Spring Storm Paralyzes Region With Record-Breaking Snowfall

It's not nice to fool Mother Nature, but the old girl, herself, pulled off the best April Fool's job in years, albeit a little late, with an unseasonably late and unusually heavy snowstorm, which dumped at least 18 inches of snow on Floyd county—more in some sections.

18 to 36 Inches Cover Counties By Storm's End

Johnson and Magoffin counties reported similar amounts, but Pike, Perry, and Letcher counties reported from 24 to 36 inches of snow, with Letcher faring the worst. The rest of the southeast was in similar circumstance, with 10 inches of snow in Alabama and 24 inches in the North Carolina mountains. Some southbound travelers, caught in weather-inspired traffic jams, spent the night in their cars.

members attended the meeting, here. Although much of the snow had melted by Monday, secondary road conditions kept schools closed until Tuesday when a one-hour delay was observed.

While snow flurries are not unheard of in these parts even in May, this was the biggest April snowstorm on record in the state, and also set a record for the most snow to fall in a 24-hour period in Kentucky. Certainly, no one has come forward who remembers as heavy a snowstorm this late.

Some Abbott Creek residents were without power, but most of the outages occurred in the Left and Right Beaver sections of the county. Among the communities affected were McDowell, Hunter, Melvin, Abner Mountain residents on Left Beaver, and the Lackey, Garrett, Wayland area of Right Beaver. At Martin, lights flickered on and off Friday and Saturday. A spokesman for Big Sandy RECC said customers at Auxier, Arkansas Creek, Middle Creek, Rock Fork, and on Salt Lick were inconvenienced by power loss, but most outages lasted three hours or less. Both Kentucky Power and RECC had restored power to all homes by Tuesday.

In this county, state police, city police, and the Sheriff's department reported an average to below average weekend for fender benders and criminal activity. As one officer said, "It was so bad, most people stayed at home and off the roads."

On the other hand, Floyd County Rescue Squad members spent an unusually busy weekend with calls coming in almost nonstop from noon Friday through Saturday evening. Most were calls from those without heat for help in getting to relatives' homes, or for aid in getting furnaces back in operation. Some calls were from senior citizens needing medicine delivered, and a few needed transportation to hospitals when ambulances could not negotiate rural

Board Trims Staff in Move To Live Within Its Budget

By Ron Marstin
In a decisive move to trim the school district's overgrown staff, the Floyd Board of Education last week lopped three positions from the central office roster, demoted four other administrators, froze the salaries of all school principals, and sent letters to 55 teachers advising them that their contracts would not be renewed.

Pay Is Frozen, Execs Bumped, Teachers Cut

The demotions affect the head of the food service division, whose management of the lunchroom program drew high praise only days earlier from state officials who recently completed a program audit, and a high school principal lured back to the school system only last year from a coal company.

six years, explained Asst. Superintendent Ron Hager. The cuts were recommended by a management advisory team dispatched here this year by the state Board of Education to help local administrators streamline their operation.

The Floyd school population was said to have decreased by 748 students since the 1981-82 school year, when enrollment stood at 9,579. Just this year, the pupil count dropped by 233 from last year, Hager said, for a current census of 8,831.

Positions eliminated from the central administrative staff, besides Grigsby's, were those of physical education coordinator David Turner and assistant transportation director Adrian Bentley. Grigsby and Bentley.

New Rules Set As Judge Notes Juror's Gripe

By Louise Houghton
A suggestion made by a person who served on a recent Floyd jury has led to changes in the way that jury service is handled here, Circuit Judge Hollie Conley said Tuesday.

Beginning with the prospective jurors summoned this month, clerks in both district and circuit courts will call the roll each day that cases are scheduled to make sure that jurors who signed the roll in the morning don't slip out of the courthouse to avoid service. In addition, anyone who has not been officially excused from service but nevertheless fails to show up and sign the roll can expect to get a phone call from a court clerk.

"If they don't have some sort of excuse, they'll have to explain (their absence) to the court," Conley said.

Technically, it's within the judge's authority to send the sheriff out looking for jurors who don't show up. That has been done a few times in the past, though Conley indicated he is not eager to take such a drastic measure.

"If it's abused to a great extent," he added, "I'd have to."

The new get-tough policy was instituted after a recent juror confided to Conley that some jurors were coming to the courthouse in the morning, signing in to receive their $12.50 per day jury pay, and then leaving the courthouse without actually serving. In particular, the headcount was diminishing after the

Minnie-Hi Hat Site Dispute Draws 275 To Board Meeting

By Ron Marstin
Continuing conflict over the site of the proposed Wheelwright-McDowell high school drew a capacity crowd last Wednesday to the monthly meeting of the Floyd Board of Education, with parents from the upper reaches of Left Beaver Creek urging the board to stick by its decision to locate the school at Hi Hat, other parents arguing for a site further downstream, and some appealing to the two groups to bury their differences.

a.m., you would think twice before you came our way," said Kim Hall, of Bypro, to those in favor of a downstream site. "That's why we're thinking of not going your way."

But Glenn Turner, of Drift, speaking for residents who would like to see the school located elsewhere, asked the board to produce figures on the cost of acquiring and preparing the hillside property at Hi Hat, including the cost of furnishing utilities and providing access to handicapped students.

Partisans of an alternative site, many of whom favor a Minnie location, have estimated site preparation costs of up to $500,000 at Hi Hat. Many have claimed also that the Mitchell site, which calls for construction on two plateaus, would be left with two dangerous highwalls.

Glennis Caudill, of Melvin, dismissed the notion that a Hi Hat construction would endanger pupils and begged for an end to the traditional rivalry between the two school communities. "Wheelwright and McDowell have been fighting and arguing for years," he said. "We have to pull together for the children's benefit. If we fight now, there's no way our children are going to be put together."

Wheelwright High School sophomore Amy Payne voiced a similar sentiment. "We students can get along," she said. "I think it's time we see the adults do also."

In the meantime, the board voted to purchase a site for the new Allen Elementary School. The school will be built on three tracts totalling 12.6 acres on KY 1428 near Emma. The properties are to be purchased from Graham and Evelyn Burchett, Charles T. Harris, and Mary Ann Hall for around $378,000. The site will need to be filled to bring it above the 100-year flood levee.

A property at Lancer has already been purchased for the proposed Prestonsburg Middle School. The school board has an option on a Goose Creek tract for construction of a consolidated Garrett-Wayland elementary school.

Construction of all four schools, which is expected to cost a total of $14.7 million, is being financed by a bond sale authorized by the General Assembly in 1985 as part of Gov. Martha Layne Collins' education package.

Hearing Held As Family Protests Coal Processor

By Louise Houghton

In the summer, when Violet Brown tries to mow the grass in front of her house, coal dust boils up in a black cloud. "Everything's always covered up, outside and inside the house," she said Friday. "There's no way to stop it."

"We never open the windows, except late in the evening in the summertime," added her sister-in-law Judy Brown. When her four-year-old son goes outside, she said, she can see the tracks of his breath through the coal dust in his nose.

The Browns, along with several other members of their family, have challenged the operation of a coal processing plant within 300 feet of their homes near Bill Hall Branch at East McDowell. The crusher-loader facility, their attorney told a state hearing officer, Friday, at May Lodge, was not legally in operation in August 1977 and thus should not be exempt from federal law that prohibits coal operations from locating that close to homes without the homeowners' consent.

Furthermore, argued Steve Sanders, of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund, the company's operating permit should not have been approved last September by the state Natural Resources Cabinet because it failed to show the Browns' private road as part of the affected area. Finally, he said, even if the permit is allowed to stand, the company should be forced to take measures to reduce the air and noise pollution caused by the operation.

An attorney for Unit Coal Corporation, of Pikeville, however, contended that the company has complied with all relevant laws and should be exempt from the 300-foot-prohibition because it has been in continuous operation since the early 1970's. The road is public, not private, and thus does not need to be shown on the permit application, argued Marris Allen May. In addition, the company already has done more than normally is done to reduce air pollution at the site, testified Unit's consulting engineer, Ertel L. Whitt, Jr., of Pikeville.

According to Emerson "Bob" Brown, 42, brother of Violet Brown and of Judy Brown's husband Mike, the dirt road that passes within 30 feet of their homes is turned into a dustbowl in dry weather

Prisoners End Four-Day Fast

By Joe Porter

Twelve inmates of the Floyd County Jail who went on a hunger strike to protest the food they were being served ended their fast four days later after the food had improved.

According to inmate Don Titlow, who has been convicted of manslaughter and is awaiting transfer to the state penitentiary, the men decided Saturday, March 28, not to eat anymore until they got better food. "We did what we thought was right," Titlow said. "Not just because it was what we wanted."

Titlow described the food as "stuff that was slapped together, that wasn't well-prepared. Mostly, they were trying to make a meal out of a snack." Titlow said that one meal contained a small portion of pork and beans, pudding, and an apple. "It wasn't enough to hold you for 16 hours," the inmate said. The men are fed during the day at eight, twelve, and four o'clock.

"NO BRAKES! They went all the way to the floor," said Prestonsburg Police Officer Mike Meade of the 1983 Cadillac Eldorado, driven by Anita B. Ratliff, that collided with a pickup causing a five-car pile-up coming off the Bert Combs bridge, last Thursday. The cars had stopped for the light when the brake failure set off a chain reaction. According to police, no one was injured.

Named to New Bank Positions

First National Bank of Paintsville announced the promotions of two members of its staff recently.

Floyd county native, Tamyra Prater, formerly internal auditor of the bank has been named assistant vice president and assistant manager of the bank's Loan Administration Department. LaDonna Wells, formerly assistant comptroller, has been named internal auditor. Announcement of the promotions was made by James C. Witten, chairman and chief executive officer of First National.

Miss Prater, at left above, joined the bank as auditor in January, 1986, following experience as a staff accountant with a local CPA firm. She is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University with a Bachelor of Business Administration Degree in Accounting. Miss Prater is a graduate of Allen Central High School, a member of Phi Beta Lambda and the Eastern Star. She is the daughter of Charles and Sheba Prater, of Langley.

Miss Wells became a member of the staff of First National in May, 1986, as assistant comptroller. She is the daughter of Larry Joe and Lola Wells, of Paintsville. Miss Wells is a graduate of Paintsville High School and Eastern Kentucky University where she earned a Bachelor's Degree in Business Administration in 1986.

"First National has been extremely fortunate in recent years in attracting bright, young, career-minded professionals to its staff. Their performance and dedication to the bank and their own future careers has been most gratifying," Witten said. "Miss Prater and Miss Wells have demonstrated extraordinary promise and I was pleased to recommend their promotions."

The new positions were effective April 1.

Annual Award Goes To Breathitt Native

The Kentucky Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers has selected a veteran state government administrator for its annual "Social Worker of the Year" award.

During ceremonies in Frankfort, chapter president Chet Holmquist announced the unanimous choice of Mrs. Anna Grace Day for this year's honor. Day, of St. Andrews Way in Frankfort, is commissioner of the Kentucky Department for Social Services.

"Anna Grace Day has been a champion for social workers and their clients during some of the toughest times to face this profession in years," Holmquist said. "She has consistently gone to bat for the abused children, broken families and elderly people of this state."

"Through her experience as a front-line caseworker and her dedication to quality services, Mrs. Day has shown herself as an advocate for change, for improvement and for putting before the citizens of Kentucky the important contributions made by social workers, public and private."

A native of Breathitt county, Mrs. Day is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University and received her Master of Science in Social Work from the University of Kentucky in 1974. Since beginning state government employment in 1963, she has served in administrative positions in several state agencies, including deputy commissioner and acting commissioner in the Department for Manpower Services between 1980 and 1982.

Mrs. Day was serving as deputy commissioner of the Department for Social Services in May 1983 when Gov. Martha Layne Collins appointed her as the department's commissioner.

Cancer Prevention, India, Are Topics

Seventh and eighth-grade students of Beaver Elementary School heard a unique presentation on cancer prevention and Indian culture at Our Lady of the Way Hospital, March 25. The presentation was given by Dr. Gan Maddiwar, field liaison of the Commission on Cancer; his wife, Surekha; and Pat Tyson, of the McDowell Cancer Network.

"The students were well prepared for our presentation by their teachers," commented Dr. Maddiwar. He said the students had participated in a cancer prevention poster contest prior to the visit and asked many good questions about cancer and India.

The presentation on cancer was informal. Through slides and a question-answer format, Dr. Maddiwar and Ms. Tyson discussed smoking, other uses of tobacco, lifestyles, nutrition and alcohol use. They encouraged the students to develop habits which can prevent cancer.

Mrs. Maddiwar spoke about her native India and its culture as she showed slides of her homeland. She also presented her program to the school's fourth graders.

WYMT-TV aired a segment of their presentation on the evening news that same day.

The Maddiwars are available on Wednesdays and Friday afternoons to speak at no charge to schools and civic groups about cancer prevention, India or both. Interested persons should contact Dr. Maddiwar's office at 285-3276.

QUESTION: I am a fifty year-old man and I have to have a physical exam soon. I've had no problems or symptoms, but my wife wants me to have a stool-guaic test, which she says tests for cancer in the colon and rectum. What is involved in this test? Will it tell me whether or not I have cancer?

ANSWER: The stool-guaic test is a simple and inexpensive method used to test for one possible symptom of colorectal cancer: blood in the stool. This test may be used as part of a routine physical, to detect traces of blood which may be hidden in the stool.

Usually stool samples are taken from three consecutive bowel movements, since blood can occur at irregular intervals. To make the test as accurate as possible, the doctor may ask you to start a special diet 48 hours before you obtain the first stool sample and continue the diet for the next three days. It is best during this time not to take any vitamins or aspirin, unless it has been discussed with your doctor first. You might be given a simple kit designed so that you can put a small amount of stool on a slide and mail it in according to instructions.

The stool guaiac test is helpful in finding hidden blood which may be due to colorectal cancer, but it is not a firm test to diagnose cancer, since blood in the stool may be caused by non-cancerous conditions, such as hemorrhoids. Therefore, if the tests are positive, additional tests which further examine the colon and rectum are needed to determine whether cancer or some other condition is causing this problem.

For additional information on colon cancer call 1-800-4-CANCER or write the Cancer Information Service at McDowell Cancer Network, 800 Rose Street, Lexington, Ky. 40536.

State May Enlarge Morgan Co. Prison

Doubling the capacity of a medium security prison under construction in Morgan county, will be the subject of a feasibility study ordered by Gov. Martha Layne Collins.

Gov. Collins said that it is likely that the 1988 General Assembly will take up the issue of expanding the facility. "Considering the amount of money involved, it is imperative that we provide updated information that will enable the next governor and the General Assembly to make a more informed decision on the expansion," she said.

Estimates made several years ago placed the cost of adding 500 beds to the new prison, which would double its capacity, at almost $30 million.

Collins said that the expansion is the quickest and least expensive solution available to the problem of prison crowding in Kentucky. In March, the state was housing 891 inmates in county jails and the only prison beds for males authorized other than at the Morgan county facility are 200 minimum security beds.

According to Danny Shearer, facilities management commissioner for the Finance and Administration Cabinet, the study will take about six months to complete at a cost of about $800,000. "By starting now, the information will be available to the legislators by autumn, giving them plenty of time to consider the study's findings," he said.

Shearer said that site preparation for the new prison is complete and work has begun on the buildings and grounds which should be finished by October 1989. It will cost about $40 million and require about 250 employees. If the expansion is approved by the General Assembly and if the work started in early 1988, it would be able to house 1,000 inmates and employ about 450 people by mid-1991.

Leaking Gasoline Is Park Problem

ARCHER PARK BOARD CHAIRMAN Billy Ray Collins points out gasoline seepage on a bank below the Parkway Service Station where the gasoline came from. Besides the aesthetic harm, the seepage has damaged a pump and made inoperable a concession and restrooms building.

By Joe Porter
 Leaking underground storage tanks are a national as well as a state problem. And locally, Archer Park officials are coping with their own problem.
 At a March 9 City Council meeting, Archer Park Director Ralph Little outlined a plan that had been worked out between park officials, the operator of the Parkway Service Station, and Coleman Oil Company in Pikeville, to control and clean up gasoline leakage that has been occurring on park land below the gas station.
 The plan called for two drainage ditches and a catch basin to be dug, piping and a T-trap installed, and the use of 24-inch square absorbent pads known as "diapers" to separate the oil from the water. Also, a fence will be erected to enclose the entire area. And while the work has been nearly completed by a contractor hired by Coleman Oil, Little called the work, "totally unacceptable." The park director said that the work that has been done thus far is not what was agreed upon in the plan.
 Little said that Tommy Sword, operator of the Parkway Service Station, and Coleman Oil have been very cooperative in their efforts to solve the problem, and he is confident that once they inspect the site, they will agree that the construction work is not sufficient.

 According to Billy Ray Collins, chairman of the Park Board, the leakage was first discovered back in 1979 and has been recurring periodically since then in large and small amounts. Collins said park workers have spread sand and sawdust and ditched in an effort to contain and eliminate any potential hazard.
 "It's going to take quite a while to correct itself," said Prestonsburg Fire Inspector Larry Adams, of the leakage. The Fire Inspector said all the snow and rain the area has received lately will act to flush the ground of the gasoline, but that until the seepage stops he will continue to monitor the site to insure against high levels of gasoline vapors.
 Tommy Sword, who has been operator of the Parkway Service Station for over two years, said that he didn't know how much gasoline has leaked into the ground, but that the last old tank was replaced in September 1986, and fuel lines have been all replaced to prevent any further leakage.
 District supervisor Gene Blair, from the Hazard office of the state division of water, was called in to analyze the problem a month ago, and a construction plan was drawn up based on his recommendations. Blair said that he believed the plan would work, but since he didn't know how much or where the gasoline would rise out of the ground, the problem may take a trial and error approach to solve it.
 Collins is concerned that if the construction work isn't done properly, the problem will hurt park attendance and limit the use of the nearby grounds this spring and summer. He said that improvements are planned for the park, but that until the problem is resolved, the park's development will be held back. He mentioned the August horse show and softball tournaments as events that may be adversely affected if the seepage isn't stemmed.
 Little and Park Board member Randy Polk plan to seek additional help from the state division of water and ask the Coleman Oil Company and their contractor to meet the specifications of the plan agreed upon.

Schools Urged To Join Academic Fitness Awards

In a letter to school principals and superintendents across the nation, U.S. Secretary of Education William J. Bennett has called on educators to take advantage of the Presidential Academic Fitness Awards (PAFA) program as "an opportunity to encourage all students to achieve their full academic potential."

The PAFA program was initiated by President Reagan in 1983 to recognize students at all three school levels for high academic achievement. The award goes to students graduating from elementary school, middle or junior high, and senior high school who have a cumulative grade point average of B+ or better and who score in the top 20 percent on national achievement tests. Senior high students must also complete a solid core of academic courses.

Participation in the academic fitness program has grown dramatically since its inception as more and more schools learn of the program and its benefit as an ongoing incentive.

Last year about 1.2 million students received the Presidential awards—54 percent more pupils than in the previous year. More than 45,500 public and private schools elected to participate—39 percent more schools than the year before. The 1984-85 school year was the first year that awards were made at all three grade levels.

"We'd like every school in the nation to participate in this program," Bennett said, "and to send a clear message to their students: excellence and effort matter at all levels."

"Students deserve recognition at every level of education," the Secretary continued. "By offering students the Presidential award at three intervals of their elementary and secondary education, we are reminding them that our educational system offers ample opportunities to improve and excel. We are telling students that it's important to keep up the good work—or start anew as you move to the next rung on the educational ladder—and we will honor you each time for doing your best."

