

Abner Fork Families Blame Drilling as Wells Dry Up

By Tim Sizemore

The residents of Abner Fork at Melvin fear they may be left high and dry if drilling continues on a gas well in their area.

Virgie Puckett, a 35-year resident there, says that water in the community has never been a problem, but she claims that all of this has changed since Peco Resources, a Tennessee drilling company, began drilling a new gas well for Kentucky and West Virginia Gas Company, last week.

"Our wells just went dry overnight," Puckett said. "They started to drill on Friday and one by one the neighbors' wells began to dry up, until now more than 10 families are without water."

Trula Younce, another Abner Fork resident, says that her new water pump, which cost $1,400, completely burned up because of the water shortage.

Several of the residents told of men returning from work in the mines only to discover there was no water and being forced to sleep on the floor, because they could not bathe.

The residents of the community agree that they had no prior knowledge that the drilling was to take place, because the company failed to inform them.

Timothy Johnson, who lives closest to the well, says that the next rain will wash him off because of the mess the company made while drilling.

The people of the fork now have to get water where they can, with some obtaining it from a spring on Jacks Creek and others driving to Knott county.

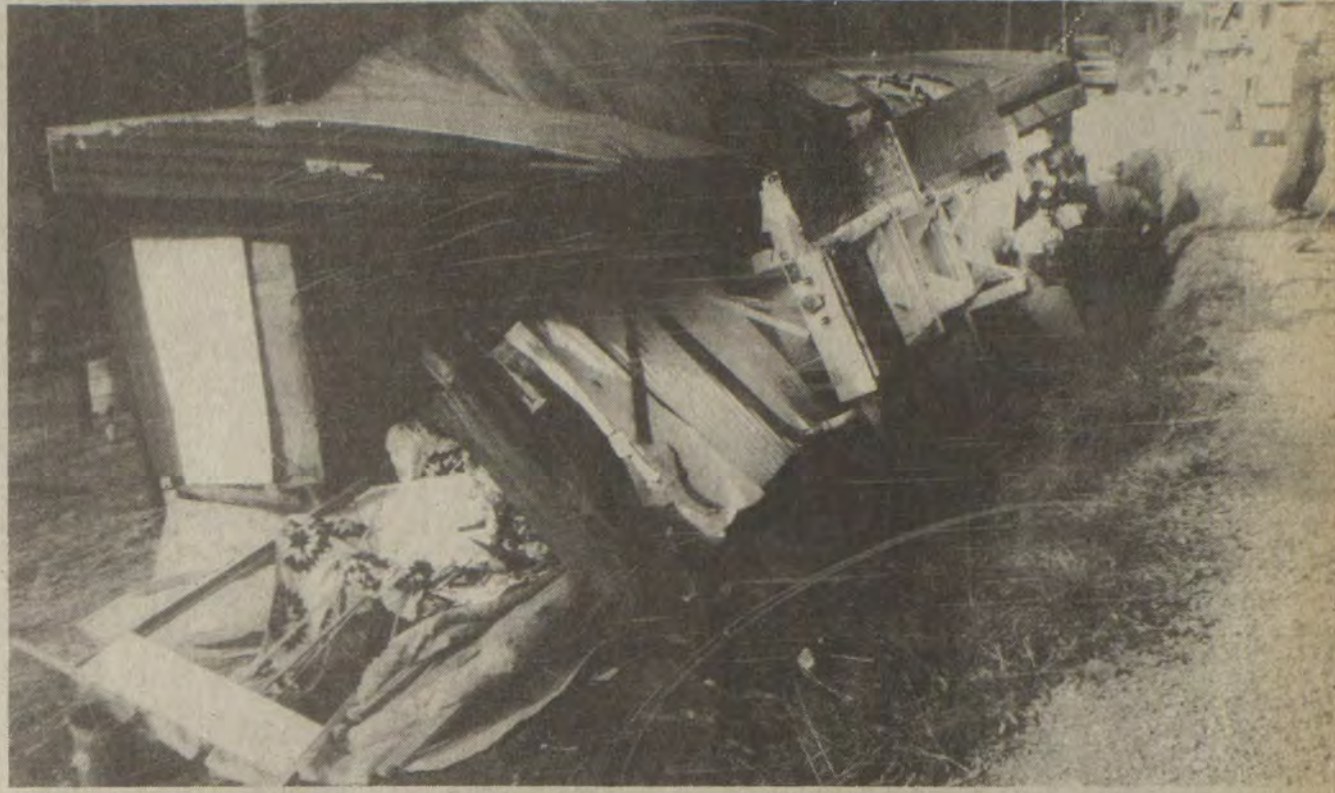

County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo was able to get a Peco Resources representative to meet with the people after the County Attorney's office said they were too busy to get to the problem immediately.

Peco's representative claims that the drilling did not cause the problem and even drank some of the cloudy water—caught before the wells completely dried up—to prove his point, residents say.

The drilling which is going on 24 hours a day, is expected to be finished by Thursday or Friday. Residents say that, if possible, they will file a class action suit and get an injunction to stop work on the well.

Until something is done, the people on Abner Fork will just have to wait with no assurance that they'll have water again.

One woman asked, "They just can't leave you without water—can they?"

Mountain Caucus Seeks Added Political Weight

By B.A. Heinze

If Eastern Kentucky legislators follow through on their publicly avowed plan to band together—Democrats and Republicans—in supporting measures before the legislature favorable to this section, the opening salvo may well have been fired in a revolution in the politics of Kentucky.

People in Eastern Kentucky don't feel that they are getting a fair shake from the rest of the state, and their elected representatives are reflecting their sentiments. At a meeting in Hazard, recently, the Mountain Caucus, made up of members of both the House and Senate, expressed chagrin at the shabby treatment members feel they and their constituents received at the special session held in October. To remedy this situation, the lawmakers met to formulate legislative policy for the 1988 session of the General Assembly to begin in January. One of the major pieces of strategy agreed on is voting as a bloc.

Other priorities set include the following:

- An Eastern Kentucky open house to be held in Frankfort where residents of the section can air their concerns to state policymakers.

- The completion and widening of major roadways leading into and out of Eastern Kentucky.

- Continuation of the education reform package passed by the Legislature in the 1985 Special Session.

- Greater insurance availability at more reasonable premium rates for Eastern Kentucky homeowners.

- The cleanup of the election process in Kentucky.

Members of the Mountain Caucus headed by Rep. Clayton Little, D-Virgie, 16-year veteran of the House of Representatives, are urging Eastern Kentuckians to write or call their state senator or representative to discuss these issues before the General Assembly convenes in January.

Annual Christmas Parade Is Slated Here, Saturday

By B.A. Heinze

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas, and the season will be launched here, at noon, Saturday, with the annual Christmas parade.

Sponsored by 50 businesses, the parade will include bands from Prestonsburg and Wheelwright high schools, floats, trucks from Worldwide Equipment, members of veterans organizations, and the Full House Band. Children will especially enjoy Andy Dandy from Druther's, and other cartoon characters represented by Foodland and Happy Mart employees who will all be in the parade along with the grand old man of any Christmas parade, Santa Claus.

Officials who will take part include Mayor Ann Latta, Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, and Representative Greg Stumbo.

The parade will begin at Music-Carter Hughes and proceed north on Lake Drive to Druther's where it will turn left over to Arnold Avenue and return to its starting point.

Stores here are offering almost anything the holiday shopper needs, and in addition, those wonderful, impractical delights that may not be necessities but are fun.

If you want to buy something, it's here. But buying isn't necessary, just bring the children, and enjoy the parade Saturday.

First Baptist Will Observe 80 Years, Sun.

The First Baptist Church will observe its 80th anniversary, at the morning worship service at 10:50 this Sunday. Former pastor, the Rev. W. D. "Bill" Jagers will conduct these services, and special music will be presented by the choir and Gus Kalos, minister of music at the church for more than 20 years.

Immediately following the service, a covered dish dinner will be held at the Martin Student Center at Prestonsburg Community College. All members, former members and all friends of the church, including other denominations, are invited to attend this special service and the dinner.

The church has grown from a membership of eight at its founding in 1907 to more than 450 current members. Originally named the Irene Cole Memorial Baptist Church and known by this name until a few years ago when it was changed to the First Baptist, its members built the first church in 1910 at the corner of North Lake Drive and Court Street, the present location of the Korner Drug.

After this building burned in 1942, the congregation met at the courthouse, the Prestonsburg Grade School, and with the Presbyterian church members in their former location on Third Street until 1947 when a new building was completed. In 1972, a new structure was completed to accommodate the increased number of members. At present, a new educational building is under construction with completion expected in March.

Swamp Fever Outbreak Interrupts Horse Sales

By B. A. Heinze

Many horse traders in this section were dismayed as well as disgruntled when horse sales temporarily were closed in this and other sections of the state following a recent outbreak in Western Kentucky of Equine Infectious Anemia, more commonly known as Swamp Fever or EIA.

When between 60 and 70 horses died of the disease in the western part of the state, the state Department of Agriculture invoked a law already on the books but not enforced that requires a Coggins test with certificate of negative results for all horses sold. There is an exception. If old Dobbin is headed for the glue factory, the test is not necessary. The destination of horses sold for slaughter must, however, be specified.

According to the regulation, horses shown at fairgrounds and show grounds must also be accompanied by a negative Coggins test made during the preceding 12 months. For sale purposes, the test must have been made within the past six months.

The nearest horse sales for this area are held at Paintsville, and many attend the sales held at Mount Sterling and Elizabethtown. All have reopened, and Dr. Michael J. McDonald, state veterinarian, said there is no good reason for any sale to be closed. If any seller arrives without the required Coggins test certificate, he or she should not be admitted to the sale until the certificate is in hand. It would be simpler, he said, for the owner to take the horse to a veterinarian in his area 10 to 14 days prior to the sale date. The test is simple, fairly painless, and costs about $10. It requires taking a blood sample which is sent to an approved laboratory for analysis.

Swamp fever takes different forms, and in the acute stage may result in

Native of England Helps Many in Time of Trouble

By Tim Sizemore

If your home has been destroyed by fire, where do you turn for help? If you live at Drift or on Left Beaver, the answer may be Doreen Martin of the Christian Service Ministry.

Martin, who has been a volunteer with the ministry since 1974, has become an intricate part of the program and community. Whenever there is a need, she is always on call to help and encourage the dispondent, the homeless, or those down on their luck.

Mrs. Martin, with the help of the Christian Service Ministry and community volunteers, helps many indigent families each year to have a nutritious meal or decent clothing.

The program is sponsored by the Presbyterian Church, but several other denominations help to make the benevolent venture a success.

Some of the services that are provided by the ministry include a food pantry, clothing, furniture, crafts programs, and an innovative Christmas store.

Supplies from all over the country, along with local donations, keep the program in operation. Martin says that while outside support is extremely important, the food pantry is largely filled by local church members.

The idea of the program is to help families out in time of emergency, according to Mrs. Martin. It is her belief that with many mines closing and people taking minimum wage jobs, a new class of working poor has been created. Even though several program recipients are working, they cannot afford many of the essential items we take for granted, she says. Those working for a low wage are not eligible for food stamps or a medical card because their income is above government guidelines, thus they are, in effect, penalized for being employed. Most of the people participating in the program are referred by a social service agency, because this helps prevent abuse, Mrs. Martin explained.

One type of poor that she says has become prevalent in the area is divorced mothers living on a small income from the Aid for Dependent Children Program. The ministry helps the mothers by furnishing school supplies and warm clothing.

Besides helping to feed and clothe mountain families, the ministry also, in special cases, helps pay utility bills. Martin, who is a firm believer in self help, allows the participant to work off the payment, pointing out that this gives people back their pride.

In order to encourage local church members to participate in the Christian Service Ministry, a Fall Festival is held each year to supply the food pantry.

Solid Waste Files Suit Against 32

By Tim Sizemore

Residents who fail to pay their garbage bills are warned of possible legal action this week as Floyd County Solid Waste has filed suit against 32 homeowners and businesses who have neglected to pay waste disposal fees.

Bob McAninch, director of the program, says that it's the law and the Solid Waste agency will not go away.

Named in this week's suit are the following:

Mormon Library Is Mine of Lore For Genealogist

By Tim Sizemore

Whether you are a dedicated genealogist or just interested in finding out about your grandparents, many of your answers may be found at the Martin Church of Latter Day Saints.

The Genealogical Library, which is a branch of the Genealogical Library in Salt Lake City, Utah, has access to more than one and a half million micro-films containing 88 million names.

Director of the Martin program, Blanche Dingus, says that the information on the films come from different sources, among them, vital statistics records, court records, land transactions, deeds, probate records, wills, military records and any source that supplies needed documents.

Thanksgiving is over and if you are feeling guilty about overindulging, the library at P.C.C. can help you rid yourself of guilt along with any extra pounds you might have acquired with a shelf full of exercise and diet books.

The Only Diet That Works
By: Herbert Brean

Besides having an eye-catching title, this book has a novel approach to the problem of weight control. It explains how you can retrain your appetite so that you won't want to over-eat. Combining sound psychological advice with some interesting thoughts on "food" in our society, the book, very practically, provides some recommended menus for the strong willed to follow.

Eat Yourself Slim
By: Shirley Bright Boody

"Nobody wants to be fat and yet there are fifty million fat Americans." Ms. Boody gives the statistic—asks the question, why?—and proceeds to answer the question with her self-proclaimed "sensible and logical" weight reduction program. Her plan allows the dieter to eat six times a day—consequently eating him or herself slim.

The Thin Book by a Formerly Fat Psychiatrist
By: Theodore Rubin

The diet doesn't matter, Dr. Rubin says, the attitude does. Dr. Rubin borrows a page from the books of Dale Carnegie and Norman Vincent Peal and claims that with no drugs, no magic and no exercise you can think yourself thin. Good luck.

Did You Ever See a Fat Squirrel?
By: Ruth Adams

After observing squirrels and birds at her feeder eating the most highly concentrated foods in nature (seeds and nuts) and not gaining weight, Ms. Adams concluded that it was because they ate what was natural for them and that they stopped eating when they had had enough—not when it was all gone. This book is about addiction. The drug is processed and refined foods with the food industry being the pusher and the American people being the user. The theme is—if we take a lesson from the animals and eat only what is natural for our physical body, what our ancestors ate, we will have no desire to overeat and will therefore not gain unnecessary weight.

Never-Say-Diet Cookbook
By: Richard Simmons

With a warning not to add additional ingredients (fattening of foreign) to his recipes or the Never-Say-Diet inspectors will renege you to your neighbors and take away your book, Richard Simmons, in his witty fashion, combines his recipes with a cup full of laughter. Being an advocate of "you can't take it off if you don't move it around," Mr. Simmons has included in his cookbook an illustrated chapter on exercise.

'God and Politics' Is Moyers KET Topic

Bill Moyers explores how religious beliefs are shaping political events both at home and abroad in three new special reports. "Moyers: God and Politics," which airs Wednesdays at 9 p.m. on KET beginning December 9. The specials continue in the same time slot December 16 and 23.

In explaining why he chose to report on the subject of "God and Politics," Moyers says, "Religion has always played a major role in American life. Nevertheless, the recent press attention to religion and its relationship to politics has a superficial quality to it, as if this were one more passing fad on the surface of life.

"From Iran to Texas, from Washington to Managua, the news we read in newspapers and see on television increasingly begins in the church or creed of people who take their faith seriously—and more and more of them have been taking their politics seriously, too. Many Christians believe that their function is to change persons and societies. Even as Presidents come and go, this conviction is here to stay," says Moyers.

The premiere episode, "The Kingdom Divided" describes how upheaval in Central America pits mainstream U.S. Christians against fundamentalists in a theological and political duel. Moyers cites the Methodist church, currently wrenched by conflict over its missionaries in Central America.

"The Battle for the Bible" (December 16) highlights a decade-old schism within the Southern Baptist denomination—the largest Protestant group in the country, with almost 15 million members.

Central to the battle is the issue of biblical interpretation. Moderates believe that with careful study, any person can interpret the Bible to fit contemporary times. A more literal interpretation is favored by fundamentalist and conservative Baptists, who have gained control of the Southern Baptist Convention, the church's governing body.

The final episode, "Paradise

Free Breast Cancer Booklet Offered

It's a disease that will strike one out of every ten women in this country and that will kill an estimated 41,000 women this year, yet breast cancer is still a very frightening mystery to many women. It is also a disease which has raised many questions recently as the result of First Lady Nancy Reagan's breast cancer surgery.

To help answer those questions, the American Institute for Cancer Research is distributing a free information booklet, Questions and Answers About Breast Lumps and Breast Cancer.

"We want to help women understand this tragic disease," noted Marilyn Gentry, Executive Director of the American Institute for Cancer Research. This booklet provides understandable information on breast cancer, benign breast lumps, breast self-examination, and resources for more detailed information.

Gentry noted that more than 75 percent of breast cancers are still first discovered by women themselves. "That's why it's so important for women to understand breast lumps and breast cancer, and to know how to examine themselves for possible problems," she added.

Breast cancer has been a strong focus for the American Institute for Cancer Research, a national, non-profit cancer agency, because of the links between diet and breast cancer. "The American Institute for Cancer Research's dietary guidelines for lower cancer risk recommend lowering dietary fat from the current average of 40 percent of daily calories, to 30 percent or lower," Gentry pointed out. She noted that researchers believe such changes could lead to much lower incidence rates for many cancers, including breast cancer.

A free copy of the Institute's booklet, Questions and Answers About Breast Lumps and Breast Cancer, is available by sending a stamped (39 cents postage), self-addressed, business-size envelope to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. QA11, Washington, D.C. 20069.

The U.S. Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division conducted 72,641 compliance actions under the Fair Labor Standards Act during the 1986 fiscal year, according to the department's annual report.

Restored," (December 23) explores a potent Christian movement that urges believers to become politically active in order to create a world where the Bible is the basis for all government, laws, and economic systems. The movement, called Christian Reconstruction, offers an all-encompassing view on how to run a government, an economy, or one's personal life.

"Moyers: God and Politics" is presented by WNET/New York. Executive editor is Bill Moyers.

...about your Social Security

By JIM KELLY

Right To Representation Legal With Soc. Security

Many people do not realize that they have the right to be represented by an attorney or any person of their choice in business with Social Security. While most people handle their own claims, many use a representative when applying for benefits or appealing an unfavorable decision.

The appointment of a representative must be in writing. A form for this purpose is available at the Social Security office. If the person is not an attorney, he or she must state in writing his or her name, that he or she is accepting the appointment, and then sign his or her name.

Social Security works with the representative just as it does with the claimant. The representative may give evidence to support the claim, be present at any interviews, and appeal the decision in the case. The representative will be notified of any decision in the case.

However, the representative cannot sign an application for the claimant. The representative's authority ends when the claimant requests that it end or after the final decision is made in the case.

Any fee that the representative wishes to charge must be approved by the Social Security Administration. Any agreement between the claimant and the representative is not binding. Any representative that charges or collects a fee which is not approved by the Social Security Administration may be subject to criminal prosecution. In addition, he or she may be disqualified from representing Social Security claimants in any proceedings before the agency.

People who have questions about their right to representation in Social Security matters should contact the Big Sandy Area Social Security office, located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in your local telephone directory under U.S. Government.

death of the horse in one to four weeks, or the animal may appear to have recovered. In the subacute form, which is not as life-threatening, the horse eventually loses significant weight and becomes progressively more anemic. Or, in the chronic form, the horse is apparently healthy but is a carrier of the disease. Once a horse is infected with the virus there is at this time no known treatment which will eliminate the virus from its body.

Dr. McDonald said that since the enforcement of the Coggins test requirement only three more deaths had occurred.

Series of Robberies Occur Over Weekend

By Tim Sizemore

Floyd county was the scene last week of four robberies, two of which involved the use of a handgun.

The first robbery occurred around 2 a.m. Saturday, at the Super America at Martin. State police say that a white male about 6' feet tall with a stocking mask entered the Super America and demanded the store's evening receipts. The employees gave the bandit an undisclosed amount of money, and he left on foot.

At around 11 p.m. Sunday night another stickup took place at the Milpee Mart at Lackey. According to state police, Hassell Hall Jr., 22, of Hi Hat, entered the building, flourished a pistol, and demanded the store's money. After the cash was handed over, Hall joined his accomplices, Carlos Little, 34, of Bevinville, and Jerry Kidd, 30, of Island Creek, who were waiting outside in a pickup. The men then allegedly fired several shots in the parking lot before making their escape. State police arrested the suspects at 4 a.m. and lodged them in the Floyd county jail on charges of first degree robbery.

Added to the list of armed robberies were two unrelated burglaries which also occurred over the weekend. The first break-in happened late Friday night at the Bill Hall Store on Branham's Creek. The intruder broke out a window in the store and took 100 cartons of cigarettes and an undisclosed amount of cash. The burglary was not discovered until the following morning and was investigated by Sheriff's Deputy Harold Johnson. There are said to be suspects in the case, but no arrests have been made.

Another break-in in the Prestonsburg area was at the East Kentucky Flea Market on U.S. 23 North. Police say that the thieves entered the market thru a drain pipe, Sunday morning around 3 a.m. Three of the market's stalls were broken into and a variety of items stolen according to State Trooper Mike Thorpe. A juvenile, taken into custody for the break-in, has implicated two Johnson county men who are being sought for questioning.

GFWC/KFWC DRIFT WOMANS CLUB

The GFWC/KFWC Drift Womens Club held its monthly meeting at the Drift Womens clubhouse November 21, with the president Mrs. Cheryl Hall presiding. The devotion was presented by Mrs. Anna Sue Stumbo, who also reported on the annual meeting of GFWC Southeastern Region.

Miss Ruby Akers, public affairs chairman, introduced Mr. Larry Woods, Kentucky State Police, who was special consultant and advisor for GFWC/Dupont Personal Safety Workshop, a one hour program developed by Dupont for its employees and modified for use by GFWC Clubs nationwide.

The workshop began with a discussion of participants attitudes and feelings about violence. Options and safety strategies were explored and participants learned the steps to develop community and personal environment that helps prevent violence and supports the victims of crime.

No Not Me, a personal safety handbook, was distributed to participants and Fear of Crime, an award winning video was shown.

The hostess Mrs. Roberts Luxmore served refreshments to Miss Ruby Akers, Mrs. Cheryl Hall, Mrs. Celia Little, Mrs. Minah Stumbo, Mrs. Beth Ward, Mrs. Thomasine Robinson, Mrs. Mildred Salisbury, Mrs. Anna Sue Stumbo and Mrs. Geraldine Ward.

Another innovative idea is the toy store, where a parent can pick out a particular toy for their child. This gives parents a chance to look for a gift that their child wants, rather than one that has been pre-selected and wrapped by someone else.

Doreen Martin is a native of London, England, but she says that Kentucky's people feel like her own. She says that she cannot think of a better way to spend her time than in service to the people of Eastern Kentucky. And those who work with her or who have been helped by her are glad.

During its 80 years, there have been 23 pastors of the church, many of whom have gone on to more prominent positions in Baptist church work in the United States and in Europe. Among these are B. R. Lakin, Josef Nordenhaug, George Redding, Campbell Jeffries, M. Robert Regan, Everett Branham, L. W. Benedict, Ira McMillen, W. D. Jagers, Dean Pack, and Steve Hopkins, the present pastor.

The program was started because the Mormons believe that it is very important to keep a family history, Mrs. Dingus said.

The new facility is fully equipped with four state of the arts microfilm machines and three smaller microfiche. Dingus says that more equipment will be added to the library to further aid the public in the future.

