Dramatic changes in store for local, Kentucky schools

by Pam Shingler
Editor

Wednesday morning, Gov. Wallace Wilkinson signed into law the Education Reform Act of 1990—an act that even the most skeptical are calling "historic."

If the act, fashioned by a team of state legislators and the governor's staff, works, Floyd County schools and all the public schools in Kentucky will change drastically.

However, at a press briefing Wednesday afternoon in Frankfort, State Sen. David Karem warned that Kentuckians "need to be patient with the process" of change.

Karem estimated it will take "three to five years to see significant changes, and even beyond that."

Given adequate time to occur and the full cooperation of school officials, politicians, parents and taxpayers, near the bottom of effectiveness reports to the head of the class.

But, to paraphrase the old saying, to whom much is given, much is expected.

"People are going to have to

"People are going to have to change their way of thinking about education."

State Rep. Jody Richards

ers, the reform could jump start the state's much maligned school systems. Given half a chance, the reform could bring the state's schools from change their way of thinking about education," said State Rep. Jody Richards at the Wednesday briefing. Richards emphasized that thinking about education must turn to "outcomes" more than "inputs."

As explained by the reform act's originators, the Task Force on Education Reform, each part of the act is aimed directly at improving the lot of Kentucky students, with ultimate assessment of schools being their success in preparing students for college, post-secondary training or work.

The act responds to the mandate of Judge Ray Corns that the governor and General Assembly provide an efficient system of public schools with equitable funding.

Sewage treatment plan considered for Wayland

by Frank Clark
Staff Writer

Sewage disposal is well recognized problem in Wayland, as it is in so many Floyd County communities. Much of the wastewater in and around the town empties directly into local streams without treatment, and some residents have reported raw sewage flowing down roadways from backed-up septic tanks and poor drainage in the area.

In an effort to address the problem, Wayland town council is considering methods of funding a wastewater treatment project which could be tailored to meet the needs of the small, isolated Right Beaver community.

At the request of councilman Jerry Fultz, Don Daniels, Allen Central High School principal and former mayor of Wheelwright, has been asked to formulate a workable plan to deal with wastewater in Wayland.

Daniels, who has completed graduate work in community planning, worked on a similar wastewater ter project in Wheelwright during his years as mayor of the city and has developed a tentative proposal that could solve the special problems faced by Wayland and other mountain communities that are short on funding but long on wastewater treatment problems.

"What we're considering is placing self-contained, mini-sewage systems in Wayland," said Daniels. "It's all preliminary at this time, but we're hoping this innovation could work."

Wayland faces a number of problems common to most Eastern Kentucky towns when it comes to wastewater treatment. Because of the distances between many residents and communities, combined with the great variations in geographical elevation caused by the mountains, the placement of large, traditional sewage treatment facilities tends to be impractical and prohibitively expensive, says Daniels.

In the Wayland area, a single, large

David residents seek end to neighborhood disturbances

Part 1
by Frank Clark
Staff Writer

Cars speed up to a house, stop briefly, and then squeal their tires and roar off. Loud threats and curses cut through the air. Drunken men urinate on lawns and street. Drugs are smoked openly. Neighbors who complain to police are followed and threatened. Families move out, tired and frightened by the constant disturbances.

According to some residents of School House Hollow in David, the above incidents have become common occurrences, disrupting their daily lives and creating an atmosphere of fear in the small community. Calls to county and state police officials have failed to end the problem, they say. Two families have reportedly left the neighborhood as a direct result of the almost daily disturbances, residents contend.

"This has been going on for a year and a half," said Carol Hall, a School House Hollow resident and a member of the David Community Development Corporation (DCDC). "There's drunk men around all the time, men urinating in public, bad language in the street. It's unbelievable."

According to Hall and other residents, the problem began about 18 months ago when a family moved into a house in the hollow. "Suspicious" persons began frequenting the hollow, and frequent parties and disturbances occurred at the house. Residents who complained were verbally abused and occasionally threatened, they said.

"Thursday through Sunday is the heaviest traffic time," said Marty Green, a hollow resident. "Cars usually stop for a short time, then leave. There're usually seven or eight cars moving through the hollow or parked at the house at one time. Unfortunately, I think it's common knowledge in the county that people come to this area for drugs."

Danny Greene, director of the David School, agreed.

"The David community in the last few years has been increasingly a haven for alcohol and drug trafficking," alleged Greene.

"Cars don't just pull up and leave after a few minutes," said Hall. "I know what drug dealing is. People know what's going on."

Kevin Antle, the Floyd County Supervisor for the federal Farmers Home Administration (FHA), which carries loans on many houses in School House Hollow, noted that two families in recent months have left the hollow, citing the constant disturbances coming from a particular house as the reason for their moves.

Antle said that the neighborhood has had a high turnover of residents and that the FHA was no longer providing loans to the hollow. He said the FHA was moving to terminate its involvement in the area.

"I can understand people's frustration,"

Coal Camp Kids, Part 4

Every camp had 'Silk Stocking Row'

By Barbara Ford Ritch
Edited by Paul Jordan

In all the camps, the mansion-like houses of the "big dudes" and other, smaller houses on Front Street became known as "Silk Stocking Row." Silk Stocking Row got its name, legend says, because those houses had indoor plumbing and, too, because the bosses and higher-up employees lived there.

One story in Wayland is that Mr. and Mrs. Storekeeper resided on Silk Stocking Row and, the tale goes, every morning Mrs. Storekeeper slipped into a nice dress, silk stockings, high heeled shoes and the crowning touch, her fur coat, and left the house to parade down Front Street to Wayland and into the company store. Jane Wallace furnished one of the most plausible explanations for the name, Silk Stocking Row.

Most company stores stocked and sold a cotton stocking from Japan that was prettier than the rayon hose available. However, due to their higher price, silk stockings were sold door to door to the well-to-do who could afford them, the officials' wives, by Frank Kraft, a salesman for the Real Silk Hosiery Company.

Whatever the explanation, and no matter where the officials lived and regardless of company designated names, the miners renamed them, the most common being "Silk Stocking Row," and every coal camp had a Silk Stocking Row. When Wade Moore lived at Allegheny in Pike County, away from the main camp, there was a small camp up a hollow where the officials lived, dubbed "Boss Town." At David, it was called "Official Hollow."

Though the officials' wives were expected to become a part of the coal camp community and involved with the miners' families, it was a futile expectation. Those women missed a rare human experience by remaining uninvolved and aloof. Their detachment, however, may have initially risen from fear. A fear of the miners' wives, and that fear no doubt was tinged with some guilt.

It was said that several of the officials' wives came themselves from camps not unlike ours and had bettered themselves — hence the guilt.

Board considers rash, reductions, demotions

State authorized school personnel reductions and demotions were announced and McDowell Elementary School parents requested information about their school's month-long rash outbreak during Wednesday night's Floyd County School Board meeting at Prestonsburg High School.

Reiba Salisbury, a McDowell parent, addressed the board, asking when classes at both McDowell schools would begin again, following Monday's renewed rash outbreak.

School Superintendent Ron Hager explained that classes could begin as early as Friday, but he said he expected that work to prepare the high school for junior high students would not be completed before the weekend.

Hager noted that the high school had been closed, along with the elementary school, in order to prepare it to house the sixth, seventh, and eighth grade students, who were being removed from their building because of the rash outbreak.

Hager agreed to provide to parents a copy of the report from AMI Co. of Lexington, which conducted air tests at the school. No answer was forthcoming from the board when Salisbury asked where other students in the elementary school could be housed if the outbreak occurred again.

Hager reported on the results of the air tests conducted at the school, noting that elevated levels of carbon dioxide, methane gas, and bacteria and fungus were discovered in the facility, but no cause of the rash could be pinpointed.

Ned Bush, health coordinator for the school board, said that asbestos did not appear in the air sample, but a recommendation had been made to have some tiles removed from the school that did contain the fire-retardant substance. New tests to check for the presence of chemicals or pesticides have been ordered and will begin immediately, said Hager.

When asked by a McDowell parent how dangerous to children the substances discovered in the air were, board chairman James Adams noted that no determination as to the cause of the rash or its long term effects had been made.

Hager did say that the board had no intention of hiding any part of the outbreak investigation from parents and asked that all involved work together to alleviate the problem.

Demotions of school administrators and reductions in the number of non-tenured teachers were announced at Wednesday's meeting. The changes are apparently caused by the impending opening of new school facilities and the drop in Floyd County student enrollment.

At the recommendation of state education advisors, Wayne Combs, principal of Auxier Elementary School, was recommended for demotion to a classroom teacher. Irene Goble, principal of Clark Elementary, was recommended for a reduction in salary because of the anticipated loss of junior high students to the Prestonsburg Middle School.

Thomas Tackett, principal of Prestonsburg Elementary, was also recommended for a reduction in salary.