In his letter to the educators outlining the criteria and procedures of the program, Secretary Bennett told principals that they can also present a select number of academic fitness awards to students who have not met all the criteria but have demonstrated outstanding effort.

"Academic achievement should be coupled with good character and habits," Bennett said. "Students who demonstrate diligence and perseverance to an extraordinary degree deserve recognition too."

This year TIME Magazine Education Program, Waldenbooks and SmithKline Beckman Corporation joined the Education Department as corporate sponsors of the PAFA program.

"We know what works in education," Bennett said, "and one common element is motivation for achievement. Good schools use every means that they can to support and strengthen achievement and push students to reach high goals. I've received dozens of letters from principals and students around the country telling me that the Presidential Academic Fitness Awards program has been an 'inspiration to work harder' and a 'motivator that extends throughout the entire year.' A junior high PAFA recipient said it well: 'To be worthy of this award, I will put my best foot forward as I continue my education in high school and college.'"

Schools have from April 1 to June 30 to determine the number of students who qualify for the awards and order the appropriate number of certificates from the Education Department. Schools will present the awards—which are signed by President Reagan, Secretary Bennett and the school principal—to students this spring, usually as part of the graduation activities.

Ministers On Call

Ministers on call this month at Highlands Regional Medical Center: April 5—Tim Jessen, First Presbyterian Church, Prestonsburg; April 12—Eugene Strange, Mayo Methodist Church, Paintsville; April 19—Bobby Spencer, Sammy Clark Branch Freewill Baptist Church; April 26—Wade Hughes, Assemblies of God, West Prestonsburg.

Verdi Performance Will Feature Pavarotti

Luciano Pavarotti returns to television Easter week for a performance of Verdi's "Requiem." Airing Wednesday, April 15, 9-10:30 p.m. on WPBY Channel 33, "Pavarotti In The Verdi Requiem" also features three winners of the Opera Company of Philadelphia/Luciano Pavarotti International Voice Competition: American soprano Susan Dunn, Hungarian mezzo-soprano Ildiko Komlosi and bass Paata Buruchuladze, from Georgia in the USSR.

Lorin Maazel, former music director of the Cleveland Orchestra and currently associated with the Pittsburgh Orchestra and orchestras in Europe, conducts the Opera Company of Philadelphia Orchestra and a 350-voice chorus.

Performing without fee with winners of the Competition he helped found six years ago, Pavarotti is passing on the tradition of public performances for winners of voice competitions that launched his own spectacular career 26 years ago.

"I was very proud to sing the 'Requiem' with the winners," the famed tenor said recently. "It's a difficult piece of music, but we found just the voices to sing it."

NEW HOMEMAKERS MEMBERS

Welcomed recently as new members of the Floyd County Homemakers' organization have been Roberta Sloan, Julie Tussey, Emily Marsillett, Sadie Dotson, Mabel Hicks, Carolyn Lykens, Leann Rogers, and Gail Rogers.

Ministers, Others Now Can Get SS Coverage

Ministers, certain members of religious orders, and Christian Science practitioners who previously had chosen to be exempt from Social Security coverage may now be covered by filing a waiver form with the Internal Revenue Service. However, once the election is made to be covered by Social Security, it is irrevocable.

This election, part of the Tax Reform Act of 1986, must be made by the due date of the applicant's Federal income tax return, including extensions, for the first taxable year beginning after October 22, 1986. For individuals who file on a calendar year basis, the election would have to be made by April 15, 1988, unless an extension of time to file has been granted. Also, calendar year taxpayers can make the election effective for either the 1986 or 1987 tax year.

New Form 2031, Waiver Certificate For Use By Ministers, Certain Members of Religious Orders, and Christian Science Practitioners Electing Coverage Under the Social Security Act, may be filed with the individual's federal income tax return or separately—instructions that come with the form provide specific filing information.

Form 2031 can be ordered from the Forms Distribution Center addresses listed in the Form 1040 instruction booklet or by calling 1-800-424-3676.

Gradual Improvement Seen in Keeping State Plumbing, Sewerage Regulations

By Ron Marstin

To a layman, the drawings on Vernon Walls's desk could be the specs for some wacky invention: tortuous configurations of pipes, vents, traps, U-bends, vees and ells.

The sketches are of no Rube Goldberg contraption, however; they illustrate the do's and don'ts of the Kentucky Plumbing Code. They are the law.

Walls, who is state plumbing inspector for the five counties of the Big Sandy Area Development District, is the first to admit that the code is not among the state's best-kept laws, especially in rural areas. But that is changing, he reports, and for the better.

Neither is Carl Baldrige, one of two sanitation inspectors who share an office with Walls at the Floyd Health Department, reluctant to admit that state regulations governing sewage disposal are ignored in this county at least as often as they are observed. But that too is changing, he insists.

Despite the fact that a 1978 law set penalties of up to three months in jail and a $100 fine for code violations, prosecution is uncommon in this county and convictions are even rarer. "No jury is going to convict someone of code violations when half the jurors are doing the same thing themselves," Walls explained.

But even if fear of conviction is not among them, there are good reasons for anyone building a home or business to see that the plumbing and sewerage is done right, Walls argues. And, increasingly, Floyd countians are getting the message, he said last week.

Essentially, the message is that anyone building a house or business is required to get a plumbing permit from the state Department of Housing, Buildings and Construction and a sewerage permit from the county health department. Neither certificate will be issued before the job is inspected to see that the plumbing and sewerage systems meet code requirements.

If that sounds like a bother, said Walls, it probably will save a lot of headaches in the long run. Dangerous buildups of methane gas can occur in plumbing systems that are not properly vented; ill-designed systems do not work well; and repairs are costly, he noted.

Ken Mullins, Prestonsburg master plumber, agrees. "A lot of the service calls we get, we smell sewer gas. Or people find their fixtures don't drain properly," he said. The extra pipe a professional plumber would use in properly venting a system would not only make the system safer and more efficient but would be more than offset by the pipe saved through good design, he said.

"Somebody who knows what they're doing is not going to waste pipe," Mullins said. "Somebody who's going to put it in wrong is going to waste material anyhow."

Another master plumber, Forest Porter, of Allen, estimated that 95 percent of his service calls are on systems not installed according to code. "If everyone went to code, there would be no service work hardly at all," he said.

Most homeowners who put in substandard plumbing do so out of ignorance rather than a desire to flout the law, Porter said. "They want to do it right; they just don't know what the law is on it," he said.

Especially because of the dearth of journeymen plumbers coming up, a community college or vocational school course in plumbing would be useful, he said.

If education is the key to better conformity with the plumbing code, however, it may take more than that to bring the county's sewage disposal practices up to standard. In the absence of public sewer systems, rural home and business owners have to do the best they can in circumstances that are often less than ideal, Baldrige acknowledged.

Untreated sewage may be flowing into a ditchline or creek but prosecution will be of little help if the property is small and the soil mostly clay, Baldrige said. "What are you going to do if it's an area where you can't do much to correct it? The court is not going to throw the owner out," he said.

Baldrige and fellow-inspector John Bailey put most of their enforcement efforts into seeing that new homes and businesses install adequate septic systems—and in trying to keep up with mobile homes being located on new lots.

The inspectors thought they had hit on an effective way to force compliance when, in August 1985, Floyd Fiscal Court agreed to require owners of new homes and trailers to produce a sewerage permit before they could get their electricity hooked up.

The plan floundered, however, when Kentucky Power Company officials got an attorney-general's opinion supporting their contention that supplying power should not be made contingent on their customers' meeting sewerage standards. Baldrige and Bailey were forced again to rely mostly on their powers of observation and persuasion.

Bailey insists it is not only healthier but makes good economic sense for homeowners to install a proper sewer system. "Some people don't care to spend $20 a sheet on paneling inside, but they won't spend $50 to add extra sewage line outside," he said. "Then when the system malfunctions, the first thing they do is line it to the creek."

Bailey estimates that 85 percent of new home owners in Floyd county now obtain sewerage permits, at least when they are pressed. But as many as 90 percent of new trailers bypass the code, he said.

A narrow bench carved out of a hillside is no place for a mobile home. "They shouldn't be there," Bailey said flatly. But, even on sites which do not lend themselves to adequate sewage disposal, more can be done than many homeowners realize. "We seldom find an area where we can't work something out," the inspector said.

"If someone spends $1,300 or $1,600 to put in a sewage system and then finds the ground won't percolate, that money is lost," Bailey said. "It can save quite a bit to have it done right to start with."

In order to reduce the load on a marginal septic system, Bailey sometimes advises homeowners to install low-volume-flush commodes and water-saving showerheads, and to separate out their "gray" (laundry and kitchen) water, so that it is not all fed into the septic tank.

The reason for putting in an approved septic system, according to Bailey, is simply that anything less won't work. "People are just endangering the health of their neighbors and their own family," he said.

To get a sewerage permit, the homeowner will need to have a sanitation inspector do a site evaluation and soil percolation test and the job will have to be inspected before it is covered over. A three-bedroom house is required to have a septic tank of at least 1,000-gallon capacity and adequate distribution lines. The fee is $40 for a mobile home, $50 for other homes, and $65 for a business.

For a plumbing permit, a homeowner must submit plans of the layout of the house and of the proposed plumbing system. The system will be inspected twice—once before the drywall goes up and again when the house is finished. The cost is reckoned at $15 for the base permit plus $4 per "opening" for a private home, $5 per opening for a business.

That means the cost for a home with one bath, toilet, wash basin, washing machine, kitchen sink, and hot water heater would be $39.

Inspectors recognize that the fees can be a deterrent to compliance. "I'd like to do without them," Bailey said. But the benefits, they insist, are worth it. "We're talking about health," Walls said.

Knott Court Votes Floyd Landfill Use

A decision by Knott Fiscal Court to dump that county's solid waste in the Floyd county landfill will prove "very good for them and very good for us," the head of the Floyd county solid waste program predicted this week.

Bob McAninch, chairman of Floyd County Solid Waste, Inc., said he approached Knott Judge-Executive Homer Sawyer with an offer after officials in Perry county, where Knott had been taking its garbage, sharply increased the annual dumping fee.

In the face of a charge of $72,000 to dump in Perry county, McAninch's offer to let Knott bring its trash to the Garth landfill for $35,000 a year was too good to turn down. Knott magistrate Darrell Short said he had studied the issue and considered the Floyd offer "a good deal." The contract with Floyd took effect April 1.

The fact that the Floyd landfill has a longer life expectancy than that in Perry county was also said to have figured in Knott fiscal court's decision.

McAninch said the added business would add little to the Floyd agency's costs. The inclusion of Knott county as a customer is also a step toward McAninch's hope of making the Floyd landfill a regional facility—a proposal once recommended by a Big Sandy ADD study but yet to win favor among officials of neighboring counties.

The History Corner...

“Reasons For The Interstate Slave Trade”

By A.G. SPENCER

Slavery, as with so many other customs, follows those who travel to new territories. Nor is slavery a wrong committed solely against blacks, as conquered peoples have been enslaved for countless millennium all around the world. Slaves were singled out by parentage, race, social standing, cultural heritage and many other and not so clearly delineated factors.

Nonetheless, when thinking of the history of slavery in America, one thinks of injustice against the black race.

So it was in 18th century Kentucky. Customs and economic structure were based on those in Virginia, which in turn was modeled after the socio-economic systems of England. Perhaps the most pertinent reason for this practice, other than cultural traditions, was the need for cheap labor that accompanied the possession of large tracts of land.

Concurrent with the settlement of Kentucky, the use of slave labor in Virginia was becoming increasingly unprofitable. The great demand for slave labor in the early and privileged world of "the western territories" provided an economic safety valve for the slave-richer/profit-poor plantation owners in Virginia.

Indeed, slavery proved most profitable when habitations were being built in the wilderness. Most planters sent slaves and overseers ahead to clear tracts of land and build homes before leaving their comfortable family residences.

There is also statistical verification for the relationship between ownership of large parcels of land and the institution of slavery. In the late 1780s there were 61,133 whites in Kentucky compared with 11,944 blacks. By 1800, the balance had changed to 179,871 whites as opposed to 41,084 blacks. This trend continued apace until 1830, by which time the burgeoning caucasian population had caused properties to be divided up into increasingly smaller parcels. As slaves are less economically viable on smaller properties, the ownership of them was out of the question for most of the state's population.

It is interesting to note that the increased number of settlers in Kentucky marked a gradual decline in the socio-economic class of the state's residents. The main factor behind this trend was that the bulk of the early settlers were of the privileged class, young heirs who received large sections of land in return for the abdication of their titles and claims on family inheritances. Many of these young and relatively inexperienced planters bungled away their lands through poor business practices, which further led to the division of large properties.

Also responsible for the decline of slave ownership in Kentucky were the prevalent crops during that era. With hemp, cereals and tobacco leading the way for the state's agricultural future, slaves became unnecessary luxuries. None of these crops required large groups of workers, but rather close supervision from expert planters. Also, the cost of feeding and housing slaves rose all out of proportion to the comparative cost of paying for labor to the influx of "poor whites."

Slavery peaked in Kentucky between 1820 and 1830 for all of the aforementioned reasons. Additionally, a law as passed in Congress banning the further importation of slaves into Kentucky after 1833. No law was passed against the export of slaves from Kentucky, and thus an entirely new industry was created in this state: slave exportation.

The opening of new lands after the settlement of Kentucky created a renewed demand for slave labor. Brokers in human properties and misery set up shop in state to take advantage of this new trade. Next week, we'll look at the history behind this commerce and the factors responsible for its rise and fall from economic grace.

Perkins Claims Veto Override Saves Jobs

Last week's vote by Congress to override President Reagan's veto of the federal highway bill will save 800,000 construction jobs and pump $17 billion into the economy, Cong. Carl C. Perkins said this week.

"The president was wrong to veto this bill. He wasn't so much against it, but wanted to re-establish his credibility after the Iran-contra affair," Perkins said. "He picked the wrong bill to play with."

Reagan criticized the bill for imposing too heavy a strain on the federal budget and for including unjustified "pork barrel" projects.

Coach Will Speak In Sex Bias Series

Kathleen DeBoer, head volley ball coach at the University of Kentucky, will present the final seminar for this semester in the Sex Bias Series being offered at Prestonsburg Community College. She will speak in the Pike Auditorium at 3 p.m. on April 14.

Out Again, In Again Is Prisoner's Saga

By Joe Porter

Dennis J. Horn, 18, of Allen, was released the morning of March 30 from the Floyd County Jail on an unsecured bond but by night he was back in jail and charged with stealing a car.

By law a criminal defendant must be given a preliminary hearing within 10 days of his arrest if he can't make bond, or the court is obligated to release him. That was why Horn was freed. County Attorney David A. Barber said that due to Judge Harold Stumbo's illness the District Court has not had a judge on a regular basis to try cases or hold hearings.

At 3:30 p.m. on the same day that Horn was released from jail, Robert "Pig" Goodman reported his 1972 green Cadillac stolen from in front of his Central Ave. home. The keys had been left in the car. The Prestonsburg Police responded and sent word to the Kentucky State Police, who in turn, put the description of the car on the air.

At 6:30 p.m. sheriff's deputy Randy Johnson passed a stopped car with a man in it on Ky. 122 at Hi Hat. Johnson recognized the last three numbers on the license plate as 111, drove a quarter-of-a-mile down the road, and called in a request for the license number of the stolen vehicle. The deputy then returned to the car and arrested Horn. According to Johnson, Horn had run out of gas and was waiting in the car for the rain to stop.

Horn was returned to the Floyd County Jail and charged with theft by unlawful taking—the same charge that caused him to be arrested in the first place. Bond was set at $5,000.

Activists Address Toxic Wastes Issues

"It's important for Kentuckians who have problems with toxic wastes to find out what ordinary people can do when they put their heads together to stand up for their communities and their rights," said Jean True, a member of the Bridge Alliance in Henderson county.

True made her comment in anticipation of a gathering of people working on hazardous waste issues. Co-sponsored by the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition (KFTC) and the Citizens' Clearinghouse For Hazardous Waste, the Kentucky Toxics Organizing Conference will be held March 27-29 at the Hindman Settlement School.

The conference will bring together activists from Kentucky and neighboring states and provide an opportunity for participants to share information, learn organizing and technical skills, and develop strategies to combat toxic waste problems.

"If we sit around and wait for the state and EPA (to act on these problems), it won't get done. If we don't do it, it won't get done," added True, a leader of the Bridge Alliance, one of the groups organized to stop the dangers of a new Union Carbide PCB plant in Henderson. "It's important to realize that problems with toxics don't stop at the county line or the city limits. Kentuckians are going to have to start working together to make some changes."

One of the distinguished guests at the conference will be Lois Gibbs, a founder of a grassroots organization to fight toxic hazards at a deadly chemical dump at Love Canal in New York. After successful organizing efforts in her own community, Gibbs helped establish the Citizens' Clearinghouse for Hazardous Wastes, a national organization which provides information and organizing assistance to local organizations dealing with hazardous waste problems. Gibbs will lead several workshops and will give a keynote address at the conference.

Another notable guest will be David J. Sarokin, a nationally-known expert in the field of hazardous waste reduction. Sarokin recently co-authored the book, "Cutting Chemical Wastes," and serves as a consultant to INFORM, a national organization which develops practical actions for the conservation and preservation of natural resources.

Tom FitzGerald, director of the Kentucky Resources Council, will also be on hand to conduct several workshops on citizen participation in the hazardous waste regulatory process.

The conference will begin Friday evening, March 27, with reports by grassroots leaders about toxic waste activities in local communities around Kentucky. On Saturday morning, concurrent organizing skill workshops will be held, followed by technical skill workshops in the afternoon. A public forum featuring a panel discussion on Kentucky's toxic waste problems and proposed solutions will take place Saturday night.

Saturday will be topped off with a celebration of the accomplishments of groups addressing toxic problems in Kentucky.

Sunday morning will be devoted to a discussion of statewide strategies, such as legislative proposals and further development of KFTC's toxics network.

Besides a lot of learning and work, there will be time to get to know others and have plenty of fun.

"I think everyone should come to this conference. Your enthusiasm gets aroused when you get with other people who share these problems," remarked Patty Wallace, co-chairperson of the Lawrence County Concerned Citizens.

Anyone wishing to receive a conference brochure and registration information should contact the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition, Box 864, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653; 606/886-6499.

INTENTIONS WERE GOOD, but the result fell short. John W. Howard, right, Prestonsburg attorney, points out a city "curb cut" designed to help people in wheelchairs, but too steep to be used safely. With him is Mike Crowe, Louisville resident, who has muscular dystrophy and is on a 1,500-mile trek across the state to draw attention to the unintended barriers that restrict the lives of disabled people. Crowe said he has gotten promises from numerous community leaders in the state to take on a disability-for-the-day, May 7, National Barrier Awareness Day. Howard noted that conditions here have improved in the last decade but many barriers still exist, particularly at the Prestonsburg post office, which is inaccessible to him.

Hospital Stay Is Short For Prisoner

Both an ambulance and a rescue squad were called to the Floyd County jail, Thursday, when an inmate complained of chest pain and appeared to be having a heart attack. Douglas Keathley, 33, of Rice Branch near Banner, was thrashing around on the floor in pain, according to one rescue squad worker.

When transported to the emergency room at Highlands Regional Medical Center, however, Keathley was found to be suffering from hyperventilation and "muscular skeletal pain." He was back in jail the same afternoon.

