

For People or Plants Growing Is Key To Success Of MCC Greenhouse Project

By Joe Porter
Plants, people, sharing and growing. That's the philosophy that Mountain Comprehensive Care's Greenhouse Program thrives on.
The program employs about 45 people, men and women who are mentally retarded or developmentally disabled. According to Chalmer Howard, the mental retardation director at Mountain Comprehensive Care, the program began in 1973 when it became obvious that the clients needed a more meaningful work experience. "Before that they were attending the adult activities center where many became disinterested in crafts," Howard said. "They needed a challenge, so we developed a program in horticulture."
Howard calls horticulture an excellent medium for the sheltered workshop program, and its success comes from the fact that it is a positive human activity. "People naturally take to plant production," Howard said. "Most get satisfaction from working with planting, caring for them every day and watching them grow."

For every seven clients there is one staff member who teaches skills and monitors the work being done. The task is matched to the client's ability. Tasks go from simple to complex, and after one skill is learned, the client moves up to the next level. All are kept busy with watering and fertilizing plants, transplanting and moving plants, filling orders and selling plants.
David Gillespie, horticulturist with a master's degree from the University of Kentucky, is the program manager with the job of balancing the program's business operation with the treatment program. Gillespie said that work enhances a person's self-worth, and with the emphasis on teaching new skills, it allows each to "function to as near their potential as possible while they work in the community."
To broaden their plant selection and insure quality production, the program has worked over the years with the local Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Kentucky. As a result, Gillespie said they are now growing more perennials than ever before, pinks, poinsettias, and bulb plants. They have also made popular vegetable plants like broccoli and cauliflower that haven't been traditionally grown in eastern Kentucky.

Besides selling plants and flowers and providing positive work for its clients, the program—with its wealth of expertise—also functions as a community advisory. Gillespie said their purpose is also to serve as consultants to farmers, florists, businessmen in the greenhouse industry, as well as to hundreds of backyard gardeners.
Sixty percent of their business is retail trade and forty percent is wholesale, selling to businesses in the area. Jim Hughes of L&M Greenhouse in Paintsville is a customer and big supporter of the program. "I buy all my stuff here. I enjoy their plants and their people," (See Story No. 1, Page 4)

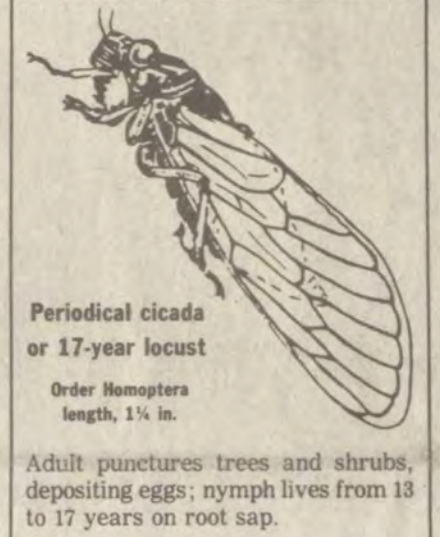

"GREENHOUSE PROGRAM—WHERE PEOPLE GROW" is their slogan. Program workers (left to right) Catherine Mills, Nancy Wallen, Moanette Blackburn, and Reggie Campbell are busy transplanting pepper seedlings.

Jury Awards Buyer $300 For 'Lemon'

By Ron Marstin
If a person buys a used car, does he have a responsibility to check it out to determine that it is all that it seems to be?
Yes, according to the seller's attorney; no, according to the buyer's; up to a point, according to the jury.
The dispute that wound up Friday in Floyd Small Claims Court began last August, when Curtis Lovins paid $990 for the 1974 Volkswagen he had spotted in Okie Shepherd's front yard on Turkey Creek. It seemed to be just what he needed to get back and forth from his home in Maytown to his job as hardware department manager at the Wal-Mart store here.
The body was still in good shape and he was told by Shepherd and Shepherd's niece, the owner of the car, that a new engine had recently been installed in it, Lovins testified. "I thought I was getting a real deal," he said.
The VW got Lovins to work once and then died. When he looked at it more closely, he said, the "new" engine turned out to be rebuilt. Four days after the sale he wanted his money back.
Lovins should have looked into it more thoroughly before he bought it, said Larry Brown, Shepherd's lawyer. "He had a duty to investigate it; he (See Story No. 2, Page 4)

17-Year Locusts' Love Song Will Be Loud in the Land

The cicadas are coming! The cicadas are coming!
There is, however, no need for a call to arms.
Perhaps you, too, call them 17-year locusts. Makes no difference, by whatever name they will plague 76 of the state's 120 counties during May and June when their voice will be as loud as it is unwelcome in the land.
The song of the cicada at its height of raspy shrillness can interfere with outdoor gatherings, bring conversation to a halt, and drive all but the hardiest indoors to seek the comparative peace of TV, squabbling offspring, even a snapping dog or hissing cat. But this is the love call of the male, part of the ritual which guarantees that around 2004, another generation of cicadas/locusts will make its appointed round.
In any case, there is no need for panic or mass hysteria. County Agent Gene Ball says young or newly-planted trees are, as a rule, these subject to any severe damage, and there are some simple preventive measures to be taken. Small trees can be covered with netting, and larger ones may benefit from a wrapping of burlap around the base. Either method will prevent the cicadas' ascent. If you lack a supply of potato or onion sacks, burlap is available in rolls at farm supply stores. This may be a bit expensive, especially in view of the fact that most trees will survive the periodic onslaught without any help.
There are sprays available for the orchard owner.

April Weather Hits Again—Now It's Brief Windstorm

By Ron Marstin
As if unseasonal snow and high water were not enough, April had yet another surprise in store for Floyd countians Monday night, when a short, sharp storm passed over the county, scattering blossom and branch and, in a few places, plunging households in darkness.
Little property damage was reported as a result of the storm, which had been heralded by a National Weather Service warning and was first felt here around 9:45 p.m. Mostly lightning and bluster, it produced relatively little rainfall outside of Prestonsburg.
Falling tree limbs brought down power lines on Prater Creek shortly after 10 p.m., however, leaving residents there without electricity for nearly 13 hours. Service was restored around 11 a.m. Tuesday, according to Leon Huffman, Kentucky Power Company administrative assistant.
Several bus drivers carrying students to Prater Elementary School had already begun their morning runs Tuesday, when word came that the school would be closed for the day on account of the outage, said Jess Morton, service manager at the county school bus garage.

Kentucky Power lost three utility poles in the storm, said Huffman, who explained that heavier power lines now being used on account of their greater carrying capacity can be a liability in a storm. Where the older, thinner lines easily snapped under the weight of a toppled tree, the new lines do not break easily; instead, the crossarms are likely to be stripped from the poles and the poles themselves may splinter, he said.
Power was out for a time in Melvin but was restored within hours, Huffman said. The Big Sandy RECC also reported scattered outages, with power restored in all sections by about 2 a.m.
A porch, blown off a house on Arkansas Creek, broke a utility pole; an apple tree uprooted on a Cow Creek property brought down a service wire; and about a dozen families on Middle creek were without power for a while, said Arnold Campbell, Big Sandy RECC plant superintendent.
In Prestonsburg, the storm turned over an unoccupied house trailer on a dealer's lot.

Council Takes Divided View Of Police Department Zeal

By Joe Porter
Criticism aimed at the Prestonsburg Police Department was discussed at Monday's night's meeting of the city council, here. Yet, is it criticism or praise? It seems the force has gained a reputation in eastern Kentucky for its aggressiveness against the drunk driver.
"I don't want to get on the police department," Councilor William O. Goebel said, "but they're getting an awful reputation. They're pulling people over for no reason, stopping certain citizens who they think may be drinking." And Councilman Frank A. Adams
Grand Jury to Ponder Endangerment Charge
A charge of wanton endangerment stemming from a Wheelwright poker game will be referred to a grand jury for consideration, District Judge Harold Stumbo ruled Tuesday in Floyd District Court.
David Hall brought the charge against Harold Johnson, Jr., of Branhams Hollow, alleging that Johnson fired past his head in the course of a poker game on Feb. 23 and then pointed the cocked pistol at him. The bullet lodged in a wall behind him. Hall indicated.
Hall, a Savannah Coal Co. worker, said the shooting was unprovoked. Johnson was apparently upset over a $7 wager, he added.
The testimony came in the course of a preliminary hearing at which Johnson, who is represented by Public Defender Norm Bennett, was not called to testify.

related an incident where a man from Pike county was stopped without being ticketed, and is now reluctant to return to Prestonsburg.
City Attorney Larry D. Brown told the council that a police officer must have "probable cause" before stopping a motorist. Brown suggested that if it is a problem, the County Attorney will have to instruct the patrolmen on the law.
Council member Gary D. Brown pointed out that the Prestonsburg Police Department has a good reputation with other law enforcement agencies in eastern Kentucky for its strict law enforcement work. "If they're keeping the drunk driver off the roads, it pleases me," Thomas J. Tackett said.
Police Chief Elmo Allen was out of town and did not attend the meeting. Yet Fire Chief Thomas Blackburn was there and defended the police. He conceded that there may be some overzealous officers patrolling, but he said it was the only law enforcement agency working in the county. "The police shouldn't be criticized for pulling over drunks," Blackburn said. "Prestonsburg Police have the worst name, because it does its job."
In another police related matter, Councilor Margie N. Osborne mentioned that the police department has been criticized in District Court because some of its officers have not been appearing as witnesses. City Administrator Fred A. James said that has happened because some officers have become dismayed by the dismissal of charges in some cases, and that officers have not always been properly notified of court dates beforehand.

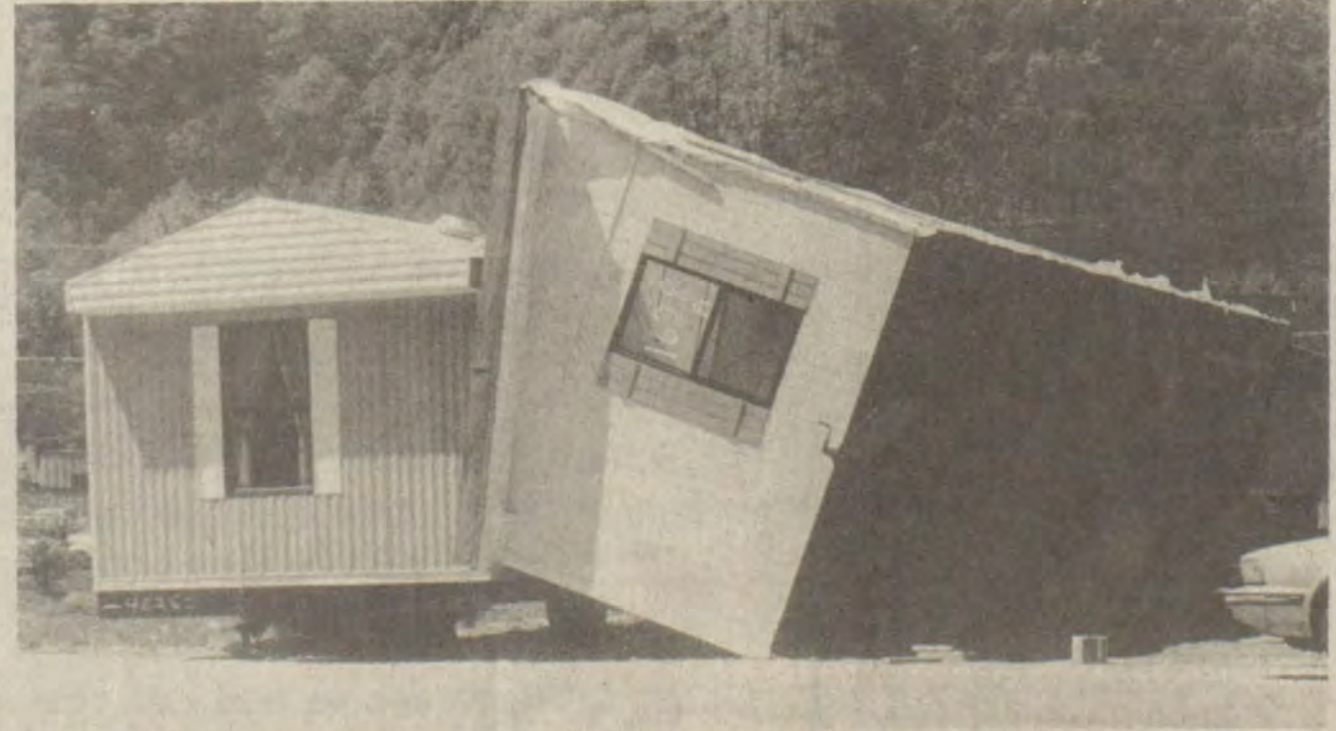

In an effort to better serve its residents with police protection, the council passed a motion to stop the practice of the police responding to complaints and calls received from Highlands Medical Center. "I think we need to set it out to them in writing," Mayor Ann R. Latta said. She will now (See Story No. 4, Page 4)

Two School Literary Magazines, Tho' Diverse, Have Common Goal

By Louise Houghton
Two magazines produced this year by Floyd county high school students are about as different, in their content, as workboots and prom slippers. But both publications have a similar purpose—to give students an incentive to do their best work for public consumption—and both make a similar point: that eastern Kentucky schools can turn out good writers and artists when students are given a little motivation.
"It feels great," admitted a shy Randy Lawson at a congratulations and autographing session held last week for the students who contributed to one of the publications, "Mountain Magic." The McDowell High School freshman's drawing was chosen for the magazine's cover and it marks the first time his art has been published, he said.

"I didn't know I could do it," said Debbie Howell, McDowell sophomore whose artwork also is featured in "Mountain Magic." She has been drawing for only about two years, she said.
"I never expected it," added her mother, Geri Howell. "I'm just really proud of her, and I hope it builds up her confidence. She needs it."
The idea of giving students a forum for their work has proven to be so popular that Allen Central High School plans to publish its own literary magazine this spring, according to English teacher Patricia Watson. Students routinely produce many essays, short stories, poems and artworks for their class assignments, Watson explained, and some of them are very good. "There's no way we could include all of those in this one magazine," she said, pointing to "Mountain Magic" which includes work by students at all county high schools.

The second edition of "Mountain Magic" was printed this month, supported by the School-Community Partnership Committee of the Floyd County Education Forum, and in part by Campbell Motors, of Ivel. Students were closely involved with almost every aspect of its production, including editing, design and layout.
Much of its content is highly imaginative—there are stories about vampires, mentally deranged murderers, street bums and pioneer life. Other works ponder the profound questions that most teenagers confront—love, death, friendship, courage, or the feeling of being a high school senior. A few are humorous, such as one story about a mother's techniques for waking her late-sleeping husband and son.
One of the stories, "Mama's Last Good-Bye," by Serena Thornsby, of Allen Central High School, won first place in a regional competition held at Morehead State University in February. Set in 1817 Kentucky, it tells of two children orphaned by the death of their mother from tuberculosis.
Quite a different sort of work is showcased in "Mantrip," produced by Wheelwright High School's cultural journalism class with help from teachers Carol Stumbo and Delores Woody. These student writers, instead of delving into their own imaginations to come up with subject matter, looked at life around them. The magazine is a collection of interviews with area residents, an attempt to preserve some of the cultural history of eastern Kentucky.
The third issue of "Mantrip" will be printed next month, according to Stumbo. The second edition, published last fall, includes interviews with artist Brett Johnson, who was born at Mousie; novelist Gurney Norman, who grew up in the Hazard area; Everett Hall, whose father was involved in the legendary 1925 shoot-out between Lewis White and "Bad" John Hall; Hattie and Harry Fain, who moved to Wheelwright in 1931 when he found work in the mines there; (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

TRAILER TOPPLED from its foundation at a North Lake Drive dealer's lot here was evidence, Tuesday morning, of the brief but energetic wind storm that swept across the county the night before. Downed power lines and a lengthy outage on Prater Creek also resulted from the storm, which otherwise did little damage.

