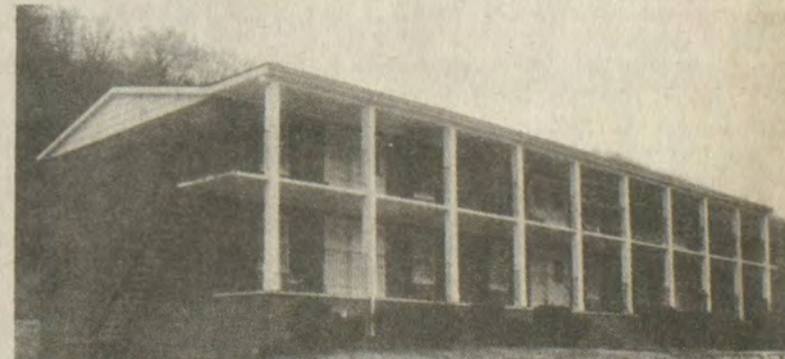

When Matthew and Marilla Cuthbert decide to adopt a boy to help with the chores, the orphanage instead sends them a mischievous, red-haired, freckle-faced young girl—Anne Shirley. Although she has the best of intentions of trying to prove herself to her new family and to be loved, Anne constantly is getting into trouble.

She manages to insult the town matriarch and accidentally gets her friend Diana Barry (Schulyer Grant) inebriated at a tea party. Anne goes from one mishap to the next, until she finally finds her niche in academics. Here she finds herself in stiff competition with Gilbert Blyth (Jonathan Crombie), but their rivalry eventually turns to affection.

"Anne of Green Gables," from last year's "Wonderworks" series, is based on the popular classic by Lucy Maud Montgomery. It was named Outstanding Children's Program at the 38th Annual Emmy Awards this year.

Part two will air on KET Sunday, December 14, at 11:00 a.m. Part one repeats Saturday, December 13, at 7:00 p.m. and part two repeats Saturday, December 20, at 7:00 p.m.

"Wonderworks" is presented by the PBS Children's and Family Consortium, headed by WQED/Pittsburgh and including KCET/Los Angeles, KTCA/Minneapolis-St. Paul, SCETV/Columbia, S.C., and WETA/Washington, D.C.

meeting and one of the questions received a partial answer even before Wednesday's meeting was over:

"Why is E. P. Grigsby, Jr. paid $47,117 annually to fill a position... for which there is no written job description?" Everly had asked. The board issued a job description Wednesday, defining his principal duties as "to assist the superintendent in any or all areas relating to public relations, instruction, curriculum, transportation, buildings and grounds."

For Charles Collins, representing the Floyd County Education Forum, the target was the secrecy surrounding the board's decision last month to hire Ervin Akers and Sam Martin to oversee construction of the four schools to be built here over the next couple of years. The two construction managers will be paid a total of $717,571.

Collins said he had the impression "the deals had already been finalized before the meeting or before being discussed publicly." The subject was not on the agenda for the board's October meeting; it was not mentioned as the subject of an executive session held the same night; and the decision was not announced until most of the crowd had left the meeting room. Collins said, "It seems like a pretty good plan to make sure everyone is kept in the dark," he said.

Questions "in everyone's mind," Collins said, include whether the construction managers' salaries are justified, whether the amounts they are predicted to save in construction costs can be verified, whether their appointments were politically motivated, and whether the architects could have been tapped for the job.

"No one is worth" the salaries the managers are being paid and figuring their fee as a percentage of construction costs invites cost overruns. Collins said, "There is no incentive for them to save money with a contract like this," he said.

vision of Armo engineers. Responsibility for overseeing and inspecting the highway job generally lay with Brighton Engineering of Frankfort. Haworth and Associates, Inc. of Frankfort, designed the 8.3-mile section of KY 80 that contains the Martin tunnel, and Elmo Greer and Sons, Inc. of London, installed the tunnel.

The state closed two lanes of the four-lane highway in February. Asbury estimated in March that the cost of repairing it would be $300,000. Bids for repair work were advertised in mid-October and were scheduled to be opened Nov. 14. The road collapsed on Oct. 26.

Defense attorneys Norman Bennett, representing Martin Shepherd, and Ned Pillersdorf, representing Earlie, stressed the relatively late hour of the shooting—sometime after 9 p.m.—and insisted the Davises could not have identified the persons who shot into their home. Moreover, Vicky Prater testified that Martin Shepherd had spent that Sunday night drinking beer and playing cards with her and her husband.

Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen noted, however, that the Shepherds had been identified as driving past the Davises on three occasions that evening, including one time before the shooting when Martin Shepherd was reported to have slapped the side of his truck and called out, "Boom, boom."

The prosecutor said the Shepherds became angry with their neighbor after Davis agreed to allow heavy mining equipment to be parked temporarily on his beer store lot on KY 850. The equipment had been removed from a stripmine operated by Martin Shepherd on property belonging to his father, Dewey Shepherd, after a dispute arose over royalty payments for the coal.

Spina Bifida Roadblock Held Here Said Success

November 15, a roadblock was set up in Prestonsburg to raise money for the Spina Bifida Association of Kentucky. The roadblock proved successful, and all funds collected will be presented to the S.B.A. of Ky. president, Sandi Johnson, December 13 in Louisville.

The Spina Bifida Association expresses its appreciation to those who helped with this event.

December. "You're all going to see my smiling face a lot," he said, adding, "When we're here next time we'll have our attorneys here."

Dealing with the school board was like "playing a cat-and-mouse game," the organizer said.

Brackett acknowledged that the union request will be on the next meeting's agenda. "Any and all people should be heard and will be given the opportunity to be heard," the superintendent said.

Asked whether he was including the union reluctantly, Brackett replied, "You have to deal with each situation as it comes along, whether you're reluctant or not."

The cards school workers have been asked to sign would authorize Local 783 to have union dues—beginning at around $11 a month—deducted from their paychecks. A majority of the district's non-teaching workers—estimated at around 160—would have to sign before the union had a right to be recognized as their representative.

If that happens, a labor lawyer will be hired and a business agent assigned to this area to help negotiate a contract for the new school year and set up a formal grievance procedure, union officials said.

The Glo bridge will be repaired before winter, Stumbo assured Mary Bradley, who said the alternative routes used by residents there since federal authorities closed the bridge are dangerous.

Stumbo said repair work would begin as soon as plans were completed. However, he responded vaguely to a request that the county apply for funds under the Federal Bridge Replacement Program. Under that program the county would be responsible for 20 percent of the replacement cost.

Emma Lou Martin received sympathy but little else when she asked the court for help in upgrading the water line serving Cow Creek. Citing rapidly rising insurance costs for businesses she operates near the mouth of Cow Creek, Mrs. Martin said the area needs a six-inch main to support fire hydrants. The area is currently served by a three-inch line.

Bits and Pieces

END OR BEGINNING

The curtain came down on a long-lasting and lovely autumn with the first snowfall, Saturday. Or was it the opening of "A Winter's Tale?"

OH, NO, "FRESNO"

Biggest disappointment of a long string of, at best, uninspired and uninspiring TV seasons was the first episode of the much-touted "Fresno." Dabney, Carol, how could you?

INVESTMENTS

With my usual lack of financial wizardry, I invested in two more non-income producing items, recently. First, a Fido Shock system designed to keep my dogs at a distance from passersby and away from the alleged flower beds. Alleged, because they were totally destroyed during the summer. Barren wasteland doesn't even come close to describing the utter desolation of their ruin. I fought a long and losing battle, wielding brooms, hurling stones, curses, yea, even the water hose, to no avail. But no more. The system works with no damage to Fido except possibly to his or her ego.

Second is an automatic feeder. This has brought about more frustration than food among dogdom—I think that should be spelled dogdumb.

One of my mutts figured it out in about two minutes, but that wonderful, wacky, pixilated Irish Setter of mine views the whole contraption with deep-seated suspicion. She did finally, after much sniffing, pawing, and crying for help, manage to snatch a bite. Trouble is, as she snatched, she backed, and the door banged. With a backward leap to be envied by Martina Navratilova she then stood for some time shaking like the proverbial aspen.

To date, her appetite has not overcome her awe, but I predict she'll catch on before the year is out. No, I did not say which year.

Views From Florida

On November 22, McDowell High School will hold their annual Homecoming. This year they will be honoring the Class of 1962.

I will be unable to attend because of other commitments here at school and because the distance to travel is too far for a weekend trip.

I was fortunate enough to be selected the most popular in the Class of '62, as well as Captain and Most Valuable Player of the basketball team. I know that our twenty-fifth year reunion is coming up this year, and I plan to attend if at all possible.

The 1961-1962 school year marked the beginning of the Pete Grigsby Era at McDowell High. His record for that year was 27 wins and 11 losses.

Coach Grigsby instilled in us the pride of winning, but he did not let us lose sight of the importance of our academic work. I believe that all of the young athletes that were coached by Coach Grigsby still admire and respect him as I do.

Coach Grigsby has always been a man of high moral character and integrity. Our coach may be somewhat down at this time, but he is not out. The game is still in progress and the final buzzer has not sounded.

The people of Floyd County will hear more from Coach Grigsby; you can count on it.

And now I would like to say a few words to the young people involved in athletics in Floyd County.

Several years ago, I coached a young athlete. He was a "star". He later became a "star" quarterback and "star" basketball player on his high school team. He was highly recruited by both football and basketball college coaches. He elected to play football, signed his scholarship and went to Clemson University to begin his career.

This year, however, he is sitting on the sidelines watching the games. Why? He wasn't a "star" in the classroom. He could not make a score high enough on the Scholastic Aptitude Test.

Young athletes, please remember, it is great to be involved in sports, but never forget your academic work.

I hope the homecoming is a great success and I would like to say "Hi" to all my fellow classmates. I hope to see you all very soon.

After Trailer Fire Burke Pleads Guilty

Randall J. Burke, 29, of Lancaster, pleaded guilty to arson in Floyd Circuit Court and received a three-year sentence Thursday, for setting fire on March 27 to a mobile home on a South Lake Drive dealer's lot.

Prestonsburg Fire Inspector Larry Adams said Burke set fire to a trailer on Nelson Mobile Home Sales' lot, destroying the trailer, which was valued at $4,900. Disguised as a "little, old, gray-haired lady," Burke borrowed matches from the front office of the nearby Kentucky Motel shortly before the fire. Adams said. A quantity of beer was found inside the burned trailer.

Burke was later charged with arson at the Floyd county jail, where he was already being held on an unrelated charge of filing a false stolen-vehicle report. Adams said.

MSU Scholarship Is Essayist's Reward

High school seniors in Morehead State University's 22 county service region are eligible to participate in MSU's first Constitutional Essay and Scholarship Competition.

Contest entrants will write a 1,000 to 1,500 word essay on the topic "How Does the Separation of Powers Help Make the Constitution Work?" The topic is the same as that for the National Bicentennial Writing Competition sponsored by the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution. Students may enter both competitions, according to William Green, MSU assistant professor of government, geography and history.

The winner will be awarded the MSU Constitutional Scholarship which is valued at $5,520 over four years. The scholarship will go to an entering full-time freshman for the 1987-88 academic year at MSU and is renewable for three academic years. A certificate and book on the Constitution will also be presented to the winning author. The winner's sponsoring teacher will receive a certificate and a choice of a tuition-free, three-hour semester course at MSU or a trip to the 1987 meeting of the Kentucky Council for the Social Studies.

The deadline for the competition is March 1, 1987. The winner will be announced on April 1, 1987.

Joining MSU in sponsoring the competition are the Kentucky Council for the Social Studies, Kentucky Historical Society, Kentucky Political Science Association and the Southern Social Studies Quarterly.

Guidelines for the competition may be obtained by contacting Dr. Green, Department of Geography, Government and History, Morehead State University, Morehead, Ky., 40351, or by calling Dr. Green at 783-2128 or 783-2090.

Adams Sworn In, Jan. 6

A total of 31 freshmen legislators, including Representative-elect Sidney Adams, D-Litt Carr, will officially take office during swearing in ceremonies on Jan. 6, the first day of the General Assembly's organizational session.

Because of legislators switching chambers and former members regaining seats, not all the faces will be unfamiliar. But technically, there will be 22 first-year lawmakers in the House and nine in the Senate. Democrats continue to control both bodies; the margin is 29-9 in the Senate and 73-27 in the House.

The new legislators will get their first taste of the General Assembly next month during a two-day orientation session scheduled for the Capitol annex on Dec. 11-12.

During the organizational session, which could last up to 10 days, legislators will choose members of leadership and receive committee assignments for the 1987 interim.

Donovan Scholar Studies History He Helped Make

At first, Taylor Hudson sounds like any other student taking a World War II history course. But a major difference separates this part-time student from his peers: Hudson participated in the war his text book describes.

Hudson is one of 481 active Donovan Scholars at the University of Kentucky, a program directed by the UK Council on Aging which provides free tuition for students ages 65 or older.

In the past school year, about 650 people have taken part in the Donovan program. This semester, 126 are taking courses for credit, while 370 are enrolled in non-credit classes specifically designed for people age 60 and over.

The age limit was lowered for the non-credit courses to include more Lexingtonians who may be thinking about retiring, but have not yet done so.

The courses include art, music, physical fitness, political discussion groups, radio drama, travel and writing. Donovan program staff do the "leg-work" for these undergraduates, taking care of registration, drop-add and all the other paperwork, says Judy Henselman, registrar for the program.

"I find the scholars hard to keep up with...they don't want to sit at home and watch TV or play cards," Henselman said. "Some like to take interior design courses, some are taking weaving and we have quite a few that have the computer science bug."

Hudson, who is in his second year as a Donovan scholar, graduated from UK in 1949 with a degree in industrial psychology. After retiring from Kentucky Utilities Co. in 1985, he decided to come back to school. But why did he choose history?

"I'm here because I want to be," he says. "I'm taking these courses for my own interest." Receiving a degree in only 3½ years left him no time for history courses during the forties, he said.

"All I knew (about WW II) was my own experience—one person's view," says Hudson, who was stationed in the Pacific for more than three years. "I knew nothing about what was going on in Europe or on the home front and I wanted to learn what happened in the rest of the world and the political background."

Most Donovan scholars take courses because they want to learn more about areas they never had time for, says Maude Higgs, staff assistant at the UK Council on Aging.

"I think very few (Donovan Scholars) go back to work," Higgs says. "We've probably had two or three who kept on working and most of them don't go for a degree."

Which doesn't mean it never happens. "We had a man who already had a Ph.D. in chemistry and got a master's in social work," says Higgs. "The last I heard, he was working at Florida International University in North Miami."

REBEKAH'S MEET

The members of Miriam Rebekah Lodge No. 31 met in regular session, Tuesday, Nov. 4, at 7 p.m., with Mabel Jean LeMaster, noble grand, presiding. Several members were listed to receive sympathy and get well cards.

The altar was draped in memory of Lois D. Elmore, past president of the International Association of Rebekah Assemblies. Mrs. Nancy Duff made the official report of the activities of the Assembly to the Lodge. She said that Mrs. Paulena Owens was installed as Page for 1987 with Nancy Duff serving as her Bible Bearer.

The lodge was notified that the Arthritis Foundation has made an annual project of the Order of Rebekahs and Odd Fellows, and the noble grand asked members to keep in mind the upcoming district meeting Dec. 6.

Those present for the meeting were Mabel Jean LeMaster, Venelia Rinehart, Paulena Owens, Lorena Wallen, Mary Zemo, Nancy Duff, Maman Leslie, Violetta Wright, Beverly Hackworth, Mollie Hyden, Pauline Crisp.

The New Year in old Japan was the time for everyone to don new clothes, take three days off from work and visit friends. Gateposts were adorned with pines.

Site Developer Sues Motel Over Payment

The firm that prepared the site for construction of Prestonsburg's Holiday Inn claims in a lawsuit filed in Floyd Circuit Court last week that it has never been fully paid for the work.

Conn and Hayes Mining Co., of Betsy Layne, say they contracted with Pride Construction Co.—the Memphis-based firm which was general contractor for the job—to clear and prepare the site for $158,000. The work agreed on and even some not included in the contract was done between April, 1985 and May, 1986 but $61,065 has been withheld from payment, the suit alleges.

To secure payment, Conn and Hayes filed a materialman's lien against the property on May 29. In September, Pride and the Prestonsburg Inn executed a $122,131 bond with the Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co. in order to release the lien. The bond guarantees there will be funds to satisfy a court judgment if the dispute is decided in favor of the plaintiff.

