

Board To Retain One of Three After Due Process Hearings

By Ron Marstin

One of three school administrators whose positions were slated for elimination in a cost-cutting move by the Floyd Board of Education last month will get to keep his job as the result of a due process hearing held last Wednesday. The two other administrators, including former Superintendent E. P. Grigsby, Jr., failed to persuade the board that their jobs should be retained, however.

After a series of closed-door hearings, the board voted unanimously to keep the position of physical education consultant held by David Turner. On a 4-1 vote, the board accepted the recommendation of Asst. Supt. Ron Hager to abolish the position of administrative assistant to the superintendent created for Grigsby when he resigned under pressure in August, 1985. It also agreed to scrap the position of Assistant Transportation Director Adrian Bentley.

Grigsby and Bentley were officially notified that they face a reduction in responsibilities and salary in the new school year. The dissenting vote was cast without explanation by board member Ray "Shag" Campbell.

No decision was announced as to where the demoted administrators will be placed. They may lawfully be appointed to any position for which they are certified, and not necessarily to other administrative positions, Hager said.

Ned Pillersdorf, the attorney who represented the three employees in separate hearings, said his clients argued that employees with less seniority should have been demoted in their stead. The due process hearings, to which the three were entitled because they have held administrative positions for at least three years, were held in private at their request.

A delegation from the McDowell area who appeared at Wednesday's board of education meeting wearing lapel stickers reading "No Mitchell Site" could have drawn little comfort from reports that two state Department of Education representatives endorsed the Mitchell property at Hi Hat as the best available site for a consolidated McDowell-Wheelwright school.

After inspecting five possible sites on April 15, Arnold Guess, associate superintendent for local services declared the Mitchell property suitable for the proposed school and the site most central to the pupil population, said Hager. Dr. Gene Wright, director of the division of buildings and grounds, concurred in that opinion following an April 22 visit, Hager said.

A property at nearby Meade Hill, which was held by the state officials to be preferable in other respects, is not available for voluntary sale, Hager said later. Any attempt to condemn the site could prove costly and protracted and the delay would likely mean that construction bond money would be lost, he said.

In the meantime, a Lackey property has won state approval as a possible site for the proposed consolidation of Wayland and Garrett elementary schools. Hager said a property owned by the Astor Collins family on KY 7 near its junction with old KY 80 has recently become available and was deemed suitable by Wright on April 23.

A Goose Creek property owned by T&K Mining had earlier been approved for the new grade school but a relatively low appraisal meant that purchase would be costly for the local board of education, which must itself pay the difference between the appraised value and the actual purchase price, Hager said. An appraisal is presently being sought for the Lackey site, which enjoys the advantage of lying between Wayland and Garrett, he added.

DRIVERS OF THESE TWO COAL TRUCKS escaped serious injury in a collision, Wednesday morning, although James Centers, of Paintsville was hospitalized. Centers, driver for the Uptown Mining Company, was unable to stop when a driver he was following, slowed abruptly to make a lefthand turn off U.S. 23 at Branham Village. When he attempted to go around the car, he was struck by the other truck driver, Ronnie Stiltner, of Grundy, Va., causing both to ram the corner of the Abbott Engineering building. A passenger in the truck driven by Stiltner, Glenda Sue Fuson, of Pilgrim Knob, Va., was treated for minor injuries at Highlands Regional Medical Center, as was Stiltner, and both were released. Taken to the Medical Center by P&B Ambulance, Centers was hospitalized for more serious injuries but was said to have been released. Trooper Wendell Scott was the investigating state police officer.

DENTURISTS, FAMILY MEMBERS, and supporters picket Thursday the office of Garland D. Godsey, D.M.D., a member of the Kentucky Board of Dentistry. Godsey called the picketing the denturists' response to the Board of Dentistry's action against their illegal practice of dentistry. Denturists claim dentists have a monopoly on the selling of dentures.

Right Beaver Residents Seek Removal of Abandoned Trestle

By Joe Porter

Estill resident Edsel Moore doesn't have to check his calendar to know it's spring; Moore can just look out his window and see the flooding and refuse in his back yard. Every year it's the same way.

Moore lives next to Right Beaver Creek just below Glo at a point where a C&O railroad trestle crosses the creek, and when the water runs high, the trestle acts as a dam; brush and trees collect and the water backs up, flooding Moore's and nearby properties as well as the communities of Glo and Wayland.

The problem is as old as the trestle, but what makes the residents angry is that there is no longer any justification for the trestle being there since it hasn't been used in over 30 years, nor will it be in the future. Trees are now grown up through the tracks and pieces of rail have been ripped up by C&O workers. According to retired miner Arnold Fitch of Glo, the trestle is on a spur that's been abandoned since 1953 when Elkhorn Coal Company pulled out. Fitch knows because he mined the coal that once supported the spur.

Alarmed by recent flooding, residents of the area say there is more at stake than the destruction of property caused by the flood water. In April, the creek ran high because of the snowstorm and heavy rains, then dammed at the trestle, and backed up, covering the bridges leading to Glo.

Mack Stewart, Wayland town councilor and assistant fire chief, said that for a 12-hour period between six to twelve inches of water covered the bridges and made Glo inaccessible to fire protection and ambulance service. "If a house would have caught on fire in that time, there's nothing we could have done to help them," Stewart said. "The water got so swift the only way we could have gotten a cardiac patient out is by helicopter."

Stewart, whose house in Wayland was flooded by backwater in the 1984 flood, feels they were lucky this spring but is concerned about the future. "Those people pay a fire tax," Stewart said of Glo residents. "If we couldn't protect their homes, they could sue us. Then we're going to turn around and sue the railroad because the hazard was caused by a man-made structure. We're not going to take the fall."

Second District Magistrate Jackie Edford Owens inspected the trestle and told residents he will inform the fiscal court of the problem at the next meeting, May 15. Owners then will ask County Attorney David Barber to write a letter to the CSX Corporation that now owns the C&O railroad informing them of the problem and asking them to resolve it. Owens said he would like the railroad to first clean out the trees and debris and then permanently remove the trestle and piers that are blocking and changing the course of the creek.

"These people have got some nice houses up here, and the railroad has made it hard for them," Owens said. "It would cost Chessie just a drop in the bucket to do the job compared to the profits they made hauling the coal out of here. But the county can't solve this problem. We don't have the money budgeted nor the heavy equipment to do the job ourselves."

Railroad Commissioner Jimmy Gabe Turner said that he has notified CSX Corporation's General Counsel James Cleveland in Ashland about the problem and Cleveland has assured him he will be sending an engineer to inspect the trestle this week. "The people up there can rest assured that something will be done," Turner said. "It may take a while, but I'm going to push for the trestle to be removed. That seems to be the only answer."

Moore would also like the county health department aware of the situation. The smell around the trestle is awful. Mosquitoes are a nuisance, and besides the junk and garbage, dead animals also collect in the brush and trees. There is some concern that someone will set the trees on fire. Owens attributes the trees to strip jobs at the head of Right Beaver, and mentioned that Knott county, where much of the debris originated, just passed a trash law.

City To Expand Fire Protection To 10-Mile Area

By Joe Porter

At Monday night's meeting of the city council, Mayor Ann R. Latla announced that Prestonsburg has received a grant of $16,300 to build a firefighters training facility which City Administrator Fred A. James said will be built on city property near the Cliff bridge and will be constructed with the help of Job Corps workers.

Approval was granted by the council to exempt city employees living within a five-mile radius of the city from paying the $100 fire subscription rate in exchange for a cash payment from their homeowners policy if there is a fire. Also, the city will expand its firefighting protection to a 10-mile radius but will not

P'burg To Purchase Prater Water System

By Ron Marstin

Prestonsburg water system, which in the past six years has invested $3.6 million in a major plant expansion and has taken over three rural water districts, appears ready to absorb a fourth. The city council agreed Monday to buy the $1.05 million Prater Creek Water District system, now in the final stages of construction.

Dana contractor Ervin Akers, who has led a 4½-year drive to finance and build the system, told council members that construction should be complete by the end of June. The system, which was designed to be self-supporting if at least 280 customers signed up, already has 323 households on the books, said Akers, who serves as chairman of the Prater Creek Water District Commission.

Bill H. Howard, superintendent of Prestonsburg City Utilities, urged the council to buy the Prater Creek system. While it would mean assuming the district's $323,000 loan, the city would also receive the benefit of $688,000 in federal grant money and about $45,000 in subscriber fees which helped finance construction of the system, Howard said.

"From a business point of view, we'll be receiving nearly 2½ dollars for every dollar we invest... the city could never have received those grant dollars... and we won't have to pay one dime up front," he said.

The grant and loan—a 40-year bond issue at five percent interest—which financed the Prater Creek system was put up by the Farmers Home Administration, an arm of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Technical assistance for the project was provided by the Big Sandy Area Development District.

In October, 1980—shortly before the city began a renovation that doubled the capacity of its water treatment plant and extended its reach as far south as Mare Creek—Prestonsburg purchased the 220-customer Abbott-Little Paint system and the 200-customer Bull Creek system. Last November, the city signed a contract to buy the (Mountain) Parkway Water system, a deal which is expected to be finalized this month. Purchase of the Prater Creek system will see the addition of two water storage tanks and about 19 miles of water line to the Prestonsburg system.

Prater Creek was already committed to buying water from the Prestonsburg system, with which it will be connected at Banner. As a result of its 1981 expansion, Prestonsburg has a water main extending along U.S. 23 as far south as Stanville, through which the Prater system will be supplied.

That circumstance, coupled with the facts that small, independent systems are costly to manage and Prestonsburg Utilities enjoys a good reputation in this area as a water system operator, persuaded the three-member Prater Creek water commission that selling the rural system to Prestonsburg would be in the best interests of Prater Creek consumers, Akers said.

Construction of the Prater Creek system comes at a time when private well supplies, long subject to heavy

Traditional Approach To Woodworking Reflects Craftsman's Individuality

BEVELY TERRY RATLIFF sits at his shaving horse and uses a draw knife to carve a walnut chair post. Behind him on the wall are bundles of hickory bark that he'll weave to make the seat and back of the chair. Ratliff has been called a purist by his fellow artists for his aesthetic and demanding methods that go back generations in tradition.

By Joe Porter

Each chair and piece of furniture he makes will always be his. No matter who buys it or where it's exhibited. No matter how much time goes by; the piece will always be a Bevely Terry Ratliff work.

Ratliff is a chairmaker, an artist who bonds this way with every piece of furniture he makes because of the care and time he puts into them. He makes traditional Appalachian furniture by hand, with hand tools, the way it was done generations ago. His work has been featured in magazines, exhibited in galleries and museums, and sold to people as far away as California.

Thirty-two years old, Ratliff lives at the head of Stephens Branch in Manton with his wife, Deborah, and their two small children, Carly and Joseph. The son of a coal miner, Ratliff was born in Allen and came to his art in a roundabout way. He had once had the goal of being a psychologist, and after graduating from the University of Kentucky with a bachelor's degree in psychology, he worked for two and a half years as a mental health worker at Mountain Comprehensive Care, but then became disenchanted with the job's bureaucratic demands and resigned.

Blue Grass Fest Ends in Slaying

Joe Porter

Reo Hamilton, 38, of Teaberry has been charged with murder following the shotgun slaying of Teddy Howell, Jr., 26, of Meta. The shooting took place Saturday evening at the Blue Grass Festival held on Ned's Fork near McDowell.

According to Deputy Coroner Glen Frazier the incident occurred at 10 p.m., and the victim was pronounced dead soon after on arrival at McDowell Hospital. Frazier said that Howell was shot at close range with a sixteen gauge shotgun that has not been recovered. The coroner reported that Howell was working at a festival concession stand and may have come out to calm Hamilton when he was shot. Fifteen people witnessed the shooting.

Floyd county deputy Harold Johnson, who worked on the investigation with KSP Detective J. Rederick, said that Hamilton fled into the hills with his 16-year-old son after the shooting. The State Police tried to track Hamilton with a dog, but the dog was not able to pick up the trail. The following day at 4:30 p.m. Hamilton gave himself up to Johnson.

Monday morning Hamilton was arraigned before District Court Judge Harold Stumbo. A public defender was appointed to represent Hamilton and bond was set at $150,000, to take effect after the victim's funeral.

People, I am getting involved in this Lt. Governor's race for DAVE ARMSTRONG because I knew this man as our Attorney General before I ever got elected as Magistrate of Floyd County. I have called on him several times for legal advice and information concerning my steps in Fiscal Court and he has always been there to return my phone calls and answer my letters leading me in the right legal direction. When it came down to Floyd county having problems with the Floyd County-owned gas system, East Kentucky Utilities, I didn't hesitate a minute in calling on "Mr. ARMSTRONG". There's one thing about it—it's always straight up and up when you talk to "Mr. ARMSTRONG"—there's no wishy-washy to it. He will tell you what you can do, what you cannot do, and what lies in the future on down the road. THIS IS THE KIND OF GUY we need as our next LT. GOVERNOR. Know Your Risks For Breast Cancer

QUESTION: Who is at risk for developing breast cancer?

ANSWER: The average woman has about a 10% chance of developing breast cancer during her lifetime. A national panel of experts concluded that the following three groups of women are at a higher than average risk of getting breast cancer:

1. Women age 50 or older, because two-thirds of all breast cancer occur among older women.
2. Women whose mothers or sisters have had breast cancer.
3. Women who have had cancer in one breast. The risk of developing cancer in the other breast is about three times higher for this group than the average.

Women in the above three categories should do monthly breast self-examination, see their physician yearly for a physical examination and have a mammogram every year.

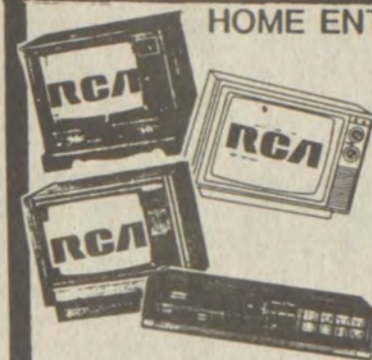

For information on mammography call 1-800-4-CANCER or you can write to Ky. Cancer Information Service, McDowell Cancer Network Program, 800 Rose Street, Lexington, Ky. 40536-0093.

Come out and join former Governor, Bert T. Combs, Congressman, Chris Perkins and future Governor, Grady Stumbo at Marlow's Country Palace, May 16, 1987 at 6:00 p.m. This Stumbo for Governor Barbeque features music by Marlow Tackett, free barbecue sandwiches, beans and soft drinks.

It's been 28 years since we have had a Governor from East Kentucky. If you look around, you can see the results—the conditions of our school buildings, roads, high unemployment and of having an entire area ignored by State Government. We can change that. Grady Stumbo came within a whisper of being elected governor in 1983. If only those who said after the election they would have voted for Grady had they known he was so close to winning, we would have a mountain man as Governor today.

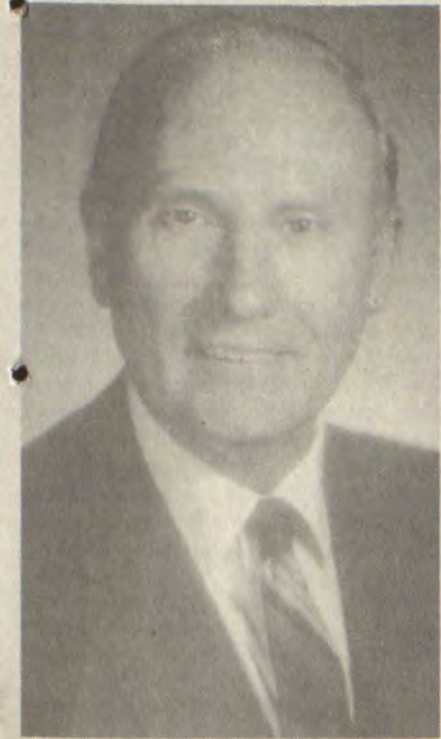

Do not make the same mistake again. Show your mountain pride, come out and join former Governor, Bert T. Combs, Congressman, Chris Perkins and your neighbors for an old fashion rally at Marlow's Country Palace this Saturday, May 16, at 6:00 p.m.

Propulsion Expert Sees Faster Speeds

Current advances in rocket and jet propulsion technology promise a qualitative leap like the one aviation once took from propeller-driven planes to jets, according to Julian Campbell, manager of aeropropulsion at Aerojet TechSystems Co., in Sacramento, Calif. "Back then, we went from speeds of 250 mph to 500 mph. Today, we're on the verge of going from 1700 mph to beyond 3400 mph," he said.

A graduate of Prestonsburg High School, Campbell is the son of Hazel Campbell, of Martin, and the late Wesley Campbell. Since his graduation from Morehead State University in 1960 with a B.S. in chemistry and math, he worked in warheads, munitions, explosives, propellants, and propulsion systems.

The higher speeds attainable with the new technology will change military operations and business dealings around the world for years to come, Campbell predicts. The time is not too far distant, he said, when commercial aircraft will fly from Boston to San Francisco in 45 minutes, from California to Tokyo in three hours.

Denturists Picket Locally In Bid for Public Support

By Joe Porter

Denturists and their supporters from across the state converged on Prestonsburg Thursday, to picket the Court Street office of dentist, Dr. Garland Godsey, who is a member of the Kentucky Board of Dentistry and opposes the legalization of denturists.

Presently, it is against the law for denturist—a person who makes false teeth—to fit or sell dentures. Yet Dan Hauner, a denturist from Louisville who led the pickets, said that denturists want to be licensed to treat denture patients directly instead of just filling denture prescriptions for dentists as they do now. By picketing, the group is seeking to create public awareness of their profession and gain publicity for their cause.

The Kentucky Board of Dentistry is mandated by the legislature and commissioned by the Governor to enforce the laws and regulations pertaining to the practice of dentistry. According to Godsey, a denturist is a person who provides illegal dental services in violation of the law.

Yet Hauner says that dentists have a monopoly and charge twice as much for dentures as a denturist does. He also believes that if denturists were legal they would provide a needed competition and bring the cost down. According to Hauner, the average cost of dentures is $700, but he charges only $250. Godsey, however, says his normal charge is $550.

Because of the high cost of dentures, Hauner maintains that 50 percent of the people who need dentures can't afford them. To counter that charge, Godsey said that the Kentucky Dental Association has a denture access program for people who cannot afford to pay the normal cost. The number is 1-800-292-1855.

Denturists are legal in Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Colorado, Arizona, Maine, and Canada. Since 1978, denturists have been trying to get a law through the Kentucky legislature, but Hauner says they have been prevented by the dentist lobby. He also said the movement has been hurt by the fact that Governor Martha Layne Collins' husband is a dentist and has organized against them.

