Maytown volunteers demonstrate quick response, effective action

by Tim B. Preston
Staff Writer

The doctor in Lexington stared in disbelief when T.J. Compton's daughter told him that her father had been rescued and resuscitated by members of a small volunteer fire department.

"He just couldn't believe it," said Bonita Compton. "He had said something like 'It's amazing how fast the 911 can bring a quick response.' I looked at him and laughed and said that we have no 911 and that the Maytown Volunteer Fire Department made the rescue."

The story began on Saturday, June 9, the day that T.J. Compton of Martin died in a valve pit at the Kentucky Hydrocarbon plant near Maytown.

Compton, a worker at the plant for 33 years, reportedly entered the pit to shut off a sprinkler valve when he was overcome by gas fumes. Compton collapsed and remained in the pit until other workers noticed him and tried, unsuccessfully, to pull him out of the pit.

A call was made to the Maytown Volunteers. Upon arrival at the pit, the volunteers were informed that there appeared to be some kind of gas leak into the pit. Compton could be seen at the bottom of the pit in a doubled over position, with his face down.

Nevertheless, Firefighter Keith Hayes donned an airpack and went into the pit. A rescue rope was tied around Compton's waist and plant workers assisted the volunteers in getting him to the top.

"When we got him up to the top, he had no pulse and he was not breath-by his own account feels that he is getting better "They tell me that I died down there," he said. "But the boys down at Maytown got me out and got me breathing again. I do thank them for that."

Compton said that he hopes to be back at work by the first of August. Maytown Volunteers also wished ing," said Hayes "Doug Bailey immediately started giving him CPR and we had him breathing again in a few minutes."

Compton was taken to Our Lady of the Way Hospital in Martin before being transferred to a Lexington hospital.

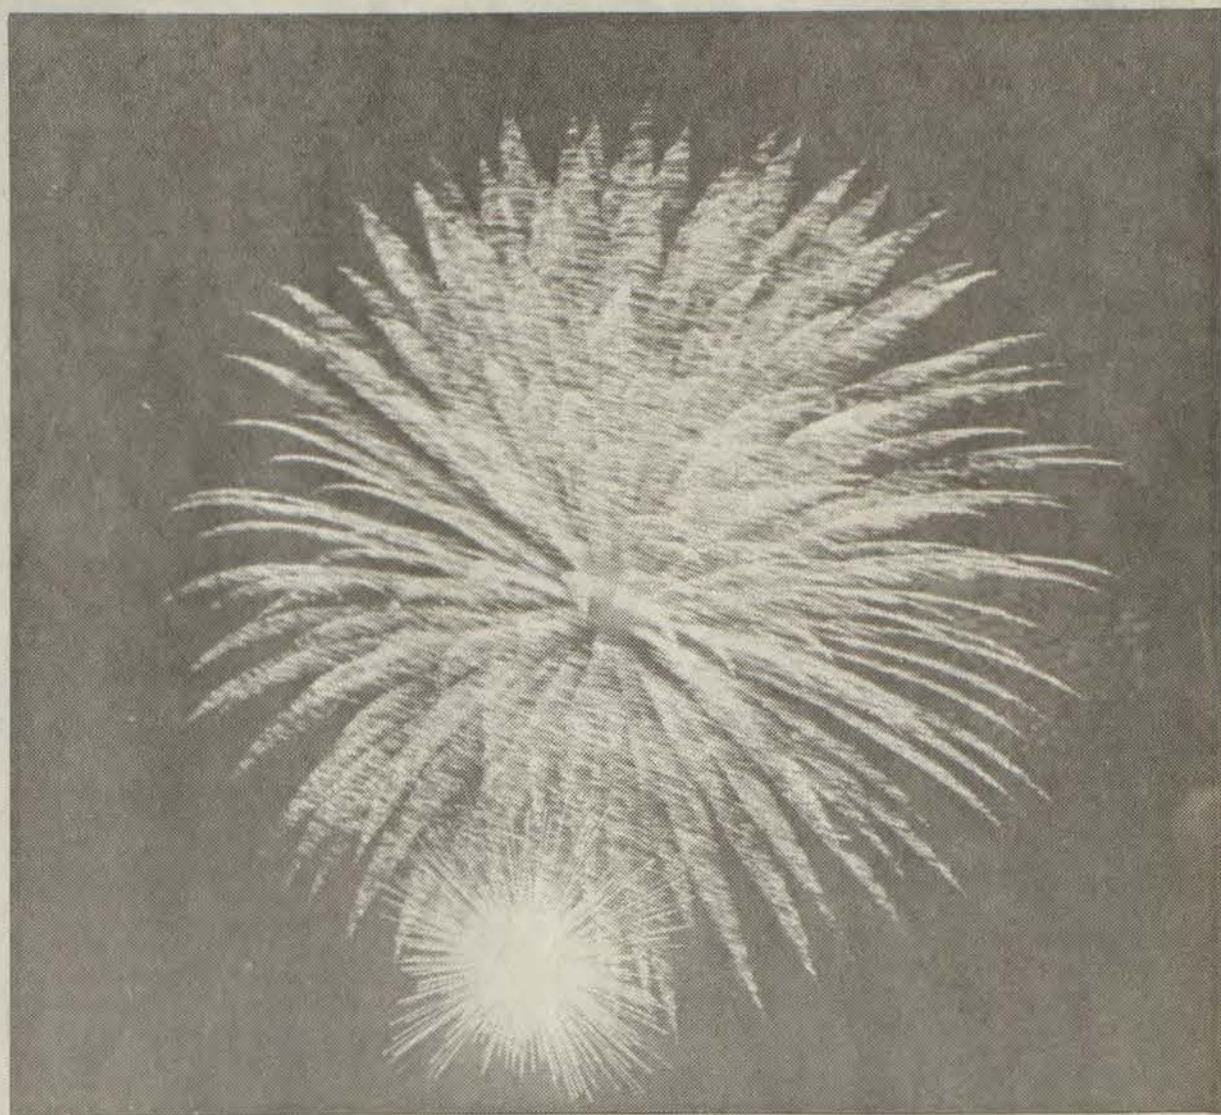

"I now have the utmost respect for the men of the Maytown Volunteer Fire Department," said Bonita Compton "If they hadn't gotten to the scene and got my dad out and did CPR, he wouldn't be with us today."

T.J. Compton now suffers from a slight loss of short term memory, but to thank employees of Kentucky Hydrocarbon and Registered Nurse Mary Sue Martin who offered assistance during and after the rescue operation.

The gas leak that caused the pit to be dangerous was repaired shortly after the accident, according to Thomas Flannery, a supervisor at Hydrocarbon.

While they are only a small outfit with limited budget and equipment reserves, the members of the Maytown Volunteer Fire Department exemplify what is meant by "Service To Others."

Doctor's drug authority revoked

A physician who briefly had a practice in Allen this spring has had his certificate to prescribe medication revoked by the US Drug Enforcement Administration.

In an order issued June 19, acting DEA administrator Terrence M. Burke took away the prescription writing authority of Dr. Ekambaram Parameswaran, also known as Dr. E. Param.

The order further announces that any applications for renewal of the registration in the future are to be denied.

Param had previously operated the Martin County Medical Clinic in Inez and an office in Warfield. He reportedly opened a practice in Allen, near the post office, in the spring, but the office has recently been abandoned and efforts to contact the physician have been fruitless.

The order, published in the June 26 edition of the Federal Register, traces investigations of Param's writing of prescriptions for controlled substances to 1983.

In 1985, West Virginia State Police apparently checked up on Param while investigating allegations of illicit drug sales by members of a Kermitt, W.Va., family.

A West Virginia State Trooper reportedly recorded an office visit he made to Param's office, during which the physician gave him a prescription for 30 dosage units of Tylenol 4, a Schedule III controlled substance, and one for 20 units of Percodan, also controlled.

According to the order, Param did not conduct a physical examination of the undercover policeman, and the policeman did not indicate he suffered from severe pain.

The Drug Control Branch of the Kentucky Cabinet for Human Resources also reportedly investigated Param in 1984. An audit of Param's controlled substance inventory revealed "unexplained shortages" of prescription drugs. Audits in 1987 showed similar shortages.

The combined result of two audits conducted in September 1987 revealed shortages of about 48,000 dosage units of controlled substances, ranging from Didrex to Valium, the federal order states.

The DEA administrator said, in the order, "The unexplained shortages and overages from each audit show, at the very least, that Respondent (Param) failed to adequately maintain the records required by law to be kept completely and accurately."

A physician, appointed by the Kentucky Medical Board, also reviewed Param's records and noted that Param's prescribing practices were "excessive and inappropriate." Many patients, the reviewer said, received both Percodan, Tylenol 4 and Valium simultaneously.

As a result of the review, the Medical Board in 1987 issued an Order of Temporary Restriction, suspending Param's authority to handle controlled substances. The Board lifted the restriction last year.

Param was indicted in Martin County in 1988 on charges of trafficking in a controlled substance. He entered a plea agreement in which he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor. He was sentenced to 90 days in the county jail, but the sentence was probated for a year on the condition the Param not practice medicine or reside within 100 miles of Inez.

In the June order, the DEA administrator said, "At best, his prescribing practices could be characterized as excessive and inappropriate. At worst, he was responsible for diverting thousands of dosage units of controlled substances from legitimate medical use into the hands of scores of drug abusers."

Param, according to the order, is quoted as saying that the medication he prescribed "was as a result of poor prescription practices not in keeping with good medical practices but nevertheless in accordance with good intentions."

Salyersville woman drowns at Floyd/Johnson County line

A Salyersville woman drowned Wednesday at the confluence of the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River and Johns Creek at the Floyd and Johnson County line.

Gretta Rice, 18, of Salyersville, was reportedly camping on or near Johns Creek with her family at the time of the incident.

Fire and rescue workers who searched for the body reported that the young woman was discovered by divers from the Johnson County Rescue Squad at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The body was located near the mouth of Johns Creek within about 100 feet of the river.

Rice's family had apparently left the scene before the body was discovered. Identification of the body was accomplished only after Rice's purse was discovered and her family members were contacted at their home in Magoffin County.

Members of the Johnson County Rescue Squad, Floyd County Rescue Squad and the Prestonsburg Fire and Rescue Dive team responded to the drowning.

Hospital employees set for contract vote

by Tim B. Preston
Staff Writer

Members of the Service Employees International Union Local 1199 will cast their votes Sunday to accept a new contract or to go on strike against Highlands Regional Medical Center.

The union and hospital management officials have been negotiating for the new contract since April 27, and as of Thursday no agreement has been reached.

"We are still at the table," said Larry Daniels, president of the local. "Nothing is settled until the last hour anyway, so I'm very optimistic. It is all up to the hospital at this point."

Health insurance, contracting of jobs, pension plans and a wage increase are the keys of the negotiations, according to Daniels.

"Several years ago, the physical therapy services of the hospital were contracted out," said Daniels. "Those employees were switched to other jobs in other aspects of the hospital's services. Those employees had to either accept those positions or find another place to work."

Daniels said there have been rumors that a similar move has been considered for other departments of the hospital, but that no such actions have been taken as of yet.

The hospital employees will vote to accept a proposed contract on Sunday July 8, at 1 p.m., 5 p.m. and 8 p.m.

If the employees do vote to strike against the hospital they will walk off the job at 12:01 a.m. on July 9, Daniels said.

Efforts to contact Donald Nunnery, personnel director for the hospital, were unsuccessful as of press time Thursday night.

Would-be thieves bungle robbery

Two men who attempted to steal a pick up truck after the Prestonsburg July 4th fireworks display were thwarted in their efforts when the owners saw them attempt to pull away with the vehicle.

Witnesses at the scene reported that two men were pulling into the line of traffic leaving Archer Park, when members of the Mason Howard family noticed that their truck was leaving without them.

Mason Howard immediately started chasing the vehicle with his three-year-old daughter Kim still in his arms. The truck reportedly dragged the man and his daughter five to 10 feet before the driver realized that Howard was getting a grip on him.