Quiet street not so quiet, residents contend

Residents of School House Hollow in David complain that a neighbor is disturbing their once quiet and safe street. Two families have recently left the largely FHA-financed subdivision because of the disquiet, residents say, and others are trying to sell their homes. Residents have asked for assistance from both state and local authorities. (Photo by Frank Clark)

Getting the Easter Bunny's ear

Prestonsburg Rotarian Brad Walls tweaks the long ear of the Easter Bunny (John Carey, manager of Druther's) during preparations for this Saturday's annual community Easter Egg Hunt, cosponsored by the Rotary Club and Druther's. The event, which annually attracts thousands of area children, is set for 11 a.m. at Prestonsburg Community College. Rotarians and their helpers spent last Saturday morning at the local restaurant putting prizes in several thousand plastic eggs for the hunt. Appearances by the Easter Bunny (not Carey) and several other favorite animal characters will be on hand to lead children on the egg hunt and to give out other prizes. (Shingler photo) treatment plant would require expensive lift stations to pump the sewage to treatment areas, as well as many easements to allow for the laying of sewer pipe. The costs for such a plant, says Daniels, would be extremely high.

The advantage of utilizing small, preassembled package treatment plants, says Daniels, has been recognized by housing projects, schools, and hospitals in Floyd County and around the country. Because they are simple to maintain, and are less expensive than traditional systems, Daniels believes they could be highly suitable to the needs of the Wayland community.

"Approximately three or four units could serve the town," noted Daniels.

Department.

Latta said the change is in response to the need for traffic control in front of the Department of Employment Services building on North Lake Drive, the scene of several pedestrian crosswalk accidents and at least one death within the last year.

The state approved the addition of two new traffic lights in the city last month. The other is slated for the intersection of Friend Street and North Lake Drive.

Latta said she was told that the contractor is supposed to be in town Monday to do final planning for the two lights which should be in place within the month.

"They would allow for the cleanup of our streams and rivers, and improve the health and future of children in the area. Our point is, that if it could work in the Wayland community, if it's both feasible and inexpensive, this system could be considered for the rest of the county."

Presently, both Daniels and the town council are preparing to examine what financial assistance is available from government agencies for the wastewater project.

Daniels noted that the city hoped to fund the project through a joint venture with the county, once a proposal is established and introduced to Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo. Daniels estimated the cost of a single package treatment unit to run between $25,000 to $50,000.

David Gardner of the Big Sandy Area Development District said that Daniels' proposal was feasible, but said past problems with package treatment plants could make it difficult to sell such a proposal to state officials.

"I've considered this idea for sewage treatment for several areas in the past," said Gardner. "These units can serve a useful function. But right now, what's happening in other parts of the state isn't encouraging for such a project."

Gardner explained that state officials were currently promoting projects tying communities into large, municipal sewage treatment systems, rather than developing small, isolated treatment facilities. The current track record of the mini-treatment units, said Gardner, is not good, primarily because of inadequate maintenance on the units. In the five county Big Sandy region.

Gardner estimated that about 180 non-industrial treatment units have been installed for schools, hospitals and housing projects. Of those, Gardner says, about 100 are not operated or maintained properly.

Despite this record of trouble, Gardner did not discourage Wayland's examination of the proposal, saying that it would require thorough study before a funding search could be conducted.

"Action has to be taken," said councilman Jerry Fultz. "For most people in Wayland, our sewage and drainage problems are a number one issue. The current system of sewage disposal isn't working."

The proposed wastewater treatment project will be considered at Wayland's town council meeting in May.

Series members schedule election

A meeting of the Eastern Kentucky Concert series members has been set for Friday, April 20, at 7 p.m. in the Pike Auditorium at Prestonsburg Community College.

The purpose of the meeting is to elect board members for the 1990-91 season.

Following the meeting, the Whitney Trio, a professional performing group consisting of piano, violin and cello, will present a concert at 7:30 p.m.

Man arrested for threatening judge

PIKEVILLE — A Pike County man landed in jail Monday after he allegedly threatened District Judge Miller Kent Carter, according to a warrant executed against Ronnie W. Coleman. The warrant stated that Coleman threatened "to stick a gun up Judge Carter's  and blow it where the sun doesn't shine." Also allegedly included in the threat was Phyllis Coleman, his ex-wife, and anyone else in the courtroom. He remains in the county jail under a $10,000 full cash bond. According to court records, the departure from the uniform bail schedule was because of "seriousness of the offense" and Coleman's "anticipated actions if released." (The Appalachian News-Express)

Ky Schools

The act sets the following broad goals for schools and students:

*Schools must expect a high level of achievement of all students.

*Schools must develop their students' ability to

(a) use basic communication and math skills for situations they will encounter throughout their lives;

(b) apply principles from math, sciences, arts, humanities, social studies and practical living studies to situations they will encounter throughout their lives;

(c) become self-sufficient individuals;

(d) become responsible members of a family, work group or community;

(e) think and solve problems in school situations and in life;

(f) connect and integrate experiences and new knowledge with what they have previously learned and build on past learning experiences to acquire new information through various sources.

*Schools are to improve their students' rate of school attendance.

*Schools are to reduce their students' dropout rate.

*Schools are to reduce physical and mental health barriers to learning.

*Schools are to be measured on the proportion of students who make a successful transition to work, post-secondary education and the military.

If the act works, dramatic changes will take place in terms of how students, teachers, administrators, parents and communities in general experience and react to education.

For instance, in Floyd County (and all other Kentucky counties), the potentially political responsibility of hiring and firing school personnel will no longer be in the hands of the school board.

Principals will share their decision-making management responsibilities with teams of teachers and parents. (See related story on B1.)

Also, first through third grades as we know them will cease to exist in favor of an ungraded "primary school."

And because of the high number of poverty level students, Floyd County schools will receive increased state funding and will be expected to generate more tax dollars locally.

The changes — much more comprehensive than the aforementioned — span, governance, curriculum and financing.

Over the next few weeks, The Times will attempt to explain changes required by the reform act and timetables in each of these areas. Reactions from those people who will be most affected by the changes will also be offered.

Next week: How the Education Reform Act will affect management, or governance, of the Floyd County School System.

The two recently completed a 40-hour training program in responding to hazardous material emergencies, such as chemical spills. The training, conducted by the US Environmental Protection Agency, makes Blackburn and Moore "probably the only two firefighters in Eastern Kentucky" who are certified technicians in the field. Also taking the course was David Chaffins of the state office of Disaster and Emergency Services. Chaffins, said Blackburn, is preparing a 10-county response team for such emergencies in the area. Meanwhile, all our mothers fought a losing battle against the black grime of the coal camp. Grime and poverty.

The ever present poverty, the hardships they faced — having babies at home, losing children to disease, never knowing if the miner crushed and killed beneath falling slate was their man or some other wife's man — all of these were cruelly etched into our mothers' faces.

The few rare times the officials' wives dropped in, they were always nicely dressed, and whether deliberate or not, our mothers were put at a disadvantage. These visits never lasted long, and the visitors were careful to avert their eyes when they spied us older children lugging buckets of water for the family wash. They tried hard not to stare at the naked light bulb and fly paper dangling side by side from the center of the ceiling, and they were much too polite to remark upon the dark and dreary rooms.

Yes, they had to feel some fear.

Miss Thelma Daniels, retired teacher and beloved by more students from Wayland than even she can count, grew up in Wayland before most of us, and she recounted,

"I don't think my years of growing up were very typical of a mining town, nor did I think Wayland in later years was quite as ideal. Whoever managed Wayland at my time of growing up must have been very nice for I remember my young years with pleasure.

"Back then, the garbage was picked up once or twice a week, the garbage cans were supplied by the company. You found no paper or litter on the sidewalks. The sidewalks downtown had flower borders. I do not remember any child bothering them. There was always a flag flying near what is now the post office. It was a bank when I was growing up. Next to the bank, where there are small houses now, there were tennis courts.

"I lived on Front Street and across from my house was a playground — there were swings, trapeze, seesaws and merry-go-rounds — all made by the men at the shops. There were no playground supervisors, but I do not remember many disagreements among the children. We often played around the office building making clover chains and looking for four leaf clovers and we found some."

tration because they've tried to improve their community," said Antle. "They just haven't received any support. My office is limited in what it can do. We only provide loans and can't discriminate against those who seek them."

Antle did reveal that the house which residents say is the center of the neighborhood problem does have an FHA loan.

A group of 12 concerned David citizens met Tuesday with a Kentucky State Police trooper to discuss the problem. According to Greene, Trooper Larry Prater said that state police were aware of the problem in School House Hollow. Different courses of action were considered, and there was general agreement that the community would have to organize itself to address the concerns in the hollow.

As the David community turns its attention to the problems in School House Hollow, residents have increased pressure on local law enforcement officials to deal with alleged illegal activity in the area. Residents say they will continue to push for action until the disturbances in the community are halted.

"We need to make a wholesome community here, using Christian values," said Hall. "I moved here three years ago from Detroit. We lived in a neighborhood with blacks and Arabs and never had a problem. I'd take that neighborhood back in a minute, considering all this trouble we're having here."

(Wednesday's edition of The Times will examine the state and local law enforcement response to reported problems in David.)

By Pam Shingler

Last Sunday I did something I should have done long before.

For a couple of years, my mother and aunt have talked of visiting their great aunt, the only close relative on their mother's side who is still alive. Occasionally over the years, they have seen her niece at the grocery store and have gotten reports on Aunt Sarah. In her 90s, she still got around well, was alert and had a good memory, they were told.