"We don't want to do their work," Hauner said. "We don't want to make crowns or bridges or do fillings. We only want to make dentures and partial dentures—only what is removable." Hauner makes the comparison between other professions. "You don't have to go to a medical doctor to get glasses," he said. "Nor do you have to go to one for an artificial limb. A denture is a device used in chewing. It's a removable part. And people shouldn't have to go to a dentist to get dentures."

Godsey said that a patient takes a risk in being treated by a denturist. "In my examination I take an x-ray of the patient's mouth to make sure there is no pathology in the oral tissue or tumors," Godsey said. "A denturist doesn't do that." Godsey said that is a standard procedure that dentists follow to safeguard each patient, but it is something that the denturist is neither capable of or qualified to do.

"I'm definitely not for them," said Dr. Brent Clark, Betsy Layne dentist. "I went to school for eight years. I spent a fortune paying for my education, and it's not fair to allow these people to practice dentistry without going through the same schooling and training as I did. I don't think they want to pay their dues."

Clark said while denturists are probably technically capable of making dentures, since many have worked as dental lab technicians, they are not qualified to treat dental patients directly because they haven't been schooled in medicine and diseases. Like Godsey, he feels it is dangerous. "They could transmit hepatitis," Clark said. "You have to know what you're doing."

Hauner said a bill to legalize denturists will be presented to the legislature in the next session. In it, the bill will require a four-year education from an approved school and passing a test to become certified. According to Hauner, the first two years would cover dental technology, plus a year of denturist training and a year of residency.

Until a law passes, Hauner said, denturist will continue to lobby and protest, and if necessary, go to jail for what they believe in. "We're trying to change the law," he said, "and if we've got to go to jail to win this—we will."

June 1 Hauner will begin serving a 30-day sentence in the Jefferson county jail for violating a Circuit Court restraining order that forbade him from practicing as a denturist.

Private Lives and Public Figures

Public figures are not allowed private lives. It is one of the prices paid by those who seek fame and extraordinary fortune and is particularly to be paid by those who aspire to lead the nation.

It has been pointed out, recently, that most of our presidents, from Jefferson to JFK, had feet of clay. The difference is, the public didn't know it, and we suspect the press didn't either until after they were in the White House. I also suspect that this makes things a little tougher for your average, run-of-the-mill investigative reporter.

But a candidate such as Gary Hart is fair game all the way around. He hasn't won anything. He hasn't even proved anything. He's just trying, and he'd better try his best every hour of every day. He has an obligation to be smart; an obligation to at least appear to be the kind of man people can look up to. He has an obligation to shore up those instincts that will lead him and his followers to disarray.

It seems that someone should have told Gary Hart that he must not only avoid evil but the appearance of evil. Substitute wrong-doing or immorality or stupidity for evil if it is more acceptable to you. No matter what the term, it all boils down to the same thing.

Public figures are up for grabs, because they're news, and most of them are smart enough to know it.

The best summation of the Hart debacle was made, in our opinion, by the columnist, Carl Hiaasen, who said, "Gary Hart's trouble is not below the belt. It's between his ears."

Although some board members complained that the $9,000 price seemed too high, Law Engineering of Lexington was chosen to do core drilling at the sites of the proposed Prestonsburg Middle School and Allen Elementary School. Hager explained it was difficult to find an engineering firm which carried the liability insurance required by state education authorities. Negotiations will be undertaken with the same firm to prepare topographical maps for the two sites.

Gary Ousley, of Walnut Engineering, will be hired to locate and mark boundaries for the two sites at a price yet to be negotiated. Prestonsburg attorney Ralph Stevens will be retained for $1,650 to do a title search on the Allen site and insuring the deed will cost an additional $850, it was announced.

A calendar adopted for the coming school year will see students reporting for class on August 17 following the summer vacation. No classes will be held on Sept. 7 (Labor Day); Oct. 9 (EKEA meeting); Nov. 3 (election day); Nov. 26 (Thanksgiving) and Nov. 27; Dec. 21-25 (Christmas); Dec. 31 and Jan. 1 (New Year); March 16-18 (spring break); April 8 (FCEA meeting); April 14 and 15 (KEA meeting); and April 25 (in-service). Eighteen snow days are provided for, if they are all needed, school will close on June 9.

Floyd County Education Association president Patricia Barnette asked the board to schedule school in future on election days except for presidential elections, when the schools are closed by federal law.

Floyd County Education Forum spokeswoman Jean Rosenberg advised the board that judging of entries in the Young Authors program would be held Saturday. Some 3,226 elementary school students participated in the program, which was sponsored by the Louisville Courier-Journal.

The resignation of Prestonsburg High School basketball coach Jeff Riley was accepted by the board. Riley is leaving to become assistant coach at Morehead State University.

A board order adopted last November which would have prohibited high school principals from being hired as athletic directors was amended; the principals will now be eligible for that appointment. Principals at Prestonsburg, McDowell and Wheelwright High Schools currently serve as athletic directors at those schools.

concentrations of iron, are dwindling for many households as a result of mining activity in the area. The new system will not only afford a reliable water supply, area residents are hoping, but may also support fire hydrants in a section hit by high insurance rates for want of fire protection services.

Under a plan designed to see an interconnection some day among all the county's water systems, the Prater system will be linked to the Mud Creek Water System at the head of Sammy Clark Branch of Little Mud Creek. In an emergency, water could be traded between one system and the other.

The only major element of the Prater Creek system still awaiting completion is the Big Sandy River crossing at Banner, which is expected to be undertaken when the river level drops sufficiently. Construction of the project is being done by Claud Wilburn & Sons, of Maloneton, according to an engineering design by Parrott, Ely & Hurt, of Lexington.

interfere in an area where there is already fire protection provided. The new fire subscription rate for the area from five to eight miles is $125; and for the area eight to 10 miles, $150.

The city sold six old vehicles at its Saturday auction and received over $3,000 from the sales. "We didn't get as much from some as we had hoped, but we got more for others," James said. Police Chief Elmo Allen, James, and other city officials will now shop for two police cars at an upcoming State Police auction in Frankfort. The council approved James's plan to increase the police department's fleet.

At the suggestion of Mayor Latta, the council passed a motion for the city to apply for the Kentucky Municipal League's insurance pool. She said the application is not a commitment to buy a liability policy but will be a useful estimate and a possible way to avoid another increase. "Our rates have shot up for the last three years," Latta said. The city's coverage expires in September.

Councilman William R. Callihan asked the council to grant permission for a Special Olympics group to set up a roadblock, May 16, to collect money from motorists. "The money will be used to send our kids to compete in Bowling Green and then Notre Dame," Callihan said. The council agreed but without some reservations.

"I don't see how we can turn them down," Councilor Margie N. Osborne said, "but I think some people are sick to death of these roadblocks."

"I've been getting a lot of complaints too," Mayor Latta said. The mayor asked the council to consider mandating a policy on roadblocks. She suggested taking requests and then scheduling collection roadblocks months in advance. She said this would help the groups asking for donations and prepare the citizens.

Mayor Latta announced that she has appointed retired school teacher Sammy Wells to sit on the Zoning Adjustment Board, and J.Y. (Sonny) Goble has agreed to serve another term on the Building Appeals Board. These are non-paying offices.

There will be no city council meeting May 25, Memorial Day.

A large grey goose has been on the loose, here, since Monday when she made her second break for freedom in as many days. Her first foray took her to the Sundry Store where Prestonsburg police quickly took her into custody amid much hissing from the frustrated fowl. No one knows whether she heard the call of the wild goose or just couldn't stand the bright lights, but it is hoped the pet has not wound up padding out someone's weekly menu. If seen, call 886-3635, please.

PLANTS AND PLAINTS

I'm well into it again—the planting season, that is. Among the goofier things I ordered this year is something called, not very euphemistically, a gas plant. When it blooms, a gas is given off, which, it says here, will ignite if a match is struck. Told you it was a goofy, didn't I?

Then I broke down and ordered another rose—Dame de Couer—and I do hope it lives up to billing. Oh, well, as Gertrude Stein said, "A rose is a rose is a rose." And, wherever you are, Gertrude, I agree.

Of course, I wouldn't have to go through all this every year if my dogs didn't spend most of their excess energy digging up my most prized plants as well as the better part of the lawn. This year, John has strung the Fido Shock around the flower bed, so there is at least a glimmer of hope for survival in the plant world at 39 Highland Avenue. We'll see.

Once again, I'm attempting to grow lavender and painted daisies which never thrive or even survive, but I keep trying.

Why is it that I can grow some things like astilbe, poppies, carnations, where they shouldn't grow, but cannot have the slightest success with, for instance, coreopsis, shasta daisies, lupines, Chinese lantern, columbine, all of which are supposed to be easy to grow. Not for me.

After the dogs dug up my camellia, which to that point was thriving, I said quits to the camellia scene. As someone else said, or words to the same effect, "Those dogs won't have me to kick around any more."

Now to the annuals. Excepting its name, a petunia is an unexcelled joy. It will grow almost anywhere, and with a little pinching off of spent flowers, will bloom until frost. Then come up with something more dependable than zinnias, cosmos, and marigolds: Ignore the smell of the latter, because it repels lots of insects. I used to sow them among my vegetables when I had time for a real garden—a vegetable garden, that is.

I enjoy flowers, but growing corn, beans, lettuce, onions, zucchini, tomatoes is nothing short of taking part in a miracle.

Radio doesn't faze me; television is simply a rather dismal fact of life, but that a small seed can produce a stalk of corn, a tomato plant, a hill of beans, a sprawling squash plant, now that's a miracle. It is beyond belief.

And if you really want your children to have some respect for the awesome wonder of nature, help them to sow a few seeds and tend the seedlings.

Now, how did I get on this? It was supposed to be for another place, another time. But to paraphrase Gertrude, "A garden is a garden is a garden," and wonderful, wonderful, wonderful.

Parent Group Discusses Children's Special Needs

Parents of Floyd children needing special help found they were not alone when a group met April 23, to talk with one another about their children, their needs, and how to get the best services from the schools, mental health/mental retardation programs, and other community agencies.

The parents attending have children ages 2 to 27, with many different special needs. Some need help with learning to read, to speak, to hear, with their behavior, activities of daily living, emotional adjustment, and physical skills. All parents agreed that they need information and to get their help from one another. Pamphlets and booklets were distributed that explain laws, procedures and services for the children.

The parents who attended want other parents and family members to attend the next meeting on Monday, May 18, at 6:30 p.m. It will be at Mountain Comprehensive Care, in the old Mormon church in Martin (across the street from Our Lady of the Way Hospital). Other members of the group are from the school system and mental health center. Child care will be provided. Call Eileen Schepers at 886-8572 to let her know how many children will be coming.

The group was reminded that Norb Ryan, a professional from Lexington, will speak at 7 p.m., May 12, at the Floyd County Library. Ryan has cerebral palsy, and he works with parents of handicapped children.

For more information about the Parents' Group, you may call Eugene and Linda Weathers, 886-1447; Brenda Vance, 587-1096; Betty and Harmon Leedy, 886-1723; Chris or Audrey Gayheart, 587-1034; Eileen Schepers or Rita Conley, 886-8572.

Some jellyfish are so small you can hardly see them, but others are two feet or more across.

Ratliff didn't know what he wanted to do at that juncture in his life, but he had always been interested in woodworking. He had made kitchen cabinets, and one summer in Indiana, worked as a wood-cutter in a speedboat factory. After leaving Mountain Comprehensive Care, he helped a friend build a log house. In the spring of 1982, he sold a rocking horse at the David Appalachian Craft Center and was encouraged by people who saw it. The next year he displayed a rocking chair at the Governor's Derby Breakfast, and the piece was praised. Since then he's made and sold one piece after another to people in Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Texas, California, and Arizona.

His work is now all commissioned and bought months before it is delivered. He makes dining chairs, tables, rocking chairs, rocking horses, stools, and highchairs and uses various woods: hickory, white oak, walnut, ash, or cherry, depending on what the customer wants.

It's a long, individual process that starts with Ratliff spotting and cutting down the tree he needs. Pains are taken the whole way through as he cures, handplans, carves, and shapes the wood. He works from a design in his head and everything is considered, for example, the amount of moisture in the wood, how much it expands or contracts. And while his furniture has often been exhibited, he designs them to be durable and functional. "I make my chairs to be used," Ratliff said. "They're not something to be put into a showcase."

In creating his pieces, Ratliff said that he strives for a feeling that pulls at the heart. "I want to appeal to someone's feeling, the security of the home," Ratliff said. "People have said to me who have sat in my chairs, 'This feels just like my grandfather's chair,' and that's what I go for."

When he's working, Ratliff keeps his mind clear and concentrates on the piece before him, especially when he's working on the joinery. "I don't think about how much money I'm going to get for it, or when I've got to get it done," Ratliff said. "I stopped wearing a watch six or seven years ago. It's not that important any more. Getting the days right is close enough."

In 1984 his work was judged and he was accepted into the prestigious Kentucky Guild of Artists & Craftsman. He's been exhibited at the Ohio's Designers Guild Show in Columbus, Ohio, the Kentucky Arts Foundation in Louisville, the Swearingen Gallery in Louisville, and the Appalachian House Gallery in Darien, Connecticut. Also, he has taught chair making at Berea College.

After each piece has been joined, Ratliff turns it over to his wife Deborah who applies several coats of Danish finishing oil to seal the wood, then sands and rubs the finish until it is perfect. She isn't interested in getting the gloss up but rather in making a smooth finish. "We've had blind people at shows who have felt the wood and said they could feel how much work went into it," Deborah said.

For the last two years Ratliff has been invited to display his work at "Our Appalachian Experience," a crafts show sponsored by the University of Fairfield in Fairfield, Connecticut. And two years ago he had a gallery showing at Morehead State University. Just recently, he was invited to jury—send slides and examples of his work—for a "Pure Kentucky" exhibition at the Folk Art & Craft Museum in Los Angeles.

Like a well shaped chair, Ratliff's lifestyle also reflects his individuality. The Ratliffs live simply and economically in a large double-crib log house that Ratliff built himself. The poplar logs and sandstone foundation came right from the property site. "I'm living a different lifestyle," Ratliff said. "We're not aspiring to mainstream consuming America. We've decided—Deb and I—that this is what we want. We have a common dream."

Currently, Ratliff is working on a set of walnut chairs with hickory bark seat and back for a lady from Franklin county while Deborah finishes a white oak table for people in Michigan. Yet nothing leaves his shop until he's satisfied that it's his best work. When finished, he identifies each piece with the initials—BTR. But his goal is to perfect and individualize his furniture to a point where an antique critic or connoisseur will be able to identify it as a Ratliff piece just by looking at it.

But whether initialized or not, the satisfaction comes from knowing that he made it, that it's his work. "I get a lot of satisfaction out of seeing the piece finished," Ratliff said. "I get pride in that. And in my mind, it's always going to be my chair. Even if it goes to some Yankee's house in Connecticut."

Critical of Knott-Floyd Garbage Deal

I'm one of the magistrates from Floyd County who believes that the recent garbage contract between Floyd and Knott Counties—to bring the garbage to the Floyd County Landfill for $35,000 a year and a five-year contract with the option to renew for three years—is too cheap and for too long. I feel like this contract was a good contract for Knott County, but I feel like Floyd County came up on the short end of the stick. It was too cheap and for too long. This was my major kick. I feel it was too cheap because Perry County was going to charge them $72,000 per year.

The reason I am explaining my views on this to Floyd and Knott Counties is because I have a lot of family and friends who live in Floyd and Knott County. My Grandpa was Kendall Owens and my Grandma was Hester Slone Owens. My daddy was Ralph Owens of Porter.

I also have an obligation to the people of Floyd County and the people of District 2 that elected me as their magistrate. People, Floyd County spends nearly $1,000,000 (one million) a year to take care of their garbage problem. It's a funny thing to me that they can go out here and take care of a whole county's garbage for $35,000 a year when it costs us a million dollars a year. If this is the case, we should find us a county that would take our garbage and let's haul ours to them. The people of Floyd County and the people of District 2 don't want Floyd County to become a regional dump for four or five counties. These counties aren't polluting their underground water system. Floyd County is the one who stands the chance of polluting their underground water systems and filling our landfill up faster than Floyd Counties would themselves.

Our landfill is permitted under the old laws and when our landfills are full we are the ones who will have to permit under the new laws which are much stricter and will cost much more to maintain due to environmentalists' restrictions. Who is going to pay these costs? We are—the people of Floyd County—when we get older and our landfills are full and our kids will have to face this problem of buying new land for landfills because of taking in garbage that nobody else wants. People, right now the residents of Floyd County are paying $8 for pickup and the senior citizens are paying $6 when Knott County is paying $7 for pickup and the senior citizens paying $5.

People, I am out to stand up for the people who elected me and all of Floyd County and try to keep their prices down as low as they can. I have to look out for the future of Floyd County. I hope that we can work with Knott County in curing the garbage problem in Floyd and Knott Counties.

P.S. I feel like Floyd County is getting shortchanged due to their own negotiations.

Would Rob Mankind

I read Mr. Littell's letter, 'Thoughts About Secular Humanism', with great interest.

I am sure we were all impressed by the writer's erudite discourse on Communism, despite his occasional confusion between Communism and communal living, but no matter.

I couldn't help but applaud his complimentary remarks regarding James Madison's belief in religious liberty. How heartening to be able to assume, therefore, that Mr. Littell would welcome prayer in the public schools, and encourage the teaching of creation alongside evolution. How unfortunate, though, that this apparently literate and intelligent man tries to reduce humanism to a mere nothing, almost a figment of people's imagination.

The poor old fundamentalists are attacked yet again, this time for attempting to show the American people that the philosophy of 'harmless' humanism is one of the most dangerous and misleading falsehoods ever conceived by the twisted minds of so-called free thinkers. Humanism was never a bad word before the last decade? I see! So cigarette smoking was quite safe until the medical profession showed otherwise?!

Secular humanism is the philosophy which states that man is paramount, death is absolute, and God is just another word. By the way, Communists don't believe in God, do they? Just a thought...

Secular humanism seeks to refute any belief in the supernatural. This means belief in God and the Holy Trinity. Belief in Buddha. Belief in Allah and Krishna. Pagans are scorned for their beliefs in Hecate, Astarte, and the Mother Goddess, etc. Seances, palmistry, astrology; all are scorned as being meaningless. Secular humanists, then, seek to rob mankind of its soul. A human without a soul or beliefs in whatever deity he or she chooses is merely a cardboard cut-out. A two-dimensional automaton.

I wonder. Could it be that the Hamlin Institute teaches secular humanism under the guise of liberalism?

Now there's a buzz-sentence for you!

