

ALL EYES, not all of them friendly, were on Terry Giese, left, who argued at Wednesday's Board of Education meeting that the consolidated Wheelwright-McDowell High School should be built at Minnie rather than at Hi Hat. Giese said the proposed Hi Hat site is unsafe. Others disputed that and said the site is central to the student population the new school is designed to serve.

Board Sees Shorter Day, Lower Pay As Way To Ward Off Budget Deficit

By Ron Marstin

"Many times, in situations like this, it's the lowest paid workers who get hurt the worst," said Asst. Superintendent Ron Hager at a meeting last Wednesday of the Floyd Board of Education. In an effort to ward off a threatened budget deficit, the board had just accepted Hager's recommendation to cut an hour and 15 minutes from the work day of all school employees without written contracts with the board.

A final decision on the workday reduction will not be made until affected workers have an opportunity to express themselves at a public hearing scheduled for 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 18, in the Prestonsburg High School cafeteria.

If it goes through as planned, it will affect about 400 non-certified workers, including cooks, custodians, teacher aides, and clerks. The only classified employees who would not be affected are bus drivers, who have written contracts with the board.

If passed, the workday cut will take effect on March 23 and remain in effect until the end of the school year. It would reduce the projected $182,000 school deficit by $49,611, said board treasurer Russell M. Frazier.

To Affect 400 School Workers

Two other personnel decisions were calculated to save the school district an additional $36,018—by shifting two workers from positions paid out of the troubled general fund to positions paid out of other funds. Social worker Brent Allen was transferred to the department of pupil personnel, a position funded by the state. Millie Morton, a clerk in the food service department, will be paid out of the food service budget rather than the general fund.

Associated savings in social security and retirement benefits realized as a result of the work reduction and transfers are put at $11,045.

Add to that the proceeds from sale of a school property at Bosco ($25,000) and savings achieved by leasing rather than buying three classroom trailers and getting a better deal than anticipated on insurance ($63,345), and the deficit should be averted, school officials said.

The decision to reduce working hours was "difficult," said Hager, but preferable to laying workers off. "With unemployment the way it is, we know it is a difficult time for a lot of people," he said.

A group of board employees vowed Saturday they would try to block the workday reduction. (See accompanying story.)

Among other business, the board approved a plan to give gifted students an opportunity to earn college credit even while they are in high school. Under an arrangement worked out with Prestonsburg Community College, high school students using college texts in advanced placement classes could earn dual credit if they pay tuition fees at PCC. Prestonsburg and Allen Central High Schools currently offer the classes.

The plan requires that at least 12 students in a class participate. It also provides for payment of qualified teachers by PCC at a rate of $200 per credit hour. Currently students in advanced placement classes can get college credit only by passing the College Board Placement Test.

New Social Services Turnaround Strives to Preserve Family Unit

By Ron Marstin

One call a day, on average, alerts social workers that a child may be suffering abuse or neglect in a Floyd home. The number of reports has risen dramatically this decade, a result of growing public attention to the problem and, in recent years, a stepped-up effort to deal with it on the part of state authorities.

If all this conjures up an image of social workers fanning out over the county to pluck battered youngsters from brutal homes, however, the image is—or soon will be—far from the truth. In a significant policy turnaround, the state's Department of Social Services (DSS) is now emerging as a champion of the family.

In town last week to explain the new policy to representatives of social service, mental health, and law enforcement agencies were Ron Moatz, DSS manager for the Fivco/Big Sandy district, and Don Filiatreau, a DSS training officer. In a Wednesday afternoon meeting in the county library, they outlined a plan adopted by the 1985 special session of the state legislature and backed by changes in juvenile law that become effective this July 1.

Essentially, the new legislative mandate urges social workers to look beyond a hurt or neglected child to the troubled family: to muster the resources necessary to keep the family intact if possible; and, where a child has to be placed in foster care for protection, to restore it to the natural family as soon as possible.

"The Department of Social Services' primary mandate is protection, and we know there will be instances when no amount of working with the family will do any good," Filiatreau said. "But the emphasis (in the new law) is on the preservation of the family. It's very explicit."

The Uniform Juvenile Code which takes effect this summer provides that, when families appear in court for a determination of whether a child should be removed from the home, both parents and children have

Left Beaver Residents Are Divided on New School Site

By Ron Marstin

Glenn Turner, of Drift, spoke for a group he called Left Beaver Concerned Citizens. But the concerns of Left Beaver citizens, it turned out, were various and sometimes contradictory.

About 50 people at Wednesday's Board of Education meeting appeared about equally divided between lower Left Beaver residents, like Turner, who expressed concern about the proposed siting of the consolidated Wheelwright-McDowell school at Hi Hat, and those who live nearer Wheelwright, who don't want the site changed.

As far as he is concerned, said Assistant Superintendent Ron Hager, who was designated by the board to run the schools while Supt. Ray Brackett is recovering from heart surgery, the decision has already been made in favor of the Mitchell family site at Hi Hat. While Terry Giese called for a public hearing on the issue, Hager said later that state rules give the local board the final say in choosing school sites.

Turner and Giese argued that the Hi Hat plans—which call for construction on two elevated terraces, each of about four acres—include unsafe highwalls and a steep access road. Giese asked the board to produce cost estimates, which he said would show that preparing the Hi Hat site would be much more expensive than preparing another site at Minnie, which he favored.

Board member Dr. Mary Hall said that site preparation cost estimates were "confidential." Ray "Shag" Campbell said that the figures would

Gibson Enters Guilty Plea Before Trial

By Louise Houghton

Minutes before his Circuit Court trial was set to begin Thursday, Frank Gibson, of Stonecoal Creek near Garrett, pleaded guilty to possessing stolen property and being a persistent felony offender. A third charge, of possessing dynamite, blasting caps and fuses with criminal intent, was dismissed due to lack of a crucial witness, according to Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen.

Gibson, 30, has been in jail here since his arrest last May 13, unable to make bail on two $20,000 bonds. On that day, police officers reportedly found him asleep on a living-room couch with four

INTO A GOBLE-ROBERTS siding, engineer Curt Risner, of Prestonsburg, eased two flatcars bearing steel girders for the new bridge, which will give that community quicker, safer egress to KY 1428. Eight beams—each 106 feet long, six feet tall, and weighing 13½ tons—were delivered by CSX Transportation on Friday from Stupp Bros. Bridge and Iron Co. in St. Louis, Mo. Eight shorter beams are due to arrive by truck.

David Webb, of Webb Construction Co. in Danville, said that, weather permitting, the beams should be set in place next month. The bridge should be completed in September, he said.

Floyd Woman Among Six Suing Excel, Charging College Has Defrauded Them

By Ron Marstin

This was to be the year Sally Justice got a decent job.

By the time she graduated from Betsy Layne High School in 1978, she was already married nearly a year. After a succession of low-paying jobs—in a restaurant, a supermarket, a department store—came three children, now aged eight, three, and 17 months.

For husband Charles, a brakeman with the C&O Railroad, work last winter was irregular. "We wanted something to fall back on," she said. A newspaper advertisement seemed to hold the answer.

A business school in Paintsville—then called West Virginia Business College, it later changed its name to Excel College—appeared to offer the kind of education that would open the door to a more satisfying, better-paying career. "Would you like a good paying office job? With high pay, good working conditions and chances for advancement? Come to us," one of the advertisements read.

"It sounded good. They said they'd help you get a job. They made it sound great," Justice recalled this week.

Just over a year ago, she signed up for a diploma course in accounting. She finishes the course this month.

The 27-year-old Ivel woman has been a top student by Excel's standards, with a 4.0 average and inclusion on the director's list. But she confessed this week she would be "afraid to do anyone's bookwork."

"I don't think I understand it well enough," she said. "I couldn't do anyone's taxes. I can't even fill out our own."

Probably she could handle the billing in, say, a doctor's office, Mrs. Justice said. But even that modest skill has not come cheap.

Youth Known As Escape Artist Draws 7 Years

By Louise Houghton

The adult trial of Tony Manns, a 17-year-old Salyersville youth described as a thief and escape artist bent on destroying property, was cancelled just before it began Tuesday when Manns pleaded guilty to three felony charges. He was sentenced to seven years in prison by Circuit Judge Hollie Conley.

He will most likely serve his time at the state reformatory near LaGrange, where his father, Johnny Manns, already is an inmate.

Manns was to be tried for the theft last July 14 of a 1986 Chevy Blazer belonging to Raymond Schoolcraft, of Prestonsburg. Earlier that same day, he had made his latest escape from the Juvenile Detention Center here. He was caught by police after a high-speed (See Story No. 9, Page 5)

Chamber Plans "Teleblitz" To Lure Members

By Joe Porter

The Kentucky Chamber of Commerce will hold a "teleblitz" membership campaign for Floyd, Johnson, and Martin counties on Wednesday, March 11 at the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn. Named campaign co-chairmen were Burl Wells Spurlock, president of First Commonwealth Bank in Prestonsburg and Dennis T. Dorton, president of Citizens National Bank in Paintsville.

"It's a sales program to invite and interest prospective members in the area," said Spurlock, who is also president of the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce. "The membership here is rather low compared to other areas of the

Slips Are Lost On Dewey Lake As Season Near

By Louise Houghton

Dewey Lake has lost one-third of its boat slips since last fall and, with the main boating season fast approaching, appears to have no prospects for replacing them by this summer.

The Terry boat dock, near the northern entrance to Jenny Wiley State Park, was a bustling center of activity last summer. Its 120 slips were filled and more boat owners were launching their vessels at the nearby ramp. The concession stand was busy selling gasoline, bait, sandwiches and soda pop.

Today the dock is a ragged skeleton, in the process of being torn down. Park officials had hoped to have a contractor ready to build a new dock and concession stand, but when they opened the bids in January, none of them was good enough, according to park superintendent Leon Russell.

As a result, boat owners will have to find some other place to park their crafts. About 35 slips are still available (See Story No. 3, Page 4)

High Court Rejects Magistrate's Appeal

The Kentucky Supreme Court this week turned down a request to review the conviction of Third District Magistrate Ed Caudill on a forged-check charge. Ned Pillersdorf, Caudill's attorney, said he would now take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Caudill, 62, received a one-year prison sentence in July, 1985 after being convicted of endorsing and cashing a $2,000 check issued by Floyd Fiscal Court in 1982 on the basis of a false claim.

Last December the Kentucky Court of Appeals rejected Pillersdorf's argument that Caudill's Sixth Amendment right to be tried by a jury in the district where the alleged crime occurred was violated when the state prosecutor moved successfully to have his case moved from Floyd to Pike Circuit Court.

RAGGED REMAINS of Terry boat dock stand forlornly above mud flats now that the lake has drawn down to its winter level.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEETS

The G.F.W.C./K.F.W.C. Prestonsburg Woman's Club's executive board met at the Emma Wells May Cultural Center, Thursday, March 5, at 7 p.m., and the club met at 7:30. Mrs. Susie Poe, president, presided at both meetings. Following the board meeting, the devotionals were presented by Mrs. Mabel Donahoe. Mrs. Dorothy Stover, program leader, introduced Larry Bailey, Director of Alumni Affairs at Eastern Kentucky University. Mr. Bailey said that there are presently 1100 Eastern graduates throughout this area, that 101 Floyd county students are now enrolled there, and that, during the past year, more freshmen from Floyd county enrolled in this school than at any other college in the state. On behalf of the club, Mrs. Dorothy Stover presented him with a gift.

Mrs. Joyce Allen, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting. It was announced that Mrs. Elizabeth Ramey would serve as treasurer of the club, replacing Mrs. Debbie Hall, who had earlier resigned.

Members of the nominating committee are Mesdames Kathryn Poe, Dorothy Stover, Boots Adams, Eileen Burchett, and Docia B. Woods, who are to select officers for the club year, 1987-88.

A discussion regarding the Miss Floyd County Scholarship Pageant, sponsored by the Prestonsburg Jr. Woman's Club, with the help of the Senior Woman's Club, was held.

Mrs. Boots Adams talked with the group concerning a tour to Hawaii, of which she is the local chairman. Persons who may be interested in this tour, scheduled to leave Lexington, July 1, should contact her for further information.

Hostesses for the meeting were Mesdames Dorothy Osborne, Maxine Bierman, Barbara Dawson, Debbie Stumbo, and Sandy Burchett. Refreshments, in keeping with St. Patrick's Day, were served to Susie Poe, Rebecca Rasnick, Clare Day, Joyce Allen, Elizabeth Ramey, Docia Woods, Fannie Runnels, Maman Leslie, Kathryn Poe, Mabel Donahoe, Roberta Sloan, Burieta Gearhart, Myrtle Allen, Dolly Pettrey, Christine Spradin, Garnett Fairchild, Boots Adams, Dorothy Stover, Eileen Burchett, and Mable Brown.

TIPS ON CHOOSING PATTERNS

No doubt, you want to set the perfect table for your new home! Here at Castle's we can help you bring together the three elements of tablesetting - dinnerware, stemware and flatware - in perfect harmony.

Our tabletop experience has taught us that a highly decorated dinnerware pattern harmonizes best when other elements of the setting are less ornate. Choose large-scale flatware if the rest of the setting looks heavy. Thin crystal looks best with fine china that is dainty, while cut crystal is lovely with either plain or ornate patterns of china.

Another tip - choose open stock patterns as you will probably need additional settings once you establish your entertaining habits.

Our ultimate goal is to help you choose patterns that you will be proud to use forever!

Parents Key To Reading Success

Studies indicate that children who are read aloud to daily and are coached by their parents become successful readers. That's why it's important for parents to be partners in helping their children learn to read, according to the National PTA.

"Parents can instill in their children a desire to read by helping them understand that we read for information, pleasure and joy," says Gloria Ryan of the National PTA in the March 1987 issue of PTA Today, the association's magazine. She offers practical suggestions to help children develop an interest in reading even before they are school-age.

The article recommends that parents talk with children more often and make it a part of everyday life. Encourage children to respond orally because oral language is the foundation for reading. It also notes that fathers especially need to make more of an effort to spend time talking to their infants.

Another way to encourage children to read is by letting them see you read and by reading aloud to them. Both promote a good attitude about reading that children can carry with them throughout their school years.

"An important finding among studies of good readers and early readers is that one person coached them in reading," says Ryan. Usually the parent is the one to do this, but siblings, other relatives and babysitters have proven to be good teachers. While reading to children, PTA Today suggests asking questions about what has been read to encourage thinking skills and stimulate the imagination.

The article points out that even when children are in school and are being taught to read formally, it's important to continue one-on-one teaching at home because a busy teacher cannot give the time needed every day for individual attention in reading.

Child development experts say it's important to make pre-reading activities for preschoolers fun, not formal. Keep activities short enough for the child's attention span, and stop reading before the child loses interest and begins to focus on playing with toys. Parents should stay away from workbooks and workbook-like materials because they are not appropriate for preschoolers and, in fact, may not be helpful for children under age 8, Ryan believes.

The author concludes that, "By reading stories, discussing what you and your child read, encouraging writing and independent reading, and presenting reading as a pleasurable activity, you can help your child become a successful reader."

Other articles in the March issue of PTA Today discuss how parents are partners in education, the school dropout problem, and how superintendents, principals, teachers and the school board can work with the PTA.

A Little Respect, Please

Rodney Dangerfield isn't the only one who gets no respect. Suddenly, Ronald Reagan is senile; his wife is, for all practical purposes, our first woman president; he is lazy and unaware of what is being done by his cabinet, and on and on, ad infinitum.

Piffle!
I am not a Republican, nor am I a Reagan fan, but I am a fairly responsible citizen of this country, and like it or not, Ronald Reagan is our president. He is just a little more than two years older than when most people voted him a second term. Sure, he made a mistake with the Iran arms deal—a jimdandy—but let's not take the whole system down because of it. The office, if not the man, deserves a little respect.

at the park's main dock near May Lodge, which has room for about 200 boats in all, Russell said. "We're taking reservations for them now at our office," he added.

But the main dock can't handle all of the boats that used to tie up at Terry, and the overflow may have to relocate at Paintsville Lake, which currently has about 60 slips available. "We're going to try to make arrangements to take care of everybody," Russell said.

Word has been circulating among local anglers that the launching ramp at the Terry dock would be closed too, but that is not true, according to Russell. The ramp will stay open as long as park officials can control the area and keep it free of trash, he said.

The lease to run the dock and concession area has been held since 1970 by Joy Terry Messer, a Martin businesswoman whose father, Henderson "Hence" Terry, held the first lease on the dock and left it his name. The dock was originally built by the state, Messer said.

Business at the dock's concessions has declined somewhat in the last few years, according to Messer, but the dock itself continued to be a popular berthing spot. Last summer, she said, "we had to turn many boats away."

But the dock had deteriorated over the years until many of its planks were uneven and rotting. When Messer's lease expired last fall, park officials decided it was time to rebuild and began advertising for bids.

When the bids came in offering less than they had hoped for, Russell said, the decision was made to simply tear out the old dock, fix the chuck-holed road leading to it, and re-advertise for bids next fall.

not be available until the state Highway Department completed an appraisal of the site.

One report put preparation costs at $60,000 for the Minnie site, $225,000 for Hi Hat, figures that Hager said later he could neither confirm nor deny. In any event, board members said, the Stumbo family which owns the Minnie site has indicated it is not willing to sell it.

Information the board did share concerned the residence of the 584 students currently enrolled at the two Left Beaver high schools. Figures compiled March 4 by the Department of Pupil Personnel indicate that 67 percent of the students live south of Hi Hat, toward Weeksbury. As regards student population, "Hi Hat is the median," Hager said.

That point was reiterated by upper stream parents, both during and after the meeting. Faye Moore, of Melvin, said of the McDowell group, "They just can't take the idea that Wheelwright gets anything" and vowed, "We will fight for our school."

Moore also drew an acknowledgment from Giese that he lives in Pikeville, an admission that provoked a chorus of derision from Wheelwright partisans. "They say we're dumb," said Moore, "but we didn't have to haul someone out of Pike county to do our talking for us."

Senior Citizens Center Gets Renovation Funds

Improvements are under way at the Wheelwright Senior Citizens Center as the result of a state grant announced recently by Gov. Martha Layne Collins.

A $9,400 grant from the Area Development Fund has been awarded to Wheelwright Senior Citizens Center, Inc. to renovate the facility for the aging. According to local officials, the grant will be used to replace the roof, install air conditioning and for other repairs at the center.

The Big Sandy Area Development District Board of Directors recommended the project for funding. The Area Development Fund is a capital projects program administered by the Department of Local Government in the Office of the Governor. The state's 15 area development districts make recommendations to the department on the basis of state law and policy and project funding.

separate rights to legal counsel, to be provided at public expense if necessary. The so-called guardian ad litem, a lawyer appointed by the court to protect a child's interests, has long been a standard courtroom fixture. But parents have routinely appeared in court without legal representation.

