

LIKE A GUN EMPLACEMENT on the Golan Heights or a checkpoint on the Albanian border, a camouflaged bunker greets the infrequent visitor to the Big Sandy Regional Airport. Officially "opened" more than two years ago, the facility remains, for the most part, unused. (See story, this page.)

'Opened' Two Years Ago, Airport Remains In Limbo

By Monica J. Clark

Rather than that of a publicly-owned transportation facility, the entrance to the Big Sandy Regional Airport bears a disturbing resemblance to what one might expect at the approach to a military installation. Since January, coiled barbed wire, a wooden pillbox partially camouflaged with paint, and two posted guards have been situated at the entrance of the access road to the airport.

Privately owned by Enoxy Coal, Inc. the road, sole entranceway to the airport, is to be shared, under agreement, by the Big Sandy Regional Airport board of directors and the coal company. However, Enoxy will not admit anyone to the airport unless a company official or an airport board member notifies the guard post.

"It's unfortunate that it's still set up that way, but at this time, you can't get there without someone making arrangements," said Raymond Bradbury, vice-chairman of the airport board and president of Martin County Coal. "They're (Enoxy) being a little more careful than usual," Bradbury continued, "but I understand their situation from a coal operator's point of view, because, I, too, would be very restrictive on my coal property because of the danger of someone being injured."

Enoxy would not be reached for comment as to the reason for the additional post at the road's entrance as well as a guard house stationed further up the road.

The airport, which was officially opened in 1985, has received limited use by coal companies and a few other business firms since the completion of its 5,000-foot runway, two years ago. But Allan "Bud" Perry, former chairman of the airport board, said that the facility has been used but not opened. "We haven't been in a position to say that we have an open airport," he stated. "There hasn't been any service and there hasn't been anyone there. We are just now at that stage."

It was learned from Bradbury this week that Perry had relinquished his duties as board chairman although Perry, himself, withheld comment on the matter.

Earlier this year, the final phase of airport construction was completed which included a fixed-base hangar, water and sewage systems, a fuel "farm" (underground fueling system), offices, parking spaces, and taxiways leading to proposed corporate hangars planned for future construction. After the facilities receive final inspection, which is expected within the next 30 days, Gene Tackett, who has been hired as the fixed-base operator, will begin work and hire additional employees, according to Perry.

The airport board agrees that the biggest hindrance to use of the highly-touted facility is access. "It creates a complicated situation," Perry said. "The alternative is to construct another access road as soon as possible."

Because, however, state officials with which the airport board has been discussing a proposed alternate access road have since been replaced by a change of administrations in Frankfort, negotiations are at a standstill. Completion of an access road, which airport officials hope to locate north of the facility and connect with new KY 3, present-

Fiscal Court Sets Weight Limit In Bosco Tipple Area

By Tim Sizemore

Placing a 25-ton weight limit on the Bosco road, the resignation of the Stumbo park manager and the reopening of the Royal Hollow road, were among the items of business transacted at last Friday's meeting of the Floyd Fiscal Court.

Talmadge Allen, of Hueysville, who has, for some time, been a leader in the fight to keep a cgg tipple there from reopening, told the court that because of congestion caused by coal trucks in 1985, the community nearly lost their post office. He commended the fiscal court and the railroad for their efforts in repairing the road damage caused by the trucks, but said the community faces the same situation if the state approves a tipple permit for C.C. Craft, of Springfield, Ky., owner of the coal loading operation.

He asked the fiscal court to place a weight limit on the Bosco road in order to stop the proposed operation of the tipple and said not only do coal trucks cause congestion but a trailer owned by the mining concern is partially on the county right-of-way. Fiscal court members concurred with Allen's estimate of the situation and placed a 25-ton weight limit on the road. County Judge Executive John M. Stumbo commented that in the past he has had to contact the state police to make the tipple operators unblock the road.

Oscar Rice, former manager of Stumbo Park at Allen, read a letter of resignation to court members, in which he cited low salary as being the primary reason for his quitting the job. Rice told the court that normally a golf course attendant receives about $28,000 a year in salary in comparison to his earnings of $1,350 a month. Rice said he is an experienced and trained park manager and that the job required seven days a week.

Judge Stumbo, who said Rice requested $24,000 a year, reportedly told him that the court did not have the money but would reconsider his request when it was determined what revenues the golf course would bring in. Even though court members recognized the good job Rice has done as park manager, they voted to seek a new person for the position since they could not guarantee Rice the requested yearly salary.

Claude Howell, a property owner on Royal Hollow, near McDowell, complained to the court that county workmen, called to repair the road up the hollow which had become blocked, simply diverted the roadway onto his property rather than removing obstacles which had blocked the road in the first place. Howell said he does not intend to close the road but asked that it be re-routed along its original course. A motion by District No. 2 Magistrate Jackie Edford Owens suggested that District 3 Magistrate Ed Caudill and the county road engineer assess the situation and work to resolve the problem before the next meeting of the fiscal court.

Other business during the meeting included discussion of a fire subscription rate of $50.00 per year which would be made available to residents in areas surrounding Martin who would wish to take advantage of Martin Fire Department services. Floyd County Court Clerk Carla Robinson Bolton turned over $31,350 in excess fees to the court as partial settlement for 1987, and Ed Patton was named to another four-year term as a member of the county housing authority.

The next meeting of the fiscal court will be held May 27 at 10 a.m.

FLOYD COUNTY SHERIFF Henry C. Hale stands among police cruisers, idled by a department layoff.

Lack of Funds Forces Sheriff's Dept. Cuts

By Tim Sizemore

Money woes have plagued the Floyd County Sheriff's office this year due to rising operating expenses and the apparent procrastination of county residents in paying property taxes. Last week the lack of funding culminated in the layoff of three deputies and the reduction of office personnel.

"I don't have any idea when we'll be able to put the deputies back to work," stated Floyd County Sheriff Henry C. Hale who added that the lack of manpower has required him to serve as bailiff in district court.

Hale said that the cost of operating and maintaining squad cars, expenses incurred for health insurance and workman's compensation, have been responsible for his current fiscal woes.

Under state law it is illegal for the sheriff's office to operate with a deficit, so the shortage of capital has forced Hale to borrow money from the state to keep his office operating.

In the February meeting of the Floyd fiscal court, when the sheriff threatened to sue unless the court agreed to pay his expenses for health insurance and workman's compensation, County Judge Executive John M. Stumbo told Hale the court would require a breakdown of the Sheriff's budget and the manner in which the money is to be spent. Stumbo said the fiscal court did not hire Hale's personnel and it was up to the Sheriff to pay his staff's benefits from the fees his office collects.

Posten Jailed In Armed Theft

By Joe Porter

McKinney's Grocery Store, three miles south of Harold at Toler, was robbed Friday of an undetermined amount of merchandise. One suspect has been arrested and another is being sought in connection with the crime, according to Kenneth Frost, state police public affairs officer.

James Posten, Jr., 38, of McDowell, has been charged with first degree robbery. Frost reported that at 1 p.m. two white males entered the store, stole the merchandise at gun point, and fled in a 1982 white and blue Buick. The car was later spotted at a residence on Branham's Creek. State Trooper Lee Weddington arrested Posten at 2:45 p.m., while the other man fled on foot and escaped.

Posten's arrest also aided the sheriff's department, which sought Posten in connection with another robbery April 13, in which a Floyd county woman was robbed of a diamond necklace and $23 in cash. The suspect is being charged with robbery and terroristic threatening for that alleged crime.

Posten, who is on parole from the state penitentiary at LaGrange, is being held in the Floyd county jail. Monday, District Court Judge Harold Stumbo set bail at $50,000.

Chaffins Resigns Following Charge of Improprieties

By Joe Porter

On Thursday, April 14, Mayor Ann Latta suspended without pay Building Inspector Paul Chaffins and appointed Captain Greg Hall of the Prestonsburg Police Department to investigate "alleged improprieties" in the way Chaffins handled money received for building permits. On Friday, the following day, Chaffins resigned.

Mayor Latta said the probe started when she received a complaint about Chaffins from a citizen in the community who was planning on having a building constructed. The mayor said that while Chaffins denied any wrongdoing in the investigation will continue.

Latta attributed the problem and need for an investigation partly to a bad method of collecting permit fees. She said all checks are supposed to be made out to the city, but they were often given to Chaffins directly while on the job. The mayor said, however, the method of collection has been rectified. Payments will now be made to the City Clerk in the municipal building; the inspector will not handle the money.

In place of Chaffins, Mayor Latta has appointed Larry Adams acting building inspector. Adams, who is the city's arson investigator and a captain in the fire department, is qualified to be building inspector, with the exception of his electrical qualification. The Mayor said the electrical work will now be inspected by the county's inspector, Joe Kendrick.

Bridge Collapse Isolates George Branch Residents

By Paul N. Allen

Residents of the George Branch section of Little Paint Creek were walking this week from their homes to the "main" road (KY 1428) after a bridge, crossing Little Paint, collapsed Monday under the weight of a gravel truck.

One resident, Linda Bowling, said "people have been afraid of the bridge for a long time," and she pointed out that complaints to county officials concerning the one-lane, wooden span had only brought reassurances that it was safe. She alleged, however, that when requests for gravel from the county were submitted, county trucks were reluctant to cross the span for fear of a collapse.

The truck involved in the mishap was delivering gravel from a Campton, Ky. firm to the Bowling family when the bridge buckled under the weight. Mrs. Bowling said the driver of the vehicle inspected the span before crossing but the 30-ton load obviously proved too much for the aging timbers and metal substructure.

The truck crashed through the bridge, which spanned the creek about eight feet above the water level, and came to rest on end, tailgate down, in the creek bed.

Caudill Hearing Is Reset For Judge Frazier's Court

By Joe Porter

A hearing on whether or not to impose a one-year sentence on Floyd County Magistrate Eddie Caudill failed to take place Friday in Pike Circuit Court as scheduled. Judge Bayard Collier appeared to hear the case, but he didn't have jurisdiction; the hearing will now be reset for Judge Stephen N. Frazier's court.

Caudill, who has been free on bond while his case is on appeal, was convicted of second degree criminal possession of a forged instrument on July 25, 1985 and sentenced to one year in the state penitentiary. The conviction stemmed from a state police investigation into county financial practices that ended with the indictment of 16 Floyd countians. Most of those indictments were eventually dismissed.

Prior to Friday's scheduled hearing the state attorney general's office had filed a motion to execute the sentence. Gary Siemens, an attorney in the special prosecution's office, said the motion was necessary because the defendant had exhausted his state and federal appeals, the appeals courts had affirmed the Pike Circuit Court verdict, and "the sentence now needs to be imposed."

Yet, Ned Pillersdorf, the defendant's attorney, disputes Siemens claim that appeals have been exhausted. "That's not true," said Pillersdorf, who filed a motion on March 3 in the U.S. 6th Circuit Court of Appeals, seeking a stay of execution of sentencing. To date that motion has not been ruled on. And to counter the state attorney general's motion, he filed a renewed motion for probation in Pike Circuit Court, April 5.

The defense attorney said he was prepared at Friday's hearing to ask the court again to probate Caudill's sentence, or, if not that, to hold off imposing the sentence until which time the

OTHER CAUSES OF DIARRHEA

QUESTION: My wife and I eat exactly the same foods, keep the same hours, travel together, etc., and yet I have chronic diarrhea and she never gets it. What could be the cause.

ANSWER: There are other causes of diarrhea besides infections of the intestinal tract (such as dysentery, or eating spoiled food). It can occur as the result of: a partial obstruction of the colon; of certain inflammatory diseases of the bowel, or of various other toxins. In addition, a common cause of diarrhea is emotional anxiety and nervousness. In any event, you should have yourself examined as soon as possible. Chronic diarrhea may be the symptom of something serious; it can also result in a condition called diverticulosis.

Host Families Needed For Foreign Visitors

If you can't get out to travel the world this summer, you can bring the world to Kentucky by hosting an international visitor through the Experiment in International Living.

Host families are needed to host international participants for three-week homestays during the summer. The participants are covered by health insurance, have their own spending money and live as a member of the family. Participants, or "Experimenters," range in age from 16 to 65. Most Experimenters are college-aged students, and they come from 40 countries around the world.

Families with or without children, single-parent families and single adults are all eligible to host. The main qualification is a sincere desire to learn about another culture and an openness to new ideas. Host families are not required to break their daily routines by hosting, but rather to offer the chance for an international participant to see how a typical American family lives during their three-week stay.

For those interested in sharing their family life while making new friends and learning about another part of the world, hosting through The Experiment in International Living offers the chance. Family interviews will be scheduled in coming months for this summer's host families. For more information or for the name of the local volunteer coordinator, call The Experiment in International Living toll-free at 1-800-327-HOST.

Founded in 1932, The Experiment in International Living is one of the oldest and largest international exchange organizations in the world. Over 300,000 people have participated in Experiment citizen exchange programs.

★ Cancer Hopeline

QUESTION: My husband and I recently bought a microwave oven. My mother insists that microwave radiation can cause cancer. Is there any truth to this?

ANSWER: There is no evidence that microwave ovens cause cancer.

Microwaves are a form of electromagnetic radiation and should not be confused with x-rays. Microwaves actually fall into the radio frequency band of electromagnetic radiation. Microwaves have less energy, are less penetrating and therefore are less damaging than x-rays.

All microwave ovens manufactured after October 7, 1971 are covered by a radiation safety standard which is enforced by the Food and Drug Administration. All ovens must have a label stating that they meet this standard. The safety standard limits the amount of radiation that can leak from a microwave oven in its lifetime. The level allowed is far below that known to harm people.

The safety standard also requires that all ovens have multiple safety devices that stop the production of microwaves as soon as the door latch is released. According to the FDA there is little cause for concern about excess microwaves leaking from ovens unless the door hinges, latch or seals are damaged, or if the machine was made before 1971. In the FDA's experience, most ovens tested show little or no leakage of microwaves. you should follow the manufacturer's guidelines for use and maintenance.

For more information on microwave oven radiation, call the Cancer Information Service (CIS) at 1-800-4-CANCER. Or write to the CIS at the Markey Cancer Center, 800 Rose Street, Lexington, Ky.

AEP KENTUCKY POWER

For Frasure, It's The Three R's By Day, Play by Play At Night

By Monica J. Clark

Jim Frasure, a mild-mannered Floyd county school teacher by day, can usually be found going over a homework assignment with his fourth and fifth graders at Prater Creek Elementary. But on any given night during basketball or football season, Frasure becomes a radio sports personality, camped on the sidelines of some high school gymnasium or football field, calling the play-by-play for WQHY radio in Prestonsburg.

Before being recruited into sports-casting three years ago by WQHY General Manager Gorman Collins, Jr., Frasure, 29, had never given broadcasting a second thought. Well, maybe once...

"I was at the NCAA championship game, April 1, 1985, Villanova versus Georgetown at Rupp Arena, and I managed to take my eight-year-old nephew with me and get about 10 rows up from midcourt and watch one of the most outstanding games that has ever been played," Frasure recalls. "And I remember looking down at those guys covering the game and I was thinking, 'Man, those guys are really having some fun working!', and less than a year later there I was, doing the state championship game."

Collins's only apprehension about Frasure was that he'd never been on the air, but he says, "Jim had always been a real good athlete and he could sit down and talk about each team in the county for 15 minutes if he had to. I knew he knew a lot about the games and thought he would do a good job."

At six feet, three inches tall, it's not surprising that Frasure played basketball in high school for the Prestonsburg Blackcats. He also played golf and was offered a golf scholarship to Morehead State University, which he declined.

Frasure's family and friends had always told him that he should be a sports announcer. But while his opportunity came three years ago, it didn't come under the best of circumstances. "My mother was very ill at the time with cancer," Frasure says, "and that was one of the main reasons that I became involved in it because it was something to keep me busy and keep me from thinking about what was going on at home." Frasure's mother has since passed away.

During that time, not only was the part-time radio work therapy for Frasure, but so were his students.

"Even though their energy can drain your strength, they can give you strength back as well," he says. "They were really great when she passed away. It helped me out a lot."

A resident of Allen and the son of two school teachers, Frasure never thought he would wind up in the teaching profession. Instead, upon graduating from Pikeville College with a degree in accounting, he worked with a CPA and a few other business firms before going back for his teaching certificate.

"After kicking around in my other career, I just sort of gravitated to it," Frasure says of teaching.

His teaching philosophy is practical and he gauges success with one question, "Are the children learning anything?"

"Find something that works and do it," he says. "Tradition and social mores cause people to do things over and over that don't work."

Making a child feel good about himself is one of Frasure's priorities in the classroom and he says his methods reinforce that principle.

Nearing the end of his first year as a teacher, Prater Creek Elementary Principal Pete Grigsby says, "Jim is an excellent teacher and his students are very respectful of him; they seem very happy and content with Jim."

WQHY has been very happy with Frasure as well. "He has the knowledge, a good rapport with all of the teams and coaches, and he has a genuine concern for the kids," Collins says. "Jim always tries to be impartial and when two Floyd county teams play, he accentuates the positives of both teams. He represents the station well."

Frasure underscores the fact that, at the Sweet 16 in particular, preparation is 90 percent of the game. "When you're doing a local game, quite often you at least know one of the teams real well, so you can show up at the game 30 minutes a head of time to memorize the numbers," he says. "But you can forget that at the state tournament. You have to follow it the whole year to do a good job and you need to be there 1-1 1/2 hours before air time, not before tip off, because air time is your tip off."

Of the Sweet 16 Frasure says, "It's absolutely some of the hardest work that I ever do, certainly no vacation. You do 15 games in four days, coordinate commercials and make sure the sponsors get enough spots, and you have to be your own engineer and director. All of those things take away from the time you can spend learning the names and numbers of the players, their records and past performances throughout the year."

His view of Louisville's handling of the Sweet 16 this year is favorable. "I think the people in Louisville did an outstanding job to the point that they bent over backwards to insure the success of the tournament," he expressed, "however they just happened to be bucking the greatest place in the world to play basketball, which is Lexington in Rupp Arena."