Attention, Old Fiddlers

With the help of many Kentucky residents, I am collecting fiddle music from our older citizens. To date, I have homemade cassettes played by people 65 years and older who learned their music before radio and recorded music changed our musical tastes. I am collaborating to preserve some of the music I hear in a more formal way—by making it available to those who want to learn through the library at Morehead State University. Anyone can listen to the cassettes at the Morehead State University library. The purpose of this project is to record and document the remaining old time fiddle music in eastern Kentucky.

Please think over the people you know who are over 70 years old. Do any of them play the fiddle? Or did they play the fiddle in younger years? Could you please send me the name, address and telephone number for any person you can think of that perhaps can play or would know how to contact someone who does. Even if the person you may be thinking of has moved on to Indiana or Ohio or elsewhere, I still would appreciate your letting me know of their talent.

Along those lines, many Kentuckians have recognized the value and importance of the musical abilities of their older family members, and over the past thirty years have made home recordings. I would like to learn of anyone having these recordings. It is possible to copy from reel, 8-track, or other machines onto cassettes, and I would, of course, make a copied set, if the family would like to have them. Please let me know if you can think of families who may have homemade recordings of their people.

With the help of equipment from Morehead State University's regional service office and Missouri collector and fiddler, Bob Butler, I have pursued making video tapes of several older fiddlers. We would like to hear of others. To date, the collection at Morehead State University has some of the music of eight players. One of these is Hiram Stamper, 93 years young. Hiram, with fiddle on his chest, still plays regularly, both for his own enjoyment, and to entertain visitors from near and far. Hiram learned tunes from two uncles on his mother's side, Lee and Daniel Triplett, of Virginia, and from a Civil War veteran, Shade Slone. This gives him a very old, very rare, and very unique repertoire. Hiram is willing and eager to share his knowledge of the old music. He and his gracious wife, Martha, have gone out of their way to assist interested people to play and understand the older fiddle music of eastern Kentucky.

Estill Bingham, age 88, has an extensive collection of tunes. Playing in a dance band as a teen-ager, he has singing, dance, party tunes, standard fiddle tunes, and war ballads from the Civil War. He learned many tunes from his father—he calls him "Pap." Pap was born in 1850 and knew the Civil War very well. Estill retunes the fiddle the way his father did and plays several tunes in other tunings, some of which are very ancient melodies.

To all eastern Kentuckians who may be able to help preserve the older, non-standard fiddle music, please feel free to contact me. Any information will be sincerely appreciated.

Stands For Family

I have studied the profiles of all the candidates for governor, and I find that one is for abortion on demand, another for a state lottery for education, another had a million dollar gambling debt while in office, and still another was tainted by a state scandal. The two candidates of the opposing party have both stated they are for repeal of House Bill 44, which would allow local governments to raise property taxes any amount they choose.

This leaves Dr. Grady Stumbo, who served state government well during a previous administration as head of the Department for Human Resources. He has taken a stand to improve education, employment, provide help for the sick and elderly, and a program whereby welfare recipients can obtain jobs in the private sector and still retain a portion of their benefits, while the able-bodied must work. He stands for traditional family values, such as support for voluntary prayer in schools, opposition to abortion on demand, opposition to a state lottery for education. He believes teachers should have a stronger role in the classroom. He is for increased emphasis on discipline, parental involvement in reducing the dropout rate, and equalization of opportunities for all students.

If these are the things you wish your governor to work toward, then vote for "Dr. Grady" on May 26, a candidate for "the people".

McDonald Defends Pulling Licenses

The State Board of Education's revocation of the teaching credentials of two former teachers is just the first step in efforts that must be undertaken to protect Kentucky schoolchildren and school districts, Superintendent of Public Instruction Alice McDonald said this week.

The board upheld Superintendent McDonald's recommendation to revoke the certificates of a teacher convicted of six offenses involving students and one who falsified credentials in seeking a teaching position. Both waived their right to a hearing and did not contest revocation.

Expressing regret for the circumstances requiring the revocations, McDonald said, "This is the first state board, and the first administration in Kentucky's history to address this issue openly and revoke certificates."

The education department has prepared a detailed regulation on reporting improper or illegal conduct on the part of school employees, when they are indicted, convicted, or terminated with cause by a school district. The board tabled that proposal until its next meeting to have more time to study it.

McDonald said the department will also propose legislation covering the reporting responsibilities of schools, law enforcement agencies, and other agencies, and seek a budget appropriation providing for systematic searches of criminal records.

"I believe these steps will provide an effective system to protect local school boards and the children of Kentucky from individuals who have abused positions of trust in the schools and who have abused the certification process," Supt. McDonald said.

"I believe if Chessie would come out and look at it," Owens said, "all they would have to do is put themselves in our position—and they would move it. It would probably take seven to 14 days to get done and cure a 30-year-old problem."

DRUG SENSE

As many as one out of every two prescription drugs is taken improperly, according to a recent Harris survey. Some 96 percent of people with new prescriptions said they had asked no questions about how to take their medications. With this in mind, patients should know why a particular drug is being prescribed and what results to expect. Always review verbally with the pharmacist the directions on the drug label. Also, know what side effects to expect and what reactions are serious enough to warrant calling the doctor. Lastly, know whether to take the whole drug supply, or to stop taking the drug when you feel better. Some medications, such as asthma drugs, may be used only when symptoms are present.

Here at COOLEY APOTHECARY we aim to offer you the finest professional service available anywhere. We're in the business of helping you stay healthy and are always available to answer any of your questions about your medications. We look forward to being of service to you in the near future here at #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106. Master Charge and Visa honored plus we welcome all third party payments. ### Ceremony Honors Viet Nam Servicemen

During an April 27 ceremony in Frankfort, Troy Branham, vice-president of the Floyd chapter of Viet Nam Veterans, read the names of Floyd servicemen killed in Viet Nam. Branham, Ed Carver, William Wallen, Gary Kendrick, Alan Shelton, and Glen Coleman, all members of the veterans group, visited the half-size replica of the Washington, D.C. Vietnam Memorial, which was in Frankfort on tour.

Fearless Fowl To Fight For New Flight Record

There will be lots of "Pullet Surprises" Saturday, May 16, at the 16th Annual International Chicken Flying Meet (ICFM). The event will be held at the Bob Evans Farm in Rio Grande, Ohio, as fearless fowl fight for a place in the pecking order of chicken history.

The highlight of this year's meet, held on the 1100-acre Farm, will be the induction of Bob Evans, beloved founder and commander of the ICFM, into the Coop of Fame.

The ICFM was founded in remembrance of Bob's boyhood days on his family's farm, where he would coax chickens out of the barn loft to see how far they could fly.

Chickens will be flying starting at 1 p.m., with weigh-ins beginning at 9 a.m. and continuing until flight time. Each chicken will be trying to break the world's record for chicken flight—302' 8" set in 1979 by Lola B. The lucky cluck that breaks the record will take home a $1000 grand prize. Longest flights in the four weight divisions will be rewarded with cash prizes and ribbons.

For those afraid of heights, other contests are available to chickens and their cronies. Starting with rooster crowing at 10 a.m. (humans and roosters), such events as a chicken legs contest (sorry, no chickens), egg toss, the 40-yard chicken run, and the children's chicken scratch will take place throughout the day.

Chickens are available at the Farm on a first-come, first-served basis for those who wish to participate. No entry fee or admission is charged to the eggstravaganza.

Trees Fight Pollution And Add to Landscape

For years, city officials have planted trees along metropolitan thoroughfares, mainly because they are beautiful. Now, however, scientists are discovering that trees have other attributes. According to an article by Mike Toner in National Wildlife magazine, urban planners are planting trees because they clean up air pollution.

During photosynthesis, trees not only convert carbon dioxide into oxygen but also filter the air of many of its man-made and natural pollutants. Hence, many city planners are using these natural cleaners to help purify the urban environment.

The air cleaning potential of trees is well-documented. Scientists in New Haven, Connecticut, for example, have determined that one large sugar maple can remove as much airborne lead as the city's cars emit by burning a thousand gallons of gasoline. Similarly, city planners in Los Angeles say that by the year 2000, trees will remove some 200 tons of dust and smoke from the region's air each day.

There are drawbacks to the effectiveness of this plan, not the least of which is the potential damage to the trees themselves. Specifically, too much ozone can actually destroy the stomata—tiny pores—on tree leaves. Worse yet, there is ample evidence to suggest that toxic substances and polluted air can kill trees not only in the city but in forests many miles from any urban environment as well.

Nonetheless, city planners from Europe to Australia are including trees in their future urban development plans.

"In most cities of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, you find tree plantings on a scale that most Americans would not believe," says Leon Dochinger, a plant pathologist at the U.S. Forest Service. And, in the United States, cities such as Dayton, Ohio, have used trees to cleanse the urban atmosphere.

KHC Offers Low-Interest Mortgage Financing

Homebuyers stunned by the recent, steep climb in interest rates may have a reprieve from the Kentucky Housing Corporation (KHC). KHC announced this month that it will make available approximately $60 million to qualified homebuyers.

The money has some attractive features, according to F. Lynn Luallen, executive director of KHC. "First, the rate is 9-3/8% which is very attractive in light of what is happening in the market. Second, the loans are fixed-rate for twenty-five years and lenders can charge only 1% for originating the loans."

KHC financing is available through local participating lenders for homebuyers whose annual income does not exceed KHC guidelines.

Maximum income limits for Floyd and many other Eastern Kentucky counties are as follows:

- One person—$27,500
- Married couple—$29,000
- Person or couple with one child—$30,500
- Person or couple with two children—$32,000
- Person or couple with three children—$33,500

Participating lenders include the Pikeville National Bank and Citizens National Bank and Family Federal Savings and Loan Assn., both in Paintsville.

Interested homebuyers can call the toll-free Home Line 1-800-633-8896 for more information.

Jury Backs Cookware Salesman In Tiff with Irate Customers

By Ron Marstin

Seven sued by a Tennessee firm for failing to keep up payments on cookware sets they bought following home demonstrations here responded last week with a suit of their own, claiming they had been defrauded by the cookware salesman.

A district court jury sided with the cookware firm, however, awarding judgment to the Regal Company in the one case the panel was permitted to rule on and denying to the buyers any of the punitive damages they sought.

The cases against six defendants were dismissed Thursday when District Judge Harold Stumbo ruled that the Regal Company salesman, who prosecuted the complaints without the assistance of an attorney, had not properly made his case against them.

The salesman, Paul Ratliff, of Jenkins, said later he thought he would not need a lawyer as long as he brought to court the purchase contracts he claimed were in default. He intends to appeal the dismissals, he said, adding, "and I'll have an attorney next time."

Ratliff originally filed his complaint in Small Claims Court, where disputes involving amounts of $1,000 or less are adjudicated, where litigants are not usually represented by attorneys, and where the rules of evidence are relatively informal. Trial was moved into District Court when the defendants countersued, each demanding punitive damages of up to $1,500, which is above the small claims limit.

Named as defendants in the original complaint were Johnnie D. Lee, of Ligon, alleged to owe $1,019 on a Cordon Bleu steel cookware set purchased from a Regal salesman in 1984, and six others whose purchases date to 1986. They are: Eddie Rose, of Harold, sued for $729; Virgil Paige, of McDowell, $535; Ruby Alice Stratton, of Stanville, $1,262; Harold Boyd, of Banner, $840; Loretta Johnson, of Weeksbury, $1,284; and Chester Mullins, of McDowell, $896.

All the cookware sets were later repossessed and sold at auction for $125 each, a sum deducted from the original purchase price, the plaintiff said.

In their counterclaim, the defendants said the company salesman defrauded them by claiming that food would not stick to the pots and pans during cooking. While that might be true for a master chef, said their attorney, Ned Pillersdorf, it was not true where the cookware was in the hands of the average household cook.

Pillersdorf said the buyers were not told that, under a Kentucky law designed to protect consumers from pressure tactics sometimes used by door-to-door salesmen, they could repudiate their contracts within three days of signing them.

Many of the buyers were pressured into signing installment contracts even though they could put little or no money down and had little credit, their attorney said.

The supposed auction at which the repossessed cookware was sold was apparently not designed to bring a fair price for the merchandise which, in any event, may have been returned to the Regal Company for resale as new equipment, the attorney contended.

In asking for punitive damages against the cookware firm, Pillersdorf urged the jury to make awards that would "protect honest local merchants who deal straight" and to send a message to out-of-state dealers that they should "not come into our county and do these kinds of things."

Ratliff argued that the Cordon Bleu line of cookware was designed for use at medium and low heat and that, if food stuck to the pan, it was simply because the users turned the heat too high. Moreover, all the purchase contracts included a paragraph explaining that the householders had three days in which to cancel them, he said.

The Regal Company has thousands of customers nationwide who "dearly love" their Cordon Bleu cookware. Ratliff said, adding, "The only problem we have is with people who don't want to pay."

In a conference held in the judge's chambers before the jury was asked to make its decision, Judge Stumbo was persuaded by the defense attorney that Ratliff had not properly presented a case against any defendant except Rose. The judge directed that all the other defendants be acquitted.

The six-member jury, some of whom posed questions to the witnesses during the trial, decided that Rose, a butcher at the Velocity Market at Betsy Layne, should pay the $729 for which he was sued and that none of the purchasers should be awarded punitive damages against the cookware company.

Ratliff lamented at one point during the in-chambers discussion of the case that the documentation he had brought to trial—including the purchase agreements, signed testimonials, and postal receipts of notices sent to the defendants warning them that their repossessed cookware was about to be sold at auction—was "only rubbish" in the eyes of the law.

The trial judge explained that, without witnesses to back it up, the written documentation was inadmissible as evidence since it was not amenable to cross-examination by the defense. "We need live witnesses, not just written instruments," the judge said.

OLW Will Celebrate Nat. Hospital Week

Our Lady of the Way Hospital is celebrating National Hospital Week May 10-16 with a number of activities for patients, staff and the public.

The celebration opened with a lobby display featuring the hospital's employees, doctors, and volunteers and the week's theme, "We Feel Good Helping You Feel Better."

County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo proclaimed Hospital Week in Floyd County from his Prestonsburg office at 10 a.m. on Monday.

Patient trays were decorated on Tuesday. Free balloons will be distributed to patients, staff and visitors on Wednesday. The hospital's employees will be treated to a special lunch on Thursday. A free blood pressure clinic is planned for downtown Martin on Friday.

The hospital will conclude its celebration by sponsoring a booth and refreshment stand at the Big Sandy Area Development District's Wellfest.

"We encourage everyone to visit our Wellfest booth," said Sister Monica Justinger, administrator. "Our employees have worked very hard to create some interesting and fun educational experiences. The 'Ways to Good Health' booth will offer visitors several opportunities to assess their health and learn how to maintain or improve it. We'd like to extend a special invitation to the kids because Scrubby Bear will be on hand with a few surprises."

National Hospital Week is sponsored each year by the American Hospital Association and its 6000 member hospitals. This year's theme highlights the contributions and dedication of hospital employees, medical staff and volunteers.

Grade School Athletics Policy Under Revision by Committee

By Ron Marstin

Grade school football will become a spring sport if the Floyd Board of Education adopts a recommendation made last week by a committee of school principals and coaches. The panel hopes that—by moving it from the fall, where it must compete for athletes with the more popular basketball—more boys will sign up for football, said James F. "Frankie" Francis, county schools' athletic director and a member of the committee.

Under a plan proposed by the panel, which has been revising primary and secondary school athletic policies under the direction of former superintendent E. P. Grigsby, Jr., the grade school football season will be pushed back to April, leaving the first half of the school year clear for basketball.

"There has been a conflict, especially in the smaller schools. Boys have had to choose between basketball and football," said Francis. "There was a feeling that we have been penalizing the kid who wants to play both."

Spring football is not a new idea, but it has been rejected before on grounds that it would rule out competitive play with school districts that schedule football in the fall. Francis said the change would not eliminate inter-district games completely—other school districts will be still playing football when the Floyd season begins—and it would force Floyd officials to schedule more in-county games.

The new athletic handbook, which is in its first complete revision for about 20 years, includes policies drawn up in 1982 in response to criticism that the grade-school basketball season was becoming too drawn-out and top-heavy with tournaments. The committee would limit to 13 the number of regular season games, with an additional three tournament games permitted. As has now been the case for several years, the season would begin September 15 and the county tournament would be over before Christmas.

Amid current debate over whether participation in athletics should be conditional on maintaining a minimum grade level, the Floyd committee would insist on a modest academic standard, barring any athlete who failed two or more subjects in the most recent six-week grading period.

While the new standard is less demanding than the old rule-of-thumb that athletes must maintain at least a C average, it follows the Kentucky High Schools Athletic Association rule and reflects the fact that, with the growth in special education programs, more marginal students are likely to stay in school and participate in sports, Francis said.

"The committee is looking at academics first; there is more emphasis on academics," Francis insisted. "We can't require a C average now but we feel staying on a team can be an incentive to do well in class."

Concern that surfaced five years ago about unruliness at basketball games is reflected in the committee's insistence that coaches and players behave themselves. The rules provide that any coach or player involved in a fight will be thrown out of the game.

Hueysville Girl Killed in Wreck

Joe Porter

A two-car accident Monday night in Hueysville claimed the life of Melissa Kaye Slone, 18, of Hueysville.

According to the State Police, Miss Slone was driving a 1984 Toyota Corolla north at approximately 6:30 p.m. when a 1978 Ford Bronco driven by Lloyd Ray Shepherd, 35, of Wayland, crossed the center line, struck the Slone vehicle, and overturned. Deputy Coroner Glen Frazier pronounced Miss Slone dead at the scene of the accident.

Shepherd was transported to Our Lady of the Way Hospital, reported in stable condition, and later transferred to Highlands Regional Medical Center. A juvenile girl, whose name has not been released, a passenger in the Slone car, was taken to Our Lady of the Way and later transferred to St. Joseph's Hospital in Lexington. Her condition also was reported as stable.

Frazier said that the Floyd County Rescue Squad was called and used the jaws of life to extract Miss Slone. Shepherd was issued two citations and a blood alcohol test was administered at the hospital.

Born September 15, 1969 in Hueysville, Miss Slone was the daughter of Delmas Slone, of Bevinville, and Sandra Duddleson Slone, of Stanville. She graduated from Allen Central High School in 1986 and had just completed her freshman year at Prestonsburg Community College. She attended the Hueysville Church of Christ.

In addition to her parents, she is also survived by her maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Buster Duddleson, with whom she lived; her paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Troy Slone, of Bevinville; her maternal great-grandmother, Fannie Duddleson, of Martin; one brother, Del Slone, of Hueysville.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday, May 14, at the Hueysville Church of Christ with Bill Ford, Cecil Sherman, and Rondal Hayes officiating. Burial will be made in the Allen family cemetery on Salt Lick under the direction of the Hall Funeral Home.