That will change. Under the new code, parents must be told of their rights not to incriminate themselves, to present evidence on their own behalf, to confront and cross-examine their accusers. Before a child may be taken from home, moreover, the judge must be satisfied that less severe remedies have already been tried.

Not all social workers have embraced the new directives with enthusiasm. Some, said Filiatreau, will "need to rethink" a traditional perception that their job is "to remove a good kid from a bad family."

The initial impetus for the new approach to protective services came with a 1980 federal law that made U.S. Treasury funds contingent on state efforts to keep the family unit together. "The more kids can be kept with their biological parents," Filiatreau said, "the better it is—for the children, the parents, and the taxpayer."

Workers Say They'll Fight Reduced Hours

At an Archer Park meeting Saturday, nearly 60 cooks, janitors, aides and other Board of Education employees vowed to fight a board proposal to shorten their workday by 75 minutes.

A message circulated at the meeting on behalf of an organizer for Teamsters Local 783 suggested the union might file a federal lawsuit on the workers' behalf and promised to call a meeting of workers within 10 days—that is, before a March 18 due process hearing scheduled by the board.

"I just want enough money to buy a loaf of bread," said Geneva Scalf, a cook at Prestonsburg Elementary School until an auto wreck caused her to take sick leave last November. A school cook working the maximum 7½-hour day currently earns $3.58 an hour or $26.85 a day, said Sharon Newsome, food service director for Floyd schools. Under the proposed reduction, the cook's pay would be cut by $4.47 a day.

Scalf produced a letter that non-teaching workers received last week, in which Assistant Superintendent Ron Hager explained that the work reduction was necessitated by a projected $182,000 deficit. "If they're so far in debt," she said, "how can they give principals and teachers big raises and give us nothing?"

Several speakers noted that the threatened deficit was roughly equivalent to the money spent on $10,000 raises that school principals received this year. Bus driver Neil Clevinger, who presided at Saturday's meeting, charged that a $40,000 job "was created for" Russell M. Frazier—who was named last summer as an assistant to the superintendent—even though former Supt. E. P. Grigsby, Jr., was qualified for the same job. "Let them cut them," he said.

School children "will be eating cereal and sandwiches" rather than hot meals if the workday is shortened, said Scalf, the Prestonsburg cook. Clevinger, who warned the workers that they would be expected to do the same work even if their day was shortened, urged them to resist. "If they cut your hours then work up to quitting time and, if the food is not cooked, go on home," he said. "If you're pushing a broom, leave it and go on home."

A kindergarten aide at Prestonsburg grade school worried about having to leave five-year-olds who, she said, are already under a strain from having to put in full days and frightened in recent weeks by a bomb threat and repeated fire drills. "What if they have a real fire?" she asked. "It takes both of us (teacher and aide) to button them up and count heads."

A letter bearing the name of Terry Osborne, an organizer for Teamsters Local 783, told employees that "the school board's total disregard of you and your family's life is completely unjustified."

"The board's discrimination against you and your family may be against federal law," the letter continued. "Our attorneys will need time to examine all facts in order to prepare proper litigation on your behalf."

"We are requesting you take no action until the union conducts a meeting within the next 10 days," the letter said.

Although some employees had talked earlier about a Monday morning work stoppage, that idea found no support on Saturday. Some cautioned that no concerted action should be attempted before April 1, when they expect $11-a-month union dues to be deducted from their paychecks.

A hint of what could follow was offered by the Prestonsburg cook. "You can have all the teachers and principals in the world," Scalf said, "but if you don't have janitors, cooks, and bus drivers, you can't run a school."

separate rights to legal counsel, to be provided at public expense if necessary. The so-called guardian ad litem, a lawyer appointed by the court to protect a child's interests, has long been a standard courtroom fixture. But parents have routinely appeared in court without legal representation.

That will change. Under the new code, parents must be told of their rights not to incriminate themselves, to present evidence on their own behalf, to confront and cross-examine their accusers. Before a child may be taken from home, moreover, the judge must be satisfied that less severe remedies have already been tried.

Not all social workers have embraced the new directives with enthusiasm. Some, said Filiatreau, will "need to rethink" a traditional perception that their job is "to remove a good kid from a bad family."

The initial impetus for the new approach to protective services came with a 1980 federal law that made U.S. Treasury funds contingent on state efforts to keep the family unit together. "The more kids can be kept with their biological parents," Filiatreau said, "the better it is—for the children, the parents, and the taxpayer."

Implementation of the new philosophy began in Kentucky with the 1984 appointment by Gov. Martha Layne Collins of a Protective Services Advisory Committee, which issued a report the following year. Many of the committee's recommendations were embodied that year in laws enacted by the 1985 Extraordinary Session of the General Assembly. That session and the regular 1986 legislative session restored funding lost in federal and state budget cuts between 1980 and 1984 and lifted a hiring freeze on state workers imposed earlier by Gov. John Y. Brown, Jr.

The new policy provides for more and better qualified social workers, limited caseloads, more coordination of various social agencies, and cash grants of up to $500 to see troubled families through difficult times.

Filiatreau acknowledged that the new directives will not always mesh easily with public attitudes toward child abuse and neglect. "We're not always seen as progressive if we don't go in and take people's kids away from them," he said. But a philosophical lynchpin of the new policy, he said, is reflected in a current emphasis on "empowering the family."

A handbook designed last September for use by DSS staffers lists as a goal "promoting self-sufficiency" on the part of families. It defines the protective service worker's task as "assisting families to regain or maintain family autonomy." Noting that the family is "the strongest social group in the world," Filiatreau explained that "the social worker is not just on the child's side—although that might sound good in social worker school. Our job is to join with the family, to work with the family as a system."

While the new plan calls for more vigorous recruitment and training of foster families—the goal is to recruit 10 foster families in Floyd county, which has traditionally had difficulty recruiting and holding foster families and which currently has none in service—its long-range goal is to reverse Kentucky's growing reliance on foster care and to bring the state into line with the nation. As a whole, the U.S. has seen in recent years a reduction in the number of children in foster homes, even while reported abuse has been on the rise.

Statewide, the number of reports of child abuse and neglect increased from 15,688 in 1980 to 32,713 in 1984; over the same period, reported cases of sexual abuse increased from 671 to 2,126. In contrast to the national trend, the number of Kentucky children in foster care increased from 2,595 in July, 1981 to 2,825 in July, 1984.

For the Floyd DSS office, the new state policy has resulted in the addition of a recruiter for foster and adoptive families and the expansion of the family services staff from five to six social workers. Worker caseloads—which were running as high as 40 or even 50—are now capped at 25.

While some social workers were initially apprehensive about the policy shift, training sessions in family dynamics have made them feel more confident in dealing with families, said Martha M. Hicks, supervisor of the family service office here. The new policy should help social workers focus on the underlying causes of abuse and neglect, and not just deal with the results, she said.

Where formerly one worker may have been responsible for the child, another for the parents, a single worker will now have responsibility for the family unit. "In the past, we would have the child here, the mom and dad there, but never all together, never where they could hear each other, hear where the other is coming from," Hicks explained. "Now we've got them all together. If there's a problem with a child, we have a better chance of finding out what's causing it."

The community has an economic interest in seeing the new policy work, Hicks said, because the more self-sufficient families become the less they depend on the public purse. But ultimately, she said, it's a question of putting responsibility where it belongs: "It's a family's responsibility to take care of their children."

Reply On Welco Road

In last week's paper in the "Letters to the Editor" section, I read Ms. Scott's letter on the Welco (or Tom Martin) road and her complaints about the Garrett Mini Park.

First off—the Welco road has been attended the same as all other roads have been in my district. It's been graded through both winters during the snow and it was graded at least twice this past summer. We put what gravel we can get where it needs to be put the worst. East Kentucky Utilities did some construction work on that road of laying a new pipeline and they bought gravel to fix it back, and we hauled them and put them on this road. After reading the paper Wednesday and hearing that this Welco (or Tom Martin) road was in the worst shape it has been in 21 years, I decided to go out and take a look at it. I drove an '86 Monte Carlo to the last house and back out and never drug one time. The road is full of potholes—as every dirt road is right now, but we have got to wait till the weather breaks before we start our regular ditching. We will patch the holes as we can. We've had several slips and breaks on our main school bus roads. We're behind partly due to this.

Concerning the Garrett Mini Park—District 2 hauled dirt to their infield this summer and graded their infield. The grants for these Mini Parks were filled out in the year before I took office. These were grants that had to be matched by the county. The Minnie Park got $2,000 and another park, I believe the park at Mud Creek, also received a matching grant of $5,000 from the grant and $5,000 from the county. I asked at this time why District 2 didn't get any of these. They said they were chosen out of the parks that were submitted for grants. People, there won't be a mini park at Garrett due to legislation passed by the state that the county had to own the property now before the county could appropriate money for it anymore. Since the Garrett Mini Park is owned by the schoolboard, this means there won't be anymore funding available unless the schoolboard agrees to deed the property to the county.

About Hoover Hollow on Stone Coal—The problem is there is just no ditch on the road. There has been a land dispute going on for 13 years. It's not up to me to decide who is right and who is wrong. The Fiscal Court asked the County Attorney to check back on past deeds for road right of way. I made a motion to send the road foreman out to put in permanent markers. When they establish where the road is going to be, maybe we can make arrangements to try to get the water off the road. I also drove an '86 Monte Carlo to the last house in this hollow without dragging. The road is in bad shape and it needs fixing. It's just like all the other dirt roads. People, there's places in my district where cars can't travel—it's just 4-wheel drives only. We're doing the best we can with what we have got to do with.

Should Address Challenges

I enjoyed reading both the news accounts of Harry Caudill's appearance at PCC and your editorial on his remarks.

Certainly the people of Eastern Kentucky should and are working diligently to improve those aspects of our region that need improving—economic diversification, improved roads and highways, increased educational excellence, among others. Mr. Caudill does not appear to be aware of the accomplishments, in education, for instance, that have and are being made in this region. I would suggest that he check ACT, SAT, National Merit and Governor's Cup Academic Competition records as evidence of the more recent accomplishments of the region's students and teachers.

But to "...put the past behind us" or shrug off our individualism? As a historian or cultural analyst, Mr. Caudill would have been better advised to have addressed the topic of Sex Bias, as advertised.

Still, as one who has had to follow Mr. Caudill's career-long performance as a latter day Uriah Heep, I am encouraged to believe that his current comments are not quite as caustic as they were in, say, Night Comes To The Cumberland. If so, he should be encouraged in his mellowing.

Caudill can do Eastern Kentucky a lot more good by joining those who are, indeed, addressing its specific challenges than merely railing against our heritage.

ville, Dinah Skaggs, of Staffordsville, Carol Lafferty, of Paintsville, Kim Howard, of Tomahawk, and Vicky Mayhan, of Inez—received "what could fairly be called a quality education."

At an orientation session, students were told they would be able to transfer almost all of their class credits to other colleges, Justice alleges. She asked Alice Lloyd College officials if Excel credits were recognized there and was told they were not, she said. None of Steve Arms' Excel credits were honored at Prestonsburg Community College, where he is now a student, she said.

Some of the plaintiffs were also told they could qualify for an associate's degree and learned only during the year that they would receive no degree, the suit alleges.

Wiley is named individually as a defendant. Pillersdorf charging that Excel College is a "sham" corporation. "Wiley is the only stockholder," he said.

The suit seeks compensatory damages for the plaintiffs' tuition fees and for their "lost educational opportunities, including the delaying of their entrance into the labor market," and punitive damages for the alleged fraud.

Wiley did not return a reporter's calls but Excel College Director Bob Porter said Tuesday that he "can't believe" that students are taking issue with the school. "It is so ridiculous," he said.

Porter said he did not doubt that students may have been unable to transfer credits. "But I doubt whether anyone ever told them they could," he said. "The whole thing sounds a little farfetched."

In response to charges that some students enrolled in an associate-degree program which was later downgraded to a non-degree course, Porter said he was not familiar with such a program.

Allegations that Excel did not offer quality instruction were "totally untrue," the director said. "Our teachers are very qualified. They do an outstanding job. I'd put them up against anyone," he said.

"We're not competing with four-year colleges. We're not trying to make CPAs," Porter added. "We're trying to get people ready who want to go to work, who need to go to work."

The business college opened in Paintsville two years ago, a branch of a West Virginia school first founded 105 years ago, Porter said. It currently has an enrollment of 128. A fulltime placement director "does everything she can" to see that graduates find jobs, he said.

"The only way to see (the quality of the school) is to see the skills our students learn, to see how hard they have to work and, in many cases, to see what sort of home conditions they have to overcome," Porter said.

A lawsuit filed last August by the West Virginia attorney general's office alleged that another business school once owned by Wiley had enticed students with false claims and misleading advertising.

Wiley sold Northeastern Business College in Dunbar, W. Va. last summer but was included as one of two defendants in the suit because he owned the school in 1983 when it agreed to stop making placement promises and telling students their class credits could be transferred to four-year colleges, an assistant attorney general said.

Wiley, 44, who was elected mayor of Paintsville in 1985, attributed that suit to "cheap West Virginia backwoods politics" and said it was based on a report by a biased agency that supervises colleges and universities in West Virginia as well as business schools. The state colleges and universities do not want competition from the private sector, he said.

Helen Arnold, a spokeswoman for the Kentucky attorney general's office said Monday that the agency's consumer protection division had received a single complaint against Excel College. It was lodged on Feb. 5 this year but the nature of the complaint could not be immediately ascertained, she said.

For Sally Justice, who thought she would be nearing the end of her studies at this time but faces instead the prospect of starting all over again, college has taught a hard lesson. "It has been emotionally and financially frustrating," she said.

chase which ended with the wreck of the Blazer.

He has been charged with a variety of crimes, including several counts each of arson and escape, each of which would have required a separate trial, according to Commonwealth's Attorney James R. Allen. Most of those charges were dismissed Tuesday in exchange for the guilty plea.

"We felt like seven years was a fair disposition of this case," Allen said.

The guilty plea covered three charges—the theft of the Blazer; criminal mischief, for $2,500 worth of vandalism at the detention center; and criminal solicitation, for encouraging other youths at the center to set their bedding on fire. Manns was sentenced to five years each for the theft and the criminal mischief, and seven years for the solicitation, with all terms to run concurrently.

Manns has escaped from the Floyd County Juvenile Detention Center at least five times in the last three years, and has been housed in the Floyd county jail since last September. "The Detention Center cannot detain him," wrote District Judge Harold Stumbo last fall when he ordered that Manns be tried as an adult.

"He is mature and his previous record indicated that he is a thief, escape artist and he has a desire to destroy property," Stumbo wrote after a hearing on the trial issue. "It is indeed a danger to permit him to go out on the streets if you wish to protect the public."

At the hearing, Martha Hicks, supervisor of the state Family Services office here, testified that the state's correctional facilities "were incapable of rehabilitation of this juvenile."

Commonwealth's Attorney Allen noted that Manns is a "clean-cut, very innocent-looking" youth. "You'd think that he'd never do something like this, but his record's pretty bad," he said.

Prestonsburg Park Board Gets Governor's Award for Planning

By Joe Porter

Mayor Ann R. Latta announced at Monday's City Council meeting that Prestonsburg's Parks and Recreation Board has been selected to receive a Governor's Award for excellence in parks and recreation planning. Mayor Latta said a plaque will be presented at the Kentucky Council of Area Development Districts' Spring Conference March 30 in Louisville.

Bill Ray Collins, park commission chairman, outlined projects that are planned for Archer Park this year. He said that after the old skating rink is taken down, a major clean-up will be undertaken to "get rid of the smell and bad looks of that area." Collins told the councilors that improvements have been made on the gym floor and its heating system. Plans are also going forward for the senior citizens' park and hiking trail that will circle the softball fields.

Archer Park Director Ralph Little brought the council up to date on the park's financial situation. According to Little, the park's debt has been reduced from $22,000 to $8,000 since November 1. With revenues from softball tournaments, a carnival, and an August horse show, he hopes to wipe away the debt by October 1, he said. The bank balance is currently $6,300.

"I'll promise you one thing," Little told the council. "This year you're going to have a clean park. You're not going to see some of the things you've seen in the past."

Councilor William R. Callihan made the motion, William O. Goebel seconded it, and the council passed its amended budget for fiscal year 1986-87—but not without some discussion. Mayor Latta agreed with councilor Harry Ray Porter that the budget wasn't detailed enough to understand. "It's very difficult to see where the money is being spent," the mayor said. She added that she would like the next budget to be more explicit.

In order to give the council a better understanding of the administration's needs and expenses, Mayor Latta has called for a special budget workshop March 16, with department heads bringing in their "wish lists."

"We need to list everything so we can plan for next year," Mayor Latta said. "and get a sense of where the council wants the city to go."

The city is currently paying 14 percent interest on its riverfront parking lot loan, but the council passed a motion giving City Administrator Fred A. James the go-ahead to refinance the loan at a lower rate. The administrator said the city will be erecting new signs directing parkers to the riverfront lot, which is behind the Playhouse Restaurant on First Ave, and discount parking rates will soon be taking effect.

City Attorney Larry D. Brown told the council that he has received a letter from Paintsville's City Attorney, informing him that the Paintsville Council has passed the first reading of its ordinance establishing a joint industrial development authority between the two cities. Mayor Latta said that she expects Paintsville to pass it next month.

The council approved a motion to permit RCG Company of Sallito, Mississippi to publish a Drug & Child Abuse Information Manual for the Prestonsburg Police Department. The department will receive $500 and 300 manuals to distribute to schools, libraries, the child welfare department, and other public places where people will have access to them. "It's got a lot of useful information for a lot of different people," said Police Sergeant Sue Blackburn.

The city will be holding a public auction at a date to be announced in the future. Mayor Latta will ask her department heads to submit a list of surplus property that can be sold.

Martin Is Charged In Burning Incident

By Joe Porter

Joe Martin, 55, of Estill, was released Tuesday from Floyd county jail on $22,000 bail following a shooting incident that occurred March 4 on his Martin's Branch property. Martin has been charged with wanton endangerment and interfering with a forestry employee in the performance of his duties.

According to Forest Ranger Billy Curnutte, Jr., he was attempting to put out a small fire 250 feet from Martin's house when the property owner opened fire on him with a .22 caliber rifle. "I was on the hillside with a fire rake when Martin fired at me," Curnutte said.

After Curnutte identified himself and his purpose, Martin told the ranger he was on his land, and he had no right to be there.

