

State officials suggest rash is 'suggested'

A report released officially this week by state health officials hints that the rash that has plagued students at McDowell schools for almost two months is psychological in origin, rather than physical. "We appreciate the report," said

A federal judge has denied a request by the Floyd County Board of Education and Supt. Ronald Hager that would have barred a former teacher from introducing certain evidence in her lawsuit against them. Joyce Reynolds Blackburn, whose contract was not renewed last summer, filed the suit in USDistrictCourt last August. Trial has been set for July Specifically, the defendants sought to prohibit Blackburn from introducing evidence that alleges the board and Hager allow politics to influence personnel decisions.

Three kinds of evidence were specified in the defendants' request to the court.

First, they asked that she not be permitted to introduce as evidence a curriculum audit prepared last year by staff members and consultants of the state Department of Education.

In the report, which involved interviews and visits to schools in the Floyd County system, the auditors stated: "Interview data reveals a long history of political patronage in the hiring process and in school staffing patterns."

In their motion, lawyers representing the defendants claimed the curriculum audit constituted "hearsay" evidence and that allegations of political patronage "were based entirely on interviews with prejudicially interested ... residents.

Federal Magistrate Joseph M. Hood, in his order denying the defendants' motion, contended the curriculum audit was not "hearsay" since Hager had originally requested the audit be done. He further advised that concerns about the report could be addressed in cross-examination at the trial.

that Blackburn not be allowed to introduce evidence of "claimed political retaliation and discrimination in personnel decisions and evidence of a pattern of political retaliation by defendants..

In the closely related third component of the motion, the attorneys asked the judge that Blackburn not introduce at the trial "evidence of individual instances of or a pattern of political harrassments practiced by defendants..."

aintiff in school board suit can call witnesses

Lawyers for the school officials asked specifically that a number of witnesses for Blackburn not be allowed to testify. These included Ernie ohnson, Dr. Fenwick English, Dr. Betty Steffy, Russell M. Frazier, Ned Bush, Ed Patton, Rudolph Lewis, Jimmy Hall, Jane Spurlock, Patricia Murphy, Judy Carter, Steve Halbert and Carol Stumbo. Most are either teachers or administrators in the local system or members of the curriculum audit team.

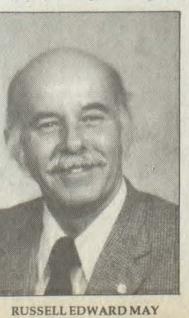

Judge Hood ruled that Blackburn's Second, the defendants requested calling of the specified witnesses is relevant to her case.

Blackburn, whose suit was filed on Aug. 17, 1989, one day after notification that she was not to be rehired, is one of 12 persons who have filed suit in federal court against the superintendent and board.

Famed Appalachian artist dies

by Tess A. Whitmer Assistant Editor Well-known local artist Russell Edward May of Prestonsburg died Friday, May 4, at Highlands Regional Medical Center, following an extended illness. He was 68 years old and the husband of Eva Bennington May whom he married in 1951.

He leaves four children, Michael May of Columbus, Ohio, Russell "Rusty" Edward May II of Nashville, Tenn., Kathy Lea May of Charlot-tesville, Va., and Janie May Riehm of Bowling Green. Also two grandchildren survive, Amelia and Jordan Riehm.

Born May 5, 1921, on Abbott Creek, he was a son of the late Lonnie T. and Dora Neeley May. He was a veteran having served with the 101st Airborne Division, the Screaming Eagles, parachuting into France to fight in the Battle of the Bulge. During World War II, he earned a Purple Heart and Bronze Star

While in the Army, May was given the assignment of making three di-mensional maps of the battlefields and he also published cartoons in an Army Magazine, "Stars and Stripes." Always loving art and painting, May began painting signs at the age of 17. He and his wife owned a sign painting and advertising business in Prestonsburg when May first began painting landscapes in oils in 1968. 'By 1969 he didn't want to make signs anymore," said his wife Eva. "People would come into the shop and see him painting and offer to buy his work but he refused. They were his pride and joy and he couldn't part with them.

By 1973, May had sold the sign shop and turned it into an art gallery. In 1972 he and 16 other Kentucky Heritage Artists were invited by then Senator and Mrs. John Sherman Cooper to come to Washington, DC, to show his work, which became his first official art show.

Although he studied art at the Chicago Art Institute and oil painting in Austria with Austrian artist Gerhard Neswadba, he was primarily self-taught. He was a founding member of the Kentucky Heritage Artists, and his work has been exhibited extensively in museums and galleries throughout Kentucky and the southeastern United States.

Get it out there

The upcoming two-week period, May 14-25, is large garbage pickup time in Floyd County.

This program, run by the Floyd County Solid Waste and the Floyd County Fiscal Court for several years, is designed to reduce the amount of non-traditional garbage, such as couches, refrigerators and other appliances from ending up over the creek bank or hillside.

A county truck will follow the garbage truck on its regular route the next two weeks collecting items residents set out by the curb. Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo said the county truck usually is unable to keep up with the garbage truck on its regular route and may lag up to three days behind, depending on the amount of large items to pick up.

Stumbo asks that residents go ahead and set out the items they wish to dispose of on their regular trash day, and if the county truck does not arrive right away, go ahead and leave it out to give the truck a chance to catch up.

He also said that if a person's residence was missed for some reason, they should call his office (after waiting a few days for the lagging county truck)

Also, the Garth Landfill will be open these two weeks for persons who wish to bring their large trash items in, free of charge. The landfill usually charges $5 per pickup truck load of trash. Any questions pertaining to this matter can be directed to the judge at 886-9193 or David Cooley at Floyd County Solid Waste, 886-8060, or at the landfill, 285-5133.

Tunnel fire halts coal traffic

VIRGIE — Railroad freight traffic in southwest Pike County came to a halt Sunday when fire broke out in a 250-foot long railroad tunnel near Virgie High School. Reports say that smoke came out of both ends of the 80year-old wood-lined tunnel. The fire shut down rail service to several mining and coal processing operations on the spur that runs from the CSX interchange in Shelbiana to Jenkins in Letcher County. A UMWA spokesperson estimated the fire might put 1000 miners out of work temporarily. Officials suspect the fire was set. (The Lexington Herald-Leader)

Rowan boy shoots self

MOREHEAD - A 12-year-old Rowan County boy apparently shot himself to death last week after he had an argument with a girlfriend, according to coroner Jim Barker. Michael Damon Rivers, a sixth grader at Rowan County Middle School, reportedly told other youngsters on the school bus that he was going to shoot himself. The coroner said he had not seen a suicide as young in his 13 years in office. (The Morehead News)

Sentencing for black lung fraud announced

LEXINGTON — Daryl E. Ratliff, 55, of Pikeville was sentenced in US District Court last week for charges of mail fraud and presenting $230,671 worth of false claims for black lung compensation to the US Department of Labor. Ratliff was sentenced by US District Judge Karl S. Forester to three years imprisonment on each count to be served concurrently and fined $10,000. He was also ordered to make restitution to the Department of Labor and $50,000 as the cost of the investigation. Ratliff, former Deputy Commissioner of the USDL, Office of Workers Compensation, Division of Coal Mine Workers' Compensation in Pikeville, had pled guilty to filing false claims for compensation on behalf of nonexistent individuals who had no entitlement to such benefits, according to US Attorney Louis DeFalaise.

Charged in husband's death

HYDEN — A Perry County woman was arrested by state police last week and charged with the shooting death of her husband last summer. Artie Denise Collins, 20, of Slemp was lodged in the Leslie County jail pending preliminary hearing. In what was originally thought to be a suicide, Dennis Collins, 21, was found dead in his home July 27 with a .22 caliber gunshot wound to the head. Lab tests and testimony implicating the woman showed the gun was fired from at least a foot away from the victim's head. (The Lexington Herald-Leader)

Sewage

In 1987, the city passed an ordi-nance to have Peridelli and Hunt, engineering firm, come and look for a proposed spot for the sewage treatment plant and to do other work. But Parsons said the engineer wanted $40,000 to continue the project. Money the city didn't have. So the project was lost.

In order for the city to apply for state grants, it needed to form a city utilities commission, which it did years ago. This commission will be responsible for the water and the sewage treatment once a plant is realized.

In April the council met with a second engineering firm, Elrod-Dunson Inc., who was at that time authorized to make appropriate applications for a Community Development Block Grant and any other state grants available and for a Ken-tucky state loan at 2.5 percent inter-evening, Sam Campbell of the Big Sandy ADD informed those present that his organization was available at no cost to them to assist in the efforts to obtain grants for the sewage treatment plant.

A second meeting was scheduled for Monday, May 21, between Big Sandy ADD representatives and the city council to further discuss this matter. By that time, Parsons hopes to have heard further from Elrod-Dunson

In reference to the school dump-ing sewage into the Big Sandy River, Parsons noted that by the time the treatment plant was in place, if ever, the school would have been relocated and would have its own treatment plant at the new site near Emma.