Football Is Recommended For Spring

Francis said that national media attention given to the behavior of coaches, increased use of law enforcement officers at local games, and stricter discipline have all but eliminated rowdiness as a problem here. "This year has been one of the better years we've had," he said.

The behavior of fans is largely determined by the example set by coaches, said Francis, who noted that no coach had been cited for technical fouls during tournament play here this year. "There was a time when it was accepted that the coach was a rough guy who kicked chairs and cursed officials—but not any more," the athletic director said.

By the same token, coaches need to be paid more, Francis said. The committee calls for a substantial pay hike for coaches—up from $300 to $1,000 per sport, with a $50 increment for each year of experience.

A teaching certificate is listed among the job requirements for coaches but the committee requires only that head coaches be teachers employed by the board of education. Game officials are also supposed to be licensed but, again, the rules seem to assume that this will not always be practicable.

Francis said that the shortage of people able and willing to officiate or coach—and the widespread use of unpaid volunteers to help with athletic programs—means that rules regarding registration and certification cannot be enforced strictly. Non-certified coaches are supposed to be supervised by certified personnel, however.

The 36-page committee document outlines procedures for evaluating and selecting referees, safety and security procedures, rules on purchasing equipment through competitive bids, and includes a section on cheerleaders and sponsors.

Twenty appendices include two chilling statements on sports hazards, detailed advice on protecting players from heat, and standard procedures for situations ranging from bomb threats to host team etiquette. One rule stipulates that "the home team will furnish the referees a soft drink at halftime."

Court Upholds PHS Principal Versus Student

By Ron Marstin

A high school principal acted properly in again suspending a student who, despite an earlier suspension, attended a prom dinner, Circuit Judge Hollie Conley ruled Friday.

Conley denied a motion filed on behalf of Prestonsburg High School sophomore Brent Akers, who asked for a court order restraining PHS Principal Robert May from enforcing a 10-day suspension levied May 4. The penalty was imposed on Akers after he had attended the high school prom dinner at the Paintsville Carriage House Motor Hotel two days earlier.

In a Floyd Circuit Court hearing Friday, the argument turned on whether the dinner should properly be considered a school activity from which Akers was barred by reason of a five-day suspension he had already incurred for a disciplinary infraction. Martin attorney John D. Caudill, who represented the 16-year-old Prater Creek boy, said it should not.

Akers took his date to the Carriage House dinner because they had made reservations two weeks earlier, had their hearts set on it, and did not consider it to be part of the school prom, Caudill said. The boy did not attend the prom dance, he noted.

"Mr. May thought they were out to rub it in his face, but that was not their intention," the attorney said. "They were just eating dinner."

However, attorney John Earl Hunt, who represented May and the Floyd Board of Education, noted that the couple had eaten in an atrium area reserved by school officials and decorated at their instruction. The prom dinner was clearly a school function, he argued.

Judge Conley agreed, and Akers began his suspension this week. Nevertheless, Caudill said he hopes the case will go to a jury before the semester is over.

So speedy a trial would be unusual, but any delay could injure his client, the attorney insisted. "If a jury agrees that the principal's conduct was arbitrary or malicious or constituted outrageous conduct, the suspension would be nullified" and Akers could make up any tests or assignments he had missed, the attorney said.

Except for semester exams, students are not permitted under school board policy to make up work missed on account of a suspension. Caudill said the missed work would hurt his client, whom he described as a marginal student.

Akers was initially disciplined for a classroom disturbance: the boy broke a piece of plexiglass with a rock, his attorney said.

New Program To Implement Crime Victims' Assistance

By Louise Houghton

WANTED: Dependable, well-organized person, skilled in human relations, concerned about the treatment of victims and witnesses caught up in the criminal-justice system, and willing to donate up to 20 hours per week to improve that treatment.

The office of Floyd Commonwealth Attorney is one of 10 agencies across Kentucky in which a "victim's assistance" program will be set up this year to help implement the Victims' Bill of Rights that was adopted by the legislature in 1986, according to a spokesperson for state Attorney-General David Armstrong. The programs must rely on unpaid volunteers for now, said Jeff Ewalt, but money may become available later to pay the workers.

"I sure hope so," he added. "You can only expect to go so far with volunteers."

Some of the things recommended by the state legislation are already being done, such as consulting with victims before striking a plea-bargain agreement with the accused person, Ewalt said. But having a person on the staff who can spend time comforting victims, explaining how the criminal-justice system works, and helping witnesses and victims get to court to tell their stories could result in a higher number of successful prosecutions, according to Jane Hall, family violence coordinator at Mountain Comprehensive Care.

Many criminal cases, especially those involving rape or the sexual assault of children, never get to court because the victims are too frightened or too traumatized to help with the prosecution, Hall said. "We're losing these people by the sheer virtue that they're scared to death," she said. "Most of the time, they just want to get off and forget what happened in the first place."

Even with those cases that do get to court, she added, a victim's advocate who could "exude a little human kindness" might make the process less difficult for those involved.

Hall said that her office, which includes staff members trained in human relations, expects to help the local victim's advocate, and could help find volunteers to fill the position as well. Several people in this area have expressed an interest in aiding victims, she said, and students at Prestonsburg Community College might be interested in gaining real-life experience to enhance their studies.

The victim's advocate—or advocates, if several volunteers want to share the job—will work out of the Commonwealth attorney's office in the courthouse, according to Commonwealth detective Tim Francis, who will coordinate the program. The workload will fluctuate from week to week, depending on the office's case load, he said, but the average should be about 20 hours per week.

If a volunteer can be lined up before the end of the month, he or she will be able to take part in a state training session for victim's advocates in Frankfort on May 30, Francis said.

One of the advocate's responsibilities will be to help victims prepare a "victim impact statement" that is presented to the court before the sentencing or paroling of a convicted person. The statement details the emotional, financial and personal costs of crime to the victim, such as medical or funeral expenses, lost or destroyed property, or the need for counseling or other treatment.

The Victims' Bill of Rights, which now has been adopted by 35 states, also states that crime victims should be informed about treatment and compensation programs, protected from harassment and retaliation, notified of important trial occurrences, and given back their property, held as evidence, as soon as possible.

Group Approves Logo In Main Street Meet

By Louise Houghton

"I like it," whispered one woman to her friend.

"Very impressive," commented someone else.

"That'll get Paintsville's and Pikeville's attention," predicted another member of the audience.

Those were some of the reactions Monday evening when officials of The Preston Group, Lexington public relations firm, revealed their proposed design for Prestonsburg's official city logo and a brochure featuring the downtown area. Both designs are still in rough form, they cautioned, but the goal is to promote commerce in the town's eastern, one of the "best kept secrets in eastern Kentucky," according to company president Thomas Preston.

The proposed logo shows a generic city skyline in dark silhouette against a background of lighter mountains. Superimposed in the middle is a map of Kentucky, with the location marked by a star, and written below is "Prestonsburg" and "Eastern Kentucky's Star City."

The "star city" idea grew from the fact that five major highways lead into town, like the five points of a star, explained consultant Chuck Overly. From the air, he added, "all roads point to downtown Prestonsburg."

The 15 or so citizens who came to the public meeting had numerous questions and suggestions about the proposed logo and brochure. They wanted to know why the skyline was generic instead of real, why the buildings were so darkly silhouetted, and whether Jenny Wiley State Park should be a part of the local map that is included in the brochure. But in the end, when Preston asked whether the company was "on the right track," he was answered with a chorus of yeas.

Preston also said that the city's "unusual variety" of architectural styles is an asset for the downtown areas, which he described as "darn good-looking."

"You have some very unusual architecture in this community," he said. "You ought to be proud of what you have. It certainly impressed us."

Following the presentation by the public relations firm, a resource team from the state "Main Street" program offered ideas and encouragement for the Main Street effort here. Prestonsburg was chosen last year as one of six towns with a population below 10,000 to get state help in revitalizing their downtown areas.

Unlike the larger Main Street cities, smaller towns will not get any state or federal money to aid their efforts and will need to rely more heavily on community commitment. But Prestonsburg could receive as much as $10,000 worth of technical assistance over the next two years, according to state Main Street coordinator Scott Barksdale.

"Realistically, for any small town to survive, it has to be by the work of the community," he added.

Promoting the downtown has to rely on much more than just sales put on by retail businesses, according to Ray Rothgeb, Main Street manager in Independence, Kansas. The community needs to discover its special features and distinctive flavor and to capitalize on those unique aspects, he said. In particular, he said, promotions need to focus on exciting and enjoyable events that will entice people downtown even if they don't want to do any shopping.

In Independence, Rothgeb said, retailers had traditionally held a summer clearance sale. But that ordinary event became extraordinary when his Main Street program decided to call it "Dog Days" and lined up an entire program of dog-related enticements. With the help of many area businesses and agencies, they put on a full-dress dog parade with prizes for the best costumes, a sidewalk adopt-a-dog booth sponsored by the local humane society, canine obedience classes led by the 4-H Club, a hot dog eating contest, and a discount dog-dipping service at local feed stores.

"People are still talking about it today," he beamed.

The Main Street resource team spent Monday and Tuesday touring Prestonsburg and interviewing residents and business owners. Its findings and recommendations were discussed with the local Main Street board, Tuesday evening.

Food Pantries Co-Ordinate Efforts To Feed the Needy

By Louise Houghton

In the Bible story of the loaves and fishes, it was miraculous intervention that refilled the two small baskets from which the disciples of Christ handed out food to the multitude.

No miracles have been reported here, but emergency food pantries in Floyd county are in the process of stretching their limited supplies to feed a larger number of hungry families. What's behind the change are the contributions of an estimated five million Americans to last year's widely-publicized campaign against hunger and homelessness called Hands Across America.

Of the money raised in the national campaign, $3,500 was sent here this spring to help coordinate and stretch the resources of the six different agencies that offer emergency food supplies to local families in need. Sponsored by the Floyd County Ministerial Association, the network of pantries is expected to serve more people by purchasing food more cheaply, in larger amounts, and by making it harder for people to abuse the system by getting food from more than one pantry.

To that end, the group has hired a coordinator and secured a temporary warehouse, and the first bulk food purchase is planned for next week. A permanent warehouse is still being sought in the Prestonsburg-Allen area, where it can be easily reached by food pantries throughout the county and in other counties, too, if the network expands in the future.

At a meeting held Tuesday in Prestonsburg, the managers of most of the county's pantries also discussed using uniform vouchers and referral slips to cut down on abuse and increase the coordination between agencies. The vouchers, which can be exchanged for food at many area grocery stores, are given out by the pantries when their shelves are bare or when a person on a special diet needs a particular type of food not available at the pantry. They are little used at some pantries, while others, such as Mud Creek Clinic, may hand out thousands of dollars worth of vouchers in a year.

Also discussed was the problem of abusers, such as those who sell their "emergency" food to get money to buy liquor. Deciding whether a family is really in need, and whether the need is truly an emergency, is not easy, said Doreen Martin, of the Drift Food Pantry. It's a decision that often has to be made "from the heart," she added.

Tuesday's meeting was a milestone, said Rev. Tim Jessen, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Prestonsburg, who helped write the application for the Hands Across America money. Although the pantry managers know each other fairly well, they have not previously met on a regular basis to talk about their problems and the people they serve, he said.

That kind of sharing, as well as the bulk purchasing of food and the coordinated distribution of it to the different pantries, will play an important role in combating hunger here, he believes. "The problem in the country is not the scarcity of food," Jessen said. "It's a matter of distribution."

Immunizations Prevent Many Dread Diseases

By NAEWANA NICKLES, R.N.,
Education Coordinator

Babies are born immune to many diseases. But these immunities wear off during their first year of life. Therefore, immunization (vaccination) should start early in order to help our children build their own defenses against disease.

This is how immunizations work. Small amounts of disease-causing organisms (or materials produced from these organisms) are weakened and made into vaccines. These vaccines are injected into your body or taken by mouth. Your body reacts by making its own disease-fighting substances called anti-bodies. Anti-bodies build up in the system and guard against these diseases for a long time, often for a lifetime.

The Public Health Service strongly recommends that all healthy children be immunized against all seven vaccine-preventable childhood diseases: diphtheria, tetanus (lockjaw), pertussis (whooping cough), polio, measles, mumps and rubella (German measles).

These diseases are serious and their complications can cripple or kill your child. Since all but tetanus are very contagious, outbreaks of these diseases can occur if children are not protected from them.

Although diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis are serious diseases which usually occur in children, all, especially tetanus, can also strike adults. The availability and widespread use of the DTP vaccine since the 1950's have gradually lessened the incidences of these terrible diseases.

Diphtheria is caused by a bacterium found in the mouth, throat and nose of an infected person. Coughing and sneezing passes the germ on to someone else in tiny moisture droplets.

Early symptoms of diphtheria are sore throat, slight fever and chills. As the disease worsens, a grayish membrane may form in the throat which can interfere with swallowing and could eventually block the passage of air to the patient's lungs. Further complications can include paralysis, heart failure or bronchopneumonia. This disease is treatable; but more importantly, it is preventable through immunization.

Tetanus, commonly called lockjaw, is caused by a bacterium found mostly in soil, dust and manure. Tetanus is not contagious. The germs enter the body through wounds, punctures or cuts, especially those made by knives and dirty nails.

Headache, irritability, and muscle stiffness in the jaw or neck are early symptoms of tetanus. As the poison increases, the jaw, neck, arms, legs and muscles become locked in spasms.

Pertussis (whooping cough) is highly contagious. Like diphtheria, it is caused by bacteria in the mouth, nose and throat and is spread through the tiny moisture droplets expelled when coughing and sneezing.

Pertussis causes severe coughing spells which can interfere with eating, drinking and breathing. Complications include pneumonia, convulsions, and inflammation of the brain (encephalitis).

In recent years, an average of 1700 cases of pertussis have been reported annually in the United States. Most of these cases occurred in children under five years of age; more than half occurred in infants less than 12 months old.

Since the DTP vaccine is one of the best ways to prevent these three diseases, young children should receive a series of three DTP shots during their first year of life and a fourth shot at about 18 months of age. A booster is required before the child enters school, between the fourth and seventh birthdays.

Polio is a contagious viral disease that, in its severe form, can cause permanent paralysis and, occasionally, death.

The polio virus lives in the nose, throat and intestinal tract of the infected person. Symptoms include fever, sore throat, nausea, headache and stomach ache. Sometimes the patient will feel pain and stiffness in the neck, back and legs.

Due to the acceptance and use of immunizations in the United States, polio is no longer a major threat here. However, the thousands of cases which occur in the rest of the world each year are potentially risky for our children if they are not immunized.

All healthy infants should get two or more doses by mouth during the first year of life and another dose at 18 months of age. An additional dose should be taken prior to entering school.

Mumps is spread much the same way as the other airborne diseases. It causes headaches, fever and inflammation of the salivary glands (which causes the cheeks to swell). Serious complications may lead to deafness, sterility in teenage and adult males, or, in rare instances, encephalitis.

Rubella, also known as German or three-day measles, is spread through coughing and sneezing too. Generally its symptoms are mild—a slight 24-hour fever and a rash on the face and neck which disappears in 72 hours. But for a pregnant woman and her unborn child, rubella can be much more serious. If a mother gets rubella during the early months of her pregnancy, she stands a 20 to 25 percent chance to miscarriage her baby or giving birth to a mentally retarded or physically deformed child.

Children should receive the rubella (MMR) immunization at 15 months of age. It protects the child and helps eliminate the usual source of infection for pregnant women.

School Officials Press
For Firm Truancy Action

By Ron Marstin

Floyd students have been offered everything from free meals to bicycles as an inducement to attend school, but the real key to raising the county's sagging attendance record, say truancy officials, is firm action on the part of the juvenile court.

That is where the system is breaking down, the school officials complained this week. And, to illustrate their grievance, they pointed to the 10 truancy cases brought before the court Monday.

The defendants ranged in age from eight to 13. Typically, they had missed from 30 to 60 days this school year without any excuses on record. Four of the 10 failed to show up in court. The others, who appeared with one or both parents, were sent home with a verbal scolding but without penalty.

Maurice Allen, director of pupil personnel for the Floyd school system, and Brent Allen, a social worker attached to the pupil personnel division, argued for stronger action, citing a state law which permits a judge to levy a fine on parents of truants and noting that a Kenton county juvenile court judge recently jailed a man for failing to send his 13-year-old wife to school.

Both Juvenile Court Judge Harold Stumbo and Assistant County Attorney Dan Rowland insisted, however, that there was little they could do to force truants to go to school. The state law cited by the truancy officers provides no penalties for truants but only for their parents, the judge pointed out.

"I don't believe the juvenile court can fine a parent. The parent is not before the court. You will have to get a warrant for the parent," said Stumbo, who added that no law permitted him to send a juvenile to the detention center for truancy. "I don't want to do anything that will get me sued in federal court for illegal detention of a child," he said.

The pupil personnel director, who vowed he would swear out warrants against the parents in future, was not placated. "It looks like the county attorney would have explained the law before this, when we have been trying for two years to get truancy cases before the court," he said.

Rowland insisted that the law had been explained to the school officials as long as nine months earlier. "It seems we have a difference of opinion on the law," he said.

In the meantime, Stumbo delivered a stern lecture to the mother of a 10-year-old who had allegedly missed 31 days of school. "You are depriving this child of the fundamental thing she needs. You are doing the child more damage than anyone else. You ought to be ashamed of yourself," the judge said.

The mother of two youngsters who were also said to have missed more than a month's schooling explained that one, an eight-year-old, suffered from asthma. "And what about the other one?" the judge asked.

"He is sickly too," the mother replied.

Pressed by the judge to explain why his 11-year-old son has missed 60 days this year, one man explained simply. "He plays hooky."

The mother of a stocky, 13-year-old boy who stood inches taller than she lamented that "the only thing I can do is try to get him up and get him to go to school."

"There is always the willow limb," the judge suggested. "That's what they used on me."

Brent Allen explained that a child is considered truant if he or she is absent or late for three or more days without a valid excuse. A child reported truant on more than three occasions is classified as an habitual truant, he said.

State law provides for a $10 fine on the first offense for parents or guardians who fail to send their children to school, and a $20 fine for subsequent offenses. Allen complained that no fine is ever levied for truancy in juvenile court here.

The social worker noted that the school district loses $8.53 in state funds for every day a child is absent. "Taylor county leads the state in pupil attendance," he claimed, "because the court there has a strong interpretation of the juvenile code."

Parents of truants routinely receive a warning that they will have to appear in court unless the situation is remedied, Allen said. "If the judge made an example of a few people, attendance would go up," he said. "If the law is not enforced, we don't get any help."