My mother and aunt often spoke of visiting her, not only as a thoughtful gesture, but also to learn more about mamaw's family. Though mamaw's parents were part of the large Castle clan of Johnson County, they moved to Pike County when she was young, then to Floyd and there was little interaction with the extended family, even when mamaw ended up back in her home county.

This winter, my mother learned that her great-aunt (the second wife of my grandmother's uncle) had been hospitalized twice. Last week they heard that she had turned 100 years old. So finally I got off my duff and we went to Aunt Sarah's home in the Greentown section of Paintsville. (Certainly, distance played no part in our lapse.)

Climbing the steep steps to the house on the hill was no easy task for my mother who is 79, my aunt who is 81 and my uncle who is 83. But with the grit that's kept them going, they made it.

We were all saddened by what we saw. Aunt Sarah, who remained in our minds as cheerful, strong, Indian-colored, is now a shriveled, leather-skinned, pale woman confined to a hospital bed in her son's living room. Her hearing is so poor as to make conversation almost impossible. Her son communicates with her by understanding her signals. Her speech is slurred. Her head bobs and she spends her time staring out the window. Her son says she longs to sit on the porch, but he's afraid she's too frail for the cool air.

We stayed a proper time, enjoyed a drop in visit by Aunt Sarah's niece and got a kick out of seeing the ancient lady still chewing her tobacco.

But we were all sorry for the missed opportunity of seeing Aunt Sarah before her illness. We missed out on learning the family tales she has stored away in her mind — probably never to be unlocked again. We missed the little pieces that would have helped us shape a better understanding of who we are and the type of people we come from.

After the visit, we drove on into the country, to Tom's Creek and River where my grandmother's ancestors settled when Johnson was still a part of Lawrence and Floyd counties, where Jenny Wiley died and where her niece Rutha Sellars married into the prolific Castle family that gave us a set of genes.

Driving past cleared, cultivated river bottoms, almost litter-free highways and neat, proud houses, I felt closer to my grandmother who died more than 25 years ago, before I was interested enough to capture her family stories.

Her ancestral home reminded me of her love for the soil, of her ability to grow anything from beans to people, of her talent for making a shack appear quaint with swept yard and blooming plants, of her ingenuity in recycling practically everything.

We can't bring mamaw back and we can't undo what time and illness have done to Aunt Sarah, but just for a short while, we felt the kinship of place — their place which still holds part of who they were and, we hope, part of us.

Pick it up

Dear Editor,

Wheelwright High School's journalism class is still sponsoring Earth Day, April 22. We would greatly appreciate any help the public can contribute in beautifying our community and country. We've already begun new projects which include an "Adopt-A-Spot" that lets someone adopt a piece of land and keep it clean.

In their honor we will acknowledge that spot as their very own with a poster. We are also having a poster and aluminum can contest in which an appropriate prize will be awarded to the winner.

We have only just begun to make a difference in our environment. Now we need your help. We're very glad to see everyone in our class pulling together for a good cause and if saving our lives isn't a good cause then nothing is. We still need help, so if you see a small piece of paper lying around then pick it up, even if you weren't the one who threw it down.

Sincerely,

Thanks

Dear Editor,

I am writing this letter to thank Sgt. Jim Mullins for getting my vehicle unlocked over the weekend in downtown Prestonsburg. It's obviously very hard to break into a Ford Ranger, as Sgt. Mullins and I found out.

Sgt. Mullins had to try two different tools, but after a great deal of time he succeeded in unlocking the truck. It was getting very cool and my jacket was in the truck cab, but Sgt. Mullins didn't give up. He is a fine example of professionalism in the Prestonsburg Police Department and a good reflection on the city.

Banish the rock

Dear Editor,

Everybody loves and admires the beauty and significance of Archer Park — even a transplanted Floyd Countian like me.

I just noted in your fine newspaper that the sporting aspect of the park is being improved to satisfy the needs of our young people. That's great.

What's great, too, is the war memorial to our fallen comrades, relatives and friends since WWII.

But — there always seems to be a "but" — the memorial could be even greater with a few cosmetic touches here and there. I refer specifically to that would-be fountain with the huge rock fronting the memorial itself. The rock is grotesque; it obscures the entrance to the roll call of names we value so highly.

I call on my comrades in the VFW, Legion and DAV to do something about that ugly rock. It should be removed, in my opinion, and be replaced with a flower garden reminiscent of the immortal Flanders Field. Flowers along the lead-in walks would also enhance the beauty of this memorial we all cherish as a symbol of the ultimate sacrifice for the freedom we enjoy and still protect with our lives.

I know my fine comrade and friend, Eddie Akers of the VFW, can lead the charge for carrying out this project so dear to all our hearts.

Sincerely,
—Paul R. Jordan

Kim's Korner

By Kim Frasure

How annoying it would be if we all had the same taste. Have you ever thought about it? If not, let's review a few of the possibilities.

We'd all be walking around town in the exact same clothes, shoes and our hairstyles would all be alike. Yuck! You say, Well, how about food? We'd go out to eat and have no choices, for again we have the same taste, remember.

There is a point to this craziness of likeness. What is it? You say. It's the ending of the "The Thrill of Victory and the Agony of Defeat" saga.

If it were true that we all saw things the same there would be only one winner. But, thank goodness we all have different likes, dislikes, attitudes and personalities which make this wonderful world of ours go round.

People in competition, sports, pageants or whatever they're competing for, sometimes forget the old cliché "different strokes for different folks."

We'd all like it if our team went all the way to State and brought home a piece of the net. And better yet, we'd like it if our daughter brought home the crown in every pageant she entered.

But, life's funny that way. We can't see our favorite team go all the way year after year. We can't see our daughters bring home the crowns after every pageant either.

But, losing makes us try harder. We learn from our mistakes. We act with pride in a job done well — for next time it may be us in the winner's circle. Winning is wonderful, and winners must show sportsmanship as well as those in the runners up position.

As adults we must teach our children to be kind, respectful and thankful. And, we must be examples for them accordingly.

Can you imagine a world with no Reds, no Wildcats, no Indy 500, and no Miss America, no hot dogs, no apple pie.

Of course not.

It doesn't mean, because our team lost at the regionals, that the referees were paid and threw the game in the other direction. It doesn't mean the judges of the pageant were bought or told to sway their selections of the winner to a certain young lady.

It's just simply a matter of difference. Different likes, different types of play in the game of basketball. It just means different people like different things.

Although there are some who will disagree with me, it is still a fact. And, thank goodness it is. I'd hate to walk into work on Monday and see us all dressed alike from head to toe.

The "Thrill of Victory" is sweet, but must be handled with dignity. The "Agony of Defeat" is discouraging and must also be handled with dignity.

EASTER — THE RESURRECTION by Myrtle Berry

What hope, what joy is the message "He is not here for he has risen, just as he said he would." This was the divine announcement to mankind. The fulfillment of the long promised victory over death. Let us not be motivated by desires to dress up in fine dresses and new Easter bonnets and forget the true meaning of Easter. For in the hearts and minds of everyone "He is risen" should be the greatest thing in all our minds. Every heart should swell with joy and gratitude, for on this day was put into action the divine promise of eternal life. In God's due time, all will come forth into a newness of life. All will be resurrected.

So, with the coming of Easter and the opening buds of Springtime, our hearts are made glad in the assurance that life is everlasting. Although our bodies fall prey to death, they shall awaken to a joyous morn of Springtime and eternal life.

People cannot live and be happy without God in their lives, any more than a plant can live and grow without roots. Human life comes from nowhere and leads to nowhere without God in it. Faith in God and Christ whom he has sent is not only doing us a great favor. For after all, God was doing the greatest favor to us when he sent his only son to show us the way. While Jesus lived on the Earth he showed us how faith works. He had faith in his father (God). He followed his will, trusted him in all things, even when it looked as if his father had abandoned him.

Sometimes we misunderstand the true meaning of faith. Therefore, Easter should make us certain of Christ's promise, also the warranty of our faith in Christ.

On Easter morning, the warmth from the rising sun brings inner peace from God's risen Son. We must always remember Easter for what it represents to us. And renew our faith and trust in God the Father and his son he sent to die for us.

Easter

The Bible tells a story Of a Sunday long ago. Of Jesus our Dear Savior, For us, his love has shown. The Christians, they were ridiculed. No peace could they find. Pilate was the ruler, Who neither loved nor was kind!

Two others, who were sinners, Were to be nailed upon a cross. Pilate found our Jesus, To us, our greatest loss! He gathered round all the people. He wanted everyone to see, That this man we called Jesus, His own life, he couldn't free.

Pilate made Jesus carry A cross upon his back. All the way to Calvary, No water, only his cross to pack! When, at last, the hill they saw, The tears fell down from their eyes. The crown of thorns upon his head, And the sword into his side!

The nails into his hands they drove. And all they heard him say... "Forgive them Father," he whispered, As God lifted his spirit away. After a moment it was over. The Earth, it grew so dark. The only light upon the land. Was the lightning as it sparked!