Tradition and the Wildcats are part of the formula that makes Rupp unique, Frasure insists. "The man whose name is on the arena transcended the game and it's something that has grown into state and civic pride."

To prove his point, he asked his class a question, "Who is Rex Chapman?" he said enthusiastically. "The greatest basketball player," a student quickly responded. Then, "who is Pervis Ellison?" No one could identify the University of Louisville junior center.

Frasure's favorite announcer is a composite of three. "Claude Sullivan and Caywood Leford for their professionalism and Joe Dean for his enthusiasm," he said. "What Joe Dean did, was he brought the same amount of enthusiasm to a regular season game as he did a tournament game. And I've got to bring the same type of enthusiasm and preparation to Allen Central and Hazard as I would Clay county and Ballard."

State-Sponsored Meet Here Deals With Airport System

By Monica J. Clark

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet sponsored the first of a series of three informational meetings updating the state's airport system last Wednesday at Jenny Wiley State Park's May Lodge.

Gerry Bandy, president of G.R. Bandy and Associates, Inc., an aviation consulting firm, said the update served to introduce and inform interested parties and the public of the 1988 Kentucky Aviation Plan. The purpose of the plan is to study the state's airport system and to suggest ways to improve and expand it. The last update was conducted in 1977.

Mother's CPR Training Saves Life of Infant

Patricia and William Jarrell realized their worst fears on February 23 when their 18 month old son suddenly stopped breathing.

While Patricia was feeding her son, William Jarrell II, he began gasping for air and ceased breathing. Patricia recalls, "I panicked...he was gone, I knew I had to do something. I knew CPR would be the only thing that could save my baby's life." Patricia who received her CPR training at Highlands Regional Medical Center quickly pulled herself together and immediately began performing CPR on little William.

Maintaining his composure while Patricia administered CPR, husband William, called the rescue squad for assistance. As they awaited the arrival of the rescue squad in the home at Endicott, six miles above the German Bridge, Patricia's efforts allowed William to resume breathing after about four or five minutes. At that moment, the couple decided not to wait another second, ran to the family car with baby in arms and raced to the Emergency Room at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

This case clearly illustrates the value of CPR training. When little William was diagnosed as having a respiratory problem the attending physician recommended that Patricia learn CPR. Patricia agreed with the request and in December of 1987 Lora Hamilton, RN, Discharge Planner and Patient Educator, taught her the life saving procedures of CPR. Patricia now acknowledges that CPR training saved her son, has tremendous value and learning it is painless. She maintains that, "I love Lora to death for teaching it (CPR) to me, it saved my baby's life."

Hamilton is one of over 15 certified CPR instructors at Highlands Regional Medical Center. In addition to teaching CPR to the HRMC staff, these employees present many community CPR programs. The programs are taught monthly, on the instructor's free time and without any monetary compensation.

"Kentucky has received more than its allotment of funds in past years," Bandy said, referring to federal money earmarked for aviation, "because we've had plans ready to go." If any money remains, after funding budgeted projects, it is placed in a discretionary fund and allocated to states who have projects planned and ready to be constructed, Bandy said.

The 1988 aviation plan, which primarily applies to new airports, will differ from its predecessor a decade ago in that it will address a number of special components, including heliport plans, economic impact studies and obstruction surveys.

The meeting, which was open to the public but attended primarily by representatives from area airports, was part of the first series of forums to introduce the study. The same type of presentation was given at Lake Barkley, Elizabethtown, Somerset and Winchester.

The second set of meetings, slated for July, will take place during the alternative analysis stage of the study.

The final set of meetings will be conducted in November to address the study's recommended state plan.

The locations of the meetings will vary to allow a greater number of Kentuckians to participate.

ly under construction, is now, according to Perry, "up in the air."

In a less than encouraging comment, Bradbury said, "It's been 12 years getting to where it is today, so we're not worried about another three or four."

"The access road will come and direct access to the public will come, but while the coal company is leasing from another company, the airport board doesn't have a lot to say," Bradbury continued.

The six-million-dollar project was conceived 11 years ago and financed primarily by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA). Some state funds were used and each of the four counties involved in the joint effort (Floyd, Johnson, Martin and Magoffin), contributed equally.

A spokesman for the FAA said he was aware of the problems with access to the airport but emphasized he was not well-acquainted with the Big Sandy area in general. When informed that guards, on one occasion, refused entry to a Times reporter and photographer, the FAA spokesman referred to such a policy as "discrimination."

Extending 150 acres atop a reclaimed strip mine site on a Martin county mountain, the airport property was donated by Pocahontas Kentucky Corporation, which now leases the remainder of the land to Enoxy, a company reportedly owned by an Italian firm.

"It's a magnificent facility in terms of size for Eastern Kentucky," said Edward LaFontaine, executive director of the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet's Office of Aeronautics. "While there may be some problems now, the airport may someday be considered the nucleus of great things for that area," he added, referring to the thousands of acres adjacent to the airport that may be developed in the future.

The FAA has called the project "a most outstanding example of regional cooperation," according to Raymond Bradbury, because, he said, in the past the FAA has not been successful in persuading more than two counties to combine efforts on such a project.

The fact remains, however, at this time, with millions of federal, state and local funds expended for a facility hailed two years ago as "open," the mountaintop airport, said by many a key to opening Eastern Kentucky, remains locked.

She expects to possibly hire an assistant for Adams, so that he can continue as arson investigator as well as serving as building inspector.

According to Thomas A. Blackburn, Prestonsburg's Fire Chief, Chaffins resignation will also terminate his duties with the Fire Department. Besides holding the rank of major, Chaffins was assistant fire chief, fire marshal, and the county's coordinator for its Disaster Emergency Services. "He filled so many positions that we will now have to restructure the department," Blackburn said. "Just exactly how, right now, I don't know."

Blackburn added, "It's real tragic to us. He's going to be a hard person to replace. He's as well-trained as any fireman in Kentucky, or at least, in eastern Kentucky. And no one was more dedicated to fire fighting."

Hale said one deputy will be able to go back to work May 1 at Dewey Lake, but that the deputy will be required to stay in the bounds of the park.

As it stands now, the sheriff said, one deputy will be in Districts one and two with two in Districts three and four. Only one deputy will serve on the day shift.

Expressing frustration, the sheriff commented, "What else can I do? The money's just not there."

federal appeals process has run its course. "I will be filing a brief within two weeks to the 6th Circuit based on the Sixth Amendment issue," Pillersdorf said. The Sixth Amendment reads: "the accused shall enjoy the right of a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed..." It's the counselor's contention that Caudill's right to a fair trial was denied when a change of venue was granted and the trial was moved from Floyd to Pike county.

Caudill, 63, a retired coal miner, has been magistrate in Floyd county for more than 20 years and his father served eight years prior to his taking office. This is his first offense.

The truck's gravel was unloaded by hand before the vehicle could be pulled out of the creek by a Collins Wrecker Service truck and a county bulldozer. The driver escaped injury although he expressed regret at having left Wolfe county at all that morning.

The mishap occurred at about 8:30 a.m. at a time when most residents had already left their homes for work although some, still at home at the time, were later forced to catch rides with neighbors. Others must cross the creek by way of a plank foot bridge to reach their cars parked along 1428.

Mrs. Bowling said the county had pledged to rebuild the bridge within the next few days and commented: "I only hope they'll build a good one."

Improvement Work Under Way at Park

By Tim Sizemore

Archer Park is getting a much needed face lift, with work being done to add two more baseball fields and a parking lot for senior citizens.

According to District Magistrate Gerald Derosssett, work is nearly completed on a new Pee Wee and Babe Ruth field. "This will give everyone including the youngsters a chance to have a place to play ball," Derosssett said. He also gave much of the credit to the Soil Conservation Service "who's advice has proved invaluable."

Those who have participated in the construction include, Earnest Burchett, Denver Shepherd and Linvil Campbell.

Park Manager, Ralph Little, said he is pleased with the work and invited the public to visit the park and see the improvements being carried out by the county and City of Prestonsburg.

(April 19, 1978)

The grand jury which adjourned last Wednesday made no addition to the Floyd circuit court's murder docket, but one of the 32 indictments voted named a Magoffin county man on a second degree manslaughter count, and closing days were marked by the investigation of the death of an infant which later may result in a manslaughter or murder bill. The newborn baby whose body was found last Tuesday in a Cow Mountain garbage dump suffered a fractured skull, but it has not been determined if the injury was sustained before or after its death, a report to Coroner James J. Carter said. After two days of almost continuous competition Prestonsburg Community College topped 10 other Kentucky colleges in the 14th annual Mountain Dew Festival and regained the coveted Little Brown Jig award from Hopkinsville Community College, winner of the event the past two years. An autopsy of the body of Arnold Frasure, 34, who was burned to death in a fire which destroyed his mobile home on Wilson Creek shortly after midnight Monday, was a part of the investigation under way Tuesday by authorities. There died: Mrs. Sallie Smith, 84, of Prestonsburg, Saturday at Mountain Manor Nursing Home; Ellis Scott, 75, of Springfield, Ohio, formerly of this county, April 8 in Good Samaritan Hospital at Dayton; Joe Wheeler Burchett, 68, of Sugar Loaf, Monday at UK Medical Center; James Robinson, 53, of Auxier Road, Wednesday at Highlands Regional Medical Center; Mrs. Thelma Jones Autore, 61, of Bevinville, Monday at McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital; Earl Belcher, 65, of Grundy, Sunday in Johnson City, Tennessee; Hiram Case, 53, of Paintsville, Tuesday April 4, DOA at Paintsville Hospital.

Proposed construction of a 15-room high school near the junction of the Left and Right Beaver highways met with opposition last week from a group of Martin citizens over the past week. There died: Mrs. Dave Hicks, 47, of Middle Creek, last Thursday at the home of a sister at Hippo.

A Commentary On "Happy"

By Quentin D. Allen

A penetrating inquiry is being conducted by journalists, today. The question of import is whether the press is conducting its role within the parameters of fairness.

What, for instance, is truth? Is truth the momentary exposure of words from some cavern of the mind which will, forever more, serve to typify the substance and worth of an individual? If a momentary blurt is caught and printed, the most sage may appear dumb and the profoundly stupid most wise.

We find that a dilemma akin to the above exists at the University of Kentucky. Is the coverage, the media "hype" given the Chandler remark really fair?

We think not. It is not fair to a man's lifetime, like him or hate him. It is not a just precipitator of marches on Frankfort or the waving of signs for days on end. There are far more significant issues for marches, such as the issues of homelessness or hunger in America. But then, the weather is unusually fair, and those who are want to protest do so.

The University of Kentucky Regent made a tragic blunder in using terminology of the gutter in classifying blacks as "Niggers". That kind of remark will not wash, anywhere, anyplace by anyone.

However, as poor and as desperately foul as the remark is at the surface, could the interests of all involved not be served better by some judicious reporting? Has Mr. Chandler been chronically guilty of these improprieties or is this a figment of speech bubbling to the surface by a psychological mechanism akin to a gastronomical "burp"?

As one who has not admired the politics of Happy, nonetheless, have trouble condemning the whole of his life for the results of a flawed moment. Such a terrible thing should not happen to any of us.

Which brings up a "Happy" story. I was once working with the University of Kentucky public relations department. In walking across the campus one day, a professor friend with other professors asked me to confirm the notion that Happy Chandler was an idiot. My first impulse was to say, "Yes," and be on my merry way. I didn't.

I told them something as follows:

"Well, you can think of Happy as an idiot. But, consider the fact that he has been twice Governor of the Commonwealth, he has served the U.S. Senate, he has been Commissioner of Baseball, and he is probably on more corporate boards than you got toes and fingers. Now, if he is an idiot, then we could all stand to be an idiot like Happy."

As I remember, that was the last question I was asked about a Kentucky politician. I wished they had asked me about Bert Combs because I really like Bert.

But, back to the theme of this piece. Is it really the best thing to spout everything we run across just to titillate the gross appetites of the public to run up a bigger circulation for more ad revenue? Isn't there also a need to serve the larger community by exerting some taste and discrimination in the content of our pages? We have enough hatred and greed as it is; cannot we inspire a bit more tolerance by examining the whole story before dashing the life of a man to pieces for circumstantial reasons?

Our version of fairness is not for the media to run and tell unless a fair test of the individual's intent is tested. Has the individual chronically made abusive references to persons or groups? Is the incident the tip of the iceberg or simply a very little, insignificant tip? Could not a publisher or producer discern what has real substance or merit without waving in discriminate bags of "truth" in front of the public?

My last personal recollection of Happy was the tearful and sentimental scene when he sang, "My Old Kentucky Home" for the departing Wildcat basketball seniors. One of the black young men, who is held in high esteem by all, was Winston Bennett. He hugged Happy.

And Happy obviously hugged back...and meant it. That was the Happy we should remember and let this foolish, inane, awful remark go the way of toilet paper.

Board Meet Addresses School Construction Time Schedule

By Tim Sizemore

The Floyd County Board of Education met in special session Monday, to determine time schedules for advertisement and acceptance of bids on four new school buildings as well as projected dates for completion of the structures.

Prestonsburg Architect Randy Burchett gave the board an update on the progress being made on the Prestonsburg Middle School and the Allen Elementary project. Burchett said although preliminary work on the Prestonsburg Middle School has been completed, two problems need to be resolved—one, that of securing land to obtain fill dirt for the school site, and submitting a BG 3 form to the state which describes the project. Burchett pointed out that a site has been located near the proposed school which will provide the 60,000 cubic yards of fill needed for the project. He explained that he faces basically the same problem at the Allen site, but on a much smaller scale. There, he believes the problem of fill dirt will be solved by acquiring fill material from property within 400 feet of the school site.

According to Burchett, bids will be advertised on the Prestonsburg Middle School project, April 25, with bid openings, May 12, and actual bond sales will begin about June 8. On the Allen Elementary project, the bids will be advertised May 18 with bids being received on June 6 and submitted two days later. He said he expects bond sales to be completed by July 1.

Lexington Architect Paul Hoffman, in charge of the Garrett-Wayland Elementary project, says that all of the preliminary permits have been issued on the site except the sewage treatment plan, but he foresees no problem in meeting the board's goals. Hoffman says bonds for the site will be advertised May 4 with bids being opened May 26. Bond sales will begin no later than June 22, he said.

The Left Beaver high school, which is under the supervision of the architectural firm of James Ellis and Associates of Pikeville, has experienced delays due to legal problems in acquiring the site as well as the contour of the site itself which has dictated the design of the building and grounds. James Ellis told the board that he feels the bids may be submitted around the time of the other project bids.

John L. Carmen of John L. Carmen and Associates, a Lexington firm which will provide the landscape architecture for the site, explained that some of the problem has been due to faulty mining maps and his firm not having received a complete survey document from Wal-Turn engineering until last Friday. Superintendent Ray Brackett told the board that "Technically, until February 23, we did not have a clear title to the property and that slowed down work on the project." Jim Ellis assured the board that the project would be completed in 1989, to the special satisfaction of board member Dr. Mary Hall.

Assistant Administrator Russel Mont Frazier was approved by the board to act as construction manager for the new schools and will work with the superintendent to keep him advised as to the progress of the building projects.

Before the meeting adjourned, the architects commended Superintendent Brackett for his help and cooperation in furthering the progress of the school systems building program.

Correction

In a news story which appeared in last week's issue of The Times, E. P. "Pete" Grigsby's position in the Floyd school system was listed as assistant superintendent. Mr. Grigsby's correct title is assistant administrator.

Leon Russell, Winter, Scheduled At Center Stage

By Tim Sizemore

Shades of the late '60's and early '70's will warm the hearts of baby boomers as Leon Russell and Edgar Winter will appear Thursday night at Center Stage.

Kenny Bentley, part-owner of the night spot, commented that the club is aiming for an audience in their thirties, who have never taken the opportunity to visit the club. "We are particularly pleased to get Leon Russell because of the wide range of his musical talent," he said.

Bentley, who is a member of the Full House Band, said Russell's music has changed with the times, from the Mad Dogs and Englishmen tour with Joe Cocker in the early '70's to cutting an album with Willie Nelson more recently.

Even though he believes the club will be lucky to break even on the event, Bentley feels it's worth it and Full House Band member and versatile guitarist Mark Stevens commented simply: "I'm tickled to death."

"Part of the reason for the special concert is to celebrate the club's first anniversary and to thank the public for their enthusiastic response," Bentley pointed out.

Bentley vows to continue to contract top musical talent at Center Stage and says his goal and that of his partners is to have a place where people of all ages can enjoy the music and be assured of an enjoyable evening.

General Fund Receipts Up 6.5%

State Finance Secretary L. Rogers Wells Jr. announced recently that General Fund receipts for March amounted to $196.4 million, an increase of 6.5 percent from March of last year. Wells said the major sources of growth were in individual income, property and sales and use tax receipts. Growth in these major taxes offset declines in coal severance, corporation income and other smaller sources of tax receipts.

According to Wells, the year-to-date collections for the General Fund are up 5.1 percent as compared to the first nine months of last year. "A 5.2 percent growth rate for the next three months will be needed to reach the annual rate targeted for this fiscal year, which is 5.2 percent," he said.

For the month of March, individual income tax receipts were up by 8.8 percent, regular sales and use tax receipts grew by 8.3 percent and property tax receipts increased by 24.2 percent. Regular coal severance tax receipts decreased 0.8 percent as compared to March 1987. Corporate income tax receipts decreased by 0.4 percent.

The Road Fund receipts for March were down 6.4 percent as compared to March 1987. So far this fiscal year, Road Fund receipts have declined 6.7 percent as compared to the same period for last year.

Printer Man Returns From Marine Exercise

Marine Sgt. Cecil A. Halbert, son of Pearl S. Adler, of Printer, recently returned to Morehead City, N.C., from a six-month deployment to the Mediterranean with 22nd Marine Expeditionary Unit, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Consisting of more than 1,900 Marines and sailors, the unit was one of the largest air combat elements ever to deploy to the Mediterranean during peacetime.