The best way to start a genealogical record, says Mrs. Dingus, is to begin with present family members and work your way back. She added that lately there has been a great interest in the study of genealogy and it is hoped many people take advantage of the Genealogical Library.

The new center will not only serve church members but is also open to the public. "We hope to make the public aware of the facility by sponsoring an open house in December," Dingus says. The open house is planned for December 5 from 1 to 6 p.m. and Dec. 6 from 2 till 6 p.m.

The Right To Privacy

The right to privacy is one of the basic human rights that Americans treasure most. Once taken for granted, in recent years—with the growth of electronic intrusion and the swelling of Big Government—it has become necessary for Americans to stand up and fight for reserved areas of privacy. These include family life, church discipline and the operation of private schools.

One of the areas where abuses are still all too common is in forced listening. Not long ago it was frequent bad luck to get on a bus with some bully with a "ghetto-blast" turned up loud, and have to survive as best you could. Most cities now have ordinances to protect us against that invasion of privacy.

But now another invasion of privacy, also in the form of forced listening, is becoming common. That is to be put on hold when you try to reach someone in an office—and be compelled to listen to something called music, or perhaps a local radio station, in order to know when the party you are trying to reach is ready to talk. This is boorish impoliteness, which is after all the essence of forced listening.

I am making a personal rule, in which I invite readers to join, to avoid telephoning offices and stores that assault our ears with "music" or other programs that we do not care to hear.

Kentucky's three adult psychiatric hospitals treated 4,382 patients in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1986, up 16 percent over the last five years, according to the Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services.

In 1735, the trial of newspaper editor John Peter Zenger helped establish freedom of the press in America.

Bits and Pieces

A SOBERING THOUGHT

Count 'em. There's only 23 more shopping days left until Christmas, and I don't even have all the dishes washed from Thanksgiving.

SUPER MEX

If you watched the annual Golf Skin Game, Sunday, you know another reason why Lee Trevino is called Super Mex. He won $310,000 plus two 1988 Toyotas. As if that weren't enough, he made a hole-in-one. Oh, boy!

IN THE MAIL

This was sent to me by Stachia Knorr, who is out 'amongst 'em' in 29 Palms, California, but who is a small town gal, herself. I think she and I feel the same way about that subject.

You know you're in a small town when...

Third Street is on the edge of town.

You don't use your turn signal, because everyone knows where you're going.

You are born on June 13 and your family receives gifts from the local merchants because you're the first baby of the year.

You speak to each dog you pass by name, and he wags at you as he passes.

You dial a wrong number and you talk for 15 minutes anyway.

You are run off Main Street by a combine.

You can't walk for exercise because every car that passes offers you a ride.

You drive into the ditch 5 miles out of town and the word gets back before you do.

Thank God for small towns and the people who live in them.

THANKSGIVING VISIT

James M. Smiley came here November 21 to accompany his mother, Mrs. Otela Smiley, to Louisville where she visited her daughter, Dinah Smiley, and her son returned home to Columbus, Ohio. In addition to her mother, Miss Smiley's guests for Thanksgiving were Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Sinor, of Waddy; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry L. Thompson and daughter, Brittany, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Smiley and sons, Brad and Keith, of Lexington.

Mrs. Smiley returned here November 28 accompanied by her daughters, Dinah and Martha, and granddaughter, Brittany Paige.

Winter Cover Crops Help Increase Summer Yields

Kentucky farmers who use winter cover crops can expect greater yields in their summer corn—especially if they choose the proper cover crop.

Wilbur Frye, a research agronomist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture, has been studying various annual legume varieties throughout the south to see which is the most productive. The results are in, and he will report on them at the national meeting of the American Society of Agronomy next week in Atlanta.

"Our experiments showed that two annual legumes outperformed all the rest in the south," he said. "Hairy vetch proved more effective in northern areas, including Kentucky, while crimson clover (not red clover which is a perennial variety) was the best in the more southern regions such as Georgia and Alabama."

By "best" he meant more dry matter was produced which produced more mulch on the surface which served to help conserve limited water supplies in the hot, summer months.

The greater dry matter also resulted in greater atmospheric nitrogen being added to the soil, a characteristic of legumes in general but especially notable in the case of hairy vetch and crimson clover.

"Even though it's true that these cover crops add significant nitrogen to the soil, I really can't justify them just for that reason," Frye said. "It would be cheaper to buy the nitrogen and fertilize the field than to go to the expense of growing the cover crop."

But he added, "Yet our experiments showed that it is cost effective to grow a cover crop."

"What makes it economically justifiable is that the cover crop results in a greater increase in grain yield than would occur if the cover crop weren't there," he said. "Our experiments show that just adding nitrogen doesn't get the increase in yield that you get if there is a cover crop."

Why? "Because of water conservation," Frye said. "We have shown clearly that we get moisture conservation during the summer months when there is a mulch cover to the corn. Less water runoff results when the rare rains do occur, and there is less evaporation from soil moisture."

By using hairy vetch, he said, a Kentucky farmer can decrease the use of fertilizer nitrogen by about one-third and still obtain optimum grain yields.

"Clearly, higher grain yields where a legume cover crop is used can be attributed to water efficiency as well as the nitrogen provided by the legume," Frye said.

AFTER THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE OUR FOUNDING FATHERS WROTE SOMETHING EVEN MORE IMPORTANT.

Ten years after the signing of the Declaration of Independence our founding fathers created what historians have called the greatest single document struck off by the hand and mind of man.

Our founding fathers created the Constitution of the United States.

For the first time in history, power was granted by the people to the government, and not by the government to the people.

The freedom unleashed by the Constitution allowed Americans to develop their talents and abilities to the fullest. And attain what is now known the world over as the American Dream.

As we commemorate the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution, there is no better way for you as an American to reaffirm the principles for which our country stands than to learn more about the Constitution.

The words we live by.

Unmined Minerals Tax Needed

The other day I picked up a copy of the Farm Bureau newsletter and ran into another example of how big business and money stick together. The article in question concerned the litigation now in progress in the Kentucky Supreme Court on the taxation of unmined coal. The article painted a picture of small farmers being forced off their land if a unmined minerals tax became a reality. An attorney for the Farm Bureau, Wayne Carroll, made statement that most of the coal reserves are owned by residents in the state, when in fact, a widely-publicized research study done in 1981 showed that at least 80 percent of the coal in eastern Kentucky is controlled by absentee owners, primarily out-of-state energy corporations.

I think the people of Kentucky need to know the whole story behind the effort to tax coal in the ground. We face a dilemma in that federal revenue sharing dollars are drying up and we need to find a replacement for those lost tax dollars. Many of the legislators who are controlled by the coal industry are saying we should raise taxes on our property (surface owners, houses, cars, etc.). Many counties over the past year were forced to do that, some as high as 150 percent. We also got saddled with paying an additional nickel on every gallon of gasoline we purchase. What all this means is the tax is either going to be paid by the people who own property in this state or it's going to be paid by the energy corporations who have controlled the people of Kentucky for the past hundred years.

One final point must be made and that is the same organization, the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition, that has pursued this case in the courts to get a tax on the minerals in the ground has simultaneously been striving to get the state legislature in Frankfort to pass an unmined minerals tax that has a provision that would place farmers and small landowners who still own their minerals under a category of "barren and unmineable land." There are provisions to protect those who are not profiting from the coal and have no intention of having their coal mined.

The bottom line is that surface owners will be pushed off their land with increased taxes as we have already seen if we do not get our state legislators to do what is right and pass the unmined minerals tax bill as proposed by the Kentucky Fair Tax Coalition.

CAMEL NAMED GOLDA, BEST MILK PRODUCER

A camel named Golda is outshining cows in milk production. She produces 70 pints of milk each day, compared to the average cow's 32 pints. According to Ranger Rick magazine, milk-producers like Golda could be an important source of food for peoples living in the dry parts of Africa. Although scientists are only beginning to learn how to breed and raise camels to produce more milk, they have high hopes of producing more champion milkers as good as Golda!

EASTERN KENTUCKY IS NOT A THIRD WORLD COUNTRY--ANOTHER OPINION

NEVER JUDGE A MAN UNTIL YOU'VE WALKED IN HIS SHOES

Letter to the editor:

In the Sunday, November 15, 1987 Lexington Herald Leader article "Kentucky needs a vision for the future", H. Brinton Milward of the University of Kentucky states "There is a tremendous disparity between Sunbelt Kentucky and that part of the state, particularly Eastern Kentucky, which statistically has more in common with the Third World than with most American states."

Lord, give me patience. Such blanket stereotype statements are one-sided "blind in one eye and can't see out of the other" off-the-wall assertions that belong in the cat box. Milward apparently has never been to a Third World country.

Eastern Kentucky has some of the largest and most aggressive banks in Kentucky. Pikeville is the third largest Kentucky banking center with over $715 million in deposits. The coal industry in 1983 provided 18.7% of the entire General and Transportation Fund budgets. Severance taxes from Eastern Kentucky flood Frankfort and very little returns to help the area from which it came. Shopping centers are sprouting up throughout Eastern Kentucky.

He also states "From a purely economic standpoint, you can't afford to have a large part of the population that is so unskilled, unhealthy or uneducated they can't compete in the modern economy, unless you're willing to maintain a sort of reservation where people exist on hand outs."

From a purely economic standpoint it appears there is a barrier created in Frankfort at Winchester on economic development. They say we do not have available sites with utilities already there. There are 42 sites in Pike County alone, potentially available, with 12 available now. Despite inattention from Frankfort, Eastern Kentucky continues to develop on its own.

Great strides have been made in health care, with hospitals and other facilities being built or modernized and more health professionals being present in Eastern Kentucky. Pikeville alone has 55 doctors.

Additionally he says, "The real tragedy is that as you raise the level of skills in this part of Kentucky it's going to be harder for people of Eastern Kentucky, particularly those counties where the level of education is very low, to come close to competing for those kinds of jobs."

Milward is stereotyping education. Pikeville High School won the Academic Cup in its initial year and Prestonsburg finished second. Other schools such as Paintsville, Belfry, and Johns Creek have also done very well. Paintsville and Pikeville schools rank with the top schools in academics. Sixty to eighty percent of Pikeville's graduates go on the college each year. Our kids in Eastern Kentucky compete well!

Also "The biggest problem in Frankfort in regard to economic development is that you have a Commerce Cabinet staff that is small and there's a great deal of turnover."

The biggest problem in Frankfort in regard to economic development is the prejudice the Commerce Cabinet has against Eastern Kentucky. The attitude is next to "Economic child abuse" and needs to be recognized as such. If you starve a child, the child doesn't grow as it could to his or her potential. Maybe we need to purge the whole cabinet and start new!

Eastern Kentucky has often been starved from economic development assistance and road completion by the State and has not grown to its full potential. Road investments pay off 100 times the initial investment, with new jobs created and increased property taxes and income taxes generated.

He says; "I worry that the centers of growth-like Lexington, Nashville, Atlanta, and other major southern cities might become like some cities in Latin America, with poor people in shanty towns on the edge of the cities, desperately looking for work but woefully equipped to compete for the kinds of jobs that are created in a dynamic growing economy."

With all of the recent progress that has occurred in Ashland, Pikeville, Prestonsburg, Paintsville, Hazard, and other towns in Eastern Kentucky, it is amazing to read someone writing a litany of misery rather than of the progressive accomplishments of Eastern Kentucky and their potential to the state.

When asked "What should Kentucky do?", he stated "Everything in its power to increase the level of education in the backwards part of the state. If it means using the state's power to declare schools (educationally) bankrupt and take them over, then do it. If it means targeting magnet cities around Eastern Kentucky as economic development zones and creating significant incentives for development, then do it."

It is time to put the foot down. We are not in a backward part of the state! It galls me to believe part of our tax dollars are going to pay a UK doomsayer's salary. Much of Lexington's growth and sales is attributable to Eastern Kentucky.

Is Lexington like a Third World country because of its crime rate? Obviously, if you never look at the other side of a topic, you can become short-sighted and use stereotype images that are often erroneous. Never judge a man until you have walked in his shoes!

Thanks, I needed that!
Sincerely,

Home Health Care Provides Medical Services To Many

The grey Ford Bronco bucked its way up the deeply rutted road. "We used to have to park about a mile back and walk in to these houses," said the R.N., an Appalachian Regional Home Health Coordinator and driver of the Bronco. "The county improved this road a couple of years ago, and it's really been a help."

She gathered her supplies and made her way into a neatly kept kitchen where she was warmly greeted by a young woman who was finishing up the breakfast dishes.

"Aunt Elsie's been looking forward to your visit," she smiled, as she dried her hands.

The elderly cancer patient had recently been hospitalized for a biopsy. The incision had stubbornly refused to heal, and her physician had offered her a choice; nursing home, or Home Services.

Home Service is the title given to a program of family centered medical care which, in effect, can take the hospital into a patient's home.

Such services as physician prescribed and assist surgical patients with post-operative care, provide temporary treatment for patients who are expected to make rapid recoveries from accidents, illnesses, or acute diseases, and provides chronic care for elderly, terminally ill, and disabled patients so they can retain their independence and remain at home as long as possible.

"We are helping people to stay out of nursing homes and hospitals. Patients recuperate more comfortably in their own homes and at minimal cost," said the ARH Home Services nurse. "In addition to nursing care and most therapies, a wide range of medical equipment and supplies are available."

It was with a knowledge of such services that Kentucky Governor Martha Layne Collins proclaimed November 29 to December 5, Home Care Week to coincide with the national celebration of the event. Her widely distributed proclamation describes the home as a more comfortable therapeutic environment which allows the patient and family to play a more active role in the recovery process. Gov. Collins cites 55,000 Kentuckians who received quality care at home last year, thus postponing or preventing the need for institutional care.

The McDowell ARH Home Health Agency has been providing services to homebound patients in the Floyd, Knott and Pike county areas for the past 15 years and can provide such services as registered nurse, physical therapy and medical social worker visits to patients in their homes as well as durable medical equipment and disposable medical supplies for home care needs.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: I am 65 years old and in very good health. Recently I read an article that stated the risk for most major cancers increases after the age of 50. Am I at an increased risk of cancer because of my age? What should I watch out for as far as early symptoms?

ANSWER: About 50 percent of all cancers occur in the 11 percent of our population who are over the age of 65. The risk for most major cancers rises steadily after the age of 50 before leveling off between the ages of 85-90.

The best way to safeguard your health is to learn the early warning signs of cancer and have regular checkups with your doctor. When health problems are found early, they are more likely to be treated successfully. Studies have shown that the earlier most cancers are found and treated, the better the chances are for a cure.

As they age, many people attribute symptoms to growing older and fail to mention them to their doctor. It is important to tell your doctor about any symptom you are having, unimportant or normal for your age.

Some symptoms of the common types of cancer in people over age 50 are:

- Lung-cough that won't go away; coughing up blood; shortness of breath.
- Breast-lump or thickness in the breast; change in the shape of the breast; discharge from the nipple.
- Colon and rectum-changes in bowel habits; bleeding from the rectum; blood in the bowel movement.
- Prostate (men)-difficulty or pain when urinating; the need to urinate more often, especially at night.
- Skin-sore that does not heal; change in the shape, size or color of a wart or mole; sudden appearance of a mole.

-Uterus, Ovary and Cervix (women)-bleeding after menopause; unusual vaginal discharge; enlargement of the abdomen; pain during intercourse.

While these symptoms can indicate an illness other than cancer, any one of them needs to be checked by your doctor.

The American, British and Canadian manufacturers of Jaguar cars have agreed to help save the animal that inspired the name of the luxury automobile. Family Abuse Center...

A Place of Freedom and Hope

By ALICE ADAMS

Having an abusive husband feels like being in jail. It's like having chains around your hands and feet, being handcuffed to the abuser. He's out for total domination. He believes the man ought to be in control, and since things may be going wrong in other areas of his life, he thinks his wife is at least one person he can control.

As I, a visitor at the Big Sandy Family Abuse Center, sat listening to the women, I reached back into my own past for feelings similar to theirs. As a child I had at times felt helpless, dominated by a bigger person who shouted names at me. My reaction had been a numbing, paralyzing fear and an attempt to hide my inner self away and act like someone I wasn't—someone the dominator wanted to see. I had felt helpless, empty, and completely isolated. Such feelings are painful to recall, even for a moment. These women had lived with them for years.

But they had broken out of the prison imposed by the abuser. They had called a friend or relative or the Welfare Department and had eventually been referred to the Big Sandy Family Abuse Center. It took great courage for them to break away. Their homes had been full of fear and violence, but at least there the women had been surrounded by familiar faces and routine tasks. Here they were cut off from all they had known. It is a mistake to view these women as passive victims. They are brave for the most part, and ready to take charge of their own lives.

"How did it feel, I asked, when you first came to the Shelter?" It felt like release from jail. There was freedom and air to breathe. No longer were they smothered by the threat of violence.

"I learned to sleep at night for the first time in a year," one said. "When I was at home, I couldn't sleep. He might come in any time of night and start yelling or hitting me with his fists. For a few days when I came here I still couldn't sleep. I felt like he was still out there, about to attack me. But now I sleep all night."

As we lounged comfortably on sofas or rocked back and forth, the sunshiny room was so quiet you could hear a clock tick. Violence seemed far away in the relaxed atmosphere.

"It's like a different world here," said one woman. "Sometimes at night I still hear things and I think it's him. Any little sound and I think he's at the window, coming after me." But she was able to smile at her fears.

The Center is equipped to shelter fifteen women and children, with staff on duty twenty-four hours a day. The door is kept bolted and strangers are not admitted. Callers are scanned through a peephole before the door is opened. The location is kept a secret. Only this way can the woman feel safe. Many believe that wife beating is caused either by the woman provoking her spouse or by the man's heavy drinking. But these are not the real causes.

"It was not only my husband who beat me. It was his parents too," one woman admitted. "I wasn't allowed to even see my own family or call them on the phone. I had to pass by my Mama in the street without speaking. I had't talked to her in two years when I came here. And he wouldn't let me go anywhere. He didn't want me to have any friends at all—just him and his family."

"Mine used to follow me everywhere I went. If I went down to the washing machines, he followed me there. If I got a phone call, he listened in. He never let me out of his sight." Their husbands had wanted complete possession of their wives. They had wanted to isolate them from contacts with anyone with whom the wife might establish a relationship, even female relatives. And often the episodes of beating began without the wife's uttering a word. The women never found out why. But they had existed on a little island of fear and violence, cut off from other people by the irrational domination of the husband.

Finally, when they were afraid of being seriously injured or killed, as the beatings tend to worsen over time, the women had seized the lifeline extended by the shelter. How many others out there, I wondered, had been too weakened to grasp it?

Nationally a wife is beaten every thirty seconds, nearly 3,000 a day. About 1/3 receive injuries serious enough to require emergency medical attention. In Kentucky, 80,000 cases were reported in 1979. Fifteen abuse centers statewide offer shelter to these women. On any given day, from one to ten women can be found there. That takes care of about 150 women per week or 7800 per year. What, I wonder, about the other 72,200?

When spouse abuse is discussed, a woman's first reaction often is, "It couldn't happen to me." I asked the women at the Center if they had any inkling of their husband's violent nature before the wedding. None had. Courtship makes a man act sweet, they told me, but a marriage certificate, in some men's view, is a license to do whatever they want to their wives. Looking at my own gentle husband, I realized there were a lot of things I hadn't known about him before the wedding. Could abuse have happened to me? Could it happen to anyone?

The Center provides information about the characteristics of the potential abuser. He is usually jealous and possessive; he tries to isolate and control his wife. He has a violent temper and comes from a family where violence is practiced. He often uses verbal assaults as well as physical: putdowns, insults, slanderous names. He may also have a Jekyll-and-Hyde personality, being perfectly charming at times, abusive and violent at others. He is immature and frequently does not accept the blame for his own actions. Or, after a beating episode, he may appear penitent and contrite. He may promise never to become violent again. He will do whatever it takes to get his wife back, but then the violence begins all over again. The wives at the shelter had heard plenty of promises. They no longer believed in them.

Do abusers ever change? I asked. Do they ever stop beating and become loving husbands? The social worker thought back over the many women she had seen come and go since the shelter was opened in June 1985. "There was one husband I remember," she said. "He and his wife were able to work things out somehow. All the husbands say they are sorry, but this one was more than sorry. He was willing to change."

"Are any of you going back home," I asked. None were. Some were going to relatives' homes; some were seeking jobs. Counsellors at the Shelter help them obtain a GED if they haven't finished high school. They also help the women decide future plans: where to live, how to get a job. They even help with legal procedures if the woman wants a separation or divorce.

"I'm not going back to that situation," said one woman. "I'm afraid of what might happen." They discussed possible jobs: one wants to care for the elderly; another would like to be a housekeeper. It would feel good, they declared, to receive a paycheck, to drive a car, to get wherever they wanted to go.

There's a whole new life waiting for those who leave the shelter. It is a safe place for them to heal and plan their future—a future that is all their own, not dictated by another. The shelter is a place of hope.

The Shelter is also a place of learning. I had come to discuss a new group, Parents Anonymous, that is forming in this area. The group's purpose is to prevent child abuse by allowing parents who are under stress to let off steam and discuss better ways of handling their children. If you or someone you know is having trouble coping with kids, call the hotline in Lexington, 1-800-432-9251; or call Hugh or Alice Adams about joining the group, 874-9874 in Prestonsburg.

If any wife is being abused, she can call the Shelter and make use of their services. The 24-hour crisis line is 886-6025 in this area. If a person needs to leave home, arrangements will be made. A new future is waiting.

Elementary Student Scribes Sharpen Skills at Workshop

More than 200 elementary students from Floyd county gathered at Jenny Wiley State Park, November 23, to display their own work and to pick up some pointers from experts on how to sharpen their writing skills. Students from Betsy Layne, Harold, and John M. Stumbo presented some of the work they have done for a literary magazine that the three schools will do later in the year to be called Hills and Hollows. The sixth grade class of Mrs. Faye Robinson at Garrett Elementary has been working on haiku poetry and the eighth grade at Martin Elementary and Prestonsburg Elementary shared some of the interviews done in their communities.

The November workshop was the third in a series sponsored by the School-Community Partnership Committee which is a division of the Floyd County Education Forum. The purpose of the workshops is to encourage writing for the county literary magazine Mountain Magic and to support the county writing project, Writing Across the Curriculum. Floyd county was one of the districts to receive funding from the State Department of Education to begin a pilot writing project. Writing Across the Curriculum began in the spring of last year with workshop sessions for twenty-one of the county's teachers. Actual implementation of the program began this fall.

Eliot Wigginton, the Georgia educator and founder of Foxfire magazine, was the featured speaker at the workshop for the elementary students. He told the students about his own educational experience, about how he had failed one year of high school and how he had only become excited about school when one English teacher thought that something he had written was good enough to be printed in a school magazine. Two of Wigginton's students accompanied him to Prestonsburg, and they spoke to the group about the work that they do with Foxfire in interviewing and recording their Appalachian Heritage. For the last three years, Wigginton has been conducting summer workshops at Berea College for Kentucky teachers, and the Foxfire organization has established a network of teachers in Eastern Kentucky who are trying out innovative approaches to education and sharing the results with each other.

Other professionals who took part in the workshop were Appalachian News-Express editor Barbara Justice and Appalachian author Alice Kinder. Ann Johnson from Headwaters television division of Appalshop in Whitesburg conducted video sessions, and Angie DeBord, a regional story-teller and actress, worked with students on the art of story-telling. Cassandra Jones, a middle-school teacher from Whitley county, took students through the writing process that she uses with her students, and Prestonsburg Community College instructor Alice Adams held sessions on writing fables. Representatives from Abacus Computers and Delores Smith taught students how to communicate using computers and word processors.