They took Jesus down from the cross.

The sorrow spread throughout the land. God made it known, he did not approve, For the darkness was so heavy, like sand! His body was placed inside a tomb, A large stone rolled to cover the door, To make sure Jesus couldn't get out. For Pilate could not stand any more!

But on Sunday, the Christians arose To give thanks to the Jesus we know. Many rushed quickly to the tomb. To their surprise, there was no gloom! Our Jesus, was alive, he'd arose! This day, our Father had chose! Many knelt slowly at his feet, To touch Jesus, this memory to keep!

Mary touched the scars in his hands, And the wound in his side like a fan! And now all the Christians could see, Of the Savior who died for you and me! To have a Sunday, and not forget, Worship together, just don't sit. This is what Easter means to me. If he hadn't died, where would we be?

ary, due to the anticipated loss of students to Prestonsburg Middle School.

An unspecified number of non-tenured teachers will not be rehired for next year because of the decrease in student enrollment. Special education and science teachers were exempted from the reduction. The decision is expected to affect four or five teachers.

Russell Frazier, assistant school superintendent, noted that the notification of possible demotions and hiring cuts was required by the state to be given to school administrators by May 15 and to teachers by April 30. No final decisions have been made on the recommendations, said Frazier.

In other board action, Catherine Frazier of the Floyd County Retired Teachers Association requested assistance from the board to preserve a one-room schoolhouse in Daniel's Creek, believed to be the last such structure constructed in Kentucky. Frazier noted that the building could be moved to the Prestonsburg Community College campus, where it could be converted into a museum.

"Our schools have been receiving a lot of criticism lately, but I know we have bright children and hardworking teachers here," said Frazier. "Let's use this school to create a landmark for future generations here in the county."

The board expressed its support for the project.

Jean Rosenberg, chairperson of the Floyd County Education Forum, addressed the board, noting the historic education reform which had been signed into law by Gov. Wallace Wilkinson Wednesday.

She distributed a synopsis of the bill to the board and encouraged the board to take a leadership position in informing the local community about the new bill.

Robert J. Gover, designee of the State Department of Education for Floyd County, presented a report on the county's education progress over the past year.

"We should be proud of Floyd County's movement from the bottom of the barrel in the state's 177 districts, up 20 places," said Gover. "I hope to see another movement up 20 places this year."

Gover said that teachers have played a key role in the progress being made in Floyd schools. He also noted that the loss of 123 students in the past year, which constitutes about six classrooms of children, could require reductions in teachers for next year. Custodial staffing, said Gover, should remain the same.

Attendance, said Gover, has improved in the first five months of this school year. Gover particularly commended high school principals for the attendance improvements. He also suggested that all schools in the district set attendance boundaries, in order to better control enrollment. The report was accepted by the board for consideration.

There was no bid placed to raze the old Betsy Layne High School. The project will be rebid next month.

In order to distinguish between full and part-time employees, the board established a policy stating that full-time employees must work more than four hours per day, and part-time employees work less than four hours a day.

The school calendar was considered. Hager requested disaster days be approved by the state for a snow day in January and for McDowell's rash outbreak days. The state refused to approve the disaster days, but Hager will ask for a reconsideration. If the state refuses approval, the days will have to be made up at the end of the year.

An out of court settlement was agreed upon in the case of Conley v. Slone and the Floyd County School Board. The board agreed to pay $1250, for a car accident that occurred between a teacher who was allegedly driving on school business and another driver.

Finally, Hager commended eight students from the county who had been selected as Governor's scholars. He also praised a fifth grade class at Harold Elementary School for winning an all expense paid trip from Pepsi-Cola Co. to travel to Washington, DC. The class won the trip for its excellent attendance record.

Coach Clay: 'We'll play like Loyola Marymount'

The 15th Region Girl's All-Star team that will take part in the Kentucky Mountain Shootout tonight at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse will be a team loaded with basketball savvy.

"We're just going to let them play like Loyola Marymount," says coach Bridget Clay. "We've been working on our fast break and we will run the ball and get up and down the floor."

When you start talking about the talent on this all-star team, you have to start with one Stacey Spake from Elkhorn City, who led the Lady Cougars to the final four of the state tournament this year. Spake was the spark plug for the Lady Cougars, and she knows how to run a team on the court. She's a good outside shooter and plays a tough defense.

Teammate Kari Belcher will also make the trip to Prestonsburg. Belcher is a top rebounder as well as a scorer. Belcher's shot may look awkward, but it is deadly.

The only senior on the Sheldon Clark Lady Cards team, Terri Harmon, will also be showcased for the college scouts to see. Harmon is a competitor — she has to be, to be coached by one of the region's best, Robin Harmon. Coach Harmon will assist Clay in the all-star meet.

Basketball fans have to like Susan Kelly of Mullins. Kelly is a pure shooter from outside, as well as playing a good game underneath.

Three Floyd County players will play in the Classic tonight at the Fieldhouse. Jedon Hood of Wheelwright will give the 15th Region girls some size underneath. Hood has a soft touch around the basket and can use the backboard to her advantage.

Floyd County's "Girl's Player of the Year," Brenda Hamilton, will also represent the 58th District on the court. Hamilton's quickness on defense will be a big plus for the local all-stars.

One of the premiere players in the all-star classic from the 58th District will be Jo Ann Conn of Allen Central. Conn helped the Lady Rebels to the district championship this year and had the highest single game total points in the girl's regional this year. Conn tossed in 40 points against Johnson Central in her opening game.

"I just told the girls to go out and have fun," Clay explained. "They have practiced hard and seem a little tired. If they play against the 16th Region girls like they have against one another we should be in good shape."

Named to the team late was Emma McCarty of Johnson Central and Melissa Anderson of Dorton. They will replace Candis Tackett of Pikeville and Krystal Dotson of Phelps, who chose not to play.

"Kari (Butcher) can shoot the ball from anywhere and Stacey (Spake) is a tremendous passer," Clay remarked. "The girls seem to play with a lot of confidence."

The two teams will meet again tomorrow night in a 7 p.m. start at the Summit Junior High School gym in Ashland.

15th Region Girl's All-Stars

The 15th Region Girl's All-Stars will be going up against the girl All-Stars from the 16th Region tonight at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse. The two teams will get together for game two tomorrow night in Ashland. Front row: Kari Belcher, Terri Harmon, Stacy Spake, Brenda Hamilton, Melissa Anderson, Jamie Clay. Coach Parido: 'Do What You Do Best' In All-Star Game

RICK SMITH

Tonight at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse, basketball fans from all over the 15th Region will converge as the second annual Kentucky Mountain Shootout gets underway.

Teams from the 15th Region and the 16th Region will hook up tonight with the girls playing at 7 p.m. and the boys game following at about 8:45 p.m.

"I told the players to go out there and do their own thing," Prestonsburg coach Gordon Parido stated. "We will be playing all the players and we will probably have a different five starting in each game. They know what they can do, and I told them to do their thing as long as they were in control. If they cannot do it then they would give the ball up to someone else."

"We will have no strategy, just a game of fast break basketball," he said. "This is a very talented team. You have a Steve Bailey who has good quickness. Johnny Hale who can score from outside. The inside play of a Kermit Belcher, Rick Smith and Sam Stewart. Rick Conley is a strong kid and Barry Hopkins has good touch toward the basket."

Hopkins is the only one who has already signed a letter-of-intent, and that was with Pikeville College. "I have already been working out with them," Hopkins said. "And I look forward to playing with the Bears next year." Hopkins is from Millard High School.

Steve Bailey will be traveling to Marshall on a football scholarship next fall. Don't be surprised if you see the speedster on the basketball floor also.

Chris Slone of Prestonsburg is being pursued by several colleges, as is Betsy Layne's Sam Stewart. Neither player has decided on a school.

Alice Lloyd has shown some interest in Keith Sheldon of McDowell and Allen Central's Rick Smith. Both players would be a big catch for the Eagles.

As for defense, the Prestonsburg mentor said that the team will play basically a man-to-man defense because that is what the college coaches will be wanting to see. Parido said that basketball fans will be able to see the best against the best in this game.

Besides having a different starting line up each night, Parido said that the substituting will be predetermined.

"Of course, if a player is having a good game he may get to play seven to eight minutes more than others. The emphasis will not be so much on winning as it will be on playing well," explained Parido. "College coaches will be watching the game and it will be a chance for these players to receive a scholarship offer."

The game will be played according to NCAA rules and there will be two 20 minute halves. "These are not high school senior players any more," said the 15th Region All-Star coach. "They will be playing by college rules in college."

Speed, quickness and outside shooting, as well as a strong inside game, should make the 15th Region All-Stars a definite favorite in tonight's contest. Parido says that any of these players could be good NAIA college players.

Missing from the line up will be Jody Thompson of Feds Creek who chose not to play in the Classic. Thompson will be a walk-on at UK next season. The 58th District will have five players — Sam Stewart, Rick Smith, Keith Shelton, Chris Slone and Bobby Hood — on the all-star team. Assisting Parido will be Johnny Ray Turner and Monroe Jones.