The suit, filed last Wednesday by Prestonsburg attorney Clifford B. Latta, names Pride, Prestonsburg Inn, and Hartford Accident and Indemnity as defendants. It outlines only the plaintiff's version of the facts in dispute.

Prater Creek Homemakers Meet

Pecans were sold to members at this meeting for the benefit of the Ovarian Cancer Fund.

The Prater Creek Club plans to again adopt children in Floyd county foster care to help brighten their Christmas and birthdays with gifts.

Refreshments were served by hostesses Sonja Ratliff, Ellen Campbell and Willena Campbell to Sandra Roberts, Mona Boyd, Sereda Brown, Loretta Conn, Gail Taylor, Glenna Childers, Maggie Conn, Debbie Tackett, Destaphine Boyd, Darlene Walker and Frances Pitts. The club welcomes new members Margaret Boyd, Patty Gobel and Shelia Spears.

The next meeting will be November 24. Hostesses will be Sereda Brown, Jo Akers, Pauline Akers.

By Alton Huff

A TALENTED TRIO: Brian Hall, left, Bill England, center, and Lenny Hall are expected to be the nucleus of a talented McDowell Daredevil team.

THE SPORTING TIMES

Let's reverse some things and see how the other side reacts. The time has come when they feel the sting of unfair trial and treatment.

Imagine this situation. Junior is incredibly talented in retaining what he hears and has an unbelievable ability to reason and deduct, but Junior isn't allowed to develop his talents.

Why? Well, Junior isn't strong. He can't run fast and he can't throw. In fact, Junior can't play any sport with quality even though he tries his best.

Wouldn't you think that because Junior isn't a great athlete he shouldn't be allowed to take part in academics? It's fair because our rule says before you make the grade you have to make the team.

Pardon. What was that you said? Oh! It isn't right to punish Junior and keep him from what he excels in and loves to do just because he can't play sports.

If Junior's imaginary situation ever becomes a reality, people would be up in arms, claiming a national disaster. But would it really be any different than what we are doing now, only reversed.

When you criticize an athlete because of his grades, just remember how much time he or she has spent trying to bring pride to their respective schools. However, if it ended with only complaining, the situation would be understandable. But unfortunately it doesn't.

The NCAA found reason to pass a new idea which denies an incoming freshman his initial athletic season if the athlete fails to meet a certain level on the American College Test.

First of all, the ACT is an incredibly stupid test of intelligence, and second of all, why isn't an athlete's former school penalized?

The level set for an athlete, not just any student, is more than questionable. One young man admitted that he indulged in the ACT after two years of college and even then wasn't familiar with the testing material. This same person failed to meet requirements established for today's athlete, but now has a Bachelor of Arts degree and graduated with a 2.67 overall GPA.

Also, no school really teaches ACT material, so the athlete, as well as other students, doesn't have a fighting chance. In this case, shouldn't a high school be held responsible for their student's failure to achieve?

A fine of expensive magnitude would probably encourage secondary education to better prepare a student, but most school systems are already so deep in the red that they can't afford to buy students their own books.

There is no question as to the ACT's ineffectiveness to judge anyone's intelligence, but why does an athlete have to, once again, be singled out as an example?

Due to NCAA stupidity, several of the nation's top freshman basketball prospects will sit in the stands while their teammates play and their classmates, some of which didn't meet 48, study.

Let the record be straightened. These aren't dumb people nor are they people who didn't try academically, but actually, they are student athletes who didn't exactly excel in books and who are victims of prejudice and priority confusion.

Remember Junior? He is the super intelligent boy who was denied an opportunity to improve his mentality because his athletics didn't measure up to above average.

Alright, maybe we have been a bit unfair to Junior, but now maybe the athlete's situation can better be understood. He works hard to become good at what he does which is playing sports while all the time striving and struggling to become a better student.

However, if his report card isn't fill ed with A's or if he can't excel on a one-time test opportunity he is penalized. Taken from him is what this person has dedicated most of his life to.

True, education is important but so is athletics. If Junior spends his life in library with a book, his mind may be healthy but what about his body? The heart, lungs, and muscles need education just as much as does the brain.

Junior is in good shape though. He will spend his young days studying, trying to become an intelligent creature of society, trying to make things better for you and me, but what will he become?

Oh, a scientist. Tell us that life exists in outer space or that we evolved from apes. Now this is education in its fullest form.

Yea, Junior will become a doctor! Great, now he can perform controversial acts. Oh yes, education. Now, he could take an even better route and pass a bar exam. Maybe defend a killer or send an innocent person to prison.

Maybe Junior's situation has been blown out of proportion, but so has an athlete and his grades. It isn't that the athlete ignores his studies or fails in school, but the things he learns are beneficial to him in life.

Not all athletes struggle with chemistry or physics, but who uses these things anyway. Right, the same people who developed the atomic bomb, nuclear weapons, and germ warfare.

Education is good and good things can be learned in school but which had you rather see? A young person creating a different way for the world to self destruct or a young person creating excitement on the field of play.

Learning is more than books as intelligence is more than reciting formulas. Athletics is more than competition for education.

You let our incredibly talented freshman basketball players do their thing, and we will let Junior do his.

Hey! Everyone deserves a fair shake, so don't single out our athletes. Go back to your books, NCAA and others, because somewhere along the line you missed something.

MSU Equals Most Wins Ever

Although no conference title or playoff position awaits Morehead State University come schedules end, this season will long be remembered as one of the most successful in Eagle football history.

Most pre-season polls picked Morehead State to finish in the cellar of Ohio Valley competition while viewing this season as just another dismal year in a string of dismal years at MSU.

Three months and many bumps and bruises after the experts told Eagle football players they couldn't win this season, Morehead State checks in with a 7-3 record with the latter win coming this past Saturday.

In their final home game of 1986, the boys of Bill Baldrige upended Youngstown State, 27-24, to match the most wins ever by a Morehead State University team.

In 1928, their second year of football, MSU won seven games. Again in '37 and '66, the last time Morehead captured a conference crown, and again in 1971, but not since then has an Eagle football team won over six games.

In fact, after that 7-3 season of 1971, the Eagles have brought only two winning seasons back to Morehead State, that is until this year's incredible turnaround.

Morehead State had talent to begin the season with eight starters on each side of the pigskin returning, but no one expected Adrian Breen to evolve as the OVC's premier passer or that John Gilliam could improve as rapidly as he has.

No one expected great seasons from any Morehead players but what the Eagles received were solid seasons from several players.

Pride was lacking in the Eagle football camp and surrounding contributors. The school had entertained thoughts of dropping from Division I AA to Division II while rumors circulated that Morehead State University was thinking of dropping football all together.

End of conversation. The pride is back in Eagle country. As this season progressed, community confidence grew, thus begins a love affair between a school's football team and the area around it.

Never before has this feeling expressed its existence in Morehead, Kentucky. No one criticized MSU's football team, because no one ever talked about MSU's football team.

However, one man not only believed in Eagle football, he had lived it and grown to love it. After spending his college playing days as an Eagle defensive lineman, Bill Baldrige worked his way back to his amateur and now is receiving most of the credit.

When Baldrige took over at the helm of Morehead football, the team and the program was about to self destruct, but after two seasons under the hand of Baldrige, MSU began to show signs of progress.

First came an upset victory over rival Marshall and then a record setting comeback in Wichita, Kansas. The Eagles continued their roll until a number one national ranking beckoned them. They did move to number two, but the tide turned and Morehead State fell as fast as they had risen.

Three conferences losses cost MSU their national ranking and an OVC championship opportunity, but Eagle pride didn't disappear. MSU found enough to come back and stop Youngstown State, Saturday.

This new found pride and confidence is what Coach Baldrige and crew is hoping for this Saturday when the Eagles travel to Richmond for a season finale with Eastern Kentucky University.

With a victory over the Colonels, Morehead State will accomplish the obvious, their first-ever season with eight wins.

In order to do this, MSU will have to reverse history and win at Hanger Field. The last time this was made a reality was 16 years ago. The following year MSU defeated Eastern in Morehead, the final time the Eagles have come out on top in this long series.

EKU is currently involved in the hunt for an Ohio Valley Conference title and the Colonels aren't interested in losing to Morehead State, but win or lose, this season has done something none in this decade has been able to, bring football pride to Eagle Country.

Rady Martin canned a short jumpshot with five seconds remaining to lift the Allen Central Rebels past Sheldon Clark 53-51 Thursday in the Cardinal hosted pan-o-rama.

The Rebels were led in scoring by sharpshooting guard Roger Horne, who checked in with 18 points, while Stanton Bentley added 12 in the winning effort.

Talented Daredevils Appear Ready To Repay Patient Basketball Fans

The sometimes critical but always supportive McDowell basketball fans may finally get, this season, what they were hoping for in the recent past, a winning team.

Through thick and thin, mostly thin, these fans remained true to Daredevil teams, and a pre-season glance indicates that these fans may get their reward in 1986-87.

McDowell suffered through a disappointing 6-21 season last year, but the Daredevils return three starters and their six and seventh men from that squad.

Led by 6'2" guard Brian Hall, the McDowell Daredevils have one of their most talented teams in years, while, according to their coach Rick Hall, possessing a winning attitude.

"The biggest difference, and it has already shown, between this team and last year's, is a much more positive attitude," Coach Hall said. "I think we're all working together for a common goal rather than having five or six players working for themselves."

Fortunately for Rick Hall, this McDowell team has more to offer than just a good attitude. Brian Hall scored almost 13 points a game last season and could very well be the best guard in the 15th region.

Hall's physical abilities are obvious to all of those who have opposed him, but Coach Hall expects more than just numbers from his prize guard.

"Brian should be the leader this team has needed the past two seasons," Coach Hall projected. "He certainly leads by example, because he works hard on every aspect of his game, but I'm expecting him to be more of a vocal leader this year."

Hall has incredible range and accuracy on his jumpshot, but what's more impressive is his rebounding ability. From his point guard spot, Hall pulled down six caroms a game, just one indication of his impressive vertical jump.

However, Brian Hall isn't alone on this year's McDowell basketball team. Combined with backcourt mate Dickie Joe Shannon, these two give the Daredevils a guard tandem which can rival most in the region.

Shannon, as a freshman, scored 18 points and hauled down 10 rebounds a game in last year's JV action while also gaining valuable varsity playing time. Shannon and Hall are interchangeable at either off or point guard which gives Coach Hall two talented ball handlers who can also score.

McDowell's perimeter appears to be set while their inside game could become just as strong as this season advances.

Across the front line to the Daredevils average just under 6' 4" and with muscle to go with it. In the middle, Bill England returns to give McDowell strength in the post position.

England, 6' 6" 230 pounds, polished his game as last season progressed, especially on the boards where Rick Hall will need him the most this season. England hauled down nine rebounds a game a year ago while adding eight points per game.

Flanked by Lenny and Reggie Hall England has some definite support inside while Reggie Hall also gives to McDowell another outside shooting threat.

The 6' 3" 190 pound forward scored eight points and seven rebounds a year ago and with another of maturing, should increase those numbers.

Reggie Hall's forward partner, Lenny Hall reflects this year's team determination that Coach Hall is hoping for.

The 6' 2" junior probably won't impress anyone with his flamboyant play but when the night ends Hall usually checks in with a double figure scoring effort while accounting for almost as many rebounds and steals.

Last season as a sophomore Hall averaged 10 points per game with nine boards and this is a player who broke into the starting lineup due to his defensive abilities and hustle.

As far as starters are concerned McDowell may be as strong as any team in the 58th district and if key reserves such as defensive specialist Scott Tackett provides needed support the Daredevils could return to 70s form.

"I think this will be the best team McDowell has had in the past five years," Coach Hall said.

"It will be a team that will grow as the season progresses and if we improve the way I think we can then by the end of the season we will be one of the teams to beat in this district."

The Daredevils have a nice blend of experienced leaders and talented underclassmen who are willing to follow leadership.

Rick Hall says that based on what teams did last year and what they have coming back Allen Central and Pres-tonsburg would have to be selected as co-district favorites but the coach also added that any team, including McDowell, has an opportunity to challenge for a district title.

Coach Hall says it is simply a matter of who improves the most during the season and who is willing to work the hardest.

Riley Prepares Troops For Tough Schedule, District

In a gym filled with sounds of bouncing basketballs and lively conversation, Jeff Riley makes his appearance on the Prestonsburg Blackcat practice scene.

Without a word from the second year Blackcat coach, his players responsively put basketballs aside, take pre-planned positions and proceed with designed stretching exercises.

The only voices heard in the entire gym are those of players calling off numbers. Even practice observers dare not raise their voices above a whisper, not because of fear but out of respect.

Prestonsburg players proceed with a physically and mentally exhausting practice, but no complaints are heard when they are ordered to run. These players also have respect, not only for themselves but for their coach, Jeff Riley, and the control that follows the name.

Two hours and a half after it began, it finished, but nowhere in between did anyone complain. In fact, when Riley's players left the court, most were smiling.

This type control and preparation along with player response is one of the many reasons why county basketball people are considering the Prestonsburg Blackcats as a district title contender.

Starting at the top, Jeff Riley is Prestonsburg's key to success. A former all-stater himself, Riley has, in one year done what some coaches never accomplish, earn the respect of his players and school supporters.

Good leadership is a key to any team, but Prestonsburg fans have both good coaching and talented players to coach. The Blackcats have experience, six seniors who saw considerable action a year ago. The Blackcats have size, for players over 6' 4", and the Blackcats have quickness, Brent Music and Brian Wallace.

Forward David Martin heads a list of four big men who will be counted on to lead Prestonsburg's inside game.

The 6' 6" senior forward averaged just under 13 points and 10 rebounds per contest last season, and his coach is expecting more of both this year.

"I expect David to improve on both of these numbers," Coach Riley said. "He was a very steady player for us last year, and I think he can do much more than that this year."

For help underneath, Prestonsburg will turn to 6' 4" Wayne Akers and a pair of 6' 5" performers, Mark Tuttle and Cory Vickers, with all possessing enough talent to gain the confidence of their coach.

"We're deep with our inside people,"

HIGH FLYING BLACKCAT: Cory Vickers is ready to aid a tough Prestonsburg inside game.

News And Notes From The NFL

Defense appears to be the playoff key, but it doesn't hurt to have a solid running back and a good kicker to go with it, or at least week 11 proved this truthful.

A young defense grew up in Cincinnati, Sunday, and as a result the Bengals are top gun in the AFC Central.

Before Sunday's contest with Seattle, the Bengal defense had yielded over 20 points in all but two games. Youth could have been an excuse, three rookies starting while two others are immediate backups and special situation players, but now these youngsters have behind them confidence-boosting performance.

Cincinnati defenders accounted for two touchdowns in their thrashing of Seattle while shutting down Dave Kraig and company.

Even though the Seahawk offense has been as effective recently as has Miami's defense, holding them to a single score gives promise to Bengal fans and the NFL's top offense.

Out in Mile High Stadium, the Denver Broncos' defense scored more points in the first quarter than did Kansas City the entire game.

Unlike days of old when a typical defense was one of brute force and intimidation figures, the Broncos pride themselves as an opportunistic squad.

The Denver defense scored once from punt formation and again when they recovered a fumble in the end zone. Again, Brono defenders gave their offense a golden opportunity after recovering a Bill Kinney fumble on the one-yard line and this was only the first quarter.

With a defensive showing like this, John Elway picked a good day to have a bad day.

Now, Denver has a small defense, staying alive through speed and error forcing, but another playoff team does it the old-fashioned way, power!

Chicago doesn't pride themselves on their ability of knocking out opposing quarterbacks, but a case could be made of it.

Atlanta's David Archer became the latest victim in a growing list of quarterbacks who have fallen prey to the mighty Bears.

Archer suffered a separated shoulder and will be out for the season. With him goes Falcon playoff hopes, as if they had any left after Sunday's loss.

Without Jim McMahon, the Bears continue to struggle but continue to win. Not by much but thanks to a Kevin Butler 44-yard field goal late Chicago survived in Atlanta, and with Minnesota losing, Chicago stretches their divisional lead to three games.

The New York Giants made that a fact. The Giants received five field goals from Roul Alliegre in countering another explosive Minnesota passing performance. Joe Morris crashed through the 1000-yard barrier but continues to chase Eric Dickerson for a rushing title.

However, Morris would more than likely turn down an opportunity to trade places with Dickerson, especially if the little Giant had to trade teams also.

Fans in Los Angeles have been crying for an effective quarterback for quite some time now, and their cries were answered, enter Jim Everett and exit Steve Dills.

Everett replaced the struggling Dills, Sunday, and promptly threw two touchdowns, but somewhere along the line, the Rams forgot to play defense.