However, the existing building, which lies within the city limits, would qualify for hook-up to the proposed system and whoever buys the building will have to have proper disposal of raw sewage. Allen is only one city among many shared by students in the elementary and high school who were much less affected by the illness.

"Transmission by suggestion could account for a large number of the cases," the report says. "It is unclear what effect parental concern and media coverage have had on the outbreak; it is possible that by focusing students' attention on the rash illness, the parents and media may have propagated the outbreak as occurred in the report from Georgia."

Hager, however, said that school officials "can't treat it as if it's all in (students') mind.'

The superintendent said one more noting that the time for standardized testing of students is approaching.

Hager estimated that costs for cleaning the school buildings, payment of overtime to employees involved in cleaning and moving furniture, and testing of the buildings amount to around $20,000. "But that doesn't matter right now. We just want to find the answers."

Drs. Finger and Pelletier came in from Frankfort last Friday to meet with school officials and parents and to give the preliminary report. An estimated 125 parents attended the evening meeting at McDowell High School gym.

Tis done. The Times is running the controversial cartoon submitted week before last by Times contributing car-toonist Jack Martin. Why it became controversial before it was ever published remains a mystery

Generally, Martin calls to discuss ideas for a cartoon before he spends the hours and hours it takes to render the precise, pen-dotted drawing. If there's a hot issue afoot, some guidance is offered. As often as not, Martin, who keeps up-to-date on national, state and local issues, has already kicked around some ideas and is given free rein.

On the week in question, Martin came up with the concept on his own. Like most other residents of the Left Beaver area, he is concerned about the mysterious rash that has stumped school officials, parents, physicians and other scientists. So he chose to depict this concern by showing some students telling their ghostly, over-whelming "friend" — the rash — essentially that their parents did not want him around.

The scenario apes the old game of gossip. Word of the cartoon got around before it had a chance to be published. Folks started calling The Times to complain that the cartoon was insensitive to the problem and that it ridiculed the children who had fallen victim to the puzzling rash. Some even threatened legal action if the cartoon was run. Oddly, no one who called had actually seen the cartoon. They had just "heard" about it.

When The Times did not publish the cartoon, it was Martin's turn to be upset. He contends that the cartoon, contrary to callers' beliefs, is not insensitive to the problem. He was, he said, simply trying to point up how perplexing the situation is.

The incident, to some extent, shows just how subject artistic endeavors are to public interpretation. Some people see an object or read a piece of writing and say "Right on target." Others take offense. Still others are unaffected. It all depends, literally, on how you look at things.

We believe Martin meant no harm. We believe the rash is a serious matter and that every possible avenue must be explored to get to its root. We believe in the freedom of expression, the freedom to criticize and the responsibility to look before leaping.

This is also as good a time as any to point out that Martin's cartoons express his own views, and not necessarily those of The Times. The same is true of letters to the editor and of editorials and of feature articles written by persons who are not regular members of The Times staff.

No newspaper that purports to represent the public should — or can — ignore the fact that the public is a diverse, multi-faceted, multi-opinioned group of individuals. We hope the day never comes when The Times reflects only one way of looking at any issue, person or thing.

Insurance rates subject of protest Dear Editor,

To Floyd County and Eastern Kentucky: I'm mad and I don't think we should have to take it any more. I'm talking about auto insurance and I think it's time we stop paying outra-geous premiums simply because of where we live. I have friends in other parts of the state, as I'm sure you do, and they don't pay the rates we pay.

We are already paying too much for fire insurance on our homes, gasoline for our cars, groceries for our children, so I think it's time we get together as a people and make ourselves heard in Frankfort. The people of California made themselves heard over high property taxes with Proposition 48, and we can do the same thing if we write enough letters, make enough phone calls and get enough signatures. Then "our" elected representatives will have to listen.

It is our constitutional right to petition our government for a redress

Supports Bentley Dear Editor,

I wish to take a moment to share with your readers and all the people of Floyd, Knott and Letcher counties my support for the re-election of your State Rep. Russell Bentley.

It has been my honor and privi-lege to serve with Rep. Bentley since his election to the house in 1989. He has proven himself time and again to be one of the most dedicated and hardworking members of the General Assembly. Never was that fact more obvious than during the recent passage of the education reform legislation.

As a member of the House Education Committee, Rep. Bentley spent an untold number of hours studying, debating and shaping the most sweeping piece of education legislation this nation has even seen. At last, Kentucky is receiving positive national acclaim for its education improvement by people such as your State Representative, Russell Bentley. He is truly a voice in Frankfort for of grievances, so I propose a petition students, for teachers, for educators and for Kentuckians. Rep. Bentley has won the respect and friendship of his colleagues in the House and the Senate as well as that of the Democratic leadership in both chambers. We in Frankfort look forward to having the opportunity to continue working with Rep. Bentley and we encourage you to return him to the House for the good of the Commonwealth and the 92nd District of Floyd, Knott and Letcher counties.

Although Susan may not realize it, she often makes the 'first impression' to visitors of the area and her display of a triendly and helpful manner gives the impression that Prestonsburg is a really nice place to visit...and that in turn is a pleasant and complimentary reflection upon the community!

When we arrive in Prestonsburg and walk into the Holiday Inn, Susan always greets us with a warm and friendly greeting. It is so pleasant to be greeted the very first thing by someone who makes you feel so welcome to the community.

Comments on garbage

Dear Editor,

I would like to say something about the garbage situation in our county. I think each individual should have enough pride in our county to stop dumping garbage over the hill and in our water.

Do you realize that the water that runs off this mess is what you are drinking? When you think you are hurting someone else, you are destroying yourself.

If you are putting trash on the creek banks, you should be ashamed of yourself. Where is your pride?

If you have trash around your science tell you anything?

God gave us this great earth. Let's Inr take care of it. Be thankful that he has about it, maybe it will help. -Cathern Tackett

Gives update on commissioners

Dear Editor.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank you for the publicity given in your newspaper during the past few months regarding my effort to get the 1990 State Legislature to put an amendment on the ballot to give the voters an opportunity to abolish the office of Kentucky Railroad Commissioner.

Due to the stories appearing in newspapers throughout Kentucky regarding the abuse of taxpayers money by the Kentucky Railroad Commission, the state legislature for the first time in my lifetime took action regarding this waste.

The appropriations committee in the House of Representatives defeated by one vote a bill that would have increased the salary of Kentucky Railroad Commissioners from $3000 to $15,000 a year. This would have been a tragedy had this bill passed since we are now overpaid.

The 1990 State Legislature also abolished the salaries of Kentucky Railroad Commissioners, effective July 1 of this year, and cut off all appropriations to the Kentucky Railroad Commission as of Jan. 5, 1992.

Although I am disappointed the 1990 State Legislature did not put an amendment on the ballot this year to give the voters an opportunity to abolish the office Railroad Commissioner, I am proud the legislature abolished the salaries of commissioners and cut off appropriations.

Thank you.

URANIUM-ENRICHMENT PLANT GENERATES JOBS THROUGHOUT STATE

When people think of major Kentucky industries, coal and agriculture immediately spring to mind. The coal mines that provide fuel to feed America's energy needs and the thousands of family farms that produce tobacco and countless other products have become synonymous with our state

However, the gaseous diffusion plant located in Paducah has been quietly playing a major role in providing enriched uranium to the US military and nuclear power industry, and serving as a catalyst for economic development in the Jackson Purchase. Much of our nation's defense and energy needs hinge on enriched uranium. For example, 40 percent of the Navy's combat fleet is nuclear powered and nuclear energy plays a criti-cal role in reducing our dependence on Middle-East oil

The Paducah plant employs over 1,400 workers and supports thousands of other jobs in satellite busi-nesses throughout the state. This makes it an anchor to development efforts in the Pennyrile and Purchase areas. There is no doubt that for economic and security reasons we must keep this domestic industry healthy.

Unfortunately, increased competition from foreign producers of enriched uranium has meant a decline in our share of this global market. In order to reverse this trend, I am taking steps to: * Make Congress more aware of the impact clean-air legislation will have on the industry and ensure that we do not needlessly put the program at a further competitive disadvantage

* Force Congress to appropriate adequate funds to the Department of Energy (DOE) for the development of new technology;

*Be vigilant in monitoring enrichment activities in the Soviet Union and other countries so unfair trade practices can be quickly identified and violators singled out for prosecution; and

*Enactrestructuring legislation to give the industry the flexibility nec-essary to meet future challenges in changing markets.

Within the next several years, DOE will be selecting a plant to house new state-of-the-art uranium-enrichment technology known as AVLIS. This processing method will incorporate new technologies that will dramatically reduce the cost of enriching uranium to make the US industry more competitive in the world mar-

As part of the effort to make sure that Paducah is selected to receive AVLIS, I hosted a tour of the Paducah plant for Secretary of Energy James D. Watkins who was optimistic about Paducah's chances of being awarded the AVLIS technology. By preparing today, we can secure both the nation's and Kentucky's future in the uranium-enrichment industry. By enacting restructuring legislation and working to secure the AVLIStechnology, we can guarantee that our national security needs will be met and ensure that the Paducah plant remains a keystone of indus-trial growth in Kentucky.