Second Edition "Growing Up"

By Ron Marstin

Parents near despair at their teenagers' numbing vanities and chronic shortsightedness will do well to read Mountain Magic—the literary magazine put out, now for a second year, by Floyd high school students. If this collection of stories, essays, and poems demonstrates anything, it is that nothing moves students to press against their mental boundaries like the challenge of creative writing.

Already, the young journal is growing up. The self-conscious pieces that occasionally intruded in the first edition, the dreamy and tortured protestations of love won and lost, have been left where they belong, in the privacy of diary or letter. The self-consciousness that marks many of this year's writers is of a quite different kind.

The quality that distinguishes the best of them is perspective. It is the awareness that comes with the ability—no mean accomplishment for young writers—to "step back" psychologically, to look at their own lives and feelings "from a distance," to see them in context.

Where does this collection's fascination with dying grandparents come from, if not from the need to explore this dawning awareness of one's life, not just as childhood's unreflective succession of present moments, but as a journey with beginning and end, a generation within the long parade of generations, a history within history?

Two stories, R. B. Davis's "Helping Granpa" and Tonya Burke's "Remember the Leaves," and two poems, Serena Thornsburg's "Season of the Setting Sun" and Julie Pullium's "My Grandfather," all reflect on an old person's dying: all display a vision of life as a whole, a finished piece. It's a perspective to gladden the heart of an educator or anyone, for that matter, who likes to watch kids grow up. And it's a reminder of the importance to education of encouraging students to write.

Another sign of this growing consciousness of the self-in-context are the essays that tackle social problems—Penny Triplett's on "Emotional Child Abuse," even the playful "Points of View on Shampoo," by Leigh Patton and Cathy Horn—and especially those that try to come to grips with what it means to have been raised in eastern Kentucky.

In an introductory essay, David Spiggle, one of the magazine editors, expresses a hope that the authors will have confidence in their abilities "so they won't have to worry about what other people think about them." That is a worry that several of the writers tackle head-on—Tonya Burke in her "Portrait of an Appalachian Woman," Sheree Scott's "Illiteracy in Kentucky," and Marjorie Burke's "The Appalachian Student's Disadvantages," which the judges awarded first prize.

Burke is determined both to make her way in the wider world and to hang on to the small-community values she has inherited. The fact that the two goals will likely prove less compatible than she thinks takes away nothing from the Wheelwright High School junior's willingness to stake out the territory.

My own favorite in this anthology is Andrea Stephens's "Season of the Vampire," a competently written and surprisingly subtle reflection on the discipline it takes to be a vampire. The Prestonsburg High School junior's tale of Gregory St. Xavier, a centuries-old blood-drinker corrupted—or tragically ennobled—by human feeling, is imaginative and insightful. The judges placed it second, in a ranking that apparently did not distinguish between fiction and non-fiction.

It may be coincidental—though I doubt it—that Stephens is the only short-story writer here to refer to her characters by last name. Other student authors might usefully adopt the practice: it will give them some critical distance on their stories. Unless the closeness of author and character is germane to the story, tales peopled with Beths, Toms, Sallys and Marcs tend to run toward cuteness and sentimentality. The writer is meant to be an observer, not a pal.

Why is it that people who would never attempt an essay or short story will think nothing of dashing off a poem? Would-be practitioners should be cautioned: poetry is the most exacting of literary forms.

This is not to disparage the poets represented in this year's Mountain Magic: none of the poems included here has been "dashed off" and some of them—including Serena Thornsburg's "This Empty Space," Elizabeth Gibson's "The Graduation," Michael Rosenberg's "Release," and Brian Spears's "Goodbye Mother"—have merit. Rather, it is to urge students to study the work of established poets in order to get a feel for the economy, the discipline, that the craft requires.

The judges liked Michael Scroggins's uncluttered farm scenes, awarding him first and third prizes in the art category. Some may find Steven Parson's intent bluegrass quintet, the second prizewinner, more interesting. It is hard to tell how much of the impact of the original is lost when a painting or drawing is translated to the printed, black-and-white page. It is an achievement that the artwork included here holds up as well as it does.

For reasons that are not obvious to this reviewer, this year's Mountain Magic is subtitled "Poems, Prose, and Plows." The project was sponsored by the Floyd County Education Forum's school-community partnership committee. It ought to prove a morale booster for Freddie Goble, the committee chairman, who is recovering from a recent heart attack.

No fewer than 14 student editors are listed among the credits, a statistic I find vaguely unsettling. Does this reflect a concern, I wonder, to keep the selection process participatory and democratic? If so, it is a policy that could be usefully reconsidered. Democracy is a worthy system for deciding issues ranging from war to welfare: it is arguably much less suitable for educating taste in art and literature.

If student committees are screening the work of their peers, one has to wonder if some good writing is not ending up in the editors' wastebaskets. Democratic decisionmaking is an essential skill, but the literary magazine may not be the place to teach it. Mountain Magic represents a rare opportunity to set meaningful literary standards for Floyd high school students: it should not be squandered.

And that's good—

Dr. Livingston, Native of Tram, Finds PCC Students 'Different'

By Louise Houghton

Back in the 1930's, when Inez Livingston was a 14-year-old freshman majoring in home economics at the University of Kentucky, she had not the slightest idea that one day she would be a counseling psychologist with a "Dr." in front of her name.

But, ironically, it was her subsequent job as a home economics teacher that led her into the field of psychology. And today, as a professor of psychology at Eastern Illinois University, she finds herself working with four colleagues, only one of whom began his career in that field. The other three majored as undergraduates in physical education, electrical engineering, and art.

The lesson she draws from that experience, and tries to communicate to her students, is that no education is truly irrelevant. "You don't know what you're going to need," she tells them, "so how do you know what's relevant?"

Livingston, who was born in 1918 in her family's two-story log cabin at Tram and who began her education four years later in the one-room schoolhouse of nearby Dark Hollow, has returned to Floyd county for a few months this spring to teach at Prestonsburg Community College and to become reacquainted with students here. She is on sabbatical leave from her Illinois job to rework that university's curriculum of introductory psychology based on the needs of today's students, and that task involves getting to know some of the students who typically end up at EIU.

College students here seem to have two traits that set them apart from the average undergraduate, she reported in a recent interview.

"Number one, they want to learn," Livingston said. "That's different." Students here tend to be "avid learners" who don't ask the usual undergraduate's question, "What is the least I have to do to get by in this course?" Instead, she said, they ask, "What can I do to understand this better?"

"I'm amazed at that," she said. Secondly, she believes, the personal interests of students here are more family-centered. The students are more involved in church or community affairs and care little about the beer blasts or cocaine parties popular on many campuses. "I don't hear much about that here," Livingston said. "I don't believe these students are into drugs."

Livingston's own life story provides strong evidence that women, as well as men, can combine marriage and children with a successful career, as long as the woman is motivated and her spouse also is willing to devote some time to children as well as to his own career. She was married at 19 to Carl Blair Livingston, a railroad engineer, and after their daughter was born, he took a leading role in caring for the child. He not only helped to cook meals and clean the house, but also insisted on washing the baby's diapers himself.

Later on, Carl Livingston also picked out all of his daughter's clothes, and did so with such flair that she was voted "best dressed" student at her high school.

"In fact, I think he was more motherly than I was," Livingston chuckled. "I was the disciplinarian, the business-woman, that part of it."

The contemporary debate over whether women who want to have "everything" are asking too much of themselves never occurred to this mother and career woman. "I never thought about it. It was just my life," Livingston said. "It never dawned on me that we had a problem."

Her own career has evolved gradually, over many years. Livingston said she majored in home economics at UK at the suggestion of a friend, and after graduation she began teaching at a Harlan county high school. Under the federal law that supported high school home economics classes, she was expected to spend part of her teaching time counseling her students. Because the only other counselor was a man, all the girls with discipline problems began to be referred to her.

"I ended up, before the year was over, being a school counselor," she explained.

After teaching there for about a dozen years, she wanted a change and once again returned to school. This time she majored in guidance and counseling, receiving a master's degree from Ohio State University. But even with that degree in hand, her next job was back in the home economics field at Union College, in Barbourville, where she re-established the home economics department that had been dismantled during the 1940's.

A few years later, following the death of her husband, she returned to Ohio State University to get a Ph.D. in counseling psychology. She served as assistant dean of women at Northern Illinois University, and finally landed her current job in 1968. When asked about her retirement plans, now that she is nearing 70, she joked that she may begin studying law.

No one knows her is likely to be surprised if she does just that. When she was a child, Livingston said, her parents never suggested that she "try" to do things. Instead, they simply told her to go ahead and do it. As a result, "I never question doing something," she said last week.

"I just do it."

Campaign Will Focus Attention On Abuse, Neglect of Elderly

The Cabinet for Human Resources will launch a statewide public awareness campaign against the abuse, neglect and exploitation of the elderly next month during a conference for a wide variety of professionals who work with Kentucky's senior citizens.

The "Abuse-It Hurts At Any Age" campaign will serve as the main theme for the Elder Abuse Awareness Conference May 20-22 at the Executive West in Louisville. An estimated 500 counselors, state adult protection workers, senior citizens advocates and other providers of services to the estimated 640,000 Kentuckians over age 60 are expected to attend the sessions.

Richard Newman, manager of the cabinet's Adult Services branch, said the "Abuse-It Hurts At Any Age" theme will build upon existing public attention given to the problems of child abuse and spouse abuse.

"Kentuckians are becoming keenly aware of the long-term negative effects of abuse or neglect occurring within families," Newman said, "and they're responding with a dramatic increase in concern expressed by reporting possible incidents of abuse and neglect to the cabinet.

"We want concern being generated for Kentucky's children who are victims of abuse to be extended to the state's more than 10,000 adults, including 2,700 over age 60, who were known to be physically or mentally abused, deprived of their rights or taken advantage of financially during 1986.

"Many similar incidents may not be reported because the elderly person is afraid of being removed from his or her home. Often they are isolated from outside help. Our goal is to assist them in remaining where they can live in comfort and have their personal needs addressed," Newman said.

The multi-media campaign will consist of television and radio public service announcements, informational brochures, bumper stickers and presentations to civic groups statewide along with mass transit bus advertisements in the Louisville, Lexington and northern Kentucky areas.

"Each item prominently features the 'Abuse-it Hurts At Any Age' theme and the state's toll-free adult abuse hotline telephone number-1-800-752-6200," Newman said.

The campaign resulted from a special allocation of funds recommended by Gov. Martha Layne Collins and the Governor's Task Force for Older Kentuckians in 1985. The 1986 General Assembly set aside $150,000 specifically for the purpose of increasing public awareness of elder abuse during the current biennium.

Materials produced for the "Abuse-It Hurts At Any Age" campaign will begin appearing around Kentucky shortly after the conclusion of the conference, which is being sponsored by the cabinet's Department for Social Services and the Eastern Kentucky University Training Resource Center.

Pack Awarded Quick Acquittal On Drug Charge

By Ron Marstin

A Prestonsburg Job Corps staffer accused of selling marijuana to three students there was acquitted in Floyd District Court Monday in a case the defense attorney described as "about the weakest I've ever seen go before a jury in my life."

Public Defender Bob Greene said the case against Dwayne Stanley Pack, 28, of Martin, was essentially flawed because no chemical analysis had been done to show that the substance Pack allegedly sold to Michael Hickman last December was marijuana. "It's like a murder case where you can't prove anybody is dead," he told the jury.

Hickman, 18, a Job Corps student from Louisville, said he was an experienced marijuana user and that the substance he bought from Pack affected him the same as marijuana he had smoked previously. Pressed by Greene as to whether he knew that the substance he smoked fitted the definition of marijuana given in the Kentucky Revised Statutes, a somewhat bewildered student said, "All I know, it makes you high."

Pack, who had been suspended as a Job Corps recreation assistant pending his trial, denied selling Hickman marijuana. He theorized that the student named him in order to cover up the real supplier of the drug, which he said was a "big problem" at the Job Corps facility.

Any student who truthfully identified a supplier would risk being beaten with lead pipes by fellow students in the early morning hours, in what are known at the facility as "blanket parties," Pack said. "They would hurt him. It has happened," he said.

County Attorney David Barber conceded he had none of the substance Hickman allegedly bought from Pack: the student said he had smoked some of it and sold the rest to another student. In any event, Barber said, an experienced user of marijuana is entitled under Kentucky law to identify the drug—a position challenged by the defense attorney but upheld by District Judge Harold Stumbo.

Both attorneys insisted the welfare of society depended on the jury verdict, Barber contending that drugs could be eradicated "from the Job Corps and the schools . . . only by prosecuting those who are supplying it." He asked for the maximum sentence to be levied on Pack.

Greene, on the other hand, warned of a loss of freedom if persons could be convicted of drug trafficking in the absence of a tested sample of the alleged drug. "We don't know if it was horseweeds, rabbit tobacco, or marijuana. We have no corpus delicti. We just have a swearing match," he said.

The jury took only about 10 minutes to acquit Pack. Two other charges were dismissed earlier because the students to whom Pack was said to have sold marijuana have since left the Job Corps Center and were unavailable to testify.

Before Monday's trial, the prosecutor offered to recommend a five-day sentence and $100 fine in return for Pack's guilty plea. Pack turned the offer down. If convicted, he could have received up to a year's sentence and a $500 fine.

JOHN STEPHENSON (left), a candidate for state treasurer, has a novel campaign approach. He interviewed Dr. Henry A. Campbell, Jr., President of Prestonsburg Community College, in front of the Floyd County Courthouse April 14 as part of an effort to collect the history of every county in the state. Stephenson plans to use the videotape to promote tourism and teach young people the history of the Commonwealth. June Geiman, a campaign aide, stands at right.

DUI Arrest Nets Man on FBI List

By Joe Porter

It looked like an ordinary drunk driving charge when state trooper Greg Roberts arrested Kenneth Ludwig, 25, of Stanville, April 14. Yet when the officer ran a computer check it was discovered that the man was wanted by the FBI.

Ludwig was driving south on U.S. 23 at 11:15 p.m. without insurance or his lights on. Roberts also determined from the smell of alcohol and a field sobriety test that the driver was drunk. Ludwig was then taken to the county jail, and as a standard procedure when someone is arrested, his name was entered into the National Crime Information Center (NCIC) computer.

According to a spokesman for the FBI's Pikeville office, their office received a warrant on Ludwig in June 1986, charging him with unlawful flight to avoid prosecution and warning that the suspect should be considered dangerous. Yet at the time of the arrest, "he came without any resistance," Roberts said.

Ludwig will remain lodged in the Floyd County Jail until his extradition to Joliet, Illinois, where he will face an armed robbery charge.

In another extradition case, Jimmy Wayne Farmer, 31, of Wheelwright, was arrested April 15 by state trooper Wendell Scott on KY 1428 in Martin.