After tonight's game the scene will switch to Ashland tomorrow night at the Summit Junior High School. Game times will be the same as tonight's. Rowan County High School coach Tim More will be coaching the 16th Regional All-Stars.

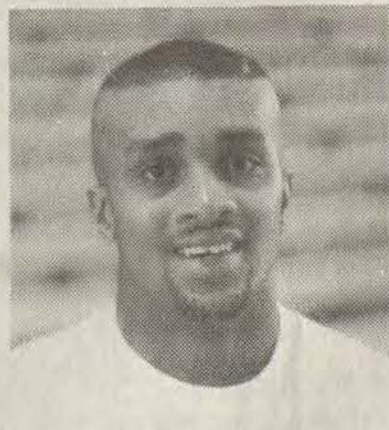

15th Regional Boy's All-Stars

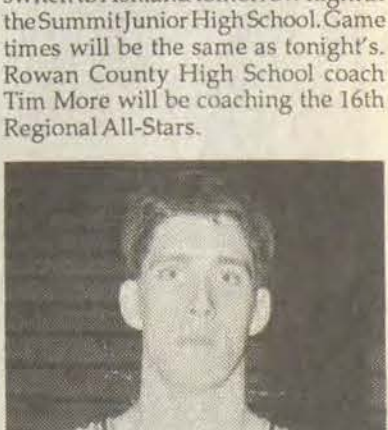

The 15th Regional All-Stars will tangle with the 16th Regional All-Stars tonight at 8:45 at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse. This will be the second year the series has been held. Front row: Johnny Hale, Steve Bailey, Ronald Helton, Bobby Hood, Chris Slone. Coach Gardner Martin calls it quits

One time Prestonsburg and Wayland coach Garnis Martin, who became the winningest football coach in the state of Kentucky in 1985, has decided to call it quits after 41 years, 38 of them as head coach at Bardstown High School.

In an earlier interview with the Floyd County Times, Martin indicated this may have been his last year at Bardstown. Said Martin, "I thought I would coach a couple more years, but now I am thinking about retiring. I don't know what else I will do but just enjoy myself while I am still able to." Martin made no secret of his love for the school where he has been coach for the past 38 years and the game that has been so good to him. But Garnis Martin has been good for the game.

Martin coached football at Wayland in 1951. Before that he was head basketball and baseball coach at Prestonsburg High School where he took his Blackcat basketball team to the semifinals of the 15th Regional tournament in 1950.

At Bardstown Martin's football teams compiled a record of 271 victories as opposed to 114 losses and seven ties.

"My whole life has been spent in football, after school," he stated. "I don't know why I want to retire, I stay after school anyway."

Martin said that when he retires, he and his wife Rhea will do some traveling while they are healthy enough to enjoy it.

Bardstown principal Jude Talbott said that the retirement of Martin will be a big loss to the school, but if anyone deserved retirement, Martin does.

"We will lose a lot of tradition here at Bardstown," says Talbott. "It won't be an easy job of finding a replacement. This school is not used to searching for football coaches."

Bardstown won three state football titles while Martin was at the helm. He won Class A crowns in 1967 and 1970. Bardstown won the Class AA playoffs in 1981.

Martin's 1989 Bardstown team recorded the school's worst record of 1-9. The mentor was 1-7 at Wayland in 1951. Martin says the highlight of his career was when he was elected to the Kentucky Hall of Fame. "It is an honor to join the likes of a Pee Wee Reese and Johnny Unitas and other distinguished personnel."

In 1986 and again in 1989 Martin was chosen the Region Three (Southeastern United States) Coach of the Year by the National High School Coaches Association.

Talbott says that the school will look within its system for a replacement and then go outside.

Wallen takes first in Discus Throw

Allen Central junior Brian Wallen captured first place in the Pikeville High School Track and Field meet Tuesday evening at the Bob Amos Park.

Wallen, last year's 15th Region discus champion, is a top favorite to win the state title later this year.

Wallen took first place with a throw of 120 feet. The closest throw to Wallen was a toss of a 100 feet, according to his coach Forrest Hughes.

Fiveschools, Pikeville, Paintsville, Whitesburg, Knott County Central and Allen Central, took part in the meet, which will be held each Thursday afternoon at the Bob Amos Park weather permitting.

In last year's 15th Regional Track and Field meet, Wallen threw for a distance of 143 feet—second best in the state—to capture the regional title and advanced to the state meet in Lexington, where he was nosed out on the last throw. Wallen finished fourth in the state last season.

"Brian is working hard," said coach Hughes. "He works out four days a week on weights and throws about four days a week. Right now he is not throwing hard. He has dropped about 10-15 pounds and is much quicker than last year. He is young and I believe he can be a state champion."

Hughes says that it will be between Wallen and a thrower from Lexington Catholic who comes out on top. "I certainly would like to have a state title before I retire."

Hughes states that there is a lack of competition in this area for the Allen Central junior, and he hopes to be able to go to Boyd County for a meet for a little stiffer competition.

Wallen's next meet will be back at the Bob Amos Park this coming Saturday.

"I have tried to get Brian to ride bikes with me," Hughes, who is a cycle enthusiast, said. "Bike riding is a good form of exercise."

Hughes, in his own right, has been taking part in cycle meets around the state.

"I ride about 200 miles a week," he explained. "During school days, I'll ride around two to three hours a day. On weekends I get in about five to six hours of riding."

Hughes says that he is getting ready for a 100-mile ride on May 6 in Cincinnati.

Wild Side

TURKEY CALLS AND CALLING

For most turkey hunters, the thrill of the hunt is calling to a wise old gobbler and convincing him that you are a hot hen. It is a breathtaking experience to sit perfectly still while listening to the gobbler warily approach and then watching as the big bird steps into range, spreads his feathers and struts around in a fascinating courtship ritual.

The experience becomes even more meaningful when you consider that you have fooled the gobbler and he is, in fact, courting you!

Turkey calling is one of the oldest hunting skills practiced in North America. Drawings and etchings on cave walls, many of them as old as several thousand years, depict American Indians luring turkeys with their voices. The American Indians also invented the peg-and-slate calls, wingbone yelpers and turkey decoys, all of which are still used today.

Today, turkey calling is a multi-million dollar business, and over 200 companies manufacture thousands of different turkey calls.

With the glut of turkey calls on the market coupled with the variety of noises made by the wild turkey, many hunters are, unfortunately, befuddled. The beginning hunter will probably ask himself: "What calls do I need? What noises should I make?"

David Hale, co-owner of Knight & Hale Game Calls in Cadiz, says, "Most turkeys are lured into gun range with two very simple calls, the yelp and the cluck. If you learn these two calls you can become a successful turkey hunter."

Other calls, primarily the cackle, purr, kee-kee run and the gobble, are more advanced calls that are used to help the hunter bag older, wiser gobblers that may need a little more persuasion.

The Yelp: Wild turkeys "yelp" in a variety of situations. Most often, they do so when trying to locate other turkeys. In the spring, hens yelp to let gobblers know where they are. In the fall, hens yelp to collect their brood.

Typically, hens yelp in a series of about five soft notes which sound like "yoke-yoke-yoke-yoke-yoke". Some expert callers, however, believe that the yelp is a two-syllable sound pronounced "kee-YOKE". There are variations in the yelp.

The yelps of a lost turkey are 10-20 loud and raspy calls, while the tree yelp, made from roost at first light, is only two or three barely audible notes.

Since hens make this noise in the spring to tell the gobblers where they are, the yelp is the turkey hunter's most useful call. In using the yelp call, remember that turkeys yelp sparingly. Don't overdo it. Too, you should know that virtually every turkey call will faithfully reproduce the yelp of a hen turkey.

The Cluck (and putt): A turkey clucks to express contentment, or to reassure the flock that all is well. The cluck is also used by a bird trying to regroup with the flock. When clucking, make only one or two at a time and try to sound content. A cluck sounds just like "cluck".

A "putt", in turkey vernacular, means virtually the opposite of a cluck, and it is used to express alarm. Putts are sharp, quick noises which are very similar to a cluck except that they are more urgent and quick. When hunting, take care not to duplicate a putt or you will alarm the birds and cause them to disperse.

As David Hale noted, a turkey hunter can be successful with the use of just the yelp and the cluck. To his credit, David and his partner, Harold Knight, developed a push-pull type box call which perfectly (and easily) reproduces the yelp and the cluck. The #114A Camo Push-Pull Box Yelper may be ordered from Knight and Hale Game Calls, PO Box 468, Cadiz, KY 42211. The call is $14.95 plus $2.50 postage.

You should know that Knight and Hale is one of the nation's leading game call companies, and that they produce calls for virtually every animal (including bull frogs! — it really works, by the way) in North America. In my opinion their deer calls, the EZ-Grunter Plus, are the finest whitetail calls in America, and they are the only calls that I will carry. If you are an avid hunter, write and request a catalog.

If you are a novice turkey hunter, or even an experienced one wanting to learn a little more, I can highly recommend "Wild Turkey Hunting", a fact-filled, 182-page book published by the National Rifle Association. At just $5 (plus $1.50 postage), the book is a real bargain. Good hunting and fishing!