Halbert joined the Marine Corps in June 1975.

The 156 units of the National Forest System cover 8.5% of the United States. The national forests yield enough timber each year for about 1 million houses.

Channel Crossings Set In Ireland And Japan

Channel Crossings, a series for adults showcasing notable television productions, premieres two specials mixing humorous as well as more serious issues.

In Acceptable Levels, Channel Crossings examines the media's role and responsibility in reporting news events. This Irish drama airs Saturday, April 23 at 11 p.m.

The Family Game, a Japanese black comedy about an adolescent who is doing poorly at school, airs Saturday, April 30 at 11 p.m. on KET.

In Acceptable Levels a television crew, filming a documentary in a strife-torn section of Northern Ireland, witnesses a real-life tragedy. A young girl is killed by a British soldier's rubber bullet. The crew has been looking for a moving, human picture of how the terrible events in Belfast affect its children. At first, the crew is thrilled by its dramatic footage of the tragedy. But soon, it begins to question the ethical aspect of the situation.

Although set in Northern Ireland, this film is about more the troubles. It is about the responsibility members of the media have to the people they film and photograph, and how that responsibility is abused in pursuit of acceptable news and entertainment.

The Family Game tells the story of Shigeyuki, an adolescent who is doing poorly in school. His concerned parents decide to hire Yoshimoto, a college student, to tutor their son. Yoshimoto is offered a huge bonus if Shigeyuki's grades are raised.

Yoshimoto's arrogant and self-assured style contrasts with the petty middle class environment of his employers. Shigeyuki's family lives a petit-bourgeois existence, making absurd attempts to mimic the Japo-Western ideal.

Yoshimoto is very strict with Shigeyuki and finally succeeds in improving the boy's scholastic performance. In celebration of Shigeyuki's triumph, the family gathers for a dinner which Yoshimoto turns into a grotesque and absurd shambles. It is Yoshimoto's only response to the genteel inhumanism witnessed throughout the film.

Channel Crossings is a presentation of WNET/New York.

...about your Social Security

By JIM KELLY
Social Security District Director
For the Big Sandy Area

Home Health Care

For people in the Big Sandy area who have Medicare health insurance, home health care is an important alternative to inpatient hospital care. Jim Kelly, Social Security Director for the Big Sandy Area, said recently.

People confined to their home because of accident or illness who need skilled health care on a part-time basis can benefit from Medicare's home health care provision. A person who needs part-time skilled nursing care, speech or physical therapy can receive home health care services, Kelly said.

Medicare can cover home health care if the person is confined to his or her home, a doctor sets up a plan for home health services, and the services are provided by a home health agency that takes part in Medicare.

Services Medicare can cover, in addition to part-time skilled nursing care and physical or speech therapy, include occupational therapy, part-time services of home health aides, medical social services, and medical supplies and equipment provided by the agency.

Medicare cannot cover full-time nursing care at home, drugs and biologicals, meals delivered to the home, homemaker services, blood transfusions, general household services, meal preparation, shopping, help in bathing or dressing, or other home care services furnished mainly to help people meet personal needs.

Medicare pays the full approved cost of all covered home health visits. A person may be charged only for any services or costs Medicare does not cover.

More information about Social Security, Supplemental Security Income, or Black Lung can contact the Big Sandy Area Social Security office, located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville. The telephone number is listed in the local telephone directory under U.S. Government. The people there will be glad to answer any questions.

Nationally-Known Speakers To Address Health Forum

Professionals in the mental health field along with clergy, law enforcement officials, parents, and other concerned individuals will meet April 28-29 for the fifth annual spring forum on mental health and substance abuse issues. The two-day conference, entitled Intervention '88, will be held at the Holiday Inn of Somerset and will feature Susan Kendall Newman, respected drug abuse expert and daughter of movie star Paul Newman, as the keynote banquet speaker. The banquet, set for 7 p.m. E.D.T., Thursday April 28, is open to the public.

The conference focuses on the mental health and substance abuse problems that pose significant health risks to the entire country. Nationally recognized speakers will share the expertise in an understandable manner as they head the day long sessions. It is hosted by Lake Cumberland Regional Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board, Inc.

One such speaker is Anne W. Smith, director of Caron Family Services in Wernersville, Pa. Smith's topic "Adult Children of Alcoholics," studies the traits exhibited and treatment needs of offspring who grew up in an alcoholic family. Smith, a worker in the chemical dependency field for 15 years, has published articles on the subject in "US Magazine" and various trade journals as well as been interviewed on ABC's "Nightline" and NBC's "1986."

Another highlight will be a workshop/playshop entitled "Enhancing the Self-Concept" presented by organizational development specialist, Peggy Rowe. Rowe, a consultant from British Columbia, advises several major firms in the United States and Canada including the Internal Revenue Service and Hewlett-Packard.

This month's appearance at Intervention '88 is Susan Newman's second in Somerset where she took part in last year's conference. In addition to her keynote address, Newman will conduct a workshop on "Drug Free Kids" targeted to an adult audience. Workshop participants will leave armed with the information and suggested strategies necessary to work with their children, clients, or students.

In addition, concurrent workshops will be conducted on several timely topics, but not all of Intervention '88 will be confined to workshops. Houseboat rides on Lake Cumberland are planned before and after Thursday night's banquet. The cruises on the lake will be coupled with refreshments and music at a dock party at Lee's Ford Dock.

For registration or more information contact Lake Cumberland Regional Mental Health-Mental Retardation Board, Inc. at 800/633-5599, 606/679-8742.

Stop The Hurt Day Declared A Success

The first annual "Stop the Hurt" Day, staged in Wayland, Saturday, April 9, was declared a success when hundreds of people from Floyd, Knott, Pike, and Johnson counties attended. Mayor Patricia Murphy proclaimed April Child Abuse Prevention Month.

Foster Parents, Family Abuse Center, Health Department, Christian Appalachian Project, Job Corps, Social Services, and Mountain Comprehensive Care participated.

Entertainment was provided by Maria Crisp, in clown costume, gospel music by Jayne Patton, country music by Kathy Hall and Sheila North and Blue Grass by the Pine Top Ramblers.

The Kentucky Council on Child Abuse/Eastern Region and the Wayland Area Volunteer Fire Department, aided by the Women's Auxiliary, produced and presented a show that makes a statement—this this community cares about children.

Janie Hall posed the question before the assemblage: "Would Jesus of the New Covenant take a miner's belt or a switch and beat the tar out of a misbehaving child or would he sit down at the child's level and explain by way of a parable the right way to go."

Martin Native Combines Teaching And Creative Weaving Techniques

Ed.'s Note: The following article is reprinted from the Wilmington (Del.) News-Journal and deals with the distinguished art and teaching career of Dorothy Yabroff (the former Dorothy "Dotty" Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Martin, of Martin). She is a graduate of Martin High School.

By Mary Alice Garrett
Dorothy Yabroff of Edenridge is a fiber artist who inspires others to pursue her craft.

She said she once "had 320 youngsters weaving on cardboard or paper plate looms" and dyeing their own yarn. All were schoolchildren in Louisville, Ky., who turned out an 8-by-10-foot wall piece. "It was very abstract, very colorful," she said.

The project was the result of a state grant that Yabroff received to teach weaving in the Louisville elementary schools. She wore a Colonial costume when she taught. Some of her young students had trouble saying her name, so they called her "Mrs. Weaver."

Now, Yabroff is back in the classroom, this time at Wilmington Friends Lower School. She's taking over for art teacher Evelyn Reeve, who is on sabbatical leave this semester. Yabroff said she enjoys weaving and the teaching of weaving equally. "Both are so valuable," she said. "Teaching adds another dimension. I could not rate one above the other."

She has taught children and adults part time at her home, at community centers and museums and as a substitute teacher for the Brandywine School District. In April, she will teach tapestry weaving at the Center for the Creative Arts in Yorklyn.

Yabroff started weaving in 1963 after studying it, along with pottery and jewelry, at the Arrowmont School of Crafts in Gatlinburg, Tenn. "I had always been interested in weaving," she said. When she tried it, "I liked the feeling of it—the tactile" feeling. The same was true with pottery; she liked "digging fingers in the clay."

Yabroff wrote her thesis on tapestries as a graduate student at Cornell University. "I did a lot of research in New York City," she said. Her undergraduate degree, also from Cornell, is in interior design and painting.

Yabroff has done some private interior design work, but she has discontinued it now, except. "I have friends who like to ask me to come over and rearrange their furniture."

Now most of her time is spent weaving, teaching and working with professional organizations. Yabroff is a past president of the Harmony Weavers Guild, which has an exhibit now through April 4 at the City/County Building in Wilmington.

In February, Yabroff exhibited in the "Fibers 88 Show" at West Chester (Pa.) University. She has also exhibited with the Philadelphia Guild of Handweavers at Villanova University, at the Cassatt Mansion in Berwyn, Pa., at the Delaware Art Museum, Delaware Center for Contemporary Arts and the Ware Gallery in Arden. Yabroff is a former member of the Delaware Art Museum's education committee and co-chairwoman of its craft fair.

While living in Kentucky, she had a one-woman show in Louisville and participated in the invitational Contemporary Fiber Art in Kentucky Show. She also exhibited at four Kentucky galleries.

Yabroff and her three daughters have won numerous ribbons for weaving submitted to the Kentucky State Fair. Yabroff keeps her ribbons hanging atop the floor loom in her home.

She said she finds weaving relaxing, and works at it as often as she can. "I go in spurts," she said.

Yabroff's home is tastefully decorated with her wall hangings and pillows as well as with the works of other artists with whom she trades.

Yabroff met her husband, Ronald, while both were students at Cornell. They were married in 1963 just after Yabroff received her undergraduate degree and Ronald, his doctorate in chemical engineering. He has been assigned to jobs in Tennessee, Kentucky and Delaware by the Du Pont Co.

The Yabroffs' daughters are Robin, 22, who works in scientific research at the University of Michigan; Ann, 21, a senior at Miami University of Ohio; and Jenny, 14, who attends Hanby Junior High School.

Art Exhibit Winners

The Morehead State University Regional High School Art Exhibition was displayed recently during High School Art Day. Entries from the many areas included in the Burley Coal Region were shown in the Claypool-Young Art Building on Morehead's campus. Sponsored and judged by the Kentucky Art Education Association, the exhibition project is supported in part by a grant from Kentucky Arts Council with funds from the National Endowment for the Arts and the Kentucky Department of Education.

Three ribbons were given in each category. In the painting division, Gary Samons, of Martin, placed second and is the son of Violet Samons. Tommy Gearheart was also second in the area of pen and ink. He is the son of Quinten and Lucie Gearheart, of Langley. Jeff Hughes, of Martin, placed third in the mixed media category. He is the son of Curt and Brenda Hughes.

Their works were submitted by Mrs. Caralita O'Quinn, art teacher at Allen Central.

Cuisine Minceur—

French Cooking That Makes Sense Today

From the American Institute for Cancer Research

For centuries, the "grande cuisine" of France—with its lavish dishes and rich sauces—has been the hallmark of fine dining. Yet with today's focus on healthy eating, French chefs have developed a new cooking regimen based on the idea that good taste does not require high levels of fat, cholesterol, sugar and salt.

The principles of this new "cuisine minceur" provide some excellent guidelines for preparing delicious, healthful meals in any language:

—Saving use of butter, cream, cheese and other high fat ingredients.

—Limited use of sugar, starches, eggs and alcohol (unless the alcohol content is evaporated).

—Elimination of rich sauces in favor of fresh herbs and natural juices to enhance the flavor of dishes.

—Using the freshest ingredients possible (for best flavor and nutrition).

—Modifying cooking techniques to limit fat—switching from sauteing in oil or fat to stir frying, roasting and steaming methods.

The following delicious, mild-flavored fish dish incorporates the principles of "cuisine minceur." If you prefer more highly flavored dishes, add some thyme or another herb. Serve with brown rice and a flavorful vegetable such as asparagus or broccoli.

POACHED FLOUNDER WITH MUSHROOMS

- 1/2 cup water
- 1 tsp. lemon juice
- 1 1/2 oz. package frozen flounder fillets, thawed just enough to separate
- 1/2 cup mushrooms, sliced
- 1/8 tsp. salt (optional)
- 1/4 tsp. nutmeg
- 1/2 tsp. paprika
- 2 tbsp. evaporated skim milk

Pour the water and lemon juice into a skillet and bring to a simmer. Separate the package of flounder fillets and place in the simmering water. Cover and let the fish poach for 3 minutes.

Remove the fish to a shallow baking dish. Simmer the liquid remaining in the skillet until it boils down to half. Add the sliced mushrooms and heat for 2 minutes. Stir in the evaporated milk, nutmeg and paprika (and salt if desired). Pour over the fillets and brown under a broiler for one minute or until the fish flakes easily with a fork.

This recipe yields 4 servings, with 90 calories and one gram of fat per serving.

The Spring volume of the AICR cookbook series, An Ounce of Prevention, is now available for a $6 donation to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. CB16, Washington, D.C. 20069.

The material in "Good Food/Good Health" is reviewed by Karen Collins, M.S., R.D., of the American Institute for Cancer Research, Washington, D.C. 20069.

Hearing And Speech Month Kicks Off May 3

Better Hearing and Speech Month will get underway officially May 3, in Washington, DC, and this year's Honorary Chairman is President Ronald Reagan. President Reagan was treated for a hearing loss and fitted with hearing aids in 1983.

Better Hearing and Speech Month is an annual event designed to increase awareness of hearing and speech disorders, and to educate the public about treatments available.

The Hearing Industries Association says to be alert to the signs of hearing loss in yourself and others. Do your friends or family members:

- Ask you regularly to repeat questions?
- Stand unusually close when you speak to them?
- Complain of ringing in the ear?
- Seem unusually argumentative?
- Have difficulty with telephone conversations?
- Have difficulty conversing in noisy rooms?

Any of these conditions may be a sign of hearing loss, which should be checked by a hearing health care professional.

BOOKS AND THINGS

By: TRISHA MORRIS, Librarian, Prestonsburg Community College

In remote and sparsely settled areas of Kentucky's early history, home treatment and self-medication in times of illness were the rule. The women were the doctors—they delivered babies, bound up wounds and treated fevers with local herbs and traditional remedies. The following books from the P.C.C. library tell the story of how women offered health care to Kentucky and to the world.

A Social History of the Frontier Nursing Service
By: Nancy Dammann

In 1925, Mary Breckinridge founded the Frontier Nursing Service in Leslie County, Kentucky. Her purpose was to demonstrate the feasibility of using nurse-midwives to deliver health care in a socially and economically deprived area. This book is the story of that service and, because it became her life work, a biography of its founder. Mary Breckinridge was raised in a distinguished southern family, schooled in Switzerland and married to a young attorney. It was after the early death of her husband and the later deaths of her two children from a second marriage that Ms. Breckinridge felt the need to bring medical care within the reach of everyone. Deprived of a normal family life with the children she wanted so badly, Ms. Breckinridge devoted the balance of her life to planning, organizing and administering the Frontier Nursing Service.

Malnutrition, anemia, hookworm, tuberculosis, typhoid, accidents and child birth were the most common health problems the new nursing service found. By 1930, they had built six outpost centers so that health care was no more than an hours horseback ride for any family in the area. From its beginnings led by Ms. Breckinridge to its leadership under Helen Browne and later Dr. W.B. Beasley, the Frontier Nursing Service is a tale of courage that is well told in this book.

Wide Neighborhoods
By: Mary Breckinridge

"Wide Neighborhoods" is an autobiography of a woman of vision and sound practical sense. Nothing in Mary Breckinridge's origins or upbringing had led her to guess that she would become one of the great nurses in history, following in the footsteps of Florence Nightingale and Clara Barton. Her great achievement lay in introducing to the United States the concept of the trained nurse-midwife, modeled on those of the British Isles, and in establishing a demonstration project of complete family health care in a remote rural area through the organization which she founded in 1925 and directed until her death in 1965—the Frontier Nursing Service.

With the motto, "...to safeguard the lives and health of mothers and children...to give skilled care to women in childbirth...to educate the population in hygiene and child care...(and) to advance the cause of health, social welfare and economic independence in rural districts with the help of their own leading citizens," Mary Breckinridge brought health care to the doorsteps of people in a rural southeastern Kentucky county and began the career which was to be her life. This is the story of her nurses and herself as only she could tell it.

Florence Nightingale
By: Elspeth Huxley

Known as the "Lady With the Lamp" and the "Heroine of the Crimean," Florence Nightingale is perhaps the most well-known nurse in history. Raised in luxury, Florence's vocation in the 19th century was not a profession allowed to daughters of the rich. But, feeling that she was called to serve by God, she turned down marriage and devoted herself to the study of medicine. In her mid-thirties she began her career as the superintendent of the "Establishment for Gentlewomen During Illness" and, during the Crimean War, was sent to head a team of 38 other nurses to minister to the English wounded. Finding a dirty, overcrowded hospital, she began by providing good diet, clean laundry and sanitary service for the sick and wounded. In six months she had reduced the death rate from 42% to 2%. The soldiers loved her and Longfellow immortalized her in poem.

Generously arrayed with drawings and photographs, this is a book of biographical information, inspiration and beauty.

History of Nursing

By: Josephine Dolan

From the care of the sick in primitive cultures to Mary Breckinridge's Frontier Nursing Service to Aerospace nursing, this book is a complete history of the profession of nursing throughout the world. Complemented by numerous pictures of noted figures and pictorial depictions of ancient treatments, this book is important reading for anyone wanting a world view of the subject.

MOREHEAD STATE'S UNIVERSITY'S Continuing Education Program for nursing and allied health professionals recently sponsored a workshop, Pediatric Assessment II, for nurses who practice in community health settings in Kentucky, such as local and district health departments. From left, Michael Sheets, nurse practitioner at the Frenchburg Clinic, instructed a session of the workshop which was attended by members of the Big Sandy District, Charlene Carrell, Thelma Laferty, and Brenda Moore, all of Prestonsburg, Neva McCartney, of Salyersville, and Terri Conley, of Paintsville.