At that point, witnesses say the thieves stopped the vehicle and fled the scene on foot. The truck then reportedly rolled into a parked vehicle.

The damaged truck was returned to the family without further incident, and no injuries were reported.

Loretta Howard said that a mechanic who had witnessed the theft helped her husband repair the truck for the drive back to Magoffin County.

Bull Creek man found dead on porch

A Bull Creek man was discovered dead sitting in a chair on his front porch Wednesday.

Lon Arnold Cooley, 81, of Bull Creek, was found on the porch after he had reportedly fallen down and bumped his head, according to Floyd County Deputy Coroner Glen Frazier. Cooley had asked his sister, Myrtle Baisden, with whom he lived, to help him into the chair after he had fallen inside the house.

Cooley's death was ruled as an accidental death stemming from natural causes.

Funeral services for Lon Arnold Cooley will be Saturday, July 7, at 11 a.m. at the Floyd Funeral Home chapel.

Hot with rain?

The skies will be partly sunny today with a 30 percent chance of thundershowers and a high from 85 to 90 degrees. Tonight will be partly cloudy with the low from 60 to 65 degrees. Saturday look for mostly sunny skies with the high in the mid 80s. Saturday night should be partly cloudy with a low in the upper 60s. Sunday there is a chance of thundershowers with the high expected near 90 degrees.

Grants for energy

The Floyd County Board of Education and Highlands Regional Medical Center have been awarded grants for energy conservation, according to announcements this week from US Senators Wendell Ford and Mitch McConnell.

From the US Department of Energy Institutional Conservation Program, HRMC will receive a grant for $31,225 and the school system gets $37,873. The program, say the Senators, provide funds to schools and hospitals to improve energy efficiency.

It's in the bag

Members of the Prestonsburg Police Department have started distributing garbage bags to local teenagers who like to gather on parking lots along South Lake Drive.

Police say that the groups of teens tend to leave big messes when they leave the lots and that passing out the garbage bags seemed like a better alternative than running the kids off the lots. A city detective Jeff Stumbo said, "There is really nothing for the kids in this town to do."

The idea was reportedly Policewoman Sue Blackburn's.

Almost total loss

The home of Tommy Skeens of West Prestonsburg caught fire early Thursday morning, and the family was able to recover only a small amount of clothes and other items from the home. Members of Prestonsburg Fire Department responded to find the kitchen section of the house fully involved with smoke and flames. Two firefighters who arrived at the home early attacked the blaze with a firehose and snuffed the flames quickly, said Fire Chief Tom Blackburn. The cause of the fire is under investigation by Prestonsburg Fire Marshall Larry Adams. (Photo by Tim Preston)

Cars Today

To avoid breakdown, check your car

By William Allan
Scripps Howard News Service

In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of getting the car ready for cruising.

That also applies to women, of course.

The American Automobile Association reports it made 21.4 million emergency road service calls last year.

So here's the annual checklist to help you guard against breakdowns:

—Look at the pavement beneath the vehicle, especially where it normally has been parked, and see if there are any stains that indicate leaks.

Oil generally is black. Transmission and brake fluid generally have a reddish tinge, and coolant is greenish/yellow. Brands differ, however, so if you are uncertain, check the dip sticks or reservoirs.

Caution: Make certain the engine is cool. Never try to remove the coolant cap when the engine is hot, and be careful of today's thermostatically-controlled radiator fans that can start up even when the engine is not running.

—While under the hood, check all hoses and belts for cracks or weak spots, and make certain all belts have no more than about an inch of play in them. It's easier to replace belts in the driveway before they break on the road.

—Filters, air and fuel, also are important. Air filters generally are easy to replace. The ease in dealing with fuel filters depends on the model.

—If your state does not require safety inspections, brakes and the exhaust system also should be checked by a technician.

—Try the air conditioner. If it is not cooling well, it probably needs to be recharged.

—Change the oil and oil filter. Again, on most models this is not overly difficult. But if you have qualms, take it to a service station. The protection for your engine is worth the trip.

—An excellent way of checking the exterior of a car is to wash it — by hand.

Spray well in the fender wells and beneath the car if it has been operated over salted roads, but the same is true if it has been at the beach. Get in the cracks.

Then when wiping it down, look for nicks and cracks, little places where the paint protection has been voided by road chips or parking lot abuse, and touch them up before they become worse.

Warranties against rust are growing every year, but you can help, too. Wash and wax a car for maintenance as well as beauty. Waxing down under, where it is hard to reach, is very much worth the effort.

Avoid abrasives — some waxes have them — if your vehicle has the new base coat/clear coat paint.

AAA says emergency calls were up five percent last year and that most could have been avoided with good basic maintenance.

Even the new "easier-to-understand" owner's manuals are confusing on when to have the oil changed. Most differentiate between "hard" and "normal" driving, but what's confusing is that "hard" driving is normal for most persons.

Hard driving is the stop-and-go few miles to work and the store in which the engine hardly gets up to running temperatures before being shut down again. Normal driving is taking it out on the interstate and running it a t55 mph for an hour or so.

If still confused, have the oil and filter changed at least twice a year, spring and fall for most persons. The cost is minor compared to what could happen.

Norm Hudecki of Valvoline Inc. says the proper grade is in your owner's manual but most automakers have been recommending 5W-30 or 10W-30.

"Whether you're driving through Death Valley or Colorado's snow-capped mountains, the operating temperature of your car's engine will be about the same," he adds. But if you are pulling a boat or camper "it's important you have the right vehicle and the right motor oil."

He suggests heavy duty oil for such and suggests even then you avoid long periods of idling, such as occurs in traffic tie-ups near highway construction projects or auto accidents.

Tires, say the tire experts with a great deal of truth, are the most neglected component of the modern motor vehicle.

Tire pressure should be checked routinely every week or so, and next time you look you should also look closely at the tread. Uneven wear indicates the vehicle might be out of alignment, and if the edges of the tread have worn more than the center, you've been running on under-inflated tires. Conversely, if the tread is thinning in the center, you've been over-inflating your tires.

Today's front drives, with a great majority of weight on the front tires, demand that your tires be rotated, according to the directions in the owner's manual.

Your reward for such attention is amazingly long-wearing tires, better handling and a wealth of peace of mind.

If your engine has been acting up — hard to start, giving you little fits and spits — now's the time for a tuneup. If its running well, don't fix what ain't broke.

They tried.....

A pair of "would be" car thieves were stopped short Wednesday night as they attempted to steal a 1986 Ford Pick up truck from Archer Park. Upon close inspection, you can see that a pair of "vise grip" type pliers were being used to steer the vehicle after the thieves broke off the truck's steering wheel. (Photo by Kathleen Carroll)

(Tips for a successful family vacation)

Scene: A mini-van buzzing down an interstate at the crack of dawn on a summer morning. The occupants, a vacationing family, have just started out on their annual summer trip and hope to make 500 miles that day.

Child #1: "When will we be there?"
Parent: "We'll be there when we get there! And stop teasing your sister!"

Child #2: "I'm hungry! When do we eat?"

To most families, this scene is all too familiar. In fact, memories of restless youngsters, ice cream-coated seats and seemingly endless driving can make you want to forget about ever packing up the kids and attempting the "Great American Vacation." But take heart: a few simple tips can help you get on the road early and pass the time more quickly increasing everyone's enjoyment of the trip.

The first item you need to consider is food. What can you pack that won't create a mess and will stay fresh all day?

With the advent of miniaturization in the food industry (mini crackers, cookies and other snacks), packing food items for vacation travel has never been easier. "If you're planning to hit the road early and make a minimum of stops, it's a good idea to pack food items that are popular with everyone in the car and are portable enough to be eaten on the go," says Kerry Lyman, a spokesperson for Hostess®. The company has just introduced Mini Muffins, a line of bite-sized muffins packed in crush-resistant bags that are ideal for travel.

Other food tips include: As you're packing for the trip, choose single-serve treats that stay fresh and keep mess to a minimum. Breakfast can be difficult while driving, but options like fruit, muffins, bagels or donuts are easy to eat in the car. Avoid salty snacks and ice cream which are messy and tend to make a person thirsty. Remember to pack a cooler with ice and include a container of water.

And to ensure a safer, more enjoyable trip for the entire family, here are a few tips to remember:

Personal Comfort
Be sure to pack pillows, blankets and/or sleeping bags for naps in the car. To prevent spills, use the popular sport bottles for beverages. Bring along napkins/paper towels and moist disposable towels.

Safety Considerations
Make sure everyone wears seatbelts and infants are in approved safety seats. The glove compartment should contain maps, first aid kit, a flashlight with fresh batteries as well as an extra set, pens and paper and important phone numbers (relatives, auto club, credit card companies, family doctor).

Kid Patrol
Avoid bringing games or toys with numerous small pieces that can slip under car seats and get lost. Get the whole family involved by participating in such activities as the sign game, license plate game, and sing-alongs. Give your children some responsibility and teach them about reading a map by having them help with the navigation. To avoid arguments over the radio, bring along portable cassette players with headphones.

Ever car vacation is bound to have its slow moments, but by following a few simple tips, you can turn this trip into the "Great American Vacation."

New incinerator regulations proposed

At Gov. Wallace Wilkinson's directions, the Department for Environmental Protection has drafted new regulations for municipal, medical, and hazardous waste incinerators.

In January 1990, the governor noted that state regulations governing the incineration of waste were inadequate to protect public health and the environment. In an Executive Order, the Governor declared a moratorium on the issuance of state permits for the construction or operation of any new or expanded waste incinerators and instructed the Department for Environmental Protection to develop new regulations. "Preliminary drafts of these regulations have been completed and have been submitted to the Environmental Quality Commission for review," said Hisham M. Saaid, acting director of the Division for Air Quality. When adopted, these regulations will:

- Establish more stringent emission standards than present regulations for solid waste, hazardous waste and medical waste incinerators;
  - Establish design and operating requirements for incinerators;
  - Require training and certification for incinerator operators;
  - Require that the owners and operators of small hazardous and medical waste incinerators (those with charging capacities of less than 500 pounds per hour) receive state permits to construct and operate those incinerators. Current regulations exempt such sources from state permitting requirements, thus allowing their construction even during the governor's moratorium;
  - Encourage recycling as an alternative to disposal by requiring that substantial amounts of recyclable material be removed from the total waste prior to incineration; and
  - Establish new, more effective emission and operation monitoring requirements for incinerators.
- The Department for Environmental Protection will schedule a public hearing to receive comments on these regulations in late August or September.

The scholarships, which will be presented to two students in the fields of health and education at PCC, is sponsored by Kentucky West Virginia Gas and Equitable Resources Exploration. Each company presented the college with a check for $5,000 and another for $900. "Those of us at Kentucky West Virginia Gas and Equitable Resources Exploration have always felt the need to support both education and health projects in the area," said Daniel, KY/WV vice president. "These scholarships will allow us to demonstrate our support for such programs." (Photo by Tim Preston)

Undeserving?

A disturbingly negative thought occurred to me the other night as I was driving home from my post at the concession stand at Jenny Wiley Theatre.

Of course, that's not too unusual. That kind of thought seems to be increasingly frequent. That wasn't always the case. I was once considered pretty much a starry-eyed optimist, with an abundance of hope and trust. I'm not sure what's caused the change. Perhaps it's because as a news junky I tend to see more of the seamier side of society. Perhaps it has to do with aging and being exposed to more and more negatives. Perhaps it touches on being back in Eastern Kentucky where positives tend to be unrealistic and negatives jarringly realistic.

Anyway, back to the negative thought: I'm not sure Floyd County deserves Jenny Wiley Theatre.

The amphitheatre and its summer repertory of musical hits is a one-of-a-kind cultural opportunity for people in this county, yet Floyd Countians stay away in droves. On any given night of this season of sparse audiences, you see more people from Johnson and Pike counties, it seems, than from here. And you see more tourist traffic than local.

This makes no sense.

In fact, if anything, every seat in the house should be filled every night, and at least half by people from this area. What we're doing now, obviously, is allowing outsiders to enjoy one of our prime treasures while we're ignoring its existence.