Farmer was wanted on a fugitive from justice warrant received by the Floyd county sheriff's office March 20, 1987. The warrant came from the Washtenaw county sheriff's office in Ypsilanti, Michigan. According to the record, Farmer had been charged with breaking and entering with intent to commit larceny and had been called for sentencing May 2, 1980 when he fled.

Farmer was picked up by authorities and returned to Michigan, April 22.

About women.

From the beginning of time women have been revered as the symbols of fertility, the givers of life, distinct in mind and body.

But, that which has made us unique, has also made us vulnerable to a disease that will afflict 1 out of every 10 of us during our lifetime. Breast cancer. It is the most common cancer* in women and will kill over 41,000 every year, 600 in Kentucky alone.

The concerns we face as women make the Breast Center a special place. Scholastic Semifinal Round Will Air Sunday

The second semifinal of "KET Scholastic Challenge" will air Sunday, April 26, at 1 p.m. The championship match will air May 3. The original field of 117 high school academic teams was further narrowed to nine during the quarterfinal rounds which aired recently. The high school academic teams competing in the semifinal rounds include Covington Latin, Mayfield, Lincoln county, East Hardin, Frankfort, Russell, Warren Central, Western Hills and Christian county. Each game consists of five rounds of questions in the areas of English, history, math and science. One round is devoted entirely to questions on Kentucky history and culture. Questions become increasingly difficult through the quarter, semi and final rounds of competition. Commenting on the goals of the program, now in its fifth season, producer Sally Jackson said, "We hope that "KET Scholastic Challenge" has given exposure to Kentucky's high schools and students and has provided education and entertainment to both participants and viewers." The championship team will win $500, and the two runner-up teams each will receive $250. The money, donated by the Friends of KET, goes to the libraries of the winning schools. Host for this KET production is Bill Myers, a veteran of 20 years broadcasting experience in the Cincinnati area, formerly as an anchor man and weather forecaster.

Springtime Is Sting Time, Insects Worse Than Snakes

Springtime is sting time in Kentucky. Insects kill nine times more Americans than do snakes, according to the National Center for Health Statistics.

As the weather warms people begin to spend more time outdoors. Meanwhile, the population of potentially harmful insects is growing. It is almost inevitable that, sooner or later, man and bug will come face to face, or stinger to neck.

Many of the flying, stinging insects, such as wasps, yellow jackets, hornets and bumble bees are attracted to sweet smells. Perfume or after shave will attract these insects, and attempts to swat one away or crush it against the skin may frighten it into stinging.

To make matters worse, yellow jackets are synanthropic—that means they like to share houses with people. Thus, people may come into contact with a yellow jacket without having to leave their own yard.

"The danger from bee, wasp, yellow jacket and hornet stings is that people think they are not allergic to them," said Rudy Scheibner, Extension entomologist in the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Just because you didn't have a reaction the last time you got stung doesn't mean you won't have a reaction this time. If you think that way you may be wrong, dead wrong."

Potentially fatal reactions to insect stings are most common in individuals who were stung occasionally as children, with no ill effects, and then, after 20 or 30 years without being stung, receive several stings within a year or two.

Persons with a history of asthma, hay fever or allergies should notify a physician in the event of an insect sting. The physician can warn of symptoms to watch for, and be prepared to treat a reaction should one occur. An allergic reaction to an insect sting does not always occur immediately after the sting.

Dangerous insects do not all come from the air. "Many crawly bugs can provide a nasty bite or sting, too," Scheibner said.

Wheel bugs and assassin bugs can inflict a very painful sting. The wheel bug is grayish brown and looks sort of like a shortened praying mantid with half a cogged wheel on its back. It has a piercing mouth part about the diameter of a straight pin which it uses to inject a fluid into insects it attacks. The fluid dissolves the insect from the inside out. When injected into humans, the fluid causes severe pain, and if not promptly treated can result in the loss of a finger. Assassin bugs lack the distinctive wheel of their cousins.

Brown recluse spiders, named for their shy habits, hide in woodpiles and under brush. They too, inject a cytotoxic fluid into their prey.

The hairs on some fuzzy caterpillars inflict a painful sting. And of course, there are always the ants.

People who made the disconcerting discovery that an entire colony of ants seems to have crawled up their leg are not mistaken in the perception that as they crush one ant, all the rest begin biting.

Early Development, Conference Topic

It is estimated that one of every four children under six years of age in Kentucky is poor. Over 60% of all Kentucky women with children under 18 work outside the home. Head Start is able to serve only 15-18% of the eligible children in Kentucky.

These and other important issues will be the focus of the Conference on Early Childhood sponsored by Gov. Martha Wayne Collins on May 11 and 12 at the Capital Plaza Hotel in Frankfort.

"So many of the problems we spend millions of dollars trying to solve could be eliminated by effective prevention programs," said Collins. "If all our children got the right start in life with a secure family, adequate health care, quality day care and good educational programs, we could drastically reduce the need for welfare assistance, remedial education, intensive medical treatment and even corrections programs."

The purpose of the Conference on Early Childhood is to examine critical needs of Kentucky children and what is being done to meet those needs. Gov. Bill Clinton, of Arkansas, chairman of the National Governor's Association, has been invited to speak about NGA initiatives in Early Childhood Education and Development.

His wife, Hilary, chair of the Children's Defense Fund board of directors, has also been invited to participate in the conference.

Dr. Larry Schweinhart, High/Scope Research Foundation and Margaret Cline, University of Massachusetts instructor/researcher on Early Childhood Development, are among the experts addressing the conference.

Schweinhart will speak about early childhood education in Kentucky and other states, and Cline will discuss programs providing before and after school care.

The final session of the conference will be devoted to assisting community groups apply for twenty-five $1,000 federal planning grants to be awarded for before and after school care services.

Registration information on the conference may be obtained by calling the Governor's Office of Early Childhood Development and Education, (502) 564-2611.

If You Have A Record—Play It!

Unlike my opponent, I am more than willing to discuss any and all of my positions with the voting public before the election. I want people to know how I feel the way the Circuit Clerk's office should be run. I'm running on my record—I'LL PLAY IT.

I have always been fair and honest with everybody. Traveling throughout this county, I have met many people who have personal experiences to tell about the way they've been treated in the Circuit Clerk's office. Some have not been treated fairly and others have been made to feel they have no right to ask questions. This office is supposed to be for ALL THE PEOPLE and not just for a few.

I have a RECORD of fair play—I have a RECORD of honesty. I want to establish a RECORD of being the best Clerk I can possibly be. You won't be insulted in my office. I look forward to having you bring your problems to me and I will try to help you solve them. I won't turn you away without trying.

I PLEDGE HONESTY, INTEGRITY AND SERVICE TO YOU, the citizens of Floyd County...I would like to be your full-time WORKING CLERK. Give me a chance to prove to you what I can do for the office...YOU WON'T BE SORRY YOU DID.

McNally, Gray Appeal Heard By High Court

Federal prosecutors took a new tack last week as the U.S. Supreme Court heard arguments in the appeal of Charles J. McNally and James E. Gray of their 1984 conviction of conspiracy to commit mail fraud.

McNally operates East Kentucky Auto Parts here and is chairman of the Prestonsburg City Utilities Commission. Gray was a Cabinet secretary during the administration of Gov. Julian M. Carroll. They were convicted of setting up a scheme to funnel $851,000 in commissions from state insurance contracts to loyal Democratic insurance agents.

The men were accused of aiding then-state Democratic Party Chairman Howard P. "Sonny" Hunt, who allegedly decided how the insurance commissions would be distributed. Prosecutors said the money went to agents who had nothing to do with the state's insurance policies, like Gray and McNally's Seton Investments, Inc., which received $200,000.

Prosecutors said Seton was a shell corporation formed at Gray's request in 1975. The firm allegedly used part of the money to buy condominiums in Lexington and Florida for use by Hunt, Gray and their girlfriends.

The prosecution also said Hunt directed $77,500 to McNally, an old friend who acted as "front man" in Seton after federal agents began their investigation.

Gray and McNally denied that Seton was set up to conceal the insurance scheme from the public or to dodge taxes, as the government alleged. Their attorneys argued there was no victim in the case—because the insurance commissions would have been paid in any event—and therefore no crime had been committed.

At trial and in arguments before the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Justice Department argued that the two men could be convicted of cheating Kentucky citizens out of their right to honest government. In arguments before the Supreme Court last week, Deputy Solicitor General Donald B. Ayer also argued that they could be convicted of obtaining money under false pretenses.

Hunt has already served a prison term for his part in the conspiracy. Gray and McNally face sentences of up to five years and a $10,000 fine for conspiracy, and five years and $1,000 for mail fraud, if their convictions are again upheld.

A decision in the case is expected before the court adjourns in July.

PCC PROFESSORS Leo Weddle, sociology, and Laura Weddle, communications, chatted with Gloria Steinem at the Women's Writers' Conference held recently at the University of Kentucky. Steinem, co-founder and editor of MS magazine, political writer and columnist, was keynote speaker. Her remarks focused on the history and future goals of the women's movement.

Mrs. Weddle remarked that "the most fascinating aspect of Steinem's speech was her marvelous sense of humor."

Robbers Persistent Tho' Haul Is Small Spring Clean-Up Led By Cow Creek Groups

By Joe Porter

Two Prestonsburg offices were robbed and ransacked April 18 when burglars entered through windows in the back of the building. The take was $112 in petty cash and portable typewriter.

Big Sandy Health Care, Inc. on U.S. 23 north and the adjacent office of optometrist William G. Sargent were entered during the night, file cabinets were emptied, and office equipment—two calculators and a personal copier—were moved.

The time of the entry is not known, but according to Prestonsburg Police Sergeant Sue Blackburn, who is conducting the investigation, the front of the building was checked during the night but not the rear, because there is no back driveway. Yet from mud tracks in the office and shoe prints outside, it was determined that the two burglars approached on foot and came off the hill behind the building.

The cash was in the health care office because a salesman had won a basketball pool, but hadn't stopped yet to pick it up. The rest of the money came from postage stamp receipts and the office snack box. The typewriter was taken from the optometrist's office.

"Whether we will be able to break the case or not, I don't know, but I've got a couple of suspects," Blackburn said. The police sergeant said that this is the second time in the last year that the building has been burglarized, and she has recommended that because of the position of the windows that they be bricked up or have bars installed.

Blackburn will continue her investigation by questioning suspects and checking with local pawnshops to see if the typewriter turns up.

In another case, Prestonsburg Police have charged Delbert L. Snodgrass, 28, of Ivel, with first degree wanton endangerment following an automobile accident April 8. According to officer Darrel J. Conley, Snodgrass was operating a coal truck and made no attempt to stop for the red light at the intersection of U.S. 23 and KY 114. As a result, the coal truck hit a Honda automobile driven by Stanley Wells, of West Liberty.

Conley reported that the accident was witnessed by three people. Wells was first taken to Highlands Medical Center with lacerations and head injury; and later transferred to the University of Kentucky Medical Center in Lexington. He was discharged from the hospital April 13.

Spring Clean-Up Led By Cow Creek Groups

The Cow Creek Area Development Club and Volunteer Fire Department held their annual spring clean-up day Saturday, April 25. Many volunteer workers from several communities in the fire department's coverage area came out, at 8 o'clock on a cool, wet morning to take part in cleaning up the roadways and ditches. They removed every can and bottle and all kinds of garbage along the way. Many other helpful people picked up on their property fronts and had filled garbage bags ready for pickups. A garbage truck was made available by County Judge Executive, John M. Stumbo.

Ladies in the community had food and drinks ready at the community building for all workers who came by and enjoyed a lunch together.

A spokesman said it was gratifying to see so many willing neighbors working together to make their community a cleaner, better place in which to live and raise their families, and said, "They deserve our thanks for making this community clean-up day a success."

Logan Was Renowned Indian Fighter

Kentucky's first state treasurer, Senator John Logan, received his title having served three successive terms as senator from Lincoln county to the Virginia legislature, prior to statehood for Kentucky.

Logan, appointed the first treasurer by first Governor Isaac Shelby, was renowned for his heroics in Indian fighting. He commanded an expedition against the Tennessee Cherokees to avenge the murder of a friend in Lincoln county. Tracking the Indians for several days, he overtook them in Tennessee, routed them and retook all their plunder. The Indians who managed to escape complained to the Governor of Virginia that their treaty had been violated, and that he had attacked "peaceable" Indians. The Governor directed Logan's friend Harry Innes, attorney general for the Kentucky District, to prosecute Logan and his party. Innes, however, refused to do this, "because of the indirectness of the order."

Treasurer John Logan was more than just a disposer and collector of state funds. His constant council was sought by the Kentucky Senate and official voting by that body was conducted in his chambers.

With the influx of settlers, the state was adding counties rapidly and these activities were not without conflict. Madison county, which had been formed in 1785, proposed in 1796, moving the county seat from Milford to Richmond. Some of the citizens of the Paint Lick area opposed the move, but arrived on the scene too late to prevent the county records being moved. Dave Kennedy, their leader announced he could whip any man approving the move. A man by the name of Kerley said he had approved it. They then proceeded to have their hair cut and heads greased. A fierce fight ensued, and Kennedy was beaten. Disgruntled, he and his friends withdrew and decided to establish a new county. The results a year later was Garrard county. This new county, formed from Madison, Lincoln and Mercer, received its name from two-term Kentucky Governor James Garrard. Garrard was a militia officer in the Revolutionary War and served in the Virginia Legislature before Kentucky statehood.

Fleming county was formed from Mason in 1798 and was named for Colonel John Fleming, who had settled at Stroud's Station in 1787, having come down the Ohio River in a canoe. He was wounded in a skirmish with Indians at Battle Run in Fleming, but heroically escaped from the superior force.

Pulaski county was taken from Lincoln and Green counties in 1799, the second of 13 established that year. The county was named for Polish Count Joseph Pulaski, who, after an unsuccessful attempt to restore the independence of his own country, fled to America and became a brigadier general in the war for independence. On October 9, 1779, he was mortally wounded in the attack on Savannah.

Pendleton county was formed from Bracken and Campbell, and was named for Edmund Pendleton of Virginia, president of the Virginia Court of Appeals and twice congressman. Pendleton was chosen president of the Virginia Convention which met to consider the federal Constitution.

Livingston county was formed from Christian county and was named to honor Robert R. Livingston, of New York. He was appointed by President Jefferson as Minister of France, and along with James Monroe, negotiated the treaty resulting in the acquisition of the Louisiana territory to the United States.

Boone county was named honoring Colonel Daniel Boone and was formed from Campbell county. Daniel Boone is credited by many historians as being the first white man to make a permanent settlement in Kentucky. Boone's exploits are too numerous to count here, but his exploratory and fighting skills carved out for him a place in the hearts of all Kentuckians. He died of fever at the house of his son-in-law in Missouri in 1820, at the age of 89. His grave is in the Frankfort cemetery.

Henry county was the 31st formed and was taken entirely from Shelby in 1789. The county was named for famed orator and first governor of Virginia, Patrick Henry. One of his more famous speeches was against the British Stamp Act, when he said "Caesar had his Brutus, Charles the First his Cromwell and George the Third..." He was interrupted by shouts of, "Treason, treason!" and he continued... "may profit by their example. If this be treason, make the most of it." He was also a member of the Virginia Convention which met to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

Betsy Layne, Allen Central Give Virgie Double Trouble

"Don't mess with us on our turf," was the message Betsy Layne and Allen Central sent out to the Virgie Eagles, Monday night.