Parents Who Care Communicate Better

Parents Who Care, a self-help group, is now recruiting members in Prestonsburg. PWC has been operating for two years and is open to any parents who desire better relationships with their children. Since April is National Child Abuse Prevention Month, the group hopes to gain new members for acquiring better parenting methods and helping to stamp out child abuse.

Alice Adams, co-sponsor of the group and her husband, Hugh, attended a workshop on Transactional Analysis April 8 and 9 at Morehead State University. The workshop was conducted by Dr. William Weikel, who was named Counselor of the Year last year. Adams is now using TA to help the parents in the group communicate better with each other and with their children.

"There are six ego states that we use any time we talk," she said, "all of which involve a part of us that is either parent, adult or child. Some of these are effective in getting what we want, while some are not. We're working with using effective voices and body language. Then we can obtain what we want, either from our family or from colleagues at work."

Parents Who Care meets one evening a week for two hours, and free childcare is provided. Members who do not drive can be picked up. To join, call Hugh or Alice Adams, 886-2265.

New Version of GED To Go Into Effect

A new version of the GED Test will go into effect statewide in Kentucky on Aug. 1.

The revised test includes a 200-word essay question designed to evaluate the examinee's ability to organize and present a written response to a topic of general interest.

By the end of 1988, the new test will be in use nationwide as well as in Canada and U.S. territories. Those taking the test will not need any specialized knowledge for the essay question and will have 45 minutes in which to write their essays.

Morehead State University offers GED testing daily on the main campus by appointment, according to Patty Eldridge, MSU testing coordinator. Eldridge's office is in Ginger Hall 501A and her telephone number is (606) 783-2526.

MSU also offers help in preparing for the GED, which is also known as the high school equivalency test, through its Adult Learning Center located on the corner of Tippet Avenue and Second Street, Morehead. Telephone: (606) 783-2871.

Preparation assistance also is available at the MSU-Morgan Center in West Liberty. Telephone: (606) 743-1500.

"We want to encourage anyone interested in taking the test this summer to begin preparing for it now," said Eldridge.

Shakerstown Retreat Scholarship Offered

Through the generosity of the Kentucky Quilt Project, the Kentucky Heritage Quilt Society offers its second scholarship for the annual Shakerstown Quilt Retreat to be held October 18-21. This retreat is offered each year as an opportunity for quiltmakers to expand their creative talents under the direction of nationally known instructors.

The scholarship should cover the cost of the seminar and room and board for the duration of the retreat. The winner is chosen on the basis of past involvement and future goals in quilting. Applicants must be Kentucky residents.

Jean Ray Laury, a California quiltmaker, teacher and author will be the instructor for Shakerstown '88. The program will be two-phased: during the morning participants will concentrate on color theory and afternoons will be devoted to clothing design.

Those interested in additional information or an application for the Shakerstown Quilt Retreat '88 scholarship should contact Betsy Hyslop, 177 Westwind Rd., Louisville, Ky. 40407. Phone 502-896-0800. Application deadline is June 1, 1988.

NWF Conservation Summits: Alternative Family Vacations

All too often, vacations are spent on noisy, crowded beaches, or behind the wheel through mile after mile of interstate highway. This summer, why not scan the horizon for breaching humpback whales, or walk along a woodland path in search of fossils or minerals? That's the alternative offered by the annual Conservation Summits, family vacations offered by the National Wildlife Federation (NWF).

For 18 years, the Federation has organized week-long retreats, offering all the ingredients of an ideal vacation: relaxation, recreation, and scenic beauty. In the process, participants can learn about nature from the country's most accomplished experts in conservation education: the National Wildlife Federation. This year's summits are being held in Bellingham, Washington; Brunswick, Maine; and the Rocky Mountains of Colorado.

Designed for the entire family to enjoy, the Conservation Summits provide parents and children alike with a wide range of activities during the day, while allowing them to spend evenings together.

"Summits are an exciting outdoor vacation, where each family member can explore a unique environment and make new discoveries about the natural world," says summit coordinator Steve Law.

This flexibility has made the summits increasingly popular among single adults, single-parent families and senior citizens. Grandparents bring their grandchildren, while singers can interact at the singles only mixer held on the opening day of each summit.

At the Maine Seacoast Summit, participants venture out to sea or along the rugged coastline. The Pacific Northwest Summit offers a similar mix of sea and land field trips, dividing its attractions between the Cascade Mountains and the San Juan Islands off the Washington coast.

The Colorado Rockies provide a majestic setting for the Rocky Mountain Summit, perhaps the most popular summit site. Just minutes from the Rocky Mountain National Park, this high country retreat offers spectacular views and an exciting array of wildlife. In the heart of the Rockies, cascading waterfalls and snowcapped peaks beckon exploration. Early morning wildlife watching provides an opportunity to observe elk, bighorn sheep, golden eagles and many more species in their natural habitat. The fragile ecosystem of the alpine tundra "land above the trees" presents incredible shows of life and color, as tiny flowers emerge from the frost.

At NWF Summits, programs are offered for everyone age 3 and older. Summit participants can create their own schedule, choosing from a wide variety of learning and recreational activities such as nature photography, birdwatching, hiking, or courses on ecology and environmental issues. Activities are led by outstanding instructors, each an expert in his or her field.

Teenagers can join programs designed especially for them, including outdoor skills training and wilderness excursions. Group interaction is enhanced by action-filled activities and a sense of adventure.

For youngsters ages 5-12, experienced naturalists prepare activities that combine outdoor games and educational nature explorations. And for Americans use about 80 million tons of paper products each year, or 600 pounds of paper products per person in 1986. Americans throw away 45 million tons of paper products each year.

preschoolers there is "Your Big Backyard Program," introducing them to nature through touch-and-feel expeditions and fun-with-nature games. The programs open up new frontiers for young children—and provide some relaxing free time for parents!

One of the most appealing aspects of Conservation Summits is that every participant has a chance to develop a closer relationship with nature. "Summits offer something for everyone who enjoys learning about nature through hands-on experience," says Law.

The 1988 Conservation Summits will be held in the Rocky Mountains, at Estes Park, Colo., July 3-9; on the Maine Seacoast, at Brunswick, Maine, July 31-August 6; and in the Pacific Northwest, at Bellingham, Wash., August 7-13.

The National Wildlife Federation is the nation's largest conservation organization, with more than 4.8 million members and supporters and 51 affiliate organizations nationwide. A private, not-for-profit organization, the Federation was founded in 1936.

Pres. Reagan Lends An Ear To Help Hearing Loss

When President Reagan first revealed that he wore hearing aids, not only was his hearing improved, but so was the hearing of millions of his fellow Americans. Because it was his announcement that inspired them to do something—many for the first time—about their own hearing loss.

That was in September 1983. In 1988, there could well be a similar response when President Reagan once again officially goes public about his hearing loss, this time as Honorary Chairman for Better Hearing and Speech Month, which gets underway with a kickoff celebration on May 3 in Washington, DC.

The President will be playing what could be one of the most important roles of his storied career, because many of the hard-of-hearing need encouragement to seek help. Family members, especially spouses, play the most critical role. But the President's willingness to act as a role model tells others that they need not fear the stigma that is incorrectly attached to hearing aids.

According to the Hearing Industries Association, which gathers statistics on hearing aids, only 25 percent of the over 20 million hearing-impaired people in the United States wear hearing aids—even though most of them could benefit greatly by wearing them. Of these non-owners, almost two-thirds had discussed their hearing difficulty with a family physician, and more than half of those individuals received no recommendation to use hearing aids—or were actually advised against it!

"Family physicians can and should play a vital role in advising and encouraging the hard-of-hearing to learn more about the hearing aid solution, because our surveys show that they are often the first person the patient will turn to," says Lane Burger, HIA's president. "Unfortunately, many doctors are not as aware as they might be about the technological advances made in hearing aids over the last 10 years or so."

President Regan's hearing aids, for example, each consist of a complex system of micro-miniature components in a package that is about the size of a marble. It was selected specifically for his mild to moderate hearing loss and the entire system fits inside his ear canal, according to Burger.

What can you do if you or someone close to you has a hearing loss? HIA recommends action just like President Reagan's: visit a hearing health care professional and have a hearing test. Then, if the test results indicate a treatable loss, try a hearing aid. The best that can happen is you will begin to enjoy the sounds of life again.

GARFIELD SLONE
For STATE REPRESENTATIVE
92ND DISTRICT
"Pathway To The Future"

I announced my candidacy in this paper a few weeks ago. Since then I've met many of you personally and I've enjoyed this very much. Hopefully, I'll be able to meet every one of you before the election—but in case I don't, I'll list the reasons I want to be your representative and some of the things I hope to accomplish.

I decided to become a candidate for this office because of the condition of the economy in our area and the direction in which our area appears to be headed.

In our area, we depend largely on coal to sustain our economy. In many instances it seems that large coal companies are destroying our land and leaving no positive effects behind; in fact, we are left with barren, unproductive hillsides and mountain tops. Furthermore, there is being little left in the way of tax dollars or lasting compensation for damages done to our land and road systems. This situation is being further compounded by small local coal interests being forced out of business.

This trend needs to be reversed, not only in the coal industry but other small local businesses also. We need to keep our jobs and money at home. We need to make our area more appealing, more presentable, and readily available to industries outside our area so they might move their businesses into our area. This would create new jobs and our young people wouldn't have to leave home to make a decent living.

I will do everything in my power to accomplish this, as well as keep the rising costs of utilities, insurance, etc., down—but keep the level of education up.

Some people say one man cannot make a difference. I say one man can make a difference. That man is Garfield Slone.

ADOPTING A DRUG POLICY

There are many Americans who suffer from rare diseases that can be treated with drugs. Because the disease affects so few people, however, drug manufacturers do not find it cost-effective to produce the drugs. Such drugs are called "orphan drugs". An orphan drug is defined as being able to treat or prevent a disease that affects fewer than 200,000 people. In 1985, the Orphan Drug Act was passed in an attempt to help people who would benefit from orphan drugs. It offers tax incentives to drug manufacturers that enable them to produce orphan drugs at a reasonable cost. Over one hundred orphan drugs are now being produced as a result of the law.

COOLEY APOTHECARY carries what you would expect to find in a well-inventoried drug store including whatever medications your physician may prescribe. # Driver Unhurt In River Plunge

A 16-year-old Auxier youth lost control of his car Saturday night, struck the corner of a house and ricocheted into the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River.

The accident occurred between the four-way stop at Lancer and the Goble-Roberts bridge at 11:50 p.m., Prestonsburg Police Sgt. Jeff Stumbo reported. "From what I could tell, he oversteered coming into the curve," Stumbo said. Neither drugs or alcohol were involved in the incident, according to police.

The driver, David Burchett, was able to climb out of his 1982 Toyota Tercel, which was overturned in the water. Stumbo said that he appeared confused and could not remember if any passengers were with him in the vehicle. Prestonsburg Fire Department diver Kenny Crisp searched the water-laden automobile for passengers but determined that the boy was alone. He was taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center where he was kept overnight for observation.

A.A.R.P. MEETS

The Jenny Wiley Chapter of the A.A.R.P. held its monthly dinner-meeting, Friday evening, April 15, at 6 p.m., at the dining room of Highlands Regional Medical Center. Orville Cooley, president, presided, led the group in prayer, and welcomed the guests. The Pledge of Allegiance to the American flag was said in unison.

The president presented "Certificates of Appreciation for Community Service" to these persons who were not in attendance when awards were presented recently to several other members. They were: Mesdames Garnett Fairchild, Sarah Laven, and Mildred (Honey) May, the latter in absentia.

Mrs. Eva Allen Hale gave a report on the "55 Alive" drivers' training course, which she and her husband, Harmon Hale, sponsored. She said their class, held recently, was the largest that had been held so far, and that, if enough interest was shown, another class would (possibly) be offered before this fall.

Arnold Moore gave a report on the recent income tax assistance he and several other members of the A.A.R.P. had given at the Floyd County Library to persons in need of this help.

Delmas Saunders announced that "Dues were due." City councilman, Bill Callihan, who was attending his first meeting, talked briefly.

The president read poems entitled "A Package of Seeds," and "A Mother's Letter to Her Son."

Mr. Cooley announced that Mr. Jack Freed, who was instrumental in organizing the local A.A.R.P., served as its president for a number of years, and remains a faithful member of the organization, and another active and long time member, Mrs. Myrtle Allen, were observing their birthdays. He presented each of them with a large, birthday card, signed by members of the group, and "Happy Birthday" was sung to them. The Rev. Tim Jessen, Mr. Freed's pastor, read a tribute to him. Also mentioned as observing a birthday was Mrs. Goldia Williams. Mrs. Sally Goble and Mrs. Irene Cooley served homemade cake and soft drinks in their honor following the dinner there.

The president presented Dr. Beecher L. Scutchfield, who, using a style similar to that of veterinarian James Herriot, author of such best-seller as "All Things Bright and Beautiful," "All Creatures Great and Small," "All Things Wise and Wonderful," and "The Lord God Made Them All," delighted the group with stories of animals he had "doctored" throughout his years of practice as a veterinarian, and referred occasionally to his father, the late Dr. Frank Scutchfield, who also served in this capacity.

An overflow crowd enjoyed the meeting, the program, the dinner, and the refreshments. These included: Orville Cooley, Gladys Cooley, Jimmy Goble, Marie Goble, Harmon Hale, Eva Hale, Sarah Laven, Russell Laven, Delmas Saunders, Edna Saunders, Jack Freed, Mollie Saunders, Docia Woods, Josephine Fields, Myrtle Allen, Bill Callihan, Hager White, Otela Smiley, Goldia Williams, Mae Martin, Lucy Regan, Grady Spradlin, Elva Spradlin, Herbert Spradlin, Sally Goble, Irene Cooley, Arnold Moore, Ruth Moore, Elizabeth Bailey, Dorothy Osborne, Glenn Anderson, Harry Holbrook, Russell Pack, Robert C. Evans, Ruth S. Evans, Garnett Fairchild, L.B. Fairchild, Christine Spradlin, Minnie Pearl Robinson, Rev. Tim Jessen, Dr. Beecher Scutchfield, Hurshal Skaggs and Angie Belle Skaggs.

Governor Promotes Victims Right Week

Gov. Wallace G. Wilkinson has proclaimed April 17-23 as Victims Rights Week in Kentucky and is urging all in the public and private sector to support the establishment and enforcement of victims rights and services.

"Our judicial system is built around dealing with the criminal. It is incumbent upon us to make sure that the rights and needs of victims are addressed," said the governor.

The Kentucky Justice Cabinet has announced that several activities are planned throughout the state that will focus attention on the needs of greater public awareness for the victims of crime.

In the last two years, Kentucky has received more than a million dollars from the Victims of Crime Act of 1984 (VOCA). The act, passed by Congress, is an attempt to encourage local and state governments, along with the private sector, to provide assistance for crime victims.

In 1986, VOCA provided $660,000 in federal funding in the form of grants to 28 agencies for direct assistance. Last year, an additional $497,000 was given for 17 grants.

According to Paula Freeman, program coordinator for the cabinet's Division of Grants, many communities across the state are beginning to develop services that previously did not exist. The programs have goals of providing strong advocacy and support for victims and families. Freeman says federal funding has been a vital part of getting the programs started and has gone a long way in maintaining vital services.

She adds however, that federal funding is limited in some cases and many concerned agencies across the state have been unable to secure the money to provide services to a certain area.

"The cabinet is hopeful that by spotlighting the needs of crime victims and their families, then the public and private sector will see the urgency of maintaining support for what has already begun in the state of Kentucky," said Freeman.

National Consumers Week To Focus On Client Service

Consumers Buy Service is the theme of the seventh annual National Consumers Week, April 24-30. Once again, hundreds of public and private organizations across the country will be using National Consumers Week to highlight events, programs and publications which give consumers the information and assistance they need to get the best value for their money in the marketplace. This year's theme recognizes the importance of quality service in both product and service industries to a healthy world economy.

"Our goal is to help bring back some good, old-fashioned customer service to all industries—those that offer services, those that manufacture products, and everyone in between," said Virginia H. Knauer, Special Adviser to the President for Consumer Affairs and Director of the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs, which sponsors the Presidentially-proclaimed week.

"Consumers want better service, and they're willing to reward those who provide it," Knauer said. "Nowadays, you can hardly go anywhere without finding consumers who are frustrated about the service they can't find. Our data show that businesses can make substantial profits by changing that, by seeking out and resolving consumer questions and problems effectively and efficiently. Every single employee needs to understand the competitive risk that lurks in believing that 'this job would be great if it weren't for all these darn customers.'"

"National Consumers Week gives businesses, trade associations, government offices and others an opportunity to 'toot their horn' about the customer service improvements they make," she said. "It reminds consumers that they have a right to choose those that offer the service, quality and value they deserve. Consumers do buy service."

Matthew Is Five

Matthew Lee Charles Tackett celebrated his fifth birthday February 12 at his home with a Mickey Mouse party. He is the son of Harold and Ruthann Tackett, of Prestonsburg.

Mayor Ann Latta City of Prestonsburg Municipal Building North Lake Drive Prestonsburg, Ky. 41653

Dear Mayor Latta:

This letter is to acknowledge my appreciation to the Prestonsburg Police Department and commend them for their actions with regard to the recent burglary at my home.

Due to the very competent and diligent efforts of many of the officers, the burglars were caught and most of my possessions returned within 24 hours.

The officers handled this case in a professional, courteous, and competent manner; and had it not been for their efforts I would have lost many family heirlooms which could not be replaced.

Due to the prompt action of these officers, several other burglaries were solved and the defendants have now been brought before the court. I am sure that their prompt action in the prosecution of these individuals will serve as a deterrent to others from committing crimes within the city.

At your earliest opportunity, please commend the Prestonsburg Police Department for their actions with regard to this matter.