VOC-ED BILL

SHOULD HELP KENTUCKY I am pleased to report that the US Senate has passed a strong vocational education bill that should fit in well with historic school reforms currently being made in Kentucky.

Our state is becoming a national leader in efforts to provide the kind of education needed by our young people in an increasingly competi-tive world. Our federal government should be a working partner in this effort, and I believe that we are moving in that direction with a series of educational measures in this Congress

In our latest action, the Senate has voted to reauthorize and improve the

Carl D. Perkins Vocational Education Act. Going well beyond the recommendations of the Bush Administration, this legislation would increase our prudent national investment in this vital program to $1.5 billion a year.

Our reauthorization bill contains many provisions designed to move funds more effectively into high schools, vocational schools and other local programs. These federal changes are coming at a time when Kentucky is restructuring its entire vocational education program. And this should give our state a highly valuable opportunity to build the necessary coordination into its new program from the beginning.

The Senate bill recognizes the growing importance of vocational education in a world in which technological skills can determine the future not only of individuals but of nations

This bill is crafted to help reduce our nation's intolerable school-dropout rate by targeting vocational assistance to economically disadvantaged students and others in need of help and encouragement to continue their educations.

It directs most of our federal assistance to the secondary school level, where students can be reached before making educational decisions that

By Sen. Wendell Ford

This is just one of our current efforts. The Senate also has passed the Educational Excellence and National Literacy acts. And the Congress is working on a much needed increase in Head Start funding. Each of these initiatives represents a vital investment in the future.

and accomplishments as well his record of service.

If you look closely at Representative Stumbo's record since we first sent him to Frankfort in 1980, you'll find evidence of consistent growth and maturity which has enabled him to get things done for the people of this district.

Effective leadership requires more than good intentions. It requires a genuine understanding of the problems that are unique to our district, as well as those concerns we share with other districts in the Commonwealth.

Effective leadership requires vision to know that our problems can be solved, our quality of life improved. It requires passion to find solutions to our problems and intelligence to identify and consider the options. It requires determination to work through obstacles and commitment to deal with each issue, one at a time.

Effective leadership requires patience and persistence to prevent our progress from being blocked by bureaucratic red tape. It requires good instincts and keen judgment to know when to compromise and when to fight.

The record clearly shows that Representative Greg Stumbo has an in-depth understanding of the problems and concerns of the people of this district. The record clearly shows that he has the vision to turn our problems into dreams and the skills to work within the system to turn those dreams into reality.

Greg Stumbo has earned our respect and support by working hard to ensure a better future for us and our children. He has earned the respect and co-operation of his fellow legislators, their confidence evident in his position as House Majority Leader.

Please vote to re-elect Representative Gregory D. Stumbo.

Wayland town council discusses sidewalks

The extent and cost of sidewalks occupied much of Wayland Town Council's regular monthly meeting Monday night.

Contractor Calvin Howell provided members an estimate of $8700 to replace or build more than 1100 feet of sidewalk.

However, Clerk Carol Stapleton reported that the town can expect only about $5700 in municipal road aid funds to pick up the cost of the sidewalk work.

Faced with the need to cut back on sidewalk footage, council members agreed to put sidewalk needs in priority order before proceeding with a contract

In Stapleton's financial report, council members noted that the electrical bill for April was only $30 less than what it had been before council voted to cut off more than a dozen street lights.

"If that's all we're saving, have them (power company) turn the lights back on," said Councilman Jerry Fultz.

Mayor Hobert Webb asked the clerk to check with the power company regarding the bill and how many lights the town is paying for.

The financial balance at the end of April was $3,879, Stapleton reported. Concern was raised once again over the need to dredge Steele Creek which runs through the town and into Right Beaver Creek.

Reclamation work on area slate dumps does not include cleaning the creek, council learned. Fultz suggested inviting government officials to a meeting to discuss the creek, which floods after heavy rains because of the fill up. Those mentioned as critical to such a meeting are US Cong. Chris Perk-ins, Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, Magistrate Jackie Edford Owens, State Sen. Benny Ray Bailey, State Rep. Russell Bentley and John Smiley of the state Office of Surface Mining. Council members agreed to contact the officials.

Webb also said he will contact Magistrate Owens regarding help in getting gravel for a town street.

At the request of a citizen, council members authorized rerouting of traffic during Homecoming Week-end, Aug. 31-Sept. 2, for arts and crafts exhibits and a street dance.

In other action, council agreed to pay Marvin Conley to cut brush for a ection of town.

Stapleton reported that 33 dog tags have been issued, and Police Chief Mack Stewart said the problem of loose dogs in the town has improved. All members were present except hatched and are building their webs throughout Floya County.

Tommy Robinson. Next regular meeting will be Monday, June 4, at 7 p.m. at the Town Hall.

Attacking mostly wild cherry, apple and crabapple trees, the nests or tents can contain as many as 300 hungry caterpillars that can devour all the leaves on a small tree (10-15 feet high) in a matter of days, said Gene Ball, Floyd County Extension Agent.

Ball said the so-called eastern caterpillar may range as far west as the Rocky Mountains. The full grown caterpillar can grow to be up to two inches long. During the time the in-

Eastern tent caterpillars have sect is in the caterpillar or "warm" stage is when the most damage is done.

The caterpillars go through metamorphosis and change into a reddish brown moth. These moths then lay eggs that will hatch next spring and go through the same process of growth.

Homeowners can exert some control by destroying egg masses which resemble galls on shrubs and fruit trees, Ball said. They are relatively easy to kill by using garden insecticides used to control eating insects.

He was even commissioned, along leaves a gold edge on a small cabin even told me once that he wanted a with several other artists, to do two mural-size paintings for the Boonesborough State Park, one of the fort and another of the Cumberland area. Becoming well-known for his outstanding skill in landscapes and structure painting, May was often secured to do paintings of private homes, local churches and schools.

May

Some of his more famous works are of the Loretta Lynn homestead, as well as homes of Dolly Parton, the old Hatfield and McCoy places and the Roy Rogers farm. (The original hangs in the Roy Rogers Museum in Victorvillle, Calif.)

His love of the outdoors and the Appalachian mountains clearly showed in his work. "Some artists look for rust and rotting timbers in an old house, but I see the way a sunset roof or leaves a mellow glow over a mountain countryside," May once said of his work.

"I don't know what I'm doing when I paint, I have no formula for it...I feel that it is a gift of God. It has enriched my family's life. It has opened their eyes to the beauty around them. It has made a better person out of me. It has brought my family into a 'one' attitude."

As his daughter Kathy points out, one of the things which enabled her father to have such a loving view of Appalachia was his love of flying. In the 1960s May obtained his private pilot license and spent many years doing recreational flying and there-fore getting a view of "God's Country" from above.

Active in the Kiwanis Club, he served in the following capacities, president of the Prestonsburg club in 1952, Lt. Governor for Division 7 in 1954, treasurer of the Kentucky-Tennessee District in 1959 and Governor of the Kentucky-Tennessee District in 1964.

He also served on the Kentucky State Parks Board under the Gov. Bert T. Combs from 1960 to 1963 and was a Scottish Rite Mason and Shriner.

As a last memorial to his contribution to church and school, Music requested that, in lieu of flowers, donations be made to the First Presbyterian Church building fund or the the scholarship fund set up under his and his wife's name at PCC. wooden casket because he had spent so much time painting wood he felt that was right," his wife said. "One person said to me that Russ was up in heaven painting rainbows now, and I believe he'd be happy doing that."

One of May's greatest pleasures was painting before a crowd, something many artists don't relish. He would often give demonstrations to community groups and during festivals and workshops. He could complete a landscape for a customer in 30 minutes from start to finish. "I love to work fast and hard with a good audience," he once said.

For many years he judged competitions and gave demonstrations at the Winter Art Weekend at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, an annual event that attracted hundreds of Kentucky artists.

May's newest print was released this past week. It is entitled "Winter Evening" and he requested that his son Rusty sign the prints "Russell Edward May II."

May's prints can be seen hanging in homes worldwide and his origi nals adorn such walls as those of the Governor's Mansion and Senator WendellFord'shome. Although nothing will compare to the original May works, his style and technique lives on in the talents of many students whom he began privately instructing in the mid '80s.

The workshop is being sponsored by the Prestonsburg and Harlan outreach offices of the Catholic Social Service Bureau.

"As ministers to others, we are called to nurture the inner self of those whom we serve," said Harlan Outreach worker Sister Nancy Casey. "We must be able to love and trust our own powers of caring, imagination and compassion.

"The focus of the workshop will be to further develop self-esteem in ourselves and others," she said. "We will discuss ways to encourage respect for diversity and the use of personal gifts. Hopefully we'll discover and develop the treasures hidden in the depths of our inner rainbows.