Both Floyd county schools invited Virgie to Allen Park, Monday, but neither served as polite hosts, sending the Eagles home with two more losses added to their record.

Betsy Layne had the first shot at the Eagles, and it didn't take Junior Newsome's team long to get their bats heated up. After Duran Newsome set Virgie down in order in the top half of the first inning, Barry Hamilton started the Bobcats off and running by leading off the bottom of the first with a double down the rightfield line.

Hamilton, who has been moved into the leadoff spot in the absence of Dwight Jarrell, scored the first run of Monday's contest when Bud Newsome drilled Betsy Layne's second consecutive opposite field double.

The Bobcats failed to do anymore damage with the aluminum in the first, and as a result saw Virgie tie the game in the second frame. Shannon Elswick led the inning off with a single, and scored on a double off the bat of rightfielder Wayne Milam.

Milam was then caught off second base when Ray Phillips grounded to shortstop Adam Gearheart. Duran Newsome proceeded to strikeout Ernie Burke, and the Bobcats dodged a Virgie scoring bullet when catcher Todd Sturgill gunned down Phillips trying to steal second.

Virgie had been denied a golden scoring opportunity, and against the righthanded, Newsome never could again get much going again offensively.

Twice in the final five innings the Eagles did advance runners as far as second base, but the hard-throwing Bobcat sophomore silenced those Virgie uprisings.

With two out in the third inning, the Eagles banged out back-to-back singles only to see Newsome induce Johnny Wright to ground out to third baseman Kevin Spurlock. Again in the fourth inning Virgie got a man to second base with two out, but again Newsome slammed the door, striking out Ernie Burke to end the threat.

Then Duran Newsome really found himself on the mound. The talented youngster struck out the side in the fifth inning, and in the sixth set Virgie down in order after Claudie Tackett led off with a double. In the top of the seventh, Ray Phillips reached Newsome for a leadoff single, but Burke then grounded to Spurlock, who forced Phillips at second. Newsome took things upon himself after that, striking out Mike Browning and Earl Johnson to end the game.

While Newsome was holding Virgie scoreless through the final five innings, Bobcat bats were also performing their usual solid job.

Betsy Layne hit for a four spot in the third inning to break open a close contest. Bud Newsome first reached on an error, stole second, and went to third on a passed ball. When Todd Sturgill flied out and Brad Hall popped out, it appeared as if Betsy Layne would once again miss a chance to score.

Bobcat fans were treated to a two-out rally, though. Mark Scroggins walked then Kevin Spurlock, who shined both in the field and at the plate, collected an RBI single, scoring Newsome.

Leftfielder Keith Hall followed by matching Spurlock with an RBI single. Matt Conn, watching from the on deck circle, wasn't to be out done. He followed Hall with another single, this time plating Hall.

The Bobcats added an insurance run in fourth inning when Bud Newsome collected his second double of the game, and later coasted home after Todd Sturgill slapped a triple.

Duran Newsome was probably glad to get the extra run, but he didn't need it. The Bobcat starter went the distance to pick up yet another victory. In his route going performance Newsome surrendered only one run on six hits, striking out seven while walking one as Betsy Layne won 6-1, their 12th victory of the season against six losses.

Although time pieces were showing 8:30, Virgie's tough night was only beginning, and if they thought Duran Newsome was hard to hit in the first game, they were also singing the praises of Roger Horne.

The Allen Central righthander, having been victimized by shoddy defense while running into some hard-hitting opponents, combined all his pitches to keep Virgie hitters totally off balance.

Through the first five innings, Horne faced only two batters over the minimum of 15, giving up two hits while striking out three and not walking a batter.

On the Virgie mound, Mark Roberts was also working wonders, but Allen Central did reach the righthander for two runs in the fourth inning.

After Kevin Webb went down on strikes, Ray Martin worked Roberts for a walk. Nathan Shelton then flied out, but leftfielder Robbie Click kept Rebel hopes alive.

Before the game started coach Donnie Daniels mentioned that Click had been hitting the ball well, and the righthanded batting junior did nothing but increase his coach's confidence. Click drilled a one-one pitch into centerfield for a single, but when the baseball eluded Claudie Tackett, both Martin and Click scored.

Going into the top of the sixth inning the weather turned nasty, and due to a rapidly approaching electrical storm both coaches agreed to complete the final two innings as part of a doubleheader scheduled for Monday afternoon at Virgie.

This didn't set well with Horne. The senior righthander felt he deserved a win, and indeed he did. Regardless of plans to complete this one at a later date, Horne wants it chalked up as a win, and with the remarkable performance he came up with Monday nobody will argue.

Both Betsy Layne and Allen Central have worked their way to the top in the 57th district, and Monday's performances showed why.

In the first game the Bobcats did not commit an error, an impressive stat considering the fact that Betsy Layne started a freshman at third, a freshman at short, a sophomore at second, a sophomore in left field. These youngsters, along with some juniors, and one senior, also collected a total of nine hits. The Bobcats also watched a sophomore work from the mound.

Allen Central was just as impressive, although they did suffer one miscue in the field. The Rebels, since Daniels didn't count this one as a win, are still in the midst of an eight-game losing streak, but those losses have come against Belfry, Paintsville, Johnson Central, and Tates Creek.

With three sophomores in his starting infield, three juniors making up the outfield, and a junior at first base, the future looks great for Allen Central baseball, but Donnie Daniels' future is here.

The Rebels haven't played yet up to their full potential, but against Virgie they did play one of their best games of the season. Getting games in has been a problem for most schools. Daniels says that isn't a problem for his team, but playing well is. Maybe Monday helped solve most of Allen Central's problems.

Roger Horne

THE SPORTING TIMES

A retired Magoffin county school teacher once told me, "Son, you have to blow your own horn, because no one else will. If you're good, then go ahead and tell everybody that you are."

To a person without a great deal of modesty, these words of wisdom could take on a different meaning, but to me they were spoken and forgotten.

When you think about it, though, it does make some sense. Somewhere there is a thin line between being conceited and merely telling the truth. If this line is broken, people will see you as a self-centered jerk, but a person who can sell himself without breaking the unwritten code of modesty will leave the competition choking in his dust.

With this in mind, and still being truthful, we can all stand and blow the horn of high school athletics for all of Floyd county.

We, as citizens and workers of Floyd county, are gifted with possibly the most talent, athletically, of any county in the state of Kentucky.

No, you won't find any all-Americans among the bunch, and probably none will ever get a major college scholarship offer, but as a whole, this county is exploding with athletic ability.

It isn't because of their ability, though, that they won't achieve honors and offers. Area colleges have been living with a blindfold on their recruiting eyes.

For some odd reason, Morehead State, Pikeville, and some others are making a point of leaving this area in an effort to bring in athletic talent. If they could see, their recruiters would save gas, fan support would increase, and their level of ability may increase to par with other state's talent.

MSU is possibly the worst of the group. Under Wayne Martin, an eastern Kentucky boy himself, they tried to build their basketball program by bringing in players from New Jersey.

Even during the two years the Eagles won the Ohio Valley Conference, recruiters concentrated in that area. Earl Harrison, a Jersey man, did help MSU, but the strength of those teams rested on the shoulders of Jeff Tipton and Jeff Fultz, both area players.

Since then MSU hasn't landed players from this area who could have helped their athletic programs, players from Floyd county. David Hall was a definite starter in two sports for them. They let the ex-Trojan slip away without showing much interest.

This year MSU didn't and still refuses to give any consideration to Floyd county. Players such as Prestonsburg's David Martin, and McDowell's Brian Hall have enough talent to play in the OVC, and are more talented than some players the Eagles have on their current roster.

The school brought in Tommy Gaither from South Carolina, and all he wants to do is promote his upcoming basketball camp. Not much longer will the alumni of Morehead State support a program that has forgotten the people who put the school in the position it has now, the alumni of eastern Kentucky.

Steve Hamilton does have an excellent baseball program at Morehead, but how many scholarships has he given to players from this area? True, he shows interest in them, but when it comes time to sign, Hamilton expects these players to walk on, and the scholarships to go.

SHORT SPORTS

They will be heading them to the starting gate one more time this Saturday afternoon when the 113th running of the famed Kentucky Derby will take place.

Churchill Downs in Louisville will be the sight for the first leg of the triple crown of horse racing which is one of the few sports that requires the team work between man and animal.

Expected challengers for the mile and a quarter event include Capote, last year's two year old champion, Temperate Sil, winner of the Santa Anita Derby, Masterful Advocate, and Florida Derby winner Cryptocpearance. Race time is set for 4:30.

The winning horse will bring fame and fortune to their owners and riders. Horses were domesticated for human service, but in no other fashion than winning the Kentucky Derby does this animal serve his master.

Wives, pack up your bags and head for mother's house when the 1987 professional football season kickoff this fall.

If you were ignored in the past, then enjoy what little attention you did receive because Sunday's will be filled even moreso with football telecasts this time around.

ESPN recently landed a deal with the NFL for the rights to televise 13 games this fall, four pre-season contests, eight regular season encounters, and the Pro Bowl.

In obtaining the rights ESPN had to beat out cable channels such as HBO and Turner Broadcasting System.

ESPN plans to air their eight regular season games on Sunday night, marking the first time professional football has been on cable.

Recently National Basketball Association management recommended the league give the go ahead to three cities wishing to obtain expansion teams.

This past week the NBA's board of governors did one better than had been asked. Instead of okaying three additional teams, the board accepted not three but four new basketball clubs.

The four consist of the Charlotte, North Carolina Spirit, and the Miami Sound, both of which will be welcomed into the NBA family in the 1988-89 season. Minneapolis, Minnesota will enter a team in 1989-90, as will the Magic of Orlando, Florida.

A price of a basketball team has risen though. The last time an expansion team entered the NBA, Dallas in 1980, it cost 12 million bucks. That is a billfold full, but small pickings compared to the 32 million these four cities were charged.

Home court advantage in the NBA may be an advantage to some teams, but for Dallas, Portland, and Milwaukee, playing in their home arena didn't make that big of a difference.

After winning the opener of their series with Seattle, the Mavs came up a bit short in the second contest. Houston upended Portland at home to kick off that series, but the Trailblazers bounced back to even the five game matchup with a victory Sunday.

Possibly the best five game affair of all is taking place between Milwaukee, and the Philadelphia 76ers. The Bucks took the opening game by three before PERFECT ON THE SEASON: Duran Newsome shows his form that enabled him to earn his third victory against no losses, tying teammate Randall Spurlock for the most district wins.

Wallace, Good Pitching Powers Prestonsburg Past Wheelwright

Unfortunate injuries, and various other ailments greatly curtailed Brian Wallace's basketball contributions, but he is healthy now and taking advantage of every baseball opportunity.

Jeff Riley sorely missed Wallace's shooting ability. His Blackcats displayed that in each game, but now Russell Shepherd is loving what Riley didn't have, a physically sound Brian Wallace.

Wednesday afternoon the Prestonsburg senior second baseman proved just how valuable he is to a young Blackcat baseball team.

In the first game of a doubleheader against Wheelwright, the Blackcats and Trojans went into extra innings, but thanks to a big Brian Wallace hit, Prestonsburg blew open a close game in the sixth inning.

Wheelwright had taken a lead in the bottom of the first inning when Bobby Thornsberry led off with a double and scored on a Jimmy Tackett double. Tackett later scored when Johnny Isaac hit a two-out single to right field.

This Trojan early offensive outbreak came after Prestonsburg had scored in the top of the first. The Blackcats tied the contest in the top of the third inning. With one out Craig Tucker, who scored their first run, singled, went to third on a Brian Wallace single, and scored when Joey Griffith filed out to right field.

Prestonsburg took their first lead of the day in the fourth inning, scoring a single run. Tim Trusty, leading off, collected this second hit of the day by drilling a 3-1 fastball for a single. Trusty advanced to second on a ground out, then scored as Johnny Ray Harris hit safely.

Wheelwright, as they have shown this season, broke out the comeback bats in the bottom of the fourth. After Johnny Isaac struck out against Thomas Nairn, Shawn Hall reached on an error.

Greg Hall followed with a line drive to left centerfield that skipped off a diving Johnny Ray Harris' glove. Shawn Hall wound up on third and later scored when Stevie Little grounded out. Little collected the RBI while giving Wheelwright new life.

That life lasted until the top of the sixth inning. The first extra frame started off innocently enough. Tim Trusty, trying to bunt his way on, was thrown out by Johnny Isaac, who came on to relieve Shawn Hall in the fourth inning.

Jim Frazier, however, got the Blackcats rolling with a double down the leftfield line. Darrell Sparks followed with a walk. With two on and one out, Harris grounded out to first, and for a while it appeared as if the Trojans would survive the threat.

It wasn't to be, though. Isaac proceeded to hit Craig Tucker, loading the bases. Wheelwright then made a pitching change, bringing in John Justice to relieve Johnny Isaac.

Up came Brian Wallace, and on Justice's first pitch, drilled a two-out single to center, scoring both Frazier and Sparks. Griffith followed with a ground ball that was misplayed, and Thomas Nairn helped himself as well as his Blackcat team by driving in two runs with a double.

Nairn then set Wheelwright down in the bottom of the sixth inning. With the help of a game ending double play started by shortstop Tim Trusty, Nairn held the Trojans scoreless to earn his first mound victory of the season. The sophomore southpaw, in the route going performance, yielded three runs, two earned, on six hits while striking out three and walking only one.

Johnny Isaac, in relief, suffered the loss for Wheelwright.

In between games, Russell Shepherd told his Blackcats, "Let's jump on them early." A coach loves it when players respond to his commands. Shepherd's players did more than respond.

Johnny Ray Harris, leading off the game, reached safety on an error, stole second, then rode home on a Craig Tucker single.

This brought Brian Wallace to the plate. The Prestonsburg second sacker has hit the ball well since day one. Wallace had already collected three hits, and a walk in the first contest.

With Tucker on first, Wallace drilled a James McCarty pitch over the centerfield bleachers for his first homerun of the season, and at the same time gave Prestonsburg a three-run lead.

The Blackcats weren't finished either. Steve Wells, Thomas Nairn, Joey Griffith, and Tim Trusty all followed with singles off Wheelwright pitching, and when the dust had cleared Prestonsburg was on top 10-0 going into the bottom of the first inning.

Wheelwright made an attempt to challenge. In the home half of the first, Bobby Thornsberry and Jimmy Tackett collected back-to-back hits, and later scored on a John Justice single, but Trojan hopes quickly ceased in the second inning.

The Blackcats continued their unbelievable hitting, scoring seven more runs in the second inning to put the contest out of reach.

Righthander Mark Tipton was the beneficiary of all this Prestonsburg offensive output. The hard-throwing junior easily posted his first win of the season as the Blackcat team recorded their third victory of 1987.

James McCarty, Wheelwright's starter, was tagged with the loss as the Trojans fell 23-1, a tough one for Monroe Jones and crew to take after shooting promise in their past two games with the Blackcats.

IMPROVING RAPIDLY: Wheelwright's Bobby Thornsberry has impressed everyone in the field while swinging a hot bat at the plate.

Sturgill Provides Punch In First Blackcats Rally To Take Second

Betsy Layne set the table for Todd Sturgill, and the heavy hitting Bobcat cleanup man cleared it with a three run game tying homerun.