Kentucky needs a rebellion of its people

By John Ed Pearce (for the Shakertown Roundtable)

The trouble with Kentucky is not only poverty of the pocketbook, but poverty of the spirit. Kentuckians have long been known as a proud people, proud of their state, its history, the beauty of its scenery, the courage and toughness of its people. That pride needs a transfusion.

If Kentuckians were as proud as they once were, they would not be content to be an also-ran among the states. They would be embarrassed to rank, year after year, at the bottom of the ladder, known for poor schools, dropouts, illiterate adults.

One problem is that there are two Kentuckys. The area bounded by

Shakertown Roundtable

Louisville, Lexington and Covington is relatively comfortable, progressive and prosperous. There are other pockets of progress - Owensboro - Henderson, Murray - Paducah, Bowling Green - Glasgow. But most of the rest of the state is in deep trouble, with little prospect of better days.

Not only is Kentucky falling behind the rest of the states, but its poorer counties are falling farther behind its richer ones. Almost a third of the counties are on the verge of bankruptcy.

The future appears to hold little hope for improvement unless Kentuckians make drastic changes in their way of doing things. But Kentuckians cling to their old, self-defeating ways. Their 120 counties often give them inefficient, costly government; consolidating them into fewer, bigger units would save money and give them better services, but they refuse to consolidate. The state constitution saddle them with offices and officials they don't need, and makes it harder to govern the state and its cities and counties, but they refuse repeated efforts to revise that constitution.

Kentucky schools are among the worst in the nation. Kentucky's children are not getting the education and training that will let them hold good jobs in the technological industry and global economy of tomorrow, when Kentuckians will be competing not only with other Americans but with Europeans and Asians. Yet Kentuckians refuse to regard seriously the urgent need for better schools. They cling to an educational system mired in spoils politics. They refuse to reform a system based on district school boards that are frequently more concerned with rewarding political friends than with preparing children for the challenge of a changing world. And they resist paying the taxes that are vital to an effective school system.

Politics and political corruption remain a curse, especially in small, rural counties that need decent government the most. Elections are bought and sold, dishonest people are voted into office and honest citizens, knowing that the elections are crooked and rigged, refuse to run for office. Weak election laws give the rich too much ability to buy their way into the highest offices. At all levels Kentucky government is bought and sold.

Recently a conference was held at Shakertown, called by the Shakertown Roundtable, a non-profit organization composed of public-spirited business, educational, and civic leaders from across the state. For months these people spent their own money, time and efforts studying Kentucky, its problems and its future. They heard reports from researchers, scholars and experts from many fields. And they came to a few basic conclusions:

Kentucky wants to be a first-class state, but it wants to pay second-class fare. It can't spend its way out of all of its troubles, but it can't solve those problems without more money than it now devotes to them.

Kentucky needs to decide what kind of world it wants to leave its children, and how it hopes to achieve that kind of world. As the saying goes, "If you don't know where you're going, it doesn't make any difference which road you take."

Kentucky needs a great rebellion of its people, a rebellion against the old, outmoded, inefficient ways of the past, a rebellion against backwardness and poverty and ignorance. But most of all it needs leadership, not only on the state level but in every town and county and county seat.

It needs leaders who will rally people to help themselves, to throw out crooked officials, to revamp the state and local tax structures and modernize the constitution. It needs leaders who will take an interest in the schools and see that they have enough money to educate today's children to function in tomorrow's world. It needs leaders whose concern is for their society and not their personal profit.

Kentucky has produced great leaders. Kentuckians were heroes of the frontier, leaders of the young nation. Kentucky furnished Presidents Abraham Lincoln to the Union and Jefferson Davis to the Confederacy. It has given the government of the United States leaders such as Henry Clay and John Crittenden, and in more recent times Alben Barkley, John Sherman Cooper and Earle Clements. Kentuckians have lighted the pages of history. Given the kind of leadership the times demand, they can do so again. But they have limited options, and limited time in which to act.

Twelfth of a series on the "State of the state" conference sponsored by the Shakertown Roundtable at Pleasant Hill, Mercer County, Nov. 8-9, 1987, Wilson W. Wyatt, conference chairman, Earl D. Wallace, Lexington, is chairman of the Roundtable, a non-profit, non-partisan study group. Al Smith is vice chairman.

Wild Plant Protection Stressed

We all agree that some animals should be protected, right? That's why we have hunting seasons—to protect the populations of game animals. We also agree that some nongame animals should be protected, like bald eagles. What about plants? Do you know any reasons why we should protect wild plants? Over half of our prescription drugs contain substances derived from plants (aspirin came from the willow), and yet only a fraction of the species of plants in the world have been analyzed for their medicinal properties—a darn good reason to protect wild plants!

Farmers should be particularly interested in protecting wild plants. Our major crops are constantly being genetically altered to keep them disease resistant and increasing in yields. Much of this genetic material comes from wild plants, the relatives of modern crops. Seeds from native prairie plants have been used to create stronger hybrids of domestic wheat. In Asia, new hybrids have been developed from a few weedy types of wild rice that have boosted the value of rice harvests by as much as $1.5 billion a year.

During the past several decades, research by plant geneticists and agronomists has enabled American farmers to produce over three times more corn per acre. Part of this increase is due to massive amounts of fertilizer and pesticides, but agricultural experts calculate that approximately three-fifths of the increase can be credited to the continuous redesign of corn's genetic composition. In 1970 as the result of a leaf-blight attack, a new variety of corn was developed by crossbreeding with a disease resistant species of corn originally from Mexico. Another new species of Mexican "wild" corn has been discovered that is a perennial and is already being crossbred with traditional corn, hopefully producing a perennial hybrid. If America's corn crop were a perennial, coming up each spring like daffodils, farmers would not have to plow and plant every year and would save about $300 million in diesel fuel. Most importantly, the wild corn is highly immune to at least four of eight major viruses and diseases that now cause $500 million in damage each year. There are similar stories about wheat, barley, tomatoes, oranges, and other modern crops.

With the increase in oil prices several years ago, scientists began looking at plants for sources of lubricants and oils. The U. S. Department of Agriculture recently screened 6,400 plants for new oils and waxes. They found 460 promising ones, including the buffalo gourd and the jojoba shrub of the deserts of northern Mexico and the American southwest. Wild plants have been found that can be used for manufacturing fibers, detergents, starches, and even improved golf balls.

We are still identifying new species in Kentucky. An exciting discovery from Lewis County several years ago was the Kentucky lady's-slipper orchid, an extremely large white lady's-slipper now known from at least ten counties in eastern Kentucky.

Wild species are invaluable resources, but we can derive few benefits from them unless we save space for them, natural habitats in which they can survive. We will be investing wisely in the future survival of all species, including our own. You can be a part of this most important protection effort by donating to the Nongame Wildlife/Natural Areas Fund when you file your state income taxes.

Its air-cooled 13.5 HP Kubota gasoline engine makes grooming large lawns easy. The G-Series tractors are the first of their size to be powered by a diesel engine. Five models from 10 to 16 horses run longer and use less fuel than any gas mower.

The tillers range from 2.2 to 7 horsepower and have air-cooled gasoline engines. There's also a diesel-powered tiller. The larger tillers have special counter-rotating tines that turn backwards to work hard-packed soil up from the roots.

Girl Scout Leaders Day Set April 22nd

History has shown us that effective civic, business and governmental leaders can move mountains for the common good. It has also shown us the adverse effect poor leaders can have on our lives.

One organization, the Girl Scouts, recognizes the need to prepare youth for the challenges ahead. The values, self-confidence and leadership skills gained through Girl Scouting will help girls make sound decisions on issues that affect all of us. An atmosphere of fun and friendship, combined with challenging activities, makes Girl Scouting the perfect training ground for tomorrow's leaders.

Girl Scout leaders, who are responsible for this vital learning process, will be honored April 22 nationwide. These leaders are adults who are committed to youth and who know the importance of guidance during the early years. They are remarkable women and men who juggle full business, social, academic and family lives and still find time to form partnerships with girls.

85 Years Old

Floyd Unemployed Rate Among Counties In Double Digits

Kentucky recorded a single-digit unemployment rate for the eleventh straight month in February, but new optimism among job-seekers coupled with fewer temporary and seasonal positions left the February rates in double digits in 83 of the state's 120 counties.

The jobless rate in the Big Sandy district, which includes Floyd, inched upward from a revised 14.5 percent in January to a preliminary 14.6 percent in February. Rates ranged from 11.7 percent in Martin county to 19.0 percent in Magoffin county, as all of the district's counties reported double-digit rates. Floyd county's rate stood at 12.6 percent.

Jobless rates in 74 counties were up from January, were lower in 37 counties, and in nine counties they were unchanged, according to a report on employment trends issued recently by the Cabinet for Human Resources.

However, compared to February 1987, 87 counties had lower rates, 32 counties had higher rates and one (Rowan County) recorded the same rate. Kentucky's chief labor market analyst, Ed Blackwell, said, "These figures only underscore the strong employment growth Kentucky has experienced during the past year. We haven't had single-digit unemployment this long since 1981."

"Many counties, especially those of larger populations and more employers, had a February influx of new job-seekers sensing improved opportunities to secure employment," he said. "This labor force growth at the time post-holiday retail jobs and outdoor-type positions declined did push February's rates up, but if you're looking at employment trends, it's still a very positive sign."

The 83 counties with jobless rates at 10.0 percent or above in February compared to 82 in January and 86 in February 1987. The preliminary statewide rate in February was 9.7 percent, up from a revised 9.5 percent in January, but down from 10.7 percent 12 months earlier.

Nationally, unemployment slipped from 6.3 percent in January to 6.2 percent in February. Comparable state and national rates are not seasonally adjusted.

In February, Trimble county had the lowest rate, 3.9 percent, followed by Fayette with 4.3 percent; Woodford with 4.4 percent; Shelby with 4.9 percent; Carroll and Kenton, each with 5.7 percent; and Franklin with 6.0 percent. Edmonson county's 29.4 percent rate was the highest, followed by Elliott's 26.5 percent; McCreary's 26.3 percent; Menifee's 23.8 percent; Morgan's 23.7 percent; Carter's 23.5 percent; and Wolfe's 23.3 percent.

Although the U.S. Department of Labor's estimate of Kentuckians working in February (1,538,200) was down 700 from January (1,538,900), it was 46,600 higher than the February 1987 figure (1,491,600).

Education jobs were up by 6,600 as hourly employees, especially college students, returned to the payrolls. (Labor force figures are based on employment and unemployment for the week that includes the 12th of any month.)

Jobs in the service category increased by 1,900 from January to February. Meanwhile, trade jobs were down by 3,400, agriculture by 1,600, construction by 1,100 and manufacturing by 300.

THE PICKY PANDA

Of the 20 bamboo varieties, the giant panda eats only five. And only certain parts of those plants at certain times. According to International Wildlife magazine, only bamboo stems are on the menu in spring. At other times, pandas prefer the leaves and shoots. Researchers believe the animal alters its diet because of seasonal changes in the parts of the plant that are most nutritious and taste the best.

We've taken a few lumps in our first year.

Breast lumps. Most are harmless, some are dangerous. Find them early and you reduce your risks of serious problems. At the Breast Center, we concentrate on early detection through state-of-the-art mammography and by teaching you breast self examination—BSE. Both approaches, along with regular professional exams, are necessary and effective in a comprehensive program of personal care for women.

On the left is the average size lump found by a woman untrained in BSE. In the center, is the average size lump found by women practicing regular BSE. On the right is the average size lump found by regular mammography.

The American Cancer Society recommends mammograms on a schedule that depends on your age, as follows:
Age 35-40 One baseline mammogram
Age 40-49 Every one or two years
Age 50-UP Every year

Plan a visit to the Breast Center now. We offer more than just mammography. We are the foremost comprehensive breast cancer detection and treatment center in the Big Sandy.

Over one thousand women have visited the Breast Center since its opening March 28, 1987.

Estimating America's Petroleum Resources

By STEPHEN P. CHAMBERLAIN
Director Exploration Affairs
American Petroleum Institute

How do you measure "something" that may be a mile or more underground—that you can't see and aren't sure exists?

That's what petroleum geologists have to do when they try to predict crude oil or natural gas resources—whether it's for a small area or for the entire United States. And what complicates the matter more is that two geologists, using exactly the same data, may arrive at significantly different conclusions.

Nevertheless, such estimates are necessary, not only for the oil companies, who rely on them when making decisions on where to invest their exploration and production funds, but also for the government, which manages the resources under its lands, makes decisions on leasing and establishes national energy policies.

With America's dependence on foreign oil growing—it has reached 40 percent of the oil we use daily—those decisions are critical to the nation's economic and energy future.

But, before getting into how much estimates are made, perhaps it would be wise to dispel a few myths.

First, oil isn't found in vast underground lakes; it's usually found in the small spaces that form the pores between the grains in rocks, such as sandstone.

Second, oil and natural gas aren't found everywhere; the deposits are site-specific. Petroleum that exists today formed over millions of years, and migrated through the source rock (where it was formed) into a reservoir rock (where it was trapped and accumulated). Now it must be found and produced.

Third, small fields—those containing less than a million barrels of oil—are, in fact, very important; they account for 40 percent of the oil produced in the United States. Thus, it's the total amount of oil available from all the fields that counts, not how many days' worth of oil an individual field can contribute.

Finding oil or gas—in large or small fields—is a highly complex and chancy task. So, where does the search begin?

If a substantial number of wells have been drilled in the area, data from those wells can provide important information about the underground structures of the geologic area of interest, the kinds and capacity of the rock to hold and release petroleum, how much oil and gas may be in the reservoir, and how easily that oil or gas can be produced. In previously unexplored areas, the task is much more difficult. In 1986, for example, only 14 percent of the wells drilled in such areas proved successful; or, to put it another way, nearly 86 percent of these "wildcats" wells found no producible oil or gas.

Rock formations on the surface are checked for any indication that source or reservoir rocks underlie the surface. Measurements are taken from the surface of the magnetic and gravitational "pull" of the rocks below to help identify their type, density, thickness and depth. The area is then surveyed with a seismograph, which uses sound waves to create a graph of the underlying geological structures.

Armed with this information, the geologist compares the findings with data from other areas with similar characteristics to determine the petroleum discovery and production rates and the oil and natural gas potential of those other areas. A "risk" factor is then assigned to the area being assessed to try to evaluate the chances of finding petroleum and to estimate how much and where oil and gas may exist there. If the data look good—that is, better than the data from other prospective areas—the oil company may decide to drill one or more exploratory wells.

Despite the many manhours put into such an estimate, predictions by both industry and government geologists can miss the mark by a country mile. Years ago, it was predicted that there was little or no oil to be found in Kansas, Texas and California—all of which are now major oil-producing states. Other predictions asserted that the country would run out of oil in "the next" 10 or 20 or 30 years—and each of these estimates turned out wrong, as more oil and gas were found where it was originally believed not to exist.

Nevertheless, the inexact science of resource estimating is an important tool. As new "measuring" methods are developed and estimates become more accurate, the government will be better able to set national energy policies and lease its land, and the oil companies will be better able to find and produce the oil and natural gas that will be needed to meet future petroleum demand.

Kalember plays parents' ally in 'Little Girl Lost'

By Wendy Wallace

"This was one of the hardest and most heart-breaking roles I've ever done," says Patricia Kalember of her latest project, "Little Girl Lost," an ABC movie airing Monday, April 25. "The battle to make it as human as possible became an interesting feat for me. But because it was so well written, it got easier."

Patricia Kalember

In the movie, based on a true story, Kalember plays Andrea Neuman, a television news reporter who learns of the plight of Clara and Tim Brady (Tess Harper and Frederic Forrest) and their foster child Tella (Marie Martin). The Bradys, who have opened their home and hearts to the young girl, become determined to adopt her after she admits that she was molested by her real father. But when a social-service caseworker questions the child's allegations, the Bradys undergo a long and uncertain custody battle in which their only ally is Neuman. "I had visions of Andrea from the way the dialogue was written," Kalember says. "And when I finally met the real woman I play, she was so warm and supportive. If she saw something technically wrong, she would talk about it. But as far as the acting went, she just let me go."

Born in Schenectady, N.Y., Kalember grew up in Louisville, Ky., and studied drama at Indiana University. A nominee for the Outer Critics Circle Award in 1984 for her performance in "The Foreigner," her New York stage credits also include "The Butler Did It," "Playboy of the Western World," "The Miser" and "Two Gentleman of Verona." Her TV work includes the pilot episode of "The Equalizer," the daytime drama "Loving" and the title role in the 1986 series "Kay O'Brien." And now she is starring as editor Joanna Farrell in the ABC comedy "Just in Time."

"It's a solid, simple, straightforward romantic comedy about two rather interesting and hopefully likable people," says Kalember of the series. "The thing I like about Joanna is that she's not this solid-as-a-rock kind of character. She's on the dippy side, which I enjoy. The great fun is watching the rug get pulled out from under her."

"My co-star, Tim Mathe-son, and Fred Barron, who is the executive producer with Tim, have been very clear about the characters," she adds. "So if anyone is responsible for the show, they are. I don't have to worry about a thing except making it work. I have the easy side of the deal."

APRIL MORNING

Chad Lowe (foreground), Tommy Lee Jones (l.) and Robert Urich star in "April Morning," a "Hallmark Hall of Fame" movie about the battle of Lexington, which precipitated the American Revolution. It airs SUNDAY, APRIL 24 on CBS.

FAB VIEW

'Codename: Kyril' is just an adequate spy thriller

By Denise Gorga

Showtime's four-hour spy thriller "Codename: Kyril," which airs in two parts on Sunday, April 24, has its share of duplicitous characters, convoluted accents, suspenseful chase scenes and double-crossing agents.

Edward Woodward

Top billing goes to Edward Woodward, who makes matronly couch potatoes swoon on CBS's "The Equalizer." However, Woodward is not, as you might expect, the character referred to in the title. Kyril, a code name for Soviet agent Ivan Bucharensky, is played by Ian Charleson ("Chariots of Fire"). He is secretly ordered by Marshal Stanov (Peter Vaughn) to defect to London and draw out a double agent named Loshkevov (John McEnery), who knows the identity of a high-ranking traitor in Moscow Central (Denholm Elliott). A simultaneous chase ensues, as both the Soviet and British intelligence agencies try to trap and kill the dangerous agent.