New England rolled up 30 points, the most LA has surrendered this season, but it took a last second Tony Eason to Erving Fryer touchdown combination to turn back the Rams.

Everett brought life back, however, to a dismal Ram offense and if their defense returns to early season form, which can only be expected, Los Angeles could be in store for an exciting football finish.

Oh yes, football in Los Angeles. You just can't count the Raiders out, can you? Everyone has tried since the Raiders lost their first three games, but LA just keeps coming.

Cleveland felt the Raider sting Sunday, dropping them from their division's top slot while LA continues to solidify a personal playoff position.

And talk about quarterbacks, Los Angeles has theirs, but no one can predict which one will be on cue when game time rolls around.

Right now, 38-year-old Jim Plunkett appears to be the man after relieving Marc Wilson last week. Plunkett is in his 16th NFL year. The legs are gone and the body has begun to show wear, but until the veteran takes himself out with poor play, he will be the man, and then Wilson will return to credible form. It has happened repeatedly, and this year has proved no different.

Every football team has their own hero. Many are wellknown and respected throughout the NFL ranks, but a new hero is on the rise in New Orleans, and yes, his position is at running back.

Little known back Rueben Mayes from Washington State is gaining recognition as a rookie of the year choice while helping his Saints move into playoff contention.

Mayes, a third round choice, wasn't expected to contribute heavily. After all, Dalton Hilliard and Earl Campbell were on the scene.

However, Mayes has had several big games including a 131-yard performance this Sunday in St. Louis. Surprisingly, with Mayes and company, New Orleans has a winning record.

The Saints got some help Monday night when Washington dumped San Francisco and Joe Montana.

Much could be decided this week in the NFC's Western division as all teams play each other. Nobody looks as if they want a championship from the West, and neither team is in a wildcard position.

Dallas and Washington will hook up in RFK in a must win situation for the Cowboys. Their multi-million dollar backfield hasn't lived up to expectations, and now Dallas could be all but eliminated early.

The Giants-Broncos matchup will also play a major role in both of their divisional races, but neither team is in immediate playoff termination. Meanwhile the Jets are still primed for an upset.

Texas Ranger manager Bobby Valentine has been selected as UPI's American League manager of the year. Valentine led the Texas Rangers to a second place finish in the AL west and their first winning season in seven years.

Playing V-ball in Texas was profitable for Ranger fans and the youngest manager in all of major league baseball.

The Kentucky Wildcats kept their bowl hopes alive with an upset victory over Florida and Kerwin Bell, Saturday. According to reports, Liberty Bowl personal have expressed interest in having the Wildcats be a part of their post-season festivities.

However, Kentucky will need a win over Tennessee this Saturday which is never an easy task for UK, but if the 'Cats do in fact receive a bid, their fans are to be given credit more so than the football program itself or just as much so.

McDowell High School will get its first taste of basketball competition this week as both the Lady Devils and the Daredevils kick off their seasons.

The Lady Devils serve as host three times this week, Thursday to Dorton, Saturday for Mountain Christian Academy, and Monday when Dilce Combs comes calling.

The Daredevils will have only one contest, Saturday at home, but this game represents Homecoming and the only contest for McDowell before pre-season tournament action.

most of the contest but after experiencing foul difficulty, watched the Cardinals climb back into their winning position but Martin's final shot put this game away for Allen Central.

Coach Johnny Martin says his team played about the way he had expected for their first time out this season but expects more as this year unfolds.

Before the Allen Central-Sheldon Clark contest, the Paintsville Tigers answered any questions that may have developed during the summer.

The Tigers turned back Wolfe County, the team picked to deny Hazard another Sweet Sixteen appearance, showing why they are Kentucky's second ranked pre-season team.

The executive committee governing division II football denied a motion to increase their playoff slate from eight to 16 teams thus forcing Union College to stay home during the playoffs.

Union, finishing this season at 7-3, is ranked 18th in the nation and under first year head coach John Ross has enjoyed one of their best season ever.

According to a Bulldog assistant coach, this season isn't the best won-loss finish, a past 8-2 season is tops, but says Union has never been ranked this high in the national polls.

San Diego pitcher LaMar Hoyt pleaded guilty to misdemeanor charges in exchange for having felony charges lowered to the previous.

Hoyt, a former Cy Young award winner, was arrested earlier when apparently attempting to smuggle illegal drugs into the US from Mexico.

The Padre righthander faces up to 60 days in jail and a substantial fine but sentencing isn't until December.

By no great surprise to anyone, Boston's Roger Clemmons was voted American League's top pitcher for 1986.

Clemmons, who compiled a 24-4 record with a 2.48 earned run average, won 14 consecutive games in one stretch and also recorded a 20-strikeout performance during the past season.

The 24-year-old righthander joins National Leaguer Mike Scott of the Houston Astros as their leagues top hurlers.

Texas Ranger manager Bobby Valentine has been selected as UPI's American League manager of the year.

Valentine led the Texas Rangers to a second place finish in the AL west and their first winning season in seven years.

FALL TURNOVER

By TREY FOERSTER

Although some Southerners believe that a fall "turnover" of a lake is only something that happens up North, all thermoclined lakes do "turn over." It doesn't happen all at once and it may be so gradual it's unnoticed.

What fall turnover is all about is a shut-off period for fish activity on a particular lake. Cold surface water "settles" downward while deep warmer waters rise. Basically, this phenomenon reoxygenates the water. "This turnover homogenizes lakes that have thermoclined in summer," states Bass: A Handbook of Strategies. And we all know what homogenize means, like in milk!

"In a shallow water lake fall turnover can cause problems," states Guido Hibdon, Johnson Pro Staff member based in Missouri. "It's happening right now (mid-September) in the upper end of the lake in the shallows. And when that happens, you have a week of bad fishing unless you're on the lower end of the lake where the water is deeper (30-40 feet) and you're fishing for deeper bass."

Hibdon points out one tactic that may be applicable to reservoirs and impoundments with feeding rivers.

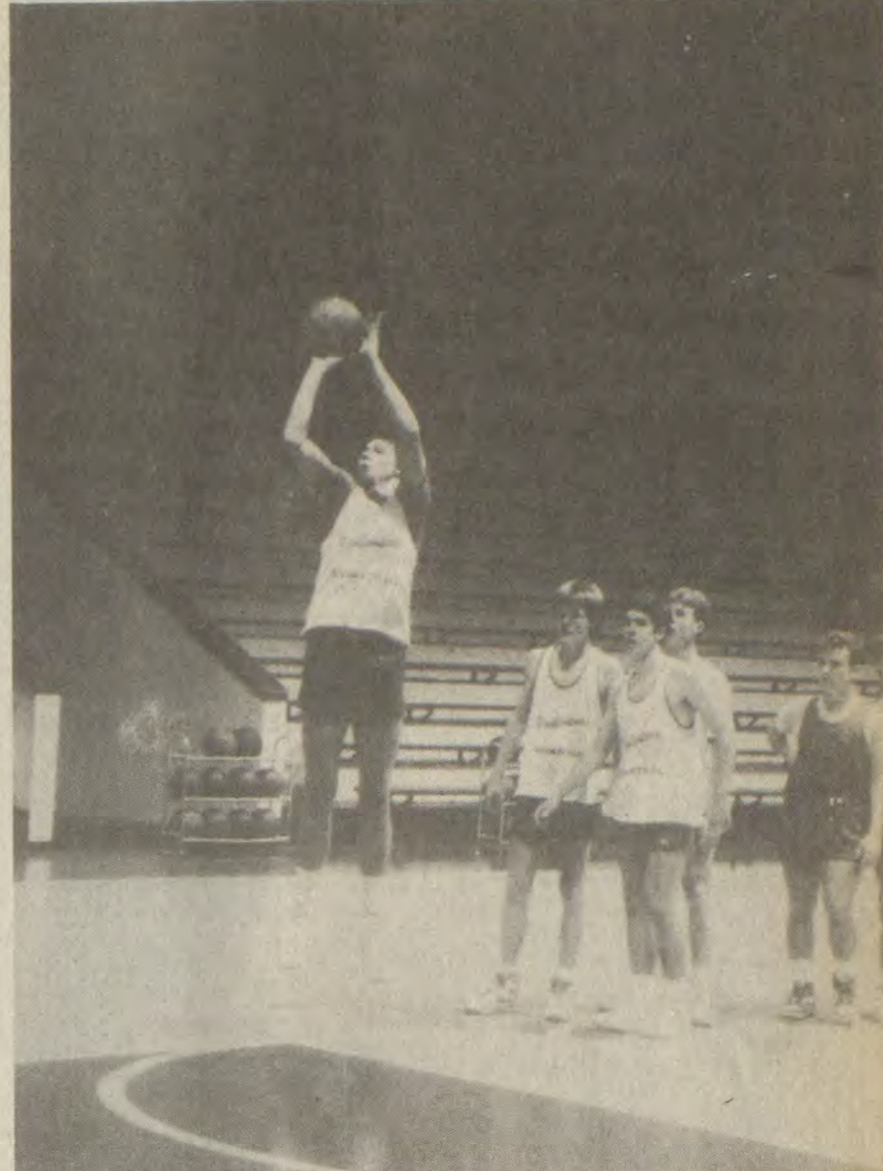

"I was just with some people and we were talking about fishing ahead of the turnover," Hibdon noted while emphasizing that the turnover slowly spreads through the body of water.

"When it hits a dam or the end of a lake, which is far as it can go, you can go back and start over up river where it's already straightened itself out where you can catch bass again."

According to Hibdon, you have to fish a given body of water a lot to be able to detect the tell-tale signs of the turnover. It's a low process but you can detect it by the foamy substance or other matter that turns loose from the bottom. This can be seen by a knowledgeable eye and detected with a sensitive nose.

It should also be stressed that not all lakes with a thermocline turnover at the same exact time. Knowledge of several lakes in your area can mean the difference between an uninterrupted week of fishing and four of five days of frustration.

OMC Parts & Accessories has introduced a new high-thrust aluminum propeller for Johnson and Evinrude 9.9 horsepower and 15 horsepower outboards. The prop was designed for use on motors used as auxiliaries on larger boats, for pontoon boats and for commercial applications. It's available from Johnson and Evinrude dealers.

STRONG PROSPECT: Prestonsburg's David Martin is considered as one of the top big men in this region.

New Sports Gain Devotees

As many top-rated leisure sports have lost popularity, apparently due to energy costs, others are winning devotees, according to a recent sports poll.

Only half as many Americans went motorboating within the last 12 months as in 1972. Bowling has decreased slightly in participation, from 31 percent of those polled in 1964 to only 24 percent in 1980, and golf is down from 14 percent to eight percent playing today.

Sports like jogging that require only leg power are gaining a little. Those with the greatest appeal—in order of popularity now—are swimming, bicycling, bowling, fishing and hiking. Close behind are camping, basketball, flying disc-throwing and softball.

Local Runner In New York Marathon

Sunday, November 2, the 17th Annual New York City Marathon was held attracting athletes from 80 foreign countries and all 50 states of the union. There were 21,501 entrants entered in this year's race with 19,000 plus finishing the 26.2 mile race.

Paintsville's Rick Roberts, who was sponsored by Francis Stores of Prestonsburg, finished 4,742 in the race in 3:34:16. Roberts at one point of the race was in the top 600 entrants but could not hold the pace after the first 10 miles.

Roberts was one of the top three Kentuckians to finish, however. Last year, he ran a 3:02 marathon in Chicago since he couldn't get entered in New York. "I was only about 90% going into the race, since I had a pulled muscle and had to miss a week of running three weeks before the marathon," Roberts said.

Bassin' With the Pros...

Fall Motor Maintenance

By TREY FOERSTER

Up North there are several questions boaters have about winter storage of their motors. Even in the South, some nights can get pretty cold—as frost damage to orange crops can easily testify to.

Here are some tips from two bass pros and the experts at Outboard Marine Corporation (OMC) on how to prevent damage to your investment.

"One thing that can create a problem, and I've had trouble with, is to make sure all the water is drained out of the lower unit and other parts of the motor," cautions David Wharton, Johnson Pro Staff member.

Drain the geargrease in the lower unit and refill it with the manufacturer's recommended lubricant, the experts at OMC tell us. Geargrease lube is available in a variety of containers, from small tubes to gallons. If the lubricant looks like it's been leaking, have a service expert check it out. In fact, Evinrude and Johnson dealers often have fall/winter specials for servicing your motor.

"You should make sure your gas tank is full to prevent condensation in the tank," suggests Wharton. "In fact, you should fill your tank and add OMC's 2± Fuel Conditioner before storage here in the South."

Check the boat's battery. Make sure it's filled with water and fully charged. Clean the terminal posts and connectors so they are free of corrosion.

If you have an outboard with an oil injection system, check to make sure the oil tank is filled. Also check your owner's manual for any special maintenance the oil injection system might require.

According to Guido Hibdon, also a member of the Johnson Pro Staff, people in Missouri who put their motors up for the winter pull the plugs and add OMC's 2± Fuel Conditioner to guard against rust. Make sure your spark plugs are clean and gapped to specification. Also make sure the spark plug terminal connections and wiring are clean, unfrayed and snug-fitting.

Check your propeller. If it is nicked, gouged or bent, take it to your dealer or prop shop for repair. If it's too far gone, put a new one on your Christmas list! Johnson and Evinrude owners might consider OMC's SST Raker stainless steel propellers, which offer greater durability than most aluminum props.

Here's a safety tip: Before removing your propeller, always shift your motor to neutral and remove the key from the ignition switch to prevent the motor from accidentally starting. If you have trouble loosening the propeller nut, try wedging a piece of 2x4 between the prop blade and the anti-ventilation plate to keep the prop from turning.

Before replacing the propeller, lube the prop shaft with grease as specified in your owner's manual. Also check around the base of the prop shaft for monofilament fishing line which may have become wrapped around the shaft. Be sure to check your owner's manual for any special instructions before installing the propeller.

With a proper preventive maintenance and service by authorized dealers, winter storage can be safe and economical. Afterall, you have an investment in your motor which should pay off year after year!

Here's a service tip from the experts at Outboard Marine Corporation, manufacturer of Johnson and Evinrude motors. Before winter storage, and several times each boating season, dab a little anti-corrosion grease on the steering cable ram of remote controlled outboards. The grease will help the steering work smooth and easy and keep it from seizing up during storage, according to OMC.

Shoot-A-Thon at ACHS

Shots were fired from the free throw line in the Allen Central gym, November 1, as a Shoot-A-Thon bounced into play. The approximately $1,000 raised will help finance two mini-parks on the school campus. The first, Leader's Lane, is to be dedicated to retired teachers and the second, Allen Central Shines, will be a display of stones to serve as a public marker of the school.

Of the thirty-one students who participated, the best percentage out of 100 shots was a total of 88% made by Todd Duff, a sophomore. The student who had the most sponsors was Steve Hughes, a senior, who had 15 sponsors. The student who had the most money pledged was Rady Martin, a junior, who had $106.60 in pledges.

Rabbit, Quail And Grouse Season Opens November 20

Hunting for rabbit, quail and grouse will begin across the Commonwealth on November 20, the opening of the season for these small game species.

Rabbit and quail season will remain open through February 15, 1987, while grouse season will run through February 28 of the upcoming year. Trapping and hunting season for furbearers will also begin Nov. 20 and continue through January 31, 1987.

The daily bag limit is four rabbits, four grouse and eight quail. Possession limits are double the daily bag after two or more days of hunting and do not permit a double daily bag limit.

The second half of the split squirrel season also resumes Nov. 20. The period of late November through January 1 is the height of small game hunting in Kentucky. Seasons for squirrel, rabbit, quail, grouse, woodcock, snipe, dove, waterfowl and furbearers are open at one time or another during this time (specific season dates are available from the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources).

Rabbit and quail hunting on Kentucky's farmland and woodlands has produced many memorable outdoor experiences for sportsmen through the years. Although quail have not regained the population density known prior to the winter of 1977, there has been an increase statewide to once again have huntable populations in most parts of the state.

According to a statewide survey of rabbit and quail populations in July, both species were reported down slightly from last year. However, Jeff Sole, upland game program coordinator for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, noted some areas were reported up from 1985 observations.

Quail increased in the central and eastern regions of the state, while more rabbits were observed in the Jackson Purchase and Pennyroyal areas in Western Kentucky than last year. Sole said grouse had a good hatching season this year and numbers have increased in the eastern third of the state, where the largest majority of grouse are present.

The loss of crucial habitat such as weedy fencerows, overgrown briar patches and partially unglazed grain fields has impacted the numbers of small game to some extent and is probably a contributing factor to the slow comeback of quail, according to Sole.