The teachers who are participating in the pilot writing project are Janice Allen, Prestonsburg Elementary; Florene Harris and Glenda Blackburn, Allen Elementary; Denny Layne, Harold Elementary; Lois Dean Tackett, Betsy Layne; Phil Paige, McDowell; Bud Reynolds, Martin Elementary; Bobby J. Blackburn, Drift; Faye Robinson, Garrett; Judy Carter, Clark Elementary; Janice Newman, John M. Stumbo, and Sheila Ratliff, Wayland Elementary. The Writing Across the Curriculum project's purpose is to encourage students to write in all academic areas as a way of improving their learning. The project will officially conclude at the end of this year, but it is hoped that it will become a permanent part of Floyd county's curriculum.

Senior Citizens Club Formed at Paintsville

Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center, of Paintsville, will form a new senior citizens health-related organization in conjunction with its Senior Citizens Seminar, Wednesday, December 9.

The new organization will be called The Three Score (60 and More!) Club and will be open to all those 60 years of age and over in the Big Sandy Region.

Members will each receive a membership card which will list, in addition to name and Social Security Number, health information such as allergies, regular medication, any major health problems and the name of the person's primary physician. Medical record forms will be filed at Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center for reference in the event of a medical emergency. Members will be eligible for free blood pressure and pulse rate checks at the hospital's Emergency Room; a quarterly newsletter with emphasis on health maintenance, household safety, diet and exercise; and free attendance at future conferences and seminars for Seniors.

Hospital Administrator Debbie Trimble Meadows stated that the Three Score (60 and More!) Club, like the Senior Citizens Seminar, was the outgrowth of conversations with area residents about the health concerns of seniors.

More Kentuckians Had Jobs in October, But More Were Looking For Work, Too

More than two-thirds of the Kentuckians actively seeking new jobs in the state during October were successful, leading to rises in both Kentucky's total employment and the state's unemployment rate.

An additional 9,800 Kentuckians found jobs in October. However, another 4,500 Kentuckians joined the labor force in search of work without success. Those two factors moved the state's jobless rate up from a revised 6.8 percent in September to a preliminary 7.1 percent in October, according to a report issued recently by the Cabinet for Human Resources. The October 1986 state unemployment rate was 7.7 percent.

Nationally, unemployment in October remained even with September's 5.7 percent rate. Comparable state and national rates are not seasonally adjusted. Kentucky's chief labor market analyst, Ed Blackwell, said, "This big jump in our labor force reflects workers' normal interest in pre-holiday jobs as well as optimism about the state's economy and their own ability to find work."

A Department for Employment Services survey of employers' payrolls shows all of the growth was in non-manufacturing categories.

"Most of the 3,800 new jobs in education were held by students on college campuses," Blackwell said, "but substitute teachers and other temporary school personnel also are included in this total."

"The addition of 2,500 workers in trade reflects an anticipated increase in consumer spending normally seen at this time of year, as most of the new positions were in department, clothing and grocery stores."

He said educational and social services accounted for the biggest increases in service jobs, which grew by 1,200.

Mild temperatures helped the construction industry add another 600 jobs.

Other increases were recorded in agriculture (1,600); transportation, communications and utilities (900); federal government (300); and finance, insurance and real estate (100).

The category of domestic workers, self-employed people and unpaid workers in family businesses jumped by 7,600. "This includes Kentucky craftspersons who operate small businesses out of their homes," Blackwell said. "Increased production and sales would be normal at this time of year."

Losses were recorded in state and local government (down 1,200), which Blackwell attributed to fewer workers at city, county and state parks and recreational facilities, especially golf courses, and coal mining (down 1,000).

"We also showed a decrease in manufacturing jobs (down by 300), mostly because the layoff of 600 workers at General Electric's Appliance Park in Louisville offset gains at other plants," he said.

Based on its survey of the state's employers, the Department for Employment Services estimates there were 1,323,300 jobs in Kentucky in October, up 6,900 from September's 1,316,400 and 23,500 above last October's 1,299,800.

The number of Kentuckians working (both here and commuting to other states), as measured by the U.S. Department of Labor's household survey, was 1,571,300 in October, up from 1,561,500 in September but 11,500 below the October 1986 report of 1,582,800.

The federal estimate that 119,200 Kentuckians were unemployed in October was up from September's report of 114,700 but 13,300 below the 132,500 who were jobless in October 1986.

Kentucky's civilian labor force estimate for October was 1,690,500, up from 1,676,200 in September, but 24,300 below the October 1986 report of 1,715,300. The civilian labor force includes non-military people with jobs and unemployed people who actively are seeking work. It does not include the unemployed who have not looked for a job in four weeks.

'Discover' Ponders Mysteries Of Natural Phenomenon on KET

Why do some people get fat? How intelligent a communications system can be created between man and animal? What causes one of the oldest natural phenomena—lightning?

"Discover: The World of Science" ponders these questions when it airs Wednesday, December 9, at 8 p.m. on KET.

"Discover" looks at how scientists have created a unique partnership with Arizona's Pima Indians who, since the beginning of this century, have been chronically afflicted with obesity and accompanying diabetes. It is their hope to answer some basic questions about how they, or any of us, may become overweight.

Dolphins have always been the symbol of hope for creating an intelligent communications system between man and animal. At the Keoalo Basin

Marine Mammals Laboratory in Hawaii, marine scientists are conducting the world's most advanced studies in this area and are developing the first "Dolphin Typewriter!"

Today laymen and scientists alike are puzzled by one of the oldest natural phenomena observed by man—lightning. Modern science still searches for answers to fundamental questions about it: what causes it? what its nature? and how powerful is it?

In Socorro, New Mexico where thunderstorms are a nightly occurrence in July and August, scientists are making some fascinating discoveries.

"Discover: The World of Science" is hosted by Peter Graves. The magazine-style series is produced by the Chedd-Angier Production Company in association with "Discover" magazine.

Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club News

The GFWC/KFWC Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club met November 16 at the home of the club president, Mrs. Louise West, Hueysville.

Mrs. West was in charge of the program and gave a detailed report of the recent Regional Southeastern Conference of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which she attended in Lexington. She was especially impressed by the eagerness and enthusiasm of the pre-junior club girls—the club women of the future—who attended the conference.

Mrs. Marsella Bradley gave the devotions, and the Club Collect was read by Mrs. LaFaye Hughes. Mrs. Vera Allen led the Pledge to the Flag.

During the business session, it was decided to reduce the club's donation to the Wayland and Garrett area volunteer fire departments since they will be listed on property tax assessments. The annual award the club gives to an Allen Central senior on the basis of scholarship and citizenship was increased from $25 to $100. The donation to the Town of Wayland Christmas Fund was also increased. Mrs. Dee Burchett, of Langley, was unanimously accepted for membership in the club.

Those attending were Blanche Bamer, Marsella Bradley, Lula Coburn, Vera Allen, LaFaye Hughes, Joyce Stephens, Elizabeth Duff, Libby Martin, and the hostess, Mrs. West.

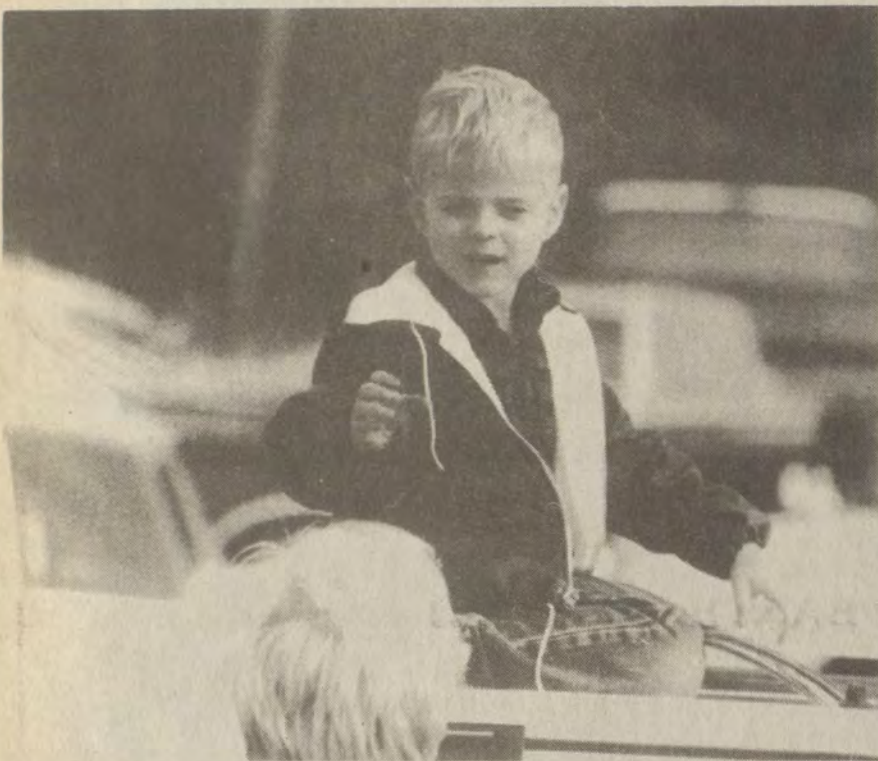

The next club event will be the Christmas dinner at May Lodge for members and their husbands of friends, December 7.

The Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration conducted a total of 64,071 inspections during the 1986 fiscal year, according to the department's annual report.

A Trio Of Painted Ladies

I still have a few neighbors who regard me with some suspicion. Perhaps my gardening efforts are a bit different. And when I shout down the block for the kids to come meet the painted ladies, more than my gardening idiosyncrasies are questioned.

The painted ladies whose visits I encourage are butterflies. Three kinds are common in certain parts of the United States—the American painted lady east of the Rockies, the West Coast lady along the Pacific Coast and the cosmopolite which ranges throughout North America.

Like the monarch and tiger swallowtails, they're a pretty sure-fire bet for the butterfly gardener. As with other wildlife species, the key to attracting them is providing habitat. Offer food, water and places where the young can hide and feed and your chances of bringing them to your yard are excellent. Pesticides and butterflies don't mix however, so if you must use these chemicals, do so very carefully.

The American painted lady is my favorite. She (and her male companions) are dependable. For beauty, few designs in nature surpass the intricacy of this species' underwing pattern. To encourage adults to visit, provide attractive nectar sources such as tithonia and zinnias or plant native wildflowers such as mountain mint, dogbane or goldenrod. Leafy foods grown for the caterpillars enable you to watch the entire life cycle of this splendid creature played out in your yard. Key larval foods include pussy toes, pearly everlasting and rabbit tobacco. The attractively patterned caterpillars construct small leaf tents that get larger as they eat and grow.

Pussy toes are the plant of choice for me. I've established a small carpet of this poor, dry soil ground cover in my front yard and the ladies respond accordingly.

The cosmopolite is not nearly so dependable a visitor and for good reason. It cannot tolerate freezing temperatures and so any of its kind left north in the fall simply freeze to death. Every spring however, perhaps the entire North American continent is recharged when this butterfly erupts from its northern Mexican wintering grounds and moves north, laying eggs on dozens of species of plants. Its favorites include plants in the thistle group, the mallow family including hollyhocks, and certain bean family plants. It will sip nectar from many plants but thistle may be your best bet for bringing them to your yard.

The West Coast lady is not an acquaintance of mine. From British Columbia south to Baja however, gardeners should look for this butterfly on butterfly bush, lantanas and a variety of native wildflowers. Its caterpillars feed on little but mallow family plants. Natives such as the globemallows and sidalceas should be nurtured in a wildflower area and hollyhocks and rose of sharon can be planted in more traditional gardens.

These butterflies are terrific additions to your circle of friends. Invite them to visit your place this summer!

Outlook Good for Goose Season

Goose season opens in the Western Zone December 12, and should be as good as or better than last year.

According to Jeff Lawrence, migratory bird program coordinator, goose populations have been on an upward trend for the past few years, and states like Kentucky that are along the Mississippi Flyway should continue to benefit.

"Goose hunting should be average to above average this season in the Western Zone," said Lawrence. "The increase in giant Canadas and other species of geese should provide good hunting around the Ballard Wildlife Management Area and the Henderson/Sloughs area."

Good goose hunting is often weather dependent in Southern states like Kentucky. Colder winters push birds south, making more geese available.

The quota for the western zone is 16,500 geese this year, up 1,500 from the 1986-87 quota. The Ballard Reporting Area quota is 10,400 and the Henderson-Union Reporting Area quota is 3,300 geese. The season in the western zone is scheduled to end January 30, but if it is determined that the quotas will be reached in either area prior to that date, the season will end in those areas.

Non-toxic steel shot is required for all waterfowl hunting in the Western Zone and all persons hunting geese in the Ballard or Henderson-Union reporting area are required by law to obtain a waterfowl hunting and harvest registration form. The form must be filled out before leaving the field whether or not any geese are taken.

The daily limit on geese is five, with no more than two Canada geese and two white-fronted geese. The possession limit is 10, with any combination of Canada, blue (including snow) or white-fronted geese which does not include more than four Canada and four white-fronted geese.

Two new areas will be open to waterfowl hunting for the 1986-87 season. The Haney Tract of the Peal Wildlife Management Area will be open to all waterfowl hunting. Waterfowl hunting will also be permitted on Swan Lake Wildlife Management Area in the portion of the Upper Blenderman tract located north of Holloway Landing Road.

Waterfowl hunters over 16 are required to possess a valid federal migratory bird hunting stamp and a Kentucky waterfowl stamp, in addition to a Kentucky hunting license.

Duck season, which runs from Dec. 12-Jan. 16, will again be regulated by the point system. Canvasbacks may not be taken at any time during the season.

A week by week progress report of the number of geese harvested in the Ballard and Henderson-Union Reporting Areas will be available by phoning (502) 564-6185.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: A friend of mine told me that having sex at an early age causes cancer of the cervix. Could this be true?

ANSWER: Cancer of the cervix has been studied extensively to look for its cause but no single cause has been found. Studies suggest a number of factors may be involved.

Some women are more likely than others to develop abnormal changes in the cervix which may lead to cancer. Such women are considered "at risk". Being "at risk" does not mean that a person will ever develop cancer. It means that the chances of developing cancer are greater than average for this person.

While the exact cause is unknown, sexual intercourse is thought to play a major role in the development of cancer of the cervix. One major risk factor is having sex before the age of 18. This is thought to increase the risk because the tissue of the cervix changes during puberty and it may be more susceptible to damage during the time these changes are taking place.

Another risk factor is the number of sexual partners. Multiple partners may increase exposure to sexually transmitted diseases (venereal disease). It is believed that some of these diseases trigger abnormal changes in the cells of the cervix.

As soon as a woman becomes sexually active, she should see her doctor for regular pelvic exams and Pap tests. The Pap test or smear is a simple painless procedure that helps detect abnormal cervical changes early, when they are most easily treated and cured.

For more information about cervical cancer or the Pap smear, call the Cancer Information Service at 1-800-4-CANCER or write McDowell Cancer Network, 800 Rose Street, Lexington, Ky. 40536. The Cancer Information Service is a program of the Kentucky Cancer Information Service.

The Office of Veterans' Reemployment Rights provide reemployment assistance to veterans, reservists and members of the National Guard. During fiscal year 1985, the office advised approximately 202,000 individuals of their reemployment rights at time of separation from active duty, responded to approximately 30,000 inquiries, and opened and processed about 1,850 reemployment rights cases, according to the U.S. Labor Department.

Nashville Singer/Songwriter To Appear In Concert

RUSS HOLLINGSWORTH, a Nashville based singer/songwriter, will perform a concert of Contemporary Christian music...

Sunday, December 6—6:00 p.m.
Little Paint Church of God
Little Paint, Ky.

Hollingsworth began his music career at the age of 14, performing in Holiday Inns across the midwest. During high school he sang three nights a week in a local Sheraton Inn, performed for several weddings each month, and quarterbacked his football team to two state titles.

While attending college in Indiana, Hollingsworth traveled across the country singing in churches and high schools. He then finished his education in Nashville with a degree in Business Administration. Russ is now a staff songwriter for Word Music, Inc. and has had songs recorded by artists such as Debby Boone, Deniece Williams, Steve Camp, and Wayne Watson. He is also a recording artist for Word Records. His new album "Love At Any Cost", is available on the Wordsong Label.

Russ is highly recommended by some of gospel music's "greats". Bill Gaither states, "Russ Hollingsworth is 'special'. His music, his message, his willingness to serve, is truly extraordinary." Sandi Patti, who attended college with Russ, says, "I have known Russ since we were students performing together...and have always enjoyed the opportunity to work with him...if you have the opportunity, you'll enjoy the ministry of Russ Hollingsworth."

Russ's music is for all ages, and the community is invited to the concert. A free-will offering will be taken.

Report Notes Alternate Breast Cancer Treatment

Nancy Reagan's recent surgery has prompted renewed public interest and media coverage of breast cancer. It also has raised once again the question of whether conservation surgery, followed by radiation therapy, is as safe in early breast cancer treatment as the radical mastectomy undergone by Mrs. Reagan.

The first known report of Kentucky area women with breast cancer, recently published in The Journal of the Kentucky Medical Association, provides a timely answer. The report concludes that breast preservation, with good cosmetic results, is possible when conservative surgery and radiation therapy are used to treat early breast cancer.

"What's important is that patients have a choice! Provided a patient has early breast cancer, there is now more than one way to treat it—the traditional, radical mastectomy or localized surgery and irradiation," Lindberg added.

The findings of the eight-year study, reported in the October 1987 issue of the KMA Journal, correlate with larger clinical trials published recently in The New England Journal of Medicine and other medical journals.

"We are affiliated with the National Surgical Adjuvant Breast and Bowel Project (NSABP), the foremost group studying breast cancer in this country," Lindberg said, adding that the NSABP is currently on its 18th experimental study. "And the data from these studies confirms that, in treating early breast cancer cases, the success rate is virtually the same for breast-saving surgery followed by irradiation as for radical mastectomy."

The U of L report was based on the records of 38 patients with small cancers of the breast who underwent conservative surgery and irradiation at the James Graham Brown Cancer Center from 1977 to 1984. Cosmetic appearance of the breasts, post-treatment, was assessed to be good in 88 percent of the patients and acceptable in an additional 10 percent.

For 5 to 5-1/2 weeks after surgery, patients were treated with a combination of x-rays and electron radiation. Follow-up ranged from 6 months to 8-1/2 years, with each patient being examined every two or three months for two years after treatment; then every four to six months for up to five years; and once every year after that.

In the 40 breasts treated, there was one recurrence of cancer in the same spot in the breast. A subsequent surgery remedied the condition, and three years later the patient is living free of disease.

"This one case represents a 2.5 percent incidence of recurrence. The national norm for recurrence in clinical studies of breast cancer therapy is 3 to 5 percent," Lindberg said.

"After radiation therapy, it is very important that the patient continue to conduct breast self-examinations regularly, noting any changes in the way the breasts and the scar look or feel," Dr. Lindberg said.

"Actually, breast self-exams should be an integral part of every woman's routine," he stressed. "It is absolutely essential that women get to know themselves and learn what is considered 'normal' for them, so that they can detect any problems early. Early detection is still one of the best ways to fight cancer."

BEST VALUE IN LEXINGTON
Priced $10,000 below VA/FHA appraisals developed by Philip D. ...
Lexington—Based on location, amenities, overall appearance, and price, Grayhawk Trace Townhomes in the Lansdowne/Shadeland East area are the best value in Lexington, according to a recent survey.

News that can save you money and enhance the quality of your life

Grayhawk Trace Townhomes are priced at $10,000 below their VA/FHA appraised value. This makes them the best real estate value in Lexington, says Tom Lambuth, president of The Lambuth Group, Realtors.

Located in the prestigious Lansdowne/Shadeland East area, Grayhawk Trace Townhomes offer 1,360 s.f. of beautifully-designed living space with 2 or 3 bedrooms, walk-in closets, 2 1/2 or 3 baths, fireplaces, garden patios, kitchens filled with G.E. appliances, optional garages or basements, and exteriors that are virtually maintenance free.

"But the best news," says Lambuth, "is that these townhomes, which are located in a stable neighborhood where homes are considered to be a good investment, are priced from only $79,500." See for yourself why Grayhawk Trace Townhomes are called the "best value in Lexington." Visit furnished models, open daily from 1 to 6 p.m., at the corner of Turkeyfoot Road and Grayhawk.

Western To Establish Campus at Glasgow

"Western Kentucky University is committing its efforts and educational resources to providing the city of Glasgow and surrounding communities with programs which will allow students to complete associate, baccalaureate and master degree programs on the Glasgow campus," Dr. Stephen House, executive assistant to the president at WKU told a Glasgow audience last week.

House announced plans Nov. 16 to establish an educational center in Glasgow to be named Western Kentucky University at Glasgow.

House told community leaders that the university is seeking a permanent campus with classrooms, administrative offices and library services, and plans to appoint a full-time director of the campus to provide administrative leadership, promote higher education and to be involved with business and civic groups to assist in the development of the Glasgow and Barren County area.

"We are excited about the future of Glasgow and the potential growth which can be experienced here," House said.

Western currently has more than 500 students taking classes in Glasgow, and says he hopes Western will enroll about 3,000 students in the next five years.

House said budget planning will be a next step in establishment of WKU at Glasgow, and that the University presently is in discussion regarding an appropriate location and physical facility.

KSBA and KASA Sponsor Legislative Conference

Educators, legislators and legislative staff members meeting in Louisville November 20-21 focused on the issue of retaining the educational reforms passed by the General Assembly in the 1985 Extraordinary Session and 1986 biennial session.

The participants learned anticipated shortfalls of $400-500 million in the state budget over the next three years must be made up either by additional revenue or cutbacks before any new programs may be considered. Gilmore Duppton, staff administrator for the appropriations and revenue committees, outlined several possibilities of raising revenue.

Representative Kenny Rapier of Bardonia said that he would introduce legislation to tax soft drinks at five cents per container. This would raise an estimated $75-120 million. Other sources of revenue discussed during the conference were reinstating sales tax on food and adjusting the state income tax to conform with federal changes.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction-elect John Brock addressed the conference saying that "we aren't going to solve all of the problems we face in education overnight but that we need to focus all of our efforts together in order to make needed improvements."

In a panel discussion on legislative issues for 1988, Representative Jody Richards said that legislators who passed the education reform package have a sense of ownership with them and will not give those up easily, despite Governor-elect Wallace Wilkinson's statements saying that he is not committed to funding those programs.

Also during the panel discussion, Jim Wiseman, president of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce, called for a separate state board to govern vocational education programs.

David Keller, executive director of the Kentucky School Boards Association expressed concern for the state Board of Education's plans to create a staff separate from the state Department of Education. This would set a "dangerous precedent" and divide leadership at the state department, he said. Keller also said that a law requiring school boards to recognize teacher organizations would be a "foot in the door" for mandatory collective bargaining.

Some 240 school board members and school administrators attended the conference. The conference was designed to bring the education community together in working toward common goals during the 1988 session of the General Assembly.

The conference was sponsored jointly by the Kentucky School Boards Association and the Kentucky Association of School Administrators.

"Box Of Delights" Is Holiday Special

A train ride becomes a magical journey through fantasyland for a sleepy schoolboy in "The Box of Delights," a three-part "Wonderworks" special airing Saturdays at 8:00/7:00 p.m. CT beginning December 12 and concluding December 26.

"Wonderworks" repeats Sundays at 11:00/10:00 a.m. CT.

"The Box of Delights" was honored with three British Emmy Awards as best children's program and for its outstanding technical achievements.