Woodward plays Michael Royston, the London Station chief of MI6, the British equivalent of the CIA. The role of the effortlessly cool investigator - who battles his former smoking habit by compulsively masticating unlit cigarettes, much as Kojak did with lollipops - is perfect for Woodward. In a bow tie and impeccably tailored black suit, he doesn't seem to walk as much as glide from one high-security office to another.
"Equalizer" fans, though, may find it hard to accept the dapper Woodward in his new role: bad guy. Indeed, we soon learn that Royston is the KGB's informant in British intelligence. And without good-guy motivations, his polish is just a sign of superficiality.
While most spy thrillers don't bother to develop their characters emotionally, "Codename: Kyril" makes a half-hearted attempt to do so. Near the end of part one, Kyril changes from a Soviet spy machine into a thinking, feeling human being. He reunites with an old girlfriend (Catherine Neilson) and develops a touching relationship with a blind man (Charles Simon).
The character's emotional side develops too late, however, as the girlfriend and the blind man, are both brutally killed. It also develops too late to make "Codename: Kyril" anything more than an adequate thriller.

MARQUEE

BEETLEJUICE (PG - Warner Bros.) Starring Michael Keaton. ★★

By J.T. YURKO

"Beetlejuice," an occult comedy starring Michael Keaton, tries to revive the genre's usual interest in ghosts, exorcisms and life after death. But by leaning on special effects, director Tim Burton ("Pee-wee's Big Adventure") weighs down the film's spirited premise.

The film inverts expectations by playing on the clichés of the horror film—a haunted house, for instance. But the couple who haunt it (Alec Baldwin and Geena Davis) are content to spend eternity wafting around in a merry state of disembodiment. Who wouldn't be? After all, they don't have any mortgage payments to worry about.

Soon, though, a yuppie married couple (Jeffrey Jones and Catherine O'Hara) from New York become the new owners. Their idea of interior decorating is to turn New England pastoral into SoHo hallucinogenic. Thus the film's conceit: The ghostly couple wants to exorcise the human couple from their home.

One might think that this shouldn't be all that difficult. After all, ghosts and spirits can be frightening. But alas, these ghosts are out of luck. The trendy New Yorkers decide that a haunted house is just what the urban intelligentsia are looking for. So the ghostly couple turn for aid to Beetlejuice (Michael Keaton), a "free-lance bio-exorcist," hoping to drive out the new residents. But Beetlejuice (the name comes from the demon's real name, Betelgeuse) turns out to be more troublesome than anyone—living or dead—imagined.

Here's a plot that sounds better than it is; here's a movie that looks better than it is. The special effects are often remarkable, but the inane script wanders around looking for a pretext for the next effect. For a while, curiosity keeps you in your chair; but eventually that appeal wears thin. Keaton, though, tries his best. Like Richard Pryor, he should hire a new script consultant, to assure that he won't stumble into more roles like this.

SOAP BEAN

'Hope' writers heralded; misfortune for Loring

By Marie Michaels
 "Ryan's Hope" 's co-head writers, Claire Labine and her daughter Eleanor Mancusi, are keeping up the soap's winning ways. They and the rest of the show's writing team were recently honored by the Writers Guild of America for their "outstanding achievement in daytime serial writing." Labine, who created "RH" in 1975 with Paul Avila Mayer, has earned nine previous Writers Guild Awards and eight Daytime Emmys.

Gloria Loring
 • We're sad to report that Gloria Loring, who played Liz Curtis on "Days of Our Lives," recently suffered a miscarriage. Loring and her fiancé, Christopher Beaumont (she's divorced from "Growing Pains" star Alan Thicke), planned to get married in March, but postponed the wedding until summer.
 • Laura Carrington, who plays Simone Hardy on "General Hospital," has taken leave while awaiting the birth of her first child, due next month. Meanwhile, Simone, who miscarried in the story line, has gone on a cruise with her mother. While Simone is at sea, her husband, Tom Hardy (David Wallace), will receive ship-to-shore phone calls from her.

 • "General Hospital" celebrated its silver anniversary last Friday with a birthday bash held at Hollywood's Coconut Grove. We hear that the guest list ran to 800 names or so.
 • "All My Children" has signed Stan Albers to play Josh, the buddy of Charlie Brent (Robert Duncan McNeill). Albers played Pearlman on "Guiding Light" and Michael Young on "Another World," but this is his first recurring role.
 Also new to "AMC" is Roberta Maxwell, who plays Judith Alan, the nanny that Erica Montgomery (Susan Lucci) has hired to take care of her infant daughter, Bianca.
 And while we're on the subject of "AMC," the kitten that caused Natalie Cortlandt trouble a few weeks ago is really named Lady, and is owned by Kate Collins, who plays Natalie. Lady is one of two cats Collins adopted from the Bide-A-Wee shelter in Manhattan.
 • We've been hearing rumors that Robert Thaler, who lends comic relief to "Santa Barbara" as Pearl, may leave the soap when his contract comes up for renewal next month.

Expressive Art Therapy For Children Invaluable In Hospice Care

Hospice of Louisville, Inc., is an organization dedicated to the care of terminally ill patients and their families. Hospice care is a comprehensive home care program which provides all reasonable and necessary medical and support services for the management of terminal illness.

Kosair Charities Centre, 982 Eastern Parkway in Louisville, is home to Hospice of Louisville, the first hospice established in Kentucky. Much of the money used to pay for care for terminally ill children comes through grants to the Pediatric Program from Kosair Charities.

children cope with emotional and physical fears, solve problems, restore self-image, communicate and test reality. As well as confronting problems, play stimulates intellectual growth, reaffirms identity, shows others and the patient that he or she is still a living and functioning person, and restores normal aspects of living.

A child should be treated as a whole human being dealing with physical, spiritual, emotional, social and psychological ills viewed as one. Children facing the death of a family member or dealing with their own life-threatening illness have a difficult road to travel. An art therapist can anticipate some of these stresses and hopefully, help the family travel the road with fewer pitfalls.

One way in which Hospice of Louisville helps children is through Expressive Art Therapy. Expressive therapy is offered to families who have children facing the death of a family member, parent, sibling or grandparent. It also offers emotional support to children dealing with their own life-threatening illnesses. Children often have problems understanding their emotions, making verbalizing them difficult. Art therapy can constructively channel anxiety, fear, anger, stress and depression. Art and play offer the child the opportunity to work through some of the anxieties involving serious illness and an impending death. Through drawing, which provides some distance, children can expose these threatening emotions, symbolically expressing unspoken or unconscious concerns. Drawing can be a nonverbal way of communicating, which is not as risky as a verbal exchange. If the child wishes to acknowledge and discuss feelings, he or she is encouraged to talk about them.

Through art, children can manipulate materials. They can regain a sense of control, feel more independent and competent in their abilities and release tension by channeling energy through sublimation.

Play has proven to be an important aspect of children's mental health. Art therapists can aid children in self-exploration and communication through play. Play helps

Mow The Grass Not The Toes, Expert Says

While Kentuckians can't avoid the perennial lawn mowing season, they can avoid the more than 1,000 mower-related injuries estimated to occur in the state every year.

In 1987, an estimated 1,217 mower-related injuries occurred in Kentucky, as compared to 1,349 in 1986 and 1,130 in 1985, according to the Department for Health Services. The figures are based on emergency room data from a random sampling of several Kentucky hospitals. The numbers do not include injuries treated by private physicians or clinics.

"Most people look at lawn mowing as a routine chore that they don't like but have to do anyway," said E.P. Conyers, consumer product safety branch manager. "They might get complacent about the work or might get in a hurry to get the job done."

"If people would stop and think about the power mower every time they used it, they would probably be a little more careful," he said. "For example, some mower blades revolve at the equivalent of 200 miles per hour and can easily take off a finger or toe and even hands and feet."

Safety features required on mowers manufactured since 1982 could have an impact on the number of injuries once newer mowers replace older models, he said. Such features include discharge chutes designed to throw loose objects toward the ground rather than outward and the "dead-man switch," which stops the rotating blades within three seconds if the operator lets go of the handle.

"If operating an older machine without the 'dead-man switch,'" said Conyers, "turn the mower off and wait until the blades have completely stopped before clearing the discharge chute, or you might find yourself severely cut."

Operators can be burned if they touch the mower's muffler or motor, which get very hot during mowing. Conyers warns that gasoline should be added to mowers only when the motor is turned off and is cool—this is to avoid explosions. And cigarettes should be put out before adding fuel.

While operators must be careful, safety precautions are important for everyone in the mowing area.

"Rocks or sticks can be sent hurtling across the yard when using an older model," Conyers said. "These objects are flung with such force that they can bruise, cut or even put out an eye."

"Small children should be kept away from power mowers and out of the area being mowed," he said. "Everyone should make sure that they're away from the discharge chute side of the mower."

To further protect the operator and others in the yard, walk through the yard before mowing to pick up stones, wire, toys, dog bones—anything that the mower might throw.

Conyers reminds parents that small children should not operate power mowers—neither the walking variety nor riding mowers.

"Children should never ride with adults on riding lawn mowers," he said. "These machines are made for one person at a time, and it's dangerous for even a small child to join an adult on a riding mower."

A frequent accident with riding mowers is tipping over on slopes. To avoid this Conyers advises going up and down hills on riding mowers. Walking mowers should go across slopes.

Conyers further advises to wear close-fitting clothes and sturdy, non-slip shoes when mowing. Wet grass should not be mowed because of the possibility of slipping under the mower.

Seniors Face New Start To Half-Old Season

First it was the weather. Then came the senior trip, and then the rains returned. It's almost like starting over, like opening day again, but now the season is half over and time to prepare has long passed by.

"It's exactly like it," Allen Central coach Donnie Daniels said of the remainder of the season. "The way I look at it, they played a couple scrimmage games and that's it."

Daniels, who relies heavily on the talents of senior starters, finds himself in the same situation as other coaches in the county, facing the task of re-acquainting his seniors with the current baseball season.

"It will put them behind. They've seen live pitching in only one game so their timing and eye will be off. Hopefully, we can get some games in from now until district time so they can get their timing and everything down." Junior Newsome, whose seniors played only one game, said of his Betsy Layne upper classmen.

At the beginning of the baseball year rain prevented Betsy Layne from starting their season as scheduled, and as a result, the Bobcats played only one game, a loss at Pikeville, with their full squad.

Allen Central, a team that starts four seniors, got only two games in before the seniors embarked of their 10-day trek to Florida.

"They need some games under their belts," Daniels said. "It puts them behind. I could stand them being gone three or four days, go down and have a good time and come on back. You can schedule around that, but being gone 10 days hurts them a lot."

On Monday, the seniors' first day back, rain again brought a halt to play and postponed another day their chance of gaining much needed game experience.

Only 19 days remain in the regular baseball season, and the Bobcats, regarded as one of the 15th region's top teams, have only 17 games left. Over half of their season has been completed and only one game has been played with their full speed.

"You like to play with a full squad," Newsome said. "It's a short season anyway so you want to get all the games in that you can."

"We got three or four days of practice in and played the one game at Pikeville so it will be kind of like starting over for them."

Like Betsy Layne, Allen Central is regarded as one of the seven or eight teams expected to battle for a regional championship. But the Rebels, who had three early season games rained out, have played two games with their full squad, and their pitching ace, Nathan Shelton, has worked in only one game.

And then there is Prestonsburg. The Blackcats have been said by some to have the best team in the 15th region. Others prefer to list them third in the district behind Betsy Layne and Allen Central.

Prestonsburg had only one starter, outfielder Johnny Ray Harris, gone during the 10-day senior trip, and Donnie Daniels says that might help Russell Shepherd and the Blackcats during the next couple weeks.

"It will help," Daniels said. "He's got more time in with his players and he's probably got more harmony on his team. I don't think it will help where conditioning is concerned, but as far as hand-eye coordination goes, ground balls and things like that, there's nothing like game situations. They've been playing games while my kids have been on the beach."

But one of those games was a loss to Betsy Layne. The Bobcats threw their ace, Duran Newsome, giving him work that senior pitchers will not benefit from.

Joey Griffith, Prestonsburg's only senior pitcher, did not go on his senior trip, and enjoyed several multiple hit games while also keeping his arm in shape.

The Bobcats also beat Allen Central with their five seniors game, but lost to McDowell and fell twice to Sheldon Clark. With their starting catcher, center fielder, and two pitchers away, some of those games, according to Newsome, may have had a different outcome.

When the final records are viewed, the loss column might add up to a few more losses than would have normally occurred. But none of the teams balked at playing games with a team consisting of underclassmen.

"We played, with the exception of Brad Hall, with our team for next year. They didn't do badly and the future looks good here. We've got a lot of young talent," Newsome said.

Betsy Layne finished the past nine games with a 5-4 record. Hall, a senior who stayed to play baseball, was the only senior playing for the Bobcats in those nine games.

If the weather cooperates, baseball is expected to return to normal, with familiar seniors performing their roles through leadership and performance, today.

Russell Shepherd and Donnie Daniels will not throw their aces against county competition, and the returning starters will re-begin their hitting, fielding and throwing as the season winds down to its district tournament climax.

The stars of tomorrow gave us an idea of what the future might hold, but now it's time for the heroes of today to resume their roles. The seniors are back, and now coaches are hoping for some sunny days.

Six Run Inning Sends McDowell Past Bobcats

While Betsy Layne jumped out to an early lead, with Adam Gearheart pitched four and one-third innings of shutout baseball, McDowell put on a show of their own last Tuesday at Allen Park.

The Daredevils, behind two home-runs, scored six runs in the third inning off loser Chad Hamilton to erase a 3-1 deficit. The final score was 8-6.

The win was McDowell's first of the season, and Betsy Layne's second defeat against county competition. The Bobcats had a lead until the third inning when McDowell scored six runs, knocking Hamilton from the game and taking a lead they never gave up. Although Betsy Layne reached Daredevil starter Henry Webb for eight hits, two of them over the fence variety, they failed to get the big hit when they needed it the most, especially in the later innings.

The Bobcats stranded four runners in the final three innings, and gave McDowell an unearned run in the top of the seventh, upping their advantage to two. Pitcher Andy Webb and his defense took care of the rest. The junior right-hander went the distance in recording the victory, giving up one walk while striking out one. Five of the six runs were earned.

Betsy Layne, playing without five seniors, took a 3-1 lead in the second inning when Kevin Spurlock led the inning off with a homerun over the left field fence. Craig Hunter, running for Chad Hamilton, who had singled, scored on a deep fly ball off the bat of Cotton Parsons, and the Bobcats found themselves in a comfortable position.

But McDowell didn't let them rest any. The Daredevils broke out some potent bats of their own. When they were finally silenced they had taken a 7-3 lead. After the first two batters had reached base in the top of the third, Darrell Goble grounded into a force play, giving McDowell only two outs to work with. But as it turned out they didn't need that many outs, just a couple big swings.

Following Goble's grounder, Mike McQuate doubled to score Webb, who had singled. With runners on second and third, Dickie Joe Shannon hit a home run off a Chad Hamilton fastball, giving McDowell a 5-3 advantage. And it wasn't over yet. John Crisp followed Shannon's blast with a walk, and rode home when Keith Shelton lined another homerun over the left field fence.

That brought Junior Newsome out of the dugout. The Betsy Layne coach relieved Hamilton with Gearheart, a right hander. McDowell did not score again until they got an unearned run in the top of the seventh. Gearheart gave up only three hits and struck out five in his four and two-thirds innings of work.

Keith Hall, in the bottom of the third, rallied the Bobcats with an opposite field homerun to right, but Betsy Layne could overcome the McDowell lead.

Hall's blast cut the deficit to three runs, and in the bottom of the fifth the Bobcats scored twice more to make it a one run affair.

Gearheart got the scoring inning underway with a bloop single to center, and, after stealing second, scored on a Barry Hamilton single. Hamilton later scored when Kevin Spurlock hit a ground ball to third with the bases loaded.

Hamilton scored when he beat Dickie Joe Shannon's throw to the plate, cutting the lead to one, but McDowell caught Brad Hall in a rundown and got out of the inning with the lead when Larry Hall struck out.

The Daredevils again avoided a Betsy Layne scoring opportunity in the sixth inning, helped out by a batted ball and a runner colliding between second and third. Keith Mulkey, who had singled and stole second, was trying to go to third on a grounder hit to short, but he was called out after being hit by the batted ball. Parsons, the batter, reached first and stole second, but was left there when Gearheart and Hamilton popped up and grounded out respectively.

In the top of the seventh McDowell added an insurance run as Keith Shelton reached on an error and scored on a double by Brent Rose. It looked as if they were going to need it too. Duran Newsome, leading the bottom of the seventh off, reached on an error, and went to third on a wild pickoff throw. But when the game ended Newsome was still on third. Brad Hall and Kevin Spurlock each grounded out, and inbetween Keith Hall had fled out to right.

The Daredevils had held on for the 8-6 win. It was the first time the Daredevils had beaten Betsy Layne since the 1985 season.

SHORT SPORTS

First he became a Kentucky Wildcat, fulfilling a boyhood dream. Then he was voted as the best player in Kentucky, being named as the state's Mr. Basketball winner. All of this came in a span of three days—not a bad stretch for former Clay County High School basketball star Ritchie Farmer.

Farmer, who made five straight trips to the state tournament, signed a national letter of intent with UK Wednesday, and was named Saturday as Kentucky's Mr. Basketball, voted on by the state's coaches. At UK, Farmer will become the third Mr. Basketball winner on the Wildcat's current roster. He will join former winners, John Pelphrey and Rex Chapman, winners the past two years.