Sole also mentioned that during the 1986-87 season, the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is asking quail and grouse hunters to send in quail wings and grouse wings and rump feathers for future management research. Envelopes to return wings and feathers of harvested birds are available from conservation officers, district wildlife biologists and through the department.

The project will be conducted over a two- or three-year period to help determine hatch dates and bird age, which in turn aids decisions in setting season dates. Hunters should note the information requested on the envelope carefully. Only wings and feathers from one bird should be placed in each envelope. Section A should be filled out on each envelope, while section B should be filled out on only one envelope per hunt.

Section B contains information such as hours hunted, number of hunters in a party and the number of total birds flushed and bagged. If hunters choose to send in more than one bird, Section B information should not be duplicated so accurate information can be recorded.

Outdoors With Andy... "Upland Bonanza"

By A.G. SPENCER

This is my favorite time of year. Thanksgiving is just around the corner; the Christmas spirit is in the air, and the autumn woods are full of the wafting odors of woodsmoke and damp leaves. There are more reasons to be in the hills than pungent smells and memories of hunts past, though. Upland game season comes in tomorrow, and visions of elusive grouse and dodging, twisting cottontails dance in my head. Let's take a furtive peek at what conditions and regulations call for during this upcoming season.

So far, squirrel season has been a real bust, at least for those of us who hunt in Eastern Kentucky. While my compadres in the state game department assure me that a surplus of bushytails have been taken in the central and western parts of the state, the same opportunities have not been present locally. In fact, the harvest was pretty meager in my neck of the woods during the first season (August 16-October 31). That's the bad news.

The good news is that the same squirrels that were in hard-to-find pockets of food concentration earlier in the year are going to be travelling extensively in order to stock their winter larder. What this means for you is that it will be much easier to come across a few squirrels while slipping through the woods.

In the second season, I have always found late season bushytails around holly bushes. Some people say they feed on the berries—I honestly don't know. To be sure, I've never actually seen one feeding on holly berries. However, I do look for holly bushes as much as I do for squirrels late in the year—I usually find one where I find the other. Season lasts until December 31, and the limit is six per day.

The only breed of dog I fool with anymore are beagles, so it should come as no surprise that rabbit hunting is my all-time favorite outdoor activity. While I have seen more cottontails in some years past than I have thus far this fall while working my hounds, it appears that there will be a decent population this season.

A few years ago, I had only one beagle and one shotgun. Some of my favorite memories revolve around those boyhood days, sallying forth in pursuit of a bouncing bunny or two for the table. To my young mind, a rabbit was every bit as noble a quarry as those lions and tigers I read about in books by J.A. Hunter, Jim Corbett and their ilk.

Even now, nothing is any more interesting than the prospects of a cool, sunny afternoon in the November woods with my dogs, a shotgun and a good friend. Most people who have tried it agree—rabbit hunting is great therapy—give it a shot! Season lasts until February 15, with a daily bag limit of four.

While I have already confessed that hunting cottontails is my own personal form of Nirvana, I have spent an increasing amount of time in the past couple of years bird hunting. I've always loved dove hunting, but I am also coming to appreciate the special challenges offered by grouse and quail, as well.

For bobwhites, it is hard to beat some of the counties in the western part of the state. McCracken county is a particularly good hotspot, or at least it has been in years gone by. It is no longer necessary to trek out of your home territory to nail a brace of quail, though, as they are making quite a comeback in this region. Understand that this doesn't mean that you are going to flush a covey every couple of hundred yards. You simply have to get out and do some leg work to find them.

A word of caution is due here. After you take a couple of birds out of the covey, please don't follow up on individual members.

Too many coveys have been "shot out" this way, which, along with declining habitat and changing farm practices, is why Gentleman Bob is having to mount a comeback in the first place. You are allowed eight quail on the day, with season expiring February 15.

Grouse are a thoroughly misunderstood game bird. One joke going around among my hunting cronies concerns a long-time quail hunter who goes north to hunt grouse for the first time. When two birds flush, he remains stock still. His companions look first at each other, then at him. Why didn't you shoot, they asked, to which the novice replied, I'm waiting for the rest of the covey to flush. Right. The most grouse I ever found together were three.

All nonsense aside, don't believe anyone who tells you that a good bird dog is unnecessary for grouse. Sure, you can hunt deer with a Bowie knife, too, but I wouldn't recommend it as a way of putting meat on the table. I favor Britany Spaniels and English Setters, but I'm sure there are other breeds capable of performing adequately.

One other area in which grouse bear little resemblance to quail is in their flushing habits. Grouse will often run just like a pheasant will, flushing far out of range. Thus unusually happens later in the season when they are completely spooked. When they display this tendency to be as wild as a March hare, you might have some success by walking in a stop-and-go zig-zag pattern. Often, this will mesmerize them into holding until you are close enough to get off a shot. Season extends until February 28, with a limit of four birds allowed.

Kentucky's bow season for deer is a generous one, running from October 1 through December 31. Regulations vary from zone to zone (we're in Zone Six here in Floyd county). The judicious use of camouflage clothing, cover scents and pre-season scouting go a long way toward ensuring your success. Don't forget that you should be scouting even as you hunt, though—conditions change! As in everything else, those who adapt to change are the most likely to succeed.

It is worth mentioning here that over a dozen deer hunters are killed nationwide each year from falls out of their tree stands. Also take note of the sad story of a hunter who was killed in McCracken county a few weeks ago when another hunter shot him through the chest with an arrow at just eighteen yards. Whose fault was it? Both of them rate the blame in this case. The man who fired the arrow for shooting at a color instead of identifying his target, and the victim for putting a brown plastic garbage bag over his chest to keep the drizzle off. Moral? ALWAYS make sure of your target before firing! Once loosed, no power on earth can recall an errant bullet or arrow.

I have never turned away anyone who asked to hunt on my land. The key word here is "asked." Unfortunately, many folks do not ask. Those are the ones you can see being ordered off my property every fall.

It is such a simple matter to ask a property owner for permission to hunt on his/her land. If you are courteous and polite, your request will almost always be granted. Even if you are refused, thank the person anyway.

Remember, friends, hunting on someone else's land is a privilege, not a right. It only takes a few rotten apples to taint the rest of the barrel. Until next week, be safe and happy hunting!

BRUNSWICK STEW

While this dish is usually made from squirrel meat, any game bird or game meat may be employed, either singly or in combination.

Ingredients:

- 5 Lbs. game meat, disjointed
- bacon drippings
- 3 mild onions, sliced
- meaty ham bone or hock
- 1 tbsp. salt
- ¼ tsp. black pepper
- 2 qrts. tomatoes, drained (save liquid)
- 4 medium-sized potatoes, sliced and peeled
- ½ tsp. cayenne pepper
- sprinkling of both thyme and parsley
- 2 cups fresh lima beans
- 2 cups fresh whole kernel corn
- 2 cups okra

Directions:

Soak the meat in a mild salt water solution (no vinegar, please!) in a refrigerated pan over night, pat dry with paper towels, then brown in a Dutch oven. Season with salt and pepper, then add onions and continue to brown for 3-5 more minutes. Add ham bone and liquid from the tomatoes, along with enough water and/or chicken bullion to cover. Top the Dutch oven with a lid and simmer on low heat until meat is tender. Bone the meat and piece it into bite-sized chunks, then add back to the liquid along with the tomatoes, potatoes, cayenne, thyme and parsley. Cook for thirty more minutes, then add the rest of the vegetables. Simmer this mixture until the vegetables are tender but not mushy. If frozen vegetables are used, shorten the cooking time after they have been added. You may wish to thicken the stew slightly by adding a little bit of flour at a time until this concoction reaches the desired consistency. Serve with corn bread sticks (try yellow corn meal).

HOOPING IT UP

College basketball has long been a top sports attraction. In 1986, however, fans can see a "different" kind of college basketball. More than 30,000 teams from nearly 700 schools have taken to the courts for Schick Super Hoops, a massive intramural tournament that culminates with Regional Championships held in many NBA arenas.

The tournament features three-on-three halfcourt men's and women's teams. It will first determine the best teams from a particular college, then the top squads from different regions of the country. Now in its third year, Schick Super Hoops will "take the popular activity of intramural basketball and put it on display for NBA crowds," according to John Walsh, Vice President of Marketing, Consumer Health Products Group, Warner-Lambert Co., the makers of Schick razors and blades.

The Regional Championships, which feature tournaments for the four best men's and four top women's teams in various locations around the nation, will be conducted in 16 NBA arenas prior to that night's NBA contest, and in six non-NBA cities, where college basketball thrives.

CAR CARE CORNER

Your Car's Longevity

Many factors contribute to how long your car's engine will keep purring. Knowing which to "key" into and which to avoid may keep your car in shape longer.

High speed, poor driving habits, and stop and go driving conditions can all contribute to premature engine failure. Even more important, though, is the effect of dirt. Engines are subjected to contamination from two sources: outside environment and contaminants produced in the engine by the combustion process.

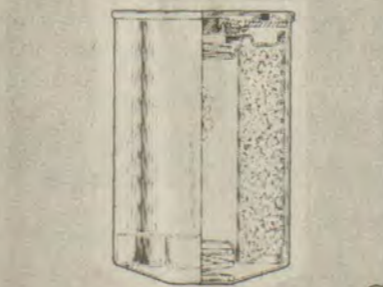

The oil filter is charged with the responsibility of catching and holding dirt. The filter cartridge must be changed at proper intervals to assure a constant supply of clean oil to the engine's moving parts. A good practice is to follow the engine manufacturer's recommendation for the change interval. The filter should be changed every time the oil is changed.

NAPA oil filters are available in a variety of shapes and sizes. Whether you change your own filter—or have a service station do it for you—it's always good practice to examine the used oil filter after it's removed from the engine. Its condition can indicate any potential problem in the lubrication system or reveal any improper operating condition.

A used filter with heavy sludge build-up, for example, could signal

Regular oil filter changes...

...can help keep your car running better.

a coolant leak. Not so long ago, when a vehicle had travelled about 20,000 miles, the engine was considered worn out.

One reason for longer-lived engines—upwards of 100,000 miles—is the improvements in motor oils and the development of effective filtration systems—improvements your car and wallet can appreciate.

During the next month or so, farmers across the Commonwealth will be contacted by mail, telephone and personal interview by representatives of the Kentucky Agricultural Statistics Service.

These workers will be asking questions about crop and livestock production so that major end-of-the-year surveys can be compiled and reports on the surveys can be released by mid-February 1987.

"I urge farmers to cooperate with the statistics service employees when they are contacted," said Agriculture Commissioner David E. Boswell. "The statistics service is responsible for gathering and publishing agricultural numbers, but they must rely on volunteer participation by farmers to provide those accurate agricultural statistics."

"This information they are gathering will be useful to farmers, agribusiness firms, policy makers and other agricultural data users in making present decisions about farming and planning future farm activities. As always, information obtained by the statistics service is confidential," the Commissioner added.

The surveys which will be prepared with the information measure 1986 crop production, fall-seeded acreage of wheat, grain in storage and end-of-the-year livestock inventory numbers.

The reports will be available on the following dates:

Dec. 22—Kentucky and U.S. estimates of hog and pig numbers; Jan. 15—Final 1986 crop production, December grain stocks and 1987 fall seeding of wheat; Feb. 4—January 1987 cattle numbers.

Copies of the reports are free and can be obtained by writing the Kentucky Agricultural Statistics Service, P.O. Box 1120, Louisville, Kentucky 40201 or by calling (502) 582-5293.

Interest Rate Set On Unpaid Taxes

The 1987 tax interest rate charged on unpaid and delinquent state taxes has been set at 8 percent, Revenue Secretary Gary Gillis announced today. This rate becomes effective Jan. 1 and is based on the prime interest rate charged by Kentucky banks during October 1986.

Gillis said the rate on state income tax refunds (withholding or declarations) will also be 8 percent. The rate to be paid on other state tax refunds is 75 percent of the tax interest rate, or 6 percent.

The current tax interest rate is 10 percent. A recent survey of Kentucky banks showed that average prime interest rates in effect during October was 7.95 percent, which was rounded to the nearest whole percent (8 percent). Gillis is required by 1982 law to set the tax interest rate by Nov. 15 for the calendar year.

THE MISSION (PG-Warner Bros.) Starring Robert DeNiro, Jeremy Irons. ★ ★ ★

By J.T. YURKO

The talent behind "The Mission" is considerable. Screenwriter Robert Bolt has penned some of the most literate scripts ever put to film, including "A Man For All Seasons," "Dr. Zhivago" and "Lawrence of Arabia." Director Roland Joffe's last film was the multi-award-winning "The Killing Fields." And Robert DeNiro and Jeremy Irons are two of the best actors around.

When the film won the Best Picture Award at the Cannes Film Festival, it was touted as a top contender for the Academy Awards. A contender it will be, but it's not quite the powerhouse that was expected. Though it is superbly directed, marvelously acted and excellently scored, and features the most extraordinary cinematography of South American jungles ever shot, "The Mission" still falls short.

Bolt's script concerns the conflict between duty and beliefs, between sworn allegiances and individual conscience. Irons stars as a Jesuit priest, a missionary sent to convert the tribes of South America during the mid-18th century. He has to deal not only with the hazards of the jungle and the hostility of the natives, but also with the hostility of the Spanish and Portuguese slave traders.

Most notable of these is DeNiro. For him, members of the Indian tribes are merely merchandise. The two men meet later in the film under different circumstances when DeNiro kills his brother in a duel over a woman.

Irons acts as the confessor of the remorseful slave trader and succeeds so well that DeNiro ends up joining the Jesuits himself.

Everyone in the movie has a mission. The Spanish and the Portuguese want the extensive land and farms of the missions, which the Jesuits have set up so successfully. The church wants to curb the growing power of the Jesuits, and DeNiro and Irons want to save the Indians. Vows of obedience clash with conscience, and all forces clash in a final but futile battle.

The film's most glaring fault is that Bolt's script lacks the sheer brilliance of dialogue needed to enunciate those powerful inner conflicts.

Car, Safety Tips For Thanksgiving, Winter

The Thanksgiving holiday usually signals the beginning of winter weather and a month's worth of holiday festivities and parties. The combination of the two can often prove hazardous.

The Kentucky State Police remind everyone to have their vehicles "winterized". Your vehicle should be in good condition for cold weather and the following tips can make a difference:

- Have brakes checked for balance and adjust if necessary.
- Keep battery, brake and clutch fluid, radiator and transmission fluids filled.
- Test battery for full charge and good connections.
- Use snow tires.
- Change to a lighter, winter weight oil.
- Double-check headlights, brake and turn signals and keep them clean.
- Have the muffler and exhaust systems checked for leaks.
- Put windshield anti-freeze in washer. Wipers and defroster should be in working order.
- Get a complete engine tune-up for easier starts and smoother running.

Certain items should be carried in your vehicle in case of emergency. These may include a shovel, tire chains,

From Washington to Reagan— The Campaign's The Thing

By DAVID M. MAXFIELD
Smithsonian News Service

"Senate Candidates Rush to Television to Define Their Images," a headline in one newspaper announced in July as the 1986 election campaigns began heating up. In their haste, the candidates more and more seem to be bypassing such memorable traditions as town-square rallies and handouts of buttons, banners and ribbons once prized by American voters.

As one political historian puts it, "In the privacy of our respective living rooms, there is no contagious enthusiasm compelling us to demonstrate our political loyalties to each other with insignia of various sorts."

And yet the shift from street parade to TV screen can be overstated, say the members of a research team at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. The staff is examining the role campaign devices play in the political process. "This stuff has been relegated to the back seat," Larry Bird, a member of the team, acknowledges. But "if a candidate doesn't have some of these things, then, in the voter's mind, he or she is not a candidate, does not exist. 'Where's the campaign?' everyone asks."

The Smithsonian collection of campaign memorabilia—at best count, in the neighborhood of 60,000 objects—represents the "selling" of federal candidates from Washington to Reagan. The specimens range from rare, hand-painted banners, sets of china, torches, coins and "curiosities" to T-shirts and videotapes. There are samples of simple, mass-produced lapel button pins (KEEP COOLIDGE); there are the "unusual" items (hairbrushes and electric bow ties bearing the names of favorite sons), and there are one-of-a-kind specimens, among them the ostrich egg political shrine crafted in the '50s by one of Adlai Stevenson's ardent admirers.