Receiving the funds

Mary Chiles Hospital in Mt. Sterling has given Morehead State University $10,000 in support of the two-year associate degree in nursing program. MSU is in the process of reinstating the two-year nursing degree in the fall semester. The funds have been earmarked for faculty salaries. On hand for the presentation were, from left, Dr. Charles M. Derrickson, Dean of MSU's College of Applied Sciences and Technology; MSU President C. Nelson Grote; Paul D. Cowden, chairman of the hospital board, and R. Alan Newberry, hospital administrator. Dropout Prevention Week Set April 15-21

Gov. Wallace Wilkinson has issued a proclamation designating April 15-21 as Dropout Prevention Focus Week.

The Floyd County Board of Education has been working to reduce the dropout rate for 1989-90 school year and has been fairly successful in this effort, according to Pete Grigsby Jr., dropout prevention coordinator. The average daily attendance for the first five months of this year was 95 percent. The school system is working to improve last year's average daily attendance of 92.7 percent to 93.5 percent which is the average daily attendance required by the state. School officials are also working to reduce the 4.2 percent dropout rate from last year's school term, according to Grigsby.

Gov. Wilkinson encourages all Kentuckians to become aware of the seriousness of Kentucky's dropout problem and to become actively involved in solving the problem which belongs to all citizens. He noted that "the cost of dropping out of school is so devastating in terms of economic growth, costing Kentucky citizens $4 billion in lifetime earning potential for each year we fail to graduate one-third of our students, and currently over one-third of our youth do not complete high school with their graduating class."

The Governor added, "Kentucky's economic and technological progress and continuing improvement of her citizens' quality of life are so closely related to the educational growth and development of her youth. All Kentucky youth need basic education that prepares them for an ever changing job market which today requires the skills of reading, computation, communication, creativeness and logic."

Wal-Mart awards local scholarship

Nelson Walker, store manager of the Prestonsburg Wal-Mart, recently announced the selection of Gregory Dye of McDowell High School as the 1990 recipient of the $1000 Wal-Mart Foundation Community Scholarship.

The scholarship is awarded each spring by Wal-Mart to an area college or university-bound high school senior and is payable over a one-year period.

Dye, a senior at McDowell, plans to attend Berea College.

In making the announcement, Walker said, "It is with great pleasure that we announce Gregory as the winner of this year's scholarship. It was a difficult decision for our team of well-qualified, local judges who had to select from many outstanding students."

Walker said scholarship criteria is based primarily on academic performance, involvement in the school and community and financial need. Dye has been active in all.

In addition, Jon Mari Ilayan, also of McDowell High School, was selected as a scholarship alternate.

Recognized for their efforts as judges in the selection were Thomas Hereford, Doug Hicks, Joan Chaffins and Ruth Rainey.

The Prestonsburg Wal-Mart Foundation Community Scholarship is one of more than 1300 scholarships totaling $1.3 million being given throughout the Bentonville, Ark., based retail chain's 27-state, 1325 store territory.

Scholarship contestants sought

The pageant committee for the Miss Heart of the Highlands Scholarship Pageant and the Miss Floyd County Scholarship Pageant is now seeking young women between the ages of 17-25 who are interested in pursuing the Miss Kentucky title which is a preliminary to the Miss America crown.

The pageant will involve interview, evening gown, swimsuit and talent competition. If interested, call Teresa Robinson at (606) 639-8609 after 5 p.m.

Marshall to host free band clinic

Marshall University will sponsor a free clinic for marching band percussionists on April 16-17.

Guest artist-in-residence will be Michael R. Bump, assistant professor of percussion studies at the University of Mississippi. Clinician-arranger for several marching ensembles in the South, Bump has served as head percussion instructor-arranger for the Memphis Blues Drum and Bugle Corps, as well as for the Phantom Regiment Drum and Bugle Corps.

The clinic is being supported by the Pearl Drum Co. of Nashville, Tenn. For information, call the Marshall music department at 304-696-3117.

Local schools to participate in site-based management

by Gary K. Frazier
Asst. Superintendent, Instruction
Floyd County Schools

The Floyd County Board of Education has been notified that the Office of Instruction will receive a grant from the Kentucky Department of Education for $10,200 to partially fund the development and implementation of a program to pilot models of site-based management in two schools.

The program will be developed in conjunction with The Center for Leadership in School Reform, based in Louisville.

Participatory leadership differs from a "top down" management system and necessitates an organization structure where there are opportunities to work for leaders who listen to the ideas of individuals, to think independently as opposed to simply carrying out instructions, to grow personally by providing challenging work assignments and to recognize and be recognized for individual contributions to the effectiveness of the organization.

To become involved in this pilot, the faculty of a school will need to conduct a secret ballot of certified employees. The one high school and one elementary/middle school with the highest percentage of faculty supporting their involvement will be selected.

During the spring, summer and fall of the 1990-91 school year, the faculties of those two pilot schools will receive technical assistance from The Center for Leadership in School Reform and develop and implement participatory leadership models.

What these two schools learn will be used to further develop the district's models of participatory leadership for future years.

Principals and teachers have received more specific information in a packet sent to the school. A kickoff presentation is scheduled for all certified staff of the Floyd County schools on Thursday, April 19 at 5 p.m. at the Prestonsburg Elementary School auditorium. Interested citizens and groups are also invited to attend.

The Center for Leadership in School Reform will provide a team of nationally recognized leaders in the field of site-based management to assist Floyd County in implementing the program.

The two schools selected will be developing and implementing a style of site-based management consistent with the recently enacted school-reform legislation. The Floyd County schools have the opportunity to be a model for other school districts.

All Kentucky schools will be required to have site-based management by July 1, 1996.

The team of consultants will be headed by Bob Cole, Margaret (Marty) Vowels and Dean M. Hite.

Cole is vice president of the Louisville center. He was editor of Phi Delta Kappan magazine for seven years and a member of the magazine staff for 14 years. During his tenure as editor, the magazine won more than 40 Distinguished Achievement Awards (three for his editorials) from the Educational Press Association of America, as well as two dozen awards from other associations.

After he left the magazine staff in January 1988, Cole spent nearly two years traveling across the Midwest visiting small schools in small town America. His book about his travels, Schooling in the Lost Land: Wandering Through Rural America, is nearing completion.

Vowels, an associate with the center, is former president of the Kentucky Middle School Association. Before joining the center, she was a teacher and administrator in Jefferson County schools.

Hite, a clinical instructor for Jefferson County Schools/Gheens Academy, is responsible for supervising the establishment of participatory management schools, coordinating staff training activities relating to school restructuring projects, and assisting administrators and teachers in the development and implementation of site-based management initiatives. She is former deputy associate superintendent for the Office of Exceptional Children, Kentucky Department of Education.

Seeking tutors for summer

Applications are being taken for the Hindman Settlement School's 1990 Summer Tutorial Program. They can be picked up at the office between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. each weekday.

Persons who have had previous experience in tutoring in this program and outstanding college students will receive first priority for hiring.

Tutor training will be held June 15-16 and the program will run from June 18 - July 27.

For further information call 785-5475 or write to PO Box 844, Hindman, 41822. The Hindman Settlement School is an equal opportunity employer.

MSU grant to fund nursing program

Morehead State University has received a $10,000 gift from Mary Chiles Hospital in Mt. Sterling for the university's two-year nursing degree program.

Earmarked for faculty salaries, the check was presented recently by Paul D. Cowden, hospital board chairman, to MSU President C. Nelson Grote.

MSU's College of Applied Sciences and Technology, in conjunction with the MSU Foundation, has launched a fund drive to assist the university in reinstating its associate degree in nursing program effective with the 1990 fall semester. The program was suspended in 1987.

"Morehead State has demonstrated its concern for health care in Eastern Kentucky by reinstating this program to insure the availability of a pool of skilled nursing care professionals," said Cowden. "The board considers its action to be an investment which will enhance the quality of health care not just at Mary Chiles, but throughout the region," he added.

"MSU is most appreciative of the Mary Chiles board's contribution," said Grote. "It is such gifts as this from the private sector that allow the university to strengthen our programs and assist us in carrying out our mission of service to the region," he added.

"Traditionally, Morehead State has tried to be responsive to the needs of its service region," said Dr. Charles M. Derrickson, Dean of the College of Applied Sciences and Technology. "Once it was determined that relying solely on the BSN degree program was creating a shortage of registered nurses, we began the reinstatement process for the two-year degree.

"So this demonstration of support from a health-care provider we are serving is truly gratifying. It also strengthens the partnership bond between the university and its service region. We anticipate that other health care facilities will volunteer their financial support," Derrickson said.

"With 80 applications already in hand, we expect to have more than 200 candidates for the 40 slots in our first class. The application deadline for the fall class is April 15," the dean added.

With the return of the program, MSU will offer a two-year degree and a four-year BSN degree. The four-year program has two options, one for students to go straight through and one to give registered nurses who have an associate degree or diploma an opportunity to earn the BSN degree in two years.

The latter track has been designed so that nurses can work full time while completing the degree.

Garrett woman wins regional competition

Kimberly Brown of Garrett has been selected as Big Sandy Area Head Start Parent of the Year.