Farmer averaged over 27 points and eight assists per game this past year while leading the Tigers to a 32-2 record and a state tournament runner-up finish. (Continued on Next Page)

The Sporting Times

Odd, isn't it, that in a world filled with hunger and violence, where AIDS and drug addiction threaten a total population, a simple package containing a few 50 dollar bills could strike fear into millions. Surprising, isn't it, that a Los Angeles teenager, not involved in gang warfare or drug dealings, could cause so much controversy through a special talent to perform a sport. But it isn't odd, not even surprising when we consider the score, and its impact on what has become one of the biggest businesses in America. Don't forget, we're talking about the University of Kentucky and college basketball.

When the infamous package, supposedly containing 1000 dollars, accidentally came open last month, and media people across the nation made it public knowledge, Wildcat fans were stricken with terror.

The Los Angeles Daily News, which broke the story, thought they had found a fountain of youth, a cure for heart disease and cancer, and a new food source to supply the world. But actually, what the information told was that an assistant basketball coach from Kentucky may have sent money to a man in Los Angeles. But college basketball just happened to be involved and the intended receiver just happened to have a son who signed with UK last November. Wrongdoing was immediately suspected, and why not? Several former players have already admitted to receiving money at the school while playing basketball. But that was from green-happy alumni. This came from the basketball monster itself, or so said the return address.

Much can be said for and against the case of Dwane Casey sending money to Chris Mills' father. And during the course of an NCAA investigation it probably will be, but why should it be? Certainly it should be controlled, this thing called recruiting. The NCAA has laid down guidelines to be followed, and they hand out penalties when they aren't.

But hasn't it gone too far to be corrected now? Isn't college basketball bigger than the ruling body? Would, if they even could, the NCAA risk millions of dollars in losses just to suspend a school over one thousand? The University of Kentucky, and many more just like it, make upwards of 10 million dollars from their basketball programs through trips to the NCAA tournament, special donations, and 23,000 fans every game. This may be where the oddity lies. It's funny how a school can receive all this financial support, allow everyone else to benefit from it, and turn the players away hungry.

According to guide lines, this is the way it goes. A program's backer could take a student out to lunch, unless, of course, that student is also an athlete.

Charles Barkley, formerly of Auburn University and now with the NBA's Philadelphia 76ers, has often admitted to accepting money while at Auburn. He defends his actions by saying, "I deserved it. A lot of people paid to see the little fat man dunk over people." But every paying player isn't the real issue here

The power of the game, and the influence it has on society is

Where money is involved, controversy will pop up, and college basketball is one of the more financially secure businesses in America.

It goes without saying that in order to get a fair share of the dividends, being fair in all dealings may be impossible. The top name players bring in the big bucks by filling the stands and reaching post season tournaments.

The two dollar question is, "how do schools attract the quality of players that will attract the quality bucks that surrounds this sport?"

It takes money to make money. Maybe this statement goes beyond the world of big business. Or just maybe college basketball is more business than sport with its objective focusing on financial numbers rather than fun and exercise for a group of amateur athletes. And maybe colleges have decided that the possibility of putting money back into the business in the form of player payments is the most profitable means of keeping the business afloat.

It happens, and more often than the public knows. NCAA rules are broken as often as a weather change in March, and punishment is a rarity. Several players now in the professional ranks admit to receiving financial compensation while in college.

Schools such as Clemson, Southern Methodist, and UK have had their football programs placed on probation. Now Oklahoma is under investigation for gridiron irregularities. But major penalties rarely find their way to major college basketball programs. And just because 1,000 dollars was reportedly found in a package sent from Dwane Casey to Claude Mills doesn't mean that one will come the Wildcats' way. And it doesn't mean one should.

It seems a bit strange that a package of that sort would suddenly split open. It is even a bit more than shady that Casey would put his return address on something that could lead to his firing and a suspension for the university. Several people not associated with UK have mentioned a possible setup. But for whom? Does greed and pressure really dominate the college ranks that much?

It's scary to think that recruiting of high school players has resorted to which ever team can get dirt on the other. This scandal could have greatly curtailed UK's chances of landing further prospects. Only time and the ongoing investigation will bring out the truth, and unfortunately even they may not get the total story. Money and material things appear to be the newest weapon in the recruiting war. They are both said to be illegal, but it has now gone too far to be corrected.

College basketball is a money making project for all those involved, and has lately become a developing ground for professional basketball. Pressure to win is the big reason to succeed at all costs, but somewhere along the line good faith and common decency need to make an appearance for the good of all college athletes.

TAKING A SWIPE: McDowell's Dickie Joe Shannon shows off the swing that produced a 3-run homerun against Betsy Layne.

Magoffin County Downs McDowell, Prestonsburg

The Magoffin County Hornets have been described as a contender for the 15th region title. Last Wednesday night they proved that some of the praise might be on target.

Although their record is an unimpressive 2-5 record, with two decisive losses to Paintsville, the Hornets left two wins richer, defeating McDowell, 13-3, and Prestonsburg, 11-8, in a variation of the traditional double header.

Magoffin County has possibly the most effective right hander in the region in senior Greg Cole. The lanky flame thrower has been clocked at 85 miles per hour, and Wednesday afternoon he threw fastballs and an occasional curve to defeat McDowell, 13-3.

Although the Daredevils scored three runs, none were earned, and they recorded only two hits in a game that ended after five innings. Cole struck out 12 batters and walked three in route to his second win of the season.

While Cole was mowing down McDowell hitters, Johnny Ray Turner could only look on in envy. The Daredevil head coach said last week that he was just going through his team: trying to find out who could pitch. So far it's been a painful search.

Turner says he feels confident in his team's defensive and offensive capabilities, but after his first two hurlers, the pitching is thin. However, Turner may have found an up and coming prospect in sophomore righthander, Jamie Martin. Martin showed promise Wednesday. When Martin tired in the fifth inning, McDowell saw the game quickly slip away.

The Daredevils trailed 7-3 going into the final frame. The game was put out of reach when eight walks lead to eight runs. When McDowell didn't score in the bottom half of the inning, the game was called due to the 10-run mercy rule.

Martin had given up seven runs, but only four hits to that point. Control had been his enemy, with five walks in the first four innings. Lack of control led to his being taken out.

Magoffin County scored two runs in the first on three hits, but McDowell came back with one of their own in the bottom half of the opening frame when Henry Webb reached on an error, and later scored on a passed ball. But the Hornets kept the pressure on, scoring three runs in the second on a three-run homerun off the bat of third baseman Scott Arnett. They added two more in the fourth to open up a 7-1 advantage.

McDowell answered in the fourth with two runs of their own when Dickie Joe Shannon and John Crisp scored, but Cole snuffed out any further offensive output by striking out the side. Then came the fifth and a parade of walks. Martin started the inning, but before it ended, a total of three McDowell pitchers had taken their turn on the mound.

As the mercury dipped into the low 50s and the hour crept past 10, Tim Trusty bounced back to the mound to end a game that had taken two hours and 37 minutes. And it ended on a disappointing note for the Blackcats.

Prestonsburg, who had come back from an early 6-2 deficit, saw their second comeback of the game denied when pitcher David Carroll retire Trusty at first. The Blackcats, with the loss, fell to 4-3 on the season while Magoffin County improved to 4-5.

Todd Justice (started) for Prestonsburg. The junior left hander worked two and two-thirds innings, gave up six runs, one earned, on three hits. He also walked eight hitters. Justice walked the bases loaded in the third inning before giving way to Danny Hamilton with two outs. Hamilton got Greg Cole on a line drive to shortstop, but he eventually suffered the loss.

Prestonsburg, trailing by four at the time, came back to tie the game in the bottom of the third to tie the score. However, Magoffin County scored three times in the fourth with single runs in the fifth and seventh.

The Hornets had a total of nine hits in the game. They also benefited from 10 Prestonsburg walks.

Prestonsburg banded out a total of 10 hits, led by Thomas Nairn who went three for four with two singles and a triple. Craig Tucker, Joey Griffith, and Ray Collins had two hits each. The Blackcats also left 10 runners on base. Prestonsburg committed six errors, leading to seven unearned Magoffin County runs. Griffith and Nairn both scored twice for Prestonsburg. Greg Cole crossed the plate three times for Magoffin County.

On Thursday afternoon, the Blackcats rebounded with a 17-14 win at Virgie. Thomas Nairn got the win, his second of the season.

DUE UP: Joey Griffith represented the winning run Wednesday as he waited on deck in the seventh inning against Magoffin County. Griffith never reached the plate as Prestonsburg fell 11-8.

Reds Watch '88

Good Start Missed As Reds Fall Short To Houston, SF

In 1986 Cincinnati came up short in their season series with eventual division-winning Houston. A year later the Reds lost four more than they won against San Francisco and finished second in the West behind the Giants.

At the start of 1988 Cincinnati was given the opportunity for a fast start against both the Astros and Giants, but playing 14 of their 16 games against two of the Western Division's top contenders hasn't exactly been a blessing.

Reds manager Pete Rose says pennants can be won in April as well as in September, but Cincinnati may have hurt their chances more than they helped them when considering a final fall outcome.

After winning their first two games against St. Louis, the Reds kicked off 14 consecutive games against Houston and San Francisco, the winners in the Western Division the past two seasons.

And it hasn't exactly been a positive stretch for Cincinnati. Their starting pitching hasn't been impressive, and when it is, run production takes a hike. As a result, the Reds are 7-6, 5-6 against the Astros and Giants, and find themselves fourth in the West.

Going into last night's action, Cincinnati trailed both Houston and Los Angeles by two games. With two games of a four-game series remaining with San Francisco, the Reds could do damage to the Giants, but they won't see Houston again until June 14.

It might be a good thing where the Reds are concerned. Cincinnati, after a four-game split in Houston, is 3-4 against the Astros, and without a heroic effort from their bullpen, it would have been much worse.

Reds' relievers worked 16 innings in the four games, giving up only one earned run, and Jose Rijo, a right-handed relief pitcher, was credited with both wins.

After Glenn Davis' five runs batted in led Houston to a 9-3 win Thursday against Dennis Rasmussen, Cincinnati pulled out an extra inning victory when Paul O'Neill doubled home two runs in the 10th as the Reds won 4-2, Friday.

Jose Rijo picked up the victory by throwing two scoreless innings. Rijo, in relief of Ron Robinson who gave up two runs in seven innings, pitched the eighth and ninth inning to earn the win.

O'Neill's double with Kal Daniels and Eric Davis on second and third, sent Houston reliever Dave Anderson down to his second loss of the season, and allowed John Franco, who held the Astros scoreless in the bottom of the 10th, to earn a save. Rijo, being on the right mound at the right time, benefited from a big pitch in the seventh, and clutch hitting in the eighth to win his second game in as many days, 8-2 Saturday.

With two on, two runs already in, and one out, Rijo replaced Mario Soto on the mound and threw one pitch, a ground ball double play, to retire the side.

Cincinnati responded by scoring five times in the top of the eighth off Earnie Camacho, and added two more in the ninth to post an 8-2 win. Rijo, who threw only one pitch, won his third game. Camacho suffered the loss.

But that was the end of Rijo's, and Cincinnati's good fortune. Danny Jackson, who had given up only four runs in his first 18 innings of work, got rocked. The Reds hit the ball hard early, but were shut down after the third as Houston posted a 5-3 win, Sunday afternoon.

The Astros reached Jackson for five runs on five hits in the first two innings. Jackson balked twice and hit a batter. The Reds' left hander exited the field after the second inning when umpire Eric Greg threw him out for disputing the quality of the balk call.

Cincinnati relievers kept Houston from doing any more damage, but Nolan Ryan did the same. Jeff Treadway scored Barry Larkin with a third inning double to cut the deficit to 5-3, but the Reds never crossed the plate again. Ryan, who worked eight innings, picked up his second win while striking out nine. Jackson, 2-1, received the loss.

From Houston to Cincinnati, the Reds moved their divisional battle north, but with the same success San Francisco moved into Riverfront Stadium Monday and opened a four-game series with a 6-3 win in 12 innings.

The Giants, after five scoreless innings from the Cincinnati bullpen, reached Pat Perry for three runs in the 12th to record the win, and move in front of the Reds in the race for the Western Division crown.

Tom Browning left the game in the seventh inning when San Francisco reached the Reds' starter for two runs. Rob Murphy came in to silence the rally. Rijo followed with two scoreless innings, as did John Franco, but Perry didn't find the same success, losing his second game of the season, both in extra innings.

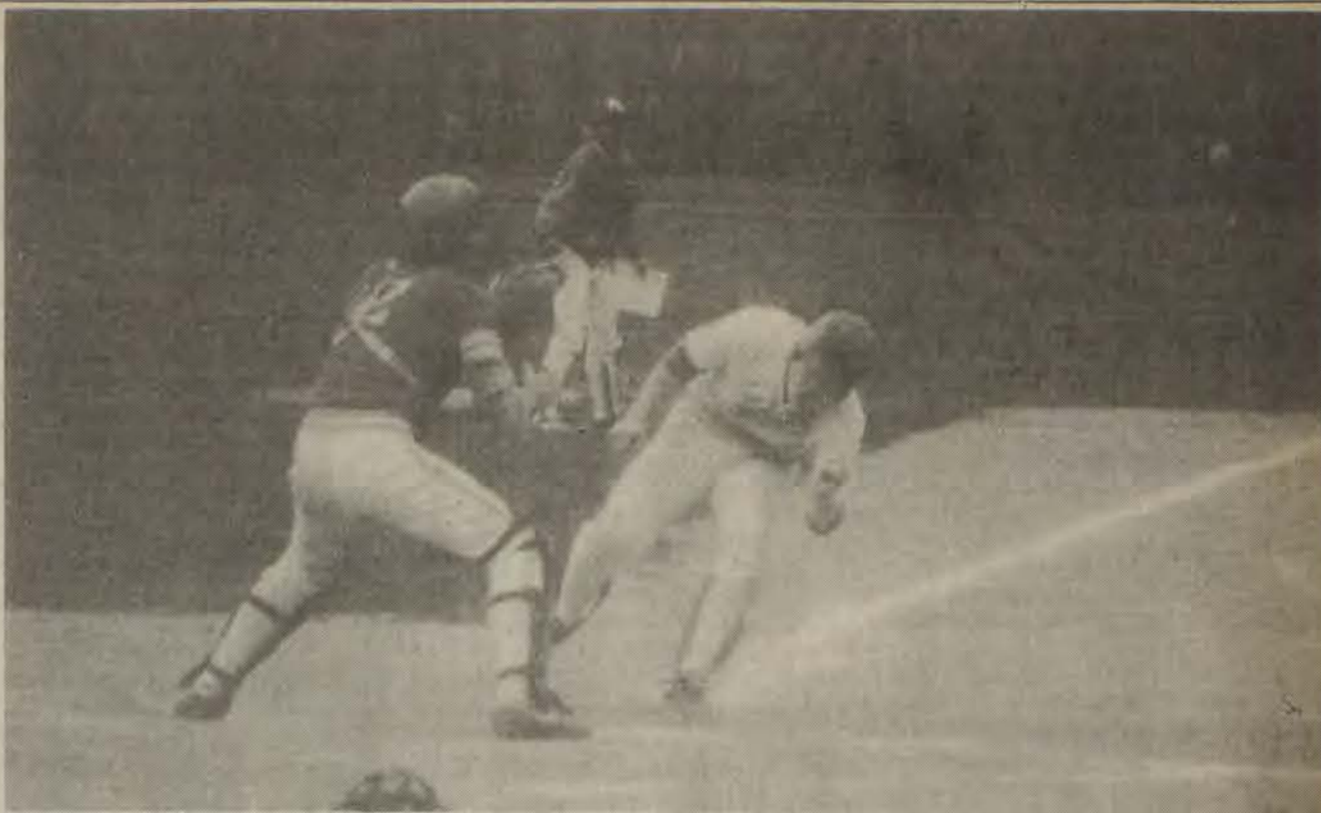

The Reds, after tying the score with two runs in the seventh, left the bases loaded in the eighth, and two runners on in both the 10th and 11th inning. In all, they stranded 16 runners.

Craig Lefferts, who came on in the ninth, was credited with the win. His first, and former Red Joe Price worked a scoreless 12th to record the save.

The Reds and Giants will resume their series tonight with Ron Robinson taking the hill for Cincinnati. The series will conclude tomorrow when Mario Soto pitches for the Reds. Game time Wednesday is set for 7:35. Thursday's first pitch will be delivered at 12:35.

Cincinnati, after wrapping up their series with the Giants, will travel to Atlanta for a three-game weekend series. Saturday and Sunday's games will start at 1:40 and 2:00 respectively.

After finishing up in Atlanta, the Reds move on to Montreal to begin a stretch of 18 consecutive games against Eastern Division competition. The series against the Expos begins Tuesday at 7:35.

COMING HOME: Barry Hamilton beats this through to the plate during last Tuesday's action. Betsy Layne, though, lost 8-6 to McDowell.

At 6'0" he also jumped center for Clay County. Farmer is being touted as a point guard for Kentucky. While at Clay County, Farmer established new scoring records for the state tournament. He set the all-time record for most total points in the state tournament, most field goals scored, and most points in a championship game.

Farmer is the second guard Kentucky has signed this season, and the fourth player overall. The Cats inked Sean Woods, a guard, Shawn Kemp, a 6'10" forward, and Chris Mills, a swingman from Los Angeles, during the early signing period in November.

Kim Pehlke, a 5'7" guard from Louisville Doss, will wear the symbolic number one on her jersey this summer when the Kentucky all-stars play Indiana in a two-game series.

Pehlke earned the guaranteed spot on the roster and the number by being named this state's Miss Basketball, given annually to the best girls' basketball player in Kentucky.

Pehlke, who averaged 26 points and 10 rebounds, was voted the award by state coaches this past Saturday. The Louisville Doss senior is a recruit of Western Kentucky University. Pehlke was also named to Parade Magazine's second team all-America squad.

An NCAA investigation and not 6'7" forward Chris Mills is now the most closely watched connection between the University of Kentucky and the West Coast.

Mills, who signed last November to play basketball at UK, is not the center of attention for Wildcat fans focusing in on Los Angeles. An investigation concerning a package sent from UK assistant coach Dwane Casey to Claude Mills, Chris' father, is.