Historians and others have written extensively about campaigning, of course, but "the idea of analyzing political campaign objects as devices for the marketing of ideas and candidates has, so far as we know, never been tested systematically," project director Dr. Keith Melder explains. Adds Edith Mayo, another team member: "With objects, you see repeated slogans, repeated visual devices. More than with documents, you see what was reaching the public."

Building an image for a candidate was as important in George Washington's day as it is now. Just the methods of communicating have changed. "Campaigns will take whatever forms are popular and adapt them for political ends," Bird says. "The question is the same in the 1980s as in the 1840s: 'What's effective?'"

Long before television, campaign managers and "media" experts, including writers and artists, experimented with various ways to present their candidates to the public. From the first, campaigns had a military bearing, though sometimes candidates' records were embellished almost beyond recognition. Some images grew out of the personalities of the contenders: Lincoln the "railsplitter" was contrived at the 1860 Illinois Republican Convention but was based on Abe's frontier past.

These images were reflected by various objects that often signaled the opinions and qualities voters wanted in their leaders. Objects "created a bond between the candidate and his supporters, and gave his cause social credibility," Melder says.

At no time was this more true than during the 1896 skirmish between William Jennings Bryan—a crusader for the common man, a foe of gold and monopoly—and William McKinley, a crusader for conservatism, the protective tariff and sound money. To Melder, the campaign was a "hard-fought, expensive, unprecedented image contest."

With the nation in the most severe depression to date, the obvious issue was prosperity and how to regain it. The McKinley camp vehemently preached that leaving the gold standard would guarantee financial ruin, to which Bryan, electrifying the public, declared: "You shall not crucify mankind upon a cross of gold."

The intensity of rhetoric was matched by a voter's need for something to show his loyalty to McKinley or Bryan. "Eventually," notes Fred Voss, a historian at the Smithsonian's National Portrait Gallery, "the trove of mementos for 1896 contained one of the richest assortments of partisan sundries ever to come out of a presidential race."

Whatever the occasion, there was, or so it seemed, a McKinley or Bryan item: Bathers could wash with soap endorsed by either candidate. Republican children could play with McKinley dolls. Their Democratic playmates could blow "free silver" whistles. Ashtrays and cigar holders, walking sticks and watches were but a few products of human activity that didn't escape political partisanship.

It is not unknown for a candidate's image to be crafted (and successfully at that) out of a campaign mix-up. Such was the case in the 1940 contest between William Henry Harrison ("Tippecanoe and Tyler Too") and Martin Van Buren. Harrison, a Whig, came from aristocratic Ohio roots, but a Democratic newspaper suggested that the candidate could best serve his country by retiring to a cabin back home.

The Harrison camp ran with it. In no time, a one-room log cabin was emblazoned on everything from sheet music to cider barrels, giving Harrison an image of humble, downhome origin. Clearly, the campaign had struck the public's love of the "common touch" that threads through later presidencies of Lincoln, haberdasher Harry Truman, peanut farmer Jimmy Carter and, surprisingly perhaps, Ronald Reagan, a man often photographed on horseback or splitting wood at his mountaintop ranch.

In political campaigns, "the show—putting on a display to hold the crowd—is as old as Greek civilization."

Political historians consider the 1840 contest "the first media campaign," and for good reason. An outpouring of manufactured keepsakes made possible by the steam of the Industrial Revolution assured that each candidate would have a supply of snuff boxes, kerchiefs and ceramics for his supporters. The campaign broke other ground. The distribution across the nation of the likeness of Harrison on ribbons and other devices marked one of the first times voters could see how their candidate looked—no small matter then or now.

In the 1830s and '40s, many items such as plates, spoons and pitchers were produced with women in mind. Though they were not enfranchised, women had considerable indirect and informal influence in the political process in those days. "Women," Mayo explains, "were considered mothers of the Republic," and the objects were "associated with the Victorian cult of the home—a refuge, a place of sanctity. But the paradox," Mayo points out, "was that these items were mass produced."

Campaigns, of course, are never all sweetness and baby-kissing. Vilification has its own long tradition. As early as 1828, Andrew Jackson, the great populist, was hit with accusations of being a would-be emperor, a murderer, duelist and adulterer, among other things. His opponent, John Quincy Adams, was written off by many as an effete snob. In the media extravaganza of 1840, the Harrison forces, having made hay of their critics' sniping, made sure that Van Buren was down and out by "suggesting" that he was a corseted, luxury-lover who used French perfume and dined at the White House on goldplated tableware—all that during the depression of 1837.

Surviving political memorabilia often has special value in that the objects show graphically why a campaign went awry. Voss points to the 1856 campaign of John G. Fremont, who had won fame as an explorer of the American West. The new Republican Party's first candidate campaigned on the slogan "Free Men, Free Soil, and Fremont." Such "blatant trumpeting of the Republicans' hostility to slavery proved too extreme" for North and South alike, Voss says, and in the end Fremont was soundly defeated.

Other election-year objects provide researchers a vivid comparison of competing campaign styles. The 1952 Eisenhower-Stevenson contest came at the outset of the television age. The Republicans, Bird explains, best understood and utilized the vast communications changes taking place.

Bird shows a visitor a brochure from Ike's camp. It bears large black-and-white photographs and terse captions. If the resemblance to a TV spot is somehow missed, a line of type on the cover advises: "Reading time—40 seconds." A second brochure, a Stevenson ad, looks dated for its time. "It borders," Bird says, "on the visual, but there is a lot of print compared to the Republican ad."

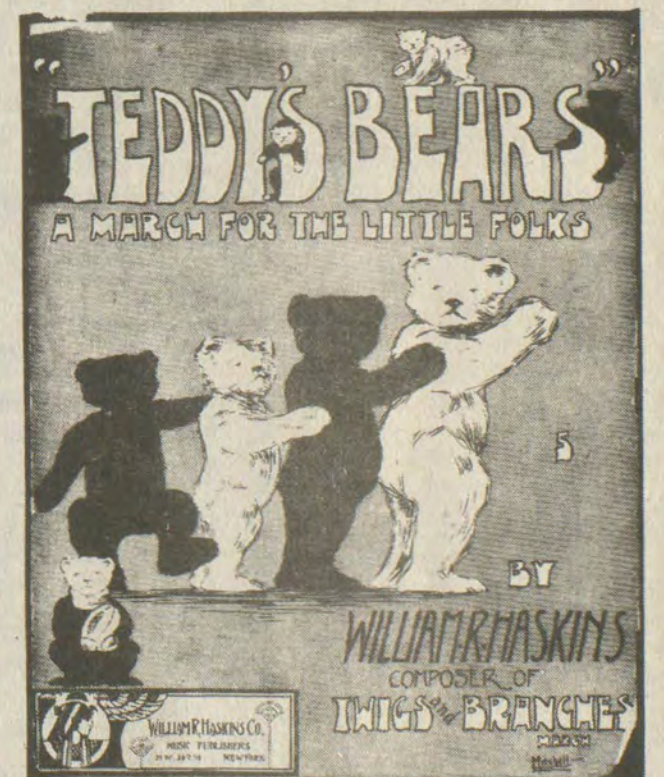

Whether the campaign devices come in the form of buttons or the latest 20-second TV spots, the Smithsonian political historians agree that they surely add to the spirit and color that has long been part of American campaigns. Says Melder: "It seems to me that the serious study of politics has tended to overlook the entertainment side of it. The show—putting on a display to hold the crowd—is as old as Greek civilization."

The "selling" of presidential candidates dates long before the TV era—in fact, to the time of George Washington.

Carter for President

Sheet music has long been part of campaigning, and in 1904 the Roosevelt forces put "Teddy's Bears" into high-stepping action to win votes.

Ceramic objects were especially popular in 19th-century campaigns. In 1848, Zachary Taylor, "Old Rough and Ready," appeared on delicate housewares.

William Harrison's forces were on a roll in 1840 with this ball that historians say helped usher in the "first media campaign."

Election year campaign objects have included bumper stickers, hats, buttons, medals, pins, bandannas, coins, T-shirts, videotapes and board games.

Left Beaver School Site To Be Reviewed by Wright

A state Department of Education official will be asked to take another look at sites on Left Beaver Creek that might be suitable for a consolidated school.

The decision by the Floyd Board of Education to ask for another site review by Dr. Gene Wright, director of the Education Department's building and grounds division, reflected the board's desire to find "a middle area, where no child will have to travel a great distance." Superintendent Ray Brackett said later.

Speaking for a large contingent of Wheelwright residents, Paul Bailey had earlier asked the board to build the Wheelwright-McDowell consolidated school "in a center location, such as the Price-Hi Hat area."

"We are definitely against going all the way to Minnie," said Bailey, in reference to an early rumor that the board was leaning toward a Minnie property now shared by the Old Regular Baptist Church. The board should consider travel time, road conditions and transportation costs in making its decision, Bailey said.

After visiting the area earlier, Wright approved five properties—on KY 122 at Minnie, just above Orkney, at Clear Creek, under the brow of Meade Hill, and above Bypro Junction—as potential construction sites. Since then, yet another potential property in the Price area has been brought to his attention, Brackett said.

A major consideration in the choice of site is the cost of buying it and preparing it for construction, Brackett said. "We don't want site purchase and development to eat up construction dollars," he said.

Time is also a consideration, said

Brackett, who warned that state construction funds for new schools here could be lost if there is protracted controversy over the sites. Of the four planned schools, only the Prestonsburg middle school has its site, although property negotiations are under way for the Allen and Right Beaver grade school projects. State authorities recently gave Floyd administrators an extra 90 days to wrap up the Allen deal and 120 days to finalize site purchases on Right and Left Beaver Creeks.

A proposal that drew murmurs of scorn from the Wheelwright group was put forward by Carlotta Shannon, who suggested that a new school be built at McDowell—where she has two children in school—and that Wheelwright High School be renovated. "Let's keep Wheelwright Wheelwright and McDowell McDowell," she said.

In connection with the new school construction, a citizens group, the Floyd County Education Forum, invited board members, school administrators, and the general public to a meeting at 7 p.m. on Nov. 24 at Betsy Layne High School. The meeting is to discuss building plans with the construction managers and architects. The design of the Prestonsburg Middle School is of particular concern, one member of the group said later, because middle school designs are relatively untried in this state.

Pharmacy Footnotes

NEW FOR ASTHMA

About 14 million Americans have asthma. Up to now, the preferred treatments for asthma have been bronchodilators and steroids. Each group of drugs treats the symptoms of asthma. Each has side effects. Now, a preventive approach is being taken with a drug called cromolyn sodium. Inhaled through a dispenser, it works by disarming sensitive cells that line airways. Once triggered, these cells release histamine and other secretions that bring on coughing and wheezing. Cromolyn sodium makes the cells less prone to being triggered by smoke, pollen, exercise, etc. To work, the new drug should be taken 15-30 minutes prior to exposure to a triggering agent.

COOLEY APOTHECARY is your local pharmacy that truly cares about you and your family. Our pharmacy is well known throughout this area as the "Drug Store with a Difference". Take advantage of our everyday low prices here at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

McCutcheon Given "Shock" Probation

His initial charge of armed robbery was reduced in the course of plea bargaining to burglary and now, after serving two months of a two-year sentence, Terry McCutcheon has been released from prison on probation.

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley granted a petition for "shock" probation filed by McCutcheon's attorney. Public Defender Norm Bennett. The term is used of probation granted to first offenders whom the stark, if brief, experience of prison is presumed to have rehabilitated.

McCutcheon, 23, of Prestonsburg, was accused of holding a knife to Henry Mulkey, of Banner, an attendant at the TCT Truck Stop on U.S. 23 at Stanville, on Dec. 4 last year, and taking $2000 from a cash drawer.

P'Burg, Rosenberg Win Science Honors

Although Johns Creek High School was the overall winner, Prestonsburg High School distinguished itself in written academic competition sponsored Nov. 8 by the Eastern Kentucky Academic Conference.

A first place in science, second in math, and third-place tie in humanities gave Prestonsburg a total of 22 points overall, just behind Johns Creek, which won first places in social science and humanities and tied for third in science, for a total of 22.8 points.

Virgie was third overall, and Pikeville fourth.

Among individual honors, Mike Rosenberg, of Prestonsburg, took first place in science.

Prestonsburg is also scheduled to participate in academic competition sponsored by a pizza franchise on Nov. 22, when teams from 32 Kentucky high schools will gather at Ballard High School in Louisville for the first annual Mr. Gatti's Holiday Academic Bowl.

Times Will Publish Semester Roll Only

The Times regrets that it will not be able to publish honor roll listings for each six-week period because of the excessive amount of time required for typesetting and proofreading. We will, however, continue to publish both grade and high school listings for the semester grading periods.

In the interest of fairness, if any school's first six-week honor roll was not published, we will accept it for publication during the next two weeks.

In Memory of Ellis Tackett

This is in the memory of my husband, and loving father. Ellis was a loving and caring man. He passed away November 14, 1985. This past year has been a long and lonely one without him. Everytime you see something that reminds you of him so much. His favorite chair, his pickup truck, his favorite football team, so many things that bring back the hurt and pain of his not being here. Ellis was a member of the Old Regular Baptist Church for about 35 years. His seat has been empty for awhile now, but I think his memory in the Old Church is still a strong one. I would like to thank all the friends and neighbor's who have given kind words to the family this past year, trying to make all of us feel better. I think Ellis is in Heaven watching over us. Someday I hope to meet him again in his happy home.

Written by his loving wife, Mellie, and loving children.

HE IS JUST AWAY

I cannot say, and I will not say That he is dead—he is just away! With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand, He has wandered into an unknown land, And left us dreaming how very fair It needs must be, since he lingers there. So think of him faring on, as dear In the love of There and the love of Here; Think of him still as the same, I say: He is not dead—he is just away!

In memory of Jack Nelson on his 65th birthday, November 11 1986.

I walked beside you many times in memories of the times we shared. I laugh aloud, remembering things you said. I'm touched when I recall the things you did for me and how much you cared. Sometimes I can hear your laughter in my thoughts and mind. And I remember the smile on your face that brightened my every day.

Missed by your daughter, Carole Collins.

WHAT IS KNOWN ABOUT SUDDEN INFANT DEATH SYNDROME?

Sudden Infant Death Syndrome, or SIDS, most commonly strikes infants between one and twelve months old. No one knows what causes it. These infants, about two of every 1,000, simply die in their sleep, without any sign that they are ill.

Doctors are now investigating exactly how and why SIDS strikes, but little is known at present. Certain factors, however, are known to be associated with SIDS. It seems that infants who have died from SIDS often are boys, twins, were born prematurely to younger mothers or to mothers who smoke cigarettes. These factors are not proven causes yet of SIDS, but they may help in the research being done.

It is known that the deaths are no one's fault. SIDS victims are cared for as carefully as are most infants, and there is no reason to believe parental neglect has anything to do with their deaths. That, in part, is what makes SIDS so baffling.

We have more information about SIDS and how to help the families who experience it. Please call us or stop by.

Former Dean Returns As President of MSU

Dr. C. Nelson Grote, a former Morehead State University dean, will return to campus as president on July 1 after a 15-year absence.

MSU's Board of Regents voted unanimously Friday (Nov. 14) to name Grote as the university's 11th president, following a nearly three-hour executive session.

Dr. Grote, currently chief executive officer of the Community Colleges of Spokane, Wash., served as dean of MSU's College of Applied Sciences and Technology from 1966 to 1971 and as Division of Applied Arts chair for six years previously. Leaving MSU to become president of Schoolcraft College in Livonia, Mich., Grote accepted the Spokane post in 1981.

Moving that the regents select Grote to succeed current President A.D. Albright, Board Vice Chairman Edward T. Breathitt cited his "outstanding leadership abilities" as demonstrated in his previous posts and his commitment to Morehead State.

Earlier, Board Chairman Louie B. Nunn told the more than 200 faculty, staff, students and townspeople attending the meeting that MSU "is at a crossroads. The action we take will not only affect the immediate but the long-range future of this University."

While all the finalists for the post were "worthy," Breathitt said, "at this time Dr. Grote is the choice we should make."

The apparent front-runners, Dr. Grote and MSU alumnus Dr. James Adams, superintendent of the Indianapolis Schools, visited the campus Wednesday and Thursday, respectively to meet in public forums with townspeople, MSU faculty, staff and students.

In those discussions, Dr. Grote repeatedly made the point that he and his wife, Wilma, considered Morehead home and that the MSU presidency was the only position that would lure him from his present post.

"We want to come home," he said.

Family Week Listed Nov. 23-29 in County

Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo issued Monday a proclamation calling for the observance of Family Week in Floyd county, November 23-29.