Keathley had been jailed Thursday, less than two hours before the incident, on a domestic violence warrant. He was released on bond, Friday.

USE INDIVIDUAL CHECKS FOR SEPARATE TAX PAYMENTS

Taxpayers who owe more than one tax liability should submit separate payments, the Internal Revenue Service says.

These liabilities include taxes owed for estimated tax, employment tax, additional tax, etc.

The IRS advises taxpayers to submit individual checks or money orders with the tax returns filed (ex: 1040, 1040ES, 940, 941, etc.) for easy association. Each payment should contain the taxpayer's identification number, the form number and the tax year, on the front of the check or money order. Use separate envelopes for each tax return and payment.

This simple step will ensure proper crediting to the accounts intended.

Bernstein On Brahms

Leonard Bernstein has introduced and conducted some of the most acclaimed programs of classical, modern and his own music on "Great Performances." His "Bernstein on Brahms" series will feature the Symphony No. 2 when it airs on KET Monday, April 20 at 8 p.m.

Bernstein's remarkable affinity for the works of 19th-century German composer Johannes Brahms is evident in the program. "I have been involved in a long period of studying, rehearsing and performing Brahms' music here in Vienna and in Germany. My head is full of Brahms—full of questions about him to which I can't always find answers, except through his music," said Bernstein. He conducts the Vienna Philharmonic in the nine-part Brahms series which premiered last spring on public television stations.

"I hope this series will help us find out something more about this most mysterious of great composers, and I have the feeling that ultimately it is the music itself that will inform us," Bernstein added.

"Great Performances" is presented by an alliance of five public television stations: WNET/New York; KERA, Dallas-Ft. Worth; KQED, San Francisco; South Carolina ETV Network, Columbia, S.C.; and WTTW/Chicago.

Contest Winners

$50 U.S. Savings Bonds were presented to Rachel Dawn Vanover, 12, of Martin; Mustafa Badrudduja, 9, of Prestonsburg; Heather Jo Shepherd, 6, and Brandy Michelle Ramey, 7, both from Hueysville. The girls collected hearts at the Prestonsburg Winn-Dixie, and their drawings were picked as Valentine's Day winners.

Wal-Mart Store Here Is Reported Robbed

While the Prestonsburg Police Department would not comment on the case they did initially confirm that a robbery took place at the Wal-Mart department store the evening of April 1.

Wal-Mart manager Carl Sparks, when asked about the robbery said, "I don't know anything about it. I can't say anything about it." Yet it is understood that approximately $17,000 in cash and an undisclosed amount of money in checks were stolen. The bag containing the money is believed to have been removed from the back office through a window and was later found in a vent in a restroom at the store.

After the money was discovered missing, the store was locked and the employees were searched before they were allowed to leave. The robbery, which wasn't reported to the Prestonsburg Police until the following day, is currently being investigated by Wal-Mart's own security force.

KET SPECIAL LAMPOONS IRS

The master of political satire, Mark Russell, continues making light of the headline makers in Washington when "The Mark Russell Comedy Special" airs Wednesday, April 22, at 9 p.m. on KET.

This time, as many Americans have just labored over tax forms trying to figure out what is not deductible this year that was last year, Russell takes aim at the IRS.

Russell, in his 12th season on public television, performs before a standing-room-only crowd. With sly parodies and outrageous puns, he plays piano, sings songs and tells jokes. He characterizes his comedy talents as "being able to recognize things for their availability to ridicule."

The "Mark Russell Comedy Special" are produced by WNET/Buffalo.

Tour Heart Clinic

The third grade from Garrett Elementary School toured Highlands Regional Medical Center Monday, March 23. Their tour centered on the cardiac rehab department. This department has been in operation at Highlands since the mid-seventies. It is a complete program for people who have suffered heart attacks, had heart surgery or are considered high risk for heart disease.

PARENTS WITHOUT PARTNERS WILL MEET IN PIKEVILLE

Parents Without Partners will meet at 6:30 p.m., at the Mountain Comprehensive Care Center, in Pikeville, April 13 and 14. For further information, call 432-3143, before 5 p.m., or 432-3057, after that time.

Surprisingly enough, the region with the largest area sensitive to acid rain is not New England. It is the Southeast, where acid-forming sulfur dioxide emissions have increased more than five-fold since 1950. A Standard and Poor's report of last June warned that acid rain presents a clear danger to the forest products industry. The report cautioned that "if acid rain kills an appreciable number of trees on the millions of acres owned by the forest products companies, the companies' stock prices will die faster than the trees."

Rebuffed FCEA Members Vow To 'Go the Political Route'

By Ron Marstin

Rebuffed in their attempts to get a meeting with members of the Board of Education, leaders of an organization of Floyd teachers vowed last week to seek redress next year at the polling booth.

Noting that three board members face elections in 1988, Eugene Blackburn, chairman of the Floyd County Education Association's negotiations committee, urged about 20 colleagues at a Friday meeting of the organization to "become politically active."

"Let's go out there and work to support a candidate who will be for our cause," he said.

Betty Jean Rowland, local liaison with the Kentucky Education Association, agreed. "We wanted an opportunity to sit down with the board members; it looks as if we're going to have to go the political route," she told the small meeting audience at the Holiday Inn here. "To get the attention of a mule, you first have to hit it on the head."

Blackburn said the group had waited since November 1985 to talk to the board with a view to negotiating a comprehensive contract. The contract teachers currently have is described as very general in nature.

After first appearing cooperative—Chairman Dr. J. D. Adams and Ray "Shag" Campbell agreed to serve on a board committee to meet with the teacher representatives—Adams had repeatedly sidestepped efforts to pin him down to a time and place, Blackburn said.

Pressed on the issue by FCEA president Patricia Barnette at last Wednesday's board meeting, Adams declined to set a date for a meeting with the teachers and also turned down Barnette's suggestion that he let another board member take his place on the committee.

Teachers are not the only board employees to have experienced difficulty recently in gaining the attention of their employer. This Friday is the deadline set by officials of Teamsters Local 783 for the school district to begin deducting union dues from the pay packets of those workers who have requested it. It is a deadline Asst. Supt. Ron Hager has said the board has no intention of honoring.

Unlike the union, the FCEA has been recognized by the board as the teachers' agent since 1975. But it will take more than mere recognition for the teachers to persuade the board to enter into contract negotiations, Rowland said. "Traditionally, people win a contract when they win at the polls," she said.

At the FCEA meeting, for which teachers and pupils got the day off on Friday, KEA staffer Garnet Williamson urged the teachers to play an active, critical role in the periodic evaluations which are now mandatory for teachers.

While there is a "big brother" element in the current push to make teachers more accountable for their job performance, teachers are not reluctant to improve their professional competence as long as they have a say in the process, she said. "We have to be prepared to say what we would like to do to improve our skills," she said.

The teachers were encouraged to familiarize themselves with the evaluation process, to question any evaluations they considered unfair, and to document their efforts to improve their skills.

Noting that "we're at the beginning of a revolution" in education, Williamson told the Floyd teachers' group that "we need to be active and involved in the process."

The current round of educational reforms, she said, began with a 1983 report that compared U.S. schools unfavorably with school systems in West Germany and Japan and criticized U.S. schools for what it characterized as "a tide of mediocrity."

The decision to evaluate Kentucky teachers came out of the 1984 General Assembly. A move to tie teacher salaries to their job performance was opposed by the state teachers' organization and was not adopted by the legislature. But tenured teachers were required to be evaluated at least every three years, and non-tenured teachers more frequently. Unless they receive an unsatisfactory evaluation, teachers are entitled to a $300 bonus next year.

Forum Asks For Board Report, Board Requests Calamity Days

By Ron Marstin

A citizen group challenged the Floyd Board of Education last Wednesday to report to the public on progress made in meeting goals set in 1985 to improve the quality of Floyd schools.

Noting that the Master Education Improvement Plan adopted by the board in November 1985 committed the board to specific activities to improve the schools' academic performance, attendance record, and drop-out rate, Jean Rosenberg, representing the Floyd County Education Forum, told the board that "we as parents haven't seen much" by way of an effort to implement the plan.

"It is really important for this board to communicate with the community," Rosenberg said. "Where do we stand on the Master Education Improvement Plan?"

Assistant Superintendent Ron Hager noted later that the board publishes an annual summary report on the district's record in meeting its goals under the plan. He also pointed out that the district is only in the second year of the three-year plan.

The Floyd board will ask the state Department of Education to grant "disaster days"—missed days which, with state approval, would not have to be made up at the end of the school year—for 11 county schools.

Twelve days are being requested for Osborne Elementary, which lost nine days when the school's heating system broke down and three more on account of fire and water damage caused by vandalism.

Eleven days are sought for Wheelwright High School—10 lost when the furnace was being repaired and one missed when the water was off. Eleven days are requested also for McDowell high and elementary schools—nine missed when a new sewage plant malfunctioned at the start of the school year, one when the water was off.

Six days are sought for Prestonsburg High School, which was out for five days when a roof leaked water and another day when an electrical transformer burned out.

Health Dept. Nurse In Wayland, Friday

A nurse from the Floyd Health Department will be at the Methodist Church in Wayland on Friday, April 10, from 10:00 until 2:00. She will offer T.B. skin tests, urinalyses, blood pressures, anemia screening, and immunizations. These services are free and open to the public.

There will be no nursing services at the Health Department on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday due to the Regional Heart Clinic being held at the Health Department on those days.

The Health Department will also close at 12 noon on Friday, April 17 in observance of the Good Friday Holiday.

State Takes Bite Out Of Little Bit

In spite of the intention he stated last month, neither Burl Johnson, president of Little Bit Coal Company, nor his attorney showed up to defend the Prestonsburg company's reclamation work at a hearing held April 1 in Frankfort. As a result, the company has forfeited its $5,000 reclamation bond, backed by letter of credit from a Prestonsburg bank.

The state Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet also will probably take further action to recover an additional $3,600 from Johnson, according to Cabinet attorney Katie Daugherty. That is the amount of a civil penalty that was assessed against the company last year but was not paid.

The bond money will be turned over to the state Division of Abandoned Mine Lands and used to finish reclamation work at the site, Daugherty said. About two acres of surface land on Cow Creek were disturbed by the underground mine, which ceased operation several years ago.

According to a state inspector, Little Bit officials failed to establish a permanent vegetative cover on the site, which now is ridged with gullies caused by erosion.

EPA Moves To Enforce Brine Ban As Public Views State Water Plan

By Louise Houghton

Kentucky's water management plan offers hope for improved water quality in the state, but the plan itself could be improved as well, a spokesperson for the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition told state officials at a public hearing held March 31 at May Lodge. In particular, said Denise Giardina, the plan should give higher priority to protecting groundwater, get water-protection officials more involved in the coal mine permitting process, and show a definite commitment "to once and for all stop the illegal brine pollution problem."

The water plan does not address the problem of brine pollution at any length, but in the last two weeks the issue has become a focal point of state and federal concern. The federal Environmental Protection Agency issued a new ruling, to take effect April 20, that limits brine in Kentucky streams to 600 milligrams per liter of water, or 250 milligrams per liter near drinking-water supplies.

State water officials said last week that they will begin enforcing the EPA ruling and will stop issuing "economic exemptions" to water-quality standards. Loss of the exemptions, which were granted following an out-of-court settlement between the state and oil and gas producers, may force the closing of many oil wells in eastern Kentucky.

Giardina was the only person who made a formal statement at the meeting, held by Division of Water of-officials to gather public comment on the plan, which was circulated in draft form earlier this year. Among others attending, however, were several Magoffin county oil company owners and workers.

The problem of brine pollution caused by oil wells is greatly overstated, they contended, and increased efforts to regulate their work will raise unemployment in a county already plagued with one of the worst jobless rates in the nation.

"When they put the little oil workers out of work, what's going to happen then?" company owner Danny Blanton asked the officials.

"It's not just the wells' problem," said Jim Arnett, an oil company employee. "There's several other things causing chloride" in the water, he said.

A person would drink more brine, or salt, in a can of tomato juice than in a glass of water, contended C.J. Tackett, owner of two oil companies.

"Nobody makes you drink the tomato juice," responded Giardina. "But you have to have water."

The Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition also is "aware and alarmed," Giardina told the officials, that the plan gives little attention to coal mining, "the greatest source of water pollution in eastern Kentucky." Mining currently is regulated by the state Department of Surface Mining, and permits sometimes conflict with the goal of protecting water resources, she said. The state Division of Water should be "integrally involved" in the issuing of permits, she advised.

Giardina also suggested that the state set up an environmental hotline for citizens to register complaints about water pollution.

John P. Burgess, of Prestonsburg, questioned the officials about the state's failure to warn the public about Kentucky streams that do not meet federal standards to use for swimming and fishing. He noted that 53 miles of Blaine Creek, as well as a stretch of the Big Sandy River, have been so designated but continue to be popular fishing and swimming waters.

"Don't you think it's fair to the public," he asked, "to let them know there's a possibility of danger?"

Many Kentucky streams do pose some threat to swimmers, acknowledged Ken Cooke, state Water Watch coordinator, adding that the fish may not necessarily be inedible. Streams are posted where a "perceived health risk" exists, he said. More widespread posting of streams that don't meet federal standards may be a good idea, he said.

The Division of Water will continue to accept public comments about the water plan through the end of April, according to Charles Collier, administrative officer. Most of the comments received to date, he said, have focused on three issues: water quantity, rather than quality, and the need for long-range planning for population growth; financing for water and wastewater systems; and "non-point" pollution, including toxic chemicals, that comes from widespread agriculture, construction, mining and forestry operations.

NOW IS THE TIME TO SELL HOMES

If you are thinking about selling your home, you can take heart in the fact that housing affordability is at its best level in four years, which will make selling your home easier and faster. And there are a number of steps you can take to sell your home more quickly, according to Big Sandy REALTORS.

Your REALTOR, a real estate agent who belongs to the National Association of Realtors, will have a lot of helpful hints to make your home easier to sell, but here are some general things to keep in mind.

First impressions are lasting. The front door should be fresh and clean. The yard should be neat and cleared of toys and debris.

Make certain your home is clean and appealing. If the walls look dingy, paint or re-paper them.

Fix any dripping faucets. Not only do they discolor sinks, they suggest plumbing repairs may be needed, whether they are or not.

Fix any loose knobs, sticking doors, windows and drawers. Failure to do so may be interpreted as a sign of neglect.

Bathrooms are a selling point. Make sure everything is shining. Clean and repaint bathtub and basin caulking. Clothing and toilet articles should be put away.

Cluttered rooms look smaller than they are. Remove excess furniture.

Is all this effort worthwhile? Simply consider that you are competing for the buyer's attention with other families who are also selling their homes. Time and effort invested to make certain that your home is shown in its best light not only will give you a competitive edge, but will also help you get the best price for your home according to the Big Sandy Board of REALTORS.

Corn Chips May Mean Cash For Corn Crop

Continued growth in the snack food industry could mean a new market for Kentucky corn growers.

As demand for snack foods increases it is cheaper for manufacturers to build new plants closer to growing markets than to produce more product at old sites and pay the cost of shipping to where the increased demand is. That little lesson in economics is why Kentucky corn growers may have a new market, and a new crop, in the near future.

Charles Poneleit, an agronomist at the University of Kentucky, said an association of the nation's largest corn chip manufacturers recently invited corn seed producers to submit samples of varieties expected to meet the strict and unique set of characteristics required to produce corn chips. Poneleit is testing those varieties to see how well they grow in Kentucky.

"The corn chip manufacturers will test the varieties for suitability to purpose. Our interest is to see if Kentucky farmers can grow the corn on our soils and in our climate. Seventy snack food hybrids were evaluated in 1986. Many of them performed exceptionally well," Poneleit said.

The next step is to see which varieties the manufacturers like, and be prepared to grow them.

"There are corn chip manufacturing plants in and around Kentucky. Some of them buy their corn on the open market, and some contract for it. In either case, as varieties that grow well in Kentucky are accepted by corn chip producers, there will be a marketing opportunity for Kentucky farmers," Poneleit said.

Horseflies Coming To Hillbilly Days

Beware when you come to Hillbilly days. According to Larry Webster, Music Coordinator for Hillbilly Days, they are flying in from Ithaca New York, namely the Tompkins County Horseflies.

The legendary Hillbilly Days begins Thursday in Pikeville, and as usual one of the finest old time bands in the nation will be featured. The Tompkins County Horseflies are a group of three men and one woman who play the ancient tunes and songs of rural America in the old days before radio. Their vast repertoire includes relics of our mountain past.

The Horseflies will be playing at the City Park Bandstand around noon on Friday and later Friday evening, just before the Marlow Tackett show at 5:30. According to Webster, the Horseflies are closely akin in their music to the fabulous Chicken Chokers, who were crowd favorites at Hillbilly Days a couple of years back. The two bands have recorded an album together, which will be on sale at the park.

In addition, the stage at the park will be open to any bands who play traditional non-electric Hillbilly music from around noon on Thursday until the weekend is over. Webster particularly asks local bands to try and get off work and come and be available, Thursday and Friday, during the day. "You can hear some of the world's finest music free in Pikeville next weekend. These local bands play their hearts out, and the crowds love them. We thank them so much," said Webster, who tries to keep the sound as old time as possible.

Friday night at about 7, musicians and dancers can enter the annual amateur contest, which awards cash prizes and beautiful ceramic trophies with Hillbilly themes to the top three winners in the Band, Individual, and Adult and Child Dance categories. Registration is at the bandstand just before the contest. An individual contestant can have one person to accompany. There are excellent musicians who will accompany anybody wanting to enter who needs musical help. The band contest is a highlight each year, featuring five or six of the best Bluegrass and old time bands anywhere, slugging it out for the top prize. As for the dancing, there are categories for youth and adults. The type of dance is sometimes called clogging, or buck dancing, or footstomping.

Kelver Stiltner and the fantastic Hillbilly Squaredancers of Elkhorn City will be dancing throughout the weekend in their tasteful and highly colorful style.

In addition to the invasion of horseflies and the contests, the grand old lady of Hillbilly Days, Alpha Porter well into her nineties, will be back to bray like an excited jack mule to the pure delight of the audience.

In case of rain everybody will get wet.

UK, IMMR Schedule Two-Day Free Seminar

The objective of the seminar is to retrain students in safe working procedures as related to their job; to update students on any changes that occurred in state mining laws and regulations during the past year, and to recertify all students who complete the required 16 hours annual retraining course.

The Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals will provide the instructor for the workshop, along with instructors from the University of Kentucky Department of Mining Engineering and IMMR/BRASH. The workshop will be directed to all underground coal and limestone miners and the supporting mining industry personnel staff. There is no cost to attend the workshop which will be held in the new Student Center on the campus of the University of Kentucky. Registration will be from 7:30-8:30 a.m. (Room 228). Pre-registration is recommended.

Forest Management Book Is Available

Publication of the 1987 Forest Farmer Manual has made proper and profitable management of Kentucky forests easier.

Most of Kentucky is in forest, and most of it privately owned. Much of the privately owned forest in Kentucky is not properly managed to ensure maximum profit when the timber is harvested, or maximum enjoyment of the growing forest.

Bart Thielges, chairman of the University of Kentucky forestry department, said many of Kentucky's privately owned forests are improperly managed due to lack of knowledge of proper techniques, rather than a lack of interest in the land or timber.