According to reports, a package sent from Casey to Mills broke open while in transport, and inside was 1,000 dollars in 50 dollar bills. Both Casey and Mills have denied any knowledge of the money, reportedly appearing in the ruptured package on March 30. The money was reported to the Los Angeles Daily News by Emory workers, the company which UK uses to transport such packages.

Casey has said that he sent the package and a video tape, also found inside, but denied any money being involved. Mills has said that everything done involving his son's recruitment has been within the legal realm of NCAA rules. The NCAA began its investigation last week, and the University is conducting a probe in conjunction with the NCAA. It is the second time in the past two years that the University of Kentucky has come under investigation because of reported wrong doings involving its basketball program.

Charles F. "Chuck" Curry, Jr.

We miss you so very much darling Chuck, and there's an ache in our hearts that will never heal. We long to hear your sweet voice, and to see that sweet smile! There is this terrible longing to be with you again.

Sadly missed by his wife, daughters, parents, sister, families and friends.

MOUNTAIN BIKES

They're one reason for the growing popularity of bicycling, report Good Housekeeping and American Health in their May issues. Designed to withstand the rigors of rocky roads and perilous potholes, they're a safe, sturdy alternative to the traditional ten-speed. If you're in the market for a mountain bike, first determine your riding needs. If you'll be riding primarily on mountain trails, you'll want a bike with fat, very knobby tires for traction, and 15 to 18 speeds to adjust to changes in terrain. The average beginner should plan to spend between $250 and $300 for a good bike. Be sure to get the right size. Fit guidelines: You'll want about three inches of clearance between the horizontal top bar and your body.

WILD ORPHANS
COPYRIGHT 1988 KVMA

Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association

Each spring the questions get repeated—how do you deal with orphaned or injured wild animals?

Most people don't know how or when to help wild animals, so some tips to protect the animals and the well-meaning people alike seem in order.

For your own protection, avoid any wild animal which appears tame. This behavior is a common sign of rabies, and is frequently seen in skunks, raccoons, foxes and bats and may appear in any warm blooded wild animal.

Also, remember that adult wild animals of any species may be dangerous because of both pain and fear of man. An injured adult raccoon, fox, opossum or skunk, as well as a wildcat, can be quite dangerous.

In such cases, it is best for your sake and the animal's to notify a wildlife or law enforcement officer or a game warden and let them deal with the animal.

On the other hand, young animals whose parents have been killed or baby birds which have fallen from their nest require some nursing care to assure their survival. During the spring, many nests of baby rabbits are accidentally disturbed when pastures are mowed, and baby skunks are frequently found after having been abandoned by their parents.

Most young animals such as these can be nursed to an age at which they can be returned to nature and survive. Infant mammals can all be fed formulas during the early weeks of life. Baby birds can also usually be fed a simple formula.

Most veterinarians can and will help you formulate a diet for orphaned baby wild animals. Frequently you can obtain assistance from the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife.

Remember that most wild animals don't make acceptable pets for most people, therefore those persons caring for wild animals should keep in mind that the purpose is to return the animal to the wild. On the other hand, caring for a wild animal can be an interesting and richly rewarding educational experience, especially when children are involved.

Should you decide you want to keep the animal for a pet, remember a permit from the Department of Fish and Wildlife is needed to keep a wild animal in captivity.

You might also want to discuss the problems of caring for wild animals with your veterinarian. Some veterinarians won't treat certain wild animals. And among other things you will be told is that there is no vaccine against rabies available for wild animals.

JW Summer Theatre Begins Auditions

If you have an affection for show tunes, the Jenny Wiley Summer Music Theatre is holding auditions for musicians for their productions of "Hello Dolly!", "West Side Story," and the "1940's Radio Hour" this season, in addition to their annual presentation of "The Jenny Wiley Story."

Professionals and local actors for the productions have been all but selected and about 22,000 theatre-goers are expected to see this season's offerings. Theatre spokesman Ted Meadows says advanced ticket sales have already surpassed last year's level for this time.

The 1988 season will mark 24 years of outdoor theatrical entertainment for Jenny Wiley, which was the brainchild of a group of local citizens who approached former Governor Bert T. Combs in 1962 with the idea of bringing the arts to eastern Kentucky. "The Pirates of Penzance" and "South Pacific" were performed during the theatre's inaugural season.

Auditions for musicians will be held on Saturday, April 23, from 10 a.m. until 2 p.m. in room 203 of Baird Hall on the Morehead State University campus.

The following musicians are needed; REED I—flute, must double on piccolo, clarinet and alto sax; REED II—clarinet, must double on alto sax; REED III—bass clarinet possibly, clarinet, tenor sax and oboe; REED IV—clarinet, flute, piccolo and bari sax; two trumpeters; two trombonists; one violinist, must also be able to fiddle; one cellist; one bass; one percussionist; and one pianist.

All individuals planning to audition should provide a resume, a letter of recommendation if possible, and should be prepared to sight read.

WMU Annual Meet Set in Louisville

Musicians for the meeting are Don Hustad, Mary Alice Seals and Betty Jean Chatham. Freddie Neel will portray past Kentucky WMU leader Eliza Broadus, for whom the Kentucky Baptist State Missions Offering is named. Other program personalities are Dee Gilliland, executive director, Kentucky WMU; Peggy Hicks, president, Kentucky WMU and other Kentucky WMU leaders.

Kentucky WMU will elect officers, give special recognition to associations and hear reports from various committees. An afternoon tea is planned for Friday with members sporting Centennial dress and memorabilia.

DECLAMATION CONTEST

Seven girls are being coached by Mrs. Edgar May this week on "The Wounded Soldier" for our first "try-out" Thursday in the declamation contest, at which time a committee of judges composed of Prof. Boughton, Miss Callihan, Mrs. May, Mrs. B. W. Baker, and Mrs. Edward Stumbo will select the two best. These two will then begin work on another poem for the final.

Girls entering the contest are: Shirley, Christie and Effie Allen, Bola Turner, Gradis Flanary, Marie Amburgy, and Lexie Allen.

DEBATING TEAM

These young people are quite fortunate in having the assistance of Miss Juliette Callahan, head of our English department, as coach. Miss Callahan's scholastic qualifications are indeed high. She had two years in Ward-Belmont, Nashville; one in the University of Illinois and received her degree from Kentucky State last spring.

We wish much happiness for them and hope the bride will continue to make Maytown her home.

CUPID!

As a climax to this week's news, what could be more fitting than the announcement that our much-beloved Miss Virginia Hemingway who hails from Michigan though Georgetown, Ky., lays a strong claim on this fair, young lady will become the bride of Mr. Carl Dickerson during the holidays, date to be announced later.

We wish much happiness for them and hope the bride will continue to make Maytown her home.

TRAM

SON BORN

Mr. and Mrs. Frank L. Caldwell are the proud parents of a nine and one-half pound boy, born November 26. He has been named James Robert in honor of his grandparents. Mrs. Stanley was formerly Edith Stanley, the daughter of Judge and Mrs. May Stanley.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CELEBRATES

The Sunday School of Tram celebrated its first birthday Sunday, Dec. 3. One year ago it was organized by Rev. P. R. McAllister. Our Sunday School has not missed a Sunday being held. The superintendent, A. F. Conley, has not missed a single day since it was organized. He and his wife, as well as many others, have been converted, and I believe Sunday School led them to Jesus. Rev. McAllister has been a great help to our community, and we appreciate his work very much.

SMITH-OSBORN

On Saturday evening, Nov. 19, at the home of the bride, Miss Cinda Smith was united in marriage to Mr. Elza Osborn. This wedding was not much of a surprise to us, for we had been expecting it for some time. We extend our heartiest congratulations to the couple for a happy, prosperous life.

PERSONALS

Mrs. B. M. Spurlock spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. May Stanley. Mrs. Ray Stilton and children, Paul and Fredie Lee, of Wolfpit, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Layne. Mrs. Stilton has been in very ill health for some time.

GARFIELD IN FLOYD

Garfield centered his forces at Louisa and started his advance movement from that point December 23, 1861. His army consisted of his own regiment (42nd Ohio) Col. Cranor's regiment (40th Ohio) 1st Ohio cavalry squadron, six companies of the 2nd Virginia cavalry, 14th Kentucky (Col. L. T. Moore), 22nd Kentucky (Col. D. W. Lindsay) and 300 1st Kentucky cavalry under Col. Letcher, in all about 3,000 effectives. The county roads being practically impassable, the wagons were taken to pieces and conveyed on steamboats to carry troops and supplies.

On January 6, Garfield arrived near Paintsville. Marshall had first cast up breastworks in the narrows just above the present C. & O. station at Paintsville, but later chose and fortified a position on the crest of Hager Hill, a mile to the southwest. Fearing advance by flank movement on his left and rear, Marshall fell back to the forks of Middle Creek, and Garfield moved to this new front on the 10th of January. Skirmishing began at 11 a. m., and the engagement continued until dark, both sides claiming a victory, and both withdrawing from the field of battle, Marshall taking his force to Virginia and Garfield to Paintsville and later to Pikeville, and on March 16 his force of 750 attacked a battalion of Virginia militia occupying Pound Gap and drove them away and burned the log huts built for winter quarters.

The battle casualties at Middle Creek were not great, Garfield's report showing two killed and 25 wounded and Marshall reported 11 killed and 15 wounded.

That occupation of Eastern Kentucky was considered important to the cause of each belligerent and was achieved by the Federal forces as a triumph which resulted in promotion of Garfield, who took oath of office as brigadier-general in what is now known as the Bowles home in Pikeville. The highest stage ever known in Big Sandy waters was in the winter of 1862. Garfield's campaign could not have been conducted in these wintry months without the transportation afforded by "Sandy" steamboats, the flagboat and admiralship so to speak being the "Sandy Valley," a boat of great speed, owned by Judge Arch Borders, and of which Captain H. Davis was the efficient and chief pilot.

General Garfield, while yet at Pikeville, was ordered to report to General Buell, who had gone to the relief of General Grant at Pittsburgh Landing, so-called by the Confederates of Shiloh as designated by the Federals. He arrived there April 7, 1862, in time to take part in the second day's contest.

General Marshall was then about 50 years of age, a graduate of West Point, winning distinction for courage at Buena Vista in the Mexican War; was a member of Congress from the Louisville District for four terms, and minister to China under President Fillmore. As lawyer he had no superior and few equals. He was famous as an orator and possessed the remarkable talents of the Marshall family for eloquence and power in the forum. Personally he was not adapted to mountain warfare, owing to his great size, being over six feet in height, and weighing well over 300 pounds, despite the fact of a ribald boast of his soldiers in singing:

"Humphrey Marshall, he's our boss, Big as hell, and brave as a boss."

He later resigned from the Confederate army believing he had been ill-treated by President Davis in not receiving support which he deserved and the necessities his command required. He practiced law at Louisville after the close of the war, and until death was ranked by fellow-members of the bar and judges as the greatest among the great lawyers of the Louisville bar.

I would not be justified in writing further respecting the career of General Garfield after leaving Eastern Kentucky. His high and honorable achievements, military and civil, are embodied in the history of our own times.

Chairman and Commissioners
Wheelwright Utility Commission
Wheelwright, KY 41669

We have examined the balance sheet of the Wheelwright Utility Commission as of June 30, 1987, and the related statements of revenues, expenses and changes in retained earnings, and changes in financial position for the year then ended. Our examination was made in accordance with generally accepted auditing standards and, accordingly, included such tests of the accounting records and such other auditing procedures as we considered necessary in the circumstances.

There is no budget for the utility commission. A governmental agency is required to prepare and adhere to a budget per Kentucky Revised Statute 91A.030.

In our opinion except for the omission of a budget, the financial statements referred to above present fairly the financial position of the Wheelwright Utility Commission as of June 30, 1987, and the results of its operations, and the changes in its financial position for the year then ended, in conformity with generally accepted accounting principles.

NOTES TO FINANCIAL STATEMENTS
June 30, 1987

NOTE A - SUMMARY OF SIGNIFICANT ACCOUNTING POLICIES

Wheelwright Utility Commission operates a municipal gas, water, and sewage system serving approximately 280 natural gas customers and 300 water and sewage customers. The utility purchases gas from Kentucky-West Virginia Gas Company to supplement the city-owned gas wells.

The accounting policies of the Wheelwright Utility Commission conform to generally accepted accounting principles except for not including a budget. Financial statements are prepared on the accrual method.

Fixed Assets

Fixed assets are recorded at cost or estimated cost. Depreciation is based on a straight line method over the estimated useful lives of the individual assets.

Restricted Assets

This cash account consists of an escrow account which represents 5% of gas receipts deposited on a monthly basis and is maintained for the purpose of providing cash for emergency repairs and replacement of equipment. The gas system must petition for and gain written approval from the Gas System Restoration Project Review Board to use any of these funds. For 1986-87, approval was requested and received to use $5,400.00 to purchase and install gas drips. $5,400.00 was subsequently transferred into the general checking account.

NOTE B - FIXED ASSETS

A summary of changes in the fixed assets of the Wheelwright Utility Commission consists of the following:

	Balance 6/30/86	Additions (Reduction)	Balance 6/30/87
Gas System	$369,287.58	$ 6,504.12	$375,791.70

NOTE C - ACCOUNTS PAYABLE, ACCRUED INTEREST PAYABLE, AND PAYROLL TAXES PAYABLE

Accounts payable totaled $36,027.20. The largest portion of accounts payable was indebtedness to Kentucky - West Virginia Gas Company. On June 30, 1985, the Wheelwright Utility Commission was in arrears to the Kentucky - West Virginia Gas Company in the amount of $22,062.00. On June 30, 1987, the Wheelwright Utility Commission owed the Kentucky - West Virginia Gas Company $17,362.06, plus interest of $7,254.89. The aforementioned indebtedness is for past due gas purchases as far back as March, 1984.

NOTE D - NOTES PAYABLE

The Wheelwright Utility Commission received a $276,034.00 long-term loan from the Commonwealth of Kentucky, Department of Community and Regional Development, to rebuild the gas system. The loan is repayable over a thirty (30) year period which began December 1, 1981, and bears interest at the rate of five and one-eighth (5.125) percent. The loan is secured by a mortgage on the gas system and is to be repaid by the revenues of the gas system. Monthly payments are made based on the cash flow of the gas system, but the total payment must equal $18,213.00 annually. The total balance owed at June 30, 1987, is $249,372.46.

The Wheelwright Utility Commission purchased a copier during 1985 by entering into an installment purchase agreement with Minnesco Division/3M. The agreement requires quarterly payments of $381.19 or $1,524.76 annually for a period of three (3) years. The balance owed at June 30, 1987, is reflected in the financial statements as notes payable of $1,258.77.

In January, 1984, the Wheelwright Utility Commission agreed to pay the city of Wheelwright for half of the renovations to the Wheelwright City Hall as the utility commission was sharing space in the City Hall at that time. The original, non-interest bearing loan was $3,431.00. $1,000.00 was paid in 1984. The prior utility commission did not acknowledge the indebtedness, and it was not recorded on the prior years' books. Therefore, an adjustment was made to retained earnings on June 30, 1986, to reinstate the loan. The balance on this loan as of June 30, 1987, is $1,900.00.

On October 9, 1986, the commission purchased a 1977 Jeep. At the same time, the commission borrowed $1,024.50 from First Guaranty National Bank of Martin, KY to pay for the vehicle. The balance of this loan as of June 30, 1987, is $341.54.

"The United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets drinking water standards and has determined that lead is a health concern at certain levels of exposure. There is currently a standard of 0.050 parts per million (ppm). Based on new health information, EPA is likely to lower this standard significantly.

"Part of the purpose of this notice is to inform you of the potential adverse health effects of lead. This is being done even though your water may not be in violation of the current standard.

"EPA and others are concerned about lead in drinking water. Too much lead in the human body can cause serious damage to the brain, kidneys, nervous system, and red blood cells. The greatest risk, even with short-term exposure, is to young children and pregnant women. "Lead levels in your drinking water are likely to be highest:

- if your home or water system has lead pipes, or
- if your home has copper pipes with lead solder, and
- if the home is less than five years old, or
- if you have soft or acidic water, or
- if water sits in the pipes for several hours."

The Sandy Valley Water District does not have lead service lines or other lead-containing materials in our distribution system. The Sandy Valley Water District's water supply is not in violation of the current standards. The water in your own house piping may be. It is the responsibility of the customer to pay for testing for lead in their own house piping.

You can reduce the possibility of consuming water with high lead concentrations by the following:

1. Flush cold water pipes before drinking—10-30 seconds.
2. Use only water from cold water pipes for drinking, cooking or preparing baby formula.
3. Lead pipes and service connections can be replaced.
4. Insist that only lead free materials be used in repairs or new plumbing.

The only way to be sure of the amount of lead in your water is to have the water tested by a state certified testing laboratory. For additional information contact the Drinking Water Branch of the Kentucky Division of Water at (502) 564-3410 or Sandy Valley Water District at 478-5500.

Driving Costs Are Ten Percent Higher

The costs of owning and operating a car this year will average 27.3 cents per mile, an increase of 2.7 cents over last year, the Blue Grass Automobile Club-AAA reported recently.

AAA's cost figures are based on a composite national average for a subcompact, mid-size car and full-size car driven 15,000 miles per year and retained in service for four years.

The 1988 average operating costs are as follows: gas and oil, 5 cents per mile, maintenance, 1.6 cents per mile; and tires, .8 cents per mile, for total operating costs of 7.4 cents per mile.

Ownership costs (expenses not affected by the number of miles driven) include insurance, license and registration fees, taxes, depreciation and finance charges. This year, ownership charges average $2,988 or $8.19 per day.

A motorist driving 15,000 miles annually would pay $1,110 in operating costs and $2,988 in ownership costs, for a total of $4,098, or 27.3 cents per mile.

Some variance in costs exist between size of car (ranging from 23.6 cents per mile for a subcompact to 30.2 cents for a full-size car) and regional differences (New England being highest at 28.4 cents per miles while the Southeast is lowest at 26.5 cents).