A time to remember

As Memorial Day approaches, thoughts often turn to friends or loved ones and happy times that were shared. Many people want to remem-ber their loved ones in a special way.

The American Heart Association Memorial Program helps to keep more than memories alive. A memorial gift is a lasting tribute that helps to save lives by supporting AHA's research and educational programs.

"At Memorial day a gift to the American Heart Association can turn your memories into a very positive influence on the future," said Virginia Ann Watson, who serves as AHA memorial chairperson for Floyd County

For every memorial contribution to the AHA, Watson will send a card acknowledging the gift to the loved one's family. The amount of the gift is not disclosed to the recipient of the card, and the contribution may be from an individual or from many, such as a family or group of employ-and Berry Rice. The honorary pall-bearers are Bert T. Combs, Charley Miller, Burl Wells Spurlock, B.W. McDonald, Raymond Bradbury, Paul Phillip Hughes, Paul Whitt and Ted R. Osborne.

Pharmacy Footnotes By HAROLD COOLEY CONSUMER SENSE According to a number of community pharmacy surveys conducted by volunteers for the American Association of Retired Persons, it pays to shop around when buying prescription medications. The survey noted as much as a 25 percent variation in price for brand-name prescription drugs within a single community. The survey further noted that consumers could gain even more by asking for generic versions of many commonly-prescribed medications. Recently, some generic-drug manufacturers have stood accused of skirting government regulations. However, a government study of the top 30 generic drugs revealed that all measured up to government standards. In truth, independent physicians question the effectiveness of only limited groups of generic drugs. Both doctors and pharmacists can advise patients accordingly.

At COOLEY APOTHECARY, we want you to know we care about your total health and we are doing all we can to provide you with the highest level of pharmacy services and savings. Whenever you need a generic or brand name prescription filled, just ask our pharmacist for help. Your prescription will automatically be screened against your medication history for potential drug interactions and allergic reactions. We carry what you would expect to find in a well inventoried drug store including a full line of over the counter remedies. You'll find us located at #2 Town Center Bldg., 886-8106 and open Mon.-Fri. 9-5:30.

HINT: Elderly patients should ask about the availability of discounts for prescription medications.

58th District Tournament promises a lot of action

KEVIN SPURLOCK Allen Central

BRETT MEADOWS Allen Central

TIM WATKINS Prestonsburg

When the 1990 58th District Baseball Tournament gets underway this coming Monday afternoon at Allen Park, action should not be a shortage all five teams have a legitimate shot at taking the coveted title this year.

The tournament gets started as two good teams lock up in a battle on Monday at 5:30 p.m. Betsy Layne will take on defending district champion Prestonsburg in game one.

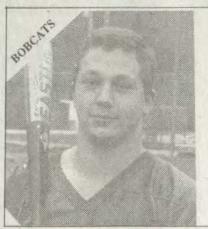

The two teams have met twice this year with the Bobcats winning both contests. Prestonsburg lost to Betsy Layne in the semifinals of the Pikeville Invitational earlier, 10-9, when the winning run crossed home plate on a wild pitch.

At Allen Park, Betsy Layne scored 10 runs in the bottom of the fifth inning to win 13-7 over Prestonsburg.

Betsy Layne has the horses to win the district tournament this year. Returning from last year's team are Adam Gearheart, Keith Hall, Chad Hamilton, Chris Bias and Todd Akers. Darren Gearheart has been behind the plate for Betsy Layne this year and has added to the power strong Bobcat team.

On the mound for the Bobcats this year have been Hall, Hamilton, Akers and Gearheart. The Bobcats are a balanced team when it comes to hitting. But one thing that has plagued the Bobcats this year is their defense.

They have committed more turnovers than is characteristic of a Junior Newsome-coached team. The outfield is solid but the infield has had its share of problems with the ground balls and throws to first base.

Prestonsburg, on the other hand, is a good defensive ball club that makes few mistakes on the field. However, shortage of pitching has been the Blackcats' biggest problem. scheme of things this year. Freshman Returning only John Clark as experienced moundsman could prove to be to the Blackcats. Chris Cavins has had two good outings on the mound for Prestonsburg, but the whole weight of a district tournament win will be placed squarely on the shoulders of sophomore John Clark.

Clark is a fire balling righthander who mixes up his pitches with a little off speed stuff to keep the hitters honest at the plate and not sitting back and waiting for the hard stuff. After Clark, the Blackcats will have to go with another hard thrower, Tim Watkins. Watkins, though, lacks a second pitch to go with his "heater". He goes strong for two or three innings and then the opposing team finds his pitches.

Ray Collins will lead the Blackcat offense. The senior shortstop has been a consistent hitter all season. Clark and Chris Slone also bring potent bats to the plate and are capable of playing long ball with the opposing feam.

A welcome comeback, as far as swinging the bat goes, is the return of Stuart Robinson to the batting line up for Prestonsburg. Robinson has been unable to swing the bat because of earlier shoulder problems. However, the big lefthanded swinger has responded to treatment and responded with the bat also, clubbing three-run and two-run homers since being installed in the batting lineup.

Watkins is not easy out at the plate when he comes to bat. Watkins swings with authority from the right side and has reached the fences with his See 58TH DISTRICT Page 3

The rains played havoc on the Eastern Kentucky Mountain Conference baseball tournament this past week as the games had to be moved up each day.

However, Monday night the semifinals and finals of the tournament were played under beautiful weather

Jenkins (8-5) and Fleming-Neon (11-0) to capture the tournament title.

The Rebels first had to play Jenkins and, by winning, took on Neon in the championship game.

In the Jenkins game, Allen Central had to come from behind to overcome. Trailing 4-3 going into the as the Allen Central Rebels defeated bottom of the sixth inning, the Rebels struck for five runs in winning 8-5.

Chuck Lafferty led off the inning with a base hit. Mickey Parsons beat out a slow roller for a hit via the infield, putting runners on first and second. Steve Robinson then bounced back to the pitcher, Mike Casseel, who elected to go for the force at third base, only to throw the ball away and load the bases.

John Hall then lined a base hit, scoring Lafferty and Parsons, to give the Rebels a 5-4 lead. Terry Spurlock lined a double down the left field line for two RBIs with Robinson and Hall scoring. Spurlock scored with two out on a base hit by Brett Meadows, to make it 8-5.

Jenkins went out quietly in the top of the seventh as the Rebels went on to the championship game. Allen Central picked up one run in the bottom of the fourth on a solo home run by Kevin Spurlock. The Rebels made it 4-3 with two more in the bottom half of the fifth.

With one out, Hall walked and moved to second on a balk call and journeyed to third on a wild pitch. Kevin Spurlock walked and stole second. Parson's bouncer scored Hall and Spurlock came home on a wild pitch.

Meadows was the winning pitcher in relief of Parsons who started on the mound for the Rebels. Meadows had five strikeouts in the game and Parsons recorded six. Casseel suffered the loss for Jenkins.

In the second game against Neon, the Rebels scored six times in the bottom of the fourth inning to break up a pitchers' duel between Meadows and Mark Wright of Fleming-Neon, enroute to a 11-0 "mercy rule"

Both pitchers had things their own way in a scoreless three and a half innings

Meadows led off the Rebel fourth with a single and was safe at second on an errant throw by the third baseman. Lafferty walked and Parsons' base hit scored Meadows. Steve Robinson walked to load the bases. Hall's bouncer to the pitcher forced Lafferty out at the plate.

After Spurlock struck out with the bases loaded, the Rebels scored two more on an error at third base on an errant throw to first. B.J. Aldrich walked to load the bases again, and Kevin Spurlock lined a double to right field that cleaned the bases for the Rebels and staked them to a 9-0 lead.

The Rebels had scored three times in the third inning on a base hit by Mickey Parsons, scoring Hall who had led the inning off with a walk. Aldrich then singled home Terry Spurlock who reached on an error. Kevin Spurlock got an RBI on an out that Parsons scored on.

In the bottom of the fifth the Rebels "mercied" the Neon team with two more runs for an 11-0 score. Hall's base hit scored Lafferty and Parsons with the two runs.

Meadows was the winning pitcher for the Rebels, picking up his second win of the doubleheader. Parsons came on in relief of Meadows, but the Rebels took the lead while Meadows was the pitcher of record. Meadows hurled six scoreless innings in the doubleheader.

The losing pitcher was Marc Wright.

The double win improves the Rebels record to 12-4 on the season. Allen Central will host Betsy Layne in a doubleheader at Allen Park this coming Friday beginning at 4:30 p.m.

Lady Daredevils close out regular season with 3 wins

The McDowell Lady Daredevils softball team closed out a successful regular season with three wins last week. The Lady Devils defeated the Millard Lady Mustangs, 9-4, on Wednesday night and swept Dilce Combs in a doubleheader, 17-5, and 7-3, on Thursday evening.

McDowell rode the hot bat of Lori Bryant to a 9-4 win against Millard, as the junior collected four hits, including two doubles, in the game. Tiffany Slone had a second inning home run, and Lisa Hobson was the winning pitcher.