The Rotarians who operate the concession stand at performances have the pleasant opportunity to talk with many of the theatregoers. People from Michigan, Indiana, Virginia, Illinois, Iowa — you name it — comment regularly on what an outstanding operation Jenny Wiley Theatre is. They nearly always say something to the effect that they envy us for having a theatre such as this in our community.

So what do we do? We don't go. Many excuses are offered. Excuse #1: It costs too much.

Come on, now. That's about the lamest. Go to a play in Lexington and Louisville and you'll pay upwards of $20 or more, plus you'll have to drop a few more bucks for gas, food and possibly lodging. Theatre in larger cities is almost priced out of reach. Generally, the folks who complain about the less than $10 ticket price think nothing of dropping $75 for a pair of jeans with holes in them or $20 for a bottle of booze or $15 for a steak dinner. They'll give their kids $10 or more to blow on junk food at the movie theatre.

Excuse #2: I've never heard of the shows.

You've heard of Jenny Wiley, haven't you? And even if you've seen the show before, it's been revised this year and is probably the best interpretation yet. If you haven't heard of the others, here's your chance to find out about them. Each was a highly successful show on Broadway.

Excuse #3: Somebody told me that somebody told them that somebody said the shows are not as good this year.

Is that how you make all your decisions? Musical theatre makes a classic example of "different strokes for different folks." What appeals to one person might turn off another. For instance, I've seen "The Sound of Music" at least a dozen times and have loved it just as much each time. But some folks condemn the show as too sappy. And I'd see "Oklahoma" and "The Music Man" every week if I could, but once was enough for "Funny Girl" which some folks love.

Is your taste based on what "somebody" said. I hope not.

Excuse #4: There's no place to park because of the convention center construction.

Granted, whoever made the decision to build the convention center smack in the middle of the theatre parking lot is a few bricks shy of a load, but there is still plenty of parking for theatre patrons. Don't be put off by the hulking construction. Rangers are there every evening to direct parking, and accommodations are made for persons who cannot walk very far for health reasons. (The rest of us would do well, for health reasons, to do more walking.)

Excuse #5: This is amateur theatre; it's not like a real theatre.

Ahem. You really need to check the shows out before you make that statement. These are among the most talented and energetic young people you'll see assembled anywhere. They're selected through competitive auditions here and at several other locations. Most have been singing and dancing since they were toddlers, and many have had the best training their parents can afford.

Those are the major excuses. Here are the reasons we should all support Jenny Wiley Theatre.

First, it's quality theatre right here in our own backyard, something we have that very few other people have.

Second, it provides an opportunity to extend our cultural experience and to expose our children to something besides sports and parking lot sitting. Not that there's anything wrong with sports; it's just that there is more to life.

Third — and most striking — if Floyd Countians don't start supporting Jenny Wiley Theatre, there likely will be no theatre. Pure and simple. The theatre is in serious trouble, owing partly to last year's inordinate number of rainouts and partly to past mismanagement. A handful of fervent supporters are keeping it afloat by putting their own names on loans for this season. They cannot continue to do that. And we've all lived long enough to know that the state is not going to do a great deal to help us out and to know that west of Winchester, we're considered a bunch of illiterate, uncultured hicks who couldn't find our way around the parking lot.

That leaves the future of the theatre up to us. If we are to maintain this treasure that is the envy of visitors to the area, we are going to have to support the theatre, both through attendance at the shows and by our contributions. If it goes down the tubes, we have the usual suspects to blame — ourselves.

I'd hate to see the day come when we'll say to visitors, "Yeah, we used to have a marvelous, semi-professional musical theatre here, but it went out of business." Would we then be honest enough to add, "because I didn't support it."

Letters

Owens continues

Dear Editor,
To answer Stan Hunter's letter to the editor last week:

Mr. Hunter, you claimed that I "jumped on the band wagon" with Floyd Countians in Action in order to help stop the medical waste incinerator which burns body parts such as arms, legs, blood, etc., and medical waste from hospitals from five or more counties and are burning more waste in Prestonsburg than the University of Kentucky is.

This is not in your back door since you live at Stanville — I can see why it is all a JOKE to you. I didn't just climb on the "band wagon," I've been fighting OUT OF COUNTY and OUT OF STATE garbage for the last 4-1/2 years and I DON'T PLAN TO STOP NOW. You also said I was a "self appointed radical" last week, but I don't care what you say. I'm going to STAND UP for what I think is right and what is GOOD for the people of Floyd County. THERE ARE ALWAYS going to be a few that think they know it all and actually don't know what they are talking about and OBVIOUSLY you don't know anything about the incinerator. You must not know about the TOXIC GAS that comes from it. The incinerator CAN cause the same chemical as AGENT ORANGE that was used in Vietnam. We know what kind of problems that has caused our families. The ashes from this incinerator COULD be TOXIC enough to DESTROY the drinking water in Floyd County if not properly handled. Since our landfill does not have a plastic liner that is required by the new law — these toxins could dilute into our underground water systems and creeks and poison water systems such as the Martin, Allen, Beaver Elkhorn, and Prestonsburg water systems because our landfill is upstream from all of these water pick-ups.

You also said I "Coerced District 1 Magistrate — Gerald DeRossett — into seconding the motion." I tell you what — me and Mr. DeRossett have been AGAINST this OUT OF COUNTY GARBAGE for over four years — not counting the OUT OF COUNTY MEDICAL WASTE. I believe that District 1 Magistrate — Gerald DeRossett — is stronger and tougher now than he has been in his whole political career and he stands on HIS own two feet. We've voted WITH each other, AGAINST each other, and even yelled at each other, but Mr. DeRossett votes the way HE THINKS is right and I vote the way I THINK is right for our Districts as well as Floyd County.

You stated that "I was trying to resolve some sort of personal vendetta" against Mr. McAninch. The problem I have with Mr. McAninch is that in ONLY four short years he has allowed Knott County to bring all their garbage to Floyd County for a price of around $38,000 a year when they were ALREADY paying around $68,000 to Perry County and it was going to be raised to over $90,000 in Perry County — BUT he goes over and takes it for $38,000 per year and made it possible for Knott County to charge their Senior Citizens less than Floyd County's Senior Citizens and which allowed Knott County to charge their citizens less than what Floyd County citizens pay. Since then, Mr. McAninch has managed to take ALL of Johnson County, ALL of Martin County, and now after July 1, ALL of Pike County's garbage. You ask me why I am against a man that is FILLING FLOYD COUNTY FULL OF GARBAGE — NOT EVEN FROM THIS COUNTY.

You also stated in your letter that the incinerator at Highlands met state standards — the SIZE of the incinerator that they've got doesn't have state standards — I'd say that's why they bought another one that didn't have to have state laws to govern it. You talked about how the citizens around Highlands Regional Medical Center have waited until now to become concerned over the incinerator. — They accepted the incinerator when it was burning ONLY Highlands Medical Waste, but now they have got two incinerators and are taking MEDICAL waste from five or more counties or anyone they can collect a dollar from. IF WE DON'T WAKE UP and STOP IT NOW, it'll be too late when kids are born deformed and your family is dying from a disease that you don't know what it is. Since I PLAN on living here and raising my two boys in this county, I WILL FIGHT TO THE VERY END.

You stated that the landfill "WOULD" NOT accept TOXIC WASTE. You should have said the landfill IS NOT "SUPPOSE" to take TOXIC WASTE. You said that without Mr. McAninch as Solid Waste Commissioner "that Floyd County would be burying itself in its own trash." You're right "OUR" Trash — but with Mr. McAninch we're burying ourselves in Knott County's trash, Johnson County's trash, Martin County's trash and now Pike County's trash — the biggest county in the state.

You stated that whatever I became involved in became a "three ring circus" and I was a "self-appointed ring master". We've got an opening in the "center ring" for a clown, Mr. Hunter — come on down and I will see if I can't get you in there.

— Jackie Edford Owens
Magistrate, District 2

Kysoc reunion planned

Dear Editor,

For 30 summers, disabled children from across the Commonwealth have arrived at Camp Kysoc in Carrollton to swim, fish, boat, camp out and to just be kids. Sponsored by the Kentucky Easter Seal Society, the camp has hosted more than 9000 campers and has even expanded its service to disabled adult campers. This summer alone, there will be more than 350 campers at Kysoc.

On Monday, July 9, Kysoc will host an open house to mark its 30th summer. It's a celebration of the last 30 years and a chance to look forward to the next 30. As such, we would like to locate as many Kysoc "alumni" as possible. If you have been involved in the Kysoc program as a camper, staff member, counselor or a family member of a camper, please contact the Kentucky Easter Seal Society in Louisville by calling toll-free 1-800-888-5377.

Thanks to our alumni, each summer at Kysoc has been memorable. Please let us hear from you and join us for the Camp Kysoc 30th reunion. — Heide Miller, director

McConnell's Comments

By Sen. Mitch McConnell

HELP FOR LOW-INCOME RURAL RENTERS CLEARS SENATE

One of the most pressing social needs facing our country today is affordable housing. As it stands now there are thousands of low-income people who are walking a fine line between being able to afford an apartment in a public housing development or living on the streets.

Many are elderly or handicapped and barely making ends meet on a fixed income. If they should suddenly become sick or injured, unexpected expenses could force them out of their apartments and into homeless shelters. On June 21, Democrats and Republicans in the Senate unanimously joined together and passed legislation I authored, the Rural Rental Housing Affordability Act, that will give those people most in need financial assistance in making their rental payments.

My legislation will bring help to more than 115,000 people nationwide who are currently paying more than 30 percent of their monthly income in rent and living in Farmer's Home Administration (FmHA) 515 multifamily developments. The amendment adopted by the Senate will reduce rental payments for eligible recipients to not more than 30 percent of their monthly income. I call this affordability assistance.

My focus on the 515 program is well founded. This housing initiative provides apartments in rural areas to low-income families and the elderly. According to a recent Government Accounting Office (GAO) report, over 90 percent of 515 housing is located in rural areas with populations under 10,000 and over 40 percent of the households are headed by a senior citizen.

In Kentucky, FmHA has financed 317 rural rental housing complexes for senior citizens and families. Once my legislation becomes law, over 3,000 people in our state will become eligible to receive this affordability assistance.

It is a tragedy when the elderly, handicapped, and low-income families are forced to forego food or other necessities just so they can pay the rent. The Rural Housing Affordability Assistance Act will provide relief to these people so they can stay in their apartments and continue living in the rural areas that they call home.

Ten Years Ago

(July 2, 1980)

Most of the two dozen or so who turned out Monday for a hearing regarding Prestonsburg's plans for federal funds seemed convinced that downtown renewal would be the most meritorious project for funding. Some argued for West Prestonsburg as an area that could well benefit from a federal grant, however, and one voice was raised in support of a bicycle path from Lancer to Prestonsburg. Three separate fires kept fire fighters busy over the weekend in the Martin-Left Beaver area with losses topping $200,000. The fires destroyed the homes of Hallie Flannery on Buck's Branch and Torrence Wright at Salisbury and burned the B & K Market at Drift. The Western Sizzlin' Steak House was held up by three masked men late last Tuesday night. $4,200 in cash was robbed. Detective Danny Stumbo has sworn out warrants for the three men but asked that their names be withheld until arrests are made. A regional effort at reducing roadside litter and at reclaiming a valuable metal began Tuesday with the opening of the Appalachian Recycling Company. The firm is paying for aluminum cans which will be recycled. The first loss of life in Dewey Lake this year was recorded Saturday afternoon when Paul David Remy, 27, of Waverly, Oh. drowned in the Stratton Branch area. Remy's drowning may have resulted as an attack of epilepsy. Dr. Edward B. Leslie, former state representative, Prestonsburg mayor and city councilman died Monday at the age of 67. Dr. Leslie had practiced dentistry here for over 30 years and had taught in the Floyd County school system. There also died: Stella Caudill, 74, of Allen, at Pikeville Methodist Hospital; Martin Eldon Blair, 73, of Paintsville, at Paintsville Hospital; Fredia C. Robinette, 64, of Banner, at her home; Nancy L. Gibson, 44, of Brunswick, Oh. (formerly of Knott Co.), in Pennsylvania; William F. Braddock, 66, of Martin, at Highlands Regional Medical Center; Sarah Jane Johnson, 76, of Weeksburg, at McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital; Sterling P. Gussler, 97, of Ashland (formerly of Louisa), at a son's home; Ronald C. Adkins, 32, of Allen, in Bluefield, W. Va.; Willard Hamilton, 95, of Grethel, at his home; Landon Leedy Jr., 52, of Price, at his home; Ruby Garrett, 85, of Wheelwright, at her home.