Going into the bottom of the seventh inning Sunday afternoon, Betsy Layne trailed Prestonsburg 5-2, and Bobcat chances were looking bleak.

With two out the Bobcats mounted a run producing threat, but not by any offensive output themselves.

Prestonsburg starter Todd Justice hit Bud Newsome with a pitch then proceeded to walk Bud Newsome, giving Betsy Layne an opportunity to come back.

Sturgill took full advantage of that new life, drilling a one-one Justice pitch over the left field fence to tie the score.

Betsy Layne starting pitcher Randall Spurlock also was given new life, and like Sturgill, he took advantage of it.

Spurlock, the top winning pitcher in the district, held Prestonsburg at bay through the eighth and ninth innings, then collected his third win of the season as Betsy Layne scored in the bottom of the ninth.

Bud Newsome led the final frame off with a single, stole second, and went to third on another Todd Sturgill hit, his third of the game.

Newsome then raced home with the winning run when Todd Justice unleashed a wild pitch.

Justice suffered the Prestonsburg loss while Spurlock was credited with the win to improve his season record to 3-1.

Prestonsburg jumped out to an early lead in the top of the first when Johnny Ray Harris walked, stole second, then scored on a Steve Wells two out single.

After Barry Hamilton singled to lead off Betsy Layne's half of the first and later scored on a Todd Sturgill single, the Bobcats took a one run lead in the bottom of the second inning.

Kevin Spurlock singled, stole second, and rode home on Hamilton's second hit of the day, but Prestonsburg bounced back with single runs in the fifth, and sixth, before reaching Randall Spurlock for two runs in the top of the seventh.

Sturgill's hitting heroics, however, spoiled the Blackcats' efforts, giving Betsy Layne their 11th win of the season.

The second game wasn't as favorable for the Bobcats. Prestonsburg, after Betsy Layne reached Blackcat starter Mark Tipton for three runs in the first, tied the contest with three of their own in the top of the second.

Tipton then righted himself on the mound, holding Betsy Layne scoreless the next three innings.

While Bobcat bats failed to hit Tipton, Prestonsburg was busy scoring runs in fine fashion. The Blackcats tallied six runs in the top of the fifth inning to break open the 3-3 tie.

Betsy Layne did manage a two spot in the bottom of the last inning, but failed to overcome the big Blackcat lead, falling 9-5.

Tipton recorded the win for Prestonsburg. While freshman left-hander Chad Hamilton took the loss.

With the second game win Prestonsburg improved to 4-8 on the season, while Betsy Layne finished the day at 11-6.

Coach Junior Newsome says his Bobcats are playing some pretty good baseball, but needs a several game streak to gain some consistency.

"If we could get some games in I think it would help," Newsome mentioned.

"We need to play several games in a row, instead of playing one and having one rained out, to allow the players to get their eye, and get some consistency going."

"It's the same for everybody else," Newsome continued. "It's hard to get in a groove when you don't get to play every day."

Bengals Take Buck In First Round Of Draft

When the Cincinnati Bengals' turn came in the first round of yesterday's National Football league draft Paul Palmer was still available.

In past years, Bengal management has drafted the best player available instead of drafting to fill their team's needs.

Cincinnati has obviously changed their philosophy where the draft is concerned. Palmer, a running back from Temple, was the best player left. He is, in fact, a great back prospect, but the Bengals already have a proven halfback in James Brooks.

Brooks is one of the top all purpose yardage men in the NFL. The Bengals have depth in their backfield, too.

Actually Cincinnati has an explosive offense with talent at every position so they didn't concern themselves with choosing talent on the offensive side of the ball.

With this in mind the Bengals jumped at the chance of landing BYU defensive lineman Jason Buck.

Buck, playing opposite fellow lineman Shawn Knight at BYU, earned the Outland Trophy in 1986 which is given annually to college football's top lineman.

The Bengals desperately need help in their pass rush, and linebacking corps. Buck may be talented enough to help in both areas.

Cincinnati already has one Outland Trophy winner on their defensive line, but Ross Browner is aging rapidly. So is Eddie Edwards.

Last season rookie Jim Skow progressed as the year went along. Former all-American Mike Hammerstein is also around, but neither have evolved as a defensive force.

The Bengals have some young talent in linebacker Joe Kelly and Emanuel King, but long time backer Reggie Williams may no longer be capable of performing as he has in the past.

Jason Buck may be versatile enough to play either on the defensive line or at linebacker. Then again he may be too small to play the line, and too slow to be effective in pass coverage.

In an interview with ESPN the Outland Trophy winner said, "I have excellent speed, strength, and quickness. I'm a good pass rusher and I think that's what they are looking at from me."

"I have the speed to play outside linebacker and I have the strength to go down and play on the line."

Jason Buck certainly has confidence in his own ability, and at 6'5" 252, he has the physical size to back up his statements. His 4.7 speed in the 40 yard dash is also impressive, for a lineman.

In the past Cincinnati has went from hot prospect to non-roster player where their first round, defensive lineman picks are concerned.

The Bengals need defensive help, and by making Buck the 17th player chosen overall, they obviously feel he is the man to get the job done.

Last season Cincinnati barely missed the playoffs, and the single reason, as it has been in the 1980s, was in their defense.

If Bengal management can land some help on the defensive side, and sign them, 1987 could be the year they return to the playoffs.

falling to Philadelphia in overtime Sunday.

This series moves on to the city of brotherly love for games three and four Wednesday and Thursday. This winner will take on either Boston or Chicago in the playoff's second round. The Boston Garden was kind to the Celtics so it looks as if the Boys from Bean Town will continue their journey toward the finals and a chance to repeat.

No team, since Boston did it 18 years ago, has a team repeated as NBA champions, but in winning their first two against Chicago, the Celtics could update their own stat.

It will not be easy, though. In the Eastern Conference Atlanta and Detroit have been impressive in beating Indiana and Washington in their opening two contests.

Los Angeles, playing in the West, may be the toughest team in professional basketball right now. The series moves to Denver tonight, but the effort may be useless for the Nuggets.

The Lakers have blasted Denver in their first games, and the Nuggets haven't proven they can reverse matters.

Utah and Golden State have fought all over the West, but while Cris Mullen slugged it out with Jazz fans, Utah was busy burying the Warriors on the court, winning the first two games.

Cultural shock has taken its toll on the Warriors. They haven't been to the playoffs since 1975 and Rick Barry, so it is understandable that they haven't known how to act.

Paintsville's Joey Couch made the cut, but Knott County Central guard Daryl Slone didn't as the Kentucky all-star squad was decided this past weekend.

Ernest 'June Bug' Rakes of Boyd county and North Hardin's Matt Eitutis, also survived the cut.

The roster, including the four above, consist of John Pelphrey, Kevin Ellery, Deron Feldhaus, Sean Sutton, Prince Stewart, Desmond Porter, LaMonte Ware, and Donald Tivis.

The all-star squad will do battle this spring with a like squad from Indiana.

UK is in the same position. Oh yea, they signed John Pelphrey, but did they recruit him before he became Mr. Basketball? Nope. It's big business down there, and only until Pelphrey became big business by winning Kentucky's top high school honor did they give him a second thought.

Pikeville! Wake up Greg White. Todd May wasn't your ticket out so now you need some talent. We have it for you. Just show some interest. You don't have to go to West Virginia and Ohio. This county gave you one of your best players this past year. Come on back. We have a lot more to offer.

The truth of the matter is that schools that are recruiting in eastern Kentucky are enjoying more success now than they ever have.

Union College assistant football coach Gary Barnett summed it up best when he said, "Most other schools have overlooked the talent in the mountains, and now we're going to make them pay."

Barnett voiced this opinion before last season began. His team went on to prove him right. Union posted their best football record ever. No less than five of their starters came from Floyd and Johnson counties.

Bulldog recruiters came back this year to land some more local talent. Do they know something their competition doesn't? Is it possible that this division II school has a more competent staff than that of schools closer to us?

This season a pair of extremely talented Wheelwright athletes are being scouted by Tennessee schools. Johnny Isaac and Tony Hutton have proven their ability and desire, but does Morehead State care? Evidently not.

What about Roger Horne? Is he not tailor-made for the three-point shot? Pikeville lost their only long-range shooter in Todd May. Coach White, let this boy help both your program and himself.

Baseball is in full stride, and several seniors in Floyd county have enough talent to help a college program. Will they have to take the route Danny Tuttle took, recruit himself. Nobody showed any interest in Tuttle last season so he went to Berea and proved his ability. Now he will make those non-lookers pay.

Wake up coaches. Your alumni are here. Your fan support is here, and you should be finding your talent here.

Maybe it's just me. Obviously these scouts know more than I do, or they wouldn't be in the position they are in. Maybe I'm just biased toward the young men of this county. That's understandable.

The talent here has been proven, though. When a young man goes on to another school and produces, he has to be a quality athlete.

I am convinced that these guys can play college sports. It can also be proven. A good coach could take all-star teams, combine all this county's talent together on one team, and they would compete on an equal basis with most of our area schools, especially the KJAC schools.

Maybe someone should start the University of Floyd County, or better yet, revive PCC's athletic program. Years back, they had a basketball team, and from what I hear, it was a good one.

Personally, I think politics and personal feelings influence recruiting too much. Many schools recruit names rather than the young men behind the names.

The talent we have in our high schools is enormous, something we should be proud of, and even prouder of the young men and women who possess that talent. It seems as if no one else will recognize it, but that doesn't mean we can't blow our own horn.

Draft Day '87 Brings New Hopes, Trading Frenzy To Pro Football

Just like traders on Wall Street, management of National Football League teams were busy wheeling and dealing yesterday in an attempt to enhance their future.

Several last minute decisions created an exciting and interesting stir during Tuesday's 52nd NFL draft.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers had already spent their first round share buying, and merely made their choice official, taking Vinny Testaverde as the first player chosen in the draft.

The former Miami quarterback, and Heisman Trophy winner had already signed a six-year, 8.2 million dollar deal with Tampa Bay. With Testaverde going to the NFL it marks the first time since 1982 that a Heisman winner has opted for the league.

Many football experts feel the 6'4", 225-pound Testaverde could be the player who might put Tampa Bay back in playoff contention. Don Shula says Testaverde has all the talent required to become a great NFL quarterback, but it may take time.

The last quarterback drafted first overall was John Elway in 1983. The world of professional football knows what Elway accomplished this past season, but most experts say the Bronco passer was much further advanced coming out of college.

Testaverde was the top-rated prospect in this year's draft, but the player who was considered the best athlete was taken second by Indianapolis.

While all eyes were watching for the Colts to make a deal they handed their draft choice to Pete Rozelle who read of the name Cornelius Bennett, a linebacker from Alabama.

One of the strengths of Indianapolis, if they have one, is in their linebacking core, but the 6'2" 235-pound Bennett was just too good for the Colts to pass up.

Ray Perkins, who coached Bennett at Alabama and is now with Tampa Bay, said at this point in his career Bennett is a better linebacker than Lawrence Taylor of the Giants.

With the two picks completed, expected bargaining became a reality. Buffalo, owning the third pick, traded their position to Houston's eighth choice, and their second pick in the second round.

The Oilers, needing a running game, opted for Miami fullback Alonzo Highsmith. Rated as the best true fullback to come out of college in the past several years, Highsmith is not only a strong runner, but also a talented blocker and good receiver coming out of the backfield.

Green Bay may have wanted to make the same deal that Houston did, but still the Packers added some punch in their near non-existent backfield. Choosing fourth, they selected Auburn fullback Brent Fullwood.

The speedy running back played second fiddle to Bo Jackson while at Auburn, but during his college career built an average per carry of eight yards.

As the draft continued, so did the traders, but Cleveland may be looking for a different broker. San Diego had the fifth spot in the draft, but they gave that, along with their second round position, to Cleveland for the Browns first two-round positions, and linebacker Chip Banks.

Banks was unhappy playing in Cleveland, so San Diego received one of the top inside linebackers in the league. To surprise followers even more, the Browns utilized their higher position to draft inside linebacker Mike Junkin. He has 4.7 speed in the 40-yard dash even though he carries 236 pounds on his 6'3" frame.

Cleveland's choice brought boos from the fans on hand, but the following pick made St. Louis supporters sick to their football stomach.

The Cardinals have developed a reputation for their unsuccessful draft choices, and most people feel they did the same this time around by taking Kelly Stouffer, a quarterback who wasn't expected to go until late in the first round.

Following this pick, most analysts have St. Louis shipping Neil Lomax out to Los Angeles. It is a rumor, but the Raiders need a quarterback, and the Cardinals are obviously ready to trade Lomax.

After teams went for offensive talent in four of the first six picks, the draft switched to the defensive side of the football.

The preceding six picks were all defensive selections. Detroit kicked the defender surge off by taking the Pac Ten defensive player of the year, lineman Reggie Rogers from Washington.

Buffalo, choosing eighth after trading with Houston, still selected the player they initially wanted. Coach Marv Levy said the Bills needed some help for Jim Kelly, and the best way to help their quarterback was to draft some defensive talent.

They did just that by taking Penn State All-American linebacker Shane Conlon. The 6'2" 227-pound Conlon led Penn State to a national championship by intercepting two Vinny Testaverde passes in the Fiesta Bowl back in January.

Buddy Ryan, Philadelphia's head coach, loves to play defense, and it was no surprise when the Eagles selected Miami defensive tackle Jerome Brown, a 292-pounder who runs the 40 in less than five seconds.

Pittsburg is another team that plays football with a defensive flair, and they got one of the most exciting defenders in recent memory. Rod Woodson played in the defensive backfield at Purdue, but with his 4.4 speed, he also runs back kicks, and played on the offensive side of the ball.

Picking 12th, New Orleans added BYU's 6'6" 288-pound Shawn Knight to their defensive line. The Dallas Cowboys followed that choice up by picking Danny Noonan, a 6'3" 285-pound defensive lineman from Nebraska in hopes that he can follow in the footsteps of aging John Dutton, Ed Jones, and Randy White. Noonan can play any of the defensive line positions which made him attractive to the Cowboys.

As impact players and possible immediate starters disappeared, teams began looking to fill a need. The Atlanta Falcons felt the need for a quarterback so the selected Chris Miller from Oregon, the second highest rated quarterback in the draft.

Next Miami traded their 14th position to Minnesota's 16th pick, and their fifth round choice. The Vikings then selected Penn State halfback D.J. Dozier.

After the LA Raiders made John Clay, 6'4" 310, the first offensive lineman chosen Miami tried to help their weak defense. The Dolphins grabbed up defensive lineman John Bosa from Boston College. Bosa, although he is 6'4", 267, can play at an inside linebacking position.

REMAINDER OF THE DRAFT'S FIRST ROUND: Cincinnati, Jason Butt, Defensive lineman, BYU; Seattle-Tony Woods, linebacker, Pittsburgh; Kansas City-Paul Palmer, running back, Temple; Houston-Haywood Jeffries, wide receiver, North Carolina State; NY Jets-Roger Vick, fullback, Texas A&M; San Francisco-Harris Barton, offensive tackle, North Carolina; New England-Bruce Armstrong, tackle, Louisville; San Diego-Rod Bernstine, tight end, Texas A&M; San Francisco-Terrence Flagler, running back; Clemson; Chicago-Jim Marbough, quarterback, Michigan; Denver-Ricky Nattiel, wide receiver, Florida; NY Giants-Mark Ingram, wide receiver, Michigan State.