Slone hit her home run, a two shot, in the second inning to give the Lady Devils a 2-0 lead. Millard took the lead 3-2 with three runs in the bottom had four RBIs in the contest. of the second. McDowell reclaimed the lead in the third inning when Debbie Fannin led off with a base on balls. Bryant doubled her home and scored herself on a base hit by Lisa Henry. Henry later scored on a hit to centerfield.

McDowell scored twice in the six and seventh innings to put the game away. Nicky Mullins, Becky Miller and Tiffany Slone each had hits in the sixth inning as the Lady Devils scored two runs.

In the seventh, Christy Mullins walked, Fannin singled and Bryant brought both runners home with her second double of the game. Bryant

In the first game against Dilce

Combs, Fannin hit for the "cycle" with a home run, triple, double and a single in going four for four, and teammate Priscilla Crawford banged out three home runs to help the Lady Devils to a 17-5 first game win over Dilce Combs.

Christy Mullins had five hits in the win for McDowell, including two doubles. Henry also had two twobaggers, as she collected four hits. Hobson was the winning pitcher and Kim Gwynn was the loser. Lori Bryant had a triple in her two hits. Jenny Slone, who had to leave the game,

Hornets Blackcats sweep

One game was a blow out, the other a nail biter."

So goes the high school baseball season as the Phelps Hornets called on the Prestonsburg Blackcats for a doubleheader of good old hardball.

The Blackcats took game one rather easily at 10-2. Coach Russell Shepherd's crew had to come back in game two for a 7-6 squeaker.

Prestonsburg scored eight times in the bottom of the second inning to easily handle the visitors in game one. Ray Collins and Tim Watkins' grand slam home runs ignited the eightrun second. Watkins lined a single to left to lead off the second inning. Jason Storey laid down a sacrifice bunt. Aaron Tucker and Tim Lester walked to load the bases. Neil Slone popped out to third and Collins then hit his home run.

After the Collins home run, Slone, Clark and Robinson all walked to load the bases again, and Watkins then clubbed the second grand slam of the inning. Watkins had six RBIs in the game.

Prestonsburg's Chris Slone had a solo home run in the first inning.

The Blackcats added another single run in the fourth inning when, with two out, Stephens walked and Watkins and Storey singled, scoring Stephens.

Phelps scored single runs in the firstand second innings. Charles hita first inning home run for the Hornets, and Keen homered in the second.

John Clark picked up the win for the Blackcats while Compton suffered the setback for Phelps. Clark fanned six batters, while Compton struck out two. Both teams played errorless baseball.

GAMETWO

In the second game things were not so easy for the home standing Blackcats who trailed 6-3 going into the bottom of the fifth inning.

Collins led off the inning with a single to center. Chris Slone followed suit with a base hit and Clark walked to load the bases. Robinson looked at a called third strike for the first out. Watkins was safe at first on a pitcher's error, allowing Collins and Slone to score, making the score 6-5 with runners on second and third.

Storey popped out to shortstop for out number two, and Kevin Hall then doubled to right center, scoring Clark and Watkins with the tying and winning runs.

Phelps scored three times in the top of the first inning, as the Blackcats were guilty of committing three errors in the inning. Robert Smith drew a lead off walk off Watkins who started the second game for Prestonsburg.

Darrin Kidd singled and was thrown out trying to steal second. Mike Charles reached on an error at third base, and after David Stevens struck out, Keen's fly ball to left was dropped for an error, allowing both Smith and Charles to score. Keen scored on an error at third base off the bat of Estep.

Five-run third sends JCHS past P'burg, 8-4

As the regular baseball season enters its last week of play and the 58th District tournament is on the horizon, the Prestonsburg Blackcats are still looking for some consistency from their pitching staff. The Blackcats traveled to Johnson

Central High School on Thursday afternoon for an scheduled encoun-ter in non-district action against the Golden Eagles. On the mound was the pitcher with the most experience, John Clark. The Blackcats have been experimenting with younger players looking for that number two and three starter.

Except for the third inning, Clark pitched well enough to win as he has done all season. The Golden Eagles scored five times in the third inning to defeat the visiting Blackcats, 8-4. Prestonsburg had built a 3-0 lead on the strength of Stuart Robinson's Collins had reached on an error on third baseman Williams, and Clark followed with a base hit. Chris Slone struck out, something he rarely does, and Robinson then hit the ball over the right center field fence.

The Blackcats added a single run in the top of the third as Collins walked. Clark doubled him home to make it 4-0.

Johnson Central erased all of that with five runs in the bottom of the Preston's long home run plated a single run in the bottom of the fourth for a 6-4 Eagle lead. In the bottom of the sixth, the Eagles made it 8-4 with two more runs.

April 11, 1990

The Kentucky Senate has wisely killed an absurd piece of legislation which arose, undoubtedly, from a recent election for judge on the state Court of Appeals in our area.

We call it the Stumbo versus Stumbo Bill.

The legislation, proposed by House Majority Leader Greg Stumbo, of Prestonsburg, would have required candidates for nonpartisan office to file for office using their full, legal name, including married name or be ineligible to accept campaign contributions of more than $50.

The proposed legislation is an obvious aftereffect of the regional race for appellate court judge, where Janet Stumbo, whose married name is Janet Pillersdorf, beat Barkley Sturgill for the seat.

The bill, which gained House approval but was killed by the Senate, is not only sexist in its attempt to deny married women the right to use their birth-given names, it's an obviously heavy-handed attempt to avenge an outsider's trespass into the territory of Floyd County's political machine.

Finally, the bill sure doesn't give much credit to voters in our area for having enough sense to choose elected officials by any criteria other than what their last name might be.

Unfortunately, that last point has some merit. We wonder how far Greg Stumbo might have gone had his last name been Smith or Jones.

58TH District

bat several times this season.

Jason Storey, Tim Lester, Kevin Hall and Jason Crisp are all good hitters and will be a big help to the Blackcats' offense. This should be a good one!

In Tuesday night's game, the Al-len Central Rebels, who have the only winning record of all district teams, will face a surprising McDowell Daredevil team.

Coach Greg Johnson has done a tremendous job with the Daredevil team and has had to do it with youth. Jamie Martin and Keith Shelton are the only two seniors on McDowell's team the rest are underclassmen.

Vance, Shannon Price, Barry Halland Shannon Newsome lead a very strong hitting team. Kidd, Lawson, Price and Newsome supply the long ball power while Vance, Hall, Shelton and Martin show consistency in getting on base.

The Daredevils seem to play with a lot of confidence, and that confidence has increased since the beginning of the season. McDowell lost some earlier games, and since then seems to have righted itself and turned things around. Consistency at the plate and heads up base running make Coach Johnson's team a title contender also.

The weakness of this McDowell Bud Kidd, Jamie Lawson, Toby team has been pitching. Kidd, Vance and Lawson, all youngsters, have been the hill workers for the Daredevils this season. At times they look great; at other times they seem to have problems pitching with consistency

Allen Central is a sure contender to capture the district title. Experience will be the biggest asset of this year's Rebel team of coach Anthony Moore. Experience on the mound, in the field and at the plate makes the Rebels a well rounded team.

Kevin Spurlock, behind the plate, is another coach on the field for Moore's team. Spurlock has played so much baseball as a youngster, that it seems to be second nature to him. Good field sense and the ability to handle his pitchers make him a valuable commodity for the Rebel team. Spurlock can also reach the fences with his bat.

Junior Brett Meadows sports a good 3-0 record along with three saves for Allen Central this year. He is a hard throwing righthander and, like so many other hard throwing pitchers, doesn't really have that second pitch most pitchers need to go with the hard stuff. However, Meadows must be doing something right to be 3-0 at this point.

the offense department. He hits with power, finds the alleys, and has speed to run the bases. On the mound, he displays a fastball and mixes it up with an off speed pitch to keep the hitters honest.

Newcomer Chuck Lafferty has been a pleasant surprise to the Rebel nine this year. Versatility, good baseball knowledge and a quick bat, plus being a good glove, make Lafferty a solid performer for the Rebels. Lafferty also has shown his ability on the mound for Allen Central with a 2-1 record.

Stevie Robinson has started hit-ting the ball well and just adds another bat to an already explosive Rebel offense. Terry Spurlock, John Martin and B.J. Aldrich will help the Rebels.

Waiting in the wings of the 58th District tournament will be the Wheelwright Trojans, who received a first round byeand will face the winner of the Betsy Layne-Prestonsburggame.

Wheelwright's record is deceiving. The Trojans got a late start on the rest of the field as they awaited the naming of a new coach. However, the Trojans have the talent to compete with any district team.

Chad Hall, Bobby Hood, Brad Compton, Loran Slone and everyone's favorite, Jimmy Helton show that baseball is well at Wheelwright. The Trojans have fallen on some hard luck in recent games and have shown they are capable of winning some games.