"The proper management of timber land requires some effort, but that is not what keeps so many forest owners out of their woods. Not knowing what to do to promote wildlife, or improve tree quality, or how to manage the taxation aspects of timber harvests is what frustrates many forest owners to the point that they just let the woods fend for themselves," Thielges said.

The Forest Farm Manual provides answers from experts to all those questions. University and private sector experts on timber taxation under the 1986 tax bill, investment analysis, wildlife ecology, forest management, insect and disease control, and timber marketing, to name just a few, have pooled their efforts to produce this comprehensive, easy-to-understand, 148-page, illustrated guide to making money from growing trees.

The book is available from the non-profit Forest Farmers Association by writing to them at: Box 95385, Atlanta, GA 30347. It is free to members of the association.

Teenager's Choice Is "Wonderworks" Focus

A compelling story about the development of self-confidence and determination is the subject of "Room To Move," airing as a segment of the series "Wonderworks" Saturday, April 25, at 8 p.m. on KET. This popular series for the entire family repeats on Sundays at 11 a.m.

Australia provides the rich back-drop for this story. Youth often is accompanied by the gentle prodding of parents to achieve in high school academics and activities. In "Room To Move," Carol's parents are encouraging her to become a top track athlete.

A new girl, Angie, arrives at school. She is rejected by her peer group due to her outrageous "punk" appearance and bizarre behavior. Carol befriends Angie and discovers her to be an accomplished dancer. A friendship is formed as Carol's interest in dance begins to overshadow everything else.

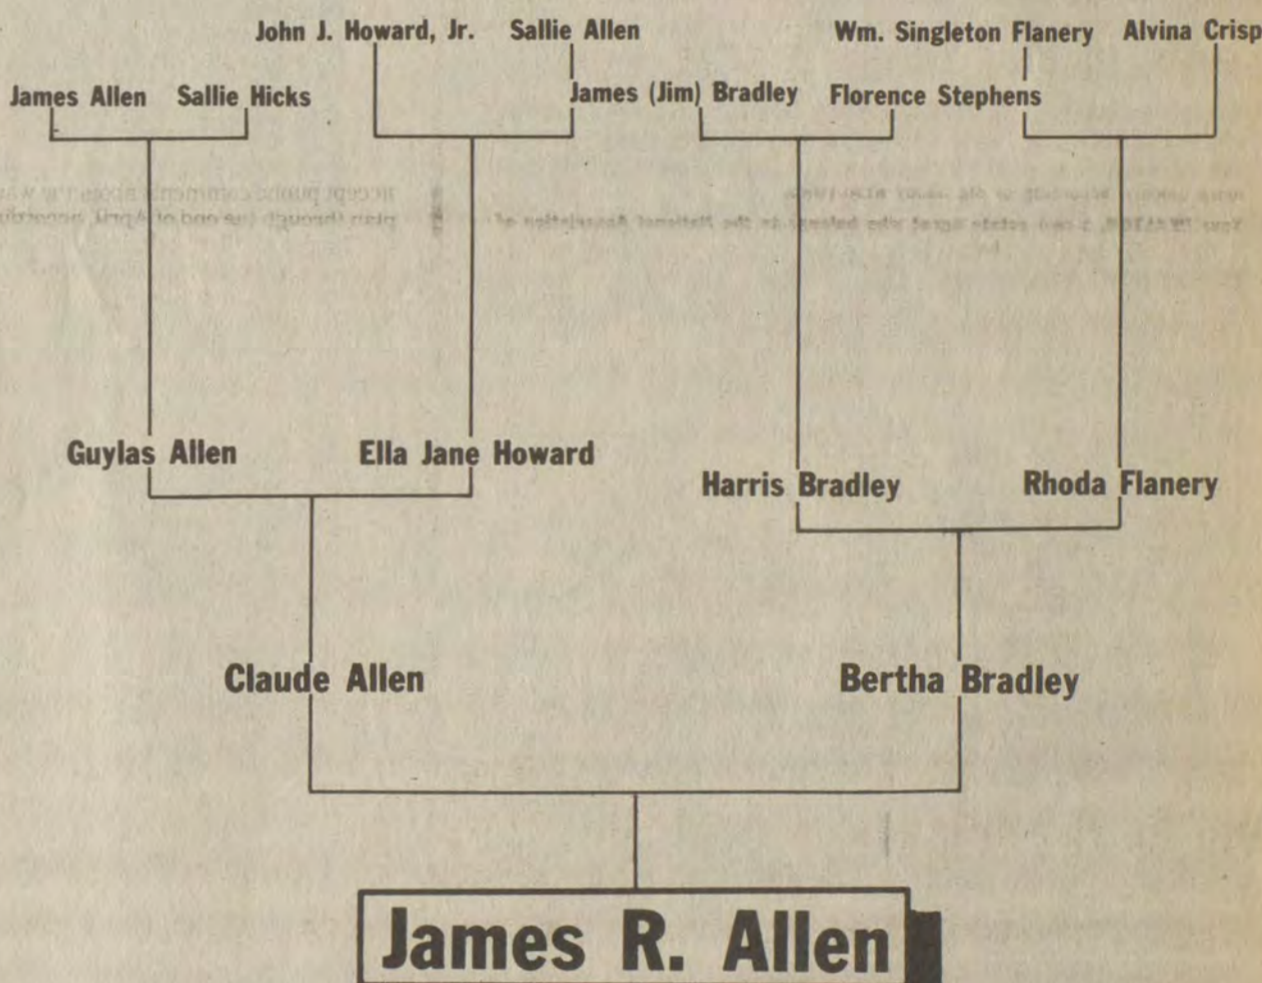

A choice must be made by Carol: Whether to pursue a promising track career, or to follow her newfound love for dance at which she is equally adept. Carol can rely only upon self-confidence and determination to make the best decision.

"Wonderworks" is produced by a consortium of Public Television stations headed by WQED/Pittsburgh and including KCET/Los Angeles; KTCA/Minneapolis-St. Paul; South Carolina ETV Network/Columbia, S.C.; and WETA/Washington, D.C.

Severns Valley Church Has Weathered Indian Attacks, Civil War, Hard Times

More than 200 years ago, Baptists formed Severns Valley Baptist Church, the first evangelical congregation west of the Alleghenies. Located in Elizabethtown, it survived Indian attacks, war and hard times to remain a prominent Kentucky congregation. The current church facilities offer Baptists a prime location for state-wide conferences and seminars.

Established June 17, 1781, charter members worshiped outdoors in summer and in members' log cabins in winter. Men carried rifles to worship. A guard stood outside the meeting area to watch for lurking Indians. John Gerard, the first pastor, was captured by Indians. His fate remains a mystery.

During the late 1700s, the congregation served both Severns Valley and Nolin communities. They met only monthly for business, a short worship service and a sermon. The first paid minister, Josiah Dodge, was ordained a "gospel minister" to work half-time for one year.

A great spiritual revival swept the land in 1801, and Severns Valley Church caught the fervor. More than 100 people confessed Christ and received baptism in less than a year. By 1803 the church divided to give Nolin its own congregation. Severns Valley Church retained only 37 members.

In 1823, however, the church ordained Colmore Lovelace as pastor. During the next six years, the congregation more than tripled in size to 143 members. By 1833 the church had 184 members. The congregation realized it needed to build an all-weather home. A new church building was completed in 1834.

Thomas Fisher, a widely-known Kentucky evangelist at the time, led the congregation in a six-week meeting the following summer. Seventy-two people received baptism, and 92 joined the church, bringing total membership to 248. Fisher preached when anti-mission Campbellites clinched a foothold in Kentucky, making his convert statistics even more impressive.

The Baptist denomination in the Commonwealth had dropped from 45,000 to 35,000 in the early 1830s as members shifted loyalties to Alexander Campbell. The Severns Valley Church remained true, though. They strongly supported the General Association of Baptists in Kentucky (now the Kentucky Baptist Convention), formed in 1837. In 1840 and 1860 the Association met at the church.

Civil War erupted in 1861, seriously disrupting church life. The Severns Valley congregation divided on political issues but continued to meet for gospel business. They reported 17 baptisms in 1864. Total membership, however, dropped due to strife from war years. By 1870 church membership stood at 112.

Despite enormous financial setbacks after the Civil War, the congregation decided to build for anticipated growth. Completed in 1897, an $8,000 brick church contained stained-glass windows and electric lights.

Growth projections proved true. Between 1899 and 1907, church membership doubled. Sunday School grew and the congregation bought an education building in 1908. In 1910, the congregation accepted 97 new members and baptized 45 people.

World War I and the ensuing depression took another heavy toll on the congregation, but growth did return to Severns Valley Church. From 1924 through 1932, membership increased from 600 to 900, while Sunday School averaged 325.

In 1940 Dr. William Fred Kendall took the pastorate at Severns Valley. He brought about needed administrative changes, hired the church's first director of religious education and reworked the financial system. During World War II the congregation ministered to Fort Knox, where up to 70,000 military personnel were stationed.

Lewis E. Martin accepted the Severns Valley pastorate in 1946. Two years later 91 people received baptism and membership stood at 1,610. Members started a radio ministry in 1950.

In 1952 Dr. Verlin C. Kruschwitz arrived as pastor and helped the congregation build a new physical plant. It was completed in 1955. During the mid-50s, baptisms averaged 77 and new memberships averaged 110 per year.

The congregation grew in several ways during subsequent years. In 1952, members gave $60,000 to the church, but in 1979 members gave $600,000. The church used part of the income to aid other churches. In 1968, with the church building debt paid off, the congregation marked 43 percent of its undesignated gifts for world missions. The church continues to lead the Kentucky Baptist Convention in gifts to the Cooperative Program, a plan of financial distribution and responsibility that supports Baptist ministries around the world. Last year the church gave $262,384 through this plan.

In a town with a population of 18,000, Severns Valley Church now features the fifth largest congregation in Kentucky, with 3,171 members. It ranked ninth in the state in number of baptisms last year. Under the current pastor, J. Howard Cobble, the church offers dual worship services and Sunday School each week. It has started two missions and constituted another mission into a church. (KBC)

Floyd Named Site To Assist Victims

Floyd county has been selected as one of 10 sites for a model victims' assistance program, according to Attorney General Dave Armstrong who made the announcement at a news conference held recently. According to Armstrong, the project is a cooperative effort between his office and Commonwealth's Attorney Jim Allen, who will oversee the program locally.

"Our goal is to educate victims about the criminal justice system, what to expect from the system, and what the system expects of them," Armstrong said. "The program also will keep victims informed about the progress in their cases, identify services available to victims and help victims take advantage of those services."

The program, which will be housed in the commonwealth attorney's office, will be staffed by trained volunteers. "My Victims' Advocacy Division staff will work closely with Jim in finding volunteers and getting them trained," he added.

The statewide 'Volunteer Victims' Assistance Program is being funded by a federal Justice Assistance Act grant which was recently awarded to the Attorney General's Office.

The idea of local victims' programs came from a series of hearings Armstrong held in 1985 to hear about the problems confronting victims. "We heard time and time again that victims feel the system treats them like unwelcome outsiders," he said. "They are unsure and confused about their own role in the process and feel ignored by the people who are supposed to be on their side." He added that victims have told him that they feel that no one listens to them or cares about the pain they have suffered. "We think the creation of local assistance programs finally will offer them information and someone to listen," he said.

The selection of the 10 sites for the Model Victims' Assistance programs was based on geographical diversity, the local crime rate and the population. "I see these Model Victims' Assistance Programs as an excellent beginning, but it is my hope that someday we will have a victims' program in every county," Armstrong added. "My staff will work with those local offices which were not funded to find alternative funding so they can launch projects as soon as possible."

To Attend Governor's School For Arts

Two of the 120 students selected to attend the first Governor's School for the Arts are from Floyd county. Wendy Meece, sophomore at Prestonsburg High School, is one of 15 named statewide who will receive instruction in dance, and Kathi Keen, sophomore at Allen Central High, is among 18 students selected in the visual arts category.

Miss Meece, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Fred E. Meece, of Prestonsburg, and Miss Keen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Keen, of Wayland, were among 375 students asked to a final audition in March. More than 1100 students applied for admission to the Governor's School, and auditions were held at seven locations throughout the state during January and February.

Among the alternates named are Elizabeth Hall, of Prestonsburg High School, in the instrumental music division. An alternate would be selected to attend the school if any of those originally selected were to drop out.

Two other students from Eastern Kentucky were recognized with Elaine Webb, of Pikeville High, selected in the drama field, and Kandi Smith, of Knott County Central, named an alternate for the same category.

This first school, founded in 1986 by Governor Collins and the General Assembly, will be held at Bellarmine College in Louisville, July 5-26. Classes, performances and activities will take place at Bellarmine, a private, liberal arts college, and at the Kentucky Center for the Arts.

Governor Collins has announced that Blue Cross-Blue Shield of Kentucky will provide corporate sponsorship by leading a drive to make scholarships available to each of the students. G. Douglas Sutherland, president of the company, will be chairman of the 1987 statewide scholarship drive. In addition, there will be a legislative appropriation of $150,000 to meet the budget of almost $235,000. Ashland Oil was the first corporation to make a significant financial contribution to the school.

The school is jointly administered by the Kentucky Department of the Arts and the Kentucky Center for the Arts. David Thurmond, the school's director, said, "Our goal is to develop the artistic skills and creativity of Kentucky's talented youth by providing them with the opportunity to study with outstanding artists/teachers."

Instruction will be provided in visual arts, creative writing, dance, drama, instrumental music and vocal music. In addition to receiving intensive technical training, students also will have the opportunity to explore and develop their creative abilities. History, aesthetics, criticism, and theory of the arts will be offered, and students will attend performances by guest artists at the Kentucky Center for the Arts. Finally, career and college counseling will round out the program.

Miss Meece's instructor is Jan Hurst at Prestonsburg Community College.

Not Just A Race,
Derby Is 'The Race'

To say that the Kentucky Derby is a horse race is to say that Mount Everest is a hill.

In addition to being arguably the world's most famous thoroughbred horse race, the Kentucky Derby is the focus for a 10-day festival that appeals to just about every taste and interest. The festival starts April 18 with the McDonald's Derby Festival Basketball Classic which brings together high school stars from around the country to compete at Freedom Hall. Other highlights include the Great Balloon Race, April 25, in which colorful hot-air balloons dot the skies over Louisville, and the annual race between the Belle of Louisville and Delta Queen steamboats, April 29.

Also popular each year is the annual Pegasus Parade in downtown Louisville, now in its 32nd year of delighting young and old. It's scheduled for April 30. Later that day, the 31st annual Philip Morris Festival of Stars, featuring top entertainers, takes place.

The Derby itself is run every year on this first Saturday in May, which this year is May 2. As always, tens of thousands will jam Churchill Downs for the 113th running of the "most exciting two minutes in sports."

For information on Kentucky Derby Festival activities, call (502) 584-6383.

While the Derby tops the list of tourism events around Kentucky in late April, other activities also will draw visitors during perhaps the most beautiful time of year.

In Eastern Kentucky, visitors will enjoy the following:

April 17-19—Mid-April is the peak of the blooming of spring wildflowers in Kentucky, so Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, in Prestonsburg, has scheduled a special weekend to observe and learn more about the many species. Also scheduled is square dancing and other entertainment. Call the park at (606) 886-2711.

April 22-25—A showcase for Appalachia's heritage, the Sue Bennett Folk Festival in London, features traditional-music workshops, a juried arts and crafts show, and a quilt display. Call Sue Bennett College at (606) 864-9681.

April 24—Jenny Wiley State Resort Park near Prestonsburg will host an international dance celebration featuring performances by "Spaceforce," Eastern Kentucky University's dance theater. The performance is scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. Call (606) 886-2711.

April 24-26—Exciting whitewater rafting is in store for visitors to the Corbin area as the state park system and Rockcastle Adventures cosponsor a weekend of rafting on the Cumberland River. The price per person (double occupancy) includes two nights at Cumberland Falls State Resort Park. Call (606) 679-5026.

April 24-26—The scenic hills of eastern Kentucky offer photographers to capture nature at its most beautiful. Pine Mountain State Resort Park will conduct an event in which photographers shoot a roll of film to be judged in a contest. Call the park at (606) 337-3066.

They ask—What is the concern of building a school at the so-called “DOWNHILL SKI SITE”.

If the School Board is willing to spend the money, you can put a school anywhere. The point is: What will the school cost? and What will the school be like?

The Concerned Citizens of Left Beaver oppose spending 1/2 million dollars to put a school in a location where the cost of preparing the site will outweigh the cost of the facility. It is a crime to waste our tax money to put a school on the Board proposed location. We urge other Floyd County taxpayers to contact their school board member to oppose the Mitchell site.

Jerry Patton believes murder charges should be prosecuted by your Commonwealth Attorney to the fullest extent of the law. The penalty range fixed by law for non-capital murder is from 20 years, the minimum, to life imprisonment, the maximum. The following is the present Commonwealth Attorney's record* during his last 6 years in office on all non-capital murder charges issued by the Floyd County Grand Jury:

CASES RECEIVING MINIMUM AND LESS THAN MINIMUM SENTENCE BY PLEA BARGAIN AGREEMENT WITH COMMONWEALTH ATTORNEY:

CASE NUMBER	SENTENCE
81-CR-024	15 years
82-CR-122	5 years probation, no jail time
83-CR-163	5 years probation, no jail time
83-CR-217	5 years probation, no jail time
83-CR-269	Dismissed at Commonwealth Attorney's request
84-CR-027	Dismissed at Commonwealth Attorney's request
84-CR-028	20 years
84-CR-087	10 years
84-CR-112	16 years
85-CR-026	15 years
85-CR-052	7 years
85-CR-053	20 years
85-CR-139	15 years

CASES RECEIVING MINIMUM AND LESS THAN MINIMUM SENTENCE BY JURY VERDICT:

CASE NUMBER:	SENTENCE
82-CR-083	18 years
82-CR-118	10 years
83-CR-056	Not guilty
83-CR-182	5 years
83-CR-020	Not guilty

CASES RECEIVING MORE THAN MINIMUM SENTENCE BY JURY VERDICT:

CASE NUMBER	SENTENCE
81-CR-062	30 years

In the 19 non-capital cases listed above, 3 defendants got probation with no jail time, 2 cases were dismissed with no jail time, 2 defendants were found not guilty, by jury, 11 defendants received a sentence which was less than the minimum and only 1 received a sentence of more than the minimum. To make matters worse, under the law in those cases where jail sentences were received the defendants are eligible for parole after spending 20% of their sentence.

Jerry Patton believes that dismissals, probation and plea bargaining for less than the minimum sentence in MURDER cases is unacceptable and as Commonwealth Attorney he will put a stop to this practice and seek the maximum sentence on such cases by personally prosecuting them.

*Record excludes capital murder cases which will be discussed later. Records obtained from Official Records of Administrative Office of the Courts, Frankfort, Kentucky.

Questions and Answers About Tax Refunds

The following questions and answers have been prepared by IRS to help people understand more about tax refunds.

Q. When should I file my tax return if I expect a refund?

A. A taxpayer who files a tax return as early as possible will probably receive the refund in four to six weeks. However, normal processing time can take up to ten weeks. File your return as soon as you have all the supporting information necessary to prepare an accurate return. The statute of limitations for claiming a refund expires three years from the due date of the tax return. Refunds will not be paid or credited on returns that are filed after the statute of limitations expires.

Q. What can I do to speed up receipt of my refund?

A. One way to help IRS process your return faster is to check over your tax return very carefully and to attach all W-2 forms and schedules. Missing information and attachments can delay processing of a return. An accurate return means a faster refund.