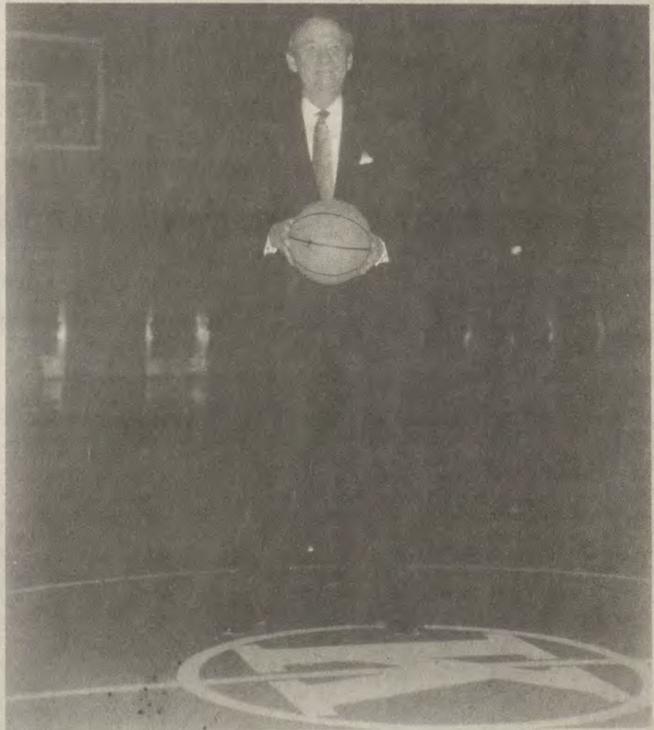

Curnutte and his crew of firefighters were called to the property at about 7 p.m. and found two fires burning when they arrived. At the time of shooting, the crew was in another area fighting a 12-acre blaze. "We were concerned about the forest," Curnutte said. "If we didn't respond there could have been a big fire in that area."

The rangers returned the following day with warrants and arrested Martin. A court date has been set for April 4. Martin is alleged to have been involved in two previous incidents when rangers arrived to put out fires on his property.

Take your best shot at taming your taxes. Open your Tax Tamer IRA at First Commonwealth Bank.

The big change in college basketball this season is the 3-point shot. It's had a big impact on the game.

There's been some changes in the tax laws, too. But one thing hasn't changed. You can still get your full tax-deduction on your 1986 taxes with your IRA contribution, not to mention FDIC insurance protection up to $100,000.

For more details on the Tax-Tamer IRA, stop by any First Commonwealth Bank office. But hurry. The deadline for 1986 IRA contributions is April 15.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest and tax penalty for early withdrawal.

Saddle Horse Museum Show Wins Two National Awards

The multi-image show at the American Saddle Horse Museum on the grounds of the Kentucky Horse Park in Lexington has won two awards in a national competition.

The show, called "Saddlebred for America," won best of show for multi-image productions and a special achievement award for writing in the 1986 Cindy competition. The Cindy is the Association for Visual Communicators' equivalent of an Oscar.

The show, which was produced by Donna Lawrence Productions Inc. of Louisville, was one of 100 entries in the multi-image category and was chosen from among six finalists for best of show.

Roz Harris, president of the museum, said, "I've been telling people for a long time that this was going to be a first-class museum. If this doesn't prove it, nothing will."

State Deputy Tourism Secretary Diane Austin said the awards were well-deserved recognition.

"This is a thrilling show that serves as a moving tribute to the American saddle horse," Austin said. "It's one of the highlights of this outstanding, new museum."

Tourism Secretary Wendell Combs said the museum greatly enhances the tourism appeal of the Kentucky Horse Park. "By itself, the Horse Park can offer a visitor hours of enjoyment," Combs said. "But the addition of the Saddle Horse Museum has given potential guests even more reason to spend an entire day or more at the park."

Welcome Home

Melissa Lynn "Missy" Rice, 17, received a surprise welcome home Sunday at the Little Paint First Church of God, of which she is a member.

The Prestonsburg High School senior was critically injured last November, when her boyfriend's pickup swerved to avoid an oncoming vehicle and left the road near her East Point home and flipped.

She was admitted for six weeks to UK Medical Center with head and internal injuries and was later transferred to Cardinal Hill Hospital for extensive physical, occupational and speech therapy. It would be 12 weeks after the accident before she could speak a word.

A member of the Prestonsburg High School Honor Choir and All State Chorus, Rice expects to graduate this year with a B average. A large crowd honored her on her return this weekend, presenting her with a money tree. She responded with thanks for those who had supported her through her long ordeal.

She is the daughter of Montie and Barbara Rice, of East Point.

The program, "Peer Pressure," was given by Patricia McKenzie. Guest speakers were Paintsville High School senior, Claria Horne, and Johnson Central High School senior, Kim Greer. Both are academic leaders of their senior classes and are involved in many extra-curricular activities. Miss Horne and Miss Greer talked about the every-day pressures involving them, and explained how they cope.

The hostesses for this event were Mrs. Nadine Hicks and Mrs. Patricia Barnette, teachers at Clark Elementary School, who served refreshments of cake and punch to Mesdames Mary Rose Bailey, Judith Carter, Roberta Davidson, Charlotte Ferguson, Delphia Hicks, Patricia McKenzie, Bobbie Moore, Eileen Ramey, June Rice, Betty Rowland, Anna Sue Stumbo, Zella Wells, Lillian Wheeler, and Joyce Watson.

The next meeting will be May 4 at 4:30 p.m. at the Paintsville Public Library. The state president, Miss Ann Walls, of Louisville, will be guest speaker.

Pill Takers Can Use Pop Bottle, Doc Says

The lowly pop bottle has come to the rescue of people who just can't seem to swallow pills.

A technique called the "pop-bottle method" creates a reflex in the throat that keeps nervousness from interfering with pill-swallowing, said University of Louisville doctor Joseph Fowler.

Here's how it works:

—Place the pill in your mouth, and purse your lips tightly around the opening of a pop bottle containing soda or another liquid.

—Swallow the liquid with a sucking motion.

In almost every case, the tablet or capsule will go down the throat before the pill-taker is even aware of it, according to Fowler.

"Swallowing has a thinking part to it and a reflex part to it," he said. "This takes the thought out of it."

Self-Help Can Prevent Common Women's Ailment

Cystitis is the most common women's disease, and it strikes millions of women. There's new understanding of this urinary tract infection, and Good Housekeeping's April issue offers some self-help and prevention suggestions. For example:

To help prevent cystitis: Drink plenty of water—six to eight glasses a day. It helps flush out bacteria and also dilutes urine, making it less nourishing for bacteria. Urinate frequently—at least every three hours. Wear looser clothing—tight jeans and pantyhose trap heat and moisture, creating a good breeding place for bacteria. The crotch of panties should be made of cotton.

Certain foods and beverages can't cause cystitis but they can irritate the bladder. Avoid spices. Eliminate coffee, tea and diet cola—they contain caffeine and tannic acid, both of which can irritate a sensitive bladder. Monitor acid foods and beverages like oranges and grapefruit which can cause problems. And drink cranberry juice—it diminishes the ability of bacteria to adhere to the bladder lining.

Germans used to believe striking a door sill with an ax would end a spell of bad weather.

BOARD EMPLOYEES unhappy with a proposal to reduce their work day by 75 minutes to help avert a school budget deficit listened Saturday to bus driver Neil Clevinger, standing on table, who urged them to "stick together" in opposing the plan. Nearly 60 of an estimated 400 affected workers gathered at Archer Park to discuss the Board of Education proposal, which would apply to school cooks, janitors, clerks, and aides.

Hotline Established For Juvenile Centers

The Attorney General's office, which recently began monitoring Kentucky's 42 group homes and treatment centers for juveniles, has established a toll-free number (1-800-221-3983) to allow quick reporting of service complaints or abuse allegations by the centers' clients and staff.

"The phone line is an important part of the commitment our office has made to the Cabinet for Human Resources," said Attorney General David Armstrong. "We want to make it clear that this phone number is not intended to replace the established child abuse hotline (1-800-752-6200) operated by the Cabinet for Human Resources 24 hours a day for referrals of child abuse and neglect. Rather it will provide clients and staff of the residential facilities with another alternative to the established methods of generating complaints about services and abuse allegations. Together we can ensure the best delivery of service to the residential client by responding to the needs of the children in these youth centers."

In a contract agreement, the Attorney General's Victims' Advocacy Division serves as an external agency to monitor the Cabinet's juvenile residential facilities. Victims' Advocacy Division staff will monitor the Cabinet's handling of all service complaints within the 42 facilities, as well as the Cabinet's response to any allegations of client abuse. "Our role is to look for any violations of established Cabinet policies. In addition, we will help the Cabinet identify problems as well as things that are being done correctly," Armstrong said.

The Attorney General's staff will visit each center quarterly to inspect records of service complaints or abuse and will interview clients and staff when necessary to assess how a problem situation was handled and removed. The findings will be reported quarterly to Commissioner Anna Grace Day of the Department of Social Services in CHR.

The Victims' Division has developed a data base program to assist in tracking case activity and in generating statistical analysis of each facility.

The external monitor number will be answered during normal business hours by the Victims' Division staff. On nights and weekends, the line will be answered by a code-a-phone with a prompt response the next working day.

Morehead U. Reports "Dramatic" Growth

Morehead State University's enrollment figures for Spring 1987 show a dramatic increase of 7.3 percent over Spring 1986, according to figures released recently by the University.

The spring headcount enrollment is 5,740, compared with 5,351 at this time last year, and includes a 2.3 percent increase in full-time students, MSU President A.D. Albright announced.

"While the full-time student growth reverses the trend of recent years, there are other significant gains to be noted," he added.

"The spring enrollment picture includes a substantial increase, 19.2 percent, in part-time students over last spring, reflecting our increased outreach to graduate students and new undergraduate programs at our regional centers," Dr. Albright said. "The figures demonstrate that we are meeting a real need in our service region."

MSU also saw a 22.3 percent increase in freshmen/transfer students over the previous spring figure. "At the moment, our registration data base has not sorted newly-enrolled freshmen from students who transferred in, but this size increase does tell us that students are recognizing the opportunities MSU offers," Dr. Albright said.

Increases, ranging from 5.4 percent to 9.3 percent, were seen in all classes, except for the sophomore class.

Scott Paper Aids R. McDonald House

The Scott Paper Company has announced that it will gain donate to the Ronald McDonald House of the Bluegrass a percentage of local sales on 10 Scott products during March and April.
This marks the second year for the fundraising campaign, which raised $5,200 for the local Ronald McDonald House last year, according to Al Pfoertner, territory manager for Scott.
The local fundraiser is part of a nationwide campaign by Scott and wholesalers and retailers of Scott Paper products. Last year the campaign raised $1.4 million in contributions to more than 100 Ronald McDonald Houses.
"We are greatly pleased at the positive response by the public, grocers and retailers and proud to continue the campaign for a second year," said Pfoertner.
Through April, local stores will be featuring special displays of Scott products to call attention to the campaign and encourage shoppers to support their Ronald McDonald House with their purchases.
Local participants include: Foodtown Supermarkets, Affiliated Foods, Begley Company, Randall's Foods, Food Fair, Laurel Grocery Company, Malone & Hyde, Maloney Enterprises, Kroger Company, County Market and Winn Dixie.
Area McDonald's restaurants are promoting the Scott campaign through counter and store displays, said Al Nahra, local McDonald's owners council official. He pointed out that McDonald's customers can give directly to the Ronald McDonald House throughout the year via countertop donation cartons.
The Ronald McDonald Houses provide a home-away-from-home to families whose children are hospitalized with serious and prolonged illnesses. Each house is locally owned and operated as a not-for-profit organization by a volunteer board. In Lexington, The Ronald McDonald House is run by the Children's Oncology Service of the Bluegrass. The house has 17 bedrooms, and communal kitchens, living and dining rooms.
"All the residents here are referred to us by the local hospitals, and there's usually a waiting list of about 12 families," said Mrs. Edgar M. McGee, president of the board. She said over 1,500 families have stayed at the house since it opened in December, 1984.
The Ronald McDonald House of the Bluegrass relies heavily on local contributions to raise more than $70,000 in annual operating expenses, she said.
"The Scott fundraising campaign was a great help to us last year," she said. "We hope the community will take advantage of this easy, painless way to give and make this year's campaign even better."

Potential Dropouts Program To Be Expanded This Summer

The experimental SOAR program that brought 70 students considered potential dropouts to the University of Kentucky campus last summer for motivating academic enrichment activities and employment will be continued—and expanded—this summer.

SOAR, the Superintendent's Occupational and Academic Retreat, was developed as a business-education partnership project by Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald and the Northern Kentucky Private Industry Council (PIC), which administers federal Job Training Partnership Act funds. Jefferson County eighth- and ninth-graders will be eligible this summer with the participation of the Jefferson County PIC.

"The SOAR retreat has literally changed the lives of some of the participants," Supt. McDonald told the State Board of Education at its March 4 meeting. The employers—offices at UK, including those of President Otis Singletary and the medical school chancellor—were very pleased with the student's work, she said, and some officials have continued mentoring relationships with their SOAR employees.

The state board approved the continuation of SOAR at its March 4 meeting with hearty endorsements of the incentive retreat for disadvantaged teenagers. "It's so heartening to see innovative projects like this, new ways of reaching and motivating kids with business groups involved," said State Board Member Robert Ruberg, a Fort Wright attorney and former Kenton County juvenile court judge.

The students live in UK dormitories for two months while they spend half-days earning money in office jobs that match their interest and half-days in classes. They work on English, reading, math, study skills and computer skills, and explore careers. Evenings provide recreation, tutoring, and activity classes like dance, judo, crafts, and theater. Weekend field trips take the students to museums, concerts and plays, and state parks.

SOAR funds cover all the students' costs and one weekend visit by parents, and reimburse UK for operating the retreat and hiring the students. Participants earn an average of $67 a week while developing useful job skills.

Generally students with academic difficulties and/or problems at home, SOAR students are identified by their school districts as "at-risk," or potential dropouts. They must meet economic guidelines for federal job training assistance.

The 1987 summer program, with $150,000 from Northern Kentucky PIC and $100,000 from Jefferson County PIC in federal JTPA funds, can take 100 students from those two areas. The Kentucky Department of Education will provide an additional $50,000.

McDonald said followup studies will show how the SOAR experience affects students over the long run, but already SOAR appears to be "clearly a successful experiment that we hope can be extended to other students around the state."

New Science Series For Young Viewers

"KnowZone," an all-new science and nature series tailored to the 10- to 14-year-old viewer, premieres Sunday, March 29, at 10:30 a.m. on KET.

Hosted by actor David Morse, familiar to television viewers as Dr. Jack Morrison on NBC's "St. Elsewhere," "KnowZone" draws on 13 seasons of critically acclaimed "NOVA" science documentaries.

"KnowZone" is a kind of "NOVA" junior," says Paula Apsell, executive producer for "NOVA" and "KnowZone," "but without talking down to kids. These are original 'NOVAs' that have been cut by approximately half to bring out the very best, most exciting elements, while still telling a complete story."

Each 30-minute weekly episode is introduced by imaginative experiments, interviews and demonstrations conducted by host Morse, who inhabits an intriguing on-stage laboratory.

"KnowZone" premieres with "The Dinosaur and the Cosmic Collision." This startling new theory explains what "did in" the dinosaurs—and what could happen to us at any time.

During April, "KnowZone" focuses on crime lab techniques, birds of song, Henry Ford and endangered wildlife species.

On Sunday, April 5, "KnowZone" learns how murder investigators use sophisticated crime lab techniques to solve a case on "Crime Lab." Host Morse gives viewers an on-air test that shows just how reliable, and how wrong, eyewitnesses can be.

"Why Birds Sing" April 12 describes the different messages bird songs convey—at least to other birds. "KnowZone" breaks the code to eavesdrop on the conversations of our feathered friends.

Henry Ford didn't invent the automobile, but he made it cheap enough for everyone to afford. Find out Sunday, April 19 about "Henry Ford's American Dream" in this profile of the bumpy career of the man who put the world on wheels.

"KnowZone" cameras go undercover April 26 to expose the deadly business of selling wildlife into extinction on "Wildlife for Sale."

"KnowZone" is produced by WGBH/Boston.

FINANCIAL PLANNING MANAGING YOUR IRA

Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs) involve big bucks. The Investment Company Institute in Washington D.C. reports that total IRA assets in 1986 were $264 billion. If you have made a contribution every year since 1982, the first year IRAs were allowed for all earners, your IRA kitty has probably grown to the $15,000 range. If you changed jobs and rolled a company pension distribution into your IRA, your fund could be much larger. With that much money involved, you should be managing your IRA wisely to produce the highest yield consistent with your risk tolerance level.

IRAs can be invested in many ways—stocks, bonds, certificates of deposit, mutual funds, life insurance products, and now even certain U.S. gold and silver coins.

To a certain extent, sound IRA investment strategy is the same as your non-IRA investment strategy. Don't invest beyond your risk comfort level, but do realize that a few points difference in yield can make a significant difference in the total dollars you can accumulate. For example, if you put your $2,000 contribution every year for twenty years into a 6% Certificate of Deposit, your total accumulation will be $73,500. On the other hand, if you invest your contributions in mutual funds that return 9 1/2%, you will accumulate $108,000.

Since an IRA is your retirement kitty, highly-speculative investments are not advisable. The closer you are to retirement, the more conservative your investments should be, because you don't have the time to make up any losses you might suffer with riskier investments. Also, since the 1986 Tax Reform Act eliminated the long-term capital gains deduction, the old rule of not investing in capital gain assets inside your IRA no longer applies. But you should realize that any losses you suffer which would be a tax deduction outside an IRA will be of no tax benefit inside an IRA.

Get together with your financial advisor and review the investment options open to you. Don't cheat yourself out of retirement dollars through a mismanaged IRA.

A SHORTCUT TO THE COMFORT OF GAS HEAT: NO CHIMNEY.

 Good news...you can have gas heat without a lot of expensive home alterations.
 That's because some of the new high-efficiency gas models vent through the wall, and don't need a chimney. So they can be installed easily—and in so little time, you can have it done on a cold winter day and never feel a chill.
 Sound good? It gets better. A new high-efficiency model uses as much as 30% less energy—even as it keeps your home warm and cozy. And with today's lower gas costs, your savings are even greater.
 Check with a heating dealer on availability of these new side wall-venting units. You may find there's a welcome shortcut to having the comfort, efficiency and dependability of gas heat in your home.

Computer Hook-Up With Japan Teaches Elliott Co. Students Lesson In Peace

Elliott county teacher Frank Olson threw his pencil into the air and with a broad grin exclaimed, "Unbelievable! Remarkable!"

Olson had just made contact with his teaching counterpart in Japan. After months of working out technological bugs, Olson and Hillel Weintraub were on-line, making it possible for Elliott County High School students from Sandy Hook to play a computer game with students from Doshisha International High School in Kyoto, Japan.