Winner of the Floyd County designation also, Brown was chosen based on her letter on "What Head Start Means to Me." The letter now will be included in state competition in Louisville, April 25-27.

She is married to Edgar Brown and they have three children, Dustin, Misty and Kevin.

The text of the winning letter follows:

"Head Start means a lot to me. It's given me so many things. It's given me time to myself, time to collect my thoughts and gather my peace of mind.

"I'm 23 years old and I have three children, ages 5, 6 and 7. I've decided the best part of my life is raising my children. Head Start has given me the self-esteem I need to raise my children to the best of my ability.

"This year I am chairperson for our center and I do things and go places I didn't know existed. It's given me the confidence to look into the future. It's got me to thinking of what I want to make of my life.

"In the three years I've been involved with the Head Start program, I have had the chance to go back to school and take the GED test. I have my GED now, and I do intend to enroll in community college this fall. For all I have achieved in the past three years and for the self-esteem I've gained, I feel that I owe it all to the Head Start program. I feel like now I can reach my goal in life.

"I hope the Head Start program will always be around, not only to serve our children, but also maybe to help other parents as it has me. I believe in the Head Start program. As a present parent and a past parent, I will always be devoted to the Head Start program."

Parent of the Year

Kimberly Brown, center, the Big Sandy Area Head Start Parent of the Year, was recognized Thursday by the Prestonsburg Rotary Club with a certificate of merit. Floyd County Head Start director Janie Smith, left, presented her with roses, and Rotary President-elect Carla Bolton presented the certificate.

Floyd County 4-H Club members design posters

About 140 members of Floyd County 4-H Clubs competed in a contest to see what they could do with one-half sheet of poster board for promoting 4-H. Members competed in grades 4-8, with no one grade competing against another.

Willard Knipp, Floyd County 4-H Agent, was pleased with the entries in this first year of competition. "I was surprised by the results. There were some good posters and the judges commented on how tough it was to pick a winner."

The winning entry from the fourth grade was Lori Nichols, a student at Garrett Elementary School in Mrs. Hall's class. Shawna Mullins from John M. Stumbo Elementary School was the fifth grade's winning entry.

Prater Elementary's Daniel Cox had the winning entry in the sixth grade division. Karen Music from Clark Elementary won in the seventh grade division and Kathy Webb, also from Clark, had the winning eighth grade entry.

Winning posters will be taken to the Area Poster Competition to be held at Pikeville College on Friday, May 4. Posters will be displayed and judged during the 4-H Area Talk Meet. Posters that win on this level will be taken to Louisville for the State Fair in August.

Knipp noted that the following group of teachers were instrumental in the success of the program, Ms. Lyons and Mrs. Dye from Clark Elementary and Ms. Lawson from Betsy Layne.

In the fourth and fifth grades the following teachers were commended: Mrs. Gayheart from Allen, Harold Newsome and Mrs. Osborne from John M. Stumbo Elementary, Ms. Owens from Melvin and Mrs. Hall from Garrett Elementary.

Outstanding entries

Willard Knipp, Floyd County 4-H Agent, examines posters that several 4-H members throughout the county created to promote their club. He noted he was impressed with the thought and work that went into the project and was complimentary of all the students who entered.

Champions Corner

A BRAND NEW MESSAGE ABOUT ALCOHOL

CHAMPIONS AGAINST DRUGS

GOVERNMENT WARNING: (1) According to the Surgeon General, women should not drink alcohol beverages during pregnancy because of the risk of birth defects. (2) Consumption of alcoholic beverages impairs your ability to drive a car or operate machinery, and may cause health problems.

READ THE WARNING. HEED THE WARNING.

The next time you reach for an alcoholic beverage, stop - and read the label. Why? Alcohol is a drug that is responsible for more deaths each year than all illicit drugs combined (including crack and heroin). And now, every single bottle and can of beer, wine, wine cooler and liquor produced must display a health warning from the U.S. Surgeon General.

The Mountain Regional Champions Against Drugs would like you to know that there are important reasons for the new law that requires these warning labels. The misuse of alcohol can lead to serious health and safety problems, and in certain situations, the only safe choice is not to drink at all. Two examples of these situations are referred to on the warning labels: if you are pregnant, or if you are planning to operate any kind of motor vehicle.

Birth Defects: There is no safe level of drinking during pregnancy. Even an average of 1 to 2 drinks a day may pose a risk for newborns to be underweight and have learning disabilities. You can prevent the mental retardation heavy alcohol use causes by simply not drinking.

Drunk Driving: In 1987 alone, nearly 24,000 people died from car crashes involving a drunk driver. Those same crashes cause more deaths among five to 34-year-olds than anything else. Another extremely dangerous practice is the consumption of alcohol when boating. Many serious boating accidents have been caused by "drunk drivers" on the water.

Drinking too much alcohol at one time can, and often does, cause overdose and death. Young people unaware of this danger are often the victims of overdose.

It's important to understand that alcohol like other mood-altering drugs, carries a potential for addiction. People differ in their reactions to alcohol, and many people, especially those with a family history of alcoholism, are more prone to addiction to alcohol than others.

Alcohol problems afflict one out of every four families. And, despite the fact that the legal drinking age is now 21 nationwide, nearly one-fourth of all 13-year-olds classify themselves as "drinkers."

Drinking is serious business - and not just for pregnant women and those who drive, but for everyone.

SO PLEASE READ THE WARNING. AND HEED THE WARNING.

Young people and adults may request additional information on alcohol and alcoholism from the Mountain Regional Champions Against Drugs at (606) 886-8572, or the State Champions Against Drugs office at 1-800-432-9337.

Local youngsters featured in KET environment program

Individuals can make a world of difference in preserving the environment. Across the nation, programs have been developed that preserve the environment while profiting the pocketbook.

And in four Kentucky communities, including Floyd County, young people are working to ensure there will be a world of beauty and natural resources for all their tomorrows.

In "Kids Caring for Kentucky," airing at 9 p.m. Monday, April 16 immediately following the PBS documentary "Profit the Earth," KET travels across the Commonwealth to bring viewers the hopeful stories of four youth groups who not only care about their environment but also are taking an active role in its preservation.

In the studio, experts will gather to tell viewers how they, too, can take an active role in preserving Earth's natural resources. Host Dick Brown, along with representatives of some of the featured programs, will take viewers' calls during the hour-long program.

At Louisville's inner-city Phyllis Wheatley Elementary School, one of the sites featured in the program, a world of life greets the visitor. Principal Calvert Haydes, a firm believer in science, technology and environmental education, has created an in-school laboratory where students not only learn firsthand about animal and plant life, but also come to recognize that taking care of the environment is important for the survival of humans, too.

Across the state, the beauty and integrity of Eastern Kentucky's mountain streams are faithfully monitored and preserved in part through the efforts of John Ross' Boy Scout Troop #877. Members of the Prestonsburg troop are part of the Water Watch program sponsored by the state Division of Water.

In Western Kentucky, students from South Junior High and Jefferson Elementary schools in Henderson don hip boots to collect samples from Canoe Creek in the second Water Watch group featured in the KET special.

And in the Bluegrass region, viewers will meet students at Berea Elementary School in Madison County, where they take recycling seriously. In cooperation with a local recycling center, students bring their recyclable materials to the school, where each Tuesday and Saturday they are sorted, bundled, weighed and made ready for the center.

"Profit the Earth," beginning at 8 p.m., introduces visionaries from across the United States who are using the free market system to the advantage of Earth as well as themselves.

The program introduces Zach Willey, who is using a new strategy to conserve water in California. Gene Anderson of Seattle has started a new business to collect, launder and recycle the usable parts of disposable diapers. Futurist and environmental economist Hazel Henderson believes the solution to Earth's environmental crisis is to build a new economic system, where preserving the environment is an accepted cost of doing business.

"Profit the Earth" was produced by the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Television and The Nebraska ETV Network for the Public Television Outreach Alliance, of which KET is a founding member. "Kids Caring for Kentucky" is a KET production.

Women's History Month a huge success at WHS

Using money granted by the Kentucky Educational Foundation, an American history class at Wheelwright High School observed Women's History Month in March.

Students in the class researched famous female figures in American history. An extensive biography was written on 20 such females. After searching through school records and contacting families, 30 female graduates from WHS were invited to speak to the class. Great care was taken to cover as many career fields as possible.

The first speaker came on March 1 and the last on March 29. A total of 11 speakers told of their experiences in college, their determination to succeed and answered questions from the class. All speakers offered to help any student should they desire to pursue a career in their own fields. A final report is being sent to KET shortly.

The following women took the time to visit and tell of their experiences: Deborah Stanley, MD; Kim Frasure, Floyd County Times; Sue Jones and Linda Holbrook, teachers; Kathy Johnson and Lori Hamby, RNs; Virginia Isaac, banking; Col Hazel Rainey, US Army, ret.; Mitzi Burke, cosmetology; and Benita Riley, attorney.

Successful grad returns

Benita Riley, attorney, was another speaker at Wheelwright High school during Women's History Month in March. She is a 1974 graduate and was invited by Rodney Woods Jr.