The proclamation said, in part, "The family is the basic strength of any free and orderly society, and it is appropriate to honor the family as a unit essential to the continued well-being of Floyd county...I recommend that youth organizations, service clubs and other civic groups and churches...during this week...focus attention on family solidarity."

The proclamation coincides with the designation of Thanksgiving week as National Family Week by joint resolution of Congress and proclamation by President Reagan.

"This is a very special place," he added, noting that although born in Illinois he had "adopted Kentucky. I know eastern Kentucky people, I love eastern Kentucky people and I believe I can make a contribution," he said.

Dr. Grote, whose 37 years in education includes 27 in higher education, also stressed that he would not come with "a briefcase full" of plans, but that he wanted to have an opportunity to analyze the issues.

In his first news conference Friday evening as president-elect, the 58-year-old educator/administrator said he planned to visit the campus frequently over the next few months and would "hit the ground running on July 1."

Admitting to feeling a sense of awe, Dr. Grote explained that feeling was not from the size or complexity of the challenges or the title, but from "the expectations of the people here and what they think MSU should be in years to come. It's a heavy responsibility for us," he said.

Dr. Grote said he would place an emphasis on professional development activities for faculty and staff and on marketing the school not only in student recruitment but by following up efforts already begun by Dr. Albright to restore the University's image in the region. He also said he will focus on MSU's ties to public education in the region and to Kentucky's economic development.

Committing himself to "systematic change," Dr. Grote said, "One has to sense how much change an institution can absorb over a period of time."

Dr. Grote received his bachelor's degree from Eastern Illinois University, his master's degree from the University of Missouri and his doctorate from the University of Illinois. He is a former public school teacher and was a vocational education administrator for four years with the Kentucky Department of Education.

"Managing Our Miracles" Tackles Ethical Questions

The business of medicine, medical care of the elderly, and malpractice are the featured topics on the final three episodes of "Managing Our Miracles: Health Care in America," Thursdays at 7:00 p.m. on KET.

"The Business of Medicine," on November 27, features a lively debate on how we should contact the very personal business of medicine. More than 35 million Americans today are not covered by any form of medical insurance, yet one night's stay in a hospital can average as much as $1,000. Although the quality of health care in America is adequate, some argue that only the very rich and the very poor can take advantage of it.

"Final Choices," a program about medical care for senior citizens, is the topic explored December 4. Senior citizens use more prescription drugs and consume a greater portion of our health care services than any other group in society. While many elderly patients benefit from this care, some are certain to die regardless of the treatment prolonging their life. This program explores questions such as whether there is such a thing as a "right to die" or a "right to be killed."

Are excessive malpractice judgments responsible for the rising cost of health care? Who benefits most from these lawsuits—the injured party? the attorneys? the insurance companies? These and other related questions are debated hotly in "Malpractice," the final episode of the series airing December 11.

"Managing Our Miracles: Health Care in America" is produced by Columbia University Seminars on Media and Society in association with WQED/Pittsburgh and WNET/New York.

The Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division assessed $1,021,603 in child labor civil money penalties against 758 employers who were found to be illegally employing 6,330 minors, according to the Labor Department's Annual Report for Fiscal year 1985.

Free Booklet Explains Harmful Effects Of Fat

Most of us don't like to think about fat, whether in our diets or around our waists, but its importance to our health makes it a subject we should know more about. A new booklet from the American Institute for Cancer Research, "All About Fat and Cancer Risk," removes the mystery from dietary fat and makes clear how important the fat in our diet is to the health risks we all face.

While we're usually aware of fat in fried foods or as visible fat on meats, many people do not realize that there are hidden fats in many of the foods we enjoy. Common foods such as avacados, most dairy products, chocolate, nuts, most cookies, the powdered dairy creamer we use in our coffee, and many other common food items all add a great deal of fat to the average diet.

According to the Institute booklet, "All About Fat and Cancer Risk," the average American diet gets about 40 percent of its calories in the form of dietary fat. Because of the links which some research has shown between high fat diets and cancers of the breast, stomach and colon, the American Institute for Cancer Research recommends reducing fat to 30 percent or less of daily calories. This is similar to the recommendation of the American Heart Association, which cites links between high fat diets and heart disease.

A first step in cutting down on fat in the diet is understanding which foods are high in fat. This might seem hard to do at first, but labels for most processed foods show fat content in the form of grams of fat. The AICR booklet explains that to figure out how many calories that represents, simply multiply the number of grams of fat in a serving by 9, since each gram of fat contains approximately 9 calories.

A good general rule of reducing fat in your diet is to simply eat more fruits and vegetables, since these foods contain no fat or very small amounts. Reducing the amount of red meat and whole milk dairy products is another way to reduce fat in the diet. The AICR booklet suggest other simple techniques for lowering fat in your diet, such as trimming fat from meat, substituting fish, chicken or turkey for red meats, using low fat or skim milk, and making or buying low fat salad dressings.

Fat is an important part of our diets, and necessary for good nutrition and good health. But excessive fat in our diets is a definite health risk. To find out more about dietary fat, about the health risks it represents, and tips on how to reduce it in your diet, write for a free copy of "All About Fat and Cancer Risk." To receive your copy please send a stamped, addressed, business-sized envelope to American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. FC, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Help Your Heart

American Heart Association

Toward a Smoke-Free Young America

Someday tobacco products may disappear from American society. The Surgeon General of the United States believes the first step toward that objective is to bring about a smoke-free generation of young people. He expects that to happen by the year 2000, and the American Heart Association shares that goal.

The emphasis is on youth because most smokers pick up the habit between the ages of 14 and 17.

To help create a smoke-free young America, the AHA is working with other voluntary health agencies on three fronts: increasing the federal cigarette excise tax, eliminating or restricting tobacco advertising and promotion, and assuring the rights of nonsmokers through legislative means.

Higher cigarette costs usually mean lower sales to teens, so an increase in the federal excise tax should help reduce the number of young smokers. In fact, many economic experts believe that a 10 percent increase in the price of cigarettes would cause a 12 percent drop in the number of teenage smokers as well as a decrease in the number of packs sold. The AHA supports doubling the federal excise tax rate from 16 to 32 cents per pack, with future rates tied to inflation. This could result in an estimated 850,000 fewer young smokers.

Some teenagers start smoking regardless of the cost. Many are lured to the habit by cigarette advertising. A ban on all tobacco advertising is supported by most health organizations, including the AHA and the American Medical Association. Even though tobacco companies claim young people are not the targets of advertising, cigarette ads portray smokers as people who enjoy professional, social and athletic success. The underlying message to teenagers is that smoking is an integral part of this lifestyle. If they dream of success, the cigarette becomes a part of that dream.

Another promotional tactic is the distribution of free cigarettes at sporting events and concerts. Teenagers may be introduced to smoking in this manner, even though industry guidelines limit distribution to adults only. Tobacco companies also recruit new smokers through sponsorship of athletic events, concerts and rodeos.

Even with the amount of money spent on cigarette advertising, nonsmokers are now in the majority. "No Smoking" signs are becoming almost as widespread as the billboards which tout cigarettes, and one reason is that many communities are adopting clean indoor air laws. Smoking is being restricted to smaller and often less accessible areas. Schools are encouraged to join the trend and eliminate student smoking areas. AHA volunteers have been instrumental in convincing school boards to implement tougher policies on smoking, and in helping secure passage of ordinances which prohibit smoking in some public places.

Success will come only with the efforts of people and organizations dedicated to helping young people avoid the addiction of nicotine. Through the work of the American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society and the American Lung Association, the Surgeon General's goal of a smoke-free young America by the year 2000 can be reached.

Payment May Be Made Directly To Doctor

Medical insurance payments under Medicare can be made in two ways—either directly to the doctor or supplier, or directly to you, the patient. If the payment is made directly to the doctor or supplier, it is called an "assignment."

The assignment method of payment can save you time and money. Under this method, the doctor or supplier agrees that his or her total charge for the covered service will be the charge approved by the Medicare carrier.

Medicare pays the doctor or supplier 80 percent of the approved charge after subtracting any part of the $75 annual deductible that you have not met. You are responsible only for that part of the $75 deductible that has not been met, and for the remaining 20 percent of the approved charge.

If payment is made directly to you, the doctor or supplier can bill you for the actual charge even if it is more than the amount approved by Medicare.

Each year doctors and suppliers are given the opportunity to sign agreements that make them "Medicare-participating" doctors and suppliers. If they do sign such an agreement, it means that they have agreed in advance to accept assignments on all Medicare claims.

The names and addresses of "Medicare-participating" doctors and suppliers are listed in the "Medicare-participating Physician/Supplier Directory." The directory may be reviewed at all Social Security offices and at State and area offices of the Administration on Aging.

Mountain Manor Rated "Superior"

Mountain Manor of Prestonsburg, has been rated "superior" for an intermediate level of care under Kentucky's nursing home reform law. The designation is made by the Cabinet for Human Resources Division of Licensing and Regulations and is prepared for each long-term care facility in the state following the facility's annual inspection.

Human Resources Secretary Al Austin said, "One section of Kentucky's nursing home reform law allowed for the designation by rating of the individual levels of care, in order for the consuming public to get some idea of the type of service being provided under state regulations."

Levels of resident care not attaining "superior" status are designated either "unrated," which indicates that the service is in compliance with at least the minimum standards, or "conditional," which means that this particular level of care in that facility is in non-compliance with the standards.

Woodrow Dunn, director of the Division of Licensing and Regulations, said, "It's important for the public to understand that each separate level of care is rated individually. Many facilities today offer two and sometimes three levels of residential care and each has its own rating." Levels of care at long-term care facilities include personal care, intermediate care, intermediate care/mental retardation-developmentally disabled, nursing home and skilled nursing care.

In order to achieve a "superior" rating, a facility must meet two requirements for the level of care involved. "First, it must be in compliance with the minimum standards for licensing in each of 11 areas," said Dunn. "Then the facility must exceed those minimum standards in at least six of the 11 areas of its operation." Those 11 areas are administration, nursing services, dietary and nutritional services, life safety code, physical environment, physical and restorative therapy, social services and activities, drugs and biologicals, medical services, patients rights and record keeping.

Dunn said, "I believe this process provides a real incentive to the long-term care facilities in Kentucky to achieve the highest possible rating. Achievement of the 'superior' designation for an individual level of care should tell the public something about that facility, just as the other ratings will serve as an indication of the track record as well."

Is It Stuffing Or Dressing?

Spice up your holiday meals with baked items using sausage as an ingredient.

A good place to start is with the traditional menu favorite known by most people as either stuffing or dressing.

If you have ever been confused by what to call it, it really doesn't matter. Some bake it separately in a pan and call it dressing.

In other parts of the country, it is more typical to stuff the mixture in the holiday turkey or goose and call it stuffing.

The most popular southern varieties are made with a mixture that is half cornbread and half biscuit or bread crumbs. You can serve up a spicy version of this traditional favorite with this recipe for Southern-style sausage stuffing:

SOUTHERN-STYLE SAUSAGE STUFFING

- 1 pound sausage
- 1 cup chopped celery
- 1/4 cup chopped onion
- 1 recipe Martha White Hot Rize Biscuits, crumbled (about 5 cups)
- 1 recipe Martha White Country Style Cornbread, crumbled (about 5 cups)
- 1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper
- 2 cans (14-1/2 ounces each) chicken broth (about 4 cups)

Saute sausage, celery and onion. In a large bowl, combine sausage mixture and remaining ingredients; blend well. Stuff mixture into bird and roast according to standard roasting directions. Mixture may also be baked in a greased 13x9x2 inch pan at 350° F for one hour or until lightly browned. Makes about 12 cups or 10 to 12 servings.

Note: To simplify stuffing making, save leftover biscuits and cornbread. Crumble, place in plastic bags and freeze for later use.

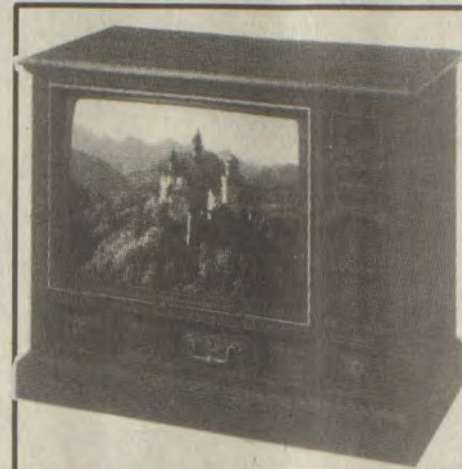

For a recipe collection of baked items for the holidays using sausage, including Hot Lanta Sausage Balls and Texas Twirls, write to The Martha White Kitchen, Dept. 100, P.O. Box 58, Nashville, TN. 37202.

Because of the moon's tidal drag, days are increasing irregularly at the average rate of about a millisecond per century. Some of course, seem to have increased by much more than that.

A dream vacation, Sagittarius?

ARIES (Mar 21-Apr 21) Try to avoid any litigation this week. "settle out of court". Your best role is that of the peace-maker - can you believe it? You will be inviting someone to spend Thanksgiving with you but you won't get an immediate answer. A secret romance could get started.

TAURUS (Apr 22-May 22) This would be a good week to renew an old friendship - call or write. You could easily use your talents for a humanitarian organization. Go out with the loved one, you'll make new friends and have a good time. Either get your sex life straightened out now or you probably won't ever.

GEMINI (May 23-Jun 21) You won't be able to sell anything this week, but lookout the rest of the year. You'll be throwing your weight around and if you land in hot water, weight won't be what you need. Work long and hard now so you can take time off next week. A relationship can be made more exciting and rewarding.

CANCER (Jun 22-Jul 20) A perfect week to begin anything unusual or exotic. Keep the faith, your love life could begin to improve any day. If you're planning to go away for Thanksgiving, make all the arrangements immediately. If you're staying home, plan an old-fashioned holiday.

LEO (Jul 21-Aug 20) You could come up with an exciting invention or technique this week. Don't allow pride to blind you when someone comes collecting for a good cause. Mars is moving into your eighth sector and will stimulate your creativity. You will be trying to buy something that can't be bought - only earned.

VIRGO (Aug 21-Sep 22) You will be doing lots of running - maybe even short trips. You are probably very impractical about career goals but your luck may take care of you. Call an old loved one; if anything is ever going to get restarted, it's now. Plan a traditional Thanksgiving for all the family, and even neighbors.

LIBRA (Sep 23-Oct 23) You will be depressed if you don't get your way in everything this week. Your mother will be playing a big role in your life - you may call it interfering. Watch out for a Leo who wants to "help" you financially. A wonderful idea on how to solve a problem will begin to develop.

SCORPIO (Oct 24-Nov 23) Don't gamble or even speculate now. stick to insured investments and activities. You are even more ingenious than usual and can work wonders. Use some of this talent to glean self-understanding and you'll be better off. Don't argue with any close female, you'll cut your own throat.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 24-Dec 21) Move on those business plans, all your opposition will melt. Time to plan next year's vacation - how about the one you've always dreamed of? Spend this weekend getting everything out of the way so you can enjoy Thanksgiving. You'll have to work behind-the-scenes to do it.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 17) You will be in a serious but creative mood this week. Anything but the most trivial communication will be difficult for you. If a friend comes along with a "can't miss" opportunity, try to miss her/him. Your financial acuity leaves something to be desired and professional advice is in order.

AQUARIUS (Jan 18-Feb 16) You will start off the week catching up on work at home. If you've been considering any changes in your life, this is the time to begin. You will be getting in the Thanksgiving spirit and planning for family and friends. Spend some time pondering how to keep the holiday spirit all year round.

PISCES (Feb 17-Mar 20) You'll be in your element this week and could wind up doing anything anywhere. Take a good look at your tax situation, there's still plenty you can do this year. Mars is entering your sign and you will have much more energy. Take care of everything that has to be done before Thanksgiving so you can Enjoy!

The History Corner...

"Boone and Our Forefathers"

By A.G. Spencer
Historians tend to agree that Daniel Boone met William Robert Leslie in 1789 somewhere in the Virginia border country. Why is this significant to us? Boone was very familiar with West Fork of the Big Sandy, having camped there the previous winter. Leslie, an ardent adventurer in his own right, was equally familiar with its East Fork. In fact, he had tried to establish a settlement there the previous year. The settlement failed as a result of harsh weather and incessant Indian hostilities. All Leslie had garnered for his troubles was a slit throat. The Indian who slit it did not pull his blade deep enough, leaving Leslie alive and his attacker dead.

In 1790, Boone guided Leslie to the mouth of Johns Creek. Boone believed that the area would prove more secure than the mouth of Pond Creek, where Leslie had attempted his earlier settlement.