Weintraub said this was the most innovative activity that his school had ever been involved in. His school wanted to participate so badly that they had the Kyoto area's first touch-tone telephone installed in the school to make the communication possible.

The student teams played their very-long-distance computer game before about 200 spectators during the Kentucky Educational Computing Conference at the Hyatt Regency in Lexington.

Both teams worked collaboratively to complete a simulated bridge of peace between two imaginary countries. The software used by both teams was "The Other Side," a simulation in global conflict resolution developed by Tom Snyder of Tom Snyder Productions, Inc., Cambridge, Mass.

Snyder, who also spoke at the computing conference, said he would never teach again without a computer in his classroom. He said he developed "The Other Side" to show that computers don't have to be alienating and isolating. He got the idea for the game after watching the TV show "The Day After." Snyder was depressed that everyone on the panel following the TV show pushed his own point of view. It occurred to him that perhaps schools were not teaching negotiation and compromise.

Snyder's game was featured on "The Today Show" last November when students in Geneva, Switzerland, played "The Other Side" while the Geneva Summit was being held, to see if kids could accomplish what adults could not. In "The Other Side," both sides purchase bricks with which to build a bridge of peace between two countries. "The game proves that even if both sides want to cooperate, it's hard, and misunderstandings often ensue," Snyder said. A 30-character computer hotline allows both sides to communicate messages, but the cryptic messages are sometimes easily misunderstood.

Lydia Wells Sledge and Leslie Flanders of the Kentucky Department of Education's Office of Instruction directed the project. Apple Computer, Inc. donated the equipment for the Kyoto and the Elliott county schools and AT&T also assisted.

Spectators observed the game on a large-screen projection of the Kentucky team's computer monitor in addition to a map showing the progress made in the game.

The Kentucky Educational Computing Conference, held Thursday through Saturday (Feb. 26-28) in Lexington, was designed to give teachers a firsthand look into the newest uses of computers in industry and the classroom. It was co-sponsored by the Kentucky Department of Education, the University of Louisville, the University of Kentucky, Fayette county schools and the Kentucky Academy for School Executives.

The members of Elliott county's team are Paul Black, Martha Boggs, Beverly Harris, Jason Perry, and Clara Stevens. Boggs said when she first started practicing the game, she argued a lot with her classmates. "The game taught me to finally cooperate with my teammates," she said.

The Elliott county team, after 45 minutes—or 10 years of simulated time—built a bridge of peace, with the cooperation of the Japanese students. Snyder said the Elliott county team was one of the most disciplined teams he had ever observed.

When Betty Seay, Department of Education social studies coordinator, designated Weintraub a Kentucky Colonel over the phone, he thanked her but couldn't resist asking, "Does that mean I can get all the Kentucky Fried Chicken I can eat?"

Hospital Consolidation Means More Strength, Says OLW Administrator

Our Lady of the Way Hospital of Martin is now a member of one of the five largest Catholic health care corporations in the nation, following the signing of a consolidation agreement linking Franciscan Healthcare Corporation (FHC) of Colorado Springs, Colorado with the Sisters of Charity Health Care Systems (SCHCS) of Cincinnati, Ohio. Our Lady of the Way Hospital is operated by SCHCS.

The consolidation announcement was made locally by Our Lady of the Way's administrator, Sr. Monica Justinger, who said, "The combined strategic strength of the two health care corporations will be of tremendous advantage to Our Lady of the Way Hospital."

According to Justinger, benefits to be achieved include a strengthening of the Catholic health care ministry, increased financial flexibility in gaining access to new capital for building and other programmatic needs, cost savings resulting from greater economies of scale, and the probability of accelerated growth through shared programs and increased networking among all SCHCS member institutions.

"Consolidation will create two regionalized corridors of health care institutions," Justinger said. "The SCHCS eastern region includes Michigan, Ohio and Kentucky. Its western region now will include Nebraska, Colorado and New Mexico. Having three contiguous states in each region will facilitate joint ventures and systematic planning for growth in each market area."

In total, SCHCS operates 11 hospitals, three nursing homes and four life care/retirement centers in Colorado, New Mexico, Ohio, Kentucky, and Michigan. FHC operates six hospitals, one nursing home and one retirement center in Nebraska, Colorado and New Mexico.

Following consolidation, health facilities within the combined system will represent 4,674 acute care hospital beds, 1,157 nursing home beds and 971 independent living units, making the organization one of the five largest Catholic health care systems. Total assets are valued at nearly one billion dollars."

The decision to consolidate was reached following year-long negotiations between the congregational leaders of the Sisters of St. Francis of Colorado Springs and the Sisters of Charity of Cincinnati, as well as top executives of their health care systems.

De-Watering Hay May Improve Nutrients

The art of curing hay which hasn't changed in hundreds of years may be about to. This hay isn't dried. It isn't dehydrated. It's de-watered mechanically.

Mechanically de-watered forages used for silage or hay may be a better product than that cured in the fields, according to research by a University of Kentucky agronomist.

Michael Collins, who is presenting results of his research this month at the American Forage and Grassland Council meeting in Springfield, Ill., said traditionally field-dried hay and silage loses significant nutrients and yield while in the field.

Hay and silage also are especially dependent upon the weather, with further losses probable if there is rain while the hay is drying in the fields.

To avoid these problems, Collins developed a mechanical de-watering system which chops up and presses alfalfa, red clover or birdsfoot trefoil, three legumes commonly used in Kentucky for hay and silage.

"Direct harvest and mechanical de-watering can avoid the yield and nutrient losses and produce a protein concentrate of higher quality than the field-dried legumes," Collins said.

"In addition, the juices that remain after the de-watering process can be used in livestock feed, as a fertilizer or in ethynol production," he said.

What remains after the process doesn't look like hay or traditional silage.

The mechanical water removing process produces a semi-solid, dark, green, pressed forage about 45 percent lighter in weight than fresh alfalfa and red clover and 20 percent lighter than when field-dried. The weight loss of the birdsfoot trefoil was less but still significant. In each case the concentrate that remained was high in protein and low in fiber and compared favorably with the field-dried.

The translucent, brown liquid that remained after the protein concentrate was removed contains considerable amounts of carbohydrates and several minerals, Collins said. Uses for this "juice" are an added bonus for the process since the liquid and nutrients are lost in the field-dried process.

Mayo Offers Class On Court Reporting

The court reporting program offered by Mayo State Vocational Technical School highlights this week's edition of "Education Notebook," a television production of the Kentucky Department of Education.

Students in the program attend classes in shorthand and typing and do co-op work in local law practices and reporting firms. Often these businesses consult the school in Paintsville when they need employees.

A career in court reporting requires specialized skills and offers a competitive salary. Many students commute from distant counties to receive training at the Mayo facility, which offers the only court reporting program in Kentucky.

Raise Funds For Heart Assn.

Mountain Manor Nursing Home organized several events for the American Heart Association during February, including a rock-and-roll jamboree and a Valentine Sweetheart contest. Area businesses made contributions to the heart fund, Jenny Wiley Festival Band, made up of Harry Perry, Clifford Branham, Paul J. Branham, Dave Sizemore, and Ollie Wallen, entertained the residents.

Pictured are Edna Milon and Bethel Reffitt, participating in the rock-and-roll jamboree. Named as Valentine Sweetheart was Dora Nelson, who was escorted by Lincoln Gilbert. Beatrice Fannin won a $50 gift certificate donated by a Prestonsburg jeweler.

Conference Set For Nursing Applicants

The final 1986-87 nursing pre-admission conference for the Pikeville College Elizabeth Akers Elliott associate degree nursing program will be held Wednesday, March 11, at 3:00 p.m. in Room 010 of the Armington Science-Learning Center. This conference is designed to acquaint interested individuals with nursing as a career and to provide the opportunity to meet with nursing faculty and ask questions about the Pikeville College program. This is the 6th in a series of such workshops, which also provide participants the chance to tour the College's nursing department and obtain brochures describing the program.

The admission application deadline for the Elizabeth Akers Elliott associate degree nursing program at Pikeville College is April 1, 1987. All related materials must be received by the offices of Admissions and Nursing prior to that date to be considered for the 1987 freshman nursing class.

Admission to the Pikeville College nursing program is competitive and is based on the annual number of applicants, the number of clinical practice opportunities, the number of participating health care agencies, and the number of available faculty.

Preference may be given to students with an ACT composite score of 15 or better; a high school grade point average of at least 2.5; and 12 or more semester hours of college work with a grade point average of at least a 2.5 or better. Students must be high school graduates or have successfully passed the GED and received their high school equivalency certificate. Those with previous college work must have a grade of "C" or better in all biological sciences and math courses, and an overall "C" average in college work.

Also, applicants must be in the process of making application to or have already been accepted into Pikeville College through the Admissions Office. Separate application must be made through the Nursing Department to be considered for this program. The admissions office requires a completed admissions application, transcripts from all high schools or colleges attended, and official ACT or SAT scores. In addition, nursing applicants must complete a student health record, signed by their physician.

For more information or to receive a complete packet of material, contact the Admissions Office at 432-9322 or the Nursing Department at 432-9230.

Two Students Win Attendance Prizes

Clara Newsome, a fifth-grader at Prestonsburg Grade School, and Samuel Shepherd, a kindergarten student, each won a Toshiba AM/FM stereo radio and tape deck in a drawing held recently for students with perfect attendance during January and February. About 280 of the school's 970 students were eligible for the prizes, which were bought with school funds. The competition was coordinated by guidance counselor Glenora Montgomery, who stressed to the students the importance of establishing good attendance habits that will help them when they hold jobs later.

Celebrate Silver Anniversary

Crandell and Wanda Slone, former residents of Allen, celebrated their silver anniversary December 13 by renewing their wedding vows at the Shelbyville Church of God at Shelbyville.

Their son, Crandell Slone, Jr., escorted his mother to the altar and served as best man. Their pastor, Rev. Herbert L. Foster performed the ceremony and Mrs. Ann Foster played and sang "We Are So Blessed" and the "Lord's Prayer". The Slone's nine-year-old daughter, Nichole Foster, also sang "God, Woman and a Man". A reception was held in the kitchen.

Mr. and Mrs. Slone who were married December 2, 1961 at Clintwood, Virginia by the Rev. Earley Rose, have lived in Shelbyville for the past 20 years.

Mr. Slone, a son of Nova Conn and the late Miles Slone, is a Kentucky State Police trooper stationed at Bowman Field in Louisville. Mrs. Slone is the daughter of Lottie Crisp and the late Gomer Crisp.

The Mail Order Rule

By Attorney General David L. Armstrong

Many Kentuckians order merchandise through the mail each year. While this is often a convenient way to purchase merchandise, there are laws designed to protect you as a consumer from unfair business practices if you order through the mail.

The Federal Trade Commission's Mail Order Rule has a number of provisions which every consumer should be aware of. The law states that merchandise must be received by the buyer within the time the seller says it will. For example, "Wait six weeks for delivery" means that you must receive your order within six weeks.

If there is no specific delivery date, then the order must be shipped 30 days after the seller receives your order. If the promised shipping date or the 30-day period cannot be met, the mail order company must notify the consumer about the delay. The company must give you the option to cancel the order if the delivery date cannot be met. If the company does not receive your reply, they can assume that you have consented to the delay. However, this only applies for an additional 30 days (in other words, for a total of 60 days). For delays beyond that, the consumer must give consent in writing.

The mail order firm must provide you with an adequate, cost-free means to notify the firm of a cancellation, such as a postage-paid card.

If you request a refund, the company must provide it. Under the rule, companies will be permitted one billing cycle to adjust a charge to a credit account and seven working days to refund the money if you paid in cash, or by check or money order.

Some companies reserve the right to substitute merchandise of equal value when your order is not available. If you do not want a substitution, mark "Do Not Substitute" on the order blank.

Certain mail order items do not fall under the FTC's Mail Order Rule. These are: mail order photo finishing; magazine subscriptions and other serial deliveries (except for the initial shipment); mail order seeds and growing plants; C.O.D. orders; credit orders where the buyer's account is not charged prior to shipment; and goods ordered under negative option plans.

There are several helpful tips all consumers should know in order to prevent unnecessary inconvenience when ordering by mail. Remember to:

Read the product description carefully. Make sure it is what you want.

Buy from a reliable company. Call or write the Lexington or Louisville Better Business Bureau for a reliability report on the company.

Note delivery time stated. Allow plenty of time before holidays to avoid problems with late delivery.

Find out seller's return policy. If not stated, ask before placing order.

Never send cash. Send check/money order so that you can prove payment.

Be certain the order form is completed correctly.

Keep a copy of the ad or catalog, the order blank, the cancelled check and any charge records. Make a note of the merchant's name and address and the date you sent the order.

Check the merchandise as soon as you receive it. If there are any problems, contact the merchant immediately.

If you have a complaint against a mail order company, write the company. Enclose copies of your order, cancelled checks, etc. Do not send originals. Keep a copy of your letter also. If the problem is not solved in this manner, send a letter with full details to my Consumer Protection Division, 209 St. Clair Street, Frankfort, Ky. 40601, or call (502) 564-2200.

How 30 Days of Better Hearing Changed My Life!

Families everywhere are enjoying the benefits of a new discovery that makes better hearing possible, even in noisy surroundings. Could this be you? If so, call 886-3773 today for our very special trial offer.

"For years I was shy in groups, even at home, due to a hearing loss. Didn't enter into conversations easily. By the time I understood what was said, the group had moved onto another subject.

"Recently I learned about Circuits ASP, the first generation of smart hearing instruments. Designed to cut out distracting background noise and let in the sounds I wanted to hear. I was interested and my Circuits dispenser let me make up my mind with a 30-day trial.

"Am I happy now! The new Circuits ASP really works! It senses changes in noise levels automatically, and adjusts automatically.

"It pulls in words I want to hear and blocks the noise that used to disturb my hearing. It's great to be part of the family group again!"

THANKS SUPPORTERS

The Middlecreek Volunteer Fire Department wishes to thank everyone that has supported them during the Christmas Season by donating food, clothing, toys, etc. to help the needy. Also, we wish to thank every person that has assisted in any way for the past three (3) years. The Christmas Project was very successful and we are very happy to be able to help so many families. Without the many people supporting our Fire Department, many of our community projects would not be possible. Again, we wish to express our sincere thanks to everyone for their support.

What We Celebrate On The Constitution's Bicentennial

DOUGLAS A. JEFFERY

This year we Americans will celebrate the bicentennial of our constitution. The occasion provides us with a special opportunity to recall what unites us as a people; what the noblest among us have fought and died to protect—from Yorktown to Gettysburg, and from the Coral Sea to the Mekong Delta; and what others will be called on to defend similarly in years to come.

A constitution is a way of life. Traditionally it was something unwritten: if you wanted to know a people's constitution, you simply looked at how they lived. But in America—for the first time—a constitution became the Constitution. That it was written symbolized its status as fundamental law. As such it set limits to what the government could do in a new and significant way. And in America, where the government is of the people, to limit government is to limit ourselves.

To say that what unites us as a people is an acknowledgement of our own limitations, is to say that what unites us is a common agreement on what is politically and morally right. This agreement was born with the pledge of dedication to certain principles in 1776.

The principles of political and moral right, set forth in the Declaration of Independence, are therein held to be right by nature, or to be right always and everywhere. Only if there is that sort of standard of justice would it be proper for us to have a written constitution, or a fundamental and restrictive law.

That America's great adversary in modern times is the Soviet Union, reflects the fact that communist ideology explicitly and absolutely denies what is most essential to American constitutionalism. Marxist doctrine's denial of God's existence is but one facet of its denial that there is any unchanging law—divine or natural—which restricts what a man or a people can do at any given time. Rather than being guided by an absolute standard, communists look to a future ideal which justifies for them the treatment by some human beings of other human beings as if those others were beasts. While the Marxists speak in terms of a master class rather than (as did the Nazis) in terms of a master race, Marxists and Nazis are essentially similar: both have denied a higher law which governs all men equally.

What constitutes us as a people, what so many Americans have given their lives defending, and what we should commemorate not only this year, but each and every year, is exactly what distinguishes us so radically from Communist and Nazi tyrannies. It is not simply that we are a democracy. After all, just as a free individual can choose to become a drug merchant or a drug addict, so can a democratic majority choose, unjustly, to have slaves or to enslave themselves. No, what we truly celebrate is that we were constituted to be a people enlightened by a knowledge of what is politically and morally just.

We celebrate a living Constitution—no less beautiful or just than it was 200 years ago—which demands that we remain a self-governing people, who are in turn governed by a higher law. We celebrate that we are constituted as a people whose fulfillment of our patriotic duty—whether at peace or at war—has a uniquely religious character. We celebrate that we are a people who can, if we are true to the example set by Americans who have gone before us in our nation's "finest hours," honestly speak of pledging our sacred honor, to the support of one another and to the support of our institutions and our laws.

There is no more fitting time than ours for the reflection on our heritage which the current Bicentennial calls forth. Perhaps through such reflection we might clear our minds, bridge the divisions that exist among us, and re-dedicate ourselves as a people aware of the nature of our birthright, which is, as Lincoln called it in remarks to the 166th Ohio Regiment in 1864, "an inestimable jewel."

Correction Noted

Forrest D. Gibson, of Tram, who pleaded guilty Feb. 27 to ramming his truck into a car full of neighbors, was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, contrary to information published in the Times. Gibson registered 22 percent on a Breathalyzer test administered after the incident. The DUI case, which is Gibson's second offense of that type, is still pending, according to Kentucky State Trooper Greg Roberts.

DONNA COX, office manager at the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn, and Carl Sparks, manager of the local Wal-Mart, were congratulated last week for their employees' blood donations by Larilynn Leffler, area consultant for the Central Kentucky Blood Center. More than two-thirds of the hotel's 78 employees have donated blood at least once since June, for a total of 80 pints, while more than half of Wal-Mart's 100 employees have visited the blood center since early 1986, donating a total of 95 pints of blood. The two employer groups are the highest-volume group donors in Prestonsburg, Leffler said. Both offer paid time-off while their employees visit the local blood center. Wal-Mart is holding a blood drive this week, Sparks said.

Archeological Site Is State Landmark

Wickliffe Mounds became Kentucky's first Archeological Landmark, Saturday, Feb. 28. This site is owned and operated by Murray State University. "We are pleased to recognize Murray State University's excellent stewardship of this site as well as the importance of the site to understanding Kentucky's prehistory," noted Gov. Martha Layne Collins. The award was presented during the fourth annual archaeological conference at Murray State University. The Kentucky Heritage Council administers the Archeological Registry Program and sponsors the annual archaeological conference.