Coming home from boarding school for what he thinks will be an ordinary Christmas vacation, schoolboy Kay Harker meets Old Cole Hawkins who gives him the Box of Delights for safekeeping while he confronts the villainous Abner Brown.

The old magic of the box and the new magic Brown possesses lead Kay into a series of adventures. In one, there is a kidnapping in King Arthur's camp. Another is a Peter Pan-like fantasy. Kay's friends are imprisoned in another, and the last is a flight backward in time.

"Wonderworks" is a presentation of the PBS Children's Family Consortium: WQED/Pittsburgh; KCET/Los Angeles; KTCA/Minneapolis-St. Paul; South Carolina ETV Network; and WETA/Washington, D.C.

Quick Breads Make Special Gifts

It happens every year, no matter how much planning has been done or how far in advance the Christmas gifts have been bought. There are always those last minute, unexpected gifts that you want to be special.

What better solution than a loaf of quick bread? Nothing expresses your love and appreciation for someone quite like a loaf of warm, moist Apple Butter Spice Bread. The combination of apple butter, cinnamon and nutmeg give this special gift a true holiday aroma.

Apple Butter Spice Bread
 2 cups Martha White All-Purpose Flour
 1 teaspoon baking powder
 1/4 teaspoon soda
 1 teaspoon cinnamon
 1 teaspoon nutmeg
 1 cup sugar
 3 eggs, lightly beaten
 3/4 cup vegetable oil
 3/4 cup apple butter
 1/2 cup chopped pecans
 1 cup raisins, boiled and drained (optional)
 Preheat oven to 325 °F. Grease a 9x5x3-inch loaf pan. Sift together flour, baking powder, soda, cinnamon and nutmeg. Add sugar, eggs and oil; stir to blend. Fold in apple butter, pecans and raisins. Pour into prepared pan.

Bake 1 hour 20 minutes or until toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Let cool in pan 15 minutes. Turn out onto wire rack to cool completely.

- Quick Breads are so convenient because they are usually made with ingredients you have on hand, such as flour, sugar, oil, eggs and spices.
- Quick breads are good sliced and served straight from the loaf, but take on a special quality when the slices are buttered and toasted.
- Spread slices of your favorite loaf with a soft cream cheese spread or jam.
- For greatest moistness, wrap the loaf tightly in aluminum foil about 20 minutes after removing from the oven. The heat will create steam that will keep the loaf moist for several days.
- For an extra special gift, wrap the loaf in plastic wrap, drop it into a new loaf pan the size of the prepared loaf, tie it all together with colorful ribbon or yarn and attach the recipe.

Historic Trees To Evoke Spirit of Christmas Past

The Kentucky Historical Society will celebrate the holidays with a display of Christmas trees that have been decorated in keeping with photographs and written accounts from Kentucky at the turn of the century. Beginning Sunday, Dec. 6, five trees representing urban and rural areas across the state will illustrate the variety of holiday celebrations observed by families and communities during the years before the Christmas tree became a standard holiday fixture.

The earliest tree, erected in a Lexington church in 1873 and described in a newspaper account, will be decorated with toys and cornucopias filled with sweets. The latest, based on an oral account of Christmas customs in Grayson County in 1925, will be a cedar trimmed with popcorn and wallpaper chains, cotton "snow," and homemade Christmas balls. Three trees representing the years in between will include one community and two family trees from northern, eastern, and western Kentucky and feature decorations ranging from store-bought glass ornaments to catalog cutouts. The historical sources that inspired the display—a photograph, a newspaper story, published reminiscences, and an oral history account—will be available for interested visitors.

Located in the Old Capitol in Frankfort, the display will be free to the public. The Old Capitol is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Saturday, 1 to 5 p.m., Sunday, and 12 noon to 4 p.m., New Year's Eve.

Note that the museum will be closed Christmas Eve, Christmas Day, and New Year's Day. For information, contact Vicky Middleswarth, Kentucky Historical Society, P.O. Box H, Frankfort, Ky. 40602-2108; (502) 564-2662.

SACRED TO THE MEMORY OF
MY BROTHER
EDGAR PRESTON STEPHENS
14 October 1914
7 December 1983

First Lieutenant Edgar Preston Stephens was born in a log cabin on the Caney Fork of Middle Creek, Floyd County, Kentucky. He entered the Kentucky Military Institute in 1927 and was graduated in the Class of 1933. He then took his degree at the University of Kentucky in 1938, at which time he was commissioned in the 399th Infantry ORC Regiment, attached to the 10th U.S. Infantry Regiment, at Fort Thomas, Kentucky. As a member of the Organized Reserve Corps, he served with distinction. Edgar was a bold, assertive champion on the tennis courts at KMI for three years. After college he could challenge most players in Prestonsburg. He made many friends in both childhood and adult life. Unfortunately, my brother probably did not know how much I loved him; how much I thought of him after our many years of war and separation. It was a notable tragic circumstance, which in early life induced the creeping disease that sent him to an early death. I shall always miss his presence and mourn his loss; but his spirit is with me. While his ground rests above him, a memorial awaits for erection in the future—a small tribute for a most worthy gentleman and brother.

Toys Can Be Danger To Eyes

The Kentucky Society to Prevent Blindness urges all of Santa's helpers to check their lists twice for toys that could be a hazard to children's eyes. Most eye injuries from toys can be avoided, the Society says, by selecting toys and games more carefully and teaching youngsters how to use toys safely.

No one wants to play the part of Scrooge during the holidays but children's toys were responsible for more than 6,000 eye injuries last year in children under 15, according to the Society.

"The best way to avoid toys that are dangerous to the eyes is to think through the purchase first," says Dr. Martin Ehrenberg, the Society's medical advisor. "We buy toys on impulse and think about the consequences later."

Following the age labeled on a toy is no guarantee that it will be safe for your child. Toys designed for one purpose may be used for another purpose by an imaginative youngster, or a younger sibling may play with an older child's toy.

It is important to consider a child's temperament and developmental stage before selecting toys. At the same time, parents must be diligent about checking the toys that relatives and friends buy for a child.

The Society offers this holiday checklist for eye safety:

Avoid projectile toys such as dart guns, BB guns, slingshots, and bows and arrows, responsible for a major portion of eye injuries from toys.

Check for sharp, exposed edges, points, nails, screws and pins.

Check for loose parts that can become unattached, exposing sharp metal or plastic.

Avoid toys that shatter or break easily.

Examine dolls, stuffed animals and other soft toys for rigid interior frames that can poke through the outside covering.

Avoid inexpensive novelty sunglasses that can break and lacerate the eyes.

Inspect old toys for damage or defects.

Recognizing eye injuries in children can also prevent long-term damage to eyesight, Dr. Ehrenberg said. A simple black eye may conceal other damage and lead to traumatic glaucoma or cataracts years later.

If a child displays any of the following symptoms, it is time to seek medical attention—Obvious pain and vision difficulties. Cut or torn eyelid; blood in the clear portion of the eye. One eye that protrudes; abnormal pupil size or shape. Something on the eye or under the eyelid that cannot be removed easily.

For more information on protecting children's eyes, send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to: Kentucky Society to Prevent Blindness, 727 Starks Bldg., Louisville, Ky. 40202.

The Society, dedicated to preserving sight and preventing blindness, wishes everyone a clear and bright holiday season.

The insured unemployment decreased 18.4 percent in April, as declines occurred in all the major industrial divisions.

Food Stamp Review Catching Mistakes

A year-old project of the Cabinet for Human Resources is rapidly proving its worth in terms of reducing errors in Kentucky's public assistance programs and saving tax dollars.

Project CORE (Co-Operative Review of Eligibility) began in November 1986 as a joint effort of the cabinet's Department for Social Insurance, which administers the federal food stamp program in Kentucky, and the Office of the Inspector General, which handles special investigations, including welfare fraud, for the cabinet.

Social Insurance Commissioner Mike Robinson said the program is designed to catch both mistakes and misinformation on applications for food stamps and Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) before the benefits have been paid.

"If an eligibility caseworker finds an inconsistency or possible fraud during the preliminary investigation of a client's application, an investigator from the Inspector General's office is contacted immediately," said Robinson. "A decision is then made on whether or not an investigation is warranted, and the appropriate action is taken. Sometimes, it's just an honest mistake."

"By catching mistakes before the benefits are issued, we reduce the department's food stamp and AFDC error rate," the commissioner said. "If the error rate stays below a federally mandated level, the state avoids sanctions which reduce the amount of federal funds received for these problems."

During Project CORE's first year of operation in Fayette county, the effort has prevented more than $135,000 in erroneous benefits from being issued, according to Inspector General William Gardner.

"There is one investigator working part-time for the program in the county," said Gardner. "He investigated 200 cases last year and saved an average of $23.66 in benefits for every dollar spent on the investigations."

The project was such a success in Fayette county that an investigator was selected to work part-time on cases that come through one of three Social Insurance offices in Jefferson county, said Gardner.

"During the first two months of operation in Louisville, the investigation of 21 cases stopped more than $23,000 in benefits from being sent out mistakenly," he reported. "When funds are made available, the program will be expanded to all of the state's regional offices. Then, the benefits saved will be even more impressive."

The investigations also produce secondary savings, said Robinson.

"If word is getting around that applications with erroneous information are being investigated, it becomes a deterrent to that kind of activity," said the commissioner.

"However, conducting fraud investigations isn't the primary purpose of the project," said Robinson. "Our main goal is to catch erroneous benefits before they are sent out and to insure that people who deserve benefits get them."

Safety Tips Offered On Boosting Battery

You're late for work, the temperature is freezing, you can't find your gloves and the car won't start. You lose your temper—but you save your eyesight because you know the correct way to jump-start a dead battery.

The Kentucky Society to Prevent Blindness reports that battery-related accidents are a leading cause of serious eye injuries. Batteries can produce explosive gases. If these gases are accidentally ignited by a spark or open flame, the explosion could send battery fragments and acid into the eyes. The result can be severe eye damage and vision impairment. According to the Consumer Product Safety Commission, over 8,000 battery-related eye injuries occur each year.

KSPB suggests these safety precautions: Wear goggles when working with car batteries; keep sparks, flames and cigarettes away from batteries. Don't lean over batteries during jump-starting.

Before attempting a jump-start, the Society says: Consult the owner's manual for instructions. Make sure the cars are not touching and the emergency brakes are set. Make sure the ignitions of both vehicles are off and both are in neutral or park. Check voltage of both batteries to make sure they are the same.

To jump-start: Clamp one cable to the positive terminal of the dead battery. Connect the other end of this cable to the positive terminal of the good battery. Clamp the second cable to the negative terminal of good battery. Connect the other end of this cable to the frame or any non-painted metallic surface, such as the engine block of the disabled car, away from the battery. Stand back from both vehicles. Start car with the good battery first; start the disabled car.

Should an accident occur and battery acid gets into the eyes, immediately flush them with water for at least 15 minutes. Seek emergency medical assistance.

When choosing battery cables, the Society recommends they be at least 12 feet in length, well insulated heavy gauge wire, have sharp and clean alligator clips, and be color-coded to avoid wrong connections.

The Society has these jump-start recommendations graphically listed on a bright yellow vinyl sticker. The sticker can be affixed to any clean, dry surface under the hood or kept inside a car's glove compartment.

For a copy, send 25 cents and a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to: Kentucky Society to Prevent Blindness, 727 Starks Building, Louisville, Ky. 40202.

The Society also offers an eight-minute audio-visual kit on battery safety entitled "Out of Sight, Out of Mind." This kit may be purchased or borrowed.

Talented Bobcats Need Help At Point Guard Spot

What does Craynor Slone do for an encore? That, along with who will fill their point guard needs may be the two biggest mysteries surrounding the Betsy Layne Bobcats.

Slone, in his first season as the Bobcats head coach, captured a conference title, a pre-season tournament championship, and took Betsy Layne to the regional tournament.

All of that came in what was supposed to be a rebuilding season.

With a new coach and new players, the Bobcats weren't considered as one of the 15th region's stronger teams. The Bobcats weren't even considered as one of the 58th district's top teams, but in 1986-87 Betsy Layne proved to be the ultimate surprise team.

"We sneaked up on some people last year," assistant coach Keith Henry said, reflecting on last season. "But we won't be able to do that this year, because most people expect us to be a good team."

Betsy Layne enjoyed an 18-12 performance a season ago. Some opponents and supporters agree that the Bobcat squad was an over-achiever. Craynor Slone doesn't think so.

"That ball club last year was a lot better than a lot of people thought it was," Slone said. "That ball club was underrated."

The Bobcats of 1986-87 recorded unexpected victories over regional power Virgie, and took Paintsville to the limit twice, just to name a couple of their many accomplishments.

But last year is gone, and so are the players. Or at least some of them are. "The Bobcats lost three starters, including their two top scorers and their leading rebounder. Talent does return, though.

Betsy Layne returns two starters, Todd Sturgill and Duran Newsome, and another player, Sam Stewart, that saw considerable varsity action last year.

Sturgill, a 6'2" senior, scored over 11 points per game a season ago and hauled down enough rebounds to finish second on the team.

He will start at one forward position.

Duran Newsome represents Betsy Layne's top returning scorer, 12 a game, and is the Bobcats' best outside shooter.

Already this year Newsome has established himself as Betsy Layne's number one scorer, tossing 27 points in two panorama contests. Newsome, 5'11", plays the second guard for the Bobcats.

Betsy Layne has been rated as high as fifth in 15th region pre-season polls. Sturgill and Newsome are two reasons, but Sam Stewart may be the biggest reason.

At six-foot-five, Stewart is Betsy Layne's biggest player, but his size isn't the only reason why the sophomore center is considered as an important cog in the Bobcats' basketball wheel.

Stewart, one of the first Bobcats off the bench last year, developed into one of the top freshman in the region, and everyone in Betsy Layne expects him to enjoy a strong second season.

As a freshman Stewart scored over three points a game. Most of his offensive production came late in the season and is expected to increase this year.

Stewart also is Betsy Layne's only player with shot blocking defensive capabilities on the inside while possessing the talent to control the boards on both ends.

Craynor Slone is quick to commend his sophomore's abilities, but just as quickly he will remind everyone that Sam Stewart is still a sophomore. "You don't really know about them (sophomores)," Slone said. "You can't ever tell how they're going to respond."

The Bobcats, according to Slone, have a prospective strong trio of experienced players back, but they play five-on-five.

"Those three are pretty solid players. The problem is that we need to step up and fill the other two spots on the floor," Slone said.

Another problem is that Betsy Layne's experience kind of runs short after those first three players.

"Those, along with Matt Conn, are about the only players we've got back with any experience," Slone continued. "Matt played some last year, but after those four, we don't have anybody with any experience."

One position that inherits one of those inexperienced players is the point guard slot, an important position in the Bobcats' scheme of things.

"Nobody has come forth and said that the position is theirs. One day one player will look good then the next day somebody else will, but nobody has been consistent there," Slone related. "If we're going to be a good team somebody will have to take over that position and handle the ball for us."

Of those currently battling for the position, Barry Hamilton appears to be the front runner now. The 5'10" junior served as Betsy Layne's starting point guard Saturday night against Morgan County.

Kevin Spurlock, a 6'1" sophomore, is another likely candidate, but he starts at a forward position. John Blackburn, regarded as the quickest player on the team, is also expected to get an opportunity to play the position. Blackburn is a transfer from Pikeville.

If the Bobcats settle their point guard mystery, they could develop into one of the top teams in the 15th region. At least most people think so.

"We'll probably be a pretty good team at the end of the year, but I don't think we'll be as good at the beginning of the season as everyone thinks we will," Slone said.

"One day we will look good in practice then the next day we will look like we're confused and disorganized. I just don't know what to expect."

But sitting pretty in March is better than looking good in December.

"That's what you hope for," the coach said. "You want to look good all the time but more so at the end of the season. Actually, I would be worried if we did look good now."

In two panorama contests, the Bobcats have lost by seven points to Johnson Central and defeated Morgan County by 22 points.

Betsy Layne, looking good or not, opens their season for real tonight against Prestonsburg in the Floyd County Conference's Pre-season Tournament.

Last year the Bobcats introduced themselves to their rebuilding season by capturing the tournament's top prize.

Shannon, Hall Propel McDowell To 3-0 Start

Lenny Hall sat on the bottom bleacher, looking on as the McDowell junior varsity team played Jackson County, and put the current Daredevil basketball situation in perspective.

"I remember when I was a freshman," Hall recalled. "We won our first two games. Then we didn't win much the rest of the year. I hope that doesn't happen this year."

Hall, a senior forward for the Daredevils, has suffered from sub-par seasons during his four years at McDowell.

But so far this season, his last as a Daredevil, Hall and his teammates have enjoyed a perfect season. They won their first two games of the season, and optimism has begun to resurface throughout the McDowell basketball community.

Hall, though, reserved his optimism. At least until Jackson County was taken care of.

With the help of Dickie Joe Shannon and the rest of the Daredevil force, Lenny Hall took care of business and the Jackson County Generals.

Shannon, rated as one of the region's top guards, tossed in 16 points, and Lenny Hall added 15 as McDowell defeated Lee County, 61-56, in overtime Saturday evening at McDowell.

In their first three games, Shannon and Hall have led the Daredevils to victory, but their effort required some help from the bench force.

With both teams struggling offensively in the overtime period, Mark Hall, a reserve, came to the Daredevils' rescue.

With McDowell leading by two points and the ball belonging to Jackson County, Hall stole an inbounds pass and scored to put the Daredevils up 56-52.

His first steal came with 1:14 remaining in the overtime period. Five seconds later Hall scored his second basket of the extra period, once again after he made a steal.

Less than half a minute later the 6'3" sophomore transfer student hit the front end of a bonus free throw opportunity to ice the game for McDowell.

"They played in the JV and the varsity game and did a good job in both," Daredevil coach Johnnie Ray Turner said of Mark Hall and sophomore center Keith Shelton. "They came in off the bench and made some big plays for us."

Mark Hall scored five points, all in overtime, and Shelton added four points to McDowell's winning effort.

Henry Webb, a junior guard, tossed in 11 points to finish as the Daredevils' third leading scorer.

The Daredevils, who led by as many as eight points in the second quarter, were forced to come from behind to keep their perfect record alive.

"They did that because of a ball hawking defense that took Jackson County out of their regular offense and forced numerous General turnovers.

"I've been harping on them about their defense and evidently they heard me," Turner said. "They played good defense tonight."

"We played the way we've been playing, but we just couldn't hit our shots," Turner said. "Our shots just wouldn't fall."

McDowell did get enough shots to fall to capture their third win of the season. The Daredevils are now 3-0 and Jackson slips to 3-2. One of those wins, though, came over 14th region power Lee County, rated as the top team in that region.

It was a night that took everything McDowell could produce and more. Enjoying a strong shooting performance early, the Daredevils opened up a three-point lead after the first quarter.

Shannon scored 10 of his game high 16 in that opening period.

Five different players reached the scoring column for McDowell in the second quarter, and when Shannon cashed in on a pair of free throws with 4:17 remaining in the half, the Daredevils found themselves up by eight points.

That didn't last long enough. Thanks to a couple of three-pointers by guard Clay Dalton, the Generals trimmed McDowell's advantage to a scant 30-28 difference.

Jackson County caught up on a pair of three pointers, one from the outside and one on the inside, and sprinted out to a six-point lead in the third quarter.

With 4:19 remaining in the third quarter the Daredevils trailed 40-34 but they outscored Jackson County, 10-1, in the period's final four minutes to take a three-point advantage going into the final frame.

In the fourth quarter the lead changed hands seven times and was tied twice. Amidst sloppy play from both teams, McDowell and Jackson County found themselves hooked up in a nail-biter that needed more than the regular time to be settled.

McDowell, with 20 seconds left, trailed by one point and were forced to chase the Generals, who had possession of the basketball.

But like it had all night, the Daredevil defense proved tough and sparked some timely offense.

This time it was Lenny Hall who came up with a loose ball. The lanky McDowell forward drove the length of the court, hit a layup, and drew the foul. With 16 seconds left, Hall cashed in on the charity toss to give the Daredevils a two-point lead.

But with only four ticks on the game clock Kenny Shackleford hit two free throws, forcing the overtime period.

The rest is history. Mark Hall introduced himself to Daredevil fans in a big way and boosted McDowell to their third victory in a row.

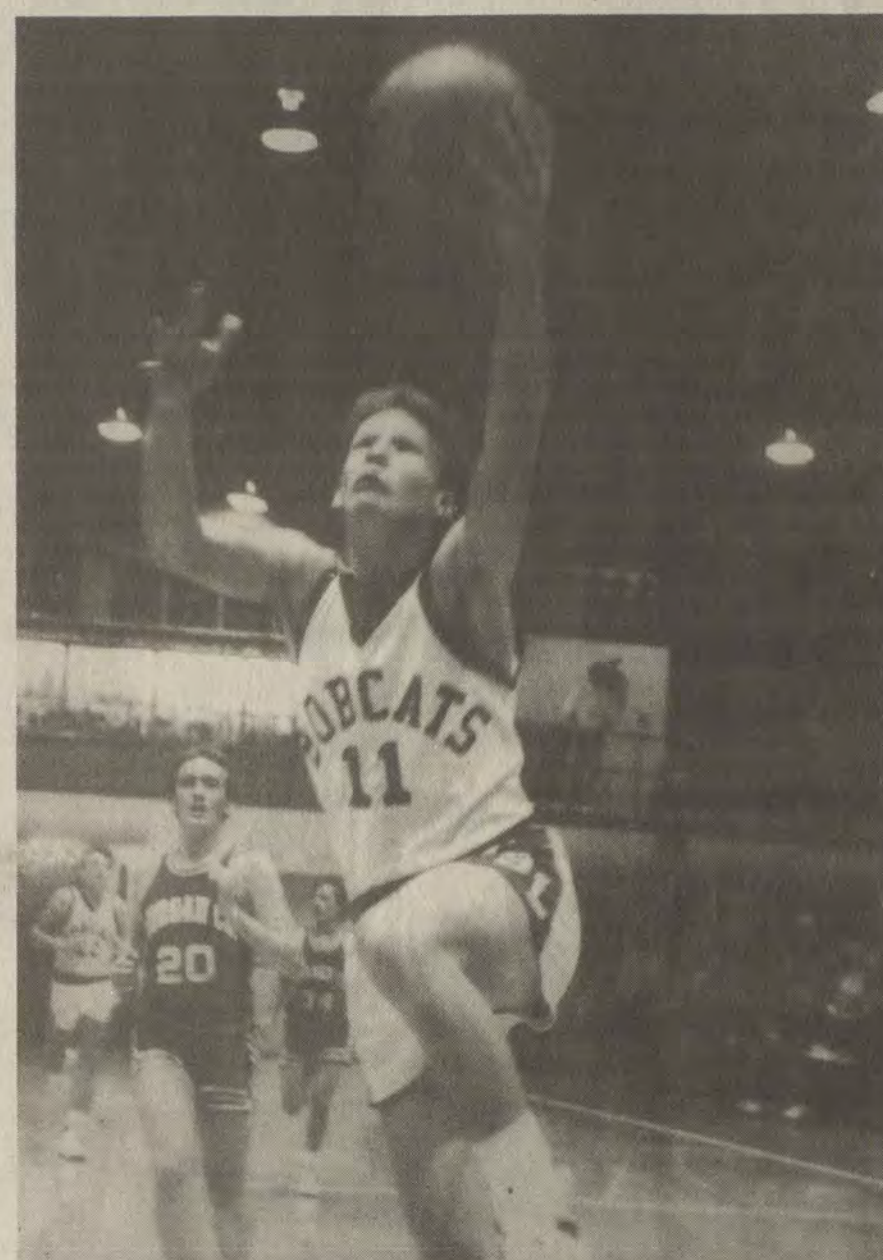

Jesse Osborne, a junior forward, added six points to the winning effort and Lance Hall tossed in four more.