Q. I filed my return weeks ago, and have not received my refund. What should I do?

A. If it has been more than ten weeks since you filed your tax return, you can call to find out the status of your refund. A special Automated Refund Inquiry System which is part of the IRS Tele-Tax service is available for this purpose from March 15, 1987, thru December 31, 1987. To obtain automated refund information call the IRS Tele-Tax number in your telephone directory. If you are a push button phone user, you will hear recorded instructions on how to use the system. If you are a rotary phone user you will reach an IRS operator who will access the recorded information for you. IRS' free Publication 910, "Guide to Free Tax Services", and Tele-Tax brochure, Publication 1163, contain a list of Tele-Tax phone numbers, explain how to use the Tele-Tax service, and also contain a list of Tele-Tax services and the hours of service. This information is listed alphabetically by state.

Q. Must I supply any information when using the Automated Refund Inquiry System?

A. Yes. Have a copy of your return available. You will need to know the first social security number which is shown on the return, your filing status, and the exact amount of your refund.

Q. My sister had her refund delayed last year because her husband forgot to sign the return. Why did this hold up her check?

A. All taxpayers must sign their tax returns, and if it is a joint return, both spouses must sign before it can be processed. If signatures are missing, processing of the return is held up until the missing signatures have been obtained from the taxpayers. Check to be sure your return has the proper signatures before it is mailed to IRS.

Q. Do I have to use the peel-off label if I expect a refund?

A. No. But it's a good idea to use the specially designed peel-off label provided for your use by IRS on all returns. It contains your name, address, and social security number and helps to speed up processing. If the information on the label is incorrect, it should be corrected right on the label. Form 1040EZ filers should use the label because it is easily read by the Optical Character Recognition (OCR) scanning equipment.

Q. I didn't receive a tax package with a peel-off label in the mail. What should I do?

A. Taxpayers who do not have a peel-off label to use when filing a tax return should print their correct name, address, and social security number as clearly as possible on the return. If it is a joint return, both names should be listed with the correct social security number for each person. A refund may be delayed if the social security numbers are wrong or if they do not correspond with the right person's name. The first social security number listed should match the first person's name.

Q. We plan to move sometime in the spring and want to be sure we don't miss our refund check. What can be done to assure delivery?

A. If you move after you file your tax return, be sure to notify the IRS of your new address. You should also list a forwarding address with the U.S. Postal Service.

Q. Once we receive our refund check, where do we take it to cash it?

A. A federal tax refund check may be cashed at any check cashing financial institution, such as a bank, credit union, or savings and loan, but many of them will not cash refund checks for taxpayers who are not their customers. You must remember that if a refund check is issued on a joint return, both spouses must endorse the check before cashing it.

Q. My neighbor said she did not get her refund last year because she did not pay off the loan she made to go to school. Is this possible?

A. Yes, overpayment of federal income tax can be applied to past-due legally enforceable debts owed to a federal agency by the taxpayer and referred by the agency to the Internal Revenue Service for offset. Defaulted student loans and delinquent child support payments are among the legally enforceable debts to which federal tax refunds can be offset.

Mine Permits Issued

The Division of Permits of the State Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement issued 161 permits in February.

Permitting activities for February authorized the disturbance of 9,003.76 new acres of land and resulted in the collection of $192,325 in fees.

Floyd projects permitted were: Apollo Coal Co., Wayland, tippie; Coal Mac, Pikeville, surface/auger; Coal Mac, surface/underground/auger; Coal Mac, existing tippie (two Floyd permits); Coal-Mac, surface/auger; Danny Bates, Bevinville, surface/auger; Kanawha Enterprises, Martin, underground; Renegade Mining, Pikeville, surface/auger/underground; Wilderness Coal, Pikeville, underground.

Coalition Sponsors Candidates' Forum

"It's important for the people to meet the candidates running for governor," said Mary Jane Adams, chairperson of the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition. "And it's just as important for the candidates to meet the people."

Adams was speaking of a forum the group is sponsoring for the candidates for governor. The forum will be at the old Hindman High School gymnasium in Knott county. It will begin at 1 p.m. on Saturday, April 11.

Four candidates have agreed to attend the forum and answer questions from the audience as well as from a panel of five KFTC members. The candidates attending include Dr. Grady Stumbo, ex-Governor Julian Carroll, Anne Moore, of Paducah, and Dinwiddie Lampton, Jr., of Lagrange.

"KFTC sponsors a variety of events for the public," continued Adams. "But the candidate forums for state and local officials are always some of the most popular. It gives people a chance to see the candidates up close and to hear their positions on what the people care about."

Knott county KFTC steering committee representative Jay Conley will moderate the forum. The panel will be asking the candidates questions on education, the economy, taxes, hazardous waste, and legislative reform.

In addition to questions from the panel, there will be time available for questions from the audience. Only questions dealing with public policy issues and addressed to all candidates will be allowed. Any personal questions will be disallowed by the moderator. At the end of the forum, time will be allowed for each candidate to make a closing statement concerning their reasons for seeking the office of governor.

"KFTC is a non-partisan organization," Mary Jane Adams said. "We do not endorse any candidates for office." "But through events such as this forum we try to get people involved in their government," she continued. "And it also helps keep the government officials accountable to the voters."

For Seniors, Time To Start Training

If you're among the retired set, it's time to break out your track suit and sneakers. You have just over a month to get in shape for the second annual Big Sandy Senior Games.

About 400 persons from the five-county area participated last year in basketball free throw, football toss, horseshoes, softball toss, spin casting, a walking relay race, and checker tournament. Organizers expect an even greater turnout this year.

Competition is by age category—55-59, 60-64, 65-69, 70-74, 75 and over—and medals will be awarded to winners and placegetters.

The games are sponsored by the Big Sandy ADD and Jenny Wiley State Park, with assistance from the Ky. Dept. of Social Services and Pikeville National Bank. They will be held from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday, May 15, at the Dewey Dam recreation area.

Participants are asked to bring lunch for an old-fashioned picnic.

Young Pianists In Recital

Superdance Slated At Johnson Central

The 12-hour Superdance to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association, April 11, is taking shape and early reports indicate there will be several hundred participants. The dance, to be held at Johnson Central High School, will feature music by WKLW's Ron Smith and Tollo's Tunes.

Sponsored by Johnson Central's FHA and McDonald's Restaurant, all proceeds will go to MDA to help in the fight against 40 neuromuscular diseases.

John Jones, II, son of Patti and John Jones, of Volga, and the Big Sandy Area's own poster child, will be on hand to say hello to all his friends that have come to help.

Registration will begin at 10:30 a.m. at Johnson Central High School with dancing scheduled to start at noon. Registration packets can be picked up wherever you see the Superdance posters in the Big Sandy area.

Admission to dance will be $10 per person, with T-shirts going to those who bring in a minimum of $25 in donations. There will be prizes and trophies for participants, and spectators will be charged $2. All donations will be tax-deductible, and all proceeds go to MDA.

For additional information, contact Neva Rowland, FHA Advisor at Johnson Central High School, or Patty Jones at (606) 297-6818.

Breast Center Grand Opening At Highlands

The Breast Center at Highlands Regional Medical Center celebrated its Grand Opening Sunday, March 29. The opening marked the beginning of the area's only community funded center dedicated to providing comprehensive breast care to women, according to a hospital press release.

The center was established with funds provided by HRMC employees and through community donations. A tribute to these donors can be seen in the waiting room of the Breast Center, where the walls are decorated with signature tiles bearing the name or message of each contributor.

In a time when breast cancer strikes one out of every 10 women, the Breast Center is part of Highlands' long-range program of anticipating and responding to healthcare needs, the press release said.

Susan Martin, HRMC administrative assistant, explained: "It would have been very easy to simply purchase a new machine. But the Breast Center is more than equipment. It provides a total range of services including detection, diagnosis, surgical and alternative treatments, prosthesis fillings, and reconstructive/cosmetic surgery. It is supported by educational and counseling services both inside the center and reaching out into the community."

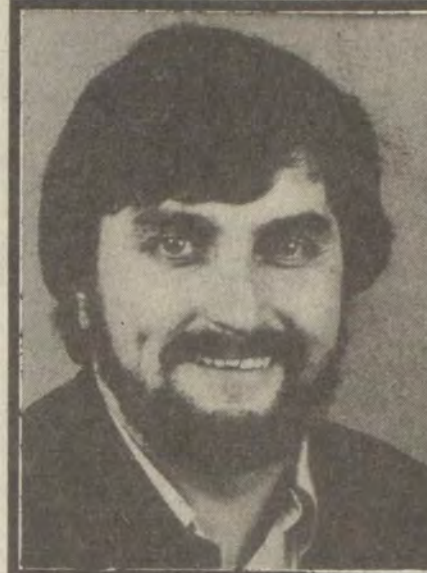

Inquiries and referrals to the Breast Center can be made by calling Highlands Regional Medical Center at 886-8511 or 789-6548 ext. 160.

ROUND OFF FIGURES TO NEAREST DOLLAR

Taxpayers are encouraged to round off cents to the nearest dollar when figuring their federal income taxes, according to the Internal Revenue Service.

However, if a taxpayer rounds off one dollar item, all amounts must be rounded off. Amounts under 50 cents should be dropped, and amounts from 50 cents to 99 cents should be increased to the next highest dollar.

One advantage to taxpayers when rounding off is the likelihood of fewer errors in math because there will be rounded figures to complete.

JACKIE EDFORD OWENS MAGISTRATE, DISTRICT 2

TO THE PEOPLE OF DISTRICT 2:

I was unable to clear the snow from the roads of District 2 because after 12 hours of grading we had a major breakdown on the grader. It takes 48 hours just to clear the blacktop roads in District 2. Then if it is a deep snow we try to get to the dirt roads. We had this breakdown Saturday evening. The grader is the only snow removing piece of equipment we have for our district and when it's down—we're down. Last year we had several minor breakdowns during the 5 snows we removed, but we were able to get back on the road in 2 to 3 hours of downtime. This breakdown is going to take at least 2 days to fix. The snow will be gone by the time we get our machine fixed. These things just happen, people. Sorry for any inconvenience.

 Matthew Lee Charles Tackett, son of Harold and Ruthann Tackett, of Prestonsburg, celebrated his fourth birthday, February 12, with a party at his home. Attending were Matthew's grandparents, Harold and Ruby Tackett, of Auxier, and Loretta, Kristie, Billy and Amanda Tackett, all of McDowell.

Medicaid Coverage
 When an organ or bone marrow transplant is needed to save a life and medical insurance will not cover the procedure or coverage is exhausted, the Kentucky Department for Medicaid Services may be able to help.
 In the past three years the department has approved more than 80 transplants. "Until recently this type of treatment was considered experimental for the most part," said state Medicaid Services Commissioner Hughes Walker. "Now some transplant procedures are more widely accepted as life-saving medical treatment."
 State regulations stipulate that there must be "a reasonable expectation the patient's health or condition will be improved by the transplant" in order for the procedure to be covered by the Medicaid program. Furthermore, the hospital where the surgery is to be performed must have staff accustomed to performing the type of transplant for which Medicaid approval is sought.
 Requests for Medicaid help to pay for a transplant are made to the department's commissioner. "Because we are dealing with critical situations, we respond quickly when or help is sought on behalf of a potential transplant patient," Walker said.
 Brenda Harris, coordinator of the organ transplant program, said the staff verifies the patient's eligibility for Medicaid. "Often, if someone isn't eligible for Medicaid already, the cost of medical bills associated with the transplant will deplete the patient's financial resources to the point that he or she becomes eligible," she said. The Medicaid program will reimburse up to $75,000 per transplant.
 The department has covered heart, lung, bone marrow, heart-lung and heart-kidney transplants.
 Even when Medicaid approval is given, the hospital does not always follow through with surgery. "Sometimes an appropriate donor organ hasn't been found in time to save the patient's life," Harris said. "In other cases, patients have had relapses or not been strong enough to undergo surgery, even after the transplant has been approved."
 Since February 1984, Kentucky's Medicaid program has spent more than $2 million for 36 transplants—an average of $58,048 each.
 Commissioner Walker acknowledged transplants are expensive. "But they account for a very small percent of the total Medicaid budget."
 "We are responsible for providing medical assistance to our indigent citizens. People should not have to die simply because they don't have the money or medical insurance to pay for the care they need," he said.

Spring Flood Season... Fed Insurance Agency Advises Homeowner Should Check Policy

Spring is flood season in many parts of the country, including this one, and officials of the federal government's National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP) caution that homeowners insurance does not cover losses from flooding.
 Harold T. Duryee, head of the Federal Insurance Administration (FIA), which oversees the operation of the NFIP, pointed out that this important financial protection is available in communities which participate in the NFIP. "But it isn't automatic; the property owner must purchase the coverage from any property and casualty insurance agent or broker," according to Duryee.
 There are nearly 18,000 communities throughout the country that have agreed to adopt and enforce floodplain management ordinances. "This action on the part of the community makes flood insurance available to owners of property in the community, including renters who may insure their contents in a rented property," Duryee said.
 He emphasized that buildings which are not in special flood hazard areas may be insured. "In fact, over a third of the claims paid by the NFIP are for losses that occurred in areas thought to have only minimal-to-moderate flood risk," Duryee reported.
 The administrator said FIA, part of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, is working to inform the public about the availability of flood insurance because there are so many buildings exposed to a flood risk which are not covered.
 "There are over two million flood insurance policyholders," Duryee said. "But estimates are that there are between six and eight million insurable buildings exposed to a risk of flooding. This means there could be as many as six million uninsured buildings," Duryee warned.
 While flood insurance may be purchased through any insurance agent, a program has been initiated that allows insurance companies to offer coverage under their own names through arrangements with FIA. These arrangements provide the companies financial assurance for their flood insurance business. The coverage and cost of flood insurance are the same, whether a policy is written directly with the NFIP or through one of the companies with arrangements with the FIA. The advantage of purchasing flood insurance from a company may be improved service.
 While an insurance agent should offer the most specific information about flood insurance, the NFIP does have a toll-free telephone information system. The number is 1-800-638-6620.

Jobless Rate Up
 Floyd was one of 93 Kentucky counties reporting increased unemployment in February, according to figures released last week by the Cabinet for Human Resources.
 The jobless rate in the Big Sandy Area Development District rose from 17 percent in January to 19 percent in February—ranging from 17.6 percent in Floyd county to 31.9 percent in Magoffin.
 The statewide unemployment rate was 11.4 percent in February; nationwide, the rate was 7.2 percent.

FINANCIAL PLANNING

EXTEND YOUR FILING DATE

There are a number of reasons for not filing your tax return by April 15th. Some people have financial transactions or joint ventures which may be difficult to summarize by the April 15th filing deadline. Others simply don't get around to it. The "automatic" extension does not require that you state a reason for requesting additional time.

To avoid penalties for filing later than April 15th, certain steps must be taken. You must file for an extension and show an estimate of your tax liability. If your estimate of the total taxes due exceeds the amount you have already paid in, you are required to send the difference along with your extension request. If your tax estimate on the extension request is less than the tax on your final return, you may be subject to penalties.

The "automatic" extension period is from April 15th to August 15th. Additional time can be obtained by filing a request for further extension. This second extension requires that you state the reason for the delay. You will also be asked whether or not your tax returns for the three prior years were timely filed. You'll have to state whether or not your estimated tax payments, if any, were made on time.

If you are not in the United States on April 15th, you have until June 15th to file your return. This does not require the filing of an extension form. When you file your tax return, you attach a statement showing your whereabouts on April 15th. Since the "automatic" extension is available to everyone, there is no longer a tax reason to be out of the country on April 15th.

The rules for extending the filing date of "state" tax returns varies from state to state. If you need an extension, check on the rules for the states in which you will be required to file.

Beware Gypsy Bands, KSP Cautions Public

Reports have been received by the Kentucky State Police Intelligence Section of gypsy groups or individuals in many areas statewide that offer to do work or repairs (barn painting, roof repair, asphalt paving) for a small sum, then do shoddy work and intimidate the victim into paying a larger fee.

Sightings of these gypsy groups and reports by victims have most recently come in from areas around Lexington, Harrison county and Bowling Green, although previous sightings have been reported from one end of the state to the other.

Anyone is a potential victim, however, these groups usually run their scam or confidence games on the elderly. Many individuals do not want to report that he or she was the victim of such and the crime goes unreported. The Kentucky State Police says people should not be embarrassed to report a crime and that reporting them will aid in protecting others from being victimized.

Anyone who has been approached by an individual or group of people involved in these activities, should notify local police or the Kentucky State Police immediately. The toll-free emergency KSP hotline may be used, 1-800-222-5555.

Before January and February were introduced into the calendar the Roman year had only ten months.

DRUG INTERACTIONS

One important factor when considering the effects of a drug is its interaction with other drugs and/or with chemicals in foods, beverages and the environment. The interactions can enhance side effects, diminish the drug's effectiveness, and cause other responses that interfere with the desired effect. Two drugs administered at the same time may interfere with the absorption of one another. Similarly, a drug can act as an inducer to enhance the activity of liver drug-metabolizing enzymes. They then even more rapidly degrade the drug. Some drugs enhance or retard the elimination of another drug, often by altering its distribution. For any and all of the above reasons, it is important to inform your doctor about any drugs you are taking.

COOLEY APOTHECARY wants you to know that if your physician prescribes medication for you or a member of your family that we maintain complete patient profiles so we can check for allergic reactions and drug interactions. Learn for yourself why your friends and neighbors already rely on us. We are located in No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

Some Benefits Are Still Paid If You Work After You Retire

By JIM KELLY

If you are approaching retirement, you are probably looking forward to a well-earned reward after years of hard work. Yet, you enjoy working and do not want to stop entirely. You may ask, "If I take a part-time job or run a small business, can I still get Social Security retirement checks?"

The answer depends partly on your age. If you are under 65, you can earn up to $6,000 in 1987 and receive all benefits due. If you are 65 through 69, the annual exempt amount this year is $8,160. And if you are 70 or older, there is no limit on earnings. The exempt amounts increase each year to keep pace with rising wage levels.

Even if you earn over these amounts, partial benefits may be payable. The basic rule is that $1 in benefits is withheld for each $2 earned over the exempt amount.

There is also a special rule that applies in only 1 year—usually the year you retire. You can get a full benefit for each month earnings if they do not exceed one-twelfth of the annual limit (in 1987): $500 if you are under 65 and $680 if you are 65 through 69.

This monthly rule allows you to start getting benefits right away in the year of retirement no matter how high your earnings earlier in the year. If you are self-employed, your time and services devoted to the business are considered in addition to net income; you can get more information on this at the Social Security office.

To see how these two rules work, consider "Joe" who retired at 62 in 1986 and gets $450 a month from Social Security. He took a part-time job in January 1987 and will earn $7,600 in 1987. Under the basic annual rule, Joe will lose $800, or a little less than 2 months benefits.

Now let's say Joe, instead, retires June 30, 1987, and earns $15,000 in the first 6 months. Then he works part time the last 6 months for $300 a month. Even though Joe's total 1987 earnings are $16,800, he can get a full benefit for each of the last 6 months under the monthly rule.

You should notify Social Security promptly any time you start or stop work or have a change in estimated earnings. In this way you can avoid a possible overpayment. It's best to estimate on the "high side" to be safe since your benefits for the year will be based on that estimate. But remember this applies only to retirement not disability benefits. If you receive disability completely different rules apply.

We will be pleased to answer questions you have about how earnings affect Social Security benefits. You can visit us at the Big Sandy Area Social Security office located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in your local telephone directory under U.S. Government.