Wickliffe Mounds is significant as one of the few town sites of the Mississippian Indian culture that remains in Western Kentucky. It consists of a village and ceremonial center that was inhabited from about A.D. 1000-1300. Partially excavated in the 1930s and operated as a tourist attraction, the site was donated to Murray State University in 1983. Since then, the University has developed the site as both a museum and a research center. This designation as a Kentucky Archeological Landmark coincides with its official reopening on March 1.

The award, a brass and walnut plaque and a certificate signed by Gov. Collins, was presented to Dean Kenneth E. Harrell, College of Humanistic Studies by David L. Morgan, director of the Heritage Council. This ceremony initiated the Heritage Council's new Kentucky Archeological Registry Program, which is aimed at protecting significant archaeological sites not protected by federal or state environmental, preservation or antiquities laws. The program recognizes both the significance of the designated sites and the important role of the property owner in its continued preservation. The council provides assistance in site management and preparation of stronger protection measures at the owner's request.

Higher Standards To Be Asked Of Ky. School Administrators

The State Board of Education Wednesday (March 4) approved certification changes that will require higher standards for all school administrative personnel by placing more emphasis on school management, instructional leadership and on the qualifications of people admitted into training programs to become administrators.

Teacher training programs now prepare teacher candidates for one of three levels: early elementary (K-4), middle grades (5-8), and secondary (9-12). The certification program is being changed to reflect these levels, so that teachers will be working only within the student age-groups for which they are trained.

New standards and procedures were adopted for the accreditation of teacher preparation programs at the colleges and universities. The standard call for improving the qualifications of college and university faculty, the selection and admission procedures in the teacher training program, and the quality of the student teaching experiences.

The board will also require institutions to follow up on the degree of success or failure of their graduates and to provide adequate learning resources and facilities for the various programs being offered by the institutions.

Another change will require members of the teams evaluating the institutions to have special training. Colleges preparing teachers must be accredited by the state if their graduates are to be certified by the state. Some institutions are also accredited by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education.

"For those institutions that want national accreditation, our new procedures provide for a joint evaluation by the state and national agencies," said Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald. "This may be the first such collaborative plan adopted by any state."

"The National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education has a 10-year record of denying one out of every 10 programs it evaluates," McDonald said. "Thus far the Council has never denied a program that has been approved by the Kentucky State Board of Education. This speaks well for our state approval process."

The board also approved a new certification program for teachers of computer sciences.

Whither The Locust? Right Here, This Year

Ah, spring. The season that heralds the return of daffodils, warm breezes and locusts.

This year will mark the return of the 17-year-locust, which really isn't a locust at all, but a cicada.

Cicadas were misidentified by early American settlers, who confused them with locusts that caused plagues in the Bible, according to University of Louisville biologist Charles Covell.

The flying, black insects, which emerge from the ground every 17 years, have been feeding on tree roots since they last appeared in 1970.

They will arrive sometime in May and stay about three weeks, leaving their cast-off "shells" behind, Covell said.

Free Throws Give Rebels Edge Over Betsy Layne In Championship Game

Allen Central coach Johnny Martin, after his Rebels struggled from the free throw line against Wheelwright, Wednesday night, took his squad back into the gym for some additional training.

Martin didn't concern himself with running his team into exhaustion, nor did he try drilling extra plays into their minds. It was from the free throw line that Allen Central suffered the most and from the free throw line was where Johnny Martin made his team work the most.

"After the Wheelwright game, Ronnie Ousley must have shot at least 1000 free throws Thursday and Friday," Martin revealed. "Everyone on the team shot at least 500, and it paid off. I think free throw shooting was the difference in tonight's game."

In Allen Central's 60-59 district championship victory over Betsy Layne, the Rebels hit on 18 of 20 free throws, including six of six in the final 19 seconds to pull out another district title for their school and coach.

The one point deciding factor didn't come as any surprise, all three Rebel-Bobcat affairs that preceded this one were one-point games, but unlike the three previous, this time Allen Central had the extra point when the buzzer sounded.

Betsy Layne jumped out to an early 10-4 lead but following a quick Johnny Martin timeout, the Rebels rallied back to trail by only one after the opening stanza.

Allen Central, on the strength of sophomore Rady Martin's eight points, opened up a six point lead of their own in the third quarter. In a 45-second stretch, Martin connected on all six of his charity stripe opportunities, and later added a field goal as the Rebels opened up a 33-27 halftime advantage.

In the third quarter, Stanton Bentley went to war on the inside for Allen Central, scoring six points, but the Bobcats' balanced attack brought Craynor Slone's club back into the contest. Betsy Layne trailed by only two points going into the final frame.

Senior point guard Bud Newsome tossed in a jumper from the top of the key to tie this contest up with 7:23 remaining in the game. Four times after that the game was tied, but after the Bobcats failed to score on an important possession, Ousley cashed in on the front end of a bonus opportunity as the Rebels upped their advantage to three times.

Betsy Layne, behind Bud Newsome who topped all scorers with 22 points, matched baskets with the Rebels but could never make up for that Ousley free throw with 2:22 remaining.

Being forced to score, which the Bobcats did, also forced them to foul in an attempt to keep Allen Central from running the clock out.

Betsy Layne did foul, and they stayed away from Allen Central's best free throw shooter, Roger Horne, but Bentley, Martin, and Ousley rose to the occasion.

With 19 seconds left and his team up by only one point, Rady Martin stepped to the free throw line. If the situation wasn't pressure enough, the fact that Betsy Layne scores over 60 percent of the time when they have the basketball should have been.

Either Martin is one cool customer or he didn't think about the situation, because the sophomore calmly sank both free throws to force Betsy Layne into a two-possession position to overtake Allen Central.

Five seconds later, Newsome hit on a driving layup, drawing the foul and getting a chance to tie the game up. The free throw fell short, and on the rebound Stanton Bentley drew the foul.

Not exactly a great foul shooter, Bentley repeated the feat Martin had just accomplished.

Bud Newsome once again went baseline to baseline to hit on another layup, and once again Betsy Layne fouled, this time Ronnie Ousley.

The burly senior guard-forward wasn't about to let Martin or Bentley be the only last second heroes, Ousley also hit two free throws, this time only six seconds remained before the Allen Central Rebels could fully celebrate.

And they did. The Prestonsburg Fieldhouse floor was flooded with parents, fans, and players who shared hugs, comments, and even tears of joy.

As the rewards were given out, Coach Johnny Martin sat on the Allen Central bench, fully enjoying his players' moment in the sun. Martin was also willing to catch a few rays, and why not. He deserved it.

Only twice in the past 18 years has a team come from either the third or fourth seed in the tournament and won a district title. Martin has done it twice.

In his nine years as a high school basketball coach, Johnny Martin has won five district titles, three in the 58th district. Martin wasn't boastful, nor was he eager to talk about this year, he is looking forward to next season, not for himself but for Allen Central High School.

"I hope it carries over to next year, that's what I hope," Martin said. "Just like Betsy Layne. Theirs just carries over from year to year."

Martin was pleased with his team's victory, as was the entire Allen Central program. The veteran coach is hoping that a district title might ease some tension among some uneasy situations.

"This season has been difficult both on and off the floor, especially in the past two months," Martin said. "Maybe this will smooth out some things."

Allen Central, who got to the finals with victories over Wheelwright, 47-42, and Prestonsburg, 56-44, earned their first district championship since 1982, once again under the capable direction of Johnny Martin.

INDIVIDUAL SCORING: Allen Central: Rady Martin, 17; Stanton Bentley, 14; Roger Horne, 12; Joey Conn, 10; Ronnie Ousley, 7.

Betsy Layne: Bud Newsome, 22; Jimmy Stumbo, 12; Todd Sturgill, 10; Duran Newsome, 6; Mike Vance, 5; Jamie Little, 4.

A COMBINED EFFORT: Allen Central High School deserved this moment of celebration. The entire school and community turned out to support their Rebels. Some of their wardrobes could be questioned, but not their enthusiasm and determination.

By Beating Betsy Layne...

Lady Blackcats Claim District Title

"I'm happy," Prestonsburg coach Bridgett Clay said after her Lady Blackcats claimed the 58th district title Saturday night. "I can't say how happy I am, because I don't know how happy I am, but I'm happy."

Clay had plenty to be happy about. Her players made sure of that when they defeated the Lady Bobcats, 51-50, in two overtimes.

Before the district tournament began, women's basketball at Prestonsburg hadn't been represented in a regional tournament since 1977, but the Lady Blackcats dumped a whole bucket of water on that dry spell, and by doing the same as they did then—winning the tournament.

Prestonsburg entered Saturday's game with the odds stacked against them, or at least the odds leaned toward Betsy Layne.

The night before, the Lady Blackcats were forced to play a longer game when Wheelwright forced an extra three-minute period, but Prestonsburg found enough energy, ability, and possibly luck to end up on top in a contest that wasn't decided until the third final buzzer sounded.

The biggest lead by either team was Prestonsburg's six point advantage in the third quarter. The Lady Blackcats also owned a five-point lead in the fourth quarter, but on both occasions, Betsy Layne battled back.

With 1:41 left in the third quarter, sophomore forward Karen Frasure, who finished with 19 points, hit one of two free throws to give Prestonsburg a 31-25 advantage.

The Lady Bobcats, however, quickly cut into the lead when Ladonna Parsons cashed in on a short jumpshot 11 seconds later.

Shon Burchett, with 1:19 showing on the clock, gave the Lady Blackcats back their six-point advantage, but Tammy Hall later answered with three free throws as Betsy Layne closed to within three points heading into the fourth quarter.

Frasure once again built on her team's lead when she opened fourth quarter scoring with a successful short jumpshot, but then is when the Lady Bobcats realized the tournament title was rapidly disappearing.

Ladonna Parsons and Tammy Hall responded with six points each as Betsy Layne slowly ate away at the Lady Blackcat small advantage. When Hall cashed in on both ends of a bonus opportunity, the two teams found themselves deadlocked at 44 each.

Hall's freethrows came with :45 remaining in regulation play, but neither team could find the scoring range in those last seconds.

The first overtime period went about the same as the first four quarters had—dead even. Prestonsburg received a field goal from April Stephens and Betsy Layne hit on two free throws, but the Lady Blackcats did have an excellent opportunity to end it before another three minutes had to be put on the clock.

With eight seconds left Shon Burchett, who led all scorers with 24 points, calmly sank two foul shots. Prestonsburg fans were ready to begin the celebration, but Sandy Flannery put that idea on hold, at least for the moment.

After a Diane Robinson timeout, the Lady Bobcats went the length of the floor, tying the score once again when Flannery stayed an errant pass and found the bottom of the basket just before the buzzer sounded.

Flannery had given Betsy Layne new life, but Prestonsburg made a living from it. Shon Burchett once again made herself a Lady Blackcat fan favorite by canning a jumpshot with 12 seconds remaining in the second overtime period.

This field goal gave Prestonsburg a one-point lead, and when the Lady Bobcats failed on a last second opportunity, proved to be the Lady Blackcats ticket into the district tournament's winners' circle.

Prestonsburg had defied the odds. The Lady Bobcats came into the tournament playing their best basketball, according to Coach Robinson, but the Lady Blackcats proved just a bit more hungry for something big, even without star guard Paula Harris.

Harris, who normally plays a leading role in Prestonsburg's game plan, has been nursing an injured knee. The Lady Blackcat guard played in Prestonsburg's 46-44 victory over Wheelwright, Friday, but was forced to sit out Saturday.

"Paula was a big loss to us, but we rallied around that as a team," Clay revealed. "We knew we had to play more as a team."

Coach Clay was also pleased with her prize senior and her star of tomorrow. "Shon showed tremendous leadership tonight, and Karen Frasure, who is only a sophomore, played like a senior."

Burchett and Frasure were key to Prestonsburg, but Betsy Layne has a star also, and Saturday she shone brightly. All season long Ladonna Parsons has led the Lady Bobcats. In the district final she continued that, tossing in a total of 20 points—the only Lady Bobcat to hit double figures.

Parsons, as Betsy Layne advanced to Saturday's district finals, scored 22 points in her team's opening round victory over McDowell.

In that game, Sandy Flannery accounted for 13 points, and reserve forward Piper Presnell added 10. For the Lady Daredevils, Gloria Mullins topped her team in scoring with 12 points.

Prestonsburg's trip to the finals wasn't as easy as the Lady Bobcat road. An inspired and prepared Wheelwright squad took the Lady Blackcats into overtime before falling two points.

Shon Burchett led Prestonsburg with 15 points, but Karen Frasure finished close behind, scoring 13, including the game winner with three seconds left in overtime.

Freshman Lady Trojan forward April Bradford sent out a message for what to expect next season, hitting for a game-high 17 points.

Sturgill Leads Betsy Layne Past McDowell And To Regional Tourney

When Craynor Slone first took over the helm as basketball coach at Betsy Layne his main objective was to merely continue the tradition already established.

To keep going what had already been started in Bobcat basketball wasn't exactly what any average coach would like to face.

But Craynor Slone isn't just an average coach. He has proved that before, and he proved it once again this season.

Coming into the season, Betsy Layne had only one starter back from last year's squad, Jimmy Stumbo, and only three players who had varsity experience.

With only one starter over 6'1", Slone knew he would be oversized by every team he played, but the veteran coach did have solid shooters to work with, and around this he continued the Betsy Layne High School tradition.

This tradition is the best of any school in eastern Kentucky, and possibly the entire state.

Since 1935, Bobcat teams have won 10 district tournament titles, and finished runners-up on 14 other occasions, more than any other Floyd county school in both categories.

One more number can be added to the runner-up side. Betsy Layne assured themselves of at least that when they defeated McDowell, 70-65, Thursday night.

Junior forward Todd Sturgill carried Betsy Layne past the Daredevils and to the district championship game by scoring a game-high 24 points.

McDowell stayed close early, actually leading by one point after the first quarter, but Sturgill caught fire inside, scoring 10 points in the second quarter as Betsy Layne opened up a 35-22 halftime advantage.

McDowell, though, has never been known as a team to surrender, and they didn't on this occasion.

Behind Brian Hall's eight points and Lenny Hall's six, the Daredevils slowly mounted a comeback. By the end of the third quarter McDowell had cut the Bobcat lead to 10.

Lenny Hall, who led McDowell, with 21 points, continued his offensive attack, and with a successful jumpshot with 4:07 showing on the fourth quarter clock cut the Bobcat lead to only five points.

In the first 11 minutes and 53 seconds of the second half, McDowell had outscored Betsy Layne 24-17 to climb back into contention, pulling to within five, but the Daredevils could get no closer.

Todd Sturgill and strong free throw shooting made sure of that.

After Lenny Hall brought his team to within five, Sturgill answered with a layup and two successful free throws, putting his Bobcats back up by nine points.

Forced to foul in an attempt to come back, the Daredevils put Betsy Layne on the charity stripe where the Bobcats responded with 16 of 19 shooting in the final 3:21 of the game.

During one stretch, Betsy Layne connected on 10 consecutive free throws, finishing the game 30-41 from the charity stripe.

McDowell, on the other hand, hit on 13 of 19 from the free throw line, but missed four front ends of bonus opportunities. Three of those came in the second quarter when the Daredevils were outscored 24-10.

Junior forward Lenny Hall led McDowell in scoring, tossing in 21 while Dickie Joe Shannon and Brian Hall added 17 points each. Sophomore point guard Henry Webb rounded out Daredevil scoring with two points.

Sturgill topped Betsy Layne, and all scorers with his 24 points. The Bobcat guard duo of Duran Newsome and Bud Newsome combined for 25 points, scoring 13 and 12 respectively.

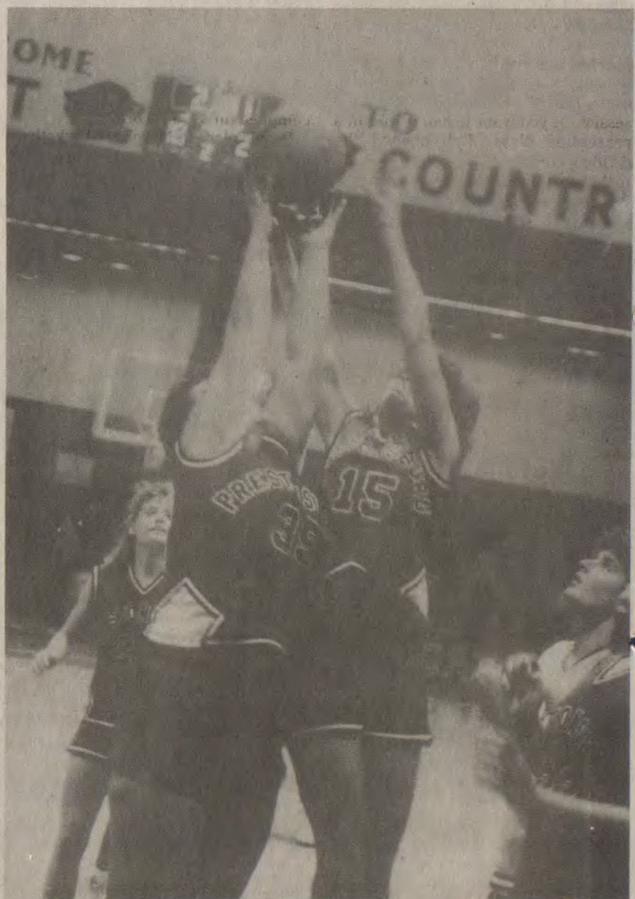

With the win, Betsy Layne advances on to the regional tournament which will begin this Friday night at Virgie High School.

This year's trip marks the ninth consecutive time a Betsy Layne basketball team has earned a regional tournament berth, and the 12th one in the past 15 tries.

Junior Newsome, who coach Craynor Slone gives credit for the success of this year's squad, led the Bobcats to 11 of those happy journeys and now Slone has sent out a message of reassurance to Betsy Layne fans that their success won't die.

Under Slone this season the Bobcats have claimed a championship in the Floyd County Pre-season tournament, won the Floyd County Conference title, and finished as runners-up to Allen Central in the 58th district tournament.

Now Betsy Layne sets their sights on the 15th region tournament. The Bobcats have proven they can play with the region's best, beating Virgie and falling to Paintsville, on the road, by only seven.

TRULY A TEAM REBOUND: The Prestonsburg Lady Blackcats crashed the boards hard during the district tournament, one reason why they won the championship.

THE SPORTING TIMES

Every major media publication has given it their best shot. From the Sporting News to the Morehead News, everyone has brought attention to Morehead State University's center of attention, Bob McCann.

I too, want to jump on the McCann band wagon. But mine must be different. Not better, those guys are good, but in the least I want mine to take on a different look, and hopefully a different meaning.

Anyone who claims to be a basketball fan knows what kind of success Bob McCann has enjoyed the past three seasons, but this doesn't tell the total tale of his rags to riches story.

The Ashland Daily Independent would like to take credit for discovering the incredible talents of McCann. So would the Lexington Herald-Leader, but neither can.