McDowell's next action will come in the pre-season tournament Friday night against the winner of Betsy Layne and Prestonsburg.

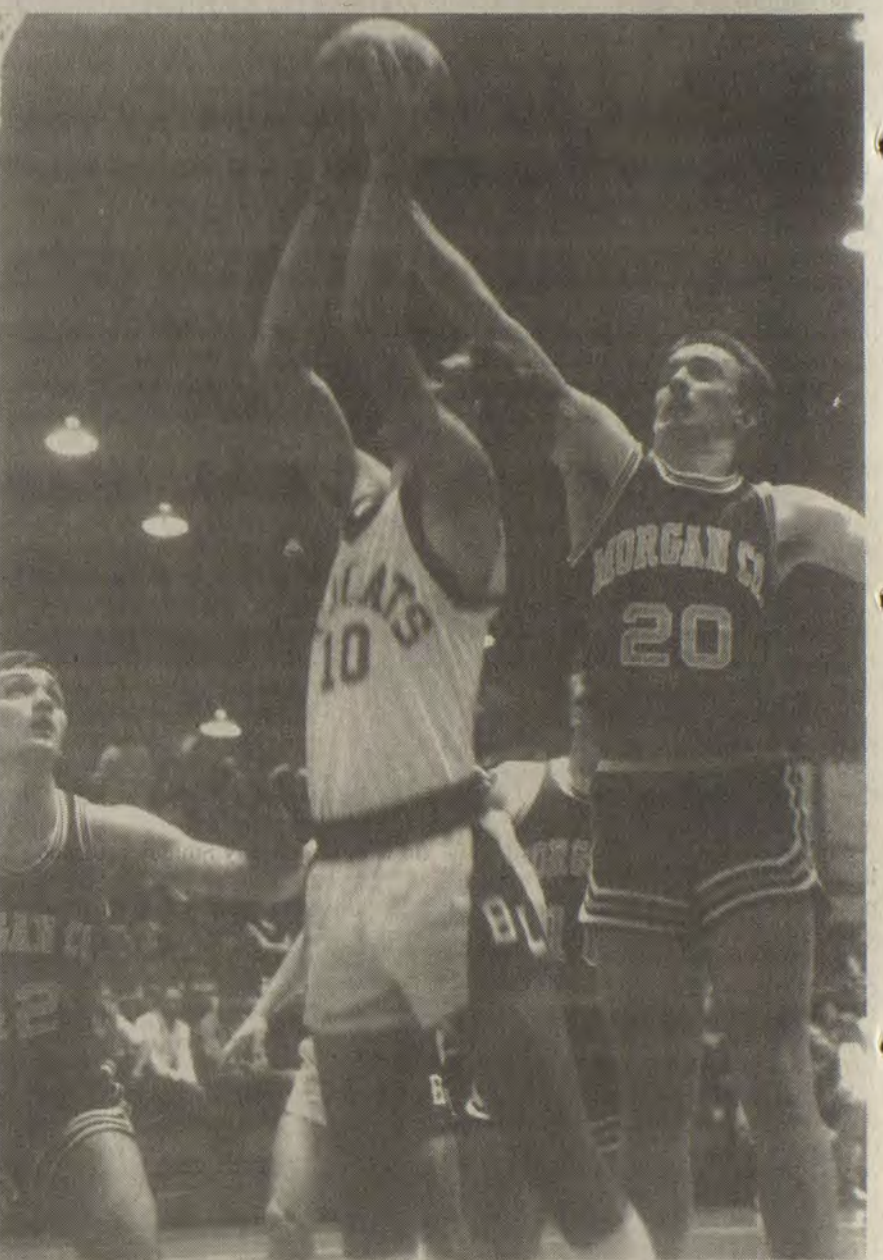

McDowell, 79, Mullins, 62—Guard Dickie Joe Shannon and forward Lenny Hall combined to score 49 points as McDowell defeated Mullins 79-62 last Tuesday night.

Shannon, averaging almost 19 points per game, tossed in 25 to pace the Daredevils to their second win of the season.

Lenny Hall added 24 as McDowell blew out to a 39-point lead in the third quarter and coasted with their reserves to the 19-point victory.

RETURNING STARTERS: Duran Newsome (left) and Todd Sturgill are Betsy Layne's only returning starters. The two have led the Bobcats offensively in their two panorama games. Newsome averaged 12 points a game last year and Sturgill scored 11 a contest.

Lady Bobcats Face Challenge In Race For Eighth Consecutive Region Berth

It would take a long-term fan, with a long-term memory, to recall the last time the Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats weren't considered as one of the top basketball teams in the 58th district.

Their list of wins is long and their trophy case is full of reminders of dominance gone by and success enjoyed.

Since 1981 a Lady Bobcat basketball team has been among the eight teams making up the 15th regional tournament. In the past five seasons, Betsy Layne has either won the Floyd County Conference outright or shared the top position.

The pace has been set and more times than not the Lady Bobcats have been the pace-setters. Betsy Layne has consistently been among the district's top teams and according to most coaches, although it may take a stronger effort this time around, little has changed.

"Betsy Layne has to be the favorite. They've got a real strong team again," Bonita Compton, who figures to have her Allen Central Rebels near the top, said recently.

"Allen Central is looking good. I'm sure Betsy Layne will have a strong team and Prestonsburg will too. It's been that way the past few years, and I don't look for much to change this year," Meridith Slone, McDowell's second year coach, said.

Last year the Lady Bobcats shared the conference title with Prestonsburg, then earned a regional tournament berth when they finished as runners-up to the Lady Blackcats in the district tournament.

Betsy Layne lost three starters from their successful 1986-87 squad, but most coaches still consider the Lady Bobcats as the team most likely to provide staff competition.

But then again those same coaches agree that the conference and district tournament affairs could be more balanced than in years past.

"I think this year will be more competitive than it was last year," Bridgett Clay, Prestonsburg's coach, predicted. "I don't see any clear-cut favorite right now. At tournament time last year everybody came on real strong and was playing real well so it should be pretty balanced."

And last year's tournament could have been an indication of what this season might hold.

Each team in the county returns a proven performer and starters to go with them. Allen Central returns their total team, as does McDowell. Betsy Layne has three players back who have started in the past.

The Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats have three starters returning, and Wheelwright lost only one starter of a year ago.

With this type talent available, and widespread, the conference race promises to be one of the most balanced ever. With individual talents such as Joann Conn, of Allen Central, or Karen Frasure, of Prestonsburg, the season also promises to be one of excitement.

Allen Central High School: The Lady Rebs were young last season, not one senior who saw playing time, and they will be young again, only three seniors, but Bonita Compton has a talented lot to work with.

Led by Joann Conn, Allen Central returns a long list of talented players, most with experience from last season.

Conn, as a freshman, scored over 19 points a game while hauling down 12 rebounds. Both Conn and Frasure are tops among returning 58th district players.

Bonita Compton is quick to say that her prize player is the best in the district and possibly the top performer in the 15th region.

And she isn't a one person show at Allen Central.

Becky Rice, a junior, is another returning starter who scored in double figures last season. The 5'10" forward averaged 10 points and six rebounds a game one season ago.

Tonya Kester, senior point guard, adds an outside scoring threat to Conn and Rice's inside efforts. Teresa Crum, another senior guard, can also bury the outside shot.

Jennifer Stephens started for the Lady Rebs last year. Stephanie Wallen, another 5'10" player, was a member of the first five. She is expected to enjoy a big junior campaign.

"We have to get some leadership. That's the key," Coach Compton said of her Lady Reb team. "We have to have a leader on the floor, someone that will take charge when the going gets rough, and I think with the maturity, we're another year older, the leadership will come."

"We've got three seniors this year and they'll be playing so that will make a big difference."

The Lady Rebs finished the 1986-87 season with a 10-13 record and a third place finish in the Floyd County Conference.

Wheelwright High School: The Lady Trojans finished with a flurry last season and with a host of talent back, are expected to continue their climb.

Wheelwright has been to the regional tournament only once in the past 13 years but with returning players like April Bradford, Jedon Hood, and Tephania Green, the Lady Trojans may be on the right road that leads to the region.

Bradford, only a sophomore, has started the past two years while averaging over 10 points a game. She is the Lady Trojans' leading returning scorer.

Hood and Green, two improved inside players, also return to lend a helping hand to Wheelwright's winning efforts.

The Lady Trojans, under first year coach Judy Eversole, posted their most successful season since the 1983-84 campaign, finishing at 9-13.

Winning has been a trademark of their coach and the Lady Trojans are expected to continue the tradition. In a five-season stretch with Allen Central, Eversole won four district titles and finished as runners-up the other year.

She made dramatic improvements in a struggling program last season and some coaches figure those will continue this year.

"Wheelwright played real well in the district tournament last year and they've got some good players back. They should be strong inside," Bonita Compton said of the Lady Trojans.

Betsy Layne High School: The Lady Bobcats return three players who have experience as starters. Sandy Flannery, last year's starting center, is back to team with forwards Yolanda Keathley and Tammy Hall.

Flannery poured in 12 points and hauled down eight rebounds a game for Betsy Layne last season. Keathley and Hall shared starting assignments and playing time at a forward spot.

With talent and experience on hand, the Lady Bobcats are expecting to make the introductory season for new coach Karen Henry a successful one.

Karen Henry is taking over the reins from Diane Robinson and is expecting a successful season herself.

"My expectations are high but our freshmen will have to come along, because they will be coming off the bench a lot," Coach Henry said.

Betsy Layne starts five seniors but after that their experience is slim. The Lady Bobcats have only one junior and one sophomore so freshmen play could be a must.

"I expect to win a lot of games, but our bench will have to improve. We don't have a lot of experience, but they'll be working hard."

Bri Boyd, a freshman, may be one of the many first-year players counted on to play a key role in Betsy Layne's basketball show.

Boyd may be the Lady Bobcats best ball handler and could help their inexperienced backcourt.

NFL News And Notes

What was discontent in Los Angeles has become hero material in Indianapolis. While migrating from West to East, it also lended a helping hand in Buffalo.

All-pro running back Eric Dickerson had become non-existent in the Los Angeles Rams' game plan. Once the glue that stuck Los Angeles in the playoffs, Dickerson found himself in a contract squabble and on the bench.

The Rams elected to make a deal involving Dickerson rather than letting his value waste away in the smog of LA. Los Angeles traded Dickerson to the Colts. The Colts traded their number one draft choice to Buffalo and sent a host of future picks to LA.

Since the trade the Colts, enjoying their best season since moving to Indianapolis, has compiled a 3-2 record and remained atop the AFC's Eastern Division.

In those five games Dickerson has run for 583 yards and almost two touchdowns per outing. Sunday, Dickerson enjoyed one of his best performances in a Colts' uniform, running for 137 yards and two touchdowns as Indianapolis thrashed Houston, 51-27.

The 51 points represented the highest Colt single game output in the past 11 years. Albert Bentley, Dickerson's backfield partner, caught two touchdown passes to assist in the effort.

With the win, Indianapolis, 6-5, remained in a first place tie in the East. Both the Jets and Bills won to improve to 6-5 also.

Buffalo, trading draft choices to Indianapolis for Cornelius Bennett, kept pace by shutting out Dan Marino and the Miami Dolphins.

Bennett was considered the top linebacker in last year's draft. With him the Bills' defense has caught up with Jim Kelly and the Buffalo offense.

Sunday, the Bills defeated Miami 27-0, marking the first time the Dolphins had been shut out in the past five years, and breaking a Dan Marino streak that had seen the Miami quarterback throw at least one touchdown in each of his last 30 games.

New York remained in a first place tie by virtue of their 27-20 whipping of hapless Cincinnati. The Jets, with two minutes remaining in the game, blocked a Bengal field goal attempt and returned it for the winning touchdown.

The Bengals, 3-8, are out of the playoff picture. That is something that no Eastern Division team can understand.

Only one game separates the bottom team from the top team and week 13 could bring the division even closer.

Miami, one of the bottom teams, plays the New York Jets, one of the top teams, Monday night in Joe Robbie Stadium.

Sunday, Indianapolis plays at Cleveland. Come week 14, it is more than possible that the East will once again be even from top to bottom.

Cleveland is looking for a chance to redeem themselves after losing to San Francisco, Sunday night. Joe Montana threw four touchdown passes to slow the Browns, 38-24.

With Houston and Pittsburgh both losing, Cleveland was allowed to keep their hold on first in the AFC Central. The Oilers and Steelers face tough challenges this week, Pittsburgh against Seattle and Houston taking on San Diego, so with a win the Browns could possibly put two games between themselves and their opponents.

After this week only three games remain in the regular season.

Counting week 13, the San Diego Chargers play four teams with winning records to wind up their regular season.

With Pittsburgh, Houston, Indianapolis, and Denver remaining, the Chargers do not exactly have an easy row to hoe, especially after losing to Denver this past week. The Broncos, led along by quarterback John Elway, increased their winning streak to three games and handed San Diego their second consecutive loss, 31-17 in San Diego, Sunday.

Elway threw an interception that was returned 103 yards for a touchdown by Vince Glenn. Down by seven points early, Elway then went to work, bringing Denver back for a victory and to within one-half game of San Diego.

Elway piled up a total of 347 passing yards and three touchdowns as the Broncos moved to within one-half game of the West lead.

That came about because the Bo Jackson Raiders upset Seattle, 37-14, Monday night. Jackson scored one touchdown on a pass reception and another when he established a new record for touchdown distance. The rookie runner finished with 221 yards rushing. He also scored three touchdowns.

Jackson, in the second quarter, rambl-ed 91 yards, the longest touchdown run in Raider history, for another score as Los Angeles leaped out to a 27-7 halftime lead. The Raiders rushed for a team record 386 yards in denying Seattle the West's top spot.

Seattle, with the loss, remained one game behind San Diego but are now in third place in the Western Division.

Remember the Dickerson trade? Well, what was one team's gain wasn't exactly one team's loss.

Since the trade, Los Angeles has posted a 2-3 slate. In the past three games Charles White has run for more than 400 yards while leading the Rams to victories over Washington and Tampa Bay.

Sunday, White ran for 137 yards and two touchdowns as LA defeated the Buccaneers 35-3. But the sudden domination is a little too late for the Rams.

This season the NFC West belongs to San Francisco, 9-2, and New Orleans. The Saints, posting their first winning season, defeated Pittsburgh Sunday, 20-16.

That win kept New Orleans within striking distance, one game behind the 49ers. San Francisco has Chicago left on their schedule while Houston is the only winning team the Saints have to look forward to.

Speaking of the Bears, they will be waging a war with divisional foe Minnesota this Sunday in the Metrodome.

The Vikings, despite four Danny White touchdown passes, turned back Dallas in overtime Thursday to remain only two games behind Central Division leader Chicago.

Minnesota has had three extra days to prepare for the Bears. Chicago did battle with Green Bay Sunday afternoon. This was one of those contests schedule makers and fans have been looking forward to since the games and dates were announced.

The Chicago-Minnesota situation panned out. Not all that were expected to be critical matchups developed into critical matchups.

The New York Giants were supposed to be in the race for an NFC East title. So was Philadelphia. The two teams will meet Sunday but with both teams experiencing disappointing seasons, the game means little as far as the playoffs are concerned.

Thanks to a late rally by Washington, the Giants come into week 13 with a 3-8 record.

New York opened a 16-0 halftime lead, but eventually lost to the Redskins 23-19.

Philadelphia upended New England 34-31 in overtime but has a losing record for the season.

The Patriots, winless in overtime games, slipped to the bottom of the AFC East. They play Denver this week.

ONE REASON WHY: The Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats are rated as one of the top teams in the 58th district. Sandy Flannery (55) is one reason why. She averaged in double figures offensively last year and led all scorers last Wednesday night.

SHORT SPORTS

Local fans were given an opportunity to view area talent Wednesday night as a basketball panorama was held in the D.W. Howard fieldhouse.

At Betsy Layne six teams provided roundball entertainment to hundreds of fans. Both the Bobcats and Lady Bobcats took a winning part in the night's festivities.

The Lady Bobcats, regarded as one of the 58th district's top teams, got 23 points from Sandy Flannery to easily defeat Elkhorn City, 55-42, in Wednesday's opening contest.

Flannery scored 17 of her game high 23 in the second half. Ten of those came in the third quarter.

Tammy Hall, a senior forward, added 11 points and Youlanda Keathley tossed in nine to assist in the winning effort.

After Johnson Central, the region's top rated team, easily disposed of Elkhorn City, the Bobcats made it a perfect night for Betsy Layne High School.

The Bobcats, led by Todd Sturgill's 15 points, turned back Morgan County, 67-45. Duran Newsome and Sam Stewart each scored in double figures. Newsome tossed in 14 and Stewart added 11. Kevin Spurlock and Barry Hamilton each scored eight points.

Morgan County has been regarded as one of the top seven teams in the 16th region, but after falling behind in the second quarter, the Cougars were completely dominated by Betsy Layne.

The Bobcats, with the win, finished with a split in their two panorama games. They lost by seven points at Johnson Central earlier in the pre-season.

Elroy Harris, Eastern Kentucky's sensational sophomore, had one of his biggest games ever to lead the Colonels to one of their biggest victories ever.

Harris ran for 161 yards and four touchdowns as Eastern ripped rival Western Kentucky University, 40-17, Saturday night at Hanger Field in Richmond.

The Colonels, having won two Division 1AA titles since 1979, were on the first leg of repeating when Western popped up. Eastern, over the years, has developed a hate relationship for the Hilltoppers.

That made Saturday's win just a bit sweeter.

With the victory, Eastern advances to the quarter-finals where they go up against Northeast Louisiana.

Northeast is 10-2 on the season and playing in the playoffs for the first time ever. The Colonels are 9-2 and trying to reach the championship game for the fifth time in the past eight years.

Tim Brown is the media's favorite but Craig Heyward led the nation in rushing and Gordie Lockbaum has captured the football imagination of the total nation.

Brown, a wide receiver, kick returner, running back for Notre Dame, is a multi-talented performer who is near the top in the nation among all-purpose yardage.

Brown has rolled up 1,844 total yards this season and this past Saturday was given the Walter Camp award for being the country's premier college football player.

The Walter Camp Award isn't as note worthy as is the Heisman Trophy, but Brown, averaging 170 yards per game, is also the front-runner for that award.

Lady Bobcats Face...

(Continued from Previous Page) Henry said. "Underneath we'll be strong, and if we can get the ball inside, we can score. I don't think anyone in the region can stop Sandy one-on-one, and if they go after her too much then Tammy and Yolanda can score."

Henry is expecting hard work and experience to give her squad that added boost needed to maintain past tradition. But winning this season may be tough in the 58th district.

"I think Wheelwright will come along," Henry said. "Coach Eversole is a good coach, and she has done a real good job with them."

"Conn, at Allen Central, is a good player and if they play together and keep good attitudes then they will have a strong team."

Prestonsburg High School: Winning a district championship and a share of the conference title built a new fire under Lady Blackcat basketball one year ago. Bridgett Clay led Prestonsburg to a 16-10 record and is counting on another strong campaign.

Despite losing their top two scorers, Prestonsburg has tried and true players returning. Karen Frasure is called 'one of the best players in the region' by her coach, and last year's numbers proved that.

Frasure averaged in double figures offensively while hauling down 12 rebounds per contest. Clay is quick to point out that her center will probably increase her scoring numbers because of the added role.

"She'll probably be scoring more this year because she will be given that role. Shon (Burchett) and Paula (Harris) did most of our scoring last year so I think all our players will be scoring more points this year."

Michelle Clemmons returns to give Prestonsburg experience at the point guard spot and Carolyn Short brings back the outside shot and added experience.

Amy Hicks, a sophomore, also saw action as a starter and reserve player last year. She is back and, according to Clay, gives Prestonsburg a scoring threat on the inside and from the outside.

Clay is high on several young players but also says that it will take time for them to develop into contributing players.

About March should do it. At least it did last year.

McDowell High School: "I was planning on having a good year, but things have kinda fallen apart," McDowell coach Meridith Slone said in summing up his Lady Daredevil's situation.

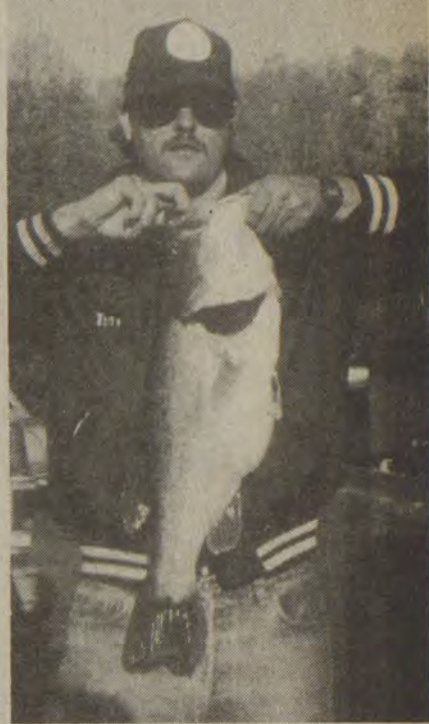

McDowell returns all their starters, but injuries have slowed them already. Leading scorer, 15 points, and rebounder, eight boards, Gwen Stegall is nursing pulled ligaments in her knee, and freshman Lora Bryant hurt a wrist.

Both are expected to return but probably not in time for the pre-season tournament.

The Lady Daredevils also have talent on hand in the form of junior guard Gloria Mullins. Last year she battled Stegall for team scoring honors, tossing in about 13 a game.

As soon as Slone gets the injured troops back, he is expected to also have a district challenger. Not all is enjoyable in Lady Daredevil basketball, but they could make the 58th district a five-team race.

The Sporting Times

All right already. Don't you think you've taken this Bobby Knight thing just a bit too far?

Knight, a basketball coach, made a decision that involved his team, Indiana, and now it is supposed to develop into a major foreign affairs tragedy.

During a recent exhibition game with Russia, Knight, after being nailed with his third technical foul, pulled his team off the floor.

Soon after that he was being criticized by everyone who knew what criticism is. A move made in a college basketball exhibition game suddenly became an international event.

Suddenly the idea of sportsmanship took the front seat. All of a sudden people tried to convince us that winning wasn't as important as being good representatives of our United States, setting sound examples, and putting values in front of victories.

Maybe in a grade school sporting event, or in a little league baseball game, these items are front runners in the priority lineup.

But in college basketball or football? Forget it, guys.

The media took pot shots at Knight. So did his university. Knight was reprimanded. Knight was criticized.

"Anyone who hasn't made a mistake in the past two years write me a letter," Knight said in responding to the adverse attention his actions brought.

One writer promised the Russian team that Knight wasn't representative of all the United States. Who cares? Do you care if the Russians felt that they were treated badly?

Who cares that Bobby Knight didn't like playing the Russians? Did it really hurt the United States when Bobby Knight said that the Russians had no business playing in the US?

The two country's governments haven't declared war on each other lately, and although he has the ability to, Bobby Knight won't either.

And as far as putting sportsmanship in front of winning? Only in your dreams.

That same writer mentioned sportsmanship, something Knight doesn't have, but Bobby Knight does what he was hired to do—win basketball games.

We all love to criticize. It's the American way. But I, for one, had rather let Knight slide by and let the Russians play elsewhere.

Knight may not be the class of American colleges, but the Soviet National Team isn't exactly the spreaders of good cheer.