Award-Winning Film
 Airs On KET, May 19

Bootlegging, blackmail and revenge are but a few of the ulterior motives depicted in the award-winning screenplay, "Gal Young 'Un," which airs Tuesday, May 19 at 8 p.m. on KET as part of the "American Playhouse" series.

Directed and produced by Victor Nunez, and based on the O'Henry Award-winning short story by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, "Gal Young 'Un'" opens as Mattie Siles, a widow of means, is attracted by a young dandy, Trax, who later cons her. The story takes place in Florida.

The two are married after a whirlwind courtship and Trax begins his plan to finance an illegal moonshine operation by using Mattie's fortune. Blackmailed into compliance, Mattie funds and supervises his business. But when Trax brings his new young mistress to her home, Mattie plans the perfect revenge. Dana Preu makes her screen debut as Mattie Siles. David Peck (Trax) and J. Smith Cameron (Elly) also star. "Gal Young 'Un'" was partially funded by the National Endowment for the Arts. The film received a Silver Hugo for Best Film Feature at the Chicago Film Festival and was selected to the Directors Fortnight at the Cannes Film Festival.

FLOYD CONSERVATION DISTRICT WILL MEET
 The Floyd County Conservation District will meet Tuesday, May 19, at 2:15 p.m. in the district office at 105 Court Street. All interested persons are invited to attend.

RE-ELECT

 DEMOCRAT FOR
COMMONWEALTH ATTORNEY
 Your Vote and Support Will Be Appreciated.

Brother, Can You Spare A Dime?

How many times have you, the voting public, been asked to help "one more time", to give "one more dime?" But "Ol' Joe" comes back again and again for one more dime. How many dimes do you give before you go broke?

Do you know that Frank DeRossett has been in office for TWENTY-FOUR years and now is asking for one more time. Do you know that after TWENTY years of service he can retire with a State Pension?

He doesn't really need to ask for your vote for one more time. He really doesn't need one more dime. Can we really afford Frank DeRossett for another six years? Floyd County has paid well for services rendered and now, after TWENTY-FOUR years, it's time for a change.

Change to David Hereford.

Jeff Burchett Could Be Good Coach...But He Can't

In the late '70s, Jeff Burchett excelled on the Prestonsburg Blackcat hardwood. After he hung up his high school sneakers, Burchett took his athletic ability into the college ranks, ending an impressive playing career at Alice Lloyd College.

While perfecting his on-court performance, Burchett also learned the game of basketball. During these past two years Burchett served as an assistant coach to Prestonsburg chief basketball coordinator Jeff Riley.

"That man knows a lot about basketball," Riley said of his past assistant.

"He has helped me here more than a lot of people could realize."

Burchett is a past assistant to Jeff Riley because Riley recently resigned his Blackcat post to accept a coaching position with Tommy Gaither and Morehead State University.

Since Riley's notification to Prestonsburg administration, Robert May, PHS principal, has been faced with the problem of searching for a new face to assume the Blackcat head coaching position.

From a quick look, most people would see Riley's replacement standing in the shadows. That replacement has tremendous basketball knowledge, coaching experience, and no one is more familiar with Prestonsburg's program.

That replacement could be Jeff Burchett, but it can't.

According to a Kentucky High School Athletic Association rule, no person, outside the school system, can be a head coach. This, in itself, rules Jeff Burchett out.

His tried and true coaching ability doesn't even bring consideration, because Jeff Burchett isn't a teacher within this school system.

Burchett's situation isn't by itself either. Many qualified coaches have never, or will never step outside their homes as a high school head coach.

Why? Because they are non-teachers. This rule has been criticized by many people, challenged by a few, but continues to stand strong against its opposers.

In the early 1950s, coaches in the high school ranks did not necessarily have to be teachers, but as people in power began to oppose this, the KHSAA voted the current rule into being.

Burchett's situation, along with several others across the state, has rekindled a new fire surrounding the rule, but the fire is still flickering with small flames.

During the most recent meeting of the Board of Governors, which is the controlling body of the KHSAA, a proposal to defeat the non-teaching policy was soundly defeated.

Tom Mills, commissioner of the KHSAA, says that he isn't familiar with the reasoning behind the initial voting many years ago, but does have an idea why school administration doesn't approve of non-teaching coaches.

"I think the school administration wants the coach and the program under their jurisdiction," Mills said. "When a coach is a teacher, principals feel that they will be closer to the program, have more control, and not have as much of a disciplinary problem as they would if the coach was away from the school a major part of the day."

The KHSAA does have a provision that enables people with at least 64 college hours to serve as an assistant coach, but neither the seniority nor the money is as attractive.

Jeff Burchett falls under this category. He has 64 college hours, and due to this was allowed to serve his former high school as a coach.

According to Jeff Riley, Burchett has served well and really without any compensation.

Many fans feel that Jeff Burchett would make an excellent head basketball coach, but of course he may never prove yea or nay.

"In the last Board of Governors meeting a proposal was introduced that, if passed, would waive the rule of non-teaching head coaches, but it failed miserably," Commissioner Mills stated. "Never is a long time, but right now interest in making a change isn't evident."

Many schools throughout this area have avoided this situation, especially when their program had no qualified coaches.

A teacher has to be listed as the head coach, but for several years Tim Bostic served as baseball coach at Magoffin County High School. Although Bostic received no money, the players did receive solid coaching.

This isn't an isolated incident, either, but even in these cases the non-teacher isn't gaining the full benefits a head coach should.

Obviously not everyone, especially the Board of Governors, is in favor of changing anything, and they describe their position convincingly...almost.

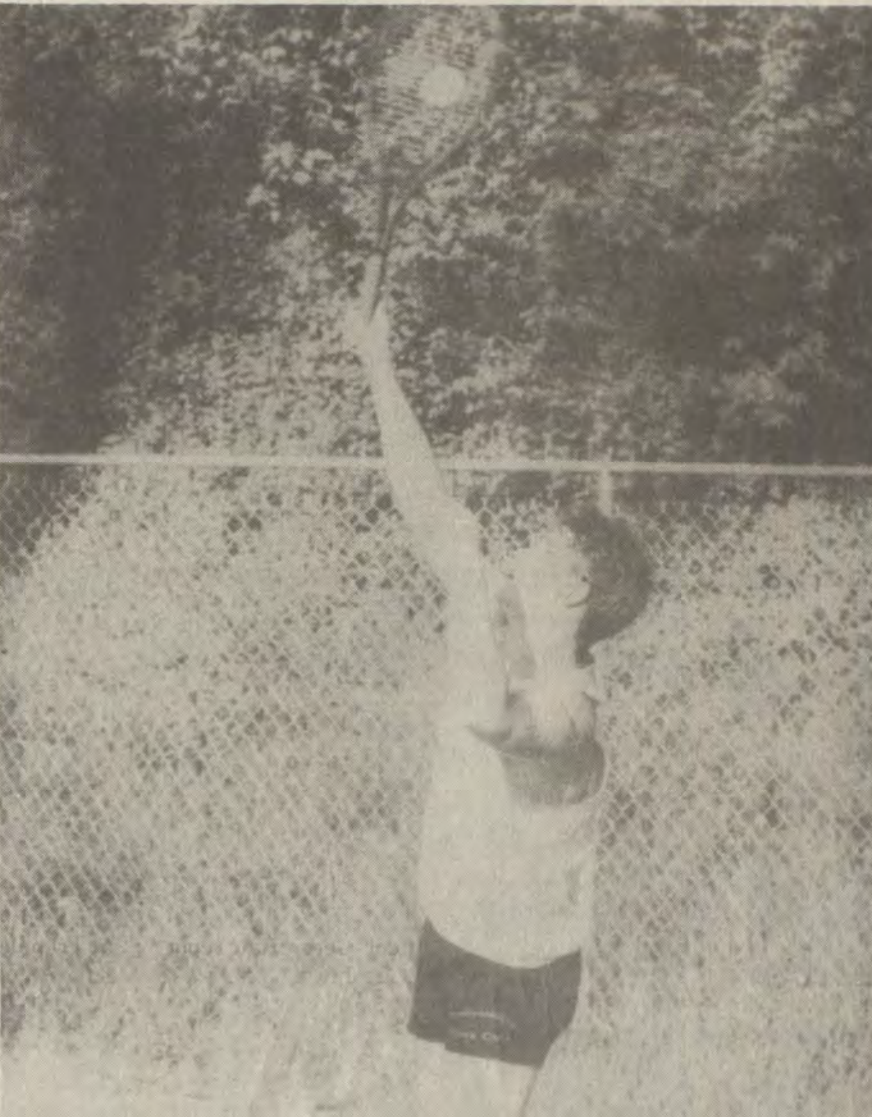

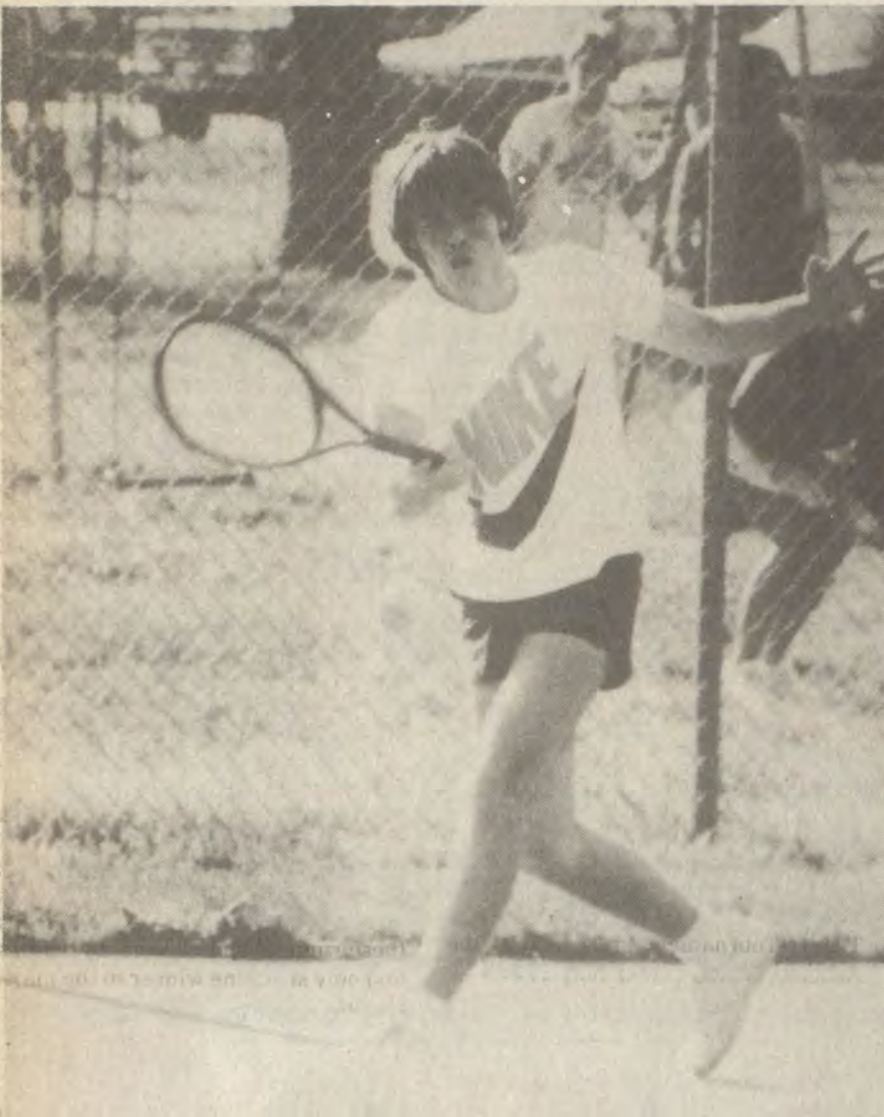

Allen Central head football and baseball coach Donnie Daniels says it is extremely difficult for someone to serve a school as coach without being affiliated with the school.

Wheelwright football coach Roger Johnson has often mentioned the difficulties of not knowing what his players are doing inside and outside the classroom at Wheelwright High School while he is teaching at Osborne Grade School.

Obviously there are both pros and cons, good points from both sides, and many questions to be answered about the no teach, no coach situation.

Commissioner Mills says the KHSAA doesn't have any plans of changing the ruling. He says the high schools are the KHSAA. But the schools do not have final vote on issues. The Board of Governors does.

Unlike those saying non-teaching coaches would have disciplinary problems, one proponent of changing the current rule said, "Summer youth league baseball has non-teaching coaches, and these programs are the lifeline of high school baseball."

NUMBERS ONE AND TWO: Aaron Crum (left) will represent Prestonsburg's top seed in regional competition while Brent Music will serve as the Blackcats second seed in single's action this Saturday and the following Saturday.

In District Tourney

Prestonsburg Easily Advances By Wheelwright

When it rains it pours, and Wheelwright couldn't hold back the water when Prestonsburg opened their offensive floodgates, Monday night.

The Blackcats, in the 57th district tournament's opening round, pounded out a total of 20 hits in defeating Wheelwright 20-4.

After the Trojans went quietly in the first inning against Todd Justice, Johnny Ray Harris, who has feasted off Wheelwright pitching this season, .571, opened the game with a double. Prestonsburg continued to pound Trojan starter John Justice, scoring six runs off the righthander, then jumping all over reliever Greg Hall.

The Blackcats collected a total of five hits and six runs off Justice before Roger Johnson appeared from the Wheelwright dugout, took the baseball from Justice, and turned it over to Hall.

After Thomas Nairn, the seventh hitter for the Blackcats, bounced back to the mound for Prestonsburg's first out, Jimbo Frazier reached Hall for a double, and later scored on an error.

All told, Prestonsburg scored seven runs in that first inning, but the long day had just begun for Wheelwright pitching and Coach Monroe Jones.

Jones' Trojans were already suffering, having lost starting shortstop Tommy Jones earlier and having to go without starting first baseman Jimmy Tackett, who suffered an injured toe, Sunday afternoon.

Making out the rapidly dwindling Wheelwright lineup was a challenge for Jones, but on this day, nothing would be easy for the first-year coach.

The Trojans did send a whisper of hope throughout their hopeful fans, but that whisper soon turned into a rumble, a Prestonsburg hitting rumble.

Wheelwright reached Todd Justice for a pair of runs in the top of the second. A Shawn Hill single leading off the frame, three consecutive walks, and a hit batsman produced that, but Prestonsburg soon got those runs, plus much more, the Black.

The Blackcats, 8-16 on the year, could only manage two runs in the second, somewhat of a disappointment compared to the other innings.

But, in the following frame, with the help of a Joey Griffith three-run homerun, Prestonsburg rallied for another seven spot.

Darrell Sparks, hitting for third baseman Steve Wells, opened the third with a single. After Johnny Ray Harris bounced back to the pitcher, Craig Tucker collected his second single of the game. Sparks scored when Brian Wallace followed Tucker's hit with an RBI single.

With two men on, and one out, Joey Griffith stepped plateward. As the cleanup hitter for the Blackcats, Griffith's job is to drive in runs. All season long the junior center fielder has done that.

Griffith came into Monday's contest with a team high 25 RBIs. He added one to that number in the first, and on a one-pitch, collected three more with a line drive homerun over the leftcenter field fence in the third inning.

Griffith later added another run batted in to his already impressive stat, giving him a total of 30 for the year.

Joey Griffith's shot helped Prestonsburg up their lead to 16-2 after three innings, and Todd Justice would have been proud to get all this offensive support, but the sophomore southpaw was watching from the Blackcat bench, having given way to Danny Hamilton in the third.

Prestonsburg coach Russell Shepherd wasn't dissatisfied with the work of his hard throwing youngster but explained that he might need Justice later on in the tournament.

Instead of having Justice exhaust himself in the district's opening game, Shepherd elected to go to another sophomore, righthander Danny Hamilton.

For four innings Hamilton, 3-0 after getting the win Monday, held Wheelwright scoreless, but in the final frame the Trojans had one final hurrah, a minor moment in the sun.

Stevie Little gained a measure of revenge for being hit in the second inning by leading the seventh inning off with a triple. Little later scored when Johnny Isaac singled to deep rightfield.

Shane Cook collected a single behind Isaac, and Wheelwright added their final run of the year when Isaac came around to score on an error.

With the win, Prestonsburg advances in the district tournament's second round where they will face McDowell, the second best team, record wise, in the county.

Although Prestonsburg, led by Griffith's four-for-four performance and five RBIs, had a team total of 20 hits, Russell Shepherd says that it wasn't necessarily their best offensive showing of the year.

The Blackcats may need their best effort today when they go up against hard throwing Mark Perkins. Daredevil coach David Hall says Perkins, 4-2 for the year, is one of the district's best, and his record reflects it.

Shepherd said he was uncertain as to who he will send to the mound, but has more than one option to consider. The expected Blackcat starter could be either Tim Trusty or Joey Griffith, both experienced and proven pitchers.

The winner of today's Prestonsburg-McDowell matchup will advance to the regional tournament, plus a berth in the district tournament's championship contest, set for Thursday at 5:30.

Today the first pitch is set to be released at 5:30.

Bobcats Advance With 5-4 Win Over Allen Central

Most of those on hand at Allen Park yesterday came in anticipation of a pitcher's duel between a talented pair of lefthanders, Betsy Layne's Bud Newsome, and Allen Central's Nathan Shelton.

Newsome, coming into Tuesday's contest, had posted a 2-3 record, pitching without a great amount of support from his Bobcat teammates.

Although his won-loss record didn't reflect it, the Betsy Layne senior had enjoyed several impressive outings. In 34 and two-thirds innings Newsome had struck out a total of 53 hitters while compiling a 1.82 earned run average.

In the other Allen Park dugout Nathan Shelton had enjoyed a successful season, posting a 3-3 record while drawing the pitching assignment against Allen Central's tougher opponents.

Shelton's evening saw the Rebel junior facing another tough opponent, but thanks to a bases loaded wild pitch, Allen Central posted their starter to a 1-0 lead before he even took the mound.

With Bud Newsome experiencing some control difficulty, Allen Central loaded the bases on a lead off walk and two errors.

Newsome then uncorked a low curveball that eluded catcher Todd Sturgill, allowing Todd Duff to cross the plate with the game's first run.

The Bobcat southpaw then collected himself, striking out Rady Martin and Mickey Parsons to survive the early Allen Central threat.

Shelton also suffered control difficulty in the first, especially on a two-two pitch to Dwight Jarrell. Shelton plunked the Bobcat leadoff hitter, who later scored on an opposite field double off the bat of Duran Newsome.

With Newsome on second, nobody out, and one run already in it appeared as if Nathan Shelton was in trouble, but that appearance rapidly disappeared.