Upon arriving near Blockhouse Bottom, just over into the present Johnson County, Boone and Leslie learned of Mathias Harman's abortive attempt at maintaining a permanent settlement and stockade there (1789-1790). With the knowledge of Harman's failure, they decided to abandon any immediate plans to settle there.

That Boone had achieved a high level of notoriety is obvious by the fact that William Robert Leslie, himself an experienced woodsman and Indian fighter, followed Boone's lead. They also swapped rifles and powder horns, with Leslie saving these items of Boone's for posterity.

The next record we have of Daniel Boone's being in Kentucky is not until 1795. Boone had heard that his old friend and fellow campaigner, John Sellards, had built a cabin on Buffalo Creek the previous year. He also learned of a joint effort between the Harmans and the Auxiers to re-establish a settlement near the mouth of Johns Creek.

Always restless, Boone returned to Blockhouse Bottom where the new fort had been built in 1795. There he found Nathaniel Auxier, who, though only 16 years of age, had hunted before with Boone. They spent much of that year with the Harmans and other men from the settlement exploring the region as well as hunting for food to supply the settlers.

One favorite hunting spot was on Greasy Creek, which got its name when Boone's party slew so much game for the fort's larder on one expedition that the animals left marks of fat on the trailside trees against which the pack ponies brushed. During one trip up the Greasy, they built a semi-permanent camp which required the moniker Boone's Camp, which to this day has a post office.

Records indicate that Boone was appointed as a deputy surveyor for Mason County, which was then much larger and encompassed much of the Big Sandy River country, on August 23, 1796. He and his son Nathan spent the winter of 1796-1797 on the Big Sandy, visiting Young's Salt Works (later called Middle Creek Salt Works) along with Nathaniel Auxier and various members of the Harman clan. It is worth noting here that Boone and a Mr. Hill had discovered this salt spring twenty-nine years earlier.

During this same period, Boone inscribed his name on a tree near the mouth of the Little Brushy Creek. Research by former Floyd County school instructor Grady Bevins supports claims of authenticity for the inscription.

The influx of settlers in 1797 made Boone feel crowded. As history repeated itself, the settlers pushed the trailblazers on to explore and open up new territories. His feet restless and itching to be on the trail once more, Daniel Boone gave his friend Nathaniel Auxier a powder horn with his name carved into it. Sarah Brown Auxier, Nathaniel's mother, received a buffalo hide as her parting gift. With those gifts and many goodbyes dispensed, Boone set out from Kentucky, down to the Missouri and the Mississippi, and into the hoary mists of time.

Employers Can Call For Job Information

Where can a Kentucky employer turn for information about Unemployment Insurance, tax credits for hiring unemployed people, job training programs and placement services? By calling the Department for Employment Services' toll-free JOB NEWS telephone number. And that's what they did nearly 2,800 times—for an average of more than 53 calls each week—between Oct. 1, 1985 and Sept. 30, 1986. That's an increase of 662 calls over the first year of operation. "When we established this toll-free telephone line two years ago we felt it would be a worthwhile service to the state's employers," said Employment Services Commissioner James Daniels. "Their response has reinforced those feelings." Questions about Unemployment Insurance accounted for 1,061—38 percent—of the calls. "Interest in the UI program is very high," Daniels said. "Probably the major concern shared by most of the state's employers is keeping Unemployment Insurance taxes as low as possible."

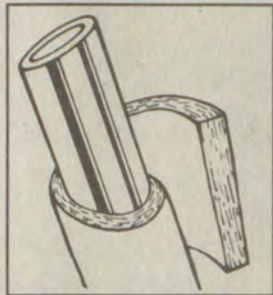

Tax credit programs generated 465 calls—17 percent of the total received. The federal Targeted Jobs Tax Credit (TJTC) expired last Dec. 31 but has been revived with passage of the Tax Reform Act. New guidelines are expected to be published within the next few weeks. While the federal program provides for a tax credit when an employer hires someone from a designated group, the state Unemployment Tax Credit is available for hiring someone who has been out of work for 60 days. "Any time an employer can save money there is a potential for more investment and, for large employers, creation of more jobs," Daniels said. Employers also used the line to place 363 job orders. "In addition to the placements following these calls, we believe other Kentuckians were hired following calls about tax credits and those asking for general information," Daniels said. Questions about Job Training Partnership Act programs, such as classroom and on-the-job training, accounted for 182 or seven percent of the calls. Cost of the toll-free line was $5,558 last year, for an average of about $2 a call. "We think that's a small price to pay, especially when you consider that more Kentuckians were hired as a direct result of calls over this line," Daniels said.

Great Am. Smokeout Will Be Held Nov. 20th

Smokers who want to give up cigarettes might find it easier by joining up with a 10-year old who has helped millions of people prove to themselves that quitting is possible: the American Cancer Society's Great American Smokeout.

On Thursday, November 20, the 10th annual Smokeout will be celebrated in Kentucky and across America with activities ranging from campus activities to quit stations in shopping malls. All activities aim to keep smokers' minds off cigarettes for at least 24 hours, and stress the benefits of quitting.

The advantages of quitting will be highlighted through "Star Quest," a reunion of smokers who quit at some point during the past 10 years. Each ex-smoker will be given a Star Quest button.

Another popular Smokeout program is the "Adopt-a-Smoker," which allows nonsmokers to take part in the day's activities. A nonsmoker can adopt someone they would like to quit for the day. Adopters can offer survival kits, snacks and words of encouragement throughout the day.

The McDowell Cancer Network will be participating in the Smokeout. By calling the 1-800-4-CANCER line, a trained resource person will counsel those wanting to give up smoking.

Last year about 23 million smokers participated in the Great American Smokeout, according to a Gallup survey.

The American Cancer Society says the risk of developing lung cancer is 10 times greater for smokers than for nonsmokers. Those who smoke two or more packs of cigarettes a day are 15 to 20 times more likely to die of lung cancer than nonsmokers.

Lung cancer is the number one cause of cancer death among men and women. In Kentucky, the Society estimates that 2,600 persons will die of lung cancer in 1986.

Miniature Exhibit Opens For Holidays

The latest Curator's Choice exhibit at The Kentucky Museum, chosen especially for the holiday season, opens November 21. The exhibit, "This Life in Miniature", is a focus on miniature furniture made and used between 1850 to 1920, and is sure to delight both youngsters and their parents during and following the holiday season.

Rebecca Raymer, Museum Assistant, said the kind of miniature represented in the exhibit was large enough to be used by children when playing with larger dolls.

"Styles ranges from Empire of the late 19th century to the Arts and Crafts influence of the early 20th century," Ms. Raymer said. "Several pieces are homemade, although the majority of the objects are manufactured."

For hundreds of years people have been fascinated with miniatures, Ms. Raymer said. The attraction of small scale objects is recorded in the 16th and 17th centuries when the wealthy would collect and display in cabinets objects of silver, china, glass, wood and other materials.

Initially the hobby was one practiced by adults but its popularity eventually inspired the toy industry to manufacture small-scale objects for the enjoyment of children, she continued.

Miniatures are of three sizes, she explained. The smallest size is those made for doll houses, while the next size is objects made for large dolls. The largest size of miniature is for use by children.

"Miniature furniture reflects the styles of every period from the Renaissance to the present," Ms. Raymer said. Furniture styles influenced the use of certain woods. Simple, sturdy pieces of furniture were made of oak for strength, while parts that did not show were often made of inexpensive woods such as pine. The availability of woods in a region where the furniture was made also helped determine the wood most used in construction.

Fascination with miniatures may in part come from memories of childhood. The objects often remind people of their play as children, Ms. Raymer stated. The skills and imagination required of the craftsmen who made such small-scale replications is also a reason for fascination and admiration. Whatever the fascination that prompts one to turn his or her collecting interest to these objects, there are vast numbers of furniture of every period, style, and size that can be collected in miniature, Museum staff reported.

The Kentucky Museum exhibit contains 30 objects and will include dolls, appliances, china, and stuffed animals. Viewing is possible through June, 1987. Other exhibits that opened in late October may be of interest to those visiting "This Life in Miniature", including "Ivan Wilson: The Ways of a Watercolorist, which displays over 60 paintings by the late head of Western Kentucky University's art department.

The Kentucky Museum is located on the campus of Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green. Hours are 9:30 to 4 Tuesday through Saturday and 1 to 4:30 on Sunday. Admission is free and parking is available adjacent to the building off Kentucky Street. For more information, call (502) 745-2592.

PRESTONSBURG DAY HOMEMAKERS
The Prestonsburg Day Homemakers met Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock at Fellowship Hall, First United Methodist Church, with Mrs. Mary Sue Moore, Miss Maurine Mayo, and Mrs. Maman Leslie, hostesses. The president, Mrs. Judy Kittle, presided, and Mrs. Mary Jane Brown gave the devotionals. In the absence of Mrs. Dorothy Stover, secretary-treasurer, these reports and the roll-call were given by Mrs. Barbara Dawson.

Members having birthdays during the month of November were announced as follows: Mesdames Lucy Regan, Dorothy Burke, Rita Francis, and Dorothy Sturgill.

Mrs. Frances Pitts, Floyd county home economist, had a display of homemade Christmas items, and showed some of the gnomes to be used by the Floyd County Homemakers when they join with surrounding counties in their annual decoration of the Christmas tree at May Lodge.

Mrs. Pitts announced that from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., on Friday, December 12, Homemakers of the county would meet at the lodge to view the tree and to enjoy lunch and fellowship with other homemakers of the area. This will be in lieu of this club's regular December meeting.

Attractively wrapped gifts for patients at the Jenny Wiley Nursing Home were brought by members to this meeting, and Mrs. Allene Fitch and Mrs. Otela Smiley volunteered to deliver these to them. Mrs. Pitts brought pecans to be sold for the Ovarian Cancer Fund.

Mrs. Phyllis Herrick gave an interesting and informative program on Christmas planning and the making of gifts.

The hostesses served a buffet luncheon to Frances Pitts, Judy Kittle, Barbara Dawson, Jane Wallace, Ann Alley, Otela Smiley, Myrtle Allen, Gypsy Jones, Mabel Donahoe, Isabel Spotte, Allene Fitch and her granddaughter, Molly Ann Steele, Mary Jane Brown, Lucy Regan, Eleanor Horn, Peg Hewlett, Julia Curtis, Docia B. SELENIUM

COPYRIGHT 1986 KVMA

Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association
As more research is done into the need for trace minerals in humans and animals, more is being discovered about some seldom heard of minerals that were once considered to be only hazards.

An example is selenium, a nonmetallic toxic mineral related to sulphur and tellurium and known to cause poisoning when cattle and sheep graze in arid areas of the western United States, where the mineral exists in excess. In the Great Plains cattle and sheep eating plants high in selenium content have long been known to contract "blind staggers" or "alkali disease," for which there is no known cure.

Recent research has shown that while excessive amounts are poisonous, small amounts are necessary for the normal development of muscles.

White Muscle Disease in sheep was one of the first selenium deficiency diseases recognized by veterinarians and animal scientists. Vitamin E and selenium are closely related in their activities in animal bodies. For a time, white muscle disease was thought to have been caused by a Vitamin E deficiency, however recent research has shown that a deficiency of either Vitamin E or of selenium can cause the disease, as well as a group of muscle diseases which affect food animals such as chickens, swine and cattle as well as sheep, and horses as well.

The disease seems to be seen more frequently in this area of the United States because of a selenium deficiency in the soil. Though widely distributed in the earth's crust, areas of moderate to heavy rainfall tend to be short of selenium, possibly a result of leaching over a long period of time.

Forages and grains eaten by animals in those areas are therefore deficient in selenium, and animals that feed on these materials can and do develop selenium deficiency diseases.

Don't try to diagnose the condition by yourself, remember that too much is a poison. But if you have an animal with an obscure muscle problem, your veterinarian can probably discover whether it is caused by selenium deficiency. And if it is, there are a number of feed supplements containing both selenium and Vitamin E, as well as some injectable solutions which can help.

Your veterinarian is trained in diagnosis and treatment of obscure and seldom-occurring diseases as well as in treatment of the more common maladies. Remedies are often single, once a correct diagnosis has been made.

Look Good, Taste Good, Too

A roadside stand laden with bright orange pumpkins and squash is one of the signs of autumn. Most people buy this oversized squash for decoration without realizing it tastes good and is nutritious.

Pumpkins are rich in vitamin A and contain phosphorus, calcium, potassium and niacin. They are also a perfect item for microwaving. However, selection is important.

Leave the very large, pale orange variety for Halloween jack-o'-lanterns. The best pumpkins for cooking are smaller, deep orange, firm and heavy for their size. They will be sweeter too.

Select squash that is fully matured, that has a hard tough rind and is heavy for its size. Heaviness indicates the wall is thick with edible flesh. Tender skin indicates immaturity and poor quality.

Try these quick serving suggestions:

Buttered—Add 1 tablespoon of butter or margarine to each cup of drained squash. Mix lightly and season to taste.

Candied or Glazed—Make a syrup using two parts brown sugar (or 1/2 brown and 1/2 white) to one part water. Place vegetable in a heavy sauce pan or casserole and pour the syrup over it. Bake at 350° degrees until it is tender. Baste occasionally.

Sweet—Mix 1/4 cup orange juice, 1/4 cup honey, and 1 teaspoon salt; put some on each piece of squash.

Delightfully Different Squash

- 3/4 cup sugar
- 1 T all-purpose flour
- 3/4 tsp. salt
- 1 tsp. ground ginger
- 1/2 tsp. ground nutmeg
- 2 eggs
- 2 1/2 cups cooked, mashed butternut squash
- 1 1/2 cups milk
- 2 T light molasses
- 2 T melted margarine

Combine sugar, flour, salt, ginger and nutmeg. Beat in eggs. Stir in squash, milk, molasses and margarine; blend well. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour and 25 minutes or until firm in center. Yield 6-8 servings.

Presents Check for New HRMC Entrance

Members of Highlands Regional Medical Center Ladies' Auxillary look on as Mrs. Sarah Goble, president of the group, presents a check for $50,000 to HRMC Administrator Clarence Traum. Long hours and hard work went into raising the money for the new entrance to the recently completed medical offices at Highlands Regional.

Prior to the entrance construction, patients were required to enter through the hospital, but may now use the side parking lot and go directly to the medical offices. Grand opening of the offices was held October 31, marking the completion of the $10,000,000 expansion project begun more than four years ago.

Doctors whose offices are located there are Dr. Rodney Handshoe, cardiology; Dr. John Furcolow, internal medicine; Dr. Tenney Kentro, oncology; Dr. Bruce Stapleton, oncology; Dr. Byron Young, neurosurgery; Dr. Robert Dempsey, neurosurgery; Dr. Ernest Behnke, otolaryngology; Dr. Charles Watson, otolaryngology, and Dr. Brad Robert, plastic and reconstructive surgery.

Applications Taken For Heat Help

An estimated 54,000 low-income Kentucky families are expected to seek financial help with their winter heating bills during the second phase of this year's Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP), which opens Monday, Nov. 17.

The Kentucky Department for Social Insurance will accept HEAP applications in all 120 counties until either the $5.4 million in allotted funds are exhausted or a Dec. 30 cutoff date is reached.

High School Seniors Will Tour Morehead

Seniors from 11 area high schools have been invited to Morehead State University for Senior Opportunity Days, November 19 and 20.

Senior Opportunity Days allows prospective students to become familiar with the University's people and its programs, according to Keith Kappes, chair of the Senior Opportunity Days Committee.

Each day's activities will include a tour of the Academic-Athletic Center and Jayne Stadium. Students also will receive a student-guided tour of the campus, ending at Button Auditorium where they will be greeted by President A.D. Albright and student government president, Carlos Cassidy.

Visiting students will be provided lunch in the Adron Doran University Center cafeteria or grill. Special visits to areas of their academic interest also will be arranged.

Seniors at other area high schools will be invited to attend Senior Opportunity Nights at hotels in the region. Plans are underway for nights at Ashland, Paintsville, Prestonsburg, Maysville and Pikeville.

ed. Any remaining funding would be carried over into the third and final HEAP segment, which begins Jan. 5, 1987.

"This year, we have made a major change in the way the funds are being distributed during the second phase," said Social Insurance Commissioner Mike Robinson. "The available money has been allocated statewide along area development district boundaries. Each region's allotted assistance is determined by the percentage of families in the district living below the poverty level.

"This will allow for a more fair distribution of funds to meet the need throughout the state."

Payment levels during this segment will range from a minimum of $75 to a maximum of $135, the same as in the first segment. Since the federal budget already has been approved, applicants during this phase may not experience the delays in receiving assistance funds that affected the first phase.