HOW THIS RAKE CAN SAVE YOUR LIFE.

This simple garden tool is a firefighter. It can help you clear away brush and leaves that act like kindling around your home. And you.

So if you live near the forest, do a little raking. And that's not all. Landscape your home with a fire retardant plant like ivy. Use spark arrester screens on your chimney and vents. And put fire retardant material on your roof and underneath your house where it is exposed.

Because a forest fire burns more than trees.

Remember.
Only you can prevent forest fires.

A Public Service of the Ad Council, the USDA, Forest Service and your State Forester.

Seek To Identify Deaf Kentuckians

William B. Rogers, executive director of the Ky. Commission on the Deaf and Hearing Impaired, has announced the formation of a new project to identify deaf and hearing impaired Kentuckians.

The Commission hopes to locate as many deaf and hearing impaired persons as possible to assist in improving and implementing services to this population. Names of deaf and hearing impaired persons will be collected statewide through this project and entered into a databank.

The Ky. Commission on the Deaf and Hearing Impaired will also have three vacancies on its eleven member Commission starting in July, 1987. The positions available include a parent representative, a private service provider and a consumer representative.

To be included in the deaf and hearing impaired persons databank or for more information about the KCDHI vacancies call 1-800-372-2907.

Early Counties Took Names Of Distinguished Leaders

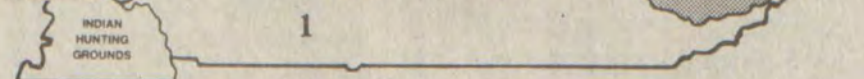

John Logan, who was to become Kentucky's first Treasurer, was among the earliest and most distinguished of the bold pioneers who pushed forward into the howling wilderness of Virginia's district of Kentucky. Not even Indians gave permanent settlement to it, for it was used by tribes from all sides as a hunting ground.

Logan lost his father at an early age and, along with his older brother, Benjamin, held a commanding place among those who early shaped the destiny of this then "baby" Commonwealth. In 1775, he and his brother Benjamin came to Kentucky county and met up with Boone, Henderson and others. They split paths and the Logans ended up in what became Lincoln county where they established a fort. Lincoln county was to become, in 1780, one of the first three counties (along with Jefferson and Fayette) of Virginia's district of Kentucky.

In 1781, Logan was appointed Lieutenant Colonel of the first regiment of militia organized in Lincoln county. He was also serving on Kentucky's district court at Harrodsburg, the county seat of Lincoln.

In 1785-86, the Virginia Legislature formed six more counties in the Kentucky district—Nelson, Mercer, Madison, Bourbon, Mason, and Woodford. Nelson was named for Thomas

- 1. Lincoln—1780
- 2. Jefferson—1780
- 3. Fayette—1780
- 4. Nelson—1785
- 5. Mercer—1786
- 6. Madison—1786
- 7. Bourbon—1786
- 8. Woodford—1789
- 9. Mason—1789

Nelson, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and a Governor of Virginia. The county was formed from a part of Jefferson. Nelson commanded a regiment in the Revolutionary War and was later a brigadier general. He died four years after the formation of Nelson county, at the age of 50.

Mercer county was formed from Lincoln county and was named for General Hugh Mercer, of Virginia, who, in 1755, served under Washington in the Indian War as a captain. He was mortally wounded in the battle of Princeton while leading the American forces and died nine days later.

Madison county received its name from James Madison, termed by many historians as the "Father of our Constitution". He was very close to Washington and wrote his inaugural address. During Washington's administration, he broke with the President and Alexander Hamilton over the question of unlimited power for the Federal government, and played a major role in the formation of the Republican party. He was Secretary of State under President Jefferson and in 1808 was elected President. Madison county was formed from Lincoln county.

Bourbon county was named for the Bourbon line of monarchs of France. Louis XVI was King of France and France itself was on the threshold of revolution. The French General Gilbert Mortier Du LaFayette, after whom Fayette county was named and who was so revered by this nation, was designated to command the special guard for protection of the royal Bourbon king's family. This county was also the residence of two-time Governor James Garrard, after whom Garrard county was named. Bourbon county was formed from Fayette county.

The statesman after whom Mason county was named was the author of the Bill of Rights and Constitution of the State of Virginia and these were followed closely by those penning our Federal Bill of Rights and Constitution. These papers were long attributed to Thomas Jefferson, but George Mason, "The best horseman in the Virginia Colony", was actually the author. Mason county was formed from Fayette county.

General William Woodford, after whom Woodford county was named, was a Revolutionary officer who had distinguished himself in the French and Indian War. As commander of the first brigade, he was in several actions and was wounded in the Battle of Brandywine. He was captured in 1780 during the siege of Charleston and was imprisoned in New York where he died at the age of 45. Woodford county was formed out of Fayette.

KET Presentation Explores Holy Land

The Holy Land is full of historical legacy and present day mystery. In a two-part presentation, beginning on KET Saturday, April 18, "Nature" explores the area's fascinating and intriguing land and seas.

In "The Holy Land: A Wilderness Like Eden," premiering Saturday, April 18, at 7 p.m., "Nature" visits the barren wilderness of the Holy Land. It was in this section of the Rift Valley sweeping north from Kenya to Turkey wrote the prophets, that God planted the first garden and placed the first creatures.

At the edge of the Judean Mountains, the desert plunges 1,200 feet below the level of the Mediterranean and meets the waters of the Dead Sea. "Nature" explores the paradox of these salty waters in "The Holy Land: Sweet Water, Bitter Sea," premiering Saturday, April 25, at 7 p.m. on KET. The waters of this sea contain a number of chemicals that poison living things, yet also support large and powerful animals.

"The Holy Land: A Wilderness Like Eden" repeats Sunday, April 19, at 7 p.m. on KET. "The Holy Land: Sweet Water, Bitter Sea" repeats Sunday, April 26, at 7 p.m. on KET.

"Nature" is produced by WNET/News York.

Clean Air:
The Promise Is Unfulfilled

By JAY D. HAIR
Executive Vice President
National Wildlife Federation

Lung cancer rates in the United States increased 400 percent between 1935 and 1955, and health experts wondered if urban air pollution was to blame. As late as 1963, the air in New York City was so polluted with sulfur dioxide that hundreds of people died that year as a director or indirect result.

Passage of the Clean Air Act in 1970 led to a dramatic improvement in air quality, mainly by controlling such conventional air pollutants as sulfur dioxide, carbon monoxide and particulates. Yet, 17 years after enactment of the Clean Air Act, many important promises remain unfulfilled.

Even today, nearly 80 million Americans are living in counties where the total suspended particulate level exceeds federal standards. One third of the 84 metropolitan areas that EPA is monitoring are violating federal limits on ozone emissions, and there is little hope that most of these areas will meet the Dec. 31 compliance deadline.

Worse, more than 100 million Americans are living in highly urbanized areas and breathing clouds of toxic chemicals that are not regulated under the Clean Air Act. A congressional panel found that more than 62 million pounds of highly toxic chemicals are released annually into the air from approximately 300 manufacturing plants in 34 states. In fact, the Environmental Protection Agency estimates that approximately 2,000 potentially cancer-causing chemicals are likely to get into our air, but it has issued standards for just six.

After more than 3,000 scientific papers and eight government reports on the subject, acid rain is still an enormous problem. More than 50 million tons of sulfur and nitrogen oxides—the acid rain culprits—are released each year over North America.

We are paying a staggering price for our neglect. Acid rain emissions are estimated to cause $8 billion damage annually in the United States. According to recent surveys, lakes and streams in 34 states are either vulnerable to or have already been damaged by acid rain. The effect on fish and wildlife is tragic.

Smallmouth bass, walleyes and trout, especially sensitive to acid-laced waters, are among the first fish to be harmed or killed by acid rain. Osprey, ducks and other birds which rely on fish for food are having an ever more difficult harvest.

Talk about air pollution problems has been plentiful; action has been minimal. Legislation to control acid rain emissions has languished in Congress for too many years. State governments are beginning to tackle the air pollution problem, but so far only four states have enacted their own acid rain control bills.

We can no longer abide critical air pollution problems that impair our health and kill our crops, forests and other natural resources. We received official promises of clean air in 1970. Seventeen years is long enough to wait for those promises to be fulfilled.

How 30 Days of Better Hearing Changed My Life!

Families everywhere are enjoying the benefits of a new discovery that makes better hearing possible, even in noisy surroundings. Could this be you? If so, call 886-3773 today for our very special trial offer.

"For years I was shy in groups, even at home, due to a hearing loss. Didn't enter into conversations easily. By the time I understood what was said, the group had moved onto another subject.

"Recently I learned about ASP, the first generation of smart hearing instruments. Designed to cut out distracting background noise and let in the sounds I wanted to hear. I was interested and my ASP dispenser let me make up my mind with a 30-day trial.

"Am I happy now! The new ASP really works! It senses changes in noise levels automatically, and adjusts automatically.

"It pulls in words I want to hear and blocks the noise that used to disturb my hearing. It's great to be part of the family group again!"

Acid Rain Throwing Fish Off Natal Streams Search

About the same time that campers come home and beachhouse renters pack up, a far more dramatic migration begins at countless inlets along the Eastern Seaboard, according to a recent article by Sharon Begley in National Wildlife magazine. Beginning in August and lasting for about two months, Atlantic salmon make their way from the open ocean to the backwater rivulets where they began life as hatchlings—and where they too will spawn. National Wildlife is a bimonthly publication of the National Wildlife Federation.

No vacationers battling traffic on a holiday weekend ever have a tougher commute: fighting whitewater and headcurrents and jumping waterfalls and fish ladders, the salmon follow odors back to the home stream. The olfactory cues, which scientists have yet to identify, are remarkably precise; even hundreds of miles from home, the fish can smell minute quantities of chemicals that mark its natal stream.

However, the salmon's nose-guided migration has been derailed. Studies in Scandinavia and Nova Scotia show that fewer and fewer salmon are returning home. And in New England, federal programs to reintroduce the species could be in jeopardy. Fish may be failing to find their way to the site where they were released.

The cause is acid rain. As several recent studies show, in spite of the popular idea that acidified lakes make fish turn belly up, direct mortality is neither the most serious nor most obvious consequence of acidification.

One of those sublethal effects, suspected Winsor Watson and Carl Royce-Malmgren, biologists at the University of New Hampshire, might be interference with salmon's homing ability. To test this hypothesis, they used a computer/video behavioral analysis system to test the effects of acidity on salmon's responses to particular odors. "We were trying to simulate fish migrating up a river and choosing between one tributary and another," explains Watson. Initially, the scientists tested juvenile Atlantic salmon in a 6- to 8-foot long Y-shaped maze and dripped amino acids into one arm of the Y. (Amino acids may not be the olfactory cues that guide the fish in nature, but salmon can smell them.)

The researchers first established that the fish were attracted to certain amino acids, like glycine, and repelled by others, such as alanine. When glycine was dripped into one arm of the maze, the fish spent more time in that arm.

Next, the scientists increased the acidity of the water to between pH 5.5 and 5.0, a level comparable to that found in Canadian and New England waters. Then they tracked the fish's movements again. "They responded as if they could no longer smell the odor," says Watson.

Acidity also makes salmon oblivious to odors that have nothing to do with migration. In another set of experiments, the New Hampshire team allowed salmon to choose between a pool without fish and a pool containing other adult salmon. Usually, the salmon prefer fishy-smelling water, especially if the fish are the same species. But when the pH falls to 5.5, they display no preference. "Acidity acts as a great fish deodorant," says Watson.

While vanquishing smells may smooth the way for human socializing, it is quite detrimental to the love life of fish that use smell to find mates and other fish. "The big concern has been, why are we getting a decline in the number of salmon in moderately acidified rivers if acidity isn't killing them directly," explains Watson. "Now that we have these data, we're beginning to see that acidity can influence behaviors like migrating and mating that are necessary for reproduction."

TO ALL FLOYD COUNTIANS:

This May, the voters of Floyd County have a rare opportunity to vote for and support not only a neighbor, but a friend and relative. My sister, Alma Watts Waddell, is a candidate for Secretary of State in the Democratic Primary.

Alma Watts Waddell is a native of Knott County, being born at Hindman, Kentucky. She is one of 10 children born to Ruby Watts and the late Effie Hayes Watts. Alma Waddell is married to Jack Waddell, who is the son of the late Doug and Elizabeth Waddell of Hindman, Kentucky.

Alma Watts Waddell is a graduate of Alice Lloyd College and has taught school in both Harlan and Knott Counties. These experiences alone, coupled with her mountain upbringing, give her a sensitivity for the particular needs of all Eastern Kentuckians. In addition to this, Alma Watts Waddell has over 12 years experience in State Government, including being former Director of Administrative Services, Department of Housing in Frankfort, Kentucky. Further, her talents and abilities have been recognized throughout the Commonwealth of Kentucky, by those women who have been active within the Democratic Party. They have seen fit to elect Alma Waddell as President of the Democratic Women's Club of Kentucky.

Floyd Countians need State officials that know our people, their problems and their needs. Alma Waddell is the one candidate who can truthfully lay claim to that qualification. I ask that you vote for my sister, Alma Waddell, for Secretary of State, Democratic Primary, and it will be forever appreciated.

U.S. Grants Awarded For Science, Math Teaching

Seven Kentucky institutions of higher education and one cooperative program have received federal Title II grants totalling $177,018.47 for 1987.

The grants were awarded by the Ky. Council on Higher Education. Monies for these programs come from the federal Education for Economic Security Act which is designed to improve the quality of instruction in mathematics, science, foreign language and computer science. Title II of the Act makes money available to the states to be distributed for this purpose. The Council is responsible for administering Kentucky's share of the funds for use by institutions of higher education.

A statewide review panel determined Kentucky's greatest need to be in the areas of math and science.

The institutions and their proposals receiving the competitive grants are: Bellarmine College, "An Integrated Approach to the Teaching of Mathematics in the Middle Grades—A Cooperative Teacher Training Program," $19,882.80.

Eastern Ky. University, "Beginning Study for Middle School Certification in Mathematics Area Concentration," $19,907.

Morehead State University, "Extension of the Retraining Program for Middle School Science Teachers," $19,982.

Northern Ky. University, "Retraining Middle School and Junior High Mathematics Teachers," $19,964.

University of Ky., "Central Ky. Earth Science Teacher Training Project," $19,958.67.

University of Louisville, "Middle School General Mathematics Project," $20,000.

Western Ky. University, "An Institute for Mathematics and Science Teachers," $20,000.

The cooperative program award went to "Forward in the Fifth," a nonprofit organization composed of area business and civic leaders interested in improving education in Kentucky's Fifth Congressional District.

The award, in the amount of $37,324, will help implement Forward in the Fifth's proposal, "A Program for Improving Science and Math Instruction in Southern Kentucky." The Ky. Dept. of Education will provide an additional $23,000.

Louise King faced a frightening prospect, radical mastectomy. "Initially, accepting this operation wasn't easy. Then, I was told I would have to travel 200 miles away from home for the treatment. The fear began. If only the Breast Center at Highlands had been there. The Breast Center is a dream that I want to see fulfilled." Louise has been working to realize that dream as a visible spokesperson in the fund raising effort.

Louise King dodged a real lady-killer. Breast cancer.

"In 1981 I was told I needed to have major breast surgery. Then, there I was, 200 miles away from my home and family...feeling very much alone. If only the Breast Center had been there."

As the Breast Center opens, that dream becomes reality.

This area's first comprehensive treatment facility offers much more than simple mammography centers. Our complete array of services includes: mammography, diagnosis, surgery, and alternative therapies, plus cosmetic reconstruction. And our special education and counseling programs provide support and information. You'll learn self examination, early warning signs, and more all right here at home in a warm, supportive setting.

In partnership with your family doctor we can improve your odds against cancer through mammography, self examination and regular check-ups.

"One out of ten women will be afflicted with breast cancer. It's a challenge to see that every woman uses the center."

Paintsville Tops Pack In 15th Region Baseball

John Pelphrey, Keith Adkins, Mike Minix, the sport has changed, but the names are the same as Paintsville High School sets their sights on another state tournament appearance.

The Tigers, just last week, ended a basketball campaign that took them all the way to the semi-finals of the Sweet Sixteen tournament.

Virtually the same group of athletes are now preparing for this spring's baseball season, and probably another trip to another state tournament.

Last year, Paintsville and Charlie Adkins successfully dealt with the district, the region, and the section, before falling short of a state title.

Only two players did not return from last year's squad, starting second baseman Jeff Baldwin and outfielder-pitcher Brett Huff.

It is hard to find a baseball coach in the 15th region that won't say Paintsville is the most talented, but you can find some who aren't about to surrender before the season begins.

Betsy Layne coach Junior Newsome says that without a doubt Paintsville is the region's best. They were last year, but Newsome's Bobcats defeated Paintsville during regular season play.

The Tigers are loaded for 1987 though. Early in the season they appear to be mounds higher than the nearest competitor, which last season proved to be Johnson Central.

After getting off to a slow start, losing their first eight, Mike Collins' Golden Eagles advanced all the way to the regional finals where they fell victim to Paintsville.

Johnson Central was certainly the surprise team of last season. Collins was even surprised by his team's accomplishments, but this is another season, and with all but one starter back, the Golden Eagles are wellknown as one of the region's top contenders.

Mike Collins has back his leading RBI man in third baseman Donnie Hackworth, pitching ace Chris Gamble, who finished with a 6-2 record, and all-around athlete Wayne Arrowood.

Even with his abundance of returning talent, Collins still says Paintsville is this region's number one squad.

"With the talent they've got, I don't know if we can beat them," Collins said about playing the Tigers. "We really can't match up with them talentwise. They beat us in the district finals, and the region finals. In three games last year, they gave us only one run so we'll have to find a way to score against them."

Scoring runs on Paintsville is no easy task for anyone. The Tigers have two of the top pitchers in the region in hard throwing John Pelphrey, and baseball smart Keith Adkins.

Pelphrey's biggest asset is his overpowering fastball, while Adkins uses a wide variety of pitches to keep hitters off balance.

Paintsville is strong at every position. They have speed in the outfield, and Lance

Daniel may be the best defensive catcher in the region.

The Tigers appear to have few weaknesses in their baseball armor. Charlie Adkins has had his way with 15th region baseball for what seems like an eternity, and although the competition has increased a notch or two during the past several years, Paintsville may enjoy yet another untouchable season.

Several teams could challenge the mighty Tigers, including Magoffin county, Betsy Layne, Belfry, Prestonsburg, and Allen Central.

"We played Belfry last year," Mike Collins said. "They looked good then, and I don't think they lost much."

Junior Newsome also sang the Belfry praise, saying the Pirates, along with Johns Creek, could prove to be among the region's better squads.

Almost every baseball person in the area has all but counted Magoffin county out. After losing Charles Gambill, and Coach Tim Bostic, the Hornets may struggle, but they have some definite talent which puts them in the running for a regional title.

Magoffin county has as much pitching ability as anyone in the 15th region. Senior lefty Ronnie Howard evolved as the Hornets ace last year, and flame throwing Greg Cole has shown consistent improvement each of his previous two high school seasons.

Betsy Layne is another team with pitching talent. Bud Newsome is "the best lefthander we've seen in the past couple of years," said Mike Collins. With Newsome on the mound, Betsy Layne is capable of beating anyone in the region, possibly the state.

The Bobcats will be young, as will another Floyd county school, Allen Central. Both teams will be relying heavily on underclassmen, but these youngsters are proven baseball performers.