Shelton retired Bud Newsome, one of the Bobcats' top hitters at .474, on a grounder to second, struck out todd Sturgill, .429, and got Brad Hall, .386, to pop out.

Allen Central rewarded Shelton for his clutch mound work, waking their bats up to the tune of three runs in the top of the third inning.

Kelly Nickles led the scoring frame off by getting hit by a pitch, and later scored when Roger Horne bounced a line drive over the left field fence.

The Rebels added two more runs when Rady Martin grounded one through shortstop Duran Newsome, allowing Horne to score. Mickey Parsons followed with a single, and Newsome delivered walks to Robbie Click and Darrin Conn, forcing in Martin from third.

After that first inning of difficulty, Shelton made runs hard to produce, until the fifth inning, that is.

The Bobcats cut into Allen Central's 4-1 lead, scoring an unearned run when Dwight Jarrell drove in Barry Hamilton with a ground ball to third base.

Martin elected for the out rather than try to nail Hamilton at the plate, a move that eventually paid off.

THE SPORTING TIMES

Up next on turntable two is that familiar spring tune, "Super Soup Baseball." This one should bring back some memories for all of you recent baseball fans.

Just lay back, crank up the ole radio, and allow this remake of an old sports-writer song to satisfy your repetitious desires.

And isn't it comparable to a stuck record?

Every year, for the past three or four seasons, the same discussion crops up about this time. "The baseball travels farther this year." "I've never seen as many homeruns." "The baseball is souped up."

Year after baseball year these same quotes are seen in the print media. Television broadcasters take up air time talking on the subject, and even radio announcers give it much of their attention.

Over what? A few above the normal sailing out of major league baseball parks. That is what sparks the continuous conversation. Just too many homeruns are being hit.

Or this is what some people seem to think. Spring means the beginning of baseball. This in itself is a rebirth of excitement, but the edge is shaved off all that enthusiasm as three or four weeks creep by.

Maybe everyone needs just a bit extra to keep their interest churning, so they allow their imagination to take control.

The subject of this year's conversation is the fact that several players are hitting at a much higher ratio of homeruns compared to at bats than did Babe Ruth and Henry Aaron.

One thing most people have forgotten to point out is the youth of the people hitting these homeruns. Sure, more than normal have been sent over the fence, but now meet the guys who are doing it.

Eric Davis, the National League's leader, is only in his second year as a regular. Rob Deer, one of the top's in the AL, is also a new face. Kal Daniels, another player pointed out in this homerun, souped up baseball thing, still isn't a regular.

Where is Glen Davis? Where is Dale Murphy? Where is Gary Carter? Where is Darryl Strawberry?

They aren't hurt! Where they are on the field playing every day. One place you don't see much of them is at the top of the homerun list.

These are the players who consistently lead the homerun derby, so if the baseball is traveling farther this year, why aren't they taking advantage of it?

Could it be that the youth movement in baseball is also a power movement? Statistics tell us this could very well be the case. What statistics do not tell us is that the baseball is more lively than in past years.

Why are there more homeruns this year than in past seasons? Possibly because there is more longball ability in the major leagues. Maybe pitchers aren't in full form, at least not in the form they will have later on in the summer.

Major league baseball does not use aluminum bats because of the speed the baseball bounces off them. With this in mind it would be hard to understand why anyone would make a baseball that would come off a wooden bat any quicker than it already does.

The imagination of some take on strange twists. Others merely need another topic to discuss. Back in the year 1961 a man named Roger Maris accomplished one of the greatest feats ever in baseball. This guy clubbed 61 homeruns in one season.

To this day fans still rave about that, but they shouldn't. The baseball was souped up! No, that theory wasn't around then. Well, it probably was, especially when Maris was finished.

Keep 'em coming Davis, Daniels, and Deer. Hey! It isn't the baseballs that have the extra. It's the D's.

Since this past year's basketball regional tournament, much controversy has risen because of the Virgie site. The tournament has long been over, but engraved memories continue to be a hot item among Floyd, Johnson, and Magoffin fans.

Rumor has it that the 1988 tournament will be held at Pikeville High School, and officials there are wanting to charge double admission, because their gym isn't large enough to accommodate a big crowd.

According to some stories, Pikeville High School has been promised next year's tourney, but KHSAA Commissioner Tom Mills denies that.

Mills says that no site will be decided until January, and no promises or decisions can or will be made prior to this month.

The past two events have been held at Belfry and Virgie, respectively, but not respectfully. Many people have complained about the sites simply because they are far too remote from most other regional schools.

"I guess those schools complained when it was held elsewhere, so it evened out for everyone," Commissioner Mills stated when asked about the problem.

The trouble is that Mills isn't exactly familiar with this area. For Magoffin County fans, the trip to Virgie was over 70 miles, and then some were turned away because of sellouts.

Paintsville fans were in an almost exact situation.

The remedy to this situation would be a centrally located school, say Prestonsburg or Johnson Central. Both have great facilities, plus these excessively long trips would be a thing of the past.

Most people are lobbying for Prestonsburg High School, which would indeed be the most logical site. At least give us a break from Pike county. There are nine other schools in the region that could host a comparable, if not better, regional tournament.

A total of $1,018 was raised to help with the research and treatment programs of St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital. Shirley Morgan, chairman of the bike-a-thon expressed appreciation to those who helped organize the event, the riders, and businesses contributing prizes.

Paintsville Hospital Offers Intern Program

Applications are now being accepted at Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center, in Paintsville, for the second year of its undergraduate pre-medical student intern program.

Applicants must be actively pursuing a pre-medical curriculum and must have completed at least four semesters in an accredited college or university, according to Dr. Frank K. Belhasen, medical director at the medical center and assistant clinical professor at the University of Kentucky.

According to Belhasen, two students will be selected, based on their college grade point average, demonstrated abilities, personal and professional references, and a personal interview by a selection committee composed of the chief of staff, clinical professor and medical director.

In the course of the summer student intern program, the two pre-med students selected will participate in a clinical rotation that includes one month in the emergency room, one week each in the medical surgical, obstetrics/new born nursery, intensive care/coronary care and surgery/recovery departments of the medical center.

Belhasen explained that the purpose of the program is to introduce serious pre-med students to the hospital environment as active participants in patient care.

Qualified students interested in applying for one of the two internships available should contact Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center by calling 789-3511.

Seniors Can Study Free At State Universities

Anyone 65 years of age or older who is a resident of Kentucky may take classes at Morehead State University free of charge under the Caudill Fellowship program.

The Caudill Fellowship is a state-wide program which provides tuition and fee waivers for older students. It was established in the mid-1970s by the Kentucky General Assembly. All state-funded universities participate in the program.

"Each year we usually have five or six people who are Caudill fellows," said Tim Rhodes, MSU director of University enrollment services. "We want to increase this number."

According to Rhodes, the Caudill Fellowship is open to students pursuing degrees and those who are taking classes for personal interest. Most Caudill Fellows take between three and six hours of classes.

"In the past, more women than men have used this opportunity. Students in the program range between 65 and 75 years of age," Rhodes said.

"We encourage older students to explore the Caudill Fellowship whatever their reason for taking a class. It doesn't matter whether it's because of an interest or hobby or just to give them something to do," Rhodes said.

The bride-elect is a 1976 graduate of Carver High School, in Columbus. She is a former state trooper with the Florida Highway Patrol and currently is a police officer with the Columbus Police Dept.

The ceremonies will be held July 11 at 6 p.m. in the Infantry Center Chapel, Fort Benning, Ga. Friends are welcome to attend.

Prestonsburg Student Honored At Cumberland

William Trent Nairn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Nairn, of Prestonsburg, was one of 222 Cumberland College students who were recognized during the 1987 Honors Day convocation at the college, according to president Jim Taylor. Nairn received a George I. Alden endowed scholarship.

Honors Day is an annual event at the Baptist college in Williamsburg, during which students are given recognition for academic excellence and achievement, leadership ability, and student and community involvement.

Students with a cumulative grade point average of 3.5 to 3.79 received certificates of honor, while those with an average of 3.8 to 4.0 received certificates of high honor. Fifteen students who completed at least 94 hours with an average of at least 3.5 for each semester were inducted into the J.T. Vallandigham Society.

Candidates For Governor Respond To AARP Survey

The American Association of Retired Persons (AARP), with 250,000 members in Kentucky, kicked off a statewide voter education project last week by releasing gubernatorial candidates' responses to questions on issues important to older residents of the state.

Leaders of the nonpartisan project, known as AARP/VOTE, released those responses and discussed other voter efforts at a press conference held in the House chamber of the Old State Capitol building.

"We are pleased that most of the candidates for governor responded to AARP's questions, and hope our questionnaire will be the beginning of better communication between the candidates and the people they seek to represent," said Frank Clark, spokesman for AARP/VOTE in Kentucky.

Gubernatorial candidates' stands on health cost containment, utility rate increases, state support for home health care and guidelines for medical treatment decisions are contained in the tabloid-sized voter's guide. The questionnaire was based on the legislative program of the Kentucky AARP State Legislative Committee. Copies of it will be mailed to every AARP member household in Kentucky.

"People 50 and older register and go to the polls in greater proportions than younger age groups," said Marjory Blood, a member of AARP/VOTE's national Board of Trustees. "Politicians know older voters have high participation rates, respect the interests of older voters in a wide range of issues, and want to address those concerns intelligently. AARP/VOTE will help candidates reach them through surveys, public forums and other activities, while enabling voters to learn more about the candidates."

Blood, a resident of Augusta, Maine, noted that these issues are important not only for older people, but for all generations. "Younger workers are as concerned about rising health costs and the lack of adequate home health care as their parents or grandparents because they want older relatives to be secure," she said. "AARP/VOTE will urge policymakers to focus on issues brought about by the gradual aging of our population."

Wanda Korte of Somerset, Vice Chairman of Kentucky's AARP State Legislative Committee, joined Clark and Blood at the press conference.

Last year, in its first year of operation, AARP/VOTE was piloted in six states that had significant Congressional or gubernatorial elections: Alabama, Colorado, Idaho, Iowa, Maryland and Missouri. A survey conducted by Decision/Making/Information after the Nov.

People in Scotland and in Japan once believed that tortoiseshell cats could foretell storms.

4 elections revealed the program to have been a success. Almost half (44 percent) of the AARP members surveyed said the voters' guides motivated them to get and out and vote; five percent said they changed their minds about who to vote for after studying the candidates' responses in the nonpartisan voters' guides.

AARP/VOTE is a nonpartisan voter education program that focuses on issues, not candidates. It does not contribute money to candidates or political parties. Instead, the voluntary contributions made to it by AARP members support voter education activities.

With 25 million members, AARP is the nation's largest organization of Americans age 50 and older. The non-profit, nonpartisan organization offers a wide range of membership benefits, legislative advocacy at the federal and state levels, and educational and community service programs carried out through a national network of volunteers and local chapters. AARP's national headquarters is in Washington, D.C.

Allen Central Honors Teachers

"Tomorrow" was the theme of the second Teacher's Appreciation Day hosted by the Student Council at Allen Central High School, Friday, April 24. To begin the day, an assembly program was held in the school's gymnasium with all students present. After an opening proclamation by Student Council President Danny B. Slone, the program got underway with special music and individual teacher recognition. Each teacher was escorted onto the floor by Student Council representatives and seated after being given a personalized marble paperweight and a certificate of appreciation. Hosting this tribute program were students, Travis Crum and Rhonda Fraley. ### TREASURED GEMS

By WILMAY

Could we with ink the ocean fill, / And were the skies of parchment made, / Were ev'ry stalk on earth a quill, / And ev'ry man a scribe by trade; / To write the love of God above, / Would drain the ocean dry; / Nor could the scroll contain the whole, / Though stretched from sky to sky.

Author unknown

When you get to heaven, / You will likely view / Many folks whose presence there, / Will be a shock to you. / But keep very quiet, / And do not stare, / Doubtless there'll be many folks, / Surprised to see you there.

Anonymous

LEND A HAND

I am only one, / But still I am one, / I cannot do everything, / But still I can do something; / And because I cannot do everything, / I will not refuse to do the something that I can do.

E.E. Hale

Longfellow could take a worthless sheet of paper, write a poem on it and make it worth six thousand dollars. That is genius.

Rockefeller could sign his name to a piece of paper and make it worth millions—that is capital.

Uncle Sam can take silver, stamp it, and make it worth a dollar—that is money.

A mechanic can take material worth five dollars and make an article worth fifty dollars—that is skill.

An artist can take a five-dollar piece of canvas, paint a picture on it, and make it worth a thousand dollars—that is art.

God can take a worthless, sinful life, wash it in the blood of Christ, put his spirit in it, and make it a blessing to humanity—that is Salvation!

PRAYER

When thou prayest rather let thy heart be without words than thy words be without heart. Prayer will make a man cease from sin, or sin will entice a man to cease from prayer. Pray often, for prayer is a shield to the soul, a sacrifice to God, and a scourge to Satan.

John Bunyan

LET GO AND LET GOD

As children bring their broken toys, with tears for us to mend, / I brought my broken dreams to God, / because he was my friend. / But then, instead of leaving him in peace to work alone, / I hung around and tried to help, with ways that were my own. / At last, I snatched them back and cried, / "How can you be so slow?" / "My child," he said, / "What could I do?" / "You never did let go."

Author unknown

The Reading Mother

I had a mother who read me things, / That wholesome life to the boy heart brings. / Stories that stir with an upward touch, / Oh, that each mother of boys were such. / You may have tangible wealth untold, / Caskets of jewels, / And coffers of gold— / Richer than I you can never be, / I had a mother who read to me.

Strickland Gillilan

Note: Majority here came from a girlhood memory book. W.G.M.

A Record of Proven Progress

In his two terms as county judge/executive, Paul Patton has made a measurable difference in the lives of the people he serves. Among his accomplishments as chief administrator of the geographically largest, and perhaps most complex, Kentucky county are:

- developing the state's most comprehensive rural solid waste program;
- improving the condition of roads and bridges; nearly doubling the miles of blacktopped roads;
- expanding the senior citizens meals program by 100 percent;
- increasing the county's fire protection facilities more than twofold;
- reducing administrative costs by 47 percent while raising employee hourly wages and
- increasing public water supplies to rural residents by 500 percent.

That's what we mean when we say Paul Patton has a record of proven progress!

Youth, Conscience-Stricken, Rides 30 Miles to Surrender

Greenup, Ky., Oct. 11.—A troubled conscience led Russell Parker, 19, to ride 30 miles astride a mule, over roads virtually impassable and confess to the murder of a companion, which was committed several months ago at Lowden, this county.

The first news that Sheriff Ed Tinsley had of the murder was when the youth hitched his mule in front of the court house and made his way to the office of the sheriff where he unfolded the details of the slaying.

Both Parker and Dummitt resided at Lowden and were friends until several weeks before the murder. Then came the breaking point of their friendship. The two young men had trouble of a trivial nature and meeting several days later they engaged in a fight, which resulted in Dummitt being shot to death.

Parker claimed that he killed Dummitt in self-defense, and that his life was in danger when he fired the fatal shot. He told officers that since the night of the slaying he had been unable to "sleep" and had a "feelin'" inside him that he had done something wrong. Unable to bear the strain any longer and after careful deliberation, in which he weighed the facts of the slaying, he finally decided that the best course for him would be to ride into Greenup and give himself up to proper authorities.

The youth, following his confession, was taken to the county jail where he will be held for a few days. The date for a preliminary hearing was not set but will likely be Wednesday or Thursday.

The road over which the youth rode to make the startling confession was described by officers as being in a terrible shape, a part of which passed through a veritable wilderness.

INSTRUCTIONS IN VERSE

By W. A. FRALEY

I thought I'd write a poem
For the good of one and all,
I don't think the church of God
Is only an oxen stall.

Leave your tobacco outside,
Your cigarettes, too,
And if you have any chewing gum,
Don't stick it on the pew.

Don't put it in the boxes
Where the hymnals ought to stay;
Just walk over to the window
And throw the stuff away.

For I get a small salary
For keeping this church clean;
You ought to have some manners
And try not act so mean.

So come to church on Sunday
With a smile upon your face;
Go in and take your seat
Like you belonged to the human race.

Wald Cross and family moved last week from this place to Indiana. Mr. Cross has been prominently identified in the business life of Prestonsburg since coming here some time ago. Mrs. Cross is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James P. Salisbury.

BACK UP IN THE HILLS OF OLD KENTUCKY

By H. G. NOBLE

Back up in the hills of old Kentucky,
Where the world is big and free,
There my thoughts are daily turning,
There's where I long to be.

I'm thinking here in the city
Of what the mountaineers do;
When I feel these hills a-calling
It thrills me through and through.

I'm sick o' parks and libraries
And all this cultured stuff;
Take me back to the dear, old mountains
Where the folks are true, though rough;

Where the lowing of the cattle
As they roam the open hills
Sets my pulses beating faster
And fills my heart with thrills;

Where the vegetables in the garden
And the apples on the tree—
Take me back to God's own country,
There's where I long to be.

Mrs. Polly Allen came down Tuesday from Hueysville for a visit of several days with her son, Edward L. Allen, and family.

Betty Buckley takes on different kind of TV role

By Wendy Wallace

Her face became known to TV viewers during her four years as Abby Bradford, the stepmother of eight children in the TV series "Eight Is Enough."

Betty Buckley

In "Roses Are for the Rich," airing Sunday, May 17, and Tuesday, May 19, on CBS, Betty Buckley plays a role far removed from Abby. She plays Ella, a local madam who becomes a surrogate mother to 12-year-old Autumn (played by Britton Elliott as a child) after the death of the young girl's guardian.

A madam? "Yes," the actress laughs. "It's a wonderful little cameo. Ella is an independent woman in town. She has her own business, and she's not saddled down. After she inherits raising this little girl, she tries to hide the whorehouse from her. But Autumn sees that Ella has manipulated men for money, and she becomes an extreme version of this. "Ella also encourages Autumn to value education. Her dream is for the young girl to get out from her surroundings and become an independent woman."

The four-hour drama, which spans a 10-year period, is the story of Autumn (Lisa Hartman) who triumphs over an unhappy childhood in an Appalachian coal-mining town to exact the perfect revenge on Douglas Osborne (Bruce Dern), the powerful businessman she believes destroyed her family. (She lost both her parents and her first husband in his coal mines.)

In addition to television, Buckley is considered an accomplished singer/actress on the Broadway stage. She received a Tony for her performance in "Cats," in which she sang the show's big hit, "Memory." She is currently in Paris filming a new Roman Polanski thriller with Harrison Ford.

"I used to say if the character touched me or her situation did, that would help me choose my roles," the actress says. "As I read along, suddenly I just know what that's like. I can experience what the character is experiencing."