The team, on their trip through the US, exchanged gifts with their American counterparts. One a poster, included a historical description of Soviet basketball awards. The poster also read 'the Americans are no longer the myth of the basketball court,' referring to the Russians' Olympic victory over the United States in 1972.

There you go. Let the dog come into your own back yard, take your bone, then laugh about its taste.

Russia and America, Gorbachev and Reagan, together they bring out the worst in each other. Basketball games aren't the answer either.

And that sportsmanship stuff, it's important, or it should be, but to whom. We all talk about it. We all long for it, but the day is far off when losing is accepted because someone is good for a school's or team's public image.

Nobody loves a loser, and losers rarely keep their jobs.

Earle Bruce taught us all about winners and losers and how well we rate sportsmanship with wins. Bruce, through the glory years at Ohio State, was a respected coach. Known as one of college football's best. Bruce led the Buckeyes to winning season after winning season.

Then came 1987. Ohio State was struggling through a sub-par season and all of a sudden Bruce had mishandled a situation several years ago.

Early last month the veteran head coach was dismissed from Ohio State. Soon after, Ohio Governor Richard Celeste said Bruce was fired in part because of the way he handled Art Schlichter and the former quarterback's gambling habits.

Schlichter played at Ohio State from 1978 through 1982. Five years after Bruce mishandled the gambling problem he was fired.

Not playing by the rules and setting bad examples are reasons for dismissal, especially if you start losing five years afterwards.

Does class and sportsmanship really have anything at all to do with college athletics? We would all like to think so, but at the same time we all must face that ugly reality that tells us that college athletics would sell its soul and grandmother for wins.

If class was considered into it then the press around Lexington wouldn't be after Jerry Claiborne's job.

The papers try to tell him how to coach and the television stations are sure fans want him fired.

Jerry Claiborne, if he didn't write the book on class, has read it several times.

Coaches seldom get fired because of their actions, reactions, or behavior. The success of their job is judged on a win-loss percentage rather than how many players earn degrees.

An NCAA championship and financial income has replaced fair play and personal honor as top priorities.

How bad are you, Bobby Knight?

Don't condemn Knight, because he doesn't like playing Russians. Don't condemn Bobby Knight for throwing a chair. Don't condemn Bobby Knight at all. He is winning basketball games. That is what his employers want.

SHOT DENIED: Henry Webb draws the foul but denies Jackson County a basket during action Saturday night. McDowell won the game in overtime.

SHORT SPORTS

The Heisman Trophy will be given this Saturday at 5:30. CBS-TV will air the event.

Craig Heyward, a 280-pound tailback for Pittsburgh, led the nation in rushing but isn't flashy nor is he a favorite with the major media outlets.

Gordie Lockbaum is, but plays for Holy Cross, a Division IAA school. Lockbaum has been called a throwback to the golden years, because he plays both offense and defense. That isn't the reason he is being considered as a Heisman favorite. The thing about Lockbaum is that he excels on both offense and defense as a back.

Lorenzo White, the flashy and successful Michigan halfback, is also expected to pull in many Heisman votes but probably not enough to derail Brown.

The Floyd County Conference's Pre-season Tournament will tipoff tonight at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse.

Last year's tournament champions, Bobcats and Lady Bobcats, will take on Prestonsburg the first night's games. The girls will play at 6:30 and the boys follow at 8.

Thursday night the other first round game is scheduled to be played. Wheelwright, the host school, will be playing Allen Central.

McDowell drew the bye and will play the winner of Wednesday's contest Friday night. The championship game is scheduled for Saturday night.

The Big Four Classic will be held, for the first time, this Saturday afternoon in the Hoosier Dome.

Considered to become the most exciting and popular four-team tournament this side of the final four, the Big

Cards Open Season Against Notre Dame

Denny Crum
U of L Coach Denny Crum, just 12 victories away from 400 career wins, has a proven record as one of the nation's finest basketball coaches. He is one of only eight coaches ever to win two NCAA championships. A former assistant under UCLA's John Wooden, Crum has a 388-128 career coaching mark entering his 17th year, all at U of L. His .752 winning percentage entering the season ranks him fifth among active coaches and 12th on the all-time list. He has guided the Cardinals to 20 or more victories in 14 of his 16 seasons at U of L. Since his arrival at Louisville, the Cardinals have advanced to the NCAA Final Four on six occasions, including four of the last eight years, and he directed U of L to the 1980 and 1986 NCAA Championships. Crum has an 0-1 record against Notre Dame and Irish Coach Digger Phelps.

Louisville in Opener
The Cardinals have posted a 47-26 record (.644 winning percentage) in all-time season openers (34-12 home, 8-11 away, 5-3 neutral). U of L Coach Denny Crum has a 9-7 record in openers while beginning the season at home only twice in his 16 seasons. In its opening contest last season, the Cardinals lost to Northeastern 88-84 in overtime in the opening game of the Great Alaska Shootout.

Record Book
Pervis Ellison enters his junior season needing just 20 points to become the 35th U of L player to score over 1,000 points in his career. Only two Cardinals—Wes Unseld and Butch Beard—scored more in their initial two seasons at Louisville. Herbert Crook, 27th on the all-time scoring list with 1160 points, is nine points away from passing Bobby Brown (1169 pts.).

Series History
Notre Dame holds a 6-5 edge over Louisville in the series between the two schools. Notre Dame won the last meeting 79-71 in the 1973 NIT and the Irish have won the last four games of the series. The two teams first met on Jan. 5, 1952 with Louisville claiming a 65-59 victory in Freedom Hall.

Four Sign With Cards
Four impressive high school standouts have signed national letter-of-intents to continue their basketball playing careers at the University of Louisville. New additions to the Cardinal roster for the 1988-89 season include Everick Sullivan, a 6-5 swingman from Hillcrest High School in Simpsonville, S.C.; Cornelius Holden, a 6-7 forward from Crenshaw High School in Los Angeles, Ca.; Derwin Webb, a 6-6 swingman from Lawrence North High School in Indianapolis, Ind.; and Mike Case, a 6-6 forward from Pendleton (Ind.) Heights High School.

Sullivan averaged 22 points, 8.4 rebounds and 2.6 assists in leading Hillcrest to a 26-4 record and the Class 4-A semifinals last season. Holden averaged 11.6 points, eight rebounds, three assists and three steals for last season's 19-5 Crenshaw High School squad which won the Central league and reached the semifinals of the Los Angeles city championship. Webb averaged 14 points, nine rebounds and led his team with 48 blocked shots at Lawrence North posted a 14-10 mark and won the Indianapolis sectional last year. Case averaged 14 points and 10 rebounds and blocked 54 shots on a balanced Pendleton Heights squad that finished within a 15-8 record as runner-up in the Anderson sectional last season.

Tough Schedule
The Cardinals will once again face one of the nation's toughest schedules during the 1987-88 campaign. Fourteen opponents on the Cardinals' schedule participated in post-season tournament play last season, including 11 in the NCAA Tournament. Not including the Rainbow Classic field, U of L's opponents posted a collective 429-225 record last season (.656 winning percentage) and the list includes eleven 20-game winners.

Six Cards Gain U.S. Amateur Competition
Four of U of L basketball players and two members of its coaching staff participated in U.S. amateur competition over the summer. Head Coach Denny Crum directed the United States basketball team to a silver medal in the Tenth Pan American Games in Indianapolis, Ind. U of L assistant coach Jerry Jones served as an assistant on Crum's staff for the Pan American Games. Pervis Ellison was the second leading rebounder and No. 4 scorer for the silver medalist U.S. Pan Am squad. LaBradford Smith was a member of USA Junior National team that captured the silver medal of the III FIBA World Championship for Junior Men in Bormio, Italy. Felton Spencer and Jerome Harmon (ineligible for the 1987-88 season) participated in the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Next Game
Louisville travels to Lexington, Ky. to face state rival Kentucky on Saturday, Dec. 12 at 1:30 p.m. in the CBS-televized contest. Notre Dame hosts Boston University on Dec. 8 at 7:30 p.m.

Last Meeting
Notre Dame's John Shumate connected on a perfect nine-of-nine field goal attempts, totalling 19 points and nine rebounds, to lead the Irish past Louisville in the quarterfinals of the NIT. Junior Bridgeman and Bill Butler scored 17 points apiece to pace the Cardinals in the game played in New York's Madison Square Garden. The Irish shot a sizzling 57 percent from the field that held the Cardinals at bay. Dwight Clay chipped in 18 for the Irish—including 16 in the second half—and Gary Novak had 16 points and 12 rebounds. Ken Bradley came off the bench for the Cards to score 15 points.

Single Game Tickets On Sale Dec. 7
A limited number of single-game tickets to the Cardinal's first eight home contests in Freedom Hall will go on sale beginning Dec. 7 at the U of L Ticket Office in the West Wing of the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center. Tickets for U of L games against Cleveland State, Indiana, Eastern Kentucky, South Alabama, Georgia Tech, UCLA, Western Kentucky and Purdue will be available on a first-come, first-served basis. Tickets are $10 each. The remaining eight games on the Cardinal home schedule will go on sale Jan. 26. For further information, call the U of L ticket office at 588-5151.

Roster Addition
Shannon Fraley, a 6-1 freshman guard from Pulaski County High School in Somerset, Ky. has been added to the Cardinal roster after walking on to the team this fall. Here is a brief biographical sketch of Fraley, who will wear No. 15 this season.

Cards Ranked High In Preseason Polls
With six of its top seven scorers returning from last year's Metro Conference championship unit, many publications have picked Louisville in a lofty position in pre-season rankings. Here's a look at where some of the publications have ranked the Cardinals:

No Friends In Sight For Pre-Season Event

Its history is long and its tradition is rich, but to find a friend of the pre-season tournament would take a long search.

For a coaching friend, that is. Considered as one of the top early tournaments in the area, the pre-season tournament has had a history of excitement and entertainment. From a fan's standpoint, it is unequalled. From a coach's standpoint, it is useless.

"We've already got a round-robin schedule in the conference. We play everybody twice with a possibility of a third time in the district tournament. You beat each other up all season long so what's the use in playing each other in pre-season," Prestonsburg coach Gordon Parido said.

As an introduction to the Floyd County Conference, the pre-season tournament sets the standard for the remainder of the season and establishes who might be the 58th district's strongest teams.

"It gives you an early favorite," Parido continued. "It kinda tells you who to shoot for. It gives you a front-runner, a team to beat in the district. If there is a positive side to it then that would be it."

Parido's Blackcats will open the tournament Wednesday night, taking on Betsy Layne at 8.

"I don't know a thing about Prestonsburg," Bobcat coach Craynor Slone said. "I've seen Gordon's teams play in the past and they always play hard. We've got our work cut out for us."

It was in last year's pre-season tournament that Slone began his surprising initial campaign as Betsy Layne head coach. Slone's Bobcats stormed into the tournament and coasted out with a first place trophy.

Slone has seen pre-season tournaments, played in some, and coached in another, still, he doesn't like the present format.

"When I played at Wayland back in 1955 we had it. It's tradition, and I guess that's the way they look at it," Slone said recently.

"I don't like it as a coach. We just play each other too many times," Slone continued. "Last year we played Allen Central four times and all of them were one-point games. They won the one that counted. Of course all of them count, but I would've traded all three of ours for their one."

Allen Central's victory came in last season's district tournament.

"If we would have made it to the finals in the regional tournament then we wouldn't have played each other five times. That's a bad situation to get into."

But it is those classic confrontations between local schools that keep the pre-season tournament fat financially and alive in the hearts of all county basketball fans.

Not many coaches like it, but all of them realize its importance. Winning is not necessarily a necessity, but it is expected and accepted.

"It shows us where we stand as far as the district is concerned," McDowell coach Johnnie Ray Turner said. "We look at it kind of like the district tournament. We'll go into it hoping to win."

Turner's Daredevils, 3-0 on the season, drew a bye and will play the winner of the Prestonsburg-Betsy Layne game. Tipoff for that matchup is set for 8 p.m. Friday night.

This year's event will be held at the Prestonsburg High School Fieldhouse with Wheelwright High School as host.

The reason most often given as the one for not liking the pre-season tournament is that county schools play each other too many times.

Coaches agree that while local schools are busy beating each other up, teams around the 15th region are getting to know each other with head-to-head matchups plus improving themselves by playing tough competition from across the Commonwealth.

Parido and Turner agree that the event serves as a solution to the question of who is the best team in the 58th district.

The past two seasons Betsy Layne has won the pre-season tournament gone on to capture conference titles. Both years, they made it to the regional tournament.

Another point proven. One point isn't even debatable. The Floyd County Conference's Pre-season Tournament is filled with excitement, talent, and intense rivalries.

The tourney tips off with Prestonsburg and Betsy Layne doing battle Wednesday night. Wheelwright and Allen Central are scheduled to play Thursday, and McDowell will play the winner of Wednesday's contest. That matchup is set for Friday night.

The schedule for both the women's and men's teams are the same. The pre-season tournament may clear the confusion surrounding the 58th district's women's lineup.

Coaches in the county say the conference is wide open. The tournament this week is expected to clear matters up just a bit.

Coaches don't exactly like it but since the end of last season they have been preparing their teams in anticipating an effort to try and entertain the fans. The first test comes Wednesday in the pre-season tournament.

He began his career as a Vocational Agriculture teacher, was a pupil personnel worker, high school principal, finance officer, and has been superintendent of Bullitt county schools for 21 years. Along the way he spent four years in the U.S. Navy.

Through the years, Mr. Hatfield has been the recipient of several awards. In 1974, he received the KSBA Dupree Award, a statewide award given annually to one superintendent for creative educational administration. In 1975, he received the KASA Leadership Award which is an award given annually to one superintendent for exemplary educational leadership ability. He was the Bullitt County Citizen of the Year in 1979, and in 1983, was recognized as outstanding administrator by Phi Delta Kappa. He has also been active in his local community. He is a member of the Bullitt County Chamber of Commerce, a member and past president of the Shepherdsville Lions Club and a deacon and Sunday School teacher in the First Baptist Church, Shepherdsville. He is married to Margaret Martin Hatfield, and they have two children, Karen and Scott.

PC Dance Theater To Stage Peter Pan

The musical version of Peter Pan will be presented by the Pikeville College Dance Theater, Saturday, December 5, at 7:30 p.m. in Faith Chapel on the Pikeville College campus. This presentation is comprised of Pikeville College students and members of the community.

Besides the evening show, matinees have been scheduled and are completely sold out to the area schools. Tickets for the Saturday evening performance will be available at the door or from cast members.

The musical was choreographed by Anna Maria D'Antonio, of Atlanta, Ga., who was the artist in residence at Pikeville College during October. Her visit was made possible by a grant from the Kentucky Arts Council.

WE ARE WINNING

In the 1930s, less than one in five cancer patients was alive five years after treatment. Today, that figure has improved to about 4 out of 10 patients. When normal life expectancy is taken into consideration, it is about one in two. With early diagnosis and prompt treatment, that figure will continue to improve, says the American Cancer Society.

Christmas In Berea Festivities Underway

Historic Berea, now considered by many as the "Crafts Capital of Kentucky," is all geared up to celebrate their hometown "Christmas in Berea" festivities.

The most spectacular weekend will be the first weekend in December (4-6) when people from miles around will gather again to experience Berea's Second Christmas Twilight Parade and Bazaar December 5, at 5 p.m. This year the parade caravan will consist of more than 85 units and will be headed up by the Grand Marshall, Phyllis George Brown. Mrs. Brown, a former Miss America and Kentucky First Lady, has been an active promoter of Berea for many years. Mrs. Brown's efforts led to the creation of the Craft Marketing Division of the Kentucky Department of the Arts, and drew much national media attention to Kentucky's crafts. The end of the parade will be highlighted by the traditional lighting of the community Christmas Tree by the Mayor of Berea. Santa Claus will be on hand for the young and young-at-heart.

The entire weekend of December 4-6 will be laced with activities for all. There will be over 15 art and craft shop open houses, special sales by Berea College and the Benchmark Gallery, and a Berea College Craft Tour and Tea sponsored by Boone Tavern. Evening activities will include the performances of "The Sea" by Edward Bond by the Berea College Theater Dept. (December 3-5, 8 p.m.) and a Christmas Concert and Sing-a-long on December 6, 7:30 p.m. at Union Church.

The holiday festivities will continue through the month of December with more holiday open houses, craft demonstrations, and the 50th Christmas Country Dance School sponsored by the Berea College Country Dancers (December 26-31).

The Appalachian Museum will feature an exhibition of unique artifacts through January 3.

To receive a complete schedule of events and information on accommodations, contact the Berea Tourism Commission, Berea Welcome Center, North Broadway, Berea, Ky. 40403, (606) 986-2540.

Controlling Front-Wheel Drive Car in Skid

Since the majority of cars on the market are front-wheel drive, Blue Grass Automobile Club-AAA encourages drivers to become familiar with their one "flaw"—the tendency of front-wheel drive cars to initiate a skid and their difficulty in recovering from it.

AAA recommends some driving tips for controlling these vehicles:

* Use identical tires on all four wheels (same type, brand and tread configuration). Air pressure, too, should be the same. Drivers have better control in front-wheel drive when traction is equal on all four wheels.

* Front-wheel drive sometimes provides a false sense of security because the car pulls more efficiently through snow, causing drivers to go too fast for conditions. Slow down well before taking a corner or curve.

What to do when you find yourself in a skid?

* Put the car in neutral (or depress the clutch). Either technique equalizes traction on all four wheels.

* Steer the car in the direction you want the front to travel.

* Just before the rear end stops skidding, counter steer. If you need to stop quickly on ice, use "threshold braking"—put the car in neutral and squeeze the brakes until just before they lock up, then let up.

In the meantime, practice skidding and recovery no matter what kind of car you own. It's the best way to feel confident on the road this winter.

During this National Adoption Week remember "It's up to you. Adopt a waiting child." For more information call 886-8192.

Pharmacy Footnotes

By HAROLD COOLEY

SON OF CODEINE

Codeine has been prescribed for over one hundred years to suppress coughs. This opium derivative desensitizes that area of the brain which controls the muscles that are involved in the coughing mechanism. Because it is a narcotic that can cause addiction, however, federal law limits codeine's availability. Any cough suppressant that contains 1.8 percent or more of codeine requires a written one-time-only prescription. Because of the restrictions regarding its use, pharmaceutical companies have developed cough-suppressing, over-the-counter remedies that contain no codeine at all. Many contain the synthetic dextromethorphan. It is non-addictive, yet is considered to have a cough-suppressing power equal to that of codeine.

COOLEY APOTHECARY can provide you and your family with your total prescription needs as well as any over-the-counter remedies you require. Our entire staff at COOLEY APOTHECARY keeps up-to-date on the latest developments in our industry. Complete patient profiles are maintained here at No. 2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. MasterCard and Visa honored plus we welcome all third party payments. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat. 9-4.

HANDY HINT:

Codeine also relieves pain and controls diarrhea.

There's Old-Fashioned Fun In Family Holiday Baking

Memories of Christmases past play an important role in our holiday traditions. It's a time of joy, families being together, and warmth. For many, the most vivid memories of the season are those spent in the warm kitchen where the aroma of holiday baking lingers.

It's often a time when children are first introduced to baking as they help mom roll out the dough for sugar cookies or watch grandma pull a date nut loaf hot from the oven.

"A Family Christmas," the new holiday recipe leaflet from Martha White Foods, is designed for all members of the family who enjoy baking together during the yuletide season.

Baking with children combines learning and creativity in a fun way. With the supervision of an older person, children can learn basic baking skills and practice their reading and math while enjoying this special time together.

There are some basic points to remember when baking with children. Before you start, you'll need to 1) read through the recipes, 2) gather all equipment, using as many unbreakable items as possible, and 3) measure all ingredients before you start.

Because Christmas brings out the child in all of us, "A Family Christmas" leaflet offers a chance for the entire family to gather around the kitchen table and create a charming gingerbread village.

Underground Protection Serves As Info Center

Kentucky Underground Protection, Inc. has opened a new office in Louisville that will serve as an information center for the state.

The non-profit organization of 36 member companies provides—at no cost—locations of underground utility lines and pipes.

"The organization was formed to prevent damage to underground facilities by providing information on where it is safe to dig to contractors as well as backyard gardeners," said South Central Bell Manager, Art Willett.

Some of the larger member companies include South Central Bell, Texas Gas Transmission Corp., General Telephone Co. of Kentucky, Louisville Gas and Electric, Western Kentucky Gas and Ashland Pipeline Co.

The toll-free number for Kentucky Underground Protection, Inc. is 1-800-752-6007. The center is open Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m.

GINGERBREAD
(For houses and cookies)
• 1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup Snowdrift Shortening
1/2 cup molasses
1 egg, lightly beaten
3 cups Martha White All-Purpose Flour
1 1/4 teaspoons allspice
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 teaspoon salt

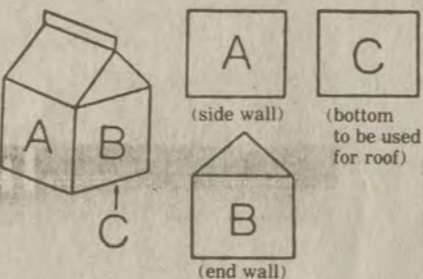

Preheat oven to 325°F. In a large saucepan combine sugar, shortening and molasses. Heat to boiling, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat; cool to room temperature. Stir in remaining ingredients in order listed; blend well.

FOR HOUSES: Grease and flour an 11x17-inch jelly roll pan. Turn dough out on lightly floured board or pastry cloth and knead until dough is smooth and pliable. Place dough in prepared pan and roll out as evenly as possible, forcing dough into corners with fingers, if necessary. Bake about 15 minutes or until firm and deep brown. Let cool in pan 5 minutes. Place paper patterns on cake (Step 1) and cut out pieces using small sharp knife. It is very important to cut pieces while cake is very warm.

FOR COOKIES: Roll out dough on lightly floured board or pastry cloth to 1/8-inch thickness. Cut with cookie cutters. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet 10 to 12 minutes, or until deep brown. Cool and decorate as desired. Makes 5 dozen, 2 1/2-inch cookies.

DECORATOR ICING
2 egg whites
2 1/2 cups confectioners' sugar
In large bowl, beat egg whites until frothy and slightly thickened. Beat in sugar, 1/2 cup at a time. Continue to beat for about 5 minutes, or until stiff.

EASY GINGERBREAD HOUSES
You will need:
3 small empty cartons: 2 cartons (1/2 pint each) whipping cream or orange juice and 1 carton (1 pint) half and half.
Paper sacks
1 recipe Gingerbread for Houses
1 recipe Decorator Icing
Assorted candies for decoration (peppermint sticks, caramels, red hots, gumdrops)
STEP 1: Place each carton on a brown paper sack and trace sides A, B and bottom C. Cut out pattern pieces.

STEP 2: Prepare Gingerbread for houses.

NOTE: House pieces must be cut out while cake is very warm. For each house, cut 2 each of pieces A, B and C. You may want to cut a window and door for each house. Cool pieces on wire rack.

STEP 3: Prepare Decorator Icing. Glue Gingerbread pieces to cartons using icing. Frost outside of each house with remaining icing. Use your imagination and creativity to decorate houses with candies.

For your copy of "A Family Christmas" which includes recipes for Paintbrush Cookies, Christmas Tree Cake and Little Date Nut Loaves, write the Martha White Kitchen, P.O. Box 58, Dept. K-5, Nashville, TN. 37202.

These charming gingerbread houses are simple to create with small dairy and juice cartons.