Proposed construction of a high school at Eastern was protested last Saturday by a delegation from Martin. Joetta Howell, 13, was drowned in the Big Sandy at Betsy Layne, Tuesday. The new census is being disputed in this county. Between this and the last in 1960, Floyd County allegedly lost 6,891 in population. There died: Mary Hamilton Allen, 65, of Prestonsburg, at home; Lizzie Stone, 61, of Bevinville, at the McDowell Hospital; Paris Sellards, 92, of Johns Creek, in a South Williamson hospital; Clifford H. Preparing for the use of voting machines at next November's election, County Judge Henry Stumbo has reduced the number of voting precincts from 61 to 34. Prompt payment of teachers' salaries is one of the goals announced by Charles Clark, new Superintendent of Floyd County schools. The town of Martin has been notified that it may proceed with its six-acre Town Center urban renewal project. Floyd County is one of the hardest hit by hepatitis in Kentucky, says the US Public Health Service. Former magistrate and trial commissioner Glenn C. Burchett has been named foreman of the new county road program. There died: Carl H. Corbin, 59, of Prestonsburg, in an Elkins, W. The much heralded Floyd County Sesquicentennial ended July 1 after a four day celebration. Plans for a $1,200,000 regional hospital were discussed Monday by County Judge Henry Stumbo. The Cooley Motor Co. Ford dealership here has been purchased by the Floyd Motor Company. Col. D.T. Johnson, of the Army Corps of Engineers, offered little hope at a meeting here Saturday that the conservation pool of Dewey Lake will be deepened, as urged locally. Joseph D. Harkins Sr. was honored by the Floyd County Bar Association Friday for "unselfish and unstinted" services and life memberships were issued to Congressman A.J. May and Former State Senator William Dingus who have been members of the Bar for more than 50 years. George Johnson Jr., 18, of Peebles, Oh. was killed and Earl Moore, 24, of Wheelwright was seriously injured in a truck-auto collision Monday in Lawrence County. Paul Derringer, former Cincinnati Reds pitching ace, is scheduled to be the guest of honor at a Drift benefit baseball game, July 19. Charles Chumley became manager of the Francis Shoe Store this week. There died: Joe Davis, 91, of David, at a son's home; Dr. W.E. Dingus, 57, of Hite, at his home; Ambrose Conn, 48, formerly of Prater Creek, in San Francisco, Ca.; William E. Bentley, 38, of Dwale, at a Martin hospital.

Fifty Years Ago

The first step of returning the election of members of the county board of education to the method used prior to 1934 — that of electing them by divisions of the county — was taken at a special meeting of the Floyd County Board of Education Friday evening, when the county was divided into five districts. All bids received for the construction of the proposed seven room arts and science building at Wheelwright were rejected by the Board of Education at a special meeting Monday evening. The bids, which ranged from $21,510 to $22,519 were termed "unreasonable." Wheelwright miner Winfield Huffman was fatally injured in a slate fall in an Inland Steel Co. mine Thursday. There died: Bascom Stephens, 70, at his home in Eastern; James Kitchie, 26, of Hueysville at Beaver Valley Hospital at Lackey; George Pitts, 40, of Middle Creek at Beaver Valley Hospital in Martin following an accident at a Stephens-Elkhorn Coal Co., mine; Cisco Rice, 56, of Tram; Clyde Bowling, 25, of Drift; James Harris, 4 months, Garrett; Sarah Hackworth, 65, Garrett; Ava Tackett, 29, Drift; Matthew Meadows, 74, of Lancer; Winwright Adkins, 79, of Amba; Kinner Davis, 60, of Drift; Ira Davidson, 18, of Drift; Vina Bentley, 12, of Allen.

Great Books training set for Pikeville

The Great Books Foundation, a Chicago-based non-profit educational organization, will hold a two-day Basic Leader Training Course in Pikeville on Aug. 1 and 2.

Concentrating on techniques that actively involve young people in reading, understanding, and enjoying literature, the course is required for teachers and volunteers planning to start Great Books reading and discussion groups with students in kindergarten through high school. The course is also recommended for individuals who will be leading adult Great Books groups in their communities.

More than 800,000 youngsters nationwide currently participate in Great Books programs. Since 1962, Great Books programs have challenged students to discover the meaning in a work of literature by thinking analytically and imaginatively and by exchanging ideas with their peers.

The Pikeville training course, one of more than 700 that the Foundation will offer this year, will be taught by a full-time member of the Foundation's instructional staff. Throughout the course, participants will play an active role — writing questions for discussion, practicing leadership skills, and taking part in discussions led by their colleagues.

The course is scheduled for Aug. 1 and 2, from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. at Pikeville Elementary School. To register, contact Susan Whitaker at 432-4196. For additional information about starting a Great Books program for children or adults, call the Great Books Foundation toll-free at 1-800-222-5870.

Growing jackpot means strong sales for lottery

As the LOTTO KENTUCKY jackpot grew during recent weeks, lottery officials were tracking the increase in sales as well. "Since the first of April, we have seen a significant increase in sales each week," said Frank Keener, president of the lottery.

"We are not sure which is more responsible — the addition of the Wednesday night drawings on April 4 or the rolling of the jackpot as it moved from $1 million to $5 million, the highest we have had to date."

Keener said that LOTTO sales more than tripled from the first week of April to last week. Sales rose from $1,034,000 to $3,320,000 during the four-week period.

"We saw 'LOTTO mania' hit Kentucky when the jackpot went to $5 million last weekend," he said. "Retailers reported lines of people waiting to buy tickets for the drawing. Clearly, this was our strongest on-line sales week to date."

He said that an added bonus was the increase in Kentucky Cash sales for the first week in May. "We have long believed that we see cross-sales for these games; that people come in to buy a ticket for LOTTO and pickup for Cash as well," he said. "Last week, this proved to be true as we saw a 22 percent increase in Cash sales from the first week in April."

Berea Conference focuses on humor

Fans of mountain jokes and tall tales will gather at Berea College July 20-21 for the school's third Festival of Appalachian Humor.

Songwriter Billy Edd Wheeler and Loyal Jones, director of the college's Appalachian Center, again will serve as hosts of the weekend event. Wheeler and Jones, who hosted the 1983 and '87 festivals, have collaborated on two books of mountain humor, "Laughter in Appalachia," and "Curing the Cross-Eyed Mule." Jones also compiled "The Preacher Joke Book" which was published last year.

Wheeler, although best known as a songwriter, is a recording artist and playwright. Jones, an educator and lecturer, has published "Appalachia: A Self-Portrait," "Reshaping the Image of Appalachia" and two biographies.

In addition to evening shows in Phelps Stokes Chapel on Friday and Saturday, the festival offers contests with cash prizes for best jokes, traditional tales, true humorous stories, comic routines and songs. The competition is open to humorists of all ages.

Also scheduled on Saturday at the Alumni Building are two scholarly presentations. At 10 a.m. Dr. John Combs, professor of English at Kentucky Wesleyan College, will present "Humor in Healing," "The Healing Power of Humor," featuring Dr. Michael Nichols, director of the University of Kentucky Counseling Center will begin at 1 p.m. Both programs are free.

Festival shows will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Phelps Stokes Chapel. Tickets are $5 for adults and $2 for children 6 to 14 and will be sold at the door.

Entertainers who will perform include Ramona Jones, wife of Louis Marshall "Grandpa" Jones, and their daughter Alisa Jones Wall; Joe Bly, co-producer of "Shindig on the Green" in Asheville, N.C.; Bonnie Collins, traditional storyteller from West Union, W.Va.; Bob Hannah, actor, storyteller and humorist from Rabun County, Ga.; Paul Lepp of West Virginia's "Vandalia Gathering" and "Liar's Contest"; Al White, humorist and musician with the McLain Family Band, and storyteller Bill Foster who teaches at the University of North Alabama.

State audit program keeps information current

When officials prepared the budget for Floyd County for the coming fiscal year, they had current audit information because of a program initiated by State Auditor Bob Babbage.

"This year each fiscal court and county fee official in Kentucky was able to plan their budget using current audit information," Babbage said.

"Also taxpayers in each county will have access to current information about how their tax dollars are being used," Babbage added.

Babbage said he first heard about the delay in audit information when he was a candidate for state auditor.

"Everywhere I went county officials and members of the media told me to make current audit information my top priority," Babbage said.

He did.

Babbage explained that the Auditor's office had received several new assignments from the General Assembly during the 1980s.

Some of the major assignments include the annual statewide audit of motor vehicle registrations, the financial audits of all Property Valuation Administrators, the responsibility for the oversight of the Kentucky Lottery audits, a special review of the financial management of Kentucky schools, and other special assignments from the Governor and the General Assembly.

With the increased volume of work, the office steadily fell behind in county audits until 1988.

With the implementation of Babbage's plan, production of county audits increased to over 800 during the most recent fiscal year as compared to 375 for the 1987 fiscal year.

Success in bringing audits to current year status had some drawbacks, Babbage explained, noting that some officials were billed for audit services twice in the same fiscal year. He also had to contend with a specific limit on the size of his staff, Babbage said.

To get county government audit to current year status, Babbage devised a joint venture between his staff and private audit firms.

Babbage first described the project to private audit firms interested in participating in the joint venture, let them bid and awarded the assignment to the firm with the best and lowest bid.

Then Babbage added an unprecedented opportunity to the process — he negotiated with all the other bidding firms to see if they would participate in the project at the same bid price. Several firms chose to participate at the low cost.

Babbage said the success of his audit catchup program was due to the "very cooperative" partnership between county government officials, the private audit firms and his staff.

The Auditor's office goal, shared by county officials, is to remain current with audit information, Babbage said.

P'burg, Beaver Creek South face off in All-Star matchup

Osborne: "Pitching will be our strength"

This coming Monday night two of the top teams in the Little League All-Star tournament, at Inez, will be the Prestonsburg All-Stars and Beaver Creek South All-Stars. The two teams will lock horns in the opening round of the tournament scheduled to get underway at 5 p.m.

One of the fears that Prestonsburg coach Rodney Osborne has is the number of 12-year-olds that the Beaver Creek team will possess.

"We don't have the 12 years they have," stated the Prestonsburg coach. "We will be competitive in the tournament. Our pitching will be our strong point."

Prestonsburg will carry four hard throwing right handers on its roster in Jeremy and Jason Osborne and strikeout specialist Bennett Allen plus Jason Hackworth. The Osborne boys have tossed four no-hitters between them during the regular season. Allen has had games of 13, 14 and 15 strikeouts. Hackworth, according to his coach, is not to be overlooked.

Ricky Lemaster will provide the Prestonsburg All-Stars with the long ball power they need. Jason Hackworth and John Morris can also reach the fences.

William Marsillette and William Lester are good contact hitters, and any time you make contact you have a legitimate chance to get a hit. Rated as perhaps the best catcher in the Prestonsburg Little League is Mike Castle. Castle is a steady performer behind the plate and an excellent defensive catcher. Castle knows how to hit the ball also.

Another good hitter is Jake Poston. Poston is a gutsy type of player who battles the pitchers at the plate. Chris Hicks, Shawn Davis, Ricky Blackburn and James Taylor are other players whom Coach Osborne will be counting on.

The Prestonsburg All-Stars may be young, but the talent is there and has been shown during the regular season.