"But that's not always the case," she adds. "What I like about the role of Ella is that the character has a nice little story. She started in one place and grew to another. It's just a simple little growth, but she made me laugh."

ASK TONI

Loni Anderson enjoying life on NBC's 'Easy Street'

By Toni Reinhold

I heard that Loni Anderson recently died. Is this true? - T.H., Hagerstown, Md.

Loni Anderson

Loni Anderson is still very much alive, is starring in the NBC series "Easy Street" and is often seen with her beau, Burt Reynolds.

When did "The Flintstones" first appear on TV? My wife and I say it was in the early '50s, but our children say early '60s. Please help. - J.W., Port Charlotte, Fla.

Those wonderful characters first appeared on ABC in 1960. The show ran as a series until 1966. Set in the prehistoric town of Bedrock, Fred and Wilma Flintstone and Betty and Barney Rubble have delighted generations of TV viewers, with their spoof of modern-day living.

Who starred in the old black-and-white movie "The Uninvited"? The only one I can remember is Gail Russell. It's one of the best suspense films ever made - frightening, but not gory or filled with sex and violence. - B.C., Cookeville, Tenn.

You're right. This classic ranks as one of the best horror films ever made. Released in 1944, it starred Ray Milland, Ruth Hussey, Donald Crisp, Gail Russell, Cornelia Otis Skinner and Alan Napier. Russell is haunted by the spirit of her dead mother, and it's up to Milland to save her from the spirit and from herself. The Victor Young melody "Stella by Starlight" was introduced in this film.

Is Bette Davis still alive? What can you tell me about her? - J.S., Brandon, Manitoba, Canada.

She's still alive, and is she ever kicking. She recently wrote a book called "This 'n That" in response to a book by her daughter, B.D., called "My Mother's Keeper." She was born Ruth Elizabeth Davis in Lowell, Mass., on April 4, 1908. Her father, Harlow, was a lawyer, and she has one sister, Barbara. Davis was married four times and is a past president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Her films include "Jezebel" (1938), "Dark Victory" (1939), "All About Eve" (1950) and "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?" (1962).

'Attitudes' schedules a summer shopping spree

By Marianne Meyer

Summer's almost here, and the gang at "Attitudes," the Lifetime style program for women, decided that was reason enough to embark on a summertime shopping spree. Dano and Glass

You would think that the "Attitudes" crew would have preferred to descend on the store during off-peak hours, or when the store was closed, but executive producer Pam Burke took her troops into the fray on a frantic 12-hour Saturday shoot, when the Herald Square store

Terrell Anthony: a writer first, an actor second

By Marie Michaels

"Acting is something I'd never thought of doing until about four years ago when, as a writer, I became involved with actors and became intrigued with the recreation process of acting," says Terrell Anthony, who portrays Rusty Shayne on "Guiding Light."

Terrell Anthony

Anthony, who earned a B.A. in journalism at the University of Missouri, later studied philosophy and theology at San Francisco State University. While attending San Francisco State, he worked as a juvenile drug counselor for the city of San Francisco and began studying acting. Anthony came to "Guiding Light" with a background in theater, which is something he hopes to return to someday. "I'm like a lot of actors," says Anthony. "If I could make a living doing just stage work, I would never care another thing about television. The theater is a real turn-on for an actor."

"My first love is writing, and I spend a lot of time at it," Anthony continues. "I hope that in time my writing and my acting will combine to give me a producer's options, which I think is something that all actors of my generation think of."

In the meantime, Anthony admits that he hopes that the "Guiding Light" writers will continue to allow him the freedom to develop Rusty into something more than just another undercover cop.

"I would like the writers, producers and directors of 'Guiding Light' to allow me to give more and more of a street edge to Rusty," says Anthony. "I think we need to start opening our doors and looking out into the street - and mirror that side of life on the show."

"I think it would be interesting if Rusty had to deal with himself or with someone in his family who has a drug addiction. I also think it would be interesting if Rusty became involved with a black character. Controversial story lines - or at least street story lines - hold a great deal of interest for me."

To Take Electricity For Granted Is To Take Risk

Eighteen Kentuckians were electrocuted in or around the home during 1986 and 12 during 1985, according to figures released recently by the Department for Health Services.

Safety experts say most electrocutions are caused by carelessness. Gov. Martha Layne Collins has declared May as Electrical Safety Awareness Month to coincide with a national observance.

"Electricity is taken for granted, and we forget to have respect for its power and danger," said E.P. Conyers of the department's Consumer Product Safety branch. Most electrocutions in the home setting can be grouped into three categories—combining electricity and water, touching power lines and repairing and installing electrical products, he said.

One electrocution in Kentucky occurred when a plugged-in hair dryer was dropped into a bathtub of water. The woman in the bathtub was electrocuted even though the hair dryer was not turned on.

Other electrocutions have occurred when people use some type of hand electrical appliance while standing on a wet floor. A "ground fault circuit interrupter" (GFCI) can prevent these types of deaths, Conyers said.

GFCIs sense when an electrical appliance comes into contact with water or is "grounded," and it cuts off the electrical current to the appliance before injury occurs. Conyers recommends installing GFCIs, which can be purchased in hardware or home improvement stores, on outlets within three feet of kitchen sinks and on all bathroom and outside outlets. New homes are required to have GFCIs in the kitchen, bathroom and exterior outlets, he said.

"If you ever drop an electrical appliance into water, do not reach in after it," Conyers said. "The only safe thing to do is to unplug the appliance first and then take it out of the water. Never put your hand into water that has a plugged electrical appliance in it because the water will be electrified."

Electrocutions can occur when an antenna, metal ladder or even a kite line comes into contact with a high-voltage power line, Conyers said. People have been killed while installing rooftop antennas when the antennas touch power lines and conduct enough electricity to cause electrocution. Three people were killed in one such incident.

Metal ladders touching power lines can conduct a fatal shock, he said. This situation usually occurs when someone is working on or painting a house and a ladder is placed too close to a power line.

With the right outside conditions—high humidity, rain, damp grass—a kite string can conduct electricity when touching a power line, he said. Kites should always be flown well out of range of such lines.

Repairing electrical products or wiring is risky and can cause electrocution, Conyers said. This work should be left to experts.

To check your home for electrical safety, Conyers offers the following tips.

Electrical cords should be replaced if they are frayed or worn. Cords should be not be nailed or stapled to the wall or to other objects.

Outlets and switches should be cool to the touch. Unused outlets should have safety covers to protect children.

Counter-top appliances should be placed so that their cords are away from hot surfaces that could burn through them. Appliances should not be near sinks.

Make sure fuses are the correct sizes. Once a year, "exercise" circuit breakers by flipping each breaker off and on three times. Turn off the freezer, refrigerator and air conditioner first.

1st United Methodist Sets Special Services

First United Methodist Church service of worship will be altered, Sunday, to accommodate the ministry of Gene McFall who will be doing a dramatic presentation on "Paul: A Special Messenger," at the 11 a.m. service and at 7 p.m. a lighthearted look at "Will Roger's USA." These two services have been planned by the Worship Committee.

Gene McFall first started out in a one-man show with the production of Will Rogers' USA in 1982. But his career as a professional actor began in 1966 and includes now over 2500 live theatrical performances. He has appeared on TV in such shows as "All In The Family," "Benson," "Archie Bunker's Place" and in motion pictures with such stars as Robert Dinero, Richard Basehart, Michael Caine, Lucy Arnaz, and E.G. Marshall. In 1986, he opened an original one-man show on the Apostle Paul, "Paul: A Special Messenger," which he performs in churches, colleges, and other religious organizations in addition to touring with Will Rogers' USA.

Women's Pavillion Dedicated, Sunday

The Blanche W. Hall Women's Pavilion of the Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center, Paintsville, was formally dedicated Sunday, May 10. Almost 200 people were present as the nine-bed suite of rooms was dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Blanche W. Hall, late wife of Dr. Paul B. Hall.

Dr. Frank K. Belhasen, medical director of Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center, gave the dedicatory remarks in which he said, "Blanche Ward Hall's life was marked by her deeply Christian commitment to the love, care and concern for her fellowman. But nowhere was this commitment more evident than in her work with children and their mothers." Belhasen concluded, "May all who enter this Women's Pavilion...patients and staff, alike...share in her legacy of love and concern for others."

Dr. Paul B. Hall responded to the dedication by recalling his first encounter near Concord in Johnson county, with his future bride. "It took me five years, but I finally convinced her to marry me," the 90-year-old physician said.

Dr. and Mrs. Hall were married in 1922, eight months before his graduation from the University of Louisville College of Medicine. Mrs. Hall died in 1986.

Katie Hall and Paula Hall Flora, granddaughters of Mrs. Hall, unveiled a portrait of their grandmother which will hang in the corridor of the Blanche W. Hall Pavilion, and an original painting of the pavillion logo "Women In Touch" which will also hang in the pavillion hallway.

In his welcoming remarks, hospital administrator Sam P. Fowler reminded the audience of the commitment of Health Management Associates, owners of the facility, that the opening of the new hospital in 1983 was only the beginning of advances in local health care services.

Fowler stated, "Health Management Associates, today, renews this commitment to the people of the Big Sandy region as we dedicate the Blanche W. Hall Women's Pavilion."

In his remarks Fowler paid special tribute to the committee chaired by Dr. Penny A. Grino which had been responsible for the development and design of the new Women's Pavilion. Dr. Grino, a Paintsville resident, specializes in the practice of obstetrics and gynecology.

Those present for the dedication were treated to a tour of the new facility, including the latest in mammography radiology technology. A reception followed the dedication ceremonies.

Prestonsburg Attorney Gets National Honors

Attorney William G. Francis, a member of the Prestonsburg law firm of Francis, Kazee & Francis, was named as the recipient of an Exceptional Performance Award by the Defense Research Institute (DRI), the 13,000 member Defense Research and Trial Lawyers Association. The award program was held recently in Atlantic City, New Jersey, at the 20th Annual National Defense Bar Leaders Conference.

DRI President Donald F. Pierce praised Francis for his leadership while serving as president of the Kentucky Defense Counsel, Inc. Francis was cited for "supporting and improving the standards and education of the defense trial bar and for contributing to the improvement of the civil justice system."

DRI supports improvements in the civil justice system, prompt and fair resolution of liability and damages litigation, and offers education, research and litigation support services for members. Members devote the majority of their law practice to defending client interests in liability litigation.

External Parasites

COPYRIGHT 1987 KVMA

Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association
 That our culture is pet oriented is beyond doubt. We cherish the memories of our childhood pets, we depend upon animals to be a companion to and create responsibility in our children. We value our hunting dogs. We are emotionally involved.

* We depend on our pets for satisfaction, and therefore it is not only to our pet's benefit but ours as well to keep them healthy. Ridding them of external parasites is getting to be a more serious concern, because the parasites themselves are beginning to develop resistance to some of the pesticides which were formerly effective.

Fleas, lice, mites, ticks and ear mites are the most common external parasites. They can be controlled with common sense and proper instruction.

Fleas are perhaps the most common, and are found on dogs, cats or even humans during their 30-day life cycle. They lay eggs which are dormant in cold weather, but begin to hatch when warm weather shows up. The key to controlling fleas is killing the larvae as well as the adult fleas, and cleaning the pet's living quarters as well as the pet.

Lice can be more serious than fleas, because they sometimes penetrate the skin and feed on the animal's blood. They can cause severe anemia and death in puppies and kittens, and seriously weaken adult animals.

Mites are responsible for mange, usually seen in two types—demodectic or "red mange" and sarcoptic mange or "scabies." "Scabies" can be passed on to humans.

Ticks are picked up when your pet runs in wild undergrowth or shrubbery, and while some ticks are relatively harmless, others carry such diseases as Rocky Mountain Spotted Fever. Look for them in the neck area, in the ears and in the folds between the body and the legs.

Ear mites, if not controlled, cause extreme irritation and eventually cause bacterial infections which can penetrate the brain and cause convulsions and death.

All such parasites are controlled easily, if the condition is caught in the early stages. Neither is the treatment expensive.

Your veterinarian is kept up to date on the most effective compounds used to control parasites, as well as methods of use and possible side effects. Powders, sprays, special collars, dips, even pills are available and effective.

But your veterinarian should be consulted, because some chemicals designed for use on one animal may harm other animals, or not be effective. Your veterinarian's treatment is going to be more cost-effective, anyway.

Cookin' In Kentucky— A Different Pork Roast

Kentuckians are blessed by the culinary expertise that abounds in our commonwealth. Their presentation of "Ole South" tasty morsels can be found from the borders of the state in the small hamlets to the metro centers. One never knows where a treasury of taste experiences will be found when traveling the byways and "hollers" of Kentucky. Many of our recipes are based on favorite food preparations that were brought here by our ancestors from their homelands. The recipes have been adapted through the years to fit the availability of local resources. Members of the Kentucky Restaurant Association operate restaurants and inns in all part of this state. They carry on many of the food traditions of the past. They enjoy this task and ask for your patronage. Most are small businessmen who make up the bulk of our economy. Restaurants contribute over $40,000 dollars a year to the Association's scholarship fund. These scholarships go to the students in this state who wish to pursue a career in foodservice at the vocational or college level. Now, we get to the culinary section of this column...at last. Gettin' to the meat of this article takes knowin' where I'm goin'. Reminds me of the fella driving down the streets in Louisville lookin' for a place to eat. He stopped in the street and asked an old timer on the corner the following... "How do you get to Hasenour's Restaurant?...the old timer thought a minute and replied... "My son drives me there in his car." Here we go...Kentucky is often called the "bourbon state," as you know. We are also proud of the hogs we raise. From Bardstown in Nelson county we have a recipe which makes the most of both products! (Now ifn' some of you folks do not imbibe, let me tell you about "alcohol cookin'". T'aint any alcohol left after cookin' cause it all evaporates...Yup, it all goes off in the oven and heads up the stack. Just the mash/grape flavor sort of lingers on.)

Bourbon Pork Roast
Bourbon does something for pork that nothing else does. They are perfect for each other. Some folks substitute sherry wine for the bourbon. This recipe is an excellent marriage of different seasonings.

Take a 3 lb. pork roast. Preheat oven to 350°. Cook 45 min. per lb. and bake uncovered, fat side up. Rub roast with juice of a lemon. Mix together 1 heaping tablespoon light brown sugar, teaspoon flour, teaspoon paprika, and 1/2 teaspoon salt. Rub all over the roast. Sprinkle freshly ground pepper over the top of roast. Combine 1/4 cup water, 1/8 cup bourbon, and 1/8 cup cooking sherry. Pour over the roast. Sprinkle chopped parsley over top and place bay leaf in the pan. Baste frequently. Cook for 2 1/4 hours. After 1 1/4 hours pour 1/4 cup bourbon over the top and continue to baste frequently the last hour.

You just follow those directions and you will enjoy the roast! Just remember, if at first you don't succeed... you will get a lot of advice! Thanks for stayin' with us and remember... patronize your local members of the Kentucky Restaurant Association. Look for the bright colored round decal with the state on it.

PCC Faculty Mark Bicentennial of Constitution

Prestonsburg Community College held its first series of lectures commemorating the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution, on Wednesday, April 29. Professor Robert D. McAninch, above left, spoke on the Bill of Rights and how it has been interpreted. Dr. Thomas D. Matijasic, center, explained the process of ratifying the Constitution and the opposition that it encountered. Dr. William H. Graves, right, described the constitutional convention that produced the document.

A second series of lectures on the Constitution, will be held in the fall at PCC.

Fund Is Established To Aid Banker Family

Death is a reality we all have to deal with, but nothing can prepare us for it, especially when the deceased is a loved one.

More so when that loved one was the sole provider for his family.

Thursday, March 19, Bob Banker, a Kentucky conservation officer, was killed while attempting to fulfill his duty to the public.

Not only did Banker's untimely death take away from his family emotionally, it denied his widow and two children, seven and 10 years old, a continuation of their sole means of support.

A few short years ago deer hunting in this state was non-existent, and the major waterway of Kentucky was the last place one would consider as a place to fish. Thanks to Bob Banker, and men like him, deer hunting is being extended in many regions, and the Ohio River will be the site of this year's Bass Master's Classic.

We cannot repay Bob Banker for what he did for the outdoor sportsman in this state. He probably wouldn't want any pay, either, but we can show our appreciation for his dedication.

Members of the Ohio Valley Fisherman's Association, and the Louisville Chapter of Trout Unlimited have established a trust fund to aid the family devastated by the loss of their father, and husband.

Of the groups called upon, one responded with an average of $5 per member, while the other donated $23 each. No set amount has been asked for. You are asked to answer the plea with whatever contribution you can afford.

Bob Banker helped us with his generous service. Now it is time we salute the family he left behind.

Please send your help to: C/O Banker Family Fund, Henry J. Willenbrink, Trustee, 3305 Startan Court, Louisville, Ky. 40220.

" A COAL - MINERS' SON FOR A COAL MINING STATE"

In the race for Governor, only one candidate was born and reared in the coal fields. Only one candidate carried water to heat on a coal stove so his father could take a hot bath when he came from working in a coal mine. Only one candidate, who, as a medical doctor, treats coal miners every day and knows first hand of the devastating effects of black lung disease.

Only one candidate has outlined a coal policy that makes sense for putting coal miners back to work and only one candidate has stood up to price gouging insurance companies and told them " YOU WILL NOT DESTROY THE COAL MINERS' BLACK LUNG DISABILITY PROGRAM." That candidate is GRADY STUMBO.

"I was born and reared in the coal fields and I'm proud of it. Contrary to millionaire candidates and fancy-pants special interest candidates who try to tell us sons and daughters of working people cannot be elected, I believe Kentucky will never be a great state unless sons and daughters of coal miners, farmers and other working people are allowed to run and win an election not because of the power of their money but because of the power of their ideas."

Plan To Broaden Training For Foster Parents, This Summer

Nearly 1,300 of Kentucky's foster parents will participate in an expanded version of annual continuing education courses begun in 1986 by the state Department for Social Services.

From May through July most of the foster parents in the department's 14 administrative regions are scheduled to attend either one-day, 6-hour seminars on general techniques of parenting foster children or two-day, 10-hour weekend sessions designed for adults in foster homes for special needs children.

Social Services Commissioner Anna Grace Day said continuing education for foster parents is now an important tool in Kentucky's campaign to recruit additional foster families and retain the good foster homes already in place.

"The desire to love and care as 'volunteer parents' is vital, but the state must do more than simply sign them up," Day said.

"Two-thirds of these children are in state care because of mistreatment in their natural homes. It takes additional time and skills for the foster parent to be able to step into the temporary role of father or mother and help our family services workers in the ultimate goal of reunion of the natural family."