One thing the Trojans will need is the bat of Bobby Hood, who can sting the ball, to come alive. Hood hasn't had the time to hone his batting skills as others have because of all-star participation, but the senior plays a good third base.

Brad Compton on the mound has been the mainstay for the Trojan pitching corps. Helton has shown some promise there, as well as Slone.

First year coach Meredith Slone says that the Trojans are a good team and will improve.

Whoever comes out of the Prestonsburg-Betsy Layne game had better be careful and not take the Trojans lightly.

This year's tournament has promise of a lot of action. All the teams have the power hitters, the finesse hitters and like to run the bases. It is exciting high school baseball coming to Allen Park, starting Monday at 5:30 p.m. It is there for you to enjoy!

James sees Alum Games as stepping stone

According to Alumni Games director Freddy James, City Administrator of Prestonsburg, the idea for the Alumni Games, during the Festival of FACES events on May 19, could be a stepping stone to better things for Floyd County.

"Tourism is the number one industry for our area," the president of the Prestonsburg Boosters Club said. "The difference in a person who lives Prestonsburg and a tourist is none. There is no difference."

James sees many advantages to the Festival of FACES celebration which represents all of Floyd County. According to James, we should be proud Memorial Square Bowl. It got bigger that we had a chance to play basketball for Maytown or football for Prestonsburg. "People enjoy athletics, no matter if it is in Cincinnati, Detroit or New York," he said.

James said the idea for the Alumi Games came from the old Turkey Bowl games played locally in the late '60s and early '70s.

"We got together, Phillip Haywood 13, 1300 or 3000 miles from (formerPrestonsburgfootballcoach), the Leslie brothers, Darryl and Bennett, and I, and we decided to have a Turkey Bowl game between former Blackcat football players. We played on an empty lot we called the Lancer and bigger and we moved it to the high school and sold tickets. We would all take on professional football players' names," said the original organizer of the Turkey Bowl.

"The Turkey Bowl folded after a few years, and there has been some interest in reviving it. So at a Festival of FACES meeting, we learned that Dwight Yoakum who was scheduled to come for a concert had canceled

"So that left the city with no program for Saturday, May 19. 1 said, 'Hey, there is something that I have been wanting to do.' I told them my Prestonsburg with Auxier and Bonanza Coaches Ron Robinson and Gordon Parido idea and they started mentioning names like Hoss Halbert and some of the players who could play in the Alumni Games." James' idea was to get all the county's local booster clubs involved in the Alumni Games so they can raise money for their organization. As president of the Prestonsburg

Boosters Club, James wants to have an impact on the athletic program locally. One such way is the initiation of WCAT, a video recording program of Blackcat basketball and football games.

"Next year we would like for some of the high school students to take over this program and it can become a learning experience for them. Someone on the mike, camera and the journalism part," explained James.

James is hoping that the Alumni Games can become an annual thing in the county in bringing back some of the former players who took part in sports in Floyd County. But James has another vision to making Floyd County an attractive place for people to vacation, establish industry or just to settle down.

"We need to get our athletics back into PCC (Prestonsburg Community College) and build a program there. Today we are sending our kids to UK, Marshall, Morehead and they get an education and that education never comes back to Floyd County.'

James feels if the program at PCC is established and a new 10,000 seat fieldhouse builthere in Prestonsburg, which is more than a dream, a semipro basketball league formed, it would go a long ways in attracting tourism, industry and just good folks who would like to settle here and become part of the area.

"We could do it," he said. "We have the power companies, banks and other big industries that could sponsor a team. Our area players could make up the rosters and we could pay them a little something for playing.'

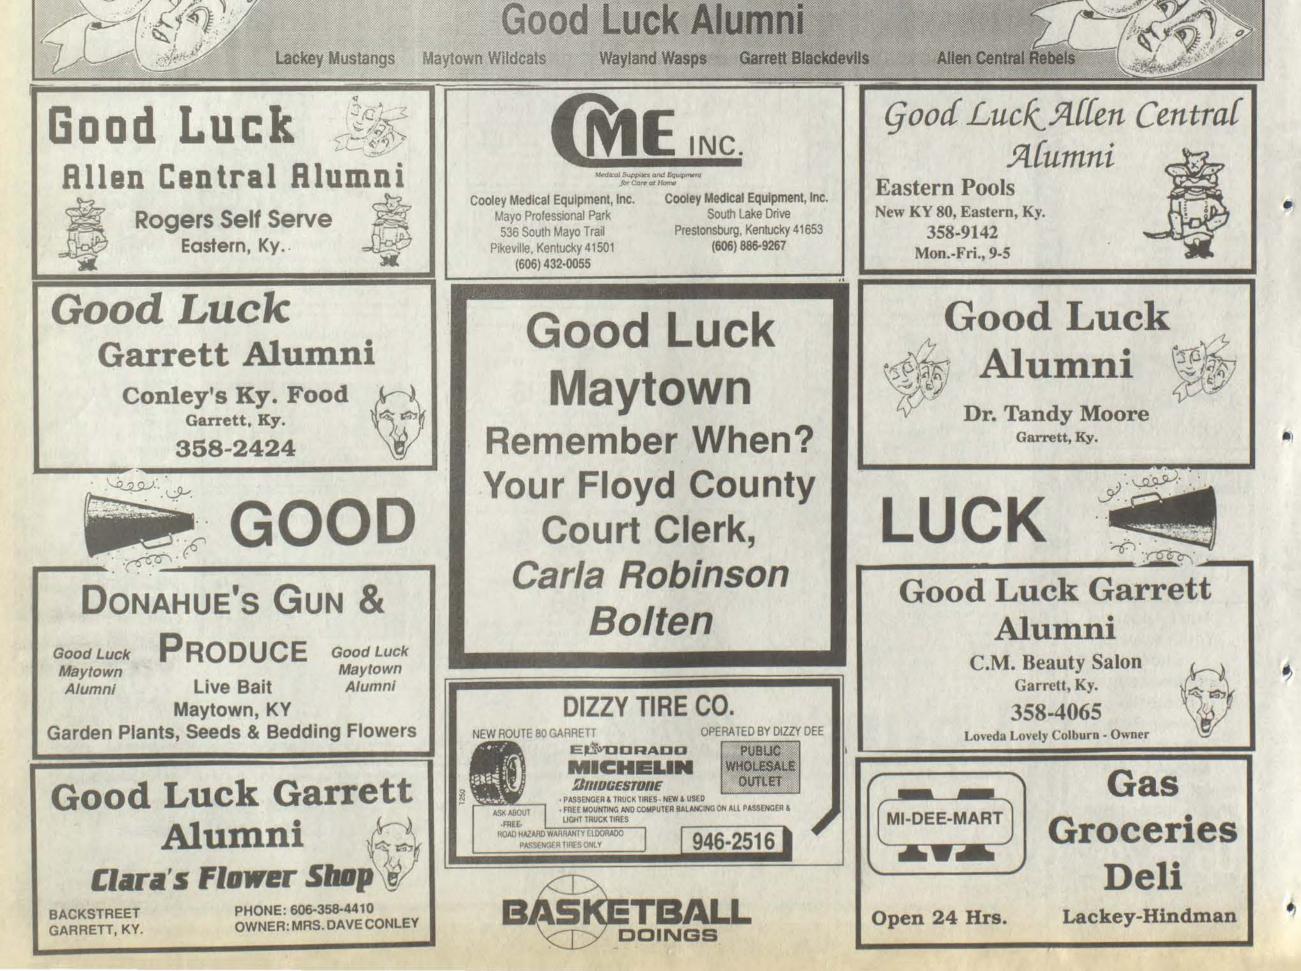

James feels that no one is against thereviving of sports at PCC; the lack of facilities is the drawback — where would they play. Enter the 10,000 seat fieldhouse.

The Festival of FACES Alumni it's a reality come May 19. In the future, who knows, maybe a new fieldhouse and semipro league will also one day become a reality because someone believed in the future of Floyd County.

Kids enjoy Special Olympics bowling

let me be brave in the attempt." A pledge recited by handicapped persons who take part in Special Olym-

Special Olympics, Area 16, from Pike and Floyd counties, held its first bowling tournament last week at Rebel Lanes in Prestonsburg, with more than 100 handicapped kids get-

"Let me win, but if I cannot win, ting together for a time of bowling. It was good to see the excitement in their eyes as they knocked over just one pin or when they would roll the ball down the alley, to watch them use body English to try to guide the ball - something, they no doubt witnessed in some adults when they bowl

Rebel Lanes, says "that you get to love them the more you see them bowl. They get all excited about the game and if they get one pin, it is like a strike to them. "We here at Rebel Lanes have always tried to help them out in bowling. We have three handicapped teams that bowl here each week. I hope these Olympic games will become an annual thing," he said. Mayo was cited by Pike County director Jenny Coleman for his donating of the alley free of charge.