There will be 51 counties operating temporary application sites as a convenience to participants in this HEAP phase. Applications will be taken at the department's local offices in the other 69 counties.

Initially the temporary sites will be open from one to three days and will accept applications during the hours of 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m. on days of operation. Site locations and dates of operation have been announced in each county.

Applications for the final, or crisis, portion (Jan. 5-April 30) of the Home Energy Assistance Program will be accepted by the state's 24 community action agencies at sites selected in each county. Households without heat or facing an imminent loss of heat may apply during the crisis segment. A total of $6 million has been reserved for this phase of the program.

Law Protects Victims' Rights

By Atty. General David L. Armstrong

The 1986 Kentucky General Assembly passed Kentucky's Victims' Bill of Rights. This landmark legislation which became law July 15, 1986 addresses many of the problems experienced by victims of crime as their cases progress through the criminal justice system.

The Victims' Bill of Rights was the final product of years of hard work. It was designed from the findings of eight regional hearings held in the fall of 1985 by the Attorney General's Office. Crime victims across the Commonwealth testified before a panel about their experiences with the criminal justice system. The hearings revealed many common problems experienced by victims throughout the state. These included: a lack of information about their cases; a lack of knowledge about the criminal justice system; a fear of retaliation by the accused of his or her family; failure of the system to notify the victim about his or her case, and the lengthy delays in child sexual abuse cases.

The law now requires that law enforcement, attorneys for the Commonwealth and the Attorney General's Office make every effort to provide to the victim notification of: judicial proceedings related to his or her case; defendant's release on bond; charges filed against the defendant; defendant's pleading to the charges; trial date and changes in the trial date; changes in custody of the defendant; verdict, and the right to submit a victim impact statement to the court prior to sentencing.

The law further authorizes that the victim shall be consulted on case disposition including dismissal, negotiated plea, and entry into pre-trial diversion program. The law authorizes the Attorney General's Office to notify victims about their cases as they move through the appeals process. (The Attorney General's Office is also directed to develop and distribute an informational brochure to explain the criminal justice system in plain language. This brochure is being developed at this time.)

One of the most important provisions of the law deals with speedy trials for child victims of sexual assault. Now more than ever in Kentucky children will be provided the special protection they need. The law makes it possible to get these tragic cases handled quickly and fairly for the innocent child victim.

We have joined 32 other states in the movement to return balance to the scales of justice by protecting the rights of the victim just as we have for so long protected the rights of the accused.

For more information, contact the Attorney General's Victims' Advocacy Division, 909 Leewood Dr., Frankfort, Ky. 40601 or call the toll-free Victims' Hotline at 1-800-372-2551.

Your young child may be able to hold onto a drinking glass better if you place two tight rubber bands around the glass an inch or so apart. This makes it easier for little hands to hold.

E.P. CONYERS demonstrates a "small parts" test for toys. Any toy or part of a toy that fits into the cylinder fails the test. The inspection kit is used by Department for Health Services inspectors. All of the toys pictured have failed various safety tests.

Health Inspector Checks Toys

If you're shopping in the toy department and see someone open a brown briefcase and proceed to take toys apart to measure the durability and size of parts, don't be alarmed. It's probably one of 10 toys inspectors from the Kentucky Department for Health Services.

This month, these inspectors will go into about 250 retail stores to check toys for compliance with safety standards. While most domestically manufactured toys have greatly improved in the area of safety, imported toys still create some problems.

"I'm certainly not implying that all imported toys are unsafe," said E.P. Conyers, manager of the Consumer Product Safety branch. "Some imported toys are very good and durable and comply in all aspects. But we do find that most of the problems are caused by toys that come from outside this country."

For example, the federal Consumer Product Safety Commission this week recalled a Taiwan-made toy. The "Voltron Lion" robot toy has unacceptable levels of lead in its paint. More than 1.5 million have been sold in the United States. For more information, consumers may call the distributor, Matchbox Toy Co., Moonachie, N.J., at 1-800-445-8697, or the commission at 1-800-638-CPSC.

Another common problem is toys with small parts. Kentucky inspectors recently found at a drug store chain a plastic "Romper Room Animal Train" made in Hong Kong and imported by Electro-Plastics in Newark, N.J. It was labeled for children ages nine to 36 months, and it had plastic balls that did not pass the "small parts" test for children that young.

Conyers called the store's headquarters and asked that they remove the toys from their shelves because of the small parts noncompliance.

To determine if a toy or part of a toy passes the "small parts" test, inspectors place the questionable piece in a cylinder with a 1.25-inch diameter. If the part fits within the cylinder, it is too small. These standards, and others governing toys and children's products, were developed by the Consumer Product Safety Commission.

Other features that inspectors watch for are sharp edges and points; firmly constructed seams and firmly attached buttons, eyes and buckles on soft toys; warning labels on electrical toys, and many other safety standards, Conyers said.

While inspectors do look for hazardous products, he said, parents and others who buy toys should use caution and common sense in their purchases. "Many toys are labeled with recommended ages for that toy," he said, "but shoppers should use a little common sense. Not all three-year-olds are mature enough to use a toy marked for that age, and some are too advanced for that particular item. In other words, consider the individual child and use the labeling as a guide."

"Supervision and maintenance are important, too, in preventing accidents," Conyers said. "If you have several children in the home, for example, make sure that younger ones don't get toys meant for an older child. Adults should supervise the use of all electrical toys."

"Maintaining toys can prevent injuries. Examine toys often, and as soon as you find an exposed wire, a jagged edge, or a small part that has come loose, repair or discard that item," he said.

Parents or others who buy a toy or child's product that seems hazardous can contact Conyers at (502) 564-4537. His address is Consumer Product Safety Branch, Department for Health Services, 275 E. Main St., Frankfort, Ky. 40621. Consumers can also contact him for general information on toy and children's product safety.

American Food:

A Mixed Bag of Groceries

By INK MENDELSON
Smithsonian News Service

Celebrating Thanksgiving is as American as pumpkin pie. Apple pies—actually tarts—were popular in England long before the Pilgrims planted the first apple-tree slips in America. The versatile pumpkin, on the other hand, is an American native.

Sometimes you have to mix apples and pumpkins, at least if you want to answer the often-asked question: What is American food? For the pumpkin—a bit of the great bounty of the American land—and the apple—a pip of an edible enhancement from the Old World—together symbolize the mixed bag of groceries that is our culinary heritage.

Not so long ago, Americans merely ate their food and didn't ask too many questions. In the last 25 years, however, food has steadily moved into the cultural mainstream with culinary history courses, gastronomic organizations, a burgeoning literature and an aesthetic army of new American chefs.

Food even has its own groupies. "Foodies" are dedicated to discovering, studying, cooking and consuming the best of it. National food-and-marketing consultant Ann Brody may not be kidding when she says: "There have been whole dissertations on how cooked a stalk of asparagus should be."

For years, American food has suffered an identity crisis. Take the hot dog. Alias frankfurters and weiners, these sausages, named for the cities of Frankfurt and Vienna, were brought to America by German immigrants. Hamburgers were named for the German city of Hamburg, though ground beef cannot be claimed by any one country. The buns for these two stand-by meals, however, were added in eat-it-or-leave-it America.

Culinary curmudgeons, who grump that there is no such thing as American food, may not realize that almost all cultures have borrowed foods from others. Where would pizza and pasta be if the South American tomato hadn't arrived in 16th-century Italy? Without the Latin American chili pepper Chinese Szechwan cooking wouldn't be so hot.

"Half of everything we eat originally was American—North, South and Central—foods Europe didn't know," culinary historian Ariane Batterberry recently told a Smithsonian Resident Associate Program class. A Smithsonian Institution series of courses is exploring the subject of food and features such stars as Julia Child, New York Times Food Editor Craig Claiborne and Louisiana chef Paul Prudhomme, the creator of blackened redfish.

A far cry from such inventiveness was the cod and sea bass served in 1621 at the three-day harvest festival now known as the first Thanksgiving. The small and of Pilgrims who survived the harsh winter of 1620-21 celebrated with 90 Indian benefactors that fall. The bill of fare, reflecting the new land's cornucopia, also included: "wildfowl" (ducks, geese and swans), "turkies," cornmeal and five deer brought by the Indians. Cranberries might have been used in "puddings in the belly" (stuffing) but not as jelly, because sugar was scarce. Pumpkin was served boiled—not yet having made it into pies.

Clams and oysters were plentiful and could have been served at the celebration. But Plimoth Plantation (Mass.) research librarian James W. Baker notes that these—along with lobsters—"were looked on as poverty fare and hence not appropriate at a feast."

Fish choked the rivers, game filled the forests, various mushrooms, nuts and berries carpeted the fields and forest floors. The Indians taught the English colonists to grow beans, squash, pumpkins and their only grain, maize. The Pilgrims called this all-American food that came in black, yellow and purple and in red, white and blue, "Indian corn."

In exchange, the settlers brought their "English grains"—wheat, rye, barley and oats. Even in this land of plenty, the newcomers wanted their favorite foods—meats and sweets. So they brought chickens, pigs, goats, sheep and cattle. West Indian molasses and sugar sweetened cookies, cakes and tarts, and the American sweet tooth was born. Traditionally, the English were indifferent to vegetables and suspicious of raw fruit. Still, European carrots, beets, turnips, onions, peas and cabbage took root everywhere, and English peaches, apricots, pears and apples joined Spanish oranges in America's fruit basket.

Once the basic ingredients got together, could America's first cookbook be far behind? American Cookery, or the Art of Dressing Viands, Fish, Poultry, and Vegetables, and the Best Modes of Making Pastes, Puffs, Pies, Tarts, Puddings, Custards and Preserves, and All Kinds of Cakes, from the Imperial Plumb to Plain Cake. Adapted to this Country and All Grades of Life came out in 1796. Its author? "Amelia Simmons: An American Orphan."

A culinary orphan no longer, America was on her way. Yet, America before the Civil War was a rural and unfinished land. Some Americans settled down, raising and eating the foods they knew. Others pushed on and ate what they could get. Pioneer Susan Magoffin in 1846 found buffalo-hump soup better than soup served in the "best" New York restaurants.

The winds of change had already been blowing for a few years. In 1842, the Erie Railroad successfully transported perishable foods, and Chicago got its first lobster. The creature made it alive as far as Cleveland—arriving boiled in the windy city. In the post-Civil War period, advances in transportation and refrigeration, the industrialization of food processing, urbanization and agricultural inventiveness made more foods available to more Americans for more of the year than ever before.

Botanist Luther Burbank alone is credited with creating more than 800 varieties of fruits and vegetables from 1875 to 1925. Americans everywhere could enjoy everything from Georgia peaches to California figs. The nation went bananas. This perishable tropical fruit (tin foil wrapped) had once cost a dollar. Now it cost a dime and was available in chilly Boston—suspected home of the banana split—eight months a year.

Fruit as well as vegetables, meats and fish not eaten fresh became available in containers as the food industry made technical advances in commercial canning. Cowboys ate canned tomatoes on the trail and downed canned Baltimore oysters off-duty in the saloons.

Meanwhile back at the ranch, food was starting to go undercover in package bearing national brand

Earnest Hall's most memorable hunting trip began outside of Macon, Georgia. It ended after a painful 500 mile ride back to Highlands Regional Medical Center for surgery that was needed to treat a serious abscess. Why would someone in such pain travel that far to be treated at Highlands?

Earnest came home because he had confidence in our surgical services. He had been here before. And he knew that the quality of surgery right here in ## Earnest Hall's confidence brought him 500 miles home for surgery...

"They were going to operate on me that night in Georgia. I said, 'No way, I'm goin' back home.'"

Prestonsburg is as good as Lexington—or anywhere else. In some cases, even better.

And that means a lot to people like Earnest.

"When they said they'd have to operate on me that night in Georgia, I said, 'No way, I'm goin' back home.' I've been in plenty of hospitals, and I got the best service here I've ever gotten anywhere I've been."

Highlands now has 15 full-time surgeons on staff, covering specialties from internal to cosmetic and reconstructive surgery. And our performance has earned accreditation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals* based on strict national standards.

Experienced, skilled surgeons are only part of the story. Highly trained medical support teams in anesthesiology, nursing, diagnostic services and post operative care, combined with state-of-the-art equipment and facilities, make Highlands one of the safest, most professional surgical centers for inpatient and outpatient surgery around.

Maybe that's why some people would rather come a long way home to Highlands for something as important as surgery. So if you're already here, why go anywhere else?

For more information on inpatient and outpatient surgery, ask your family physician, or call Highlands at 886-8511.

Pancake Frying And Flying

The Rev. Timothy Jessen, past president of the Prestonsburg Kiwanis Club, demonstrates above that the flip is all in the wrist, during the Kiwanis Club's annual Pancake Day held November 1. Jessen is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, here.

A Mixed Bag Of Groceries

(Continued from Preceding Page) names—the better to preserve it, ship it and sell it. Crackers abandoned the barrel; sugar and flour fled the bins. Breakfast cereal, no longer home-cooked hot mush, was sold in boxes by the likes of Dr. John H. Kellogg and one of his former patients at the Western Health Reform Institute in Battle Creek, Mich. Charles W. Post.

Dr. Clarence Birdseye, inspired by his observations while fur-trapping in Labrador that fish and game froze almost instantly at 40 or 50 degrees below zero and tasted fresh when they thawed months later, invented a machine that rapidly froze perishable foods.

Food preparation, once the exclusive province of the home, was now done in commercial kitchens and packaged in factories. Homemade bread, the last gastronomic bastion of the proud housewife, fell when a rapidly developing economy and two world wars sent millions of American women to work. Store bread was white and bland. But the wrapping was colorful.

Skill in selling food was a 20th-century contribution to American culinary history. Mass merchandising of groceries was moved along by the wheels of the automobile and the grocery cart. The first self-serve market was opened in 1916 in Memphis, Tenn., but the self-service concept didn't catch on until the 1930s. By the 1950s, there were thousands of supermarkets all across America replacing more thousands of neighborhood groceries.

National chain supermarkets, carrying many of the same products everywhere, homogenized American food and greatly influenced what Americans ate—and didn't eat. Many of the varieties of fruits and vegetables developed in the 19th century disappeared, not because they weren't delicious, but because their "shelf life" was too short. Chemicals, additives and ersatz edibles alienated Americans from the flavors of fresh food.

But good news is in store for our taste buds if Alice Waters is right. The "mother" of the New American Cuisine, whose insistence on fresh ingredients at her Berkeley, Calif., restaurant, Chez Panisse, is legendary among people interested in food, says "the tradition of cooking straight from the garden is growing in the large supermarket chains."

"All my food comes from the supermarket," Julia Child confided to a Smithsonian class. "But you have to be an alert shopper. Artichokes must squeak."

"Last year," Ann Brody says, "a record number of food products hit the supermarkets." Exotic edibles with such names as cherimoya (custard apple) and carambola (star fruit) are forcing produce sections to expand. Silver dollar-sized cauliflower, walnut-sized beets and turnips and a host of other Lilliputian legumes are big in the marketplace.

Blue eggs, golden beets and raspberries, green garlic, purple cauliflower and peppers in 15 shades have been spotted in technicolored California. Also popular there and spreading across the country are "crossover" foods reflecting our new Hispanic and Asian populations. Tortillas, lemon grass, Chinese cabbage and Japanese radishes are adding variety and spice to our lives.

"Our senses have been dulled," Waters concludes, "but there are great possibilities for their awakening."

McDonald's Trades Toys

McDonald's Corporation and the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) have asked that customers with children under 3 who received LEGO Building Sets at McDonald's between Oct. 31 and Nov. 7 exchange them for DUPLO Building Sets designed by the LEGO Company for children under 3. According to Attorney General David Armstrong, the LEGO Building Sets have been safety tested and meet all mandatory and voluntary toy regulations; however, the sets contain small parts which could present a hazard if given to children younger than 3. Consumers may exchange the toys at their local McDonald's restaurant.

McDonald's is running a four-week promotion of LEGO Building Sets for children 3 and over, and DUPLO Building Sets without small parts for children under 3. During the first week of the promotion, some McDonald's may not have had DUPLO Building Sets available for children under 3.

The LEGO Building Set packages have solid color borders and a warning on the front panel that the building sets contain small parts and are not intended for children under 3. DUPLO Building Sets have a dotted border.

Armstrong said that consumers wanting further information may call McDonald's Customer Relations Department at (312) 575-6198, the CPSC toll-free hotline at 1-800-638-CPSC, or the Attorney General's Consumer Hotline at 1-800-432-9257.