The first time I ever heard of this man's basketball talents was early in the school year of 1983. I was at a fraternity brother's house when his roommate and fellow Sigma Pi, Curtis Smith, returned from playing basketball.

Curtis was raving about this monster man he had been playing with. "He's awesome," Curtis said. "I don't know who he is. Someone said he was a transfer, and he'll be able to play next year. Boy, somebody is in trouble because Morehead has never had a player like him before."

We took Curtis with a joke and a smile. He was a great guy but sometimes he was known to exaggerate the situation. He didn't this time, because the person Curtis was talking about was none other than Bob McCann.

Not many people knew McCann, or even knew of him. To everyone except Wayne Martin, Bob was just another student, a tall one, but still just another student.

In his first year, McCann spent his time being a student. Because he had transferred from a junior college after only one year, Bob was forced to sit out two semesters.

Bob didn't give up basketball that season, though. Just about every day the 6'9" 250-pound MSU student could be seen in Morehead's Laughlin Health Building grinding it out in pick up games.

Word of this new-found talent spread across the campus like fire through sage brush, and Bob became widely known, even before he had put on the MSU blue and gold.

Lady Bobcats Fall To Belfry

Monday night the Betsy Layne Lady Bobcats saw their basketball season come to an abrupt end when they fell victim to Belfry 83-64 in opening round action of the 15th region tournament.

With the loss Betsy Layne ended their successful season at 17-10 while the Lady Pirates, with a 17-11 record, advances to semi-final round action where they will take on Sheldon Clark.

In this 1986-87 season the Lady Bobcats captured a Floyd County Pre-season Tournament championship, earned a share of the conference title, and finished as runners-up in the 58th district tournament, but no one wanted it to end this soon—this way.

"Definitely not," Coach Diane Robinson said. "We played a real good first quarter, and were down by three at halftime, but in the second half we just fell apart."

Coming into Monday's contest the Lady Bobcats were playing on one day's rest, following a tough loss in double overtime to Prestonsburg.

Coach Robinson says that fatigue may have played a part in her team's loss, but she isn't making any excuses.

"That definitely had to be a factor, but we didn't play up to our capabilities, especially in that second half."

"Our shots were falling in the first quarter," Robinson continued. "But they played a much faster paced game than we did. We made a lot of turnovers in the second half. They stepped in the passing lanes and we just didn't come to the ball like we should have."

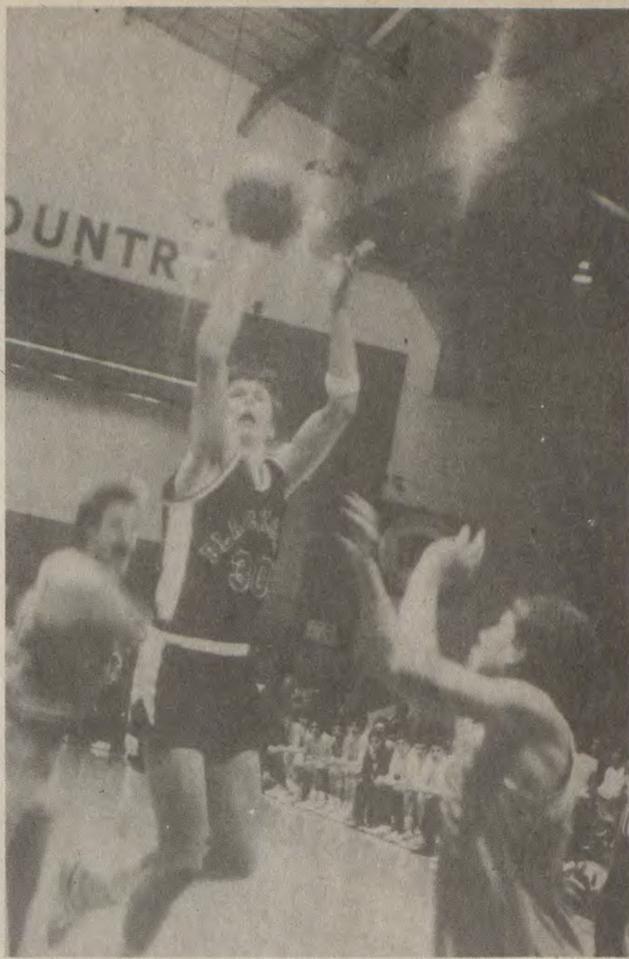

In Monday's regional contest with Belfry, Ladonna Parsons once again led Betsy Layne in scoring, closing out her Lady Bobcat career with 22 points.

Sandy Flannery added 12 points, and Tammy Hall chipped in with 10 points.

Although the season ended sooner than Betsy Layne players and coaches wanted it to, they did treat their fans to another successful season.

"I was pleased with our regular season success," Diane Robinson said.

"With the schedule we played, we played every team in the regional tournament, and came out with a 16-8 record, I'm pleased with that because we played a tough schedule." "But I can't say that I'm pleased with our tournament play."

FINAL MOMENT OF GLORY: David Martin closed out his Prestonsburg basketball career with a total of 24 points against Allen Central. Martin proved this season that he is as good as anyone the 15th region had to offer.

On the basketball court Morehead State was enjoying their best season ever, trashing every effort OVC teams threw at them. Most fans didn't concern themselves with Earl Harrison, Guy Minniefield, or Jeff Tipton—they were waiting for next season when that big man could play.

MSU fans had to wait, though, and so did Bob McCann. McCann did survive the year without basketball, and so did the fans.

In that one school year Bob did something which proved to be more important than anything he did on the court, before or since.

McCann showed everyone on the Morehead State University campus that he wasn't just a basketball player. Attending class was important, and so were his classmates, the same people who would eventually be his biggest fans.

Bob didn't attempt to bring attention to himself, he wasn't that type of person. Neither did he use his obvious basketball abilities to put himself above anyone else. Except for being '69' he fit in rather well as just another student.

That same year I had a recreation class with Bob, along with several other basketball players.

In class McCann was quiet, almost appearing to be shy at times. One day, though, Bob left all this in his dorm room. During a lecture and note taking session, if you want to call it that in a recreation class, Bob opened the dividing curtain, slid his chair back into the adjoining room, and reclosed the curtain, leaving only his feet in our classroom.

Bob did all this so quietly that no one knew until the teacher himself brought attention to the situation. Bob re-joined us, and got a big laugh, but never said a word.

In those days, Bob had fun just being a Morehead student, and he was also a Morehead fan. I will never forget the day when I gave Bob and Eagle guard Rob Barker a ride up campus.

When I had left my room I carefully wore my roommate's Louisville hat. Bob didn't appreciate this. "Hey man," Bob said in his intimidatingly deep voice, "What you doing with that Louisville hat on your head?" "Get yourself a Morehead hat, and get rid of that Louisville hat."

I never gave Bob another ride, not because I took offense to what he had said, but darn it Bob, I just couldn't afford that Morehead hat.

Probably the best memory I have of Bob was the day he met his match. Never before had anyone stood up to Bob McCann, and never since then, but on this day McCann was shunned.

We had been selected by our recreation instructor, to play nursemaids for his wife's grade school class. Hey, we figured it as an easy way to complete this course.

The trip was to Carter Caves. Some of us were selected to lead a group through the caves—a tour guide wasn't enough for these children.

Bob, among others, drew KP duty. About lunch time we all gathered in the picnic area, ready for some hotdogs, chips, and something to drink.

One youngster decided he wanted to play some more before eating. "Hey little boy!" Bob bellowed. "Get yourself over here and get a hotdog." The little boy went on about his play, unimpressed with Bob's orders.

Many people didn't know Bob McCann then. We did, though. He was a likeable person, but everyone knew where Bob McCann was going.

I did an article on Bob for MSU's yearbook, The Raconteur. He told me that he wanted to play in the NBA. I understood his talents, and his desire, but a professional basketball player from Morehead—that seemed impossible to me.

But when you realize what you want, and are willing to work hard enough, nothing is impossible. Many NBA scouts have put Bob in their top ten selections to be drafted this year.

I'm glad, Bob is a great basketball player, but he is also a kind and concerned person. He deserves every good thing that will happen to him. Bob McCann knew what he wanted, and he went out and got it, mostly on his own.

Oh sure, he is now getting some big time ink, but I wonder where those writers were when Bob first started playing. He needed them then. Now they need him. I guess that's where they were.

SHORT SPORTS

Betsy Layne High School didn't capture any first place hardware in the 58th district tournament, but individually the Bobcats earned several honors.

As voted upon by the coaches and sponsored by WMDJ radio, Ladonna Parsons, Lady Bobcat senior forward who averaged 20 points per contest, was named the Floyd County Conference's Women's Player of the Year.

In a similar honor, Jimmy Stumbo was named Male Player of the Year. Stumbo led Betsy Layne in scoring with a 14-point average per game.

Coach of the year in women's basketball was shared. As they did in the conference race, Diane Robinson, of Betsy Layne, and Prestonsburg leading lady, Bridgett Clay, tied for the honor.

Nobody forced Craynor Slone to share his coach of the year title. The first year Bobcat head man was the clear-cut choice for this honor.

Morehead State University is currently looking for someone to head their basketball team for the 1987-88 season.

Wayne Martin, a nine-year veteran of MSU basketball, left the school this past week for a position at WYMT television in Hazard.

In Martin's nine seasons at Morehead State, he built a 130-120 record, quitting as the Eagles' third winningest basketball coach.

Before Martin came to Eagle Country, he spent four years at the helm of Pikeville College basketball where he compiled an 85-35 record.

People close to Morehead basketball were stunned with Martin's retirement. No replacement has been found, and only a few names mentioned.

The National Basketball Association Saturday set June 22 as the date when professional basketball teams select the college players they want to make a part of their organization.

The NBA draft lottery will be held May 19, and one player they may be drawing for is Bob McCann.

Many pro scouts have listed Morehead State's McCann in their top 10 list, and the '69' package of basketball power could be the first power forward drafted this summer.

In three years, McCann scored and rebounded enough to rank high on MSU's all-time list in both categories.

The senior ended his career at Morehead State with 1,436 points, good enough for ninth on this all-time list, while ending up sixth in rebounds with a total of 857.

Heavyweight boxer, Bonecrusher Smith, pulled an upset Saturday night, but still lost the match.

Smith stepped into the ring with Mike Tyson, Saturday, and went the distance after experts said he wouldn't last three rounds with the heavy punching champion.

Nevertheless, Tyson captured a unanimous decision over Bonecrusher while retaining his heavyweight title.

Tyson now sets his sights on Michael Spinks as the title unification series continues toward a single heavyweight champion.

From disagreeing with the three-point shot to his team's inability to win Denny Crum has found reason to cry and complain.

Now Crum, Louisville's head basketball coach, has reason to continue his crying all summer.

This past week, Crum's Cardinals fell 75-52 to Memphis State in the Metro Conference's final tournament. The Louisville coach opposed Memphis State even to be allowed to play in the tournament, because they were ineligible for NCAA play.

With the loss to Memphis State, Louisville fell to 18-14, and as a result last year's national champion failed to get a bid into this year's tournament.

The Kentucky Wildcats received an at-large bid from the NCAA selection this past Sunday.

Kentucky will take on Ohio State, from the Big Ten, this Friday night from the Omni in Atlanta, Georgia.

If the 'Cats defeat Ohio State, they will play the winner of a Georgetown-Bucknell matchup. The Hoyas are the number one seed in the Southeast region.

North Carolina was selected as the top seed in the East region, while out west UNLV got the number one nod. Indiana with Bobby Knight was selected as the top team in the Midwest region.

In Regional Tourney...

Rebels Tangle With Pikeville Bobcats Take On Paintsville

Combine a little bit of luck with a lot of basketball talent and what you have is a regional tournament contender.

Allen Central's talent is already widely known, and this past Sunday the Rebels received the luck that could very well put them in the tournament's championship round.

In the regional tournament draw held Sunday, Allen Central received possibly the best selection they could.

The Rebels will play Friday night, the opening night of the tournament, when they take on Pikeville. The Panthers have the worst record of any tournament team, 10-19, but Allen Central isn't exactly guaranteed a victory.

Playing without senior center Stanton Bentley, Johnny Martin's club lost a one-point affair, February 3, at Pikeville.

"I think we're playing better now than we played then, but so is Pikeville," Coach Johnny Martin said. "They have improved a lot."

After the first 10 games of the season, Pikeville certainly wasn't considered a team likely to appear in this year's regional tournament, but under former Allen Central coach Howard Wallen, the Panthers have since beaten the Rebels, defeated Johnson Central, stayed close to Paintsville, and lost by only six points to Virgie in the 59th district championship.

Allen Central has also played inspired and effective basketball of late, coming from the third seed to capture a 58th district title. The Rebels were on everyone's top five pre-season 15th region list, and have proven they deserve to have been there the past two weeks.

"We've been playing pretty well lately," Martin said. "The Wheelwright game we didn't play well, but still won, and in the first half of the Prestonsburg game, but after that we reverted to what had been working for us earlier."

Allen Central under Martin, has finished as runners-up in the regional tournament twice and Johnny Martin has done the feat another time with Sheldon Clark.

No doubt, the Rebel head man would like to take his success even further, but may not be disappointed regardless of what his team does.

"I want to go as far as I can, whether it's first, second, or third," Martin said. "Some people might say that if they can't win they don't want to go, but I just want us to go as far as we can."

Allen Central is in a position that could propel them a long way in the regional tournament, but other than an improved Pikeville team, Belfry and Magoffin County are also in the Rebel bracket.

"It was a good draw, probably the best that we could have gotten," Johnny Martin revealed. "We stayed away from the top two teams, Paintsville and Virgie. Belfry is tough—they're probably the number three team—but this draw was the best for us."

Johnny Martin was pleased with his draw, the reasons were obvious, but Craynor Slone wasn't exactly pleased with Betsy Layne's position.

Slone's Bobcats will meet tournament favorite Paintsville, Saturday night, in the evening's second contest.

Paintsville enters the tournament with the best record, 27-4, of any of the eight-team field. The Tigers have been ranked among the state's top 10 schools, and already own a seven-point victory over the Bobcats this season.

Even with their past success, and their obvious talents, Slone isn't about to submit to the powerful Paintsville Tigers.

"Anything can happen in one game, and we're going in with the attitude that we can win," the first year Bobcat coach said.

Slone says that Paintsville's size inside, John Pelphrey, 6'7", and Joey Couch, 6'3", and also their tournament experience—the Tigers have won the 15th region tournament the past two seasons—are the two things concerning him the most.

Betsy Layne's previous loss came on the Tigers' home floor. This time the two teams will hook up on a neutral floor at Virgie High School. The Bobcats have proven that they have some definite talent and ability of their own, plus having one of the best coaches in Kentucky may be enough to produce a Betsy Layne victory.

"If we play the way we're capable of playing, then we can win," Slone said. "We don't have anything special planned. We're just going to play the same way we have all season."

Even if Betsy Layne beats Paintsville, the Virgie Eagles will more than likely be waiting for another shot at the Bobcats. Virgie will play Johns Creek in Saturday's other game.

The 1987 15th region tournament will begin Friday night at Virgie High School. Allen Central and Pikeville will open the tournament with Magoffin County, 14-12, and Belfry, 21-8, battling in Friday's second game.

Saturday night, host Virgie will take on Johns Creek at 7. The Eagles boast a 21-6 record while Johns Creek comes in at 15-12. Betsy Layne, 18-12, and Paintsville will conclude the tournament's opening round.

The 15th region's semi-final round will be played Monday night with the championship game set for Tuesday night.

1987 Hunting Seasons Set

Kentucky's small game seasons will open Nov. 24 while closing dates and bag limits will remain unchanged, according to regulations adopted by the Fish and Wildlife Resources' Commission at its quarterly meeting in Frankfort Mar. 1-2.

Quail and rabbit seasons will run through the third Sunday in February (Feb. 21). Grouse season will continue to have its traditional close on the last day of February (Feb. 29) and furbearers (hunting and trapping) through Jan. 31. No changes were made in bag limits for any small game or furbearer species.

Squirrel season will open the third Saturday in August (Aug. 15) and will run through Oct. 31, with the second phase of the split season scheduled to open Nov. 24 continuing through Dec. 31.

In other action, the commission established ten deer hunting zones for the state's upcoming deer gun season, set to open the second Saturday in November (Nov. 14) in zones one through seven. Zone eight will open Nov. 19 and zone nine will open Nov. 21. The season will close Nov. 23 in all zones.

A special muzzleloader season was set for the second weekend in December (Dec. 12-13) for either sex hunting in zones one through six.

Bow hunters in zones one through seven may take any deer during the Oct. 1-Dec. 31 archery season but are limited to bucks only in zones eight and nine. Crossbows will be permitted during the Nov. 24-Dec. 3 portion of the archery season.

Lady Blackcat Week Proclaimed

Mayor Ann Latta has been caught up in the new craze that is sweeping the city of Prestonsburg—it's called Lady Blackcat basketball.

This past Saturday night the Lady Blackcats captured the 58th district championship. In recognition of this accomplishment, as well as their season long success, Mayor Latta has proclaimed this week as Lady Blackcat week in Prestonsburg.

The Lady Blackcats are under the coaching direction of Bridgett Clay and Cindy Wells. Team members include: Shon Burchett, Michelle Clemmons, Trish Click, Missy Cornett, Karen Frasure, Paula Harris, Amy Hicks, Flo Jervis, Zelma Quillen, Carolyn Short, Clarissa Short, and April Stephens.

Mayor Latta asks that all residents of Prestonsburg enter into this appreciation for the Lady Blackcat basketball team.

"Rainbows, Spotlights, And Other Updates"

Folks have been reeling in some pretty scrappy rainbow trout over at Paintsville Lake during the past couple of weeks or so. Or at least that's what friends and acquaintances have been telling me (busy, busy).

Some dour types have complained about the flavor of these remarkable little fish, however. One can only assume that the same folks who make these remarks would also prefer Thunderbird wine to Mouton-Rothschild! There truly is no accounting for taste.

Other friends have cast culinary votes for bluegills and their relatives. Personally, I like blue catfish and channel cats but have not made a career out of turning any of it down when offered.

Kentucky's Supreme Court has agreed to review a lower court decision which declared a state law against "spotlighting" deer or other wildlife unconstitutional.

"We are pleased that the Supreme Court has decided to settle this issue once and for all," said Don R. McCormick, commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "This law is a big help in our battle against poachers and we are hopeful that, when the court considers all the facts in this case, it will rule in our favor."

The law, which prohibits anyone with a firearm in possession from shining a spotlight from a road or in a field or forest, was criticized as being too broad by the state court of appeals last November when that court struck down the law. Until the case is settled by the Supreme Court, wildlife officers will continue to use other existing laws to combat illegal spotlighting. McCormick said.