If there is a weakness on this team, it may be not enough 12 year old players. Defensively Coach Osborne feels his team will be strong. The type of games that the Osborne boys pitch will require a strong Prestonsburg infield because of the numerous ground balls that will be hit by Beaver Creek South, a hitters' club. The outfield for the Prestonsburg squad should be a strong one and will be needed against a team like the Beaver Creek South team. "We're going to be a good running team. We have some good speed on this team and what we are going to need the most is a good team effort," said Osborne. "Everyone is going to have to contribute."

BC South line up

Beaver Creek brings a strong group of batters to the plate in people such as Jason Bevins, Terrance Mullins, David Turner, Chris Moore, Charles Twiss, Mike Stephens, Brandon Kinzer and Matt Marcum. All are capable of hitting the ball out.

Good contact hitters such as T.T. Pack, Pete Dawson and J.P. Skeens will make the Beaver Creek South team more formidable.

The winner of this game will face an always tough Morgan County team which received a first round bye. The loser drops to the losers' bracket.

Salisbury gathers in awards

A lot has been said, written about and stated about a basketball player at Johnson Central High School — Jody Salisbury. The 6'10" center has been the subject of several columns around the country after traveling with the Kentucky Junior All-Stars this summer.

Salisbury will be a senior this coming school year at the Johnson County school and will be looking to lead coach Alvin Ratliff's Golden Eagles to a regional championship this coming basketball season.

However, once Jody has graduated, there is still on the horizon yet another basketball player with the last name Salisbury and that is Nathan Salisbury (6'1"). Nathan is the brother of Jody and will be an eighth grader at Oil Springs Elementary this coming school term.

Much can be said of this young man now. He recently won the Pepsi Shootout at the Pikeville basketball camp last week. Salisbury and others went through eight rounds of outside shooting. Each round consisted of 30 seconds in which each shooter had to make as many shots as possible. Salisbury won the event by hitting 76.

Salisbury also won the Free Throw Championship connecting on 79 out of 100 shots. He also had the longest streak, hitting 20 charity tosses in a row. In his age group (14-17 year olds) he was voted the Outstanding Camper.

Salisbury has led his school to two county championships the past two basketball seasons. The team is a favorite to repeat this coming season.

Will he play varsity basketball at Johnson Central with his big brother next year? The consensus is, even though he could, chances are that he won't. If he and others did decide he should play, he will be a help to the guard play at Johnson Central.

Another Salisbury waiting in the wings! Much will be written and said about this young man before he finishes his high school basketball career at Johnson Central.

LITTLE LEAGUE ALL-STAR TOURNAMENT

Inez, Ky. — July 9-14

Whitesburg on sprint circuit

Loctite/Crestliner Vans USAC Sprint car series point leader Steve Butler of Kokomo, Ind., continues his quest for an unprecedented fourth national championship the weekend of July 13-15 as the "Thunder and Lightning" machines visit the Bluegrass State for three consecutive winged races.

Mountain Motor Speedway in Whitesburg will host Friday night's racing program. Then Richmond Raceway in Richmond takes center stage on Saturday night. Comtrax Motor Speedway in Glasgow is Sunday night's host. Whitesburg and Glasgow are both 3/8 mile dirt ovals, and Richmond is a 1/4 mile dirt track.

Butler's challengers in the three races should be formidable, with drivers like Rich Vogler of Indianapolis and Jack Hewitt of Troy, Ohio, among early entries. Vogler is a two-time defending Sprint car champ, and Hewitt's Sprint car outings are legendary.

Second generation drivers Rick Howerton, Joey Saldana and Gary Beale are also entered. Howerton is the son of 1974 Hoosier Hundred winner Jackie Howerton. Saldana's father Joe won the 1976 Hoosier Hundred, and Beale's father Rollie is a former USAC Sprint Car champ and now series Chief Steward.

All three racing programs have 30-lap main events following preliminary heat races and semi-features. Warmups at Whitesburg and Richmond are at 6 p.m. with racing at 8 p.m. Practice at Glasgow Sunday night starts at 4 p.m. with racing at 6 p.m.

The Whitesburg and Glasgow events mark the debut of USAC Sprint racing at each facility. The USAC Sprinters ran at Richmond in 1988, Mike Ward beating Kenny Jacobs and Butler to the checkered flag.

Butler's first "winged" outing this year produced a fourth-place finish at Granite City, Ill., May 5, but his last appearance with a wing found him missing the feature at Wilmot, Wisc., June 19. He needs to be consistent in the three-race Kentucky swing, with 22-year-old Eric Gordon of Greenfield, Ind., last year's "Rookie of the Year", breathing down his neck and hoping to improve on his 1989 runners-up point finish.

Jock doc: latest know-it-all

By Al Dunning
 Scripps Howard News Service
 It has come to my attention that a shortcoming exists in American journalism's services to the public. Through articles written by columnists rich in expertise and wisdom, newspapers regularly provide advice to the lovelorn and the infirm. We offer guidance to taxpayers and stargazers, to gardeners and to seekers of spiritual light. But we have allowed afflictions of the bodies and souls of the sporting masses to go unattended. Until now. The sports doctor is open for business.
DEAR JOCK DOC: I think I may be going blind. When I look at the National League East standings, I see the Pittsburgh Pirates in first place and the Cardinals and the Cubs on the bottom. Do I need glasses?—Red Byrd.
DEAR RED: No, all you need is a little patience. You're seeing a mirage, and it will go away in a few days. There will be a Democrat in the White House before the Pirates are in the playoffs.
DEAR JOCK DOC: I drive an 18-wheeler for a living and play golf on my days off. Lately I developed a horrible slice. I practiced so much trying to correct it that the bursitis in my right shoulder has flamed up, making it difficult for me to shift gears. What should I do?—T. Green.
DEAR T: Put in for a transfer to the dispatcher's office, apply for workman's compensation, take three months off and try adjusting your grip to close your club face a little.
DEAR JOCK DOC: I got married three months ago, and it isn't working out. My bride won't clean fish. Every time I bring home a cooler full of crappie or bream, she refuses to touch them. I'm afraid we may be headed for a busstop. Is it my fault?—Rod Caster.
DEAR ROD: Of course it's your fault. Be more considerate. Take up possum hunting. Possums aren't slimy and skinning one takes a lot less time than cleaning 50 crappie. Tell your bride that if she agrees to skin possums, she can keep the hides until she has enough to make a fur coat.

DEAR JOCK DOC: I think I'm getting depression. I'm a big Louisiana State fan, and I just heard that LSU fired its tiger mascot, Mike IV, and replaced him with a 6-month old cub named Mike V. If a full-grown tiger couldn't win in the Southeastern Conference, what chance does a kitten have?—Pierre Kuhnahz.
DEAR PIERRE: Relax. It was a precautionary move by LSU. According to reports from Baton Rouge, the life expectancy of a Bengal tiger is 18 years. The retired tiger was 17. They didn't want Mike IV dropping dead in Tiger Stadium like the football team did last fall.
DEAR JOCK DOC: Now that television is saturated with major league baseball on CBS, ESPN, WTBS, WGN, WWOR and maybe even the Hubble Telescope, all my husband wants to do is watch TV. Does this mean he loves baseball more than he loves me?—Georgia Pines.
DEAR GEORGIA: Probably. But you're still a lucky woman, because he probably loves you more than he loves TV bowling.
DEAR JOCK DOC: I'm ill. Jose Canseco is my favorite baseball player, and the way the Oakland A's treat him makes me sick at my stomach. They're paying him only $2 million a year, and he says he is stuck with such pitiful paychecks because he is Latin and a victim of discrimination. I also think he gets arrested all the time because the cops are picking on him. What do you prescribe?—Homer Long.

DEAR HOMER: Take two doses of Jose's ego and call me when he grows up.

Black Bears Share Living Space With Eastern Kentuckians

Black bears have returned to Eastern Kentucky, and that makes some local residents uneasy. "People are a little frightened when they see a bear because they're not sure what to do," said Becky Littleton, wildlife biologist for the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resource.

Once people understand bear behavior, both humans and bears can coexist in the same environment, according to the biologist.

Since black bears are shy and secretive, they don't particularly like being around people. In fact, even a mother with cubs usually runs away when humans approach. Simply put, it's rare for black bears to be aggressive toward humans.

The smell of food, however, does attract bears. Did you ever know any animal accustomed to a handy food source that didn't return time and again for an easy meal?

Bears are primarily vegetarians, eating fruits, berries, grasses and acorns, and sometimes, meat. This means household garbage not regularly picked up should be buried. (Remains of animal carcasses should always be buried.)

Bee keepers can prevent damage to hives by locating them away from woods. Place the beehives on platforms tall enough to discourage honey robbing bears. Farmers may want to use electric fencing or tall, heavy gauge wire to protect corn crops.

For more information on black bears, or what to do about problem bears, contact District Wildlife Biologist Larry Short or his assistant, Becky Littleton, at HC 66 Box 250, Prestonsburg 41653; phone 886-9608.

Remember, black bears are protected in Kentucky. It is illegal to take a black bear by any means. Violators can be fined, jailed and required to pay for replacing each illegally taken bear.

Black Bears: Can Kentucky Keep Them?

Black bears were once native to all of Kentucky's forests, but with increasing human activity and accompanying habitat destruction, the bears all but disappeared from the state by the early 1900s.

Over the years, idle farmlands in Eastern Kentucky began growing up in trees, expanding the habitat range for black bears living east and southeast of Kentucky. Bears from the bordering states of Virginia, West Virginia and Tennessee (which have huntable black bear populations) began traveling into Kentucky.

Beginning in the early 1980s, bear sightings in eastern portions of the state were reported more and more frequently. In the past couple of years, it became apparent to biologists that black bears were reestablishing themselves in Kentucky.

Recently, the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources received reports of 74 bear sightings from a 12-county area in Eastern Kentucky. Biologists estimate a total population of around 400 black bears in eastern portions of the state.

Although habitat plays a vital role in sustaining any wildlife, the key to the future of black bears in Kentucky rests with its people. Bears and humans can coexist as long as attitudes are shaped by knowledge and understanding.

Black bears have reclaimed their native land, and I, for one, hope they're here to stay.

FISHIN' TIPS FROM THE TRACKER® PROS

When selecting a new electric trolling motor, let application be your guide. For most aluminum boats, a good 12 volt model will do a good job. To maneuver a heavier fiberglass-bass boat, consider a 12/24 volt motor.

Anytime a 12/24 volt motor is selected, you should plan on using three marine batteries. Two of these batteries should be deep cycle models, wired in series to deliver 24 volts. The trolling motor is the only accessory operated from these batteries.

The third battery should be a cranking type, wired to the outboard engine. Since the engine's alternator helps keep this battery fully charged, all other accessories such as depth sounders, bilge pumps, running lights, etc. should be operated from this battery.

Fishin' Tips are presented by America's #1 Fishing Boat.

Comparing the leagues

by Hank Aaron

What are the real differences between the National and American Leagues? Of course there are some very basic differences, the biggest being the American League allows a designated hitter. But there also are some other, subtle differences.

The designated hitter is a real "star saver" for American League teams. Because designated hitters bat for pitchers, American League teams get more innings out of their pitchers and, consequently, don't have to carry as many pitchers on their rosters. Hitting burns out pitchers faster in games and in years. If there had been designated hitters when Mickey Mantle was playing, he could have played a couple more seasons.

Having a designated hitter certainly makes for better offensive play, and the fans like that. They want to see a lot of runs scored.

I played all but two of my years in the National League. The last two I played for the American League

Milwaukee Brewer as a designated hitter. Making the transition from playing the whole game to being just a designated hitter was not easy. I was used to getting into the whole rhythm of the game, shifting from defense to offense and so on. Suddenly, all I had to do between trips to the plate was think about that last time I was up with bases loaded and popped up!

But I found the real difference in league play to be the strike zone. The umpires in the American League call the strike zone higher and a bit bigger than they do in the National League. Because there is much more of a target to throw to, American League pitchers work the ball around the plate more than they do in the National League.