Taking part in the Special Olympics Bowling Tournament were: Prestonsburg High School and Ele-mentary; Millard High School and Elementary; Bevins Grade School; Runyon Grade School, Kimper Grade School, Elkhorn City High School and Elementary; Feds Creek High School and Junior High.

The Special Olympic bowling tournament was sponsored by the Prestonsburg Rotary Club. Area co-ordinator for the Special Olympics is Darlene McCoy, and coordinator for Floyd County is Kim Tackett. The military even got into the act with Air Force Staff Sargent Mark Huff, Area Games Director, offering a helping hand

"We need more volunteers to help out in raising money for these games, Huffremarked. "We need the money to get the kids to the state games in Lexington on June 1-3. Anyone who wishes to volunteer may contact Kim Tackett at 452-2818.'

It is just as Mayo said, you "just love these kids."

HOW TO GAIN CONFIDENCE IN A JIG The bass are hitting jigs, but you don't like using the stringy-legged, weighted-head lures. So you get in a full day of casting practice using crankbaits - and go home without a fish

How do you gain confidence in a lure you don't like?

'You make yourself use it," says well-known tournament pro Denny Brauer. "You go to your favorite lake and take nothing but that particular lure, and you use it all day.

"Catching fish on a lure is the best way to gain confidence in a lure, but if you never tie it on, you'll never gain that confidence.'

Brauer, a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff, did just that when he was learning to use jigs. He now likes the lures so well he calls them his own personal "confidence baits." He even designs jigs for the market. "Jigs are pretty versatile," he explains. "You can fish them fast or slow, on the bottom or on the top, in open water or in the thickest brush. "This is a really good time of year to learn to use jigs, too," adds the Evinrude Pro, "because bass are fairly aggressive and will probably chase a jig more than at any other season. You can work the edges of channels, stump flats and even weedines with a jig and catch bass.

Just take several different weights and colors, and fish them different ways. By the end of the day I guarantee you'll feel a lot better about using

Brauer's own best experience with jigs occurred on Kentucky Lake three years ago when he caught over 60 pounds of bass during a three-day tournament. The catch earned him the coveted B.A.S.S. Angler of the Year title

That really was an amazing tournament," Brauer remembers, "because the bass were so aggressive. I was pitching the jig to isolated cover in one part of the lake and the bass would hit it before the lure ever reached the bottom. If the jig did touch bottom, you knew the fish weren't there.

In tournaments today, Brauer often takes as many as 100 jigs in the boat with him, and he may have as contains native wildflowers, prairie many as 60 pounds of jigs back in his motel room.

When you can't catch bass on any other lure, a jig may be the answer," he explains. "I start flipping a jig to the tightest cover I can find, and generally catch a fish or two."

GAME FARM'S MINI WILDLIFE MANAGEMENT AREA: PART 3 The Game Farm's miniature wildlife management area, nestled in a low lying area near the entrance gate, is the newest attraction at the home of the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, Frankfort. The small wildlife management area's two main features, songbird connected but almost interdepend-

For example, wetland-produced seeds, plants and native grasses, along with insects in and around the moist soil, attract and provide food for birds. Species as common as Eastern and greater-crested king birds, mourning doves and bluejays often visit the area, as well as uncommon birds such as little green herons, orchard orioles and hooded warblers. WETLANDAREA

Wetlands are more valuable than many people realize. Wet areas not only accept ground water run-off and provide a wide variety of plant and wildlife species a place to live, but fluctuating water levels encourage new plant growth, thus wetlands are a natural filtering system for both air and water.

After late fall's heavy rains saturate surrounding soil, the wetland area on the Game Farm is allowed to fill. Each pond is managed separately, and changing the water levels allows various plants to grow at different times from spring through fall. At times only a few plant species appear but in large quantities, and at other times many species start growing, but they are fewer in number.

By early October, old plants stand side-by-side with young plants. Plants that grow late in the season provide winter food for wildlife. (According to department biologist, the Game Farm's resident geese are healthier now because they're eating aquatic plants and less corn,)

Water levels are manipulated in connection with migration of shorebirds and other waterfowl species. Canada geese, pintails, mallards, lesser scaups, canvasbacks, buffle-heads, black ducks, widgeons, gadwalls and wood ducks visit the area.

SONGBIRDAREA

Adjacent to the wetlands is a carefully planned songbird area which grass, autumn olive and other wildife food plantings. Additional food is provided in six feeding stations. Half are seed feeders; the remainder provide suet, preferred food of flickers, downey woodpeckers and yellow-bellied sapsuckers.

There are three wood duck nesting boxes, in addition to wren and bat houses as well as several nesting platforms for waterfowl.

KY Afield

Snowbirds and other cold-weather esidents arrive throughout winter. House wrens, Carolina wrens, goldfinches and many other Kentucky songbirds frequent the area in spring and summer. Eastern bluebirds set area and wetlands, are not only inter- up housekeeping in nesting boxes constructed just for them. Killdeer build nests on rock outcropping and butterflies flit among colorful wildflowers in summertime.

An observation building large enough to accommodate 15 people and a water fowl blind are near the small management area.

Kinzer leads Braves past Reds, 6-2

Brandon Kinzer had a two-hit night and drove in two runs in his team's four run fourth, as the Martin Braves defeated Lonnie Robinson's Martin Reds, 6-2, in the Beaver Creek Little League Friday evening at Allen Park.

J.P. Skeans reached first base on an error, and Thomas Jenkins followed with a single. Kinzer then lined a base hit that drove in both runners, who had moved up on a passed ball. After Jason Bevins had fouled out to first base, Akers hit a fly ball to centerfield and the ball was dropped for an error allowing Kinzer to cross home plate.

With two out, Akers scored on an error at first base. The four runs in the fourth inning broke a 2-2 tie.

The Reds took a brief 2-1 lead with two runs in the third inning. A walked batter and a hit batsman put two runners on with no one out. Kevin Robinson then drove in a run with a base hit, and a single by Phillip Robin-son scored another one.

The Braves tied the game with a single run in the bottom of the third on a single by Bevins, two walks and a wild pitch.

Bevins was the winning pitcher, and the Braves pitcher struck out 10 batters in five innings of work. Kevin Robinson took the loss, and the hard throwing pitcher fanned 12 in five innings. Robinson also had a double in the game.

The Martin Reds will host the Garrett Cubs today (Wednesday) at Martin Park and the Braves will host the Wayland Dodgers Friday at Allen Park.

The Floyd County Times

Their fish got away-but so what?

by Larry Rea

Memphis fisherman Bo Turner left his business card in a small house trailer somewhere on the shore of sprawling Sam Rayburn Reservoir in southeast Texas recently. He isn't sure who owns the trailer or exactly where it's located but he thinks it may have saved his life.

"I thank God that trailer was there or I probably wouldn't be here to tell my story."

Turner and fellow pro angler Parks Jones of South Carolina survived a life-threatening boat mishap that left them stranded overnight and set off a large-scale search.

They were fishing in the $175,000 BASS Master Texas Invitational, 15 miles from the tournament's weighin site, when high waves began to lap over the sides of their boat. When the bilge pump quit working, the boat began filling with water.

Three times Turner and Jones tried to cross the lake. On each attempt, they were forced back into a cove by the wind and waves. They turned down one offer of a ride back to the boat ramp, figuring the other boat couldn't handle four people in the storm.

"We'd have had two boats swamped, instead of one," Turner said.

By late afternoon, the frustrated fishermen figured they'd try one more time. They got about a quarter of a mile into the widest part of the lake when their motor quit. The boat capsized.

"We probably floated 500 to 600 yards, hanging onto the boat," Turner said. "We knew the boat wouldn't sink. But then we hit a stump. We were about a quarter mile out in the lake."

Neither angler panicked. Both could swim, and they were wearing flotation devices.

"There was no chaos," Turner said. "I don't think we were worried about drowning. What worried us was once we got to the shore, we discovered we were in a very remote area of the reservoir. Nothing but timber. It was getting late and we were getting cold. Plus, another storm hit about that time."

Turner knew they'd better find shelter in a hurry.

"My hands and feet were already starting to feel numb. We'd just come out of 60-degree water, and a person can't last very long — maybe three hours — in those kind of conditions."

After walking for what seemed like an eternity — but probably less than an hour — they came across a trailer. It was 5 p.m. when they pried open the front door.

"I knew it was chaos back at the boatramp," Turner said, "I knew my wife (Denise) was going crazy. Once we got inside the trailer, we were OK.

"We found score canned food to eat and we turned the stove on to get warm. All in all, we had a pretty good night. We were in bed by nine. The only thing we needed was a phone.

While the lost anglers were sleeping, friends and tourney officials were spending a restless night. President George Bush was contacted about the possibility of using the Texas National Guard in the search. The two anglers were up before sunrise and hiked back to the shore. They were rescued shortly thereafter and received a hero's welcome at the launch ramp. "The bad part of the whole experience was that we both had caught some good fish that day and we lost them all," Turner said. "I figure I lost at least 12 pounds of fish, and that would have been enough to put me in the money."