UPPING THE AVERAGE: Betsy Layne second baseman Barry Hamilton has been on a three game hitting tear that has lifted his average above .400.

Pikeville College Invites Seniors

High school seniors from several counties in Kentucky, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio and Tennessee have been invited to the Pikeville College campus on Saturday, May 2, to 'look ahead' to college. This program, sponsored by the Pikeville College Admissions Office is designed to give prospective students and their families the opportunity to see the campus and get answers to any questions they might have about the confusing process known as choosing a college.

Although the program is hosted by Pikeville College, Admissions/Financial Aid Director Bill Little stresses the fact that much of the information available will be generic—applicable to private or public, community college or four-year university. "We offer this program as a service to area students. We certainly want students to get to know Pikeville College, but one goal for the day will simply be to answer questions from students and their parents or spouses. There are so many things to consider in making this decision. We want to be helpful in clearing away some of the mystery."

"Look Ahead" Day begins with check-in at 9:45 in the Armington Science-Learning Center lobby. Beginning at 10 a.m. there are concurrent sessions in choosing the right college, career opportunities, and financial aid. Campus tours will be conducted throughout the day. Luncheon will be provided for all guests, compliments of the Admissions Office. The day is scheduled to conclude at approximately 2 p.m.

The Admissions Office has already invited several students and their families. However, with the 'open house' format, anyone interested in attending is welcomed. For more information about the program, or an invitation to attend, contact the Pikeville College Admissions Office at 606-432-9322.

Bassin' With the Pros...

Spring Motor Care Tips

Getting where the fish are means having a reliable motor to take you there and back. You've made a substantial investment in an outboard motor. It makes good sense to protect it with a preventive maintenance program. Here, from the service experts at Outboard Marine Corporation, manufacturer of Johnson® and Evinrude® outboards, are some important steps to follow in getting your motor ready for the 1986 bassin' season.

*Check the lubricant level in the lower unit. Make sure it's filled to the proper level as specified in the owner's manual. If it's been leaking, the lower seals and gaskets may need replacing. If you didn't drain the geargrease and refill it with the manufacturer's recommended lubricant when you put it up for winter, do so now.

*Check the spark plugs. Make sure the plugs are gapped to specifications. Check the plug terminal connections and wiring and make sure they are clean, unfrayed and snug-fitting.

*Check the boat's battery. According to David Wharton, member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff, many fishermen don't take care of their batteries.

"They should always be charged up fully after a fishing trip," Wharton suggests. "If your boat is going to sit there for a week, two weeks, three weeks, you should always charge your batteries up and keep them fully charged while they're sitting. A fully charged battery will always keep a lot better."

Be sure to clean the terminal posts and connectors of any corrosion.

*Check the fuel tank. Make sure that the fuel system clamps and fittings are tight and not leaking. Make sure the fuel lines are not cracked from age or wear, and replace them if necessary.

"In the South, very few people winterize their boat like they do in the North," notes David Wharton. "Lots of boaters in the southern states put their boats up in a stall and let them sit there from November until January. If they're doing this, they should at least fill their fuel tanks. Putting a boat up with an empty tank or partially filled tank is an invitation for condensation to form in the tank as it warms up, gets cold and warms up again. When February rolls around and fishing season starts, they're going to have lots of trouble with water in their gas!"

If you didn't add fuel conditioner before storage, you'd better clean the fuel pump filter before adding fresh fuel. Most outboard fuel filters are designed for easy cleaning, but be sure to check your owner's manual before you do it yourself. Add a good fuel conditioner.

line OMC's 2+4 Fuel Conditioner, before filling the tank to help absorb any moisture that may have accumulated during storage.

OMC's 2+4 Conditioner can also be used during the regular fishing season to keep the carburetor clean,* to reduce moisture in the fuel system and to minimize plug fouling. Make sure the fuel conditioner you choose is for marine use. Some automotive additives and conditioners can damage your outboard.

*Check the propeller. Check the prop for dings, dents and bends that can cut performance. If it's too far gone for minor home repair take it to a prop shop or be ready to invest in a new one. Stainless steel props offer much greater durability than aluminum propellers.

*Check the paint job of the motor. Your motor is in a lot of water. It stands to reason that any paint chips or flaking ought to be repaired to prevent corrosion. Most manufacturers offer factory-matched colors in easy-to-use spray cans. Take care not to paint over the water intake screen or the sacrificial zinc anodes.

One of the cheapest insurance policies any boater can buy is a good fuel filter. Fuel contaminated with water or dirt can foul or even ruin an outboard motor and leave you stranded on the water. One of the newest filters on the market is from OMC Parts & Accessories. It features a spin-on cartridge, much like an automobile oil filter, with a treated paper element able to catch particles as small as 25 microns and separate water from fuel, according to OMC. The filter kit is available from Johnson® and Evinrude® outboard dealers and may be adapted for use with almost any brand of outboard motor.

Cincinnati Continues Assault On Astros Face Atlanta, Philadelphia, New York

Beating a good team is a tough task in itself. Beating a good team at home is even tougher, but beating a good team at home consistently is highly improbable.

The Houston Astros are a good baseball team, but last weekend Cincinnati defied all odds, avoided the improbable, and swept Houston in the Astrodome.

In Sunday's series finale, the Reds, on the strength of two Dave Parker homeruns, blasted Houston, 11-3 to complete a three-game sweep. While earning the victory, Cincinnati banged out a total of 19 hits, a season high for the league's top offensive club.

To get the hit parade started, Kurt Stillwell singled with one out in the first inning. Dave Parker, who is enjoying his best April ever, followed Stillwell's single up with his sixth longball of the season.

Cincinnati continued on in the first, scoring one more run, then adding a single tally in the fourth and fifth innings off Astro starter Bob Knepper.

Houston, struggling against a healthy Mario Soto, dented the plate for the first time in the home half of the fifth when second baseman Bill Doran touched up Soto with a two-run homer. The Astros once again roughed the Cincinnati starter up in the seventh, scoring a single run, and chasing Soto from the game.

Pete Rose's bullpen has performed superbly all year, and again Ron Robinson came in to silence an opposing lumber uprising. For an inning and one third, Robinson held Houston at bay, then Cincinnati hitters moved in for the kill in the top of the ninth.

Once again it was Dave Parker to the Reds' rescue. With two on and Cincinnati leading, 5-3, the big rightfielder launched a Charlie Kerfield pitch into the rightfield bleachers to break open a two-run contest.

Cincinnati proceeded to plate three more runs in their final at bat, giving the bullpen more room to breathe. The offensive output could have been saved. John Franco had been summoned from the pen.

Thus far this season, the little left-hander has faced 22 batters, 21 of whom have been retired. The only hitter to reach off Franco this year did so on a Buddy Bell error. While performing this feat, he has recorded three saves to go with one victory.

Mario Soto, who received no decision for his six innings of one-run work against San Diego, finally got a victory Sunday. Not since early last season has the Reds ace been rewarded with a win, but on this day Cincinnati acknowledged his job well done by scoring 11 runs in back of their starter.

Houston starter Bob Knepper, usually a tough customer for Cincinnati hitters, was tagged with the loss as the Reds completed the sweep, the first time a Cincinnati team has done that in Houston since 1974.

The two previous games weren't exactly as easy as the last one was, but when a team has things going their way, they somehow find a way to win the tough ones, even if it takes some luck.

Friday night Cincinnati was facing possibly the toughest righthander in the National League in Mike Scott. Coming into the series opener, Scott had won his last five decisions against the Reds, and boasted an 11-4 overall career mark against the team he was about to face.

Kal Daniels don't understand that Mike Scott is supposed to be tough against his team. The Reds' leftfielder led the game off by taking Scott downtown with his seventh homerun of the year, marking the ninth consecutive game Cincinnati has hit at least one homerun.

Cincinnati went up 2-0 in the third inning when Bo Diaz collected his 15th RBI of the season. With the bases loaded and two out, Diaz received a walk from Scott to score Stillwell.

With a two-run cushion, and Bill Gullickson on the mound, Cincinnati was in a comfortable position and stayed that way until the eighth inning.

Either Gullickson tired, the Astros figured his out, or a little of both. Houston bats came alive, and before they were quietened, the contest was tied.

The game stayed that way through the ninth, and 10th, but in the second extra inning Ron Oester hit his first roundtripper, a two-run shot, to put Cincinnati back on top by two.

Ron Robinson was Rose's selection to stop Houston in the bottom of the 11th, and other than a Kevin Bass solo homerun, the big righthander did just that.

Rob Murphy, who worked the ninth and 10th innings, picked up his third win of the year, and Robinson was credited with his third save.

Charlie Kerfield, not exactly doing his best work against Cincinnati, suffered the loss as Houston was denied an opportunity to tie a record for most consecutive wins at home to start a season. Houston outfielder Billy Hatcher also went hitless to end his 16-game-hit streak.

Saturday night promised to be another low scoring affair, with Nolan Ryan battling Cincinnati's Ted Power. Neither pitcher gave up a run. Ryan struck out 11 Reds' batters in his seven scoreless innings while Power surrendered only two Alan Ashby singles in seven and one third innings of work.

The bullpen on both sides proved to be just as effective until the top of the 10th. With one out and the bases loaded, Tracy Jones flied out to plate Leo Garcia, but the big blow came next when Kurt Stillwell singled in two runs.

John Franco was credited with the win, and Frank Williams was awarded a save for his final inning of work.

Cincinnati also got some help Saturday when the Atlanta Braves, the Reds current opponent, turned back San Francisco. With the Giants loss, Cincinnati moved into first place, one game in front of San Francisco.

With their three victories over the Astros, the Big Red Machine put three games between themselves and Houston.

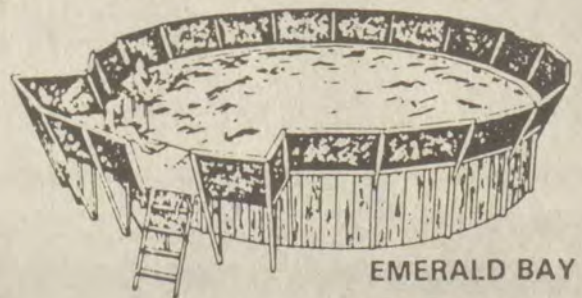

After doing battle in their current three game homestand with Atlanta, the Reds will move into Philadelphia for a three-game weekend series. Cincinnati will then move on to the Big Apple to face New York in a brief two-game set.

SOMETHING HOT IN COTTON

By DON COMIS

Imagine a sock or glove that generates heat when it's cold, warming your fingers like a little stove. Or draperies that warm up when cold drafts hit them. Experimental cotton fabrics with built-in thermostats already have been developed at a U.S. Department of Agriculture lab in New Orleans. Tyrone Vigo, a chemist with the Agricultural Research Service's Southern Research Lab, has named his creation "Polytherm."

Key to the invention is a group of inexpensive chemicals called polyethylene glycols, long used by motorists for antifreeze. Vigo found a way to attach antifreeze molecules to most types of fibers, including wool, cotton, cotton blends, fiberglass, and acrylics. The process is similar to that used to make permanent press fabrics.

Recently, Vigo and his colleagues made up some demonstration cotton tee shirts out of Polytherm, and they really work! When air temperatures reach about 75°F, the treated fabric counteracts the increase in the mercury by absorbing body heat, providing a cooling effect.

Conversely, when the temperature dips below 40°F, the same fabric liberates heat to the body.

Vigo says the tee shirts do this through the reversible melting and hardening of the antifreeze crystals.

How much energy a treated fabric will store and release depends on the kind of fiber, and the kind and amount of chemical applied.

When the chemist first came up with his invention, it had a serious shortcoming. It wouldn't stand up under washing or prolonged exposure to rain. But now Vigo has made his treatment more durable, and his experimental fabrics will retain their thermal properties for up to 10 home launderings. They also resist shrinkage.

But he and his associate, Joe Bruno, are not yet satisfied; they are looking for long-term durability. And they are confident they will achieve it.

The list of possible uses for a perfected Polytherm boggles the mind: carpeting, building materials, military, work, sports apparel, and special applications in the biomedical and aerospace industries.

Perhaps best of all, it could mean an end to the heavy, cumbersome overcoat, so keep your fingers crossed. (Agricultural Research Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture).

Paintsville Hospital To Open Women's Suite

After months of planning and preparation, including redecoration and refurbishing, a nine-bed suite dedicated to serving the health care needs of women in Johnson, Martin, Magoffin, Morgan, Lawrence and Floyd counties will be formally opened Sunday, May 10, at Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center in Paintsville. Sam P. Fowler, hospital administrator, noted that the date of the dedication was not mere coincidence. "Selecting Mother's Day as the date of dedication of our new women's pavilion to the memory of Mrs. Blanche W. Hall could not have been more appropriate. Mrs. Hall committed her entire life not only to her own family but to the children of hundreds of others, as well," Fowler said.

The Blanche W. Hall Women's Pavilion, with its coordinated pastel colors, includes a birthing suite for expectant mothers, the latest technology in mammography radiology, educational offerings in child birth, child care, and self breast exam for early detection of breast cancer, and free PAP smears for all pavilion patients who have not had an annual PAP smear and whose physicians order the procedure.

According to Fowler, one of the unique features of the Blanche W. Hall Women's Pavilion will be "Women In Touch" Team program.

"From the beginning of our planning for the women's pavilion, we felt it essential that the personal, psychological and educational needs of women's health care concerns be addressed. This conviction led to the WIT Team concept. To enable our women patients to be in touch with other women, the WIT Team will be available to train, counsel, inform and, if necessary, just listen to the questions and concerns of our female patients. This one-on-one relationship can add to the recuperative process and, hopefully, contribute to better personal health care," the administrator explained.

Blanche W. Hall was the wife of Dr. Paul B. Hall, of Paintsville. She died July 7, 1986.

IN MEMORIAM
In memory of Ruth Collins, who died May 2, 1986.
On May 2nd the day you left
You told us all good-bye
You said that you would be okay
And for us not to cry.
You left us that morning
With a smile upon your face,
For you were going on vacation
In your most favorite place.
Now we know there is no pain
And suffer you will no more.
The Lord decided it was time
And opened up his door.
You are gone but not forgotten
For in our hearts you'll stay.
We will always love you Mother
As if it was yesterday.
Love,
YOUR FAMILY

In Memory of Cora B. Fraley, who passed away April 30, 1967
Mommy, it has been twenty lonely years since the Lord called you home. It doesn't seem that long, like it was only yesterday. I sure do miss you. I sure would give anything just to talk to you. But I know in my heart that you have no more pain and suffering. Daddy is with you now. I was only fifteen years old when the Lord called you home. I couldn't understand it then but later I did. You didn't see half of your grandchildren. You now have 22 and nine great-grandchildren. They all are beautiful and precious. We all love and miss you, but I know in my heart that one of these days I will see you and Daddy once again.
Love,
Your daughter, JOAN CONN,
Louisville, Ky.

MOVIE NOSTALGIA

By Robert J. Levy

At age 55, Joseph von Sternberg's "Blonde Venus" has started to show some gray hairs.

The story is pure hokey. Herbert Marshall plays a scientist dying of radiation poisoning. Treatment is expensive, so his wife - icily beautiful Marlene Dietrich - tries to raise money as a cabaret performer.