Volunteers Needed To Help With Tax Refunds

The Internal Revenue Service is seeking volunteers in Kentucky who can help people in the community with their tax returns. The IRS will provide free training and will assign the volunteers to one of the many VITA (Volunteer Income Tax Assistance) sites located in community centers, libraries, churches and shopping malls.

Being a VITA volunteer, and helping other people with their taxes, is not only a rewarding experience, but is a very worthwhile community service. Four or more hours per week from late January until April 15 will be required.

Call the IRS VITA coordinator at 582-6259 in Louisville, or from elsewhere in the state, call toll free 1-800-424-1040 and ask for Louisville extension 6259 for more information.

It's up to you. Adopt a waiting child. Learn more about how you can make a difference by calling 886-8192.

Miss McCoy has also won other titles in various beauty pageants held earlier this year.

EXERCISING WITH A COLD

It's wise to determine whether it's a cold or flu. When you work out with a cold, says Good Housekeeping in its December issue, your respiratory muscles have to work harder to pump oxygen to your lungs. But if you go easy, you shouldn't do yourself any harm. With flu, your safest bet is to hold off until you're well, and even a day or two after, so that your body can recover fully.

Brooklawn, Inc. announces the appointment of Patty Lou Davis, of Lexington, as the Development Coordinator for the future Brooklawn Bluegrass Adolescent Center. Miss Davis was formerly the Associate Executive Director for sixteen years for the Kentucky Chapter Arthritis Foundation.

The location of the new 40 bed treatment center will be on ten acres of land at 3850 Tates Creek Road, Lexington, serving patients from Central and Eastern Kentucky.

All contributions will remain at the Bluegrass Center.

Persons seeking information on Brooklawn or those wishing to volunteer their services or financially support the new center may do so at the new Brooklawn Development Office, Zandale Shopping Center, Arcade, Suite 8, 2220 Nicholasville Road, Lexington, Kentucky 40503. Phone (606) 275-2105.

SKATE INTO SHAPE

Glide your way to fitness! Ice skating burns calories, builds aerobic strength, and improves coordination, Good House-keeping points out in its December issue. Some tips: Don't borrow skates, buy your own and buy the best ones you can afford. Be sure they fit well; they should be snug when worn with only one pair of light-to-medium-weight socks. And before you step onto the ice, try this stretch: Holding the back of a chair, rise to your tiptoes, drawing your body up first and heels last. Reverse, with heels coming down first. Repeat 10 times.

CHRISTMAS REMEMBERED

By Marybelle G. Caudill

Since Thanksgiving has passed, can Christmas and Santa be far behind? As a substitute teacher at Stumbo School, Grethel, I've been asked frequently if I believed in/had ever seen Santa Claus.

Oh, yes, I believe Santa is "real" and here's why: Many years ago in my community, there was a little girl who was quite sick. She spent much of her time in the hospital or in bed at home. There was little time or opportunity for school. Several people, including the doctor, discussed the situation. It was decided she should be taken to Pennsylvania to live with her father's relatives. That just might make her well again.

She had several aunts, uncles, a few girl cousins, nearly grown, and boy cousins aplenty who could help to meet her needs. The boys and their friends almost surely wished her to be in Timbuktu or another far-away place—just anywhere—when they were discussing swapping comic books, taws (marbles), or building go-carts. She knew about boys and their secrecy. After all, she had two brothers who acted pretty much the same way when a conversation/meeting didn't include girls—period. (A third brother hadn't yet arrived). Before year's end the little girl spent some time with each of her relatives.

Christmas was coming but despite all the shopping trips and early delivery of gifts from home, she was still sad. Christmas at home meant there would be a gathering of three generations at Mommer's home—even though there was no electricity. The tree was always so large that at least one of them must have graced the heavens at twilight before it became ours. At some point every member of the family would string popcorn, cut designs from cardboard to be covered with bits and pieces of salvaged aluminum foil, and along with the decorations left from other years that Santa must surely have visited grandma "Mommer's" house early on his appointed rounds.

The Christmas eve dinner was served a bit early—always. In the event of late hunger pains, there were always baked potatoes from under the grate, milk and sandwiches in addition to special treats for special occasions.

It appeared Santa arrived a bit ahead of schedule. Because the alkaline battery from the radio had long since been placed in the oven. The heat recharged the battery thus guaranteeing Christmas music for a couple of hours. The roaring fire had long since given way to dying embers which in turn created the eerie shadows of a "dancing" tree on the walls. The lamps had been refilled, the wicks trimmed, and the smoked globes were cleaned of their soot in the event of an emergency. The grandchildren had had at least one tiff about which toy belonged to whom before they were forced to call it a night. Any well wishers who just happened by could scarcely help noticing beds filled to capacity. You know that happens when four young'uns and four toys occupy space intended for two.

Her father's birthday was on Christmas Day. Hopscoching her memories, she couldn't recall who hugged first or harder; however, they both would certainly lose this year.

The child could almost smell the turkey/ham that was placed in the oven when the battery was removed and the oven cleaned. The pumpkin and mince pies were placed in the warming oven earlier in the evening.

The memories of the by-gone days, pleasant though they were, often brought tears to her eyes. And there's no doubt about it, she would rather have been home.

At that particular point in time the little girl attended a small, three-room/teacher country school. A very lovely lady served as both the child's teacher and principal. Ironically, she preferred to be addressed as "Miss Mary."

As the holiday drew nearer, the twelve classmates kept asking the mountaineer if she believed in Santa. The answer usually depended upon the child's degree of homesickness. Certainly the nays had the majority vote. Justification! Perhaps, because when she looked at the colorfully wrapped boxes, not a single one read—"From Santa."

Just a few days before vacation, the child went home for lunch. She returned to find a letter on her desk. It read, "From Santa" and contained a special invitation for her to visit Christmas Village located on the square in an adjoining county. In addition to accepting food, clothing, and toys for the needy, many things were made there.

Anyone and everyone could visit the "Village" at specified hours to talk and/or get his/her picture made with Santa.

It wasn't until years later, even though Miss Mary provided the escort, that the little girl learned that her twelve fellow students bought the "Invitation Only" for her to see the entire project.

On December 26 there was the first seasonal heavy snow. With that came a new experience. A ride on ole Doc Miller's horsedrawn sleigh that was complete with Doc and his stories of yesteryear. You know that he managed to get his horse and sleigh where his car wouldn't go—and he put great stock in his T-model. He even kicked a wheel so hard because it refused to obey his command that he broke his foot, and nobody went anywhere in his contraption for a long while.

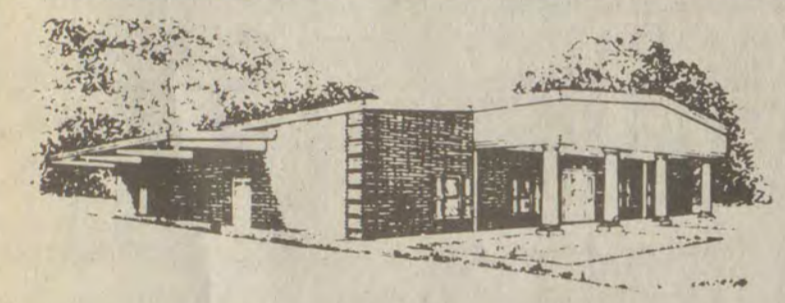

Then came the boys at the points again. All the little girl had to do was help to corral the stock that mysteriously got out. Then her cousin Buzz would give her a ride down the Carl Dean Hill that seemingly took one in to tomorrow. It never seemed to end.

Then her aunt allowed the little girl to make homemade bread and rolls at a tender age—never a chore—just a treat.

My children, these are just some of the things I learned and enjoyed, because I doubted. Never again, little ones; it doesn't pay. Santa appears in different ways to different people.

All my love,
Miss Mary
December 1987

P.S. If you get to talk to Santa before I do—please don't forget the 800 telephone number and remind him Miss Mary would love an Alf doll.

Tax Filing Time To Be Confusing For Kentucky Taxpayers

By G. Stephen Pack, CPA

All Kentucky taxpayers will find that two different, non-conforming tax codes must be followed when preparing their 1987 tax returns. This results from the fact that Kentucky has not yet adopted the new law (Tax Reform Act of 1986) choosing instead to apply the Federal tax code as it existed on December 31, 1985. The result will be a confused Kentucky taxpayer.

Some differences that currently exist between Federal and Kentucky law follows:

|   | FEDERAL   | KENTUCKY  |
|---|---|---|
| Long Term Capital Gains   | 100% TaxableNo deduction allowed.   | 60% deduction allowed.  |
| Long Term Capital Losses  | May offset ordinary income dollar for dollar up to $3,000.   | May offset ordinary income dollar for every two dollars of losses up to $3,000.                                      |
| $2000 IRA Contribution Deduction   | Amount of deduction limited depending on Taxpayer's adjusted gross income.                          | Fully deductible regardless of Taxpayer's adjusted gross income.  |
| Moving Expense  | Deductible as an itemized deduction.  | Deducted as an adjustment to income.  |
| Unearned Income of a Child Under 14   | Unearned income of a child under 14 is taxed at parent's marginal rate.                             | All income is taxed at child's rate.  |
| Sales Tax   | Not deductible.   | Fully deductible.   |
| Consumer Interest   | Not deductible. Phase-in provision.   | Fully deductible.   |
| Miscellaneous Deductions (such as tax preparation fees and investment advice) | Deductible only to the extent amount exceeds 2% of AGI.   | Fully deductible.   |
| Employee Business Expenses  | Unreimbursed expenses deductible to extent amount exceeds 2% adjusted gross income.                 | Unreimbursed expenses fully allowable as an adjustment to income.   |
| Business Meals & Entertainment  | 80% deductible.   | Fully deductible.   |
| Corporate Liquidations  | Recognition of corporate level gains and losses on liquidating sales and distributions of property. | No gain or loss recognized at corporate level on gains and losses on liquidating sales and distributions of property. |
| Mortgage Interest   | Deductible on two residences only.  | Deductible on all mortgage loans.   |
| Income Averaging  | Repealed.   | Allowed.  |
| Scholarships & Fellowships Grants   | Grants received by non-degree candidates are taxable.   | Grants received by non-degree candidates are not taxable.   |
| Medical Expenses  | Deductible to the extent amount exceeds 7.5% of adjusted gross income.                              | Deductible to the extent amount exceeds 5% adjusted gross income.   |
| Unemployment Compensation   | Fully taxable.  | Taxable only if certain income criteria are met.  |

Small Game Hunting Outlook Said Good

During the month of November several hunting seasons open in Kentucky, including deer, rabbit, quail, grouse, squirrel, duck, goose and furbearers.

Immediately following the November 14-23 deer gun season, small game season will open Nov. 24. Small game season is the most popular with Kentucky hunters.

According to Jeff Sole, upland game program coordinator, small game hunting for rabbit, quail, grouse and squirrel should be good during the upcoming season.

"On a statewide basis, quail are up 24 percent over last year and rabbit populations have increased 15 percent," said Sole. "Mild winters over the last two years have probably been the primary factor for the increases in quail and rabbit numbers," added the biologist.

Sole said that although grouse populations are still down statewide, there are some areas in the eastern part of the state where grouse are doing well.

"We've passed the lowest point in the downward trend experienced over the last few years and are now on the upswing in grouse numbers," said Sole.

The most dramatic increases in quail populations were recorded in the Eastern region at 47 percent, the Bluegrass region at 41 percent and the Central region at 33 percent. Western Kentucky showed a 9 percent increase.

Rabbit populations were highest in the Western and Eastern Pennyrroyal region and the Knobs/Outer Bluegrass region. These areas showed a 34 percent increase over last year. The Eastern Coal Field region reported a 13 percent increase, which along with some other areas that decreased from last year averaged a 15 percent statewide increase.

The Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources is conducting a statewide survey on quail and grouse by collecting wings and tail feathers from hunters.

"We're requesting hunters to participate in the survey by mailing in wings from harvested birds. Postage-paid envelopes for the survey are available from state conservation officers and district wildlife biologists," said Sole.

Information collected from the study of the wings and tail feathers aids in charting the progress of quail and grouse populations and managing the resource. Hunters participating in the survey receive a report of the information collected during the season.

If you are interested in having a bird for Thanksgiving dinner, but not necessarily a turkey, a four-day duck season will be open during the holiday weekend Nov. 26-29. Duck hunting requires a valid Kentucky hunting license, a federal duck stamp and Kentucky duck stamp.

Duck hunting will be on the point system again this season. Canvasbacks are a protected species and may not be taken at any time during the duck season. Goose season in the Eastern Zone opened Nov. 8.

The furbearer season, hunting and trapping, and the deer crossbow season also opens Nov. 24. Informational brochures on all hunting seasons and public hunting areas are available by writing: Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Division of Public Relations, #1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, Ky. 40601.

Dates for the school are July 3-30, 1988. The school will be a residential program for 120-150 students from across the state, and residential host for the program will be Bellarmine College in Louisville. In addition to receiving intensive technical training, students will also have the opportunity to explore and develop their creative abilities. # For Balanced Soil Structure Work Fields Wet, Experts Say Soil compaction has been a concern among agriculturalists, and there are misconceptions about it, says Dr. Lyle Stephens, a Deere & Company engineer specializing in soil mechanics.

The concern has grown as problems have appeared where they didn't exist before, as equipment has gotten larger and farming practices have changed. Today, soil scientists like Stephens are shedding new light on the matter.

"Some farmers think that tillage causes most of the compaction in their fields, but this is usually not true, for a number of reasons," Stephens says. "Soils tend to be fairly dry at the time they are being tilled, so they aren't easily compacted. Also, the tillage itself breaks up compaction in the upper soil levels where it often occurs."

"Fall chisel plowing, ideally in dry conditions, can do much to break up compacted soils. Deep moldboard plowing can also be an ideal way to break up compaction in the top 12 inches of soil."

"The main thing is to know your own fields, their compaction status and requirements for proper care."

Ideally, soil is about 50 percent pore space. Under perfectly balanced conditions, the pore space would be about 50-50 air and water. Soil compaction upsets this balance. Compaction usually starts at the surface and extends down through the soil. An outside pressure such as a combine tire forces soil particles closer together. That compaction reaches down to depths determined by pressure, total load, and soil moisture.

When soil is wet it compacts more easily because the water between soil particles acts as a lubricant, allowing them to move against each other more easily. Less outside pressure is required to squeeze the particles together.

Although almost any soil can be compacted tightly with enough pressure, compaction occurs most easily in soil having high clay content or a mixture of clay, silt and sand.

Compaction can be a serious problem because heavy wheel traffic can reduce or eliminate root growth in 60 percent of the upper 12 inches of a clay loam soil. Forcing soil particles tightly together eliminates the pore space needed by plant roots if they are to penetrate the soil effectively so they can draw forth moisture and nutrients.

By contrast, a balanced soil structure allows air, water and roots to move freely through the soil, creating a healthy environment for microorganisms and plant life.

"The time pressures of large-scale farming often force farmers to work soils during less than ideal conditions," Stephens says. "One part of a large field may be in excellent condition, while another part is still too wet. With today's more powerful equipment, a farmer can go ahead and work those wet areas. And in order to keep on schedule, he does."

"Part of the soil compaction problem has developed as farmers have moved to earlier and earlier planting dates.

"The problem can be serious even with no-till. The no-till farmer is forced to go out in the early spring and pull a heavy planter loaded down with seed, fertilizers and chemicals through fields that are often too wet to work, particularly with heavy equipment. To make it even worse, the soil dries more slowly because of the heavy surface residue present with no-till."

Research studies back up what Stephens says. An Illinois study has shown that both no-till and reduced tillage systems exhibit more soil compaction than conventional tillage. A 10-year Minnesota comparison of tillage systems on clay loam has also shown greater soil density (compaction) with no-till.

Harvesting during wet weather can also lead to severe soil compaction problems. "Farmers use bigger, heavier harvesting equipment than in the past," Stephens says. "Axle loadings can reach 20 tons or more."

The main determinant of compaction is axle load—how much weight is pushing the tires down into the soil. Less weight per axle will lessen compaction problems, but mounting dual tires won't help. Duals simply distribute the same weight over a larger area. This does decrease the depth of compaction, but it does not reduce the total amount of soil affected.

"Four-wheel-drive tractors, or those with front-wheel assist, can help overcome compaction by not having to be ballasted as heavily to reduce wheel slippage to pull a given load," Stephens says.

"Large field sprayers carrying full loads of water, fertilizer applicators loaded to capacity, heavy trucks or grain trailers, ballasted tractors—all of these machines can cause problems."

"One solution is to use additional axles on such equipment whenever possible. If axle loads are restricted to the range of five to eight tons per axle, most of the soil compaction will be confined to the top 12 inches of soil, where tillage can help overcome it."

"At any time of year, one of the most important anti-compaction steps is matching tractor size and weight to draft load. Don't overload your tractor by over-ballasting to pull an implement too big for it."

Good tillage management can help prevent soil compaction, Stephens says, adding that flexibility is the key. Tillage methods depend on the type of soil being worked—even a single farm may have several different soil types. Local field and weather conditions also play an important role.

"In glaciated areas of the Midwest, soils are highly variable," Stephens says. "I think every farmer there has seen soils that look like they don't belong, that are completely different from the rest of the soils on the farm. You have to have a flexible tillage system to meet those different situations."

"Other farmers may not have such a wide variety of soil types, but weather may fluctuate widely from year to year. It's a mistake for a farmer to lock himself into a single, rigid way of tillage. A flexible tillage system can deal with changing conditions."

Atty. General Sues Chrysler For Odometer Disconnections

The Consumer Protection Division of the state's Attorney General's Office has filed suit in Franklin Circuit Court against Chrysler Motors Corporation for violations of the state's consumer protection and odometer laws, according to Attorney General David L. Armstrong.

Armstrong told reporters yesterday at a press conference in Frankfort that Chrysler maintained from 1949 to 1986 a policy which allowed company personnel to drive newly manufactured vehicles for personal use. "Our suit stems from allegations that Chrysler either left unconnected odometers in these vehicles or replaced them with new odometers before offering them for sale to consumers as new cars," he said.

He added that the suit further alleges that, on occasion, Chrysler personnel who drove those newly manufactured vehicles were involved in accidents which caused damage. "In these instances, Chrysler repaired the damaged vehicles, reconnected the odometers and shipped the vehicles to dealerships throughout the country including Kentucky, never advising either its dealers or its customers that those vehicles had been damaged or had been driven with disconnected odometers," he said.

According to Armstrong, Chrysler maintains that records of such use by company officials were kept only during the last 18 months in which the policy was in effect, from July, 1985 to December, 1986. "We have reason to believe that, during that period, 351 Kentuckians purchased Chrysler vehicles in which odometers were disconnected or replaced," he said, "and two Kentuckians purchased vehicles which were damaged in accidents and then sold as new."

He added that his staff would also try to get further documentation from Chrysler. "Kentucky's Consumer Protection Act was adopted in 1972 and the Odometer Act in 1976," he said. "We really can't go after purchases made prior to the laws' enactments, but we will be looking for violations under current law."

Armstrong said that, in the lawsuit, he is seeking restitution for consumers, a permanent injunction prohibiting Chrysler from such acts in the future, and civil penalties ranging from $5,000 to $7,000 per violation.

KET Series Presents Land Between Lakes

Enjoy the beauty of a natural wildlife refuge when "West Kentucky" visits the Land Between the Lakes. The episode airs Tuesday, December 8, at 7:30 p.m.

The weekly series "West Kentucky" is produced in cooperation with S & W Productions of Paducah.

Visitors to Land Between the Lakes have long marveled at the natural beauty of the area. The federal government purchased the 170,000-acre site in 1963 through the TVA (Tennessee Valley Authority). The peninsula was created in 1944 by building Kentucky Dam which backs up the Tennessee River, and erecting Barkley Dam in 1966 which backs up the Cumberland River. A canal was built to assist traffic between Kentucky Lake and Barkley Lake.

"West Kentucky" viewers also visit The Homeplace: 1850 and see an 1800s wedding. Then it's off to The Empire Farm which features educational classes on home canning and farming techniques. Traditional farm animals roam about the "farm" which also contains a petting zoo.

Farm Manager Ron Westphal comments on the operation as part of the Land Between the Lakes. The program is interspersed with scenes of the planetarium from Golden Pond Visitor's Center and an interview with Scott Seiber, superintendent of information and visitors' service.

"West Kentucky" is a KET production.

Who Can Prevent Teen Suicide? YOU CAN.

When a friend talks of suicide: LISTEN

Let your friend tell you of his situation and his feelings. Don't give advice or feel obliged to find simple solutions. LISTEN and try to imagine how you'd feel in his place.

BE HONEST

If your friend's words or actions scare you, tell him or her. If you're worried or don't know what to do, say so. Don't be a cheerful phony.

SHARE FEELINGS

At times everyone feels sad, hurt or hopeless. You know what that's like—share your feelings. Let your friend know he's not alone.

GET HELP

If you keep this secret you may lose your friend. Perhaps you and your friend can think of a helpful adult he or she could talk to. If not, talk to someone yourself—a parent, teacher, counselor of the Crisis Line—and find out what to do next.

Your friend turned to you because you could be trusted to help. You CAN help, but not alone.

'Island Records' presents label's finds — and flops

By Denise Gorga

Showtime's "Island Records: The All-Star Story," which airs Monday, Dec. 7 and Saturday, Dec. 12, spotlights one of popular music's more eclectic labels. The special marks the 25th anniversary of the label, founded in 1962 by British-based Jamaican Chris Blackwell.

Bob Marley

Using video and concert clips, the hourlong special highlights Blackwell's greatest "finds." They include Steve Winwood, who Blackwell discovered as a 15-year-old singing rhythm-and-blues in British clubs during the mid-1960s, and who is enjoying a resurgence today. The early '70s are covered by clips of FM radio stars Free and Cat Stevens (now an Islamic monk), who now seem like faded reminders of an era gone by. And we see clips of Roxy Music and Robert Palmer, who helped to build the label's reputation for innovative dance music in the late '70s. Most important, the special points up Island's role in introducing American audiences to Jamaican reggae — mostly in the person of Bob Marley, whose music is given a prominent place here, but also through such acts as Jimmy Cliff and Toots and the Maytals.

What we don't need in this special, though, are reminders of Blackwell's mistakes. Host Grace Jones delivers her narrations in a pleasant Jamaican accent, but when she proclaims, "In the '80s came the most visual act ever — me," and sandwiches her video hodgepodge between clips of Roxy Music and U2, the gap in credibility is matched only by the discrepancy in talent.

• On Saturday, Dec. 12, Showtime premieres this season's second episode of "Super Dave." The comedy series, which follows the new adventures of the bumbling "Bizarre" stuntman, has the distinction of being the first cable spinoff.

And spinning — along with tumbling, bouncing and crashing — is what "Super Dave" is all about. A kind of visual and philosophical cross between Evel Knievel and Chevy Chase, Dave Osborne (played by Bob Einstein) alternates botched daredevil antics with big-name guests.

But while "Super Dave" has spun off, it may rapidly lose momentum. How long can Dave bungle predictable stunts before they become, well, predictable?

Semi-reclusive detective loved orchids and food

By Toni Reinhold

Did William Conrad once play a detective who was semi-reclusive and a lover of orchids and food? If so, what was his name and who played his associate? - S.W., Fairburn, S.D.

William Conrad

Conrad played the title role in "Nero Wolfe," which aired on NBC as a mid-season replacement in 1981. Wolfe was a wealthy and lazy detective who puttered in the greenhouse while his sidekick, Archie Goodwin (Lee Horsley), hunted for clues. The series was based on the Nero Wolfe mystery novels, written by Rex Stout.