Booklet available on careers in real estate management

College students today often ask the same questions when making career decisions, regardless of the field. They more than likely want straightforward answers to the following three questions: What would I do in the job? How would I get started in the field? How much could I expect to earn?

Last fall the Institute of Real Estate Management (IREM) Foundation launched its nationwide Real Estate Management Intern Program for college students interested in careers in real estate management.

In conjunction with this new program, the new IREM Foundation created a booklet on careers in real estate management designed to answer these three questions. Students can obtain a free copy of the booklet, which includes information on the Foundation's new intern program, by calling or writing the IREM Foundation's Chicago office.

A career in real estate offers many challenges. The future demands increased attention to computer applications and technical ability, as well as the ability to analyze clients' needs, maintain critical attention to detail, and effectively communicate with a variety of people. The rewards can be great for the individual who successfully meets these challenges.

The new booklet is geared to a college audience and serves as an introduction to the wide array of career opportunities that exist today in the field of real estate management. Students will find specific information on the following:

- * Who hires real estate managers
- * Definitions of a property manager and an asset manager
- * The variety of property that requires the services of a real estate manager
- * Education and skills necessary to succeed in the field
- * Starting salaries for entry-level positions in real estate management
- * How membership in a professional association can enhance your career
- * Ways to get your foot in the door with companies that hire real estate managers.

One of the best introductions to a career is first-hand experience, and an intern program provides that. The IREM Foundation's Real Estate Management Intern Program offers a great introduction to the field. Through working with professional Certified Property Manager (CPM) managers, college students will be exposed to the high professional and ethical standards, educational opportunities and networking opportunities of membership in IREM.

Anyone who has questions or would like to receive the careers booklet should contact IREM Foundation Coordinator, Jocelyn Lemish, at 430 N. Michigan Ave., PO Box 109025, Chicago, IL 60610-9025, or phone (312) 661-1930.

Practical Ideas for Parents to Help Their Children

Published weekly by the Floyd County Board of Education's Office of Instruction Gary K. Frazier, Assistant Superintendent

Parent Quiz

Is Your Home A Learning Center?

Kids spend more time at home than they do at school. Home is a true learning center for children, whether we think about it that way or not.

Here is a quiz about the kinds of learning activities your home offers your child. (Give yourself five points on a question if you feel your home is "excellent," zero points for "poor," or a score in between you think you deserve)

1. We have a special place where we store reading materials. It is easy for our children to reach their books and magazines.
2. We own some games that help teach math skills. We play these games as a family.
3. We own a dictionary and we use it.
4. We have a "homework center," and our children use it during their regular study time.
5. Our children see us reading and writing. We talk about how we use math in our daily lives.

How did you score? Here is the rating scale:

20-25 points is excellent.

15-19 points is good.

Below 15 points may mean you can do more to make your home a good learning center for your children.

Museum features student work

The Kentucky Highlands Museum in Ashland is spotlighting works by high school students from April 22-June 7.

Students at Russell High School originated one of the exhibits, titled "Teens Speak Out—What is the Most Pressing Problem Facing America Today?" The exhibit demonstrates the students' answer "Apathy" in four parts.

The student work focuses on apathy toward the environment, apathy in education, apathy toward freedom and apathy in the future.

The exhibit is funded in part by a grant from the Foundation for the Tri-State Community.

Also on display at the same time is "Area High School Art," featuring senior art projects from high schools in Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia.

The museum is located at 1516 Bath Ave. in Ashland. For information, call 329-8888.

McDowell grad goes to Europe

Staff Sgt. Timothy Knott has participated in the NATO-sponsored exercise, Return of Forces to Germany '90 (REFORGER).

The exercise is designed to test and evaluate plans and support agreements between military and civilian agencies on both sides of the Atlantic. REFORGER also tests West Germany's ability to support deploying forces and the ability of European-based units to quickly link reinforcing units with their pre-positioned equipment.

He is the son of Susie Knott of McDowell and a 1982 graduate of McDowell High School.

On honor roll

Keesha Newsome, a student in the upper elementary department at the Kentucky School for the Deaf in Danville, made the honor roll during the third grading period with a grade point average of 3.30.

She is the daughter of Ronnie and Velva Newsome of Teaberry.

ACHS to represent district in math contest

Allen Central High School has been chosen to represent the Seventh Congressional District in a national mathematics program, according to an announcement from US Rep. Chris Perkins.

The national program, "Math is Radical," is designed to help foster strong mathematical skills among students and was developed by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics and MathSoft Inc.

MathSoft has presented the high school with a free introductory program kit that includes MathCAD, a software program for exploring and performing real-life mathematical calculations on IBM or Macintosh computers. The kit also includes a site license for unlimited use of the software by Allen Central students.

As part of the program, students will be able to apply their math skills in the "Math is Radical" contest, developed to encourage math skills development.

"I am delighted that Allen Central can participate in this vitally important program," said Perkins. "We are all aware of the serious educational needs in Eastern Kentucky. This program is one way we can help our young people achieve the mathematical proficiency needed to move our region forward."

Knott County Central High School has also been chosen to participate in the program.

HOROSCOPE

April 15 through April 21

By A. Murphy

ARIES (March 21 - April 19)

Look after your responsibilities, especially those people who are younger and look to you for guidance. Don't be so business-minded this week.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)

Enjoy water-related vacations and music for relaxation. Don't let the wall of work beat you down. There is more in life. Take on new tasks one at a time.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)

Are you exercising your talents enough? Work overtime for a promotion, but pay close attention to your emotional stress level as well. You have inner strength.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)

Start this week with a positive attitude. Keep your negativism in check, and think before criticizing. Buy some flowers for somebody who needs a day brightener.

LEO (July 23 - August 22)

Don't hold in things that frighten you. Be prepared to discuss your qualifications. Take up a hobby that includes another person like walking, jogging or tennis.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22)

Remember that inaction can be as selfish as wrong actions. Decide what stand to take. Take advantage of your chance to learn from someone older and wiser.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 22)

You have a gift for speaking precisely what is on your mind, but remember to be flexible. You don't have to always stand firm. Others may also have workable ideas.

SCORPIO (October 23 - November 21)

It's normal to feel under the weather and blah sometimes. Be a volunteer for causes you believe in. Also, look into adult education to spark new interest.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 - December 21)

Let your loved ones know they are loved and appreciated. Spend time together with a home-cooked meal or a simple celebration. Read to children.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 19)

Seek an impartial opinion before making big decisions. This is especially important as you contemplate a move. Speak up about what bothers you to avoid being walked on.

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 18)

Tell others when you need their support or feedback on a decision or idea. If needed, ask for help concerning finances. Remember that others are in the same boat, too.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20)

Everybody makes mistakes. Keep your head on straight regardless that things don't go as planned. It is a good time to become involved and make new friends.

TV PIPELINE

Eddie Cantor included family in successful comedy career

By Polly Vonetes

Q: I would like information on comedian Eddie Cantor, who made movies in the 1930s. I enjoyed his movies very much and recently heard he was dead. When and how did he die? Who did he marry and did he have any children? How many movies did he make? —Curious in Tennessee

A: Eddie Cantor was a comic, an actor and a singer. He was a star in vaudeville and Broadway before becoming nationally famous with his own radio show in the '30s and in films. Millions of laughs were garnered with his jokes about his wife, Ida, and their five daughters. He starred in 17 films and wrote four autobiographical volumes. He died in 1964 of a heart attack at the age of 72.

Q: I was talking to some friends of mine about growing up and watching the show called Family Affair. And one said that the girl who played Buffy on the show was dead. I can't remember her real name. Is this true? I would like more information about her. —Lisa Bailey, Murphy, N.C.

A: I am sorry to say your friend is right. Anissa Jones, who played Buffy, died of a drug overdose on Aug. 29, 1976, shortly after her 18th birthday.

Q: As a reader of your column I have written to you about some actors of my time hoping to see an answer in your column. My question is: Could I have an address or fan club address of Jimmy Wakely, Eddie Dean and Rex Allen. I'm a shut-in and enjoy writing to my favorite stars. Help us old guys out too. —Thank you. Chuck Micazo, Montclair, Calif.

A: I am sorry I missed your previous letters, Chuck. I must tell you, though, I don't know who or where the letters come from. Whether you are young or old has nothing to do with what gets answered. One of your favorites, Jimmy Wakely, died in 1982. Write to: National Association of Fan Clubs, 2730 Baltimore Ave., Pueblo, Colo. 81003, for information concerning Eddie Dean and Rex Allen.

Q: I am 65 years old and I only look at NBC at 12 o'clock in the daytime. Just tell me why did you scramble it so no one can see it? I sure would like to know. I could turn my satellite back in because that's my reason for buying it. But if that's the case thanks for nothing. —Semoriah Hackett, Crockett, Texas

A: Simmer down, Semoriah. I am not the one responsible for your scrambled satellite. I was told that NBC scrambles their signal, but you will have to ask them why. Write to: NBC-TV Audience Relations, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10112. Tell them exactly how you feel.

Please send your questions about television past and present to: Polly Vonetes, TV Pipeline, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, Texas 76102-0748. Because of the volume of mail, only questions of general interest will be answered.