Prestonsburg is in the same boat. They have a stopper on the mound in junior Joey Griffith, but the Blackcats have several new faces at key positions. How far Russell Shepherd's team goes will be determined on how well his young talent responds in critical situations.

If the regional tournament was played on computer, tomorrow, Paintsville would certainly come out on top, but luckily the game of baseball is played on the field where anything can happen.

The 15th region has many impressive players, several solid teams, and good coaches who could make the difference in a close game. Paintsville's Adkins has long been known as eastern Kentucky's best baseball man, but Johnson Central's Collins continues to make tremendous strides.

Make way though, Johnson County boys. There is a new kid in the region. His name is Daniels, and baseball is certainly his game.

The Tigers are the most talented squad, but they have no 1987 title yet, and there are some teams that will make them earn everything they get, whatever it may be.

SHORT SPORTS

The early part of 1987 may well be remembered as the time when the mountains earned equal credibility with bigger basketball schools of Central and Northern Kentucky.

First came Clay County. With their small size the Tigers defied all odds and won a state championship.

Last Saturday in Louisville, the mountains once again came away with top basketball honors. An individual player this time brought back a coveted title, the biggest personal honor given to any Kentucky high school player.

Paintsville forward John Pelphrey, following in the footsteps of Todd May among others, was named Mr. Basketball for the Bluegrass state.

During the season, Pelphrey lead Paintsville in scoring and rebounding with over 20 points and 11 rebounds per game. The 6'7" Pelphrey also led the Tigers to a semi-final appearance in the Sweet Sixteen tournament.

The senior forward is yet undecided as to where he will continue his education and basketball career, but according to reports has narrowed his choices to Alabama, Vanderbilt, Marshall, and Louisville.

New York pitcher Dwight Gooden recently agreed to counseling for drug problems and entered rehabilitation center, last Thursday.

The Met righthander, in the midst of a brilliant career, has been placed on the 15-day disabled list, but no further penalties have been handed out by the league or New York management.

Gooden, a former Cy Young award winner, has been compared to various Hall of Fame pitchers. He lived up to that comparison early in his career, but problems began to show themselves this past year.

On the field Gooden struggled to get people out, although he enjoyed a successful season if compared to most other major league pitchers. His on-the-field problems began to surface during the off season, included in them was an altercation with police near his Florida home.

With the absence of Gooden, the Mets are now forced to open the season without their top starter, and top reliever. Roger McDowell will not be available to New York during the early parts of this season.

Not long ago the National Basketball Association was struggling. Their fan support was down, and the networks weren't interested in paying to air NBA games.

All this did a complete reversal, and almost immediately. Professional basketball, over the past three seasons, has recovered dramatically, and now three more cities are about to join the NBA family.

Charlotte, North Carolina will be the first addition, getting a pro team for the 1987-88 season. The following year Minneapolis, Minnesota will also be obtaining another professional franchise.

The NBA isn't sure when it will grant the final franchise, nor is it sure which city will get it, but the state has been confirmed. Florida has long been begging for both basketball, and baseball and it appears as if the court has showed up sooner than the diamond.

By 1990 either Miami or Orlando will have a professional basketball team, but the exact year and city will have to be worked out.

Roger Clemmons is once again property of the Boston Red Sox. The 1986 Cy Young and Most Valuable Player award winner agreed to terms with the Red Sox last week.

After a 29-day contract dispute, Clemmons returned to the Boston Red Sox training camp, Saturday.

With the NBA's second season rapidly approaching, every player and coach is readying themselves for the playoffs, either as a working member or supporter in the stands.

No team is looking better than the Los Angeles Lakers, either. This past Sun-

GOOD START ON A SOLID SEASON: McDowell's Mike McQuate is hitting .1000 for the season. The Daredevil sophomore went two for two Wednesday with two walks.

McDowell Wins Opener As Perkins No-Hits Trojans

Last season Mark Perkins was unable to play baseball. McDowell Coach David Hall made no secret about it, he was happy to have Perkins back, and last Wednesday the big righthander made his coach smile even more.

Over five innings, Perkins threw no hit baseball at Wheelwright to enable McDowell to win their season opener, 11-0, over the Trojans.

The senior righthander, relying mostly on his fast ball, struck out nine batters in five innings of work. Perkins walked three would be Trojan hitters, the only ones who reached first base.

Wheelwright failed to get a base runner until the third inning when Tommy Jones drew the first Mark Perkins base on balls. Jones made it all the way to third, but was stranded there when Bobby Thornsberry flew out to centerfield.

The Trojans had Perkins in trouble in the top of the fifth inning, mostly from his own wrong doing. John Justice walked on four straight pitches to open the inning. After a strikeout, Tommy Jones bounced back to the mound.

Perkins fielded the ball, and threw a strike to second but his throw was mishandled, giving the Trojans runners on first and second with only one out.

However, Perkins responded with back-to-back strikeouts, forcing Wheelwright to come away empty while keeping his no-hit shutout alive.

Not only from the mound was he impressive, but at the plate Perkins got McDowell off to a quick first inning start. With one out in the first frame, Mike McQuate coaxed a walk off starting and losing pitcher Greg Hall.

McQuate then stole second, and went to third on an error. For a while it appeared as if he would remain there, but up stepped Mark Perkins. The clean-up hitter drilled a one and one pitch over the center field wall, giving the Daredevils a 2-0 lead, and all the runs they would need.

McDowell wasn't satisfied, though. The Daredevils added three runs to their lead in the bottom of the second inning as third baseman Jeff Crisp led off with a walk, one of 10 they would get this Wednesday evening.

Scott Tackett, on a one-two pitch, hit a slicing fly ball that eluded rightfielder Jimmy Tackett. Scott Tackett ended up on third with a triple and an RBI.

After John Stumbo went down on strikes, Reggie Hall drew yet another walk. Both Tackett and Hall eventually came around to score as McDowell took a 5-0 lead after two innings.

John Justice replaced Greg Hall on the mound for Wheelwright, holding the Daredevils scoreless in the third before surrendering a lone run in the fourth.

Going into the fifth inning, McDowell led 6-0, but scored five runs in that fifth inning to earn the victory, enforcing the mercy rule after five frames.

Back-to-back walks handed to Scott Tackett and John Stumbo got McDowell off and running. Following the two-inning opening free trips, Reggie Hall struck out, but lead off man Henry Webb picked everyone up when he hit the first pitch delivered over the Minnie Park leftfield wall. Webb, with one swing of the bat, drove in three runs while giving his Daredevils a chance to end the contest earlier than it was supposed to.

Mike McQuate kept the McDowell rally alive with a single through the hole on the right side of the Trojan infield. Brian Hall, who had experienced problems offensively, put a final touch on Wednesday with a homerun to right field. Hall's homer, off a two balls, one strike pitch, exercise the 10-run high school ruling, and capped the day off in a big way for both McDowell and himself.

All told, McDowell collected six hits, but the 10 walks were eventually what hurt Wheelwright the most. Six of those 10 free passes scored, and as a result, the Trojans lost their opening game of the season.

The Wheelwright coaching staff, however, hasn't predicted a winning season. Monroe Jones earlier said that this season is preparation for better things to come, but the Trojans already look better than they did this time last season.

Roger Johnson said they had worked hard in becoming a competitive baseball team. Johnson added that the Trojans also had a lot more hard work left to do.

David Hall has also done some dedicated chores in preparing his Daredevil squad for 1987. McDowell was impressive Wednesday, at the plate and on the field, and if they make the necessary improvements, Daredevil fans could very well be rewarded with another successful season.

Rebels, Bobcats Split In Substitute Doubleheader

Donnie Daniels wanted to play baseball. So did Junior Newsome. Each coach already had a game scheduled, but somehow they met on the same field with each other as opponents.

Daniels' Allen Central Rebels were initially scheduled to play the Panthers in Pikeville, but past rains had taken their toll on Pikeville's field. The same report came from Johns Creek. "Our field is too wet to play on."

No reason to panic, Floyd county has a good baseball facility, maybe a game could be held there. Problem is Floyd county has only one baseball field, and four teams were wanting to play at the same time.

It looked as if both schools would have to wait until another day for a baseball game. Somewhere among all this confusion, though, Allen Central and Betsy Layne got together. The Bobcats were to play at Johns Creek, but they wound up in a county contest at Allen Park against the Rebels.

Just getting the season underway was the goal of both coaches so they decided to open in a big way, with a doubleheader.

Wednesday wasn't exactly the greatest day for baseball. The sun rarely avoided thickly scattered clouds, and the wind resembled mid-January rather than the first day of April.

Neither the weather, nor the talented Bobcats seemed to affect Nathan Shelton and his tough Allen Central support, though.

The slender Rebel lefthander proceeded to hurl a complete game at Betsy Layne, leading the Rebels to a 6-1 victory in the evening's opening affair.

"I couldn't ask any more out of him," Daniels commented about his lefty's performance. "He didn't walk a batter and was around the plate all day. Nathan picked a runner off and fielded his position well. He gave us as much from his position as a coach could ask for."

Wednesday's opener could have been billed as the battle of the talented southpaws, but what could have been expected didn't exactly surface.

Betsy Layne's Dwight Jarrel led the game off with a base hit and eventually scored the Bobcats' first run as they took a one run lead after the top half of the first inning.

With Bud Newsome on the mound, a one-run lead is more times than not a secure one, but Newsome isn't in top form physically, and on this day his

THE SPORTING TIMES

The three-point shot in high school? It's certainly an interesting concept, but it also brings mixed emotions among the prep basketball community.

College basketball introduced the 19-foot, nine-inch three-point jumpshot this season, and there it also produced some pros and cons.

It really boils down to the fact that coaches who have outside shooters like it. Ladies and gentlemen, meet Eddie Sutton. Those coaches who have an inside oriented offense oppose a three-point outside shot. Here is Denny Crum.

The college basketball world experienced a drastic change with the three-pointer, but one thing is certain—it is a more exciting game.

Without the extra point on a jumper from 20 feet, teams such as Providence might not have made their way to the final four. UNLV could possibly be put in the same position.

Comebacks were also more evident. Down by 15 points didn't have the same meaning as it did a year ago. Enter again the Runnin' Rebels.

Whether the new three-point rule will have the same effect on high school basketball will not be known until next winter, but all teams will have to make necessary adjustments because of it. Even when their outside shooting is suspect, a team will have to defend the three-pointer.

Zone defenses may very well be a thing of the past, and a box and one will have a chaser on the slower player who can shoot from beyond 19-feet, nine-inches, rather than trying to shut down a quick guard who can penetrate and pass.

The Sweet Sixteen tournament proved that basketball in the Kentucky high school ranks doesn't need any additional boost to improve its following. Its hard to improve on perfection, so maybe this new rule won't improve the prep sport at all.

Changes do just that, change. If the three-pointer doesn't improve an almost perfect sport then more than likely it will take from it.

College sports of all kinds have become big business. Networks dish out big bucks for the rights of various games, and in return they make big bucks. The pressure to win has become too much for many schools to deal with. Hello, Southern Methodist.

These are facts, not just one person's opinion, but another factor has to be closely examined. Where do college athletes, coaches, and athletic directors come from? All, except a handful of coaches and some athletic directors, come from the high schools of America.

Unless you're Dale Brown, but that's a problem of another origin.

If college athletics are subject to rule breaking and wrongdoing, then some

NO-HIT PERFORMANCE: David Hall, McDowell baseball coach, has said repeatedly that Mark Perkins is one of the district's best players. Hall is obviously a good judge of talent because Perkins threw a no-hitter Wednesday while collecting a two run homer.

Newsome Top District Performer Paintsville Top Regional Team

Betsy Layne High School's Bud Newsome, although he is only 5'10" and about 160 pounds, is an incredible athlete.

Newsome has played football, basketball, and now baseball this season, and has done a more than credible job at all three. However, somewhere along the line he realized his size would limit how far his football and baseball careers could take him.

The Bobcat senior concentrated his efforts toward baseball, probably because of his size, and probably because it is his best sport.

Regardless of the reasons, baseball will more than likely provide Bud Newsome with a free college education. That is in the future, though. Baseball is Newsome's present, a sport he has worked his entire young life for, and now it is paying off.

This past week a poll, conducted by Johns Creek baseball coach David Thomas, was released, and with it came a listing of the district's top individual talent, and the region's lineup of top teams.

The poll has been developed by Thomas, but coaches from each of the region's districts had the chore of selecting its contents, and in which order it should appear.

In the 57th district, that is what it's called in baseball, Bud Newsome appears on the top of the list. In his years as a Bobcat, Newsome has earned enough respect from Betsy Layne coaches, as well as opposing coaches, to be called the best player in Floyd county.

Although the lefthanded pitcher-infielder hasn't enjoyed a typical Bud Newsome pre-season, he is expected to return to full strength soon. Newsome, experiencing pain and stiffness in his left elbow, was taken to doctors in Lexington last Tuesday.

No permanent damage was found, and according to doctors, the Bobcat performer should soon return to full strength which made him an effective pitcher last year.

Newsome may suffer on the mound, but pitching isn't all he does well. As a free swinger last year, he hit well over .500 while showing tremendous defensive ability in both center field and first base.

McDowell's Brian Hall, according to the poll, is Floyd county's second best diamond performer. A tremendous athlete himself, Hall excelled as a basketball guard, but shortstop may be better fitted for Hall.

He is quick, agile, and has steady hands. Last season Hall proved he could play the position, and he also hit over .400. In their season opener, Hall collected a homerun while playing errorless defense, picking up two assists in two chances.

Third on the 57th district list is another

Bobcat, sophomore Duran Newsome, the 6'0" 165 pound second year performer possesses a strong arm which has made him an effective mound performer and outfielder. Newsome also has a solid bat. He hit .381 as a freshman last year.

With two full years of growth and baseball left, this Betsy Layne sophomore could prove to be one of the best in eastern Kentucky come 1989.

The list goes on, and so does the talent. Kelly Nickles holds down the fourth position. Not a flashy player, nor a powerful player, Nickles combines speed and baseball instincts to be one of the top centerfielders in the region. He won't hit any homeruns, but Nickles will hit the ball somewhere almost every time up.

Another sophomore appears on the list, Daredevil Mike McQuate, also another center fielder. McQuate is a natural hitter, with natural discipline at the plate. Like Newsome, as time goes by he will only get better. Yes Curt, he is only a sophomore.

Coming in at number six, no this isn't a Casey Kasem countdown, is Prestonsburg's Brian Wallace. Those voting may have thought Wallace would suffer because of basketball injuries which could explain the low position.

Wallace has one of the best swings in the region. A single, double, triple, hitter, he uses the entire field, and uses it well. Last season the Blackcat second baseman hit close to .500.

Defensively he is what every high school coach looks for. Wallace will rarely make a great play, but you won't see him miss the routine ones.

Allen Central shortstop Roger Horne is also considered one of this county's top college prospects. By people who have witnessed his play, and by those who voted in this poll.

Horne is a steady performer at shortstop, and is a proven effective pitcher. His improvement from last season to this season has been remarkable, and in the future could make a good college shortstop.

Todd Sturgill rounds out the top eight of this talent list. Like most before him, Sturgill is an all around athlete, playing all three sports at Betsy Layne.

The 6'1" junior is a fierce competitor who is tailor made for playing behind the plate. Defensively Sturgill needs work and is certainly getting it. Offensively, he is one of the top hitters in the region.

Last season he hit .441 with three homeruns and 19 runs batted in. Even more is expected from him this year.

The talent here could someday make an excellent strength of a college team, but unfortunately this talent is spread between four schools.

The 56th district, 57th in basketball, has probably an equal amount of talent but most of it is on Paintsville's team. All but one of the top eight players are from the Tiger squad. Maybe this is why Paintsville is said to be the top team in the region.

Oh yea, guys. You forgot Magoffin county's Neal West in that district. He is the best second baseman in the region, and he understands more about baseball than most of you do. Hey Nehi, you should be there anyway.

Oh well, they also forgot Allen Central in the regional poll. Anyway here is the region's top 10 teams. You put the Rebels where you think they should be.

defense wasn't in top form either.

Allen Central jumped on the hard throwing senior with rapid fashion, even though they collected only one hit. Throw in a couple of walks, a hit batsman, and some shoddy defense, and added up it equals four Rebel runs.

Newsome, in three innings of work, didn't show his true form of a year ago, and as a result was tabbed with the loss. Betsy Layne's prize pitcher is suffering from problems with his elbow, but doctors say he should be back 100 percent physically in a couple of weeks.

Shelton doesn't seem to be having any problems. The junior leftfielder, after being spotted three runs following the opening inning, cruised to a victory.

In throwing a total of 68 pitches, Shelton recorded a complete game victory. His pinpoint control played a major part in that, but so did a perfect Allen Central defensive effort.

"Our infield played a great game," Daniels boasted, "With every opportunity they had they got an out from it."

THE SPORTING TIMES

where along the line so are high school athletes.

Could this latest rule addition be just another recruiting tool for college coaches? One thing we all can be sure of, a guard's three-point stat will be closely examined by everyone concerned.

Sure. A scout can tell if a player shoots well from the outside, but this can't be put on paper. Most scouts in this area recruit from stats, both on physical stature and from the court.

This may not be bad either. The new three-point rule will no doubt give the slow guard, who normally doesn't get attention, a chance to once again be a big asset to his team, and a college program.

Regardless of what the future holds, the past tells us that it came a year late for many local players. With a three-point rule Roger Horne would have gotten closer to 50 points than his 36 against Magoffin county.

Both Horne and McDowell's Brian Hall could have added as much as 10 points per game to their scoring average. What do you think, wouldn't this have opened some college scout's eyes?

Both the Rebel infield, and the Rebel outfield played errorless baseball.

The second game wasn't nearly as kind to Daniels and Allen Central. Opting to give his younger performers an opportunity to sharpen their skills, the first year coach watched as the less experienced Rebels fell 7-2 to Betsy Layne.

Ronnie Ousley felt the sting of most of the Bobcat offensive punch. The senior righthander was the starter and loser for Allen Central.

Another senior righthander, Randall Spurlock, claimed the mound victory, giving his Bobcats a strong outing.

Betsy Layne, with their showing in Wednesday's second game, proved why they have been voted as the region's fourth best team.

Allen Central, on the other hand, proved that those vote holders didn't do their homework. The Rebels were not chosen in the top 10, but before this season is over, coaches will be demanding another chance to include Donnie Daniels and the youthful Rebels.

Now, if it would have helped these players, it would have helped their teams, and the same could be said about next season.

McDowell has another excellent outside shooter in Dickie Joe Shannon. The three-pointer appears as if it were made for Shannon, and don't be surprised if his offensive numbers break some records.

Other guards through the region and state will no doubt benefit from the three-pointer. If you thought Clay County had an excellent shot at repeating as Kentucky's champion, then your idea is compounded.

Good defensive guards will be a necessity, but they won't get the credit they deserve, even if they can stop a shot from the top of the key from time to time.

The question remains as to whether very many teams will try to take advantage of this new high school wrinkle or not, but Jerry Tarkanian put it best.

The UNLV head man earlier said, "I had rather have my players shooting for three points without pressure than I would have them shooting for two with a hand in their face."

Many high school coaches will probably agree. Let's just wait and see.

ONE OF THE YOUNGSTERS: Sophomore Kevin Webb is just one of many talented underclassmen Allen Central has to rely on. Webb is expected to be the Rebels' number one catcher.