Believe it or not, a big reason for the differences in the strike zone is that National League umpires wear their chest protectors on the inside of their jackets while the American League umpires wear their chest protectors on the outside of their jackets. Wearing their chest protectors on the outside prevents American League umpires from squatting down as low as the National League umpires. Other than that, the umpiring from league to league is basically the same.

There are a lot of older parks in the American League and not as many Astro Turf fields. Still, there is a popular notion that the National League is the more "traditional" of the two leagues. I disagree with that idea. Baseball is traditional. It is a game steeped in tradition, and the few rule changes they've made over the years have not changed the game much at all in either league.

What I'd like to see is a uniform brand of baseball. If they're never going to get the designated hitter in the National League — and I don't think it ever will happen — then get rid of it in the American League. I think that would be best for the game, and although they might miss the better offense, I think that's what the fans want.

Roberts fails to make it 2 at Riverside

Rick Roberts, 1989 Riverside Salute The Flag 5K winner, failed to make it two in a row as he was edged out by Cordia High School's Brandon Gayheart with a time of 16:43 to Roberts' 16:55.

Gayheart beat Roberts at his own game the last quarter mile of the race. Roberts says that he passed too early with a kick, and Gayheart charged ahead with his own to win the 5K run at Lost Creek. Floyd County's Dave McGuire was third overall with a time of 17:20.

Pat Graham of Lexington took the overall women's title with a 21:10. Thelma's Dan Evans finished eighth overall in 19:55 to win his 30-39 age group. Joey McGuire of Mud Creek finished sixth overall in the race and the other McGuire, Tony, placed 10th. Each won his age group.

According to Roberts, many runners will be on hand for the Sixth Annual Moonlight Mile Freedom Run to be held at Island Creek Road in Pikeville at 9 tonight (Wednesday). Registration is $3 with trophies to be given to the winners.

FISHATHON WINNERS

Name	Amount	Sponsor
Randy Smith, Auxier	$100	Dr. Charles Arnett
Paul Burke, Prestonsburg	$50	Dr. Fred Meece

According to Fishathon Committee Members there are still many "Dollars" left to be caught. For example: Boat valued at $8500; four fish valued at $1000; six fish valued at $500; 40 fish valued at $100; 125 fish valued at $50.

Remember, bass, catfish and crappie in Dewey Lake are your prize fishes. The committee recently had to reject a fish that was caught and worth $1000. According to officials in the fishathon, the rules were not followed.

"We have to follow the rules of the fishathon," said one Fishathon committee member. So the $1000 fish was released back into the waters and is still out there.

So you see there are winners and you may be the next one. If you haven't purchased a Fishathon Tag as of yet, get yourself one and you may be the next big winner announced in the paper. You're going to fish anyway, why not have an official tag to fish the Fishathon.

MCC provides opportunity for special youngsters

Johnny (not his real name) needed a very special program to go to when he was three years old, but there was none available in Floyd County. Johnny had some severe behavior problems. He would bang his head until it bled, and his speech was more than a year behind other children his age.

For many young Floyd and Pike County children who needed a stimulating development and therapeutic preschool before 1987, there was "no room in the inn," according to Rita Conley of Mountain Comprehensive Care Center.

The reason the children couldn't find a place had to do with their handicaps. Many of the children at age three could not walk; some were four years old and had not said their first word. Some had parents who were not able to care for them all day, every day. Others had been abused and neglected and had learned to act in very destructive ways.

That changed when MCC's Children's Center opened at Harold two years ago.

The MCC program, which also enrolls a small number of children without problems, has a teacher and/or therapist for every three children, and some children have one staff person assigned to them.

The program, which has recently completed expansion to allow for integration of more children with severe problems, is a joint effort with the Floyd County School System. Through a contract, the program implements Public Law 99-457 by providing education and therapy for young children. Floyd County Schools' special education department director Ogie Slone has given the program support and administrative backing, Conley said.

The program was the first such project of this type in Kentucky. Now there are similar programs in Louisville and Western Kentucky. The Department for Social Services has also contracted with the program to provide a nurturing day care for many children since 1987.

The Children's Center program is based on the "Gentle Teaching" model developed by Dr. John McGee, as well as positive parenting approaches.

"We believe in the inherent dignity and worth of each child regardless of their behavior or disability," said Conley, who developed and now directs the program.

"Many of our children come to us without internal controls and feeling bad about themselves. Everything we do is geared toward increasing their developmental potential and expanding their sense of worth," she said.

The atmosphere at the center is calming and stimulating at the same time. In addition to highly individualized guidelines for the children, there are "staff rules" that include no raising of voices, no negative physical intervention and no verbalization or body language that reflects non-acceptance of any child, Conley explained.

The rooms are light pink and white and colorfully decorated.

The combined experience of the staff, which includes a child psychiatrist, totals 42 years. Vicki Brown, a highly proficient sign language interpreter, is the supervisor. Many of the children have experienced their first communication by using sign language at the center, Conley said.

The program, which operates five days a week on the local school system calendar, is highly structured and incorporates state-of-the-art early childhood curriculum and techniques.

Transportation is provided, and the fall, spring and summer sessions include several trips into the community.

Special needs children with severe behavioral and emotional problems who need a summer program may be referred for a special six-week session in June and August. The center's operation is reduced for three weeks in July for staff vacations.

"Floyd County gets a lot of bad press," Conley pointed out. "This is an effort of which we can all be proud."

Funny teacher

Learning can be fun (and silly) as teacher Mary Jo Tiley, along with students Michael and Roy, will attest.

Limited enrollment

Not more than 12 children are usually scheduled into the center at one time. A recently completed expansion project will allow for increased daily attendance.

MSU awards go to 3 locals

KELLIE IRENE GRIFFITH

Three Floyd County women have been given Residence Hall Awards by Morehead State University for fall semester.

ANNETTE CHRISTINE WELLS

They are Kellie Irene Griffith of Wayland, Annette Christine Wells of East Point and Pamela Jane Spears of Wheelwright.

The scholarships, valued at $1000 per year, require evidence of strong leadership and achievement capabilities in school and community activities and at least a 3.0 grade point average. They are renewable if the student maintains a 2.75 grade average as a freshman and at least a 3.0 each semester thereafter.

Spears is the daughter of Donald and Cleo Spears. A graduate of Wheelwright High School, she was an honor student, member of the Beta Club, voted "Student of the Month" in math and winner of a National Science Award.

Griffith, an Allen Central High School graduate, is the daughter of Arnold and Ollie Griffith. She was an honor roll student and a member of the Student Council and Beta Club.

Wells is the daughter of Thomas Edward and Kila Denise Wells and a graduate of Prestonsburg High School. She was a member of National Honor Society, National Beta Club, annual staff, Flag Corps and Pep Club. She was listed in "Who's Who Among American High School Students."

Two receive UK scholarships

KEVIN M. ADAMS

Two students from Prestonsburg have been awarded academic achievement scholarships to attend the University of Kentucky.

Kevin M. Adams, a freshman majoring in civil engineering, was awarded a Chancellor's scholarship valued at $1000 per year. A graduate of Prestonsburg High School, he is the son of Dennis and JoAnn Adams of Middle Creek Road.

Connie Leann Spencer, a 1989 graduate of PHS, was awarded a Community College/Transfer Scholarship, valued at $1000. She is the daughter of Darwin and Ginny Spencer of Creekside Drive and is a sophomore majoring in animal science.

The scholarship recipients, freshmen and transfers, rank in the top 10 percent of all college students in the country, according to a UK news release.

"UK now awards more than $2 million a year in scholarships based on merit," said Interim President Charles T. Wethington Jr. "This year's scholarship winners were selected from almost 700 of the best students applying for scholarships this fall."

KSBA to meet with officials

The Kentucky School Boards Association (KSBA) will hold three meetings around the state to discuss recommended school board policies for local boards to consider in implementing school-based decision making under the new state education reform laws.

The meetings, primarily for superintendents and school board members, are scheduled Friday, July 6, 1:30 p.m.-4:30 p.m. in Lexington at the Marriott Resort; Monday, July 9, 1-4 p.m. in Paducah at the Executive Inn; and Tuesday, July 10, 1-4 p.m. in Louisville at the Galt House East.

KSBA has worked closely with superintendents and administrators to develop the policies. The first stage of the policy development covers the establishment of school councils composed of parents, teachers and an administrator to make decisions on school management, instructional materials, personnel and other matters. The policies also outline the election of representatives to the councils and how the councils' meetings will be held in keeping with the open meetings law.

KSBA will be developing additional policies dealing with other aspects of the new laws. These will be ready for local boards in the fall.

Former resident is designated

Buenal Agee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Frasure of McDowell, has been named Teacher of the Year by the Southeastern Ohio Council for Exceptional Children.

She is a special education teacher at the Buckeye Youth Center in Columbus, Ohio. Cited in her selection were her work with severely behaviorally handicapped youth, her past work with developmentally handicapped youth in Pike County, Ohio, and her contributions to the development of the Paint Creek Youth Center in Ross County, Ohio.

A graduate of McDowell High School, Agee received bachelor's and master's degrees from Ohio University. She has developed a teaching technique for handicapped youth that incorporates special training in anger management, reality therapy, life skills development, substance abuse, counseling and guided group interaction.

Correction

An article in last Friday's edition of The Times listed Paul Elliott as Floyd County's representative at the state school bus drivers' Road-e-o. Actually, Ricky Hancock represented the county at the competition. From Martin, Hancock has been driving a school bus for 10 years and drives his bus 63 miles a day. Information from the state Road-e-o organization to the newspaper was incorrect. The Times regrets the error.

Job Corps graduate finds success in workplace

by Kathleen Carroll
Contributing Writer

How do you get promoted to foreman in just one year? Just ask Excell Hunter. Hunter graduated in May 1989 from the Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center in Prestonsburg.

After completing training in building and grounds maintenance, he had an opportunity to relocate to Durham, N.C. Placed through the Industrial Work Experience Program that is run by the Appalachian Council of the AFL-CIO, Hunter went to work building computer frames for the SMT Company.

Like most others on the assembly line, he started work at $5.75 per hour. After one year he earned a promotion to foreman, raising his salary to $8 per hour — with a benefits package. Ask him what it is like to go that far, that fast, Hunter will smile modestly and simply say "It's OK."

When promoted to foreman, Hunter registered disbelief. "What went through my head was — like wow! I was so young." At first Hunter was unsure of the promotion, "I kept thinking about the guys who have been there longer and who are older," he said, "and I'm just 22 years old."

"I was scared because I'm supposed to be in charge of these guys." He said he thought about the promotion for quite a while before accepting it. "I didn't even know if I wanted it, or should I wait to see if I was ready for it."

In the end, Hunter talked to his bosses. "They said that as long as I know what I'm doing and I get the job done, they didn't mind that I was young. Everything worked out for the best."

Hunter now has his own apartment in Durham. In his spare time he hangs out with some friends at Duke University. Right now he just plays basketball with his friends, but later he said he might like to try some classes at Duke.

"I never had the chance to really think about taking classes at a university," said Hunter, "so it's hard to pick one subject I would be interested in. I'd mostly just like to study anything."

In town this week to speak to other students at Job Corps, Hunter said, "I came back to talk to others like me, because without Job Corps I don't know what I'd be doing right now." Hunter explained that he was skeptical when he first came here. "I didn't like it at all, and I told myself I wouldn't stay two months. I ended up staying two years."

Hunter remembered what changed his mind. After being at Job Corps a couple of months, he went home to Lakeland, Fla., on leave. What he found was disturbing. "All my friends were in trouble," said Hunter, "some were in jail, some involved with drugs. There was a lot of trouble in that neighborhood. I came back and decided I was going to make the best of what I had. I decided I was going to make something of myself."

Hunter said that part of what kept him going was the encouragement he received from his mother, Virginia Grace. "You know," Hunter said, "at first she didn't want me to come here because it was so far away from home."

According to Hunter, his mother's attitude changed "when she saw the change in me, that I had a goal, she kept pushing me and kept telling me to stick with it. Now my mom says she's so proud of me, she never expected me to go this far."