Who was the host of the old "Beat the Clock" show? I'm sure that it was Jan Murray, but my son-in-law says it was Bud Collyer. - H.H.L., Dunlap, Ill.

The original TV quiz show "Beat the Clock," which aired from 1950 to 1958, was hosted by Collyer. He had hosted the show when it first aired on radio in 1949, and stayed with it when it moved to TV. He also hosted the daytime version, which aired on CBS in 1957 and 1958 and on ABC from late '58 until 1961. A syndicated version produced from 1969 to 1971 was hosted by Jack Narz and then by Gene Wood. And it returned to TV for a short time in 1979 and 1980, hosted by Monty Hall.

The movie "Idiot's Delight" intrigued me many years ago, but I can't remember who starred in it. Can you tell me some details about it? - G.A., Rapid City, S.D.

This 1939 film, based on Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, starred Norma Shearer, Clark Gable, Edward Arnold, Charles Coburn, Joseph Schildkraut, Virginia Grey and Burgess Meredith. It depicts a mixed bunch of characters staying at a hotel near the Italian border on the eve of World War II. The film is perhaps best known for Gable's song-and-dance routine, set to the song "Puttin' on the Ritz."

Who played Cliff Warner on "All My Children"? What happened to the character? - M.J., Goldsboro, N.C.

Cliff, played by Peter Bergman, is now back in the "AMC" story line. The character had been presumed dead.

'thirtysomething' looks at comfortable lives

By Paul Elie

Producers Marshall Herskovitz and Ed Zwick can't make up their minds about "thirtysomething," which airs Tuesdays on ABC.

Timothy Busfield

"It's about things people encounter in their lives," says Herskovitz.

"It's not about the events in their lives, though," says Zwick.

"It's the continuing situations."

"It's inimically autobiographical."

"It's us projecting ourselves."

"It's an idea that comes out of two heads."

On this they agree. Together, Herskovitz and Zwick are a symbiotic pair not unlike Michael (Ken Olin) and Elliott (Timothy Busfield) on the series. One will finish the other's sentence, clarify his point, explain what he really means.

"Each show," Herskovitz says, "is a meditation on something..."

"An idea," says Zwick. "Such as, what are your obligations to your friends? How well does a couple know each other?"

We begin with the idea and then go to situations.

"Marshall has a theory," he adds, "that there's a boundary in our society between people who are comfortable and people who are uncomfortable - with their lives. That's what we're trying to explore."

In this they have succeeded. While the plots of "thirtysomething" can be cloying, the dream sequences sophomoric, the series does portray realistic characters - yups almost as sensitive and narcissistic as the Y-people one meets in real life. Not surprisingly, the most venomous criticism comes from viewers who may identify with the show more than they'd like to.

"We definitely get generational reactions," Herskovitz says. "The generation in question is the most sensitive. The others seem able to just enjoy it."

The two producers met in the mid-'70s at the American Film Institute, and after working as freelance screenwriters formed their own production company in 1985.

"We had a contract to come up with a series, but no ideas," Herskovitz says. "So we decided to come closer to home, to things we've encountered in our own lives."

"It's not just us, but the cast," he adds. "Elliott, for instance, is having marriage trouble, and Timothy (Busfield), who plays him, had marriage trouble. It's based on our own situations."

"But the names have been changed to protect the guilty," Zwick says.

Lane Davies says Mason has been homogenized

By Marie Michaels

For Lane Davies, who plays Mason Capwell on "Santa Barbara," appearing in the Atlanta Shakespeare Festival's productions has become, he says, "a regular summer thing."

Lane Davies

During the past two summers Davies, a native of Dalton, Ga., took time out from his soap duties to appear in the festival's productions of such classic plays as "As You Like It," "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Much Ado About Nothing."

"I have it written in my contract that I can get out to do the festival," he says. "If I hadn't gotten that, I was prepared to leave the show."

Given his background in classical theater, one wonders how Davies came to portray the mischievous Mason. He explains that he auditioned simply because he wanted to act more often.

"I obtained the soap role through the usual channels," he says. "I was working, but not enough to really feel like an actor and not enough to keep my bank account happy. So I went on the soap."

Davies had starred in soaps before, playing Dr. Evan Whyland on "Days of Our Lives" in 1981 and 1982. But the character never caught on with daytime viewers. So it was something of a surprise when Mason was an instant hit in 1984.

"Mason is written a lot better and more consistently than Evan ever was, and that's important," Davies explains. "Also, by the time I got the role of Mason I knew my way around the cameras better than I did when I started out as Evan."

When Davies first portrayed Mason, the character was one of daytime's most delicious villains. You never knew whose life he would ruin next. But that has changed during the past eight months. He married Tori Capwell (played by Kristen Meadows), even though she was pregnant by Cruz Castillo (A Martinez). And he fathered a child for Julia Wainwright (Nancy Grahn) because she wanted a baby but didn't want to get married.

"I've been kind of upset with the homogenization of Mason of late," Davies admits. "Some of the bite has been taken out of the character. But I'm sure he'll eventually be thrown into a circumstance that will put it back in."

"We Care"

Some Expenses May Be Partially Deductible

Tax planning is important but particularly so in 1987 when the next tax law takes effect. The popular itemized deduction of prior years, personal interest expenses, will be only partially available for 1987 and completely phased out by 1991.

Both personal and investment interest are affected. For 1987, taxpayers will be able to deduct only 65 percent of personal interest as an itemized deduction.

Personal interest includes interest on such items as car loans and credit card balances. Personal interest on debt secured by a home or a second home is fully deductible with certain restrictions. Generally, the debt must not exceed the purchase price of your home plus the cost of any improvements. Any interest on excess debt is deductible only for educational or medical expenses. The remaining excess interest is subject to the 65% limitation.

Investment interest generally is interest paid or accrued on money borrowed to buy or carry investment property. Investment interest expense up to the amount of net investment income (investment income less investment expenses, other than interest) is fully deductible. If you have investment interest in 1987 that is more than your net investment income, that excess interest is subject to the 65% limitation that also applies to personal interest. Excess investment interest not deducted in 1987 because of the limit can be carried forward to 1988 and treated as investment interest in that year.

More information is in the free IRS Publication 920, "Explanation of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 for Individuals," which can be ordered by writing to the IRS Forms Distribution Center, P.O. Box 9903, Bloomington, IL 61799, or calling toll-free 1-800-424-3676.

Fraker will be joined by PBH Administrator Debbie Trimble Meadows, Dr. Mary Fox, Seminar Consultant, and James Kelly, District Director of Social Security, on the day long program.

Tips For Keeping Holidays "Lite"

Just because the holidays are coming up is no reason to throw your diet out the window. Being conscious of which foods are calorie-laden is the first step to keeping on a diet. The second is preparing low-calorie foods that are tasty and filling so that you won't be compelled to try every dessert in sight.

Sue Burrier, foods and nutrition specialist with the University of Kentucky Cooperative Extension Service, said that crisp and greasy or oily foods, smooth and thick foods (sauces, cream or butter), sweet and gooey foods (candy, regular soft drinks) and alcohol are those to avoid if you're counting calories.

If you already know which foods to avoid but the temptation for all those sweets and rich foods is just too much, Burrier has some tips to help steer you away from those diet busters.

Don't approach holiday feasts after fasting all day. A light snack will keep you from gorging when you arrive at a party.

Never stand at a buffet or hors d'oeuvre table; take one or two items and move across the room to chat with someone.

Keep in mind that alcohol has calories. A shot (1 1/2 ounces) of bourbon has 120 calories. If egg nog is served, limit yourself to one punch cup, which has 335 calories. Better yet, have a glass of Perrier or club soda with a twist of lime. A Virgin Mary (a Bloody Mary without liquor) is an excellent dieter's drink.

If you want to try everything at a buffet, take a fourth or a third of the average serving size.

Don't overeat or take seconds just to please an insistent hostess.

Don't eat out without planning; considering the type of restaurant and the alternatives it offers. When dining out don't order items with sauces, gravies and salad dressings. Ask for side orders so you can control the amount you consume. Choose broiled or grilled meats, not breaded or deep fried.

Don't neglect exercises or physical activity.

If you're planning a party, add several low-calorie foods to your menu. Keep in mind that low-calorie foods usually are bulky (salad greens), thin and watery (tomato juice), and crisp but not greasy (vegetables and fruit). Vegetable and fruit trays served with dips or fruit dressing are always popular low-calorie foods.

If you want to serve punch, choose a mixture of unsweetened fruit juices, which contains fewer calories than punches with sugar.

For something other than a cheese or onion-type dip, try the following ham and spinach dip. The recipe has reduced fat because of the lean ham and low-fat dairy products.

- Ham and Spinach Dip
- 1 1/2 cups ground 93% lean ham (about 1/2 pound)
  - 1 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach, thawed and drained
  - 1 8-ounce package neufchatel cheese
  - 1 cup plain low-fat yogurt
  - 1/2 cup light mayonnaise
  - 2 green onions, chopped (include tops)
  - 1 teaspoon "light" seasoning or other reduced sodium seasoning blend
  - 1 loaf round rye bread or French bread

In a mixing bowl, combine ground ham, spinach, neufchatel cheese, yogurt, light mayonnaise, green onions and seasonings. Refrigerate until ready to serve. With a sharp knife, cut top 1/3 off round rye loaf or French bread. Hollow out loaf, leaving a 1-inch thick shell. Cut bread into 1-inch cubes. Store bread cubes and shell in plastic bags until ready to serve. Just before serving, toast bread shell in 400 degree oven for eight minutes (this prevents the dip from soaking into bread shell). Place the ham and spinach mixture in the bread shell. Serve with reserved bread cubes and vegetables. Makes about 4 1/2 cups dip.

CAUSE FOR CONCERN

The use of smokeless tobacco, including snuff and chewing tobacco is increasing at an alarming rate in this country, especially among young people. The American Cancer Society recommends regular oral exams by your physician or dentist. Cancer and other oral conditions related to the use of smokeless tobacco, are ugly and can be severely disfiguring.

WKU Students Exceed 1987's Expected Goal In Student Phonothn

Western Kentucky University students far exceeded their goal at the end of the 1987 Student Phonothn.

Phonothn Chair Ann Toni Kereiakes of Bowling Green announced students raised $53,500 during the sixth annual event which concluded November 19. Goal for this year was $39,000.

"I am absolutely elated," said the junior corporate communications major. "With the economy the way it is, and with persons already having contributed to Western in so many other forms, we really had a job to do. I feel wonderful!" she said.

Kereiakes said 45 to 50 students called Western alumni each of the 15 evenings of the Phonothn which began Nov. 1 and ran Sunday through Thursday evenings. More than 75 student organizations were represented.

The WKU Student Phonothn is the University's largest moneymaker for unrestricted funds to provide students and faculty with special grants and incentives for higher education.

SWAMP FEVER

COPYRIGHT 1987 KVMA

Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association
Kentucky has more horse shows than any other state in the nation, and on the show bill for every one of them you'll find the stipulation that all participating horses must present a certificate of a "negative Coggins test." The same is true of race tracks.

The requirement for the test and the cooperation of owners in complying with the requirement is proof positive of what owners and veterinarians can do to control a disease that can devastate an animal population. The key is cooperation.

The Coggins test is designed to identify, and therefore make it possible to isolate, horses which carry the virus which causes Equine Infectious Anemia (EIA), an acute or chronic disease of horses, mules and donkeys, also known as "swamp fever."

Cause of the disease is a virus which will grow only in equines, and once an equine is infected with the virus it will be infected the rest of its life. The virus is quite hardy, resistant to freezing and drying, and is transferred from animal to animal by either biological or mechanical vectors. Blood-sucking insects are the biological vectors, while unsterilized surgical instruments (often hypodermic needles) and common use of equipment which can cause cuts and abrasions are the usual mechanical vectors.

The acute stage of the infection can cause rapid death. More often, the disease takes a chronic form detectable only by the test.

Intermittent fever, depression, progressive weakness and loss of weight along with swellings of the legs are signs of the disease, but they may not always be present.

There is no specific treatment nor vaccine available at the present time. Control of the disease, which can be a serious threat if uncontrolled, depends entirely on prevention.

Control measures include destruction of diseased animals with the bodies being burned or buried deeply, or absolute isolation from non-infected animals; control of biting, blood-sucking insects; strict sterilization of surgical instruments, hypodermic and bleeding needles, tattooing instruments and syringes. Stables in which infected animals have been kept should be cleaned and disinfected.

Though the disease was first reported in the United States in 1896, EIA is not a serious animal health problem in the U.S. today, even though there is no treatment or vaccine.

If you think your veterinarian is hung up when he insists on the value of preventive medicine, take a look at the control of EIA. It is entirely preventive—and highly successful. And an excellent example of what you and your veterinarian can do when you work together.

Christmas In Gratz Park Will Be Held December 6

Christmas in Gratz Park—a Lexington holiday tradition for 12 years—will be held Sunday, December 6, from noon until 5 p.m.

One of the most popular features of Christmas in Gratz Park each year is the tours of the historic homes and churches of one of Lexington's most beautiful and well-preserved neighborhoods, according to Vickie Robertson, chairperson of the event.

"In addition to the annual tours of Bodley House, Christ Church, Hunt-Morgan House and more than a dozen other private homes and businesses in Gratz Park, we will give tours for the first time of Maxwell Place, the home of the president of the University of Kentucky," said Robertson. "First Presbyterian Church also will be giving a special stained glass window tour."

The daylong entertainment includes musical and dance performances by the Suzuki Players, the Sayre School Choir, the Lexington Chapter of Barber Shop Quartets, the University of Kentucky School of Dance, the Transylvania University Choir and others. Also featured will be clowns, carriage rides, comedy and, of course, Santa Claus.

Admission to Christmas in Gratz Park benefits the Bluegrass Trust for Historic Preservation.

Caucus Club To Meet

The film "Bringing the Third World to Campus and Community" will be shown. The film was produced by the Consortium for International Cooperation in Higher Education. The meeting is free and open to the public.

TV DISH OWNERS MUST BE TREATED FAIRLY

Few developments have affected our lives more profoundly than has the continuing revolution in telecommunications.

We might quarrel about some of the effects of this revolution. But I doubt that anyone would seriously argue that some Americans should be denied equal access to the images and ideas that bind us together as a nation.

Yet we hear repeated complaints to the effect that some two million American families, including many in rural Kentucky, have had trouble tuning in those images and ideas. I refer to those who have bought home dishes to pick up television signals transmitted by satellite.

Many of these families have paid $2,000 or more for home dishes because they are not reached by cable systems. They have seen their satellite signals scrambled by programmers who often -- and increasingly -- are financially interlocked with multisystem cable operators. And they have encountered far too many obstacles in their efforts to purchase a full range of unscrambled programs at competitive prices.

Industry leaders deny widespread suggestions that monopolistic programmers have been allowed to go too far in protecting cable systems from home-dish competition. They have maintained that dish owners' problems will go away as the telecommunications revolution matures under existing legislation. But we have seen only modest improvement, and even that would not have been possible in the absence of congressional pressure on the industry.

Dish owners have grown impatient. And so has our Senate Commerce Committee. The committee last week approved S. 889, the Satellite Television Fair Marketing Act, of which I am a co-sponsor.

This bill requires programmers to offer dish owners the same programs they sell to cable customers. It also requires them to set reasonable standards for potential program distributors and to refrain from discriminating against anyone meeting those standards. This key provision could overcome the apparent unwillingness of programmers to deal with third-party, non-cable companies offering to put together program packages for dish owners.

Under the bill, the Federal Trade Commission would study the competitiveness of satellite programming markets. The Federal Communications Commission would look into the price and availability of descrambling devices and the availability of network signals to viewers in remote areas.

In addition, the bill requires public television to make at least one clean satellite feed available to dish owners. And, among other things, it allows aggrieved parties to take satellite communications cases to court.

I strongly believe that a consensus is developing for action on this issue. We don't want to see re-regulation of a fledgling satellite communications industry. But we do want to send a strong message to programmers. That message is that home dish owners, along with all other segments of this important industry, must be treated fairly.

Video Tape Available For Retired Taxpayers

A new 18-minute videotape, titled "The IRS Tax Guide to Retirement," is now available from the Internal Revenue Service. The tape addresses elderly Americans' most pressing tax questions and the impact of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

The IRS recognizes that retired taxpayers may have some special concerns about their taxes because of the special nature of their incomes or because their financial circumstances may have changed.

"The IRS Guide to Retirement" is presented in a newsy question and answer format. T.V. journalist Marie Torre and retired IRS Public Affairs Officer Ron Fleissner answer specific questions from several retired taxpayers and discuss effects of the 1986 Tax Reform Act. Among the topics discussed are filing requirements, new standard deduction amounts, pensions, taxability of Social Security, IRAs, home sales exclusion, medical deductions, tax credit for the elderly and sources of free information.

The videotape is available for local showings to groups and organizations in VHS, Beta or 3/4-inch videocassettes. Kentuckians wishing to borrow the tape should call the IRS Public Affairs Office for Kentucky toll free at 1-800-424-1040, or write to P.O. Box 1735, Louisville, Kentucky 40201. If calling from the Louisville area, please call 582-5376.

VA Representative To Be Here Today To Aid Vets

Betty Blair, representative of the Kentucky Center for Veterans Affairs, will be in Prestonsburg, today, Wednesday.

She will be here to assist veterans, their families, their dependents, or beneficiaries in the presentation, proof, and establishment of all claims, privileges, rights, and other benefits which they may have under federal, state, or local laws.

The office will be located in the National Guard Armory on the Auxier Road from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Fighting Medicaid Fraud: How You Can Help

By Attorney General David Armstrong
The Medicaid Program was designed to insure quality health care for the poor and disabled. Unfortunately, some health care providers abuse the system and claim millions of dollars to which they are not entitled. As the chief legal officer of Kentucky, it is my responsibility to stop these criminals who take advantage of the program by engaging in fraudulent schemes.

The Medicaid program is built on trust. Medicaid expects the information contained on the claim form submitted by medical providers to be accurate and truthful. Although the overwhelming majority of Medicaid providers are individuals of integrity, honesty and professionalism, unfortunately, there are those who do take advantage of the program.

The simplest type of Medicaid fraud involves a medical provider who bills Medicaid for services which were never rendered. For example, a complete physical examination might be billed to Medicaid, when in reality the provider/physician did not perform these services but merely said hello to the recipient/patient, or a dentist might bill Medicaid for fillings or root canals which were never performed.

Other examples include billing for a more expensive service than what was provided, duplicate billing for a service and supplying generic drug substitutes for more expensive drugs billed to Medicaid.

The Division of Medicaid Fraud and Patient Abuse was designed to protect the integrity of the Medicaid Program by investigating allegations of fraud. Fraud is one of the greatest threats to Medicaid. If you know of irregularities in Medicaid billing, please contact my Medicaid Fraud and Patient Abuse Division, 909 Leewood Drive, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601 or call 502-564-5962.

Working together, those who continue to jeopardize the Medicaid program through dishonest and illegal conduct can be identified, punished, and deterred.

Make Homemade Gifts With Dried Apricots

You never go wrong when you give a gift from the kitchen. Here are two quick and easy recipes that make ideal gifts. And because both are packed with California dried apricots, they are high in Vitamin A and potassium and also contribute Vitamin C, iron and fiber.

This simple Apricot-Pineapple Jam takes advantage of the sweetness of dried apricots, crushed pineapple and apple juice to make a delightful, not-too-sweet spread with little added sugar.

APRICOT-PINEAPPLE JAM

- 1 can (12 ounces) frozen apple juice concentrate
- 10 ounces California dried apricots, coarsely chopped (about 1 3/4 cups)
- 1 can (8 ounces) crushed pineapple, including juice
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice

Combine ingredients in saucepan. Bring to a boil; lower heat and simmer for about 20 minutes, stirring frequently, until mixture has thickened to desired consistency. Spoon jam into hot sterilized jars, filling to within 1/4-inch of top. Seal immediately with lid and screwband. Turn upright and let cool completely. Invert jars for 5 minutes to seal. Makes 3 cups. Recipe can be doubled.

This savory Apricot-Ginger Chutney, dotted with California dried apricots, onions and golden raisins, is the perfect accompaniment to succulent roasted meats. Fresh ginger and jalapeño peppers give it zip.

APRICOT-GINGER CHUTNEY

- 1 cup chopped, dried California apricots

- 1 cup chopped onion
- 1 cup water
- 3/4 cup seedless golden raisins
- 1/3 cup cider vinegar
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
- 1 to 2 teaspoons minced jalapeño pepper
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 8 whole cloves

- 2 cinnamon sticks
- 1 clove garlic, minced

Combine ingredients in saucepan; bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer about 1/2 hour, stirring occasionally. Spoon into hot sterilized jars, filling to within 1/4-inch of top. Seal immediately with lid and screwband. Process in boiling water bath as directed in general cookbook. Makes 3 cups. Recipe can be doubled.

Recognized For Excellence

Estill Thone Hall, who is a member of the engineering staff of Indianapolis GE/RCA Consumer Electronics, has been presented the 1987 Technical Excellence Award. This award was presented to Mr. Hall for the development of software to implement the RCA picture tube set-up in the Bloomington, Indiana plant. An engraved plaque was presented to him by Perry Olsen, one of the managers, who commended him on his ability to apply a rare combination of expertise in software and physics to accomplish this task. This is the second technical excellence award Mr. Hall has achieved in his past five years of employment with the company.

Mr. Hall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Estill Hall, of McDowell. He graduated from McDowell High School and received his undergraduate and graduate degrees from the University of Kentucky. His wife, Kathi, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Langley Ratliff, formerly of Wheelwright. They reside in Indianapolis, Indiana, with their two children, Jenni Kim and Jeremy Lang.

Everybody's Science...

A Breakthrough for Bottle Babies

By JUDITH McBRIDE

Bottle-fed babies may have fewer digestive problems—and their parents more peace and quiet—if a natural protein in breast milk is added to infant formula, according to researchers at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Children's Nutrition Research Center in Houston, Texas.

Lactoferrin, which literally means "milk iron," is known to help infants absorb iron from mother's milk and to protect them against intestinal infection. From new studies of laboratory rat cells, however, it appears that the protein also speeds growth and maturing of the gastrointestinal tract.

Two international formula makers have expressed interest in these findings.

Center director Buford L. Nichols heads the research, funded by USDA's Agricultural Research Service. He reports, "Infants who don't get mother's milk tend to have more colic, diarrhea, and food intolerances. Presumably, some of these problems are due to an immature digestive capacity."

"Our studies suggest that adding lactoferrin to infant formula will make it more like human milk."

He says that animals' intestines grow considerably during the first 1 to 3 days after birth. Newborn pigs, for instance, add 8 to 10 inches of intestine in that period. And studies of newborn pigs and other animals indicate that their digestive systems mature faster if they are suckled.

"This growth may not occur in infants who get formula rather than breast milk," Nichols says, "leaving them prone to chronic diarrhea and other intestinal problems."

To identify the growth stimulant, Nichols and technician Kathryn S. McKee devised an assay using rat crypt cells—the cells that generate intestinal lining. They looked for the component in human colostrum—the antibody-packed breast secretion preceding milk—that stimulated rapid division of these cells.

It proved to be lactoferrin, which is more concentrated in the colostrum. The findings were reported in the June issue of Pediatric Research.

Since then, the researchers have looked at how infant formulas based on cow's milk or soy affect rat crypt cells. Both types of formula inhibited cell division, Nichols says, but adding lactoferrin in amounts comparable to those in colostrum restored cell division to normal rates.

He and McKee have applied for a patent for this use of lactoferrin through Baylor University's College of Medicine.