"We hope to have a decision before this next fall, the season when illegal deer poaching becomes a real problem," McCormick added.

Deer feed along roadsides and in open fields at night, making them easy prey for illegal spotlighters who use powerful lights to locate and immobilize the deer before shooting them.

With the weather finally beginning to fair up, at least sporadically, people are going to begin cooking out again. There goes the diet.

At any rate, everybody knows you can't cook out, at least not properly, without a good barbecue sauce. Sure, you can purchase barbecue sauce off your grocer's shelves, but then we said GOOD barbecue sauce, now, didn't we? Here's one of my favorite recipes for making your own. Ingredients: 1 large bottle of catsup, 1/2 cup of finely chopped onions, 4 tsp. chili powder, 1 tsp. garlic powder, 1 tsp. coarse ground black pepper, 1/2 tsp. lemon pepper, 4 tsp. sugar, 3 (tbsp. vinegar, 1/2 tsp. salt, 2 tsp. celery salt, one quarter cup steak sauce.

Directions: Mix all the ingredients and let the concoction set up overnight. Cook for 10 minutes over low heat (this recipe scorches easy, so DO keep a low flame). Enjoy!

Bassin With the Pros...

How To Make Points With Bass

One way to get real acquainted with an unknown lake is to fish its points—land extensions which gradually slope to great depths. These formations attract predatory heavyweights at the "right" levels. Finding the right level is the key to a productive day.

The smart fisherman will systematically separate that point into areas, with the first range being 5-10 feet, the next 10-20 feet, and so on. Different pros use different lures and techniques depending upon the water temperature and whether bass are holding to structure or are suspended.

"We usually start out with small baits, like a Fat Gibson or a hair jig with a U2 or U3 eel on it," states Guido Hibdon of the Johnson Outboards Pro Team. "Color really doesn't make a difference, but I prefer black, brown or purple. As things warm up a little bit, we'll start increasing the size of our baits and up through April I'll go to a rubber jig, usually a #11, and throw a crank bait some."

"You can put on a crank bait that will run 10 feet deep," Hibdon continues, "and cover a lot of ground. It's a good bait to find fish on and I like a Bomber Model A, any shad type or crawdad type color; or a Bagley Killer Bee 3, which is also a good choice in a number of colors such as a brown chartreuse crawdad or your grey ghost colored Tennessee shad."

Jigging is also a technique which can produce many fish along a point. Lure selection for this can range from the worm, grub or spoon. But by far, the plastic worm seems to be the favorite here. The plastic worm can be a killer as it slowly slithers down the incline of the point, hitting rocks and other underwater structure, or when freely falling from a ledge past lurking lunkers below.

On very windy days, a rule of thumb is to cast into the wind. That wind, as it chops at the surface waters, creates a current and as we know bass face into currents. By casting into the wind, you will be retrieving with the current instead of against it.

Another thing to remember about fishing points: Pros use spoons to locate bass and worms and jigs to nail them.

The Johnson and Evinrude service experts at OMC advise boaters to check the condition of the water pump on their outboard motor during the winter off-season, especially if you do much boating in shallow, sandy or mucky water. Sand and grit encountered under these conditions can wear the rubber pump impeller and reduce pump efficiency. Excessive wear can lead to pump failure and overheating. Consult your owner's manual or your local dealer for instruction on inspecting the pump on your motor.

SPORTS SHORTS

Here's one to think about when you're watching the 1988 Winter Olympics: In the 1984 Olympics at Sarajevo, U.S. skiers won a total of five medals, more than any other country that participated.

One thing you'll see less of at the next Olympics: injuries. That's due to a sportsmedicine program to improve the overall fitness of the U.S. Ski Team. Four inter-related services aid the skiers: research, psychological testing, education and medical service. Shaklee Corporation is program sponsor and official nutrition consultant to the team.

One of the most innovative facets of training these days is wind tunnel testing, a highly technical approach to determine aerodynamic variables of both alpine and nordic skiing. Skiers train at wind speeds of 60 miles per hour, simulating actual downhill course conditions.

Fish For Money At Dewey Lake

About 1,000 tagged crappies will be released in Dewey Lake this spring, and the tags will be worth $5 to any angler who reels in one of the crappies.

The tagging is an effort by state biologists to study the ambulence, growth, survival and harvest of the fish, requested by crappie anglers across the state. Dewey Lake has been chosen as one of several lakes to be studied.

When a tagged fish is caught, the tag may be redeemed for $5 by sending it to the Department of Fish and Wildlife, No. 1 Game Farm Road, Frankfort, Ky. 40601. At the end of the year, tags from all over the state will be combined for a drawing that will award one lucky angler with a cash prize of $1,000.

Currently, the crappie population in Dewey Lake is "not up to par," according to Jeff Yurk, fisheries biologist. The research program should provide some answers to improve the situation, he said.

Several other changes also have been made at the lake recently in an effort to improve fishing. Fish-attracting brush piles have been sunk throughout the lake, over the winter months, to help concentrate fish in particular areas, thus making the fish more accessible to anglers.

A new regulation is in effect this year which increases the size limit on largemouth bass from 12 to 15 inches and removes the 12-inch size limit on spotted (Kentucky) bass. This new regulation was requested by anglers and is expected to increase the number of trophy-sized bass in the lake within about three years. Largemouth and spotted bass can be differentiated by the presence or absence of teeth on their tongues, according to Yurk. Spotted bass have teeth on their tongues, he said, whereas largemouth bass do not.

Also, a creel clerk will be interviewing anglers on Dewey Lake from March through October of this year. Fishing success and fishing pressure will be evaluated through these interviews for each species caught on the lake.

Bill Backs Return Of State Hatchery

Today U.S. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) introduced legislation to return the Frankfort National Fish Hatchery to Kentucky ownership.

"Under federal ownership, the Frankfort hatchery has bred channel catfish, black bass, bluegill, walleye and hybrid stripers for Kentucky and neighboring states' waters for nearly four decades," McConnell said. "The federal government no longer wants to run the hatchery yet continues to assert management prerogatives and title to the very facility it hoped to abandon."

In the early 1950s, the Commonwealth of Kentucky created a warm-water fish hatchery on Elkhorn Creek near Frankfort. Later, the federal government assumed operations of the hatchery and ownership of the land.

According to McConnell, the hatchery has not been adequately funded in recent years and has been placed on a list for closure a number of times. In 1986 the Commonwealth of Kentucky agreed to lease the facility for 25 years. But since the federal government is still the actual owner of the hatchery, Kentucky must obtain specific approval on most management decisions or proposed changes.

"The fish hatchery in Frankfort has been the source of much enjoyment for our recreational fisherman and I see no reason the sport should be threatened," McConnell said. "Since the Commonwealth of Kentucky has already made a long-term commitment to run and finance the hatchery for its maximum benefit, it should be returned to its original owner without cumbersome restrictions," McConnell said.

Francis To Participate In Leadership Kentucky

Prestonsburg attorney William G. Francis will be a member of the 1987 class of "Leadership Kentucky", a statewide leadership development program now in its third year, it was announced last week.

The 50 Leadership Kentucky class participants meet in seven locations around the state for seven monthly sessions. The class will be exposed to critical issues facing Kentucky in health and human services, the economy, law and justice, education, government, media and history of the state.

Leadership Kentucky, Inc., was created in 1984 as a non-profit statewide educational program in partnership with the Kentucky Chamber of Commerce to develop the talent and tap the energies of Kentucky's present and future leaders.

Comp Care Centers Get Funds To Treat Some DUI Offenders

The Kentucky Department for Mental Health and Mental Retardation Services will channel more than $1.8 million into treatment and prevention education programs for persons convicted of driving under the influence (DUI) in the state's 14 mental health regions.

The budgeted funding of $1,756,861 has been increased with an additional $115,120 in unanticipated revenue.

"The projects are being funded through the Cabinet for Human Resources allotment of the service fee collected by the courts on all DUI convictions," said department Commissioner Dennis Boyd. The service fee was approved by the 1984 General Assembly as part of the "Slammer Bill," which imposed stiffer penalties for persons convicted of drunk driving.

Mountain Comprehensive Care Center will get $85,394 under the program.

"The amount allotted to each region is based on the amount collected from service fees in that area," said Boyd. "Most of the money is being used to provide detoxification, residential and outpatient treatment for DUI offenders who are alcoholics or drug addicts."

The treatment programs are very important in helping drivers with one DUI conviction avoid becoming repeat offenders, according to Director Mike Townsend of the department's Division of Substance Abuse.

"Statistics show that 53 percent of first-time DUI offenders were diagnosed as having a serious problem with alcohol or drugs," said Townsend.

"Many people think a jail term often deters a first-term DUI offender from drinking and driving again, but that's not always the case," said Townsend. "A jail term won't eliminate the alcohol or drug problem. It's just a temporary solution to the drinking and driving episode. Treatment is often the most effective way to deal with the problem."

Kentucky's network of comprehensive care centers has an advantage because drunk driving offenders can receive assessment, education and treatment by the same agency, he added.

"If someone has a dependency problem, a variety of services are available through the comprehensive care centers, such as detoxification, outpa-

IN APPRECIATION of his "significant contribution of time and effort" to the raising of funds for new band uniforms, Dr. James D. Adams, left, received a plaque last week from John South, outgoing president of the Prestonsburg High School Marching Band boosters' club. In six months, $12,500 was raised to buy 70 band uniforms, South said. The plaque presentation was made during Wednesday's meeting of the Floyd Board of Education, of which Adams is chairman.

Fireworks Display

If you want to celebrate the fourth of July early, watch for a short fireworks display Thursday (March 12) around 8 p.m. The City of Prestonsburg will be conducting a test in the Archer Park area, to see what shot location will let the most people view this summer's fireworks extravaganza.

Fire Chief Tom Blackburn, who directs the annual July Fourth fireworks show, said the department is looking at an alternate site at a higher elevation. "We've been doing the shows from within the Park," Blackburn said, "and we draw a lot of people from all over this area. We hope, if we can set them off higher, even more people can see them over a broader area."

Prestonsburg is one of the few cities in the Eastern Kentucky area to continue doing Fourth of July fireworks shows, and the City is making plans now to try to have this year's show bigger and better than ever. "We are seeking contributions from business and civic groups, and from private citizens," Mayor Latta said, "to help defray the costs of the fireworks. The more money we are able to raise, the better the show will be."

Mayor Latta said watchers will be posted in various areas of the city Thursday night, to see how far the test display can be seen. "We hope it will be visible and provide a better show from the downtown business district, the park, the shopping centers, and anywhere else where there is ample parking for people to come and see," she said.

A program committee has been set up to receive contributions. Anyone wishing to help can contact program Chairwoman Mrs. Rosalee Rose, at 886-9647.

What's an amateur? Answer varies from sport to sport

By Marty Linehan

The 1988 Olympic games in Seoul, Korea, might well be called the "Open Olympics."

Last month, the International Olympic Committee unanimously approved a code of tennis eligibility that will enable the sport's top professionals to represent their countries on the Olympic courts.

Olympic eligibility rules vary widely from sport to sport. In hockey, for instance, there are no restrictions, although the National Hockey League says it won't close the season down so its players can become Olympians.

In soccer, the field is open to anyone, pro or amateur, as long as they haven't played in World Cup matches for European or South American countries. Professional basketball players in Europe are eligible for the Games, but players in the National Basketball Association and the Continental Basketball Association in the United States are not.

Baseball, which was introduced to the Olympics in Los Angeles in 1984, is still on a strict amateur basis.

Tennis eligibility rules, which are about the most liberal for all sports, do have a few interesting nos-

According to rules recently set down by the Tennis Federation, which must be ratified by the full International Olympic Committee in May, a professional player would have to temporarily cut ties to personal coaches, agents, managers and trainers.

He or she would have to give up prize money and endorsement contracts for the duration of the games and for a two-week training period prior to the games. And a player would automatically be ineligible if he refused to play in Davis Cup matches or for the Federation Cup.

Luckily for the top pros, the Seoul games start on Sept. 17, and the period in which the players will have to give up their prize money and endorsements begins right after the U.S. Open ends.

Speaking of money, members of the IOC may have had cold cash on their minds when they brought tennis into the Olympic fold. The committee is asking for big bucks for the television rights, and — let's face it — who wants to pay good money to watch weight-lifting, hammer-throwing and acrobatic dancing?

But putting tennis stars such as Boris Becker, Jimmy Connors, John McEnroe and Ivan Lendl in matches that last hours would make a strong TV selling point — and would give the networks plenty of opportunities to slip in a few commercials.

If the proposal is accepted by the full IOC in May, tennis play will only be in effect for the 1988 games. But tennis could become a permanent part of the Olympic games. That probably will depend on how well the tennis stars help sell the TV rights.

Even Fast Food Can Be Healthy For The Discriminating Diner

Does eating at fast food restaurants have to wreck your diet and health? Nutrition experts say not necessarily—if you're careful about your choices.

"Fast food restaurants are trying to offer some low-calorie, healthy foods," said Cindy Sullivan, a registered dietitian in the Kentucky Department for Health Services. "Customers just have to look for the healthy foods and be aware of the things to stay away from." During National Nutrition Month in March, Health Services hopes to make people aware of the best nutritional choices.

For example, pizza is not a bad fast food—as long as it isn't loaded with meats and extra cheese. Order pizza with vegetable toppings, Sullivan said.

When eating from a salad bar, avoid bacon bits, prepared salads, cheese, meat, fried vegetables and extra salad dressing, she said. "Select as many fresh vegetables and fruits as possible," Sullivan recommends, "and look for low-cal dressing."

Many fast food restaurants serve baked potatoes—a good nutritional choice as long as the potato is not piled up with cheese and meat toppings. "Stick with margarine if you want a potato topping," she said. "If you must have something more, substitute cottage cheese for sour cream. Cottage cheese is lower in cholesterol and provides protein and some calcium."

Lots of people mistakenly believe that eating fish and chicken at a fast food restaurant is more healthy than eating a burger, Sullivan said.

"It's true that fish and chicken have much less fat than hamburger," she said, "but if they're fried in beef tallow, they'll have just as many and maybe more calories and fat than burgers. If you eat fried food, find out what it's fried in—vegetable oil is better than tallow or vegetable shortening.

"You can also look for grilled, baked and broiled items, which a lot of chains have added to their menus," she said.

"You can find some acceptable choices at any fast food restaurant—if you just try," said Sullivan.

For those who want to find their way through the fast food maze, Sullivan recommends The Fast Food Guide, a paperback that gives nutritional analyses of 15 top fast food chains.

Sullivan offers these additional tips for choosing fast food.

You can save on sodium by cutting down on pickles, mustard, ketchup, cheese, mayonnaise and tartare sauce. Request burgers and french fries prepared without salt.

Order water, juice, lowfat milk or diet soft drinks to cut down on calories.

Ordering sandwiches without cheese, mayonnaise or tartare sauce also saves calories.

Take the skin off fried chicken to save fat and calories.

Sullivan says that many of these tips can be followed at home for healthier eating all around.

Mr. Clark and Mrs. Fricks Are Shown Discussing The Fine Results She Has Received From Use of Easy-Rub.

A Testimony For EASY-RUB Arthritis Pain Relieving Lotion

For two years Mrs. Dorothy Inez Fricks of Birmingham, Ala., has been a victim of arthritis. Affecting her whole body, arthritis has been more prevalent in her spine. In extreme pain and not able to stand straight, turn over in bed, etc., she has been practically an invalid. Her husband, Milo, said there were many times he had to place hot water bottles or heating pads on his wife while she laid perfectly still.

But, Mrs. Fricks, mother of Bill Fricks of Sylvester, said that it is just like a miracle has happened. She began using Easy Rub Arthritis Pain Relieving Lotion approximately two weeks ago. Mrs. Fricks says there is no more pain and she has stopped taking the pain medicine which she took approximately twice a day. She can stand straight, turn over in bed and all she never thought she'd be able to do again. "Her friends are amazed," Mrs. Fricks said.

Mrs. Fricks had also developed skin problems which she felt were caused by some of the medicine she was required to take for her condition. This skin rash is gradually disappearing and she gives Easy Rub the credit.

At first, when Bill, her son, asked her to try this new arthritis medicine Mrs. Fricks was very skeptical. She said she had tried so many and nothing seemed to help. But, with his constant encouragement, she tried it.

"I've been bathing in that stuff," she says.

Easy Rub Arthritis Pain Relieving Lotion, an old-fashioned family remedy, was brought to the market in March of 1986 by Frank Clark of Omega Incorporated under the name of Agee Enterprises, Inc.

MCA Leads Math Competition Sponsored by Engineer Group

Mountain Christian Academy dominated a field of seven area middle schools which competed at Prestonsburg Community College on Saturday in a mathematics competition sponsored by the U.S. Society of Professional Engineers.

Mathcounts was introduced four years ago by the national engineers' society as a way of interesting seventh- and eighth-graders in math and scientific careers, said Mary Westfall, an engineer with Bocook Engineering in Paintsville and Mathcounts coordinator for the Ky. Society of Engineers' Big Sandy Chapter.

"We want to tell them there's more to life than sports, that they will need to know their math," Westfall said. "Before they get into computers, they

Overall winner here Saturday was the four-member Mountain Christian Academy (MCA) team, followed by Pikeville Jr. High, Paintsville Jr. High, Feds Creek Elementary, Prestonsburg Elementary, Garret Elementary, and Inez Middle School.

Individual winners were, in order: Robyn Williams, MCA; Matthew Elliott, MCA; Becca Taylor, Paintsville; Mamata Majmudar, MCA; Delbert Goins, MCA; James Bottom, Feds Creek; Stacy Fleming, Pikeville; Jimmy Emmons, Pikeville; Staci Slone, Inez; and Duke Ruktanonchai, Pikeville.

In an oral presentation of problems in linear algebra, Robyn Williams placed first, with Mamata Majmudar second, Becca Taylor third, and Matthew Elliott fourth. Williams was named winner of a $300 scholarship.

The MCA and Pikeville teams, together with Paintsville's Becca Taylor and Feds Creek's James Bottom, will participate in state Mathcounts competition at the Hyatt Regency in Lexington on April 4. State finalists will go on to Washington, D.C. in May.

Parents Must Teach, Too, Professor Says

Parents who want their children to receive a good education should concentrate on their own teaching skills, says a University of Louisville education professor.

"We'll never reach excellence in education until parents assume responsibility for educating their children," said Denzil Edge. "Parents need to explain things and talk to their kids."

Edge has developed a program called FRED (Families Read Every Day) that encourages parents to read to their children 15 minutes each day. The program is being tested at Slaughter Elementary School in Louisville.

Recent studies have shown that parents who talk to their children help them develop skills which lead to better grades, classroom attendance and achievement, Edge said.