Hunter also recognized the encouragement he received at the Carl D. Perkins Center. "A lot of people at Job Corps made a difference in my life," Hunter said. "I especially want to thank Clarence Trammell, Edna Higgenbotham and Len Grant."

Hunter was so deeply grateful to Job Corps that he came to Prestonsburg on his vacation to talk to other students who faced some of the same problems he has overcome. "I came back because the Job Corps made a difference to me. When I came back to talk to the other students, I was real nervous," Hunter said, "but after I got up there and started talking, it all fell in place. I just wanted to show others that you can make it if you work hard."

"I owe a lot to Job Corps," the former student said. "I learned a trade, I learned responsibility. Most important I learned to believe in myself."

Careers in the '90's

Job opportunities abundant in ag economics

By Ed Deitz
UK News Bureau

For city dwellers, the farmer and the grocer represent the most visible links in the agricultural chain. Farmers, somehow sustaining a passion for the land despite facing major financial troubles, get our sympathy. Grocers, with their gleaming aisles and computerized cash registers, get our money.

But thousands of people are working at jobs that don't get as much publicity, yet are essential to keeping the chain intact, experts say.

Many make sure farmers get the supplies and services they need. Others market, process and distribute food.

And some keep sharp eyes on agricultural prices and production trends, crucial information for both farmers and consumers.

There's a serious need for people who are able to perform these functions," says Loys L. Mather, a professor of agricultural economics at the University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture.

Agricultural economics is one of several programs that have helped UK's College of Agriculture consistently rank among the best in the nation.

Its graduates usually have no trouble finding good jobs that often start at $27,000 a year and more, college officials say.

But the program is not easy. What it amounts to is practically a double major in business and agriculture, either of which is difficult enough by itself, Mather observes.

Interested high school students need to pursue a pre-college curriculum, along with courses and activities designed to enhance their communications and leadership skills, he advises.

Once at UK, students should be prepared to tackle such widely diverse subjects as animal disease control and farm water management, money and banking, international trade and the fundamentals of investing.

They can choose one of five specialty fields. Most pick agribusiness management, which leads to jobs in marketing and sales of agricultural supplies, or commodity merchandising and price analysis.

Of the 131 students enrolled in the agricultural economics program at UK last year, more than half were taking courses in agribusiness management, Mather says.

And while most students in the college come from rural areas, jobs in agribusiness management offer so much promise that "many in the program have no farm background at all," Mather emphasizes.

Other specialty areas are:

- Agricultural financial management, whose graduates find careers with banks, credit agencies and other lending institutions that deal with the agricultural community.
- Agricultural economics science, which prepares students for graduate school and beyond, for research and teaching.
- Farm management, whose graduates generally work more closely with agricultural production by operating their own farms or by signing on with professional farm management companies.
- Public policy analysis, which readies students for work with local or state governments, with the US Department of Agriculture, with development councils or lobby groups. Many go on to law school.

Public policy is the choice of Brian Thomas, whose grandfather owns a large farm in Clark County. He plans to go to law school after he graduates next year, but he figures he may wind up managing the family farm.

"I'm aiming in a different direction from actual farming," he says, "maybe environmental law. But I hope the farm is in my future, and what I'm learning here will definitely help."

Farm management appealed to Clint Harris. He graduated in May and accepted a job with Perdue Farms Inc., a Maryland-based company that ranks as the world's third largest poultry producer.

He is a service supervisor with the responsibility of overseeing poultry operations on 30 independent farms under contract to Perdue.

Harris initially thought he wanted to be a veterinarian.

"But I saw that there were probably more job opportunities in agricultural economics so I switched over," he said. "It looks like it turned out to be a good move."

Taking part in SOAR

Among the 400 new students and their parents who attended the Summer Orientation, Advising and Registration (SOAR) program at Morehead State University recently was Michelle DePoy of Allen. She was advised on fall classes by Dr. Robert Lindahl, MSU professor of mathematics. Two other SOAR sessions are planned for July 14 and 21. (MSU photo by Eric Shindelbower)

MSU faculty pay going up

Morehead State University's Board of Regents has approved a $55.8 million operating budget for 1990-91 which included a 14 percent average salary increase for faculty members. MSU's faculty salary increase is the largest among the state schools who have announced their salary schedules.

With approval of the budget, MSU has taken what President C. Nelson Grote called a "giant step" toward addressing a problem that has plagued the school for several years — low faculty salaries.

The increases which range from 11.27 percent to 20 percent are expected to bring MSU faculty salaries up to the average of the state's regional universities. "While that midpoint is always a moving target, based on our calculations we will be at the median of Kentucky's regional universities," the president said at the board meeting on June 22.

The average staff salary increase will be six percent, with the increases ranging from 4.2 percent to 9.47. Calling the staff salary increase the "down side" of the budget, Grote told the board that "a year from now we are going to have to take a serious look at our staff salaries and make them a priority for 1991-92."

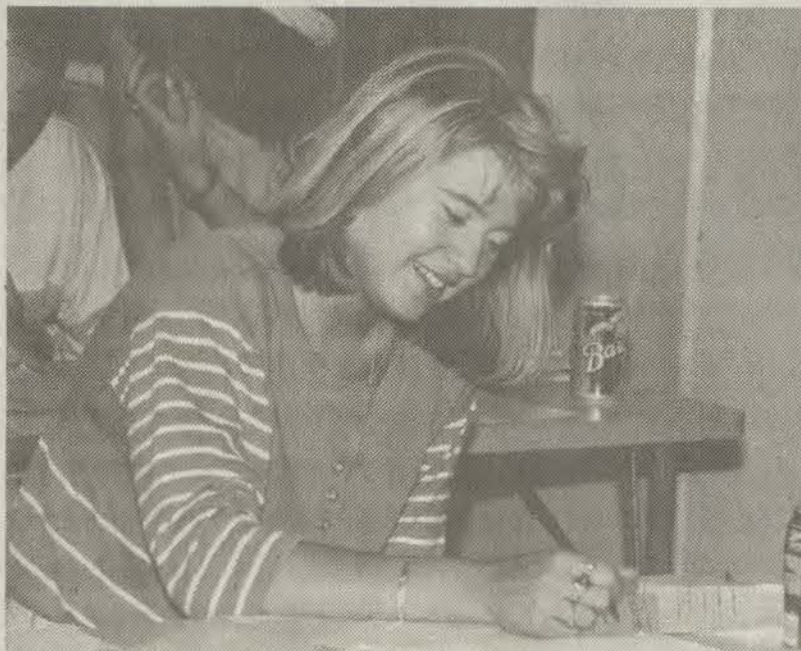

MSU's total budget represents a 12.8 percent growth over the previous year which is attributed to a larger state general fund allocation, additional tuition revenue as a combined result of enrollment growth and the 11 percent hike in fees, and projected growth in auxiliary operations.

The budget also reflected a significant increase in the percentage of the Educational and General budget allocated to instruction — the largest percentage in more than a decade — 45.8 percent.

In his remarks Grote also noted that MSU had received $2 million for instructional equipment from state bonds for the 1990-92 biennium. Other budget highlights include funding for expanded services and offerings at the MSU-Ashland Extended Campus Center and the MSU-Big Sandy Extended Campus Center located in Prestonsburg. Funding was also included for five new faculty in nursing and radiologic technology to support the reinstatement of the associate degree in nursing program and two additional faculty members in elementary education.

In other action, the board reaffirmed the university's affirmative action/equal employment opportunity policy; approved revisions to various university policies, and rescinded selected academic and administrative policies.

Two merit Leadership Awards

DONNA JILL KING

SUZANNE LYNN FRAZIER

Among students receiving Leadership Awards from Morehead State University are two Floyd County women, Suzanne Lynne Frazier and Donna Jill King.

The awards carry scholarships of $500 per year and are renewable if the student maintains a 2.50 grade point average.

Frazier, a graduate of Prestonsburg High School, is the daughter of William C. Frazier. She was an alternate for Governor's School for the Arts, a member of All-State Chorus and received superior ratings for three years in district piano competition.

King, the daughter of Kenny and Kay King of Bevinville, is a graduate of Wheelwright High School. She was nominated for "Who's Who Among American High School Students" and was a member of Beta Club and the school's academic team. Active in the community, she was a volunteer on Earth Day and for senior citizens.

Others PHS students who competed were Ernie Croot, Kevin Garrett, Jennifer Gray, Krissey Hall, Carter Hamilton, Casey Jones, Hannele Laine and Jody Wallen.

Locals compete in math contest

Ten students from Prestonsburg High School recently competed in the 1990 Cumberland College High School Mathematics Contest, sponsored by the Cumberland College Department of Mathematical Sciences.

Students from PHS were accompanied by Harold Burchett and Jeri Mullins.

A total of 21 high schools, primarily from southeastern Kentucky, were represented by 180 contestants and 29 sponsors.

This year's contest consisted of exams in five categories: Algebra I, Algebra II, Geometry, Advanced Math and Calculus. Each school was allowed to enter up to two students in each of the five categories.

Plaques were awarded to first, second and third place winners and certificates were awarded to students placing fourth and fifth in each of the categories. Students earned points for their school ranging from five point for first place to one point for fifth place.

The top three schools received plaques recognizing their students' achievement. Laurel County High School was awarded first place, and Saint Camillus Academy and Somerset High School won second and third places, respectively.

Winners from Prestonsburg High School and their categories were Mike Partington, second place in advanced math, entitling him to a partial scholarship from Cumberland College as a math or physics major, and Dustin Haley, fifth place in calculus.

MSU pre-vet program a success

For the fourth consecutive year, all applicants from Morehead State University's pre-veterinary medicine program have been accepted into veterinary college.

"We believe it to be a rather unique record, shared by very few schools," said Dr. Scott Rundell, program adviser.

Three MSU students will enter Auburn (Ala.) University's College of Veterinary Medicine this fall for four years of study leading to the Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree.

The successful applicants include Debbie Kilgallin of Ashland, daughter of Benton and Nancy Kilgallin; Beverly Harris of Sandy Hook, daughter of Charlie and Thelma Harris; and Kendall Clay of Owingsville, daughter of Robert and Betty Clay.

The achievement speaks to both the quality of MSU's pre-veterinary medicine program and the students, according to MSU president C. Nelson Grote.

"The faculty members who assist these students with the stringent preparation necessary for this professional program also should take pride in this accomplishment," Dr. Grote said.

MSU's pre-veterinary medicine program normally required three years to complete. A minimum of between 80 and 90 semester hours of course work is necessary before applying to a school of veterinary medicine.

Students in MSU's program are encouraged to follow a curriculum that will lead to a BS degree in agriculture, biology or a related field should they not be admitted to veterinary school.

Two enlist

Two area men have enlisted in the US Army, according to local recruiter SSgt. Jason Pavolka.

They are Mickie R. Parsons of Eastern and Shannon Ray Conn of Hager Hill.

A 1990 graduate of Allen Central High School, Parsons, 17, is the son of Abeland Barbera. He will receive basic training at Fort Benning, Ga.

Conn, 17, is a 1990 graduate of Johnson Central High School and the son of Sylvia and Walter Scott Burton Jr.

SUMMER IS GOOD TIME TO ENJOY READING

by Dorothy Carlson
Professor of Education

"Summer time and the livin' is easy." A famous quote from a famous song!

It is summertime and an important time for every youngster, for it is during the long lazy days of summer that children have time to develop the habit of recreational reading, a habit that needs to be developed during childhood and nurtured during adolescence if it is to be a lifelong pleasure.

Getting youngsters hooked on books is a parental responsibility, not a school responsibility. Although good school reading programs include reading for pleasure, the main task of a school reading program is to develop effective reading skills. Practice in reading must be done at home.

Just as parents praise, prod and cheer their youngster to do well at sports so also must parents praise, prod and promote reading for fun. Reading is an involvement sport, not a spectator sport.

Recent reports from The Reading ReportCard indicated that nine-year-olds had maintained the reading performance of 1984, but that 13-year-olds had shown little improvement since 1971. Could this have something to do with many competing events for children's time?