Soon she's singing a number called "Hot Voodoo" in which she pops out of a gorilla suit, captivating a wealthy politician-cum-playboy (Cary Grant).

Grant bankrolls her husband's therapy (Dietrich tells hubby it's an "advance"), and he's off to his treatment. Meanwhile, Dietrich and her cute-on-cue kid move in with Grant.

Her husband, cured, returns to discover Dietrich's illicit menage. He demands his son. She refuses, and a cross-country game of hide-and-seek ensues.

She finally gives him up (after becoming a prostitute) and embarks on a coldhearted trek to international stardom — and a reunion with Grant.

But when, at last, she sees her child and husband again, she realizes that "there's no place like home," and the film ends in a soft-focus haze of reconciliation.

Woozy? Perhaps it's radiation poisoning from sitting too close to the TV (it's available on videocassette).

Or perhaps it's just that "Blonde Venus" is incredibly silly.

Question: What were the real names of Marlene Dietrich and Cary Grant?

Answer: Maria Magdalena von Losch and Archibald Leach.

ASK TONI

Robert Hays' other series

By Toni Reinhold

Has Robert Hays starred in any TV series other than "Starman"? We love watching him in this show. Is "Starman" adapted from a book? - A.S., Utica, N.Y.

Robert Hays

Hays, who did a wonderful job in the recent TV movie "Murder by the Book," played Brad Benson in the series "Angie" (1979-80). The "Starman" series is based on the film of the same title in which Jeff Bridges played the title role.

How did Jeff Chandler die? - A.S., Odessa, Texas.
 Chandler died of blood poisoning in 1961 at the age of 42. He was a fine actor who won an Academy Award nomination for Best Supporting Actor in the 1950 Western "Broken Arrow."

My brother claims that the movie "Ghostbusters" and its cartoon spinoff are really taken from an earlier cartoon. Is he right? - M.W.,

Covington, Va.

No. The hit comedy "Ghostbusters" (1984) was written by Dan Aykroyd and Harold Ramis. They starred in the film along with Bill Murray and Sigourney Weaver. The cartoon series came later and is based on the movie.

I say Ronnie Claire Edwards played the storekeeper in the series "The Waltons." Am I right? Did she ever have another series? - S.M., Montrose, Calif.

You're right. She played Corabeth Godsey from 1974-81 in "The Waltons." She also played Aunt Dolly in "Boone," which aired during the 1983-84 season.

Where can I write to Brian Bloom of "As the World Turns"? - D.S.E., Decatur, Ala.

Send mail c/o "As the World Turns," Audience Mail, CBS, 51 W. 52 St., New York, NY 10019.

How old is John Travolta? How old was he when he made the movie "Grease"? - M.W., New York, N.Y.

Travolta is 33. He starred in "Grease" in 1978 when he was 24.

(Send your letters to Ask Toni, United Feature Syndicate, 200 Park Ave., Room 602, New York, NY 10166. Due to the large volume of mail, personal replies cannot be given.)

MURDER ORDAINED

Keith Carradine (foreground) plays a highway patrolman. Terry Kinney (r.) and JoBeth Williams play a minister and his lover, in "Murder Ordained." The two-part CBS miniseries concludes TUESDAY, MAY 5.

'Hard Knocks' has many flaws, but some promise

By Marianne Meyer

It would be very easy to knock "Hard Knocks," the Showtime comedy series that debuted late last month and will settle into its regular Friday-night time on May 8. The series follows a pair of former police "bad boys" who form their own New York City-based private detective agency, and it is being pitched as a "gonzo" comedy.

Bill Maher

On "Hard Knocks," unfortunately, that often translates into the type of dumb sex jokes that some cable shows use to justify their presence on the "uncensored" side of the dial. But then, for every nudge-wink reference to "puff pants" or "boffing," "Knocks" offers another line with genuine wit ("You pick women the way Dudley Moore picks movie scripts"). Stupidity runs side by side with situations that are so off-the-wall as to be endearing, such as a deadly giant bunny created in a mad scientist's lab.

The show's cast of recurring characters is also a mixed bag. Gower Rhodes, a laid-back, Woodstock generation-bred cop, is played with great charm by Bill Maher. He has the rubbery face of Robin Williams and the potential for true stardom. As Nick Bronco, a so-called "Rambo with compassion," Tommy Hinkley has a tougher stereotype to overcome, while James Valley is teeth-gnashingly annoying as a petty thief turned gourmet chef.

"Hard Knocks" is the creation of a production team formed by veterans of "Bosom Buddies," "Laverne & Shirley" and Showtime's own "Brothers." Their new venture deserves a chance to pick up speed before the final verdict comes down.

Given a preview of the May 15 episode, an interesting comedy comment on weapons proliferation, "Hard Knocks" won't get knocked here — not yet.

PROGRAM NOTES — MTV watchers can catch wildman Howie Mandel as guest VJ on Tuesday, May 5. On Thursday, May 7, there's a "Straight from the Hip" in-depth interview with pop-metal champion Jon Bon Jovi and his band.

While James Allen has been serving in office as Commonwealth Attorney, 8 of 19 people charged with felony drug crimes in 1985 and 1986 were let off without spending any jail time.

In fact, only 1 of those 19 people charged with drug crime actually spent any time in the state penitentiary. The other 18 got their cases dismissed or got probation or got reduced sentences in the county jail which were less than the minimum through plea bargains with the Commonwealth Attorney.

The following is the present Commonwealth Attorney's record* on drug cases for 1985 and 1986 indictments:

Jerry Patton says that we can't fight drug crime by letting people like those 18 off easy. They should have all gone to the penitentiary or at least the Commonwealth Attorney should have made the effort to send them there. Jerry Patton believes that we have to get tough on drug crime and that the time to do this is now. Let's elect him Commonwealth Attorney.

A Healthy Mind Takes Work; May Is Mental Health Month

Each spring, as warmer weather permits more outdoor activity, thousands of Kentuckians resume efforts toward improving their physical health. But a strong and stable mental attitude can be just as vital to one's overall health as a fit and trim healthy body.

"Proper mental health plays an essential role in complete wellness" is the message Kentucky's Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services wants to get across during the May observance of National Mental Health Month.

"Wellness is more than just a buzzword of the 80s—it's the way we care for ourselves," said department commissioner Dennis Boyd. "The overall picture of wellness includes a sound mind as well as a sound body. We've learned that it's easier to keep that healthy body if you have a healthy mind."

Boyd said that, just as a person's physical strengths are affected by stress, one's psychological well-being feels the pressure, too.

"Difficulties in different areas of life—such as family, job and finances—play an important role in creating stress, now recognized as a major health problem in today's hectic world," he said.

"Stress often plays a big part in determining how we cope with the daily demands of living," Boyd said. "A person under stress sometimes will act hastily when making a decision simply to get the issue out of the way. Others may feel overwhelmed and become immobilized, not knowing what action to take. These responses can occur in people suffering from exhaustion, depression, alcoholism, drug dependency or other situations affecting a person's health."

The key to coping with the stresses on mental health, according to Boyd and others, is prevention.

"Learning how to meet the issue head-on is an important step in handling whatever may be disrupting our lives at the moment," he said.

"For example, people deal with anger in different ways. Some might go play a vigorous game of basketball or work out, others go fishing, play checkers or chess or talk to a friend about what is bothering them."

"The important thing is, they are dealing with their feelings and not holding them inside. If emotions are held inside, they can build up to an exploding point where they surface with sometimes disastrous consequences."

If professional discussions with a counselor are desired, Boyd points to Kentucky's network of community mental health centers where experienced counselors are available to help a person deal with whatever is facing them.

"Many of life's experiences take a toll on us," Boyd said. "Good family relationships, close friends and a supportive community environment are an important part of being able to cope."

"But sometimes the trouble is too severe or family and good friends may be too involved in the situation to be objective. Then, just as you would seek help from a physician for a physical ailment, consideration should be given to treatment by a trained counselor who can help strengthen your mental health."

MSU Nursing Graduates Score Well On Exam

Morehead State University's Department of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences has received word that all of its December 1986 two-year nursing program graduates passed the national licensure examination.

The 20 December graduates were the second MSU nursing class to achieve this distinction, according to Dr. Betty Porter, department chair. "Last spring's class was the first one to have a 100 percent passage rate and now this group has repeated this achievement," she said.

The National Council Licensure Examination for Registered Nurses is a comprehensive two-day test covering what nursing professionals consider essential knowledge and skills necessary to be a good and safe practitioner, Porter explained.

"This accomplishment speaks to the quality of our students as well as to the outstanding instructional skills of the nursing program faculty," said MSU President A.D. Albright. "All of those involved should be proud of their efforts," he added.

May Benefit From Cochlear Implant

There are an estimated 230,000 Americans who are candidates for a cochlear implant, a medical procedure that can restore hearing and speech recognition to persons who are severely hearing impaired from nerve deafness.

If you, a friend or a family member are profoundly deaf and no longer benefit from the use of hearing aids, you should learn more about cochlear implants.

The Cochlear Implant Information Center has been established to respond to inquiries from the general public about the FDA-approved multichannel device. It provides information, booklets and medical referrals throughout the United States. The Cochlear Implant Information Center can provide the answers to such questions as: Who is a good candidate for a cochlear implant? How do cochlear implants work? What benefits can be expected from using the implant? What are the limitations of the device? What is involved in having a cochlear device implanted? What is the cost of such a procedure? Is this cost covered by Medicare and other major third party insurance companies?

ACHS Students Win Art Honors

Three Allen Central High School students won recognition for their art at this year's All-State High School Exhibition at Morehead State University. James Francis, left, was all-state finalist in the pen-and-ink category. A second-year art student, he is the son of James and Norma Francis, of Wayland. Kathi Keen, daughter of Ernest and Roxie Keen, of Wayland, was all-state finalist in pastels. Jeff Hughes, right, son of Curt and Brenda Hughes, of Martin, took third place in drawing.

The students' work was submitted by art instructor Mrs. Caralita O'Quinn. The regional finalists will have their work exhibited in the Old Capitol Building in Frankfort.

Consumer Tips...

Before Doing Remodeling Work, Choose Contractor Carefully

By Virginia H. Knauer,
Special Adviser to the President for Consumer Affairs Director,
U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs

Consumers generally spend far less time choosing a home remodeler than they spend choosing a college or university for their children. Yet a typical home remodeling project can cost as much as full undergraduate tuition at an average university.

For most of us, a house represents a major investment. By fixing it up or adding extra space, we can remain in a house that is truly our home. In fact, moderate interest rates and popular, tax-deductible home equity loans will lead Americans to spend about $60 billion on professionally-done home improvements this year. But in the home remodeling industry, as in any other, there are some pitfalls that we must work to avoid.

Many of us simply don't know how to go about choosing a home remodeling contractor. We don't know what information should be included in a contract. We're not sure which permits we might need, how to finance our project, or how to resolve any complaints we might have. And we don't know how to protect ourselves from scam operations and unscrupulous business people. Consumer complaints about home improvements rank second in volume only to complaints about automobiles, according to a study commissioned by my office. If we fail to educate ourselves, we risk becoming victims, signing contracts we don't understand or paying good money for shoddy workmanship.

A project of the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs and other contributors, including the Council of Better Business Bureaus and the National Association of Consumer Agency Administrators, can help. It's a new brochure that includes answers to many home remodeling project questions and offers helpful tips to review when you're considering a home remodeling project. Some examples:

When selecting a contractor, ask for local references. Call them to learn if they were satisfied. Go out and look at finished examples of the contractor's work. And call your local Better Business Bureau to see if they've received any complaints about the contractor.

Never sign a blank contract. Be sure to include start-up and completion dates in the contract.

If a warranty is offered, get it in writing and be sure to specify whether it's a full or limited warranty.

As a general rule, a building permit is required whenever structural work is involved, or when the basic living area of your home is to be changed. The contractor should obtain these permits, but be sure to specify this responsibility in the contract.

Some warning signs of potential problems: You are asked to pay the total amount in advance, or pay in cash only. You can't verify the name, address, and telephone number of the contractor. The salesperson tried to "high pressure" you into signing a contract by using scare tactics, intimidation, or threats. You feel threatened to sign a completion certificate before the job is properly finished. If any of these situations occur, find another contractor.

If you'd like more information on this topic, the free brochure will be available very soon by writing for the "Remodelers Brochure," Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, Colorado, 81009.

State Forums Focus On Mental Illness

Major issues affecting the estimated 95,500 Kentuckians with mental illness are the subject of a series of statewide forums to be held during the next five months.

Each of the six regional forums will address a specific subject. The date, location and subject of each conference is as follows: April 25, Longfellow Center, Owensboro—Grief and Loss in Mental Illness; May 16, Kentucky State University, Frankfort—Estate Planning, Wills and Trusts; June 20, Northern Kentucky University, Highland Heights—Developing Housing Opportunities; July 18, Maysville Community College, Maysville—Current Trends in Treatment; Research and Medication Management; Aug. 15, Holiday Inn, Somerset—The Role of the Criminal Justice System; and Aug. 29, Western Kentucky University, Bowling Green—Using Media for Advocacy. The Owensboro, Frankfort and Highland Heights conferences are scheduled to run from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Hours for the remaining three conferences have not been confirmed.

"These forums are designed to increase public awareness of the range of mental health issues," said Commissioner David Boyd, of the state Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services. "Each conference will feature guest speakers who will lead discussions on how these issues affect the mentally ill, their families, the community at large and professionals who provide treatment."

The series is sponsored by the department's Community Support Program and the Kentucky Alliance for the Mentally Ill through a community education grant provided by the department.

"Many of these subjects have received a lot of attention lately and will be examined very closely at the forums," said Boyd. "As families take more responsibility in caring for the mentally ill, the need for more education becomes greater."

"All persons interested in improving the quality of life for persons with mental illness are invited to attend these conferences," said Boyd. "Panel members with expertise in a forum's featured area will be present to answer any questions audience members may ask."

For registration information on any conference, contact the local Alliance for the Mentally Ill; Carol Saylor at (502) 564-4448; or Kathleen Whipple at (606) 252-5518.

Wed in Washington, D.C. Ceremony

The marriage of Leneda Jo Crews and Craig R. Laing was solemnized in an evening ceremony March 27 at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Washington, D.C. Temple. Elder Edwin J. Ashton read the wedding vows.

A double-ring post-nuptial service was also performed March 28 at the Greenbo Lake State Resort Park, following a program of nuptial selections by Ann Palmer, pianist, and Fred Horn, soloist.

The bride is the daughter of Joseph C. and Belva J. Crews, of Ashland. The bridegroom is the son of Bob and Pat Laing, of Barbourville, W. Va.

The bride is a graduate of Boyd County High School and a cum laude graduate of Marshall University. She is a sixth grade teacher at Ironville Elementary School.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Barbourville High School and will graduate in May from MU, where he is majoring in geography. He is employed by Mountain Outfitters Ltd. at the Huntington Mall.

Breast X-rays Are May Campaign Goal

During May, screening mammograms (low-dose breast x-rays) are being offered for only $48 at many medical facilities throughout Kentucky as part of a May Mammography Campaign.

"This campaign is organized around a vital issue—early detection of breast cancer," said Dr. Jerry Buchanan, president of the Kentucky chapter of the American College of Radiology.