Researcher Studies Effects Of Nicotine

A smoker's addiction to cigarettes is all in his head, according to a University of Louisville researcher.

Pharmacologist Peter Rowell has found that nicotine in the blood of a regular smoker acts as a mild amphetamine, triggering the release of the neurotransmitter dopamine in the brain's pleasure center.

To simulate the nicotine level in the blood of smokers, Rowell implanted nicotine-filled membrane sacs under the skin of laboratory rats.

His next step will be identifying the chemical receptor on which nicotine acts. That discovery could lead to the development of a chemical blocker that could be used to stop nicotine's "reward," he said.

Health Agency Gets Clean Bill

A state audit of the Floyd Health Department's home health agency turned up no discrepancies and the agency is now licensed to operate for another year, Health Dept. Administrator Earl Compton announced this week. A team from the Cabinet for Human Resources' department of licensure and regulation inspected the program on March 4, he said.

Anxiety related to cancer and its treatment is both emotionally and physically draining. Talking to your mother about her feelings and fears about the treatment and her disease may ease some of her anxiety. This may help her to direct less of her much needed energy into worrying and more into getting well again.

Your mother might also find it helpful to talk to other patients who are going through the same treatment. Support groups for cancer patients and their families are often run by hospitals treating cancer patients or through voluntary organizations. You might start by asking the radiation department at the hospital where she is being treated if they have a group for their patients.

For more information on support groups or to talk to an understanding listener call the Cancer Information Service at 1-800-4-CANCER. The Cancer Information Service is a program of the Kentucky Community Cancer Program.

USA Award Winner

The United States Achievement Academy has announced that Cassandra M. Kendrick has been named a United States National Award winner in business education.

Miss Kendrick, who attends Prestonsburg High School, was nominated for this national award by Frances Brackett, business teacher at the school. Her biography will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, published nationally.

Miss Kendrick is the daughter of Gary and Judy Kendrick. Her grandparents are Edna Kendrick, of Prestonsburg, and Ida Pritchard, of Dwaile.

QUESTION: My mother is receiving radiation treatments for cancer. She seems to be doing o.k. physically, but emotionally she seems to be having some problems. Could the radiation therapy be affecting her emotionally?

ANSWER: All patients having treatment for cancer are likely to be upset to some degree. While radiation may affect the emotions indirectly, through fatigue or changes in hormone balance, the radiation treatment itself is not a direct cause of mental distress.

Patients often report feeling depressed or nervous during their treatment. These feelings may have a number of sources: the need to change daily routines, limits on their ability, or fear about the disease. These are common emotions for someone adjusting to a diagnosis of cancer.

State Accepting Proposals For Older Workers Programs

The Kentucky Department for Employment Services has almost $1.2 million in Job Training Partnership Act funds available for programs for older workers, James Daniels, the department's commissioner, announced.

"We have asked the state's nine private industry councils (PICs) to develop programs for their service delivery areas," he said. The programs would begin July 1.

After the department has received plans from each service delivery area, it will accept proposals from other agencies for any remainder of the state's $1,187,424 allocation.

Noting that National Older Workers Week is March 9-15, Daniels said, "I can think of no better time to begin addressing the needs of older Kentuckians who need a job and could qualify for these programs."

Department figures show more than 700,000 Kentuckians are over 55 years old. "Nearly 143,000 of these citizens have incomes below the poverty level and need jobs," Daniels said.

Each local PIC has been asked to

KSU Teacher's Fair Can Solve Job Hunt

College students who are scheduled to graduate this spring and are looking for a teaching job, and veteran teachers who are also job hunting may not have to look too far this year.

Kentucky State University's annual Teacher's Fair, scheduled for March 31, 4 p.m. to 8 p.m., in KSU's Carl M. Hill Student Center Ballroom, is to have 55 school systems from all over the United States interviewing persons who are in the market for teaching positions.

According to Veleria E. Shavers, director of KSU's Counseling and Placement Services, job seekers should come prepared for interviews and are urged to bring copies of their resume.

"There are plenty of teaching positions," said Shavers. "Representatives from these systems will be looking for teachers in all areas. If you're certified to teach and are looking for a teaching job, I can almost guarantee you'll get a job."

Shavers added that those attending should be prepared to relocate, since most of the systems are from other states.

According to Shavers, the school systems will be interviewing persons from all areas of elementary, secondary, and special education.

In addition to school system representatives from Kentucky, recruiters from systems in Connecticut, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Illinois, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, North Carolina, Nevada, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, and Wisconsin.

For more information, contact Shavers at (502) 227-5948.

State Supreme Court To Review Spotlighting Case

Kentucky's Supreme Court has agreed to review a lower court decision which declared a state law against "spotlighting" deer or other wildlife unconstitutional.

"We are pleased that the Supreme Court has decided to settle this issue once and for all," said Don R. McCormick, commissioner of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources. "This law is a big help in our battle against poachers and we are hopeful that, when the court considers all the facts in this case, it will rule in our favor."

The law, which prohibits anyone with a firearm in possession from shining a spotlight from a road or in a field or forest, was criticized as being too broad by the state court of appeals last November when that court struck down the law.

Until the case is settled by the Supreme Court, wildlife officers will continue to use other existing laws to combat illegal spotlighting, McCormick said.

"We hope to have a decision before next fall, the season when illegal deer poaching becomes a real problem," McCormick added.

Deer feed along roadsides and in open fields at night, making them easy prey for illegal "spotlighters" who use powerful lights to locate and immobilize the deer before shooting them.

State's Jobless Rate Is Higher

The usual end of temporary holiday shopping season positions reduced Kentucky's labor force in January, moving the state's unemployment rate into double-digits for the first time in 11 months.

According to figures released today by the Cabinet for Human Resources, the preliminary January employment rate was 10.8 percent, up from December's revised rate of 8.5 percent. January's jobless rate was lower than the 11.0 percent rate of one year ago and was the lowest rate for that month since 1982.

Nationally unemployment increased from 6.3 percent in December to 7.3 percent in January. The comparable state and national rates are not seasonally adjusted.

An estimated 38,000 Kentuckians dropped out of the civilian labor force in January, which state labor market analyst Ed Blackwell attributed to the annual occurrence of students, housewives, retirees and others entering the market for holiday jobs and simply returning to their previous status when the jobs end.

"Traditionally, we see an increase in unemployment between December and January," said Blackwell. "Temporary jobs, created in response to consumer demand during the holiday season, come to an end. And we see a weather-related decline in agricultural and construction jobs. This January was no exception."

The state's civilian labor force estimate was 1,665,600 in January, down from 1,703,600 in December but above the January 1986 figure of 1,663,500. The civilian labor force includes non-military people who are working and unemployed people who actively are seeking jobs. It does not include anyone who is unemployed but not looking for work.

The Department for Employment Services monthly survey of employers showed a December to January loss of 13,200 trade jobs. "Most of these jobs were in department stores, restaurants, clothing stores and supermarkets. This loss reflects a normal decline in spending following the holiday season," Blackwell said. "Still, we have 8,000 more trade jobs than we had a year ago."

Another sharp reduction came in agriculture, where an estimated 9,600 fewer Kentuckians were working in January than in December. "We normally have a slump in agricultural employment during the tobacco processing season," he said. "We expect to regain these jobs in the spring."

Construction firms reported 4,500 fewer jobs between December and January, although payroll records reflect a 7,300 job gain in that sector since January 1986. "We see short-term losses in construction jobs each winter," he said. "Construction companies anticipate cold weather and don't even plan projects."

Employment in education declined by 3,500—another temporary decrease. College students and other school employees who have on-campus jobs but are not on the payroll during the semester break each year are not counted among Kentucky's employed during that time," Blackwell explained.

Other declines were recorded in services (2,700), manufacturing (1,600) and transportation, communications and utilities (1,200).

Figures compiled by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics show an estimated 1,485,200 Kentuckians were working in January, the third highest January figure on record. This was an improvement over the January 1986 figure of 1,481,100 but a drop from December's estimate of 1,559,500.

Meanwhile, an estimated 180,400 Kentuckians were unemployed in January, fewer than the 182,400 out of work a year earlier but more than the 144,100 without jobs in December.

Kentucky's December and January employment reports represent the annual revision of federal calculations used to determine employment activity.

Unemployment statistics are based on estimates and, therefore, are compiled to measure employment trends rather than to actually count people working.

Bluegrass Show Set At Flat Gap, Sat.

The Flat Gap Fire Dept.'s Ladies Auxiliary will be sponsoring another big music show Saturday, March 14, at the firehouse. The concert will feature performances by two outstanding Bluegrass groups, "Redwing" and "Appalachian Bluegrass Express."

Members of "Redwing" include Jerry and Kevin Williamson, Rudy Rohr and John Masters, from the Huntington, W.V. area. They are a group of talented songwriter/singer/musicians and are familiar faces on the Bluegrass festival scene. They have performed many times in this area, including the Apple Day Bluegrass festivals, and more recently appeared in early February at the Flat Gap Fire Dept. for a crowd-pleasing performance.

"Appalachian Bluegrass Express" is comprised of local Johnson county boys, Carlos Jenkins, Art Mollett, Gary Green, Kenneth (Red) Sparks, Hawley and John Scott. Although this group may be lesser known, they, too, are a talented high-spirited group that pleases the traditional Bluegrass enthusiast.

This promises to be an evening of affordable entertainment for the entire family—that's right, Grandma & Grandpa, too.

Showtime will be at 7 p.m.

Citizen Workshops And Better Schools

WADE MOUNTZ, Chairman Prichard Committee for Academic Excellence

When we get down to fundamental values sustaining our social fabric, most people would agree that the quality of local schools (or other government services, for that matter) depends ultimately upon the commitment and involvement of individual citizens.

This truism subtracts nothing from the heavy responsibilities of elected officials, school superintendents and school boards, teachers and principals—their duties are indisputable. But official authority and official efforts do, after all, derive from the citizens, the voters and the taxpayers. This is also indisputable. Researchers who study good school systems repeatedly find that concerned and committed parents and citizens, with a voice in their own schools, clearly contribute to the quality of those schools.

Kentucky has its share of these concerned and committed parents and citizens. Many, many Kentuckians care deeply about their children's schools and value education most highly. If one striking lesson has impressed our Committee as we have talked with fellow Kentuckians, if one lesson has been truly encouraging, it's how many Kentuckians care. We met and came to know many of these citizens as we organized the 1984 Town Forums on education, when 20,000 Kentuckians gathered in 178 school districts to express themselves about local schools.

Some of these people are heavily involved in school and community projects, but many others are not. In both cases the concern, the commitment and the talent is a powerful force. Long ago Thomas Jefferson observed this potential: "We hope to avail the nation of those talents which nature has sown as liberally among the poor as the rich, but which perish without use, if not sought for and cultivated."

Two hundred years later it's even more apparent that the talents and skills sustaining active citizenship need constant nurturing. While these talents have not perished, it's clear they do need to be "sought for and cultivated." And people with these talents speak of their frustrations in putting their convictions to good use in their schools. They ask "What can I do?" "How do I talk with school officials?" "How can I make a difference?"

In answer to this need, the Prichard Committee proposes a way of working together to cultivate the talents of active citizenship. This spring we will offer, in several locations across Kentucky, a series of "Citizen Action Workshops." In each of these one-day workshops citizens can study the basic techniques and skills needed to organize, strengthen and lead citizens' groups and improve schools.

These citizens will study setting group goals and agendas, public relations, planning meetings, and improving communication skills. They will learn how to recruit allies and build relationships. They will examine school policies and issues such as finance and open meeting laws in order to understand both their rights and their responsibilities. And they will be exposed to practical, successful programs which citizens can actually implement by working cooperatively with teachers, school officials and others in their communities.

Details about the Citizen Action Workshops will be sent soon to as many interested people as we can identify. We don't expect to rouse thousands to attend these workshops, but we do expect to reach a good number of men and women who have the intrinsic power to work together with others to make a difference in their schools. If you share our conviction that active citizens are the key to better schools and want to be involved, call us at 606-233-9849.

(Ed. note: A Citizen Action Workshop is scheduled for April 28, from 2 p.m. to 9 p.m., at Prestonsburg Community College.)

DRY MOUTH

A common side effect of certain medications is dry mouth, or "xerostomia." Certain drugs interfere with signals to the salivary glands. This can inhibit the flow of protective saliva and leave the mouth vulnerable to tooth decay. Many anti-depressant drugs can have such effects. Other medicines likely to produce oral dryness include antihistamines, antihypertension drugs, and some ulcer medications and tranquilizers. If dry mouth occurs, scrupulous oral hygiene is essential. Even more important is daily protection of the teeth with a fluoride gel or mouthwash. Using sugar-free gum and commercially available forms of artificial saliva can also offer symp tomatic relief. If the side effect of the medication cannot be tolerated, ask your physician about substituting another drug.

COOLEY APOTHECARY wants you to know that if your physician prescribes medication for you or a member of your family that we maintain the highest standards of the pharmaceutical profession. Learn for yourself why your friends and neighbors already rely on us. Complete patient profiles are maintained to aid us in checking for possible drug interactions. It also allows us to quickly give you any information you need for income tax and insurance purposes. We are located at #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Open: Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30, Sat., 9-4.

HANDY HINT: The sugar substitute in some sugar-free gums can cause bloating and cramps when taken to excess.

Green Is Great!

By KAREN COLLINS, M.S., R.D.
It's no secret that you don't have to be Irish to celebrate St. Patrick's day and "the wearing of the green". And, regardless of your family's national origin, you can delight in that great Irish and American staple: the potato. In fact, potato historians claim that the potato was first introduced to Ireland from the American colonies by Sir Walter Raleigh in the 17th century.

This economical vegetable blends well with virtually any other food and can be prepared in an almost endless variety of ways. It is naturally low in fat and calories, with only about 70 in an average 1/2 cup serving of boiled potatoes. They're also a good source of carbohydrates, vitamin C, B vitamins and potassium.

The potato's fattening image comes from certain methods of preparation and from fat-laden toppings frequently added to low-calorie baked and boiled potatoes. While baked and boiled potatoes contain only trace amounts of fat, 10 French fries contain 7 grams of fat, a cup of mashed potatoes with milk and butter added contains 9 grams of fat, and 10 potato chips contain 7 grams of fat. That amount of fat is the equivalent of 2 teaspoons of butter or margarine.

The following recipes offer ideas for serving potatoes in the fine Irish (and green) tradition:
COLCANNON.

This hearty, traditional Irish dish of potatoes, cabbage and onions is often made with lots of butter. This lowfat version, however, is so flavorful and moist that no added fat is needed. (Use fresh or frozen kale or spinach instead of cabbage for a different taste and color, as well as additional Vitamin A.)

3 large potatoes (1 1/2 lbs. total), peeled and halved

1 pound cabbage
1/2 medium onion, sliced
2/3 cup evaporated lowfat milk
freshly ground pepper to taste
Cover potatoes with water in large Dutch oven or pot; boil until tender, about 20 minutes. While potatoes cook, trim and slice cabbage. Add to pan, adding more water as necessary.

Combine onion and evaporated milk in medium saucepan. Simmer over medium heat until onion is soft, about 15 minutes.

When potatoes and cabbage are tender, drain water from pan. Spoon potatoes into bowl and mash. Add cabbage and milk-onion mixture, season with pepper to taste and serve.

This will produce about 8 one-cup servings, each with only 89 calories and one gram of fat.

POTATO SOUP VERDE

If you're looking for something green to serve on St. Patrick's day, look no further. This unusual soup has an attractive green color, a thick, creamy consistency, and a mild flavor. The spinach adds considerably to the nutrient content of this hearty potato soup.

1 tbs. vegetable oil
1 small onion, finely chopped
4 large potatoes, peeled and cubed
1/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 cup chopped parsley
1/8 tsp. white pepper
1 10-ounce package frozen, chopped spinach water as directed salt to taste
1/4 to 1/3 cup warm skim milk (optional)

2 to 3 tbs. wine vinegar, to taste
In a deep saucepan, place oil and onions. Saute onions until translucent. Add cubed potatoes, grated cheese, parsley, pepper and frozen spinach. Pour in just enough water to cover all the ingredients. (If soup becomes too thick add more water.)

Cook over low heat, stirring occasionally. When potatoes are tender, pour mixture into blender (half at a time) and blend until smooth. Salt to taste. Stir in vinegar and warm milk, if desired and transfer to serving bowl.

This will yield 6 servings of 1 1/4 cups, each with 150 calories and 4 grams of fat. (Good Food/Good Health is provided by the American Institute for Cancer Research, Washington, D.C. 20069.)

Sex Bias Seminar Set Thurs. At PCC

At 3 p.m. on Thursday, March 12, in Prestonsburg Community College's Pike Auditorium, Dr. Louise Howell will present a seminar entitled "Historical Constructs of Gender." Dr. Howell, a former counselor for both Alice Lloyd College and Pikeville College, is a consultant for the Kentucky Commission on Women. She was an analyst during 1985 for the Kentucky Legislative Research Commission. During the early seventies, Dr. Howell was outpatient therapist for Mt. Comprehensive Care. Dr. Howell received a Ph. D. and MSSW from the University of Louisville, an MA from Eastern Kentucky University, and her BA from the University of Kentucky.

Third Birthday

Johnna Brianna Ison was honored on her third birthday with a Sesame Street birthday party on Saturday, February 7, at the Archer Park skating rink in Prestonsburg. She was joined by many friends and relatives. Johnna is the daughter of Johnny and Regina Ison, of Martin. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Fieldery Lawson, of Garrett, and Mrs. Rachel Ison, of Martin. She is pictured above with her cat, Cupcake.

George Washington was inaugurated President on April 30, 1789. The actual operations of the government under the Constitution began on that date. The Daughters of the American Revolution commemorates the establishment of the government of the United States.

ALZHEIMER'S DISEASE FOCUS OF DOCUMENTARY

Delve into the tragic world of Alzheimer's disease and the world of a woman living without a memory when "Living With Grace" airs on KET Monday, March 30, at 9 p.m.

Grace Kirkland lives at home with her husband, who cares for her every need. She does not remember what day it is or what meal she is eating. She does not remember her grandchildren's names; sometimes she does not remember she had grandchildren. Grace is a victim of Alzheimer's disease.

Alzheimer's disease is a form of dementia that primarily afflicts the elderly. The cause is unknown; there is no cure.

It is estimated that more than 10 million people suffer from the disease—one in every 20 people over the age of 65 and one in every 10 people over the age of 85.

Because the care Alzheimer's victims require is categorized as custodial, medical insurance does not cover the costs of either home or institutional care.

"Living With Grace" explores the many facets of Alzheimer's disease: its symptoms, characteristics and the financial and psychological burdens imposed on the family.

"Living With Grace" is produced by the School of Medicine at the University of Maryland, Baltimore.