Most of us as parents are very interested in seeing that our child learns to read. We read to little ones, tell them stories and sympathize with an amused grin at the first grader's disappointment the first day of school when he or she has not learned to read. We offer hugs and kisses and assure our child that very soon now the magic will happen and he or she will be able to read.

All too soon, however, other interests compete for time and we feel that reading, that magic kingdom, is no longer our problem. We forget the need for PRACTICE.

The library is waiting for you and your child. How about enrolling in a summer reading program? How about checking out some story tapes for use on the long vacation car trip. After all, you have a captive audience.

Story telling and story reading are marvelous entertainment. Maybe, just maybe, that way you won't be deaf from the music onslaught. How about getting junior to read stories to little brother. Picture books make marvelous practice for a reluctant reader. And it's a great ego trip to have an admiring sibling not to mention the fact that it gives mom and dad some peace for awhile.

Summertime Reading. Try it, you just might like it.

At the fire department

Teachers Carolyn Lambert and Margaret Patton of Mountain Comprehensive Care's Children's Center took the students on a recent trip to the Prestonsburg Fire Department. The youngsters, all with special needs, got to sit in the fire trucks and look at firefighting equipment at the fire hall. The MCC center at Harold is the only one of its type in the area that serves preschool children with various handicaps.

Circle of learning

Vicki Brown, site supervisor at Mountain Comprehensive Care's Children's Center, leads the morning language circle. Signing for many of the preschoolers who have not talked yet is their first means of communication. The children served by the center exhibit a variety of emotional, physical or mental handicaps.

Three rewarded for service

Three Floyd County students have been awarded Community Service Scholarships by the Christian Appalachian Project.

Kimberly D. Horne, Jose Mari Valdez Ilagan and Amanda Paulette Prater, who graduated from Prestonsburg, McDowell, and Betsy Layne high schools, respectively, this year, will receive $500 each in recognition of their work in the community. The money will be sent in their name to the school of their choice.

Horne is being recognized for her work in the hospital and nursing home, in the school anti-drug campaign, and in her church.

Ilagan is being recognized for his anti-drug/alcohol efforts and promoting responsible disposal of solid waste.

Prater is being recognized for her interests and work in her church, community and school.

The one-year Community Service Scholarship was started by the Christian Appalachian Project to reward young people for contributing their time and talents to activities that help their community, and to help them get started as they continue their education either in college or vocational school.

Graduating high school seniors in Bell, Casey, Clay, Estill, Floyd, Garrard, Harlan, Jackson, Johnson, Knott, Knox, Laurel, Lawrence, Lee, Leslie, Letcher, Lincoln, McCreary, Madison, Magoffin, Martin, Morgan, Owsley, Perry, Powell, Pulaski, Rockcastle, Whitley, and Wolfe counties are being awarded scholarships this year. A student from Eastern Kentucky at Kentucky School for the Deaf will also receive a scholarship.

Accepted to PT

Ronald G. Smith of Langley has been accepted into the University of Louisville School of Physical Therapy. A graduate of Morehead State University with a bachelor's degree in biology/chemistry, he is married to Janie Bailey Smith and they have one daughter, Suzanne. He is the son of Ronald and Cleo Smith of Firebrick and the son-in-law of Sid and Marcella Bailey of Langley. He hopes to return to Eastern Kentucky upon graduation from UL.

Butler graduates

Reva Annette Butler, formerly of Floyd County, 1990 graduate of Woodford County High School, was awarded the Cleveland Home Scholarship during the Honors Night program on May 25. She plans to pursue a degree in fashion merchandising at Midway College. Butler was a participant in the Woodford County Junior Miss program and a member of the SADD, PEP and FHA clubs. She will be spending this summer in New York.

KSBA board sees opportunities in reform

For local boards in school reform. With education reform in Kentucky, local school boards have an opportunity to help create a new vision for education.

That was the feeling of the Kentucky School Boards Association Board of Directors which held its quarterly meeting June 22-24 in Lexington.

Dr. Michael Usdan, president of the Institute for Educational Leadership in Washington, DC, offered the board members a perspective on the national education reform movement and where Kentucky is viewed in that movement. He noted that the nation is watching Kentucky in its new reform efforts.

Board members have "an opportunity to assume new responsibilities" said Usdan. As policy setters, boards will be able to spend more time on broader issues while more "ministerial decisions" are being made at the building level, Usdan explained.

He urged board members to capitalize on the interest and momentum currently in education with the Presidential Education Summit last fall and interest from the Judicial, Executive and Legislative branches of Kentucky government as well.

Local school boards are the "logical linkage point" between the state level and building level management as set forth in Kentucky's law, Usdan said.

In other action, the board reviewed proposed policies developed by the association dealing with how school-based decision making (SBDM) will work. The policies cover such areas as how schools decide to join SBDM, selecting representative teachers and parents to serve on councils, when councils should meet and how their meetings are subject to the open meeting law.

KSBA will present these proposed policies to local board members and superintendents in three meetings across the state. The schedule of meetings include:

- Friday, July 6, 1:30-4:30 p.m., Lexington, Marriott Resort
- Monday, July 9, 1-4 p.m., Paducah, Executive Inn
- Tuesday, July 10, 1-4 p.m., Louisville, House East.

Award winners

Art students recognized

Allen Central High School traditionally presents an award to senior art students who have shown excellence throughout their years in high school.

These are students who have produced exhibit quality work and have won in several competitions, according to art teacher Carolita O'Quinn.

This year three students qualified for the award. They are Barron Allen, Thomas Gearheart and Cotton Parsons.

Allen has been in state competition twice this year, won "Best of Show", and was an All-County Artist. He is the son of Jimmy and Gloria Allen of Langley.

Also an All-County Artist, Gearheart represented this region for two-dimensional art in the Sweet 16 Academic Showcase. During his years at ACHS, he won many shows and placed in others. He is the son of Quintin and Luci Gearheart of Langley.

Parsons has also been the recipient of many awards throughout his high school years. This year he was three-dimensional art representative and placed in the KFWC art competition and in the Kentucky All-State High School Art Exhibit. He is the son of Elmer and Cindy Parsons of Allen.

These students have all been members of the Special Art Class at ACHS for two years minimum.

Show helps students decide

High school students often face important and difficult choices in determining a path for their continuing education to follow.

"College Bound?", a four-part KET series, begins on July 10. The show, aired every Tuesday at 8:30 p.m., helps students and their parents assess the variety of programs offered today, select an institution, and cope with the costs of higher education.

The half-hour programs will discuss the different kinds of schools and programs, provide an in-depth look at traditional colleges, as well as specialty schools and trade schools, and discuss admission requirements and financial aid opportunities.

Regents Scholar

Nellie Marie Sturgill of Prestonsburg has been awarded a Regents Scholarship from Morehead State University for the fall semester. The daughter of Roy and Monnette Sturgill, she is a graduate of Prestonsburg High School where she was a member of the All-County Academic Team, a junior usher and one of the Top 10 Seniors. To be eligible for the scholarship, applicants must have a 3.5 grade point average and a composite ACT score of 25. The $1500 scholarship is renewable for three years if a 3.0 grade point average is maintained during the freshman year and 3.25 thereafter.

Floyd Countians honored by MSU

Morehead State University has awarded seven Transfer Student Awards to students from Floyd County.

Students receiving the scholarship, valued at $500 per year, must have completed at least 12 hours of college work under an MSU program and must have a cumulative 3.00 grade point average.

Recipients include Betsy Layne High School graduates Joey Stumbo, son of Joel and Shirley Stumbo, and Vicky L. Stumbo, wife of Johnny Stumbo.

Prestonsburg High School graduates who have received this scholarship are April Michelle Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Davis; Ronnie S. Baldrige, son of Ronnie and Delores Baldrige; Terra Lee Stone, daughter of Edward and Debbie Stone, and Shawna Lynn Windland, daughter of Michael and Shellia DeRossett.

HOROSCOPE

July 8 through July 14

By A. Murphy

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)

Not every day can be bright and sunny. It is those quiet, solemn days that lead to your appreciation of the sunny ones. Invite family and friends over to celebrate.

LEO (July 23 - August 22)

Do not try to get work done when you are tired and irritable. Take advantage of your partner's giving nature. Let someone know that you need a break and take it.

VIRGO (August 23 - September 22)

When you are proven wrong, admit it openly. You will be respected when you act responsibly in these situations. A moment of embarrassment is preferable to a grudge.

LIBRA (September 23 - October 22)

Keeping a secret can be dangerous if it troubles you. Tell someone who is wise and ask for advice about it. Do not allow yourself to become obsessed and fearful over anything.

SCORPIO (October 23 - November 21)

It is up to you and your vivid imagination to turn a day into one you will enjoy. Your emotions are what make you human, but keep them in check when dealing with family.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 - December 21)

In the morning, decide what impression you want to make, and in the evening, ask yourself if you succeeded. Write in your private journal about ways to improve yourself.

CAPRICORN (December 22 - January 19)

If you are unhappy in your workplace or elsewhere, straighten out your priorities. Talk to a job counselor and make changes if you are not satisfied. Life is too short.

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 18)

There is a time and place for practicality and hard work. After you have done that, always reward yourself with rest and relaxation. Review your tendency to overwork.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20)

An apology and admission of guilt is not easy, but afterward you will feel renewed and unburdened. Set a standard of honesty for those around you at work and home.

ARIES (March 21 - April 19)

You don't have to like everyone and everything around you, but you should accept what you cannot change, otherwise, you will waste a lot of energy for nothing.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)

Your way is one way, but it is not the only way. Be receptive to others' methods. Hitting someone over the head with your ideas is not as effective as being an example.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)

Spontaneity is a wonderful part of your life. Be careful, however, not to forget commitments to others and of stepping on toes. Don't run away from your problems.

TV PIPELINE

Jay R. Ferguson was among new cast of 'The Outsiders'

By Polly Vonetes
Q: Could you tell me the names of the outsiders in the new series based on the movie The Outsiders, and where I could write to them? I would also like to know what ever happened to the actor Brandon Cruz, the one who played Eddie on Eddie's Courtship? —Janet Prill, Amsterdam, N.Y.

Jay R. Ferguson

A: By "outsiders" you must mean "The Greasers." They include: Jay R. Ferguson as Ponyboy Curtis, Rodney Harvey as Sodapop Curtis, Boyd Kestner as Darrel Curtis, Robert Rusler as Tim Shepard, David Arquette as Two-Bit Matthews, Harold Pruett as Steve Randle, and Heather McComb as Belinda Jenkins. Write to them: c/o FOX Broadcasting Co., P.O. Box 900, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90213. Brandon Cruz of The Courtship Of Eddie's Father is now 28 years old. After the series ended, he appeared in a few films but eventually became interested in pursuing a career in music. For a while he fronted a punk band called "The Eddys" and even appeared on American Bandstand. Currently he is studying journalism, surfs and is trying to get back into acting.

Q: I recently saw an old movie of the late '40s starring Ann Blyth, Farley Granger and Joan Evans. Can you tell me whatever happened to these stars? —Linda Lochbaum, McKnightstown, Pa.

A: The film you speak of must be Our Very Own, released in 1950. Ann Blyth retired from the screen in 1957. She and her husband, Dr. James McNulty, married in 1952, are the parents of five grown children. She has said, "Hollywood has been very good to me. I was never hurt by the town or the profession. I have my husband, my children, my religion, my home, my work when I want it. I consider myself a blessed woman." Outside of filming a few commercials she never returned to the screen. Joan Evans also married in 1952. She and her husband, Kirby Weatherly, are the parents of two grown children. Joan has been working as the principal of an experimental elementary school in the San Fernando Valley. Farley Granger decided, after 12 years of superstardom in Hollywood, to give it all up to realize his dream of becoming a serious actor. Since 1955 he has been living in New York, working in theater and television.

Q: I watched the re-run of the film Jesus Of Nazareth starring Robert Powell. My sister said he died soon after completing this film. If it is true, what caused his death and when did it happen? —Betty Louie, Oakland, Md.

A: Robert Powell, born in England in 1946, is very much alive.