The single-day training sessions will be conducted for approximately 75 foster parents at Kenlake State Resort Park (May 9), Buckhorn State Park, Hopkinsville and Owensboro (May 30), Barbourville and Fort Mitchell (June 6), Louisville (June 13 & 20), Jamestown (June 13 & July 18), Morehead (June 13), Cave City (June 27), Paintsville (July 18) and Ashland and Lexington (July 25).

Weekend workshops for special needs foster parents will be in Lexington (June 5-6 & June 26-27), Bowling Green (June 12-13 & July 17-18), Prestonsburg (June 19-20), Louisville (June 26-27 & July 24-25) and Paintsville (July 10-11).

Carey Durrett, a state foster care specialist, says each seminar will be unique in that the agenda is set by the foster parents themselves.

"We know that all foster parents share some of the same concerns—areas such as managing a child's behavior, teenage sex and stress management," Durrett said.

"This year a sample of the parents in each district were polled on what types of help they felt the greatest need for—issues like children with disabilities, the role of the foster father and counseling for the sexually abused child. Each session will deal with some issues specifically chosen by the participants."

Training will be provided by professionals from the district's foster care recruitment and certification staff, regional mental health centers, area colleges and universities and community leaders working with youth.

For more information on these sessions or Kentucky's foster care program, call the state foster care hotline toll-free at 1-800-232-KIDS.

ACP SIGNUP PERIOD BEGINS

Farmers may sign up now for ACP cost-sharing on summer type practices. The Floyd County and Knott County offices are accepting applications thru June 1 on wells or spring development for livestock water; ponds; forest tree stand improvement; permanent vegetative cover on critical areas; and sod waterways.

Money available for these practices is limited and approvals will be made only to those applicants where the greatest amount of soil savings can be accomplished. No practices started prior to the county committee approval will be eligible for cost-sharing.

CORN PRODUCERS SHOULD CERTIFY BY JULY 15

All corn producers should certify their crop acreages as soon as they are completed with plantings. In order for a Feed Grain base to be properly established, it is essential that the report of acreage be filed timely each year.

Please make every effort to report your corn crop acreages by July 15.

OFFICE HOURS FOR FLOYD COUNTY OFFICE EXTENDED

Beginning May 15 through July 15, the office in Floyd county will be open on Tuesdays and Wednesdays each. This is to allow farmers more flexibility in certification. The hours are from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. The phone number is 886-3128.

Farm operators are urged to report any and all changes in their farm operation to their respective offices as soon as possible. Helping keep your records up-to-date helps in better serving you.

ASCS programs are open to all eligible farmers regardless of race, sex, color, national origin, religion, creed or handicap.

Public To Air "Roads Home," Portrait Of "Happy" Chandler

Happy days are here again. They're Chandler days so cheer again. He's the man for each Ken-tuck-i-an. Happy Days are here again.

A film portrait of the life and career of former Governor A.B. "Happy" Chandler, "Roads Home," airs Wednesday, May 27 at 9 p.m. on KET.

The half-hour film documents Chandler's rise from rural poverty to Kentucky's highest elected office and beyond as it weaves a rich portrait of Americana filled with stories and anecdotes.

"Roads Home" was directed by Danville native Robby Henson and produced by Cicada Films of New York. The film was funded by Phillip Morris Companies Inc. with additional support from Kentucky Educational Television, Ashland Oil, Inc., and Hillerich & Bradsby Co., Inc.

During his career, Chandler served as Governor of Kentucky (twice), United States Senator and Commissioner of Baseball, and was a presidential candidate.

He is remembered in the film for his unique abilities and style by former Courier Journal publisher Barry Bingham Sr., biographer Charles Roland and George Vescey of The New York Times, among others. "We didn't use the word glamorous so much in those days," recalls Bingham, "but he had it. He had a new look about him."

The film also recounts his early political successes as he "bypassed the cities and courthouses and took his campaign to the people." Childhood friend Simpson Brown remembers Chandler's desire to win as he recalls a sandlot baseball game when both were youths. Chandler walked off the field after a bad call by Chandler's father, Joe, who was umpire. "We didn't play baseball the rest of the evening," says Brown. "He hated to lose that bad."

Noted for his stamina, fiery speaking and good looks, Chandler also displayed a remarkable memory. "He remembered everybody he'd ever met," says Bingham. In another segment of the film, Chandler's wife, Mildred, recalls an incident when Chandler, campaigning in the mountains, ran into people he hadn't seen for a year. "He remembered what they had talked about a year before which astounded them and made them think that he had put them down in his mind as a special person," she says.

Chandler was never afraid to challenge the establishment. His efforts to unseat powerful U.S. Senator Alben Barkley, however, ended in his first major political defeat. "Every now and then you dig a dry hole," says Chandler with home-spun philosophy. "You got to move your digger and dig someplace else." He was later appointed to the U.S. Senate to fill the vacancy of a junior senator who had died.

Chandler became a world traveler during his Senate days meeting with such leaders as Ben-Gurion and Gandhi as one of five members designated by the Senate to visit the world battlefronts. Chandler left the Senate, however, to accept what he considered to be "the best job in America"—Commissioner of Baseball.

As commissioner, Chandler approved Branch Rickey's request to transfer black baseball star Jackie Robinson

Sellards To Graduate

Mark Sellards, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Sellard, of Betsy Layne, is scheduled to graduate from Kentucky School for the Deaf in Danville on June 4. The commencement services will be held at 2 p.m. in Thomas Hall on KSD's campus. Mr. Robert Baughman, a retired principal of KSD will be the guest speaker. An awards program will be held for the junior and senior highs at 10:30 a.m. the day of graduation.

Mark has been a member of the Student Council, FHA, Yearbook staff and the football team. After graduating his tentative plans are to attend Eastern Kentucky University.

from Montreal to the all-white Brooklyn Dodgers—a historic decision, although an unpopular one. Years later Chandler's contributions to baseball were recognized. Former Commissioner Bowie Kuhn says, "Justice was finally done and Happy was put in the Hall of Fame."

Chandler returned to Kentucky and became governor again in the mid-fifties, about the time of court-ordered desegregation. "We handled the integration of schools with about as little trouble as anybody in the U.S.," recalls Chandler.

In 1956 and again in 1960 Chandler made a run for the Democratic nomination for president, but it was not to be. Biographer Charles Roland notes, "Unquestionably, the style of appeal had changed. Chandler's greatest appeal was when he was in the flesh...and could appeal to the audience directly." Television and other modern campaign strategies had changed political campaigns forever.

George Vescey of The New York Times covered Chandler's last campaign for governor in 1971. "I think he knew he didn't have a chance to win, but of course he did it bravely... It was sort of a chance for him to go around the countryside in a last hurrah and say goodbye to his people... People were genuinely affectionate with him... They were thanking him for what he had meant to the commonwealth so many years before."

"Roads Home" is a production of Cicada Films of New York.

18th Appalachian Festival Scheduled at Coney Island

The 18th annual Appalachian Festival music schedule, three days of bluegrass, traditional and old time music, will be held at Coney Island, Cincinnati, on May 15, 16 and 17.

David Holt, host of The Nashville Network's Fire On the Mountain, will be the featured performer at the festival. Holt's love of traditional music has become his livelihood, as he brings to the concert stage the joy and spirit of old-time music and storytelling. An evening with Holt offers tales, ballads and tunes told, sung and played on the banjo, hammered dulcimer, auto harp, squeeze box, guitar, harmonica, spoons and jew's harp. His audience is constantly involved, whether they are applauding the vitality of his clog dancing, practicing hambone rhythms, being unnerved by a ghost story or learning to play a paper bag.

Betty Smith, one of America's great ballad singers, has long been a favorite with festival-goers. With a voice described as "light and clear as mountain air," "singing notes reaching back through the mists of time" to the wellsprings of Appalachian and southern heritage, Smith will present a blend of musical styles and feelings. She grew up in North Carolina with a love and appreciation of traditional music and is well known as collector, promoter, teacher and performer. Her voice, clearly her most important instrument, is enhanced by the accompanying psaltery, mountain dulcimer, autoharp, and guitar. A concert with Smith is a cultural trip through ballads, love songs, play party tunes, fiddle and Irish harp tunes.

"The Banjo Man From Turkey Creek," Elmer Bird, will be featured on Friday night of the festival. Bird comes from a long line of fiddle and banjo players living in Putnam county, West Virginia. Three-time winner of best old-time banjo player award by the Society For the Preservation of Bluegrass Music of America, Bird's vigorous playing epitomizes the joy and energy that makes people fall in love with old-time music.

No Appalachian Festival would be complete without the efforts of Martha Danforth. She brings her boundless energy and enthusiasm to her calling of mountain square dancing.

Katie Laur will be again appearing at the festival, along with musicians Buddy Griffin, Jeff Roberts, Tom Cahall and Jim Huey.

The Work Experience and Career Exploration Program helps 14- and 15-year old youths likely to drop out of school, according to the Labor Department's annual report for fiscal year 1985.

Other featured performers include Rich Kirby, The New Buckeye Squares, The Sycamore Senior Hoedowners, Milta Fryman, The Davis Family, Joy Herald and The Joy Stompers, The Altarway Gospel Singers, Earl Gilmore, Fred Meyer, Bill Ellis, Dave and Kris Pinson, The Pine Ridge Partners, The Cumberland Mountain Sisters, Bob Shank, The Lost Echo String Band, The Family and Medallion.

Sound will be provided by Whitt Geier and Cellar Door Recording Productions.

Sunday morning will feature an all-gospel program. Friday and Saturday night will feature square dancing hosted by Martha Danforth, open to the public.

Proclaim Liberty!

Days of Remembrance

The Days of Remembrance (Yom Hashoah) have become a national calendar event in our country. Beginning April 26th this year, observances were held in every major city and hundreds of smaller communities. Congress and the President joined the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Council in a national service in the Rotunda on April 28th. Every governor of 50 states and every mayor of a major city issued a proclamation.

What then is Yom Hashoah to Americans? Yom Hashoah is the Hebrew for "days of remembrance" and the date refers back to the targeting and killing of 6,000,000 Jews by the Nazis. This cost the world Jewish population one out of three. European Jewry lost three out of five, and most of those who survived in Europe are now trapped in the Soviet Union. The destruction of the Jews was Hitler's first goal, and it was the one near-success that his 12-year reign could register. Many of America's leading scientists and other leaders were "gifts" of the Third Reich—people who fled for their lives from the Nazi dictator. Several thousand others emerged from the camps at the end of the war, the camps where some millions perished, to build new lives in America. Survivors of the time of destruction, they began in time to hold services of remembrance of those who had been lost.

By 1970, when the awareness of the extent of the disaster was beginning to penetrate Christian as well as Jewish circles, a number of churches began to hold memorial services. By 1985 there were hundreds of Yom Hashoah services—Christian, Jewish, and interfaith—on campuses, in congregations, in local communities.

When the question of a memorial observance first arose in the United States, there was a proposal that the role of the U.S. Army be featured. The date when Dachau was liberated—April 24-25—was urged. Among the survivors there were those who wanted the date of the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising: April 22, when for some days a few hundred brave youngsters resisted crack S S troops and delayed their advance longer than the time it took the Germans to defeat the whole French Army.

Fortunately there was a concurrence of dates in late April. The date finally chosen converged also with another date in the Jewish religious calendar: the 27th day of Nisan.

There may be those who wrongly headedly object to such a connection between a national calendar day and a religious day. But Easter and Christmas are long-standing Christian observances in our country, and as we become more mixed religiously we must learn to extend to each other's communities the grace of understanding and accommodation. The alternative is to eliminate all sacred memories and observances from the general calendar.

In the 20th century, the Age of Genocide which opened with the slaughter of 60% of the Armenians (the oldest Christianized people in the world) in the death days of the "Holy Muslim Empire" of the Ottomans, those of us who believe in America do well to meditate from time to time upon the wickedness of the Holocaust and other genocides. Yom Hashoah is a time of meditation, and of re-affirmation of our commitment to the liberty and integrity and dignity of the human person.

Yom Hashoah. Why do we remember? We remember because a monstrous crime was committed, a crime that must not be repeated without challenge.

Why do we remember? We remember because to forget is to let wickedness flourish, to choose the path to exile and oblivion.

Franklin H. Littell, The Hamlin Institute, POB 2147, Philadelphia PA 19103.

KET Show Explores New Science Developments

What caused the mass extinction of dinosaurs 200 million years ago? What does filmmaker George Lucas have in common with doctors at Johns Hopkins University? Can the disease osteoporosis be stopped? Find out when "Discover: The World of Science" encores Wednesday, May 20, at 8 p.m. on KET.

In this series of specials, host Peter Graves travels to Nova Scotia to examine a major fossil find that may provide evidence of asteroids colliding with the earth more than 200 million years ago. "Discover" also explores new advances in the fascinating science of robotics. Doctors at Johns Hopkins University are using Pixar, a machine developed by George Lucas, to study three-dimensional pictures of injured shoulders and hips.

Segments from the first season of "Discover" study the nature of the peregrine falcon, the annual MIT Engineering Design Contest, and new research that may halt—and possibly reverse—osteoporosis, an eventual weakening of the bones which affects more than 200 million Americans.

"Discover: The World of Science" is closed captioned for the hearing impaired and is a production of the Chedd-Angier Production Company in association with Discover magazine. The series is made possible by funding from GTE.

Kids Chew Up Gross National Product

By KEVIN BOYD
In a short film produced by the Foundation for Teaching Economics, a group of seventh and eighth graders was asked a series of basic questions about economics. The questions were not difficult, but the topic, unfortunately, was foreign to them.

They were asked to describe or explain economic terms that are equally important and should be no less a part of an eighth grader's education than understanding adjectives or division.

Their responses were always serious yet often comical. "Gross National Product" was defined by one as "it sounds like something you chew up and spit out." Another thought the term meant cigarettes. When asked the meaning of the Federal Reserve, responses ranged all the way from "The extra money our country has set aside in case of a war" to mistaking it for the Army Reserve. It's sad to think that those same children can complete an additional four to ten years of formal schooling and still never even learn the meaning of supply and demand. We simply have done too little to promote economic education in our schools.

There is hope though. The Kentucky Council on Economic Education, an independent, nonprofit, nonpartisan organization which operates statewide out of a network of ten university and college based regional centers, is working diligently to change that situation. The stated mission of this privately funded council is to increase economic understanding and literacy in Kentucky. They have been doing just that, without government funding or obligations since 1974.

Thanks to the KCEE, the cause of economic education has made great strides in Kentucky in recent years and according to Jan Heiman, its director of development, the work has only just begun.

Since its founding in 1974, the KCEE's main emphasis has been on graduate level teacher training. During that time, over 4,000 teachers have received training from the council on creative and effective ways to incorporate the "dismal science" of economics into the classroom. When introducing economics to students as a formal part of the curriculum isn't possible, the teachers have been known to involve students in interesting projects that make "economics" much more real to them than the word seems to imply.

In addition to training school teachers and recognizing their later achievements, the council is involved in locating and providing participating schools with the most up to date and effective training materials. These include films such as "Chickenomics, a fowl approach to economics" starring the San Diego Chicken.

A recent addition to the long list of programs supported and promoted by the KCEE is the Stock Market Game. This is an educational game whereby participating teams in middle and secondary schools are given an imaginary $100,000 to invest in New York Stock Exchange listed companies for a ten week period. The teams that end up with the most valuable portfolios at the conclusion of the game receive both recognition and a cash prize. Therefore, there is plenty of incentive for each team to learn how the stock market works and what qualities make one company a better investment than another. The end result is that the students gain real-world experience on how to allocate a scarce resource such as money for the greatest possible reward or benefit. And that's what economics is all about.

Whether or not the Kentucky Council on Economic Education is providing the citizens of this state a valuable service of course depends upon whether or not there is a recognized need for economic education. If you are as yet unconvinced, consider the following: A recent survey of high school students by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce found that 67% believed there was no need for profit for our economy to function smoothly, 82% felt that competition served no purpose, 62% believed it was the government's responsibility to create jobs, 63% favored nationalizing industry and 51% held the idea that government creates prosperity.

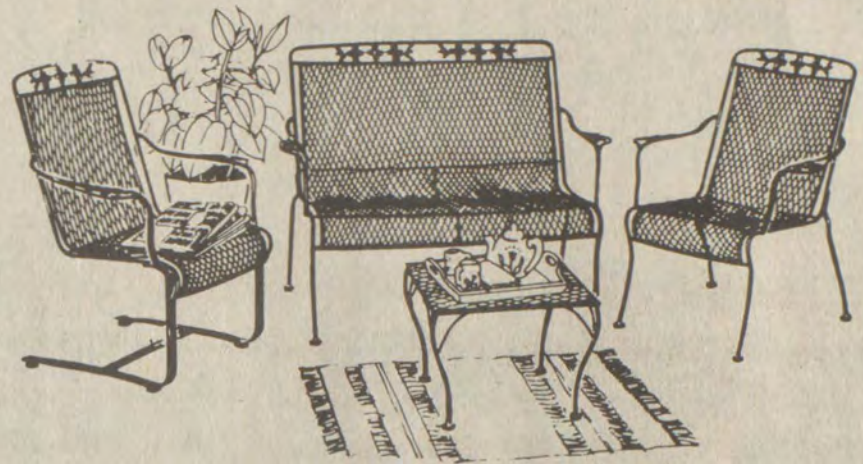

While some people think economics is nothing more than a form of employment for economists, most of us recognize that a basic understanding of it is essential if one is ever to successfully function as an adult. The Kentucky Council on Economic Education is working to make sure Kentucky's youth are well prepared to assume their roles as future leaders and economically literate citizens.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: I have heard that Mrs. A.B. Chandler had a mastectomy for a very early breast cancer. How was Mrs. Chandler's breast cancer discovered?

ANSWER: Mrs. A.B. Chandler, the wife of former Governor Happy Chandler, had a mastectomy to remove a very small tumor. Her cancer was diagnosed with the help of a mammogram. Because her cancer was small and there was no lymph node involvement, she did not have radiation or chemotherapy and even more important, her chances of never having a recurrence are extremely good.

Mrs. Chandler, in an interview published in the Lexington Herald-Leader, states, "I feel extremely lucky". She had no warning signs of cancer; no lumps, nipple discharge or skin puckering. She was aware of breast cancer because her daughter had breast cancer surgery in May after a mammogram revealed a lump.

"Ask your doctor for a mammogram" is Mildred Chandler's message for all women over fifty. For information on mammography call 1-800-4-CANCER or you can write to Ky. Cancer Information Service, McDowell Cancer Network Program, 800 Rose Street, Lexington, Ky. 40536-0093. The Cancer Information Service is part of the Kentucky Community Cancer Program.