Approximately 1,900 new cases of breast cancer will be diagnosed in Kentucky during 1987, according to projected figures from the American Cancer Society. If found early enough, up to 90% of these cases have a good chance of being cured. The most effective way to find breast cancer early is through mammography combined with a physical exam.

The need for a campaign of this type (to increase awareness of mammography and to offer low-cost screening mammograms) has mobilized a significant coalition of health professionals and civic leaders in Kentucky: the American College of Radiology; American Cancer Society; Kentucky Community Cancer Program; and Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs.

The Archer Memorial Clinic in Prestonsburg is participating in the program. The telephone number is 886-9451.

Betsy Layne DAV To Elect Officers

The Betsy Layne D.A.V. Chapter and Unit 169 will hold their election for new officers for 87-88, May 9 at 6 p.m. at the Betsy Layne Grade School. All members of the chapter and unit are urged to attend this meeting.

County Beta Clubs Are Out For Blood

The Beta Clubs at five Floyd county high schools will be competing against each other for the second time, next week, in a blood donation drive for the Central Kentucky Blood Center. About 170 pints were donated during the competition last year, which was won by Wheelwright High School, and the goal this year is 225 pints county-wide.

Any student or community resident who is at least 17 years old may join in the drive, according to blood center consultant Larlynn Leffler, and free t-shirts will be given to all participants. The school that rounds up the largest number of donors, proportionate to the size of the senior class, will be awarded a trophy for the year.

Temporary donation centers will be set up in the gymnasium or library at the schools on the following schedule: McDowell, Wheelwright, and Allen Central high schools, Monday, May 4, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.; and Prestonsburg and Betsy Layne high schools, Tuesday, May 5, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Community residents who would like to support their school's effort but can't get to the school may also donate at the blood center in the Prestonsburg Municipal Building on May 5 from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Be sure to tell the blood center attendants what school should get the credit, Leffler advised.

If more information is needed, contact Leffler toll-free at 1-800-432-9528.

Appeal is Dismissed
For Want of Action

The failure of a woman convicted of drunk driving to act on the appeal she filed has resulted in the appeal's being dismissed in Floyd Circuit Court.

Circuit Judge Hollie Conley dismissed the appeal filed by Evelyn Keathley, 34, of Allen, and remanded the case to Floyd District Court for further proceedings.

Last week, a bench warrant was issued for Keathley, who has been free on a $500 appeal bond.

Keathley was convicted on July 17, 1986. She was sentenced to 30 days' jail and ordered to pay $719 in fine and court costs. She filed her appeal four days later.

In his dismissal order, Conley noted that Keathley had not pursued her appeal, even after being notified by court officials.

EASY TO SWALLOW

Sip water before, during and after taking a pill to moisten and lubricate the esophagus. Water is best, but any liquid is better than nothing. Try to take the pill while standing up, and remain standing for at least a minute after swallowing. The force of gravity will move the pill more quickly to the stomach. If a burning sensation is felt under the breastbone any time up to three hours after taking a pill, it may be stuck in the esophagus. Drink a few sips of water, or eat a bite of banana, to carry the pill to the stomach. If a great deal of trouble is encountered when swallowing pills ask the pharmacist for the medication in liquid form.

With so many products on the market today, knowing which one is best suited for your particular situation is difficult to discern. The expertise of your pharmacist can prove invaluable at this time. Feel free to consult us when in doubt concerning your medications. Senior citizens are particularly special to us. We take the extra care to be sure they understand the directions and use of prescriptions and are aware of side effects to watch for. COOLEY APOTHECARY is conveniently located at #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

The Three Little Pigs

(The rest of the story)

ONCE UPON A TIME there were three little pigs who went out into the big world to build their homes and seek their fortunes.

The first little pig, in search of a real deal, found a sale flyer from your household word and hurried down to grab supplies while quantities lasted. He quickly built a cheap little house and danced down the road to see how his brothers were getting along.

The second little pig was building himself a house too. He found a special deal for three days only from another bargain supplier and bought everything it took to build all he needed. Soon it was finished too. It was not a very strong little house, but he got everything before the offer expired. Then off danced the two little pigs down the road together.

The third little pig was a wise little pig. He knew that in the woods nearby there lived a big bad wolf who liked nothing better than to catch little pigs and eat them up. He also knew high winds, freezing temperatures, rain, and snow would come and he wanted a strong, safe, well-insulated house to enjoy for a long, long time.

He was a discriminating little pig with high standards. He wanted a home he could be proud of.

This third little pig shopped carefully for his building supplies. He compared quality, service, and prices. To this perceptive little pig, the bottom line was value.

So, after careful scrutiny, he got all his supplies from Pauley Building Center where quality and craftsmanship still matter. Then, with pride and confidence he built a fine home, strong and beautiful.

And now you know "the rest of the story."

Easter Wish Granted In Fourth Grade Play

The students in Harweda Osborne's fourth grade class at John M. Stumbo School, in Grethel, became actors and actresses April 17 when they dramatized a story, "The Easter Rabbit." The play, which emphasized helping oneself, starred Tony Hamilton as a bunny, shown at left above, and Crystal Brown as the fairy who turned him into an Easter rabbit. Also shown above are Wendy Hall, center, as a bluebird; Marcus Hamilton, at rear, as a mouse; and Jessica Rogers, right, as a robin.

The students made their decorations, set up the scenery, and made most of their costumes, according to their teacher.

Check Tax Withholding, IRS Advises Employees

Employees should check the Federal income tax withheld from their pay after filing a 1987 Form W-4 or W-4A, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate", to determine if the right amount of tax will be withheld for the rest of the year, says the Internal Revenue Service.

Employees who did not file their new withholding form until May, for example, may have had too much or too little tax withheld for the first five months of the year.

To help employees check their withholding, IRS has developed the free Publication 919, "Is My Withholding Correct?" It has worksheets that will help employees estimate both their 1987 tax and their total 1987 withholding and compare the two amounts. The publication is available at local IRS offices or by calling 1-800-424-3676.

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 requires all employees to file a 1987 Form W-4 or W-4A with their employers by October 1, 1987. But the IRS has urged they file one as early as possible in 1987 to make sure the right amount of tax is being withheld for the year.

Federal tax withholding should be checked, according to the IRS, right after each employee receives a pay slip for a full pay period that shows tax withheld as a result of the 1987 Form W-4 or W-4A filed.

Employees who find too little tax withheld should file another 1987 Form W-4 or W-4A with their employer to help them avoid owing a significant amount of tax at the end of 1987, plus a penalty. However, IRS will not impose the penalty for 1987 on any employee who had too little tax withheld from his or her wages and who, in good faith, completed and filed a Form W-4 or W-4A with his or her employer by June 1, 1987.

Generally, the new law requires withholding to equal 90 percent of what is owed for 1987 or 100 percent of what was owed for 1986.

If too much tax is being withheld, employees may reduce the amount of tax refund by filing another Form W-4 or W-4A with their employer.

State Grant Will Help Airport Construction

Further developments at Big Sandy Regional Airport are underway as the result of a state grant announced recently by Gov. Martha Layne Collins.

A $78,000 grant from the Area Development Fund was awarded to the Big Sandy Regional Airport Board toward development of the terminal area of the airport. According to board officials, the grant will be used to construct a main hangar for aircraft maintenance and storage and for offices of the airport management company. The grant will also enable development of secondary taxiways and support features at the airport.

The Big Sandy Area Development District Board of Directors recommended the project for funding.

KET Offers Television Classes This Summer

For the first time, fully accredited, college-level telecourses will be broadcast on KET during the summer months. Made possible by the Kentucky Council on Higher Education, the courses are an alternative method to earn college credit outside the day-to-day activities of the traditional college classroom.

Just as with on-campus courses, there are textbooks, professors, assignments, tests and tuition. However, with telecourses, the majority of classes are broadcast on KET.

KET's summer Telecourse semester begins June 8. Registration is in progress at the Kentucky universities and colleges offering credit for the courses.

This summer's telecourses include "The Earth Explores," a geological study of the forces which shape the earth, its physical properties and natural resources; "Focus on Society," offering insight into the sociological events of our time; and "The Middle School," a graduate-level telecourse providing insight into the nature of students in that stage of development.

Complete broadcast schedules, telecourse descriptions, registration dates and other helpful information is included in the Summer 1987 Telecourse Booklet. To receive a free copy, call the Telecourse Hotline at 1-800-432-0970.

Board Schedules Special Meeting

The Floyd Board of Education has called a special meeting for today (Wednesday) at 6 p.m. in the school district's administrative offices to discuss taking out an interim loan to buy the new Allen Elementary School site and issuance of $550,000 in bond anticipation notes to purchase other school sites. The special meeting is necessary to meet dates set by the state School Facilities Construction Commission, according to Board Chairman Dr. J. D. Adams.

Appalshop Schedules Fred Carter Exhibit

An exhibit of Fred Carter's work will open at the Appalshop Gallery April 27 through May 13, and an opening reception in Fred Carter's honor will be held at 7 p.m., Friday, May 1.

Although he is a self-taught artist from the mountains of southwest Virginia, Fred Carter does not fit the stereotypical image of an Appalachian folk artist. His work is not quaint, romantic, or primitive, nor does it present an idealized image of mountain life.

Instead, much of his work bristles with anger, frustration and a strong social consciousness about world problems. Starvation and environmental destruction of the mountains are two of the problems which command Fred Carter's attention. If some of his work is difficult for some people to look at, it pleases him. He wants people to look at unpleasant images and to think of their meaning. A wooden bust of a miner speaks of the impact of black lung; a dark painting tells of the destruction of strip mining.

In addition to being a cry of outrage, Fred Carter's work also speaks about the enduring spirit of the mountains. He has a strong empathy for classical myths and for local stories. His understanding of how they speak to the Appalachian experience is reflected in his art. The artist's own struggle to transcend the toils and sorrows of life's experiences is a fine example of the enduring spirit of the mountains.

Born in 1911 in Scott county in the mountains of Southwest Virginia, Fred Carter moved to Clintwood in nearby Dickinson county as a young man. He settled there and became a successful businessman, builder, landscape architect and nurseryman. At age 50, he began to paint and sculpt in wood. Also an avid collector of Appalachian artifacts, he opened the Cumberland museum in Clintwood in 1969, where he exhibited his own art and used his collections to interpret Appalachian culture and history. He owned and operated this museum for 14 years until it closed from insufficient community support. Today, he continues to work as an artist, concentrating on large wooden sculpture.

The Appalshop Gallery is located at 306 Madison Street in Whitesburg. Admission for the exhibit and reception are free. For more information on Appalshop events contact Bob Baber or Jerri Frazier at (606) 633-0108.

Creatures Of Design Explored On "Nature"

While man has developed basic engineering principles to survive in an otherwise hostile environment, animals rely on years of evolutionary invention and selection.

"Nature" focuses on creatures naturally equipped with the tools to build and design when it presents "Designed for Living," Saturday, May 23 at 7 p.m. The program repeats Sunday, May 24 at 7 p.m.

From the weaver bird with its sharp, pointed neck which it uses as a sewing needle, to the termites, builders of mighty castles, these toilers are everywhere. Their approach is so successful that virtually all of man's building skills are reflected in the natural world.

"Designed for Living" travels underwater, to temperate and tropical rain forests, to burrows and to caves to examine these creatures, their tools for design, and the structures they create.

THIS BEAUTIFUL, LONG-HAIRED CALICO maintains her dignity as he awaits a worthy owner at the animal shelter, near here. For information, call 886-3189.

One study found that acid rain damage to homes and other structures can cost each resident of some cities as much as $45 annually in added maintenance. However, the solution to acid rain—reducing sulfur dioxide by 10 million tons annually and cutting nitrogen oxide emissions by 4 million tons—would increase monthly electric bills a mere 25 to 50 cents!

Farmers Warned Of Weed Killer Scams

Every year at about this time, fly-by-night pesticides operators scour the Commonwealth in an effort to take advantage of people's pesticide problems.

"We always have a problem in the spring with unscrupulous companies faking evidence of termites to get people to hire them, and there are usually other schemes as well," said Agriculture Commissioner David E. Boswell.

"The big scam this year," the Commissioner continued, "is with telephone sales of weed killer. Last year the Bowling Green/Warren county area was the target. This year, the northeastern part of the state is the target."

There are reports from Lewis county that a telephone salesman is offering a weed killer which will kill weeds for six years, but will not harm crops. "As usual, when something sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Anyone who is offered this kind of chemical must be very leary of such fictitious statements," said Commissioner Boswell. "Actually, most products sold by telephone hardly ever do what they claim. Chances are good the product is watered down and inferior."

Boswell said potential customers should always check a salesperson's credentials, such as name, company name, addresses and telephone number. Customers should also check on whether the business is an established one or somebody just passing through the area. "People should have a way to reach businesses if they have a problem with a product," Boswell said.

If anyone has questions about a product or the honesty of a company, he should contact his county agent or the Department of Agriculture, Division of Pesticides, 1003 Twilight Trail, Building A-3, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Veterans Questions and Answers

Editor's Note: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA Counselors. Full information is available at any VA Office.

Q.—I am receiving Veterans Administration benefits as a full-time student under the Veterans Education Assistance Program (VEAP). Am I entitled to participate in VA's work-study program?

A.—Yes. Full-time students who receive VA education benefits under VEAP and under the new GI Bill-Active-Duty Educational Assistance program are eligible to participate in the VA's work-study program. Previously, only those veterans receiving benefits under VA's vocational rehabilitation or the Vietnam Era GI Bill were eligible.

Q.—My mother, a veteran of the armed forces, was buried in a private cemetery and her headstone was furnished, at no cost, by the Veterans Administration. I visited her grave recently and noticed that the stone was cracked. Will the VA fix the headstone?

A.—The VA will replace a previously furnished government headstone at government expense if it is cracked, broken, destroyed or otherwise made illegible. Requests for replacement of a headstone should be made in writing by a family member or other responsible person. The request should state the condition of the headstone and be sent to: Director, Monument Service (42), Veterans Administration, Washington, D.C. 20420.

Q.—I am an honorably discharged World War II veteran. I plan to retire shortly and I would like to buy a new home. I know that I was entitled to a VA-guaranteed home loan when I got out of the service, but I believe the time limit on this benefit has expired. Is this correct?

A.—All the time limits for use of the VA loan guaranty benefit have been eliminated. Eligible veterans of World War II and later periods may use this benefit at any time during their lifetime.

Q.—I receive VA compensation and would like to know when I will receive my W-2 form to file with my federal income tax returns?

A.—VA compensation benefits are not taxable. W-2 forms are only sent to record taxable income.

Q.—Can a widow who is an alien and receiving Dependency and Indemnity Compensation from the VA be paid this benefit if she returns to her native country?

A.—Yes. Provided she does not relocate in a territory of or under control of an enemy of the United States or its allies.

Q.—I started the semester at the full-time rate and dropped a course in the last month of the semester because it was too hard. The Veterans Administration has now informed me that I am only due 3/4 time benefits from the beginning of the semester. This caused me to be overpaid. Why did they do this to me?

Bread will retain its original quality for two to three months if left in the wrapper and stored in the home freezer.

A.—The VA will only pay benefits on credits which will be used in computing requirements for graduation. When you dropped the class, either you did not submit your reasons for withdrawal, or the VA determined your reasons were not beyond your control. Your benefits were then adjusted to the 3/4 rate retroactive to the beginning of the semester. This adjustment created an overpayment between the 3/4 time rate and the full-time rate you were paid.