Rebels Look Promising For 1987 Baseball Year

When judging a team's capabilities one must first closely examine their strength up the middle. Take a microscopic look at Allen Central and you see that the Rebels should be tough in 1987.

Allen Central will be young. Their coach is even in his first season, but both the players and the coach are experienced baseball personnel.

Although the Rebels will have to rely on several underclassmen for contributions, they do have key seniors in important positions. Possibly the best of the veteran bunch is centerfielder Kelly Nickles.

The senior outfielder could be the best all-around player on the Allen Central squad. Nickles is a proven player from years past. He covers plenty of ground defensively, and at the plate has shown the ability to consistently make solid contact.

The Rebels have another senior playing defense in the middle of the field in shortstop Roger Horne. Another starter back from last year's squad, Horne is also a complete player. Coach Donnie Daniels expects both solid play and leadership from Horne while also hoping for some effective work on the mound.

Completing a capable double play combination for the Rebels is sophomore second baseman Todd Duff. The lanky infielder started at this position last season, doing an impressive job. Daniels says of Duff, "He's a team player. He does what he has to do to help the team win, and he puts the ball in play at the plate."

Catching may be where Allen Central will improve the most, not that Kevin Webb did a bad job last season, he didn't, but the extra year of maturity will only improve his physical abilities.

"Kevin has all the tools needed to be a good catcher," Daniels said of his sophomore receiver. "He has a good arm, and he knows the game. I'm going to discuss it a lot with him, but I'm going to let him call his own game this year."

On the mound Allen Central doesn't have anyone who is expected to completely shut teams down, but the Rebels do have a number of talented throwers who can more than keep them in a contest.

Nathan Shelton is the name Donnie Daniels mentions most when talking about his pitching staff. Shelton won't blow anybody away with his fastball, but last season enjoyed tremendous success by using a wide variety of off speed pitches, and mixing them well, to keep hitters off balance.

"We are strong up the middle, and with Nathan Shelton on the mound, I think we can play with anyone in the region," Daniels said about his inter-defense, and his southpaw.

Shelton is an experienced pitcher, and an effective pitcher, but there is something he isn't alone on the mound.

Allen Central's pitching staff returns intact from a year ago. Another lefthander, Randy Hansford, showed great promise last season. Hansford complements Shelton's style perfectly, relying on a good fastball, and an occasional curve to get hitters out.

Roger Horne saw considerable action last year and should be effective in his final season. Darrin Conn, who didn't play a year ago, could be a pleasant surprise for Donnie Daniels this season. Conn has an excellent curveball to go with a strong arm, and good baseball knowledge. His talents are versatile on the diamond, and could see action at different positions.

The Rebels appear to have all positions filled up the middle. This could be the team's strongest area, but the corners aren't exactly weak.

Rady Martin is back to handle the hot corner, a position he is no stranger to. Martin saw action there in 1986, and also as a starter for the Babe Ruth all-stars last summer.

Across the diamond Randy Hansford has gotten a good look from Donnie Daniels, and in return Hansford has looked good. The lefty will probably get a starting nod, but Darrin Conn could also see some action there, especially when Hansford is on the mound.

Robbie Click started some in leftfield a year ago, and is expected to contribute again this year. Jeff Hughes has worked out in the outfield, and should see considerable action chasing flies for Daniels.

Allen Central appears to be solid at every position, and could even have quality players on the bench which gives the Rebels quality backup.

"We have about 15 players who have about the same amount of talent," Daniels said. "There are some players that I won't be able to take out of the starting lineup, but we can go to our bench without losing a lot on the field."

"They were young last year, and we're young again this year. We may take some lumps early, but we could become a pretty good club as the season goes along."

Daniels has several versatile players who can play different positions which gives him various options to go with.

The Rebels are young, but yet they are experienced. Daniels is in his first season as a head man, but he learned a valuable lesson last season.

Daniels was an assistant coach with last year's state champion Bates Creek, something he says will always stay with him, and served as a learning tool.

"That was something I'll never forget, and that is something that no one can ever take from me," Daniels said. "We had a lot of good kids down there, but the kids are the same here. They have just as much raw talent here. Now it's up to me to get it out of them."

The 1987 Hunting Seasons

By Don R. McCormick, Commissioner Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources

There are two main considerations which must be addressed whenever a hunting season is set. One of these, and by far the more important of the two, is the question of what is best for the wildlife resource itself. Hunting regulations are, after all, designed to assure that our game populations are not squandered by overharvest and that a continued supply will be available for future sportsmen.

The other consideration is the wishes of the sportsmen of Kentucky, the men and women participate in field sports throughout the state.

But what happens when these two major concerns are in conflict? If the well-being of any wildlife species is in question, our decisions must favor that species. But in other cases, we try to abide by what the sportsmen prefer.

We have just gone through such a decision-making process, culminating in the season dates established by the Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission at its March 1-2 meeting.

Three months ago, at the December commission meeting, our Division of Wildlife presented a proposal to alter Kentucky's small game hunting season framework. Basically, this proposal called for earlier opening and closing dates than have been traditional in the state.

Our wildlife biologists believe that an earlier opening date will provide more game for hunters because game species are more abundant earlier in the fall before natural mortality begins to take a heavy toll. An earlier closing date would allow those animals which have made it through the winter a better chance to become breeders in the spring and help increase the populations.

These changes were proposed as a means of increasing populations of rabbits, quail and grouse. Since these changes were proposed for the hunters' benefit, the overriding question became one of whether or not sportsmen wanted these changes.

The proposal to alter season dates was presented to the commission in December to allow time for sportsman input. And sportsmen did respond—in three months, the department and the commission received over 1,000 pieces of mail. The majority opinion of those who wrote was that the season framework should be kept essentially the same, with 73 percent favoring the traditional opening date and 77 percent wanting to keep closing dates unchanged.

One of the major objections hunters raised to an earlier opening was that many farmers still have crops in the fields in early November, and the prospect of hunting in these fields could cause hunter/landowner problems. I commend the state's hunters for recognizing this potential problem and the concern they voiced about the necessity of maintaining good relationships with those upon whose lands they hunt.

With the majority of hunters in favor of the current dates, the decision became clear. Kentucky's hunters had expressed their wishes and we were, in this case, able to comply.

Let me emphasize here, however, that wildlife cannot always be managed by consensus or by popular demand, and that we are prepared to make unpopular decisions if the well-being of our wildlife

Don't Risk Getting Rabies By Handling Wild Animals

Every year many people risk getting rabies by handling a wild animal.

Last year, the number of confirmed cases of rabies more than doubled from a record low year in 1985. Wild animals accounted for about one-third of all rabies examinations. However, four-fifths of the wild animals taken in for examinations were found to have the virus, while domestic animals checked for rabies were much less likely to be infected.

Skunks were by far the most common animal found to have rabies, followed by foxes, dogs, bats, horses, cows and one raccoon. Since there is a much higher chance that a wild animal taken in for examination will test positive for rabies, it makes good common sense not to handle a wild animal unless absolutely necessary.

Capturing a wild animal for domestication as a pet or for use as a showpiece can present problems that otherwise could be avoided. It is a good idea if you handle a wild animal, particularly if it seems tame and allows humans to come very close. Taking a wild animal from the wilds, except during an open season, is also illegal.

A rabid animal may or may not show signs of having rabies. If the virus is in an early stage the animal probably will not be foaming at the mouth or acting out of the ordinary, other than not fleeing from humans.

Wild animals instinctively associate humans with danger and will run away from humans most of the time. If a wild animal does not flee, that is a definite warning signal that something is probably wrong with the animal.

Treatment for rabies, although no longer a painful series of shots taken in the stomach, is still an unpleasant experience. Children especially can reduce their chances of getting rabies and having to take a half-dozen shots if they are instructed to leave wildlife alone, even if a young wild animal looks abandoned. Many times a young animal's parent is at issue. Biologists have been instructed to investigate further the impact of late season hunting to assure ourselves that we are not harming small game populations by continuing to allow it.

In spite of the sentiment for the traditional opening date, the commission was forced by the necessities of the calendar to make a slight alteration in the small game season. This year, and for the next several years, it will be impossible to open our gun deer season on the second Saturday or November (the optimum opening date) and small game seasons on the traditional third Thursday of the month if these seasons are not to overlap.

Therefore, the commission decided to delay opening the small game season until after the close of the 10-day gun deer season. This means that, this year, the season will open five days later than it traditionally would have. Depending on calendar shift, this new opening date will range anywhere from three days earlier to five days later than a "third Thursday" date.

Let me point out that the decision to leave the deer season dates alone and shift the opening of small game season was not made to benefit, nor at the request of, deer hunters. Rather, it was made in the interest of deer management. Our deer herd has grown to the extent that, in many areas of the state, we need to harvest more deer if we are to avoid future problems of overcrowding and the property damage that sometimes occurs with high deer populations. The mid-November period is the best time to harvest deer. Many deer hunters would actually prefer a later season, but this is a case where biology must hold sway over popular demand. Either an earlier or later season could effect harvest rates and undercut our management efforts and long-range deer management goals.

The state's raccoon hunters also had, through a series of meetings sponsored by the League of Kentucky Sportsmen, a chance to voice their opinions on this proposal. Again, the majority wished the existing regulations to remain unchanged. Except for the slight delay in the opening date of the hunting season, there were no changes made in raccoon regulations.

I thank you for allowing me the time and space to engage in this lengthy explanation, but there is apparently some misunderstanding among sportsmen about how and why these decisions were made. Let me assure you that the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources and the Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission have the best interests of Kentucky's sportsmen—all of them—at heart.

But with the increasing demands being placed upon our limited wildlife resources, it is not always possible to give all groups exactly what they desire. We do, however, strive to meet their wishes within the confines of sound biological management of our wildlife resources.

When compromises are necessary, we trust those involved will understand and approach them in a spirit of fellowship and cooperation. A contentious, argumentative approach serves no purpose other than dividing the ranks at a time when we need, more than anything else, to be united.

Kentucky Fishing Report

Frankfort, Ky., April 6—Fishing activity for the April 4-5 weekend was reported light statewide as periods of rain and snow kept anglers off the water. Several lakes in the eastern part of the state reported very little or no fishing activity due to severe weather and large amounts of snowfall. Water temperatures dropped at most every lake, but should begin rising slowly again towards the latter part of the week with the prediction of warmer weather. The lake-by-lake rundown, as reported by conservation officers or creel clerks at each lake:

KENTUCKY: Crappie were hitting tube jigs over submerged cover 15-17 feet deep; some black bass were hitting spinner baits over creek channels in 7-11 feet of water; clear to murky, rising, four and one-half feet below summer pool and 49 degrees.

BARKLEY: Crappie were taking minnows and jigs over stump rows, brush piles and drop-offs in 5-12 feet of water; black bass were hitting plastic worms and crank baits off rocky points 3-10 feet deep; rising, four feet below summer pool and 53 degrees.

BARREN: Crappie were hitting small jigs and minnows over brush piles 8-15 feet deep; white bass and crappie were highly active in the tailwaters on spinners, jigs and minnows; clear to murky, rising, seven feet below summer pool and 48 degrees.

NOLIN: Black bass were hitting crank baits and minnows off points and around stumps in 2-6 feet of water; crappie were taking minnows and small jigs over submerged cover and stick-ups 4-10 feet deep; some crappie were being caught in the tailwaters; murky, rising, six feet below summer pool and 52 degrees.

ROUGH RIVER: Black bass were active on minnows and crank baits off shallow points and over stump beds 2-6 feet deep; crappie were hitting minnows and small jigs over submerged cover 4-10 feet deep; small crappie were being taken in the tailwaters; murky, rising, six feet below summer pool and 52 degrees.

TAYLORSVILLE: Black bass were striking spinner baits jugged and casted over submerged tree tops 6-12 feet deep; bluegill were biting redworms, wax worms and meal worms over creek channels 2-4 feet deep; murky to muddy, rising, one-half foot above summer pool and 47 degrees.

HERRINGTON: No report available.

GREEN RIVER: Black bass were hitting jig-and-rind combinations and crank baits off rocky banks in 3-10 feet of water; crappie were hitting minnows over submerged tree tops 6-15 feet deep; murky, rising, one foot below summer pool and 50 degrees.

CUMBERLAND: Rockfish were hitting live shad and large white jigs off shallow points and over stream channels in 20-40 feet of water; crappie were taking minnows over brush piles 6-12 feet deep; murky, rising, seven and one-half feet below summer pool and 50 degrees.

DALE HOLLOW: Black bass were hitting minnows and spinner baits off rocky points in 10-15 feet of water; crappie were taking minnows over brush piles in 15-20 feet of water; clear, stable at summer pool and 52 degrees.

LAUREL: Due to extreme weather in the southeastern portion of the state, very little fishing was reported at Laurel River Lake. The water is clear, rising, one foot below summer pool and 48 degrees.

CAVE RUN: Black bass were active on jigs flipped over brush piles 1-5 feet deep; muskie were taking crank baits over submerged creek channels 1-5 feet deep; some crappie were being caught in the tailwaters on minnows in 2-6 feet of water and discharge is heavy; murky, rising, one-half foot above summer pool and 51 degrees.

PAINTSVILLE: No fishing activity was reported due to severe weather. The water is murky, rising, just above summer pool and 38 degrees.

BUCKHORN: No fishing activity was reported due to severe weather.

GRAYSON: No fishing activity was reported due to severe weather.

DEWEY: No fishing activity was reported due to severe weather. The water is murky, rising, three feet below summer pool and 39 degrees.

FISHTRAP: No fishing activity was reported due to severe weather. The water is muddy, rising, 12 feet below summer pool and 48 degrees.

Bassin' With the Pros... Don't Get Robbed In the Stickups!

"Stickups" is a broad term that can cover anything from a twig to a three-foot diameter tree stump. For the most part, it's the smaller vertical cover, essentially 'new' growth, rather than fallen trees. A good example of a 'stickup' is willow stubs chopped by beavers. On newer reservoirs or impoundments, the stickups were secondary growth from stumps which the water's finally submerged.

"Usually the key to fishing stickups is to look for areas that provide a maximum amount of cover," suggests Ken Cook, Evinrude Outboards Pro Team member. "Bass relate to differences in their environment, in the relative abundance of the stickups."

"You've got a clump of stickups that might be surrounded by a regular area or more stickups," Cook continues. "You're looking for key areas within the whole structure, the sub-structure, and the finer points of where to concentrate your fishing activities. You should favor areas that are the thickest, that provide the best cover."

Cook goes on to emphasize that any time you can find something that's broken horizontal within the stickups, that is, where one or more be broken over and laying down, then you've located a key place for bass.

"Bass are horizontal in the water and horizontal structure gives them more shade, cover and predatory advantage than vertical covers will," Cook says.

It doesn't matter what type of contact lure you use as long as you use the proper technique.

"Any time you're fishing a hard cover like wood or stickups of any kind, you usually want to bump into that thing with your lure—spinnerbait, crank bait or jig," instructs Cook. "These are basically what we call contact baits that work best when they actually contact the structure or the bottom."

"You want to run your bait as near to and in to as much cover as possible. The key that unlocks the door to the bass' mouth is the erratic thing the bait does when it bumps the stump. If you run a spinnerbait into the stickups, the blades will sometimes hit the stickups and stop and turn direction. Therein is an audible trigger that quite often triggers a bass' predatory reflex."

If you're looking for some action without having to make hundreds of casts, ambush the bass in the stickups!

Owners of Johnson® and Evinrude® electric positioning motors might like to try OMC's weedless propeller for those motors. It has a close-fitting hub and special swept-back blades that OMC says keep it from snagging without sacrificing thrust. The prop fits Johnson and Evinrude electric models from 1982 through 1987 and is available from Johnson and Evinrude outboard dealers.

Massachusetts Man Wins Trout Stamp Competition

Charles McKay Freeman, of Amesburg, Massachusetts, was selected as the winner of the 1988 Kentucky Trout Stamp Competition, March 22, in Frankfort.

Over 50 entries of original artwork were submitted from across the country to a panel of six judges. Freeman's still life shows three trout, a fly rod, hoop net, three trout lures and a snapshot of an angler with a trophy catch. His artwork calls to mind both today's ideas on trout fishing and the memories of catching some big fish or having a particularly special fishing experience.

This year's entries can be viewed in the Old State Capitol Annex in Frankfort from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. through April 26. Freeman's work will be used as Kentucky's trout stamp, which is required of trout anglers before fishing for this species.

The judges for the contest included an ichthyologist, a wildlife artist, two art marketing executives, an avid trout fisherman and a printer specializing in color separations. The judges awarded first runner-up to Mark A. Susinno, of Rockville, Maryland, and second runner-up to Al Dornisch, of Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Previous winners of the contest are F.P. "Tony" Bennett, Harlingen, Texas, in 1984, Heiner Hertling of West Bloomfield, Michigan, in 1985, and Rick Hill, of Finchville, Kentucky, in 1986. Before 1984, Kentucky's trout stamps featured a line-drawing design of a jumping rainbow trout, which was not changed from year to year.

April is one of the better times to trout fish in Kentucky because that is when many of our cold water streams and lakes receive their annual quota of trout. The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is currently stocking 30 streams, 17 lakes and 11 tailwaters with trout each year. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service also stocks several streams in the Daniel Boone National Forest with rainbow trout.

Anglers purchasing a Kentucky Trout Stamp for $3.50 are helping to support their sport as the revenue from stamp sales offsets costs of fuel, manpower and transportation of trout across the state.

Trout stamps are available from county clerk offices or other outlets where fishing licenses are sold. The 1-1/2x1-1/2 stamp must be signed and affixed to your fishing or combination hunting and fishing license to be valid.

For a free brochure which lists all the streams, lakes and tailwaters that are stocked with trout by the department write: Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Div. of Public Relations #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601, or phone (502) 564-4336. Ask for the brochure "Kentucky Trout Waters 1987."

This publication also includes the months each body of water is stocked. However, since trout stocking is dependent both on weather conditions and the availability of fish from federal hatcheries, specific stocking dates are not included.

Trout fishermen interested in catching a trophy should visit Lake Cumberland its tailwaters. The state records for rainbow, brown and lake trout were taken from the Lake Cumberland tailwaters. Laurel River Lake is also noted for good trout fishing, especially during autumn.

FISHIN' TIPS

from... Tom Mann

HEY TOM: "I know you fish all over and this is really pinning you down, but if you could have only one cast, one lure, competing in a $25,000 winner-take-all bass tournament, which lure would you choose? HARDHEAD JOE"

HELLO HARDHEAD: Boy, they sure named you right? Well, I'd choose a 6-inch Strawberry flavored plastic worm, use a 3/4-ounce slip sinker, fire it a country mile along a deep, weedy shore, and grow old bringing it back.

DEAR TOM: "I've heard lure manufacturers make lures to catch fishermen, not fish. True?" INQUISITIVE

HELLO INQUIZ: I'm sure this has happened in the past but it cost too much today to make this gamble. Every lure is thoroughly field tested, and if the fish don't buy it there's no use trying to sell it to fishermen.

DEAR TOM: "When I can't catch a fish all day, I get so frustrated I could spit fire. Is it true you experts always catch fish?" GOTTA KNOW

HELLO GOTTA: Don't you believe it, all fishermen get wiped out at times. The only guy I ever knew who always caught fish was a tricky friend of mine who, when he got skunked, would go to the fish market on his way home. He'd buy some fish, then ask the man to wrap them and toss them to him. That way he could always say he caught some fish.

The raccoon is probably one of the neatest creatures in the animal kingdom. Sometimes it will scrub pebbles until they shine.