Turner fished the final two days of the tournament, finishing with 22 pounds, eight out of the money.

"I'm not going to complain," Turner said. "I'm alive, and I probably got more publicity than the winner."

There Are 8 Million Reasons To

Re-Elect Russell Bentley Your State Representative

The 92nd District will receive over 8 million dollars in new educational funds for it's school districts as the result of Rep. Russell Bentley and the recent General Assembly. Rep. Bentley worked hard as your state legislator on the educational reform package that will help insure the children of East Kentucky will get the same quality of education as those students in the rest of the state.

4.5 Million Other Reasons

Rep. Russell Bentley used his political skills and his ability to work with other legislators to help secure a lodge for Carr Fork Lake with an appropriation of 4.5 million dollars. This will create many jobs for the area as well as improve the quality of life here.

Many Other Reasons

Other projects and accomplishments could be given as reasons to re-elect Rep. Russell Bentley. The best reason to send Russell Ben tley back to Frankfort, however, is that he is a good legislator.

Here's some of our reasons for praising Rep. Bentley as a legislator.

* Rep. Bentley has worked hard as your legislator. He worked hard to find out what the people of this district wanted. He did so by questionnaires and visiting citizens — either at meetings or alongside the roadways. Rep. Bentley took this same energy and work effort to Frankfort as he represented our interests.

* Rep. Bentley made a good impression on fellow legislators and in the media. The degree of respect earned by Rep. Bentley is illustrated by the endorsement of House Speaker Don Blanaford, House Majority Whip Kenny Rapier, and House Majority Leader Greg Stumbo. Other endorsements include Kentucky Education Association (KEA), Knott, Letcher and Floyd County Teacher Associations, AFL-CIO, Kentucky Medical Association, and Kentucky Realtors Association.

* Rep. Bentley has obtained valuable experience and made important contacts that he can use this next term to even better represent the 92nd District. The 92nd District has a lot invested in Russell Bentley and it is in our best interest to re-elect him so he can continue his work. The key to power and influence in the state legislature is having a legislator who understands the process, has seniority, and has the respect of his fellow legislators. The 92nd District's influence in the legislature will increase by re-electing Russell Bentley.

Re-Elect Russell Bentley

State Representative - 92nd District

(Paid for by the Candidate.)

Wild Side

Tips and Techniques From Paul Elias

Paul Elias, the black-bearded angler from Laurel, Miss., is not only one of the most visible anglers on the B.A.S.S. Tournament Trail, but one of the most successful as well.

Like all successful anglers on the trail, Elias is a versatile fisherman, but is also widely regarded as one of the finest crankbait fishermen in the country. Moreover, Elias often opts for rather off-beat tactics to put the fish in the boat, a strategy that helped him to win the 1982 B.A.S.S. Masters Classic on the Alabama River and the 1988 Pro-Am Top 100 Tourney on Okeechobee.

Here, then, are a few tips from Paul that might help you put a few favorite picks.

more fish in your boat this year. TRYA WEED-WING

"Many times," says Elias, "when I'm using a bait like a Johnson Spoon around thick vegetation, especially in the fall and winter, bass will often rise and boil at the bait or hit short. I've learned that if I switch to a Weed-Wing, the fish will hit the bait. I don't know why it happens, but I've seen it scores of times in recent years."

TRY COLORED BLADES ONSPINNERBAITS

"Putcolored blades on your spinnerbait if the more traditional, shiny blades aren't producing for you," Elias recommends. Chartreuse blades on a chartreuse spinnerbait or white blades on a white bait are Paul's

"Most people think that colored blades are for use in muddy water, but I've found them tremendously productive in blackish waters, and especially during the spawn. Re-cently, while prefishing for a tournament at Okeechobee, I was fishing visible beds with a spinnerbait.

"Occasionally, I would catch a buck bass, but the big females would not respond. When I switched to a chartreuse spinnerbait with char-treuse blades, I immediately began catching only the big females. It was an infallible pattern," Elias reports. "Every bedding female I saw, I could catch.

Elias admits he doesn't under-stand the reasons for the success of colored blades, but thinks it might be simply that he was offering the fish something that they were not accustomed to.

Hornets, WMDJ winners in tournament opening

The Archer Park preseason softball tournament got underway Monday night as two games were played and the third resulted in a forfeit. Thirteen teams make up the field in the local tournament that kicks off the softball season at the park.

In the first game Monday evening, the Hornets shut out Ames, 13-0. The Hornets scored six times in the top of the first inning on four base hits. Terry Tuttle had an RBI on a base hit, as did James Tackett. George Bush picked up two RBIs on a double, and Charlie Collins' base hit scored two runs in the inning

In the top of the fourth, the Hornets plated three more runs with two coming on a base hit by Tuttle.

Doug Derossett, starting pitcher for the Hornets, drove in two runs with a hit in the top of the fifth inning. Gary Mullins, Mike Wells and Gene Tackett also had RBI singles in the inning.

In the second game — a close one - WMDJ scored a run in the bottom of the seventh inning to defeat a tough Collins Hardware team, 5-4. WMDJ scored the winning run with two outs. Randy Gearheart flied to short fielder for the first out, and Horn went out to left field.

With two out, Brian Allen singled and went to second base on a base hit off the bat of Randy Hunter. Pete Castle then hit a grounder to second base who bobbled the ball and on a desperate throw to second mishandled the ball again for a double error, allowing Allen to score the winning run.

Collins Hardware scored a single run in the top of the first on four hits to take a 1-0 lead.

WMDJ came back in the bottom of the frame with three runs on four hits. Robert Little had a two-run single and Webb's hit scored a run to give WMDJ a 3-1 lead.

Collins tied the score with two in the third and took the lead at 4-3 with another run in the top of the fifth. WMDJ tied the game in its half of the fifth on an RBI single by Poe.

The tournament will continue through the weekend, according to Kenny Conley, tournament director.

TRY A LITTLE GEORGE "Mann's Little George is a wonderful lure for use in rivers," Elias says, "but it has fallen out of favor with anglers in recent years. When fishing current-laden rivers, it is one of the best baits in the world for fishing sandbars, points, ledges and drops. And if you will keep the hooks dull — just don't sharpen them — then you can work the bait through very thick cover. Just work it with a slow pumping action like you would a worm.

TRY A LARGER CRANKBAIT TO CATCH LARGER FISH

"When you are working a pro-ductive crankbait pattern and catching small to medium sized bass on a smaller crankbait, try a larger, deeper diving lure to catch larger fish in the same area," Elias recommends. "First of all, the larger bait attracts larger bass, Secondly, the bait digging along the bottom and kicking up mud also attracts the attention of larger fish. Sometimes, you have to match your bait to the size of the fish you want to catch rather than matching your bait to the size of the forage on which they are feeding.

TRY SWEEPING A HEAVY JIG "During summer and early fall, I've found this technique to be extremely productive in recent years. Use a 1-oz. jig and work it with a sweeping motion off shallow structure (4 to 7-feet), dropping into deeper water. "The sweeping motion is swift and strong, raising the rod tip from the nine o'clock to 12 o'clock position just like you were setting the hook. The key to this tactic is to tighten up on the jig before you begin your next sweep to see if the fish has the jig you will rarely feel a fish hit."

TRY A CAROLINA-RIGGED WORM ON WINDY DAYS

"When you are fishing open lake cover on windy days, incorporate your Texas-rigged worm into a Carolina rig," Elias says. "The bait will still remain weedless, but you will increase your sense of feel and will be able to remain in contact with the structure much better." Most often,

Paul opts for a 1-ounce sinker and a 3 to 4-foot leader.

SWITCH TO A SKIN-HOOKED WORM TO CATCH MORE FISH

"When you are having trouble hooking a fish with a Texas-rigged worm, insert the hook point in the side of the worm so that it is just covered by a tiny membrane of plastic. The bait will still remain relatively weedless, but you will defi-nitely hook more fish."

"FROW" A FROG

"When you're fishing fast baits like buzz baits and Johnson Spoons over thick vegetation like pepper-grass, lily pads, and matted hydrilla, keep a frog tied onto another rod at all times. Then, when a fish misses your faster lure, toss the frog in on top of him. By keeping the frog in one place, you can most often aggravate the fish into striking again." DON'T UNDERESTIMATE

THE POWER OF THE RATTLE

'Use rattles in all of your soft plastic baits. I use at least one, and most often two or three, in every soft bait I throw. Too, I tape rattles onto the upper hook shank of my jigs. When fish cannot see your bait," Elias reports "Their only key to finding your bait is sound. I honestly believe worm rattles help me catch many more and larger, fish!"

burg trounces McD. in twin bill, 13-1, 14-3

The Prestonsburg Blackcats are looking to getting their final tune up for the 58th District tournament next week — they got off to a good start with a doubleheader sweep of Greg Johnson's McDowell Daredevils, playing without the services of Jamie Prestonsburg scored in every in-ning except the fourth, pounding out Johnson's McDowell Daredevils, Martin.

The Blackcats won the first game, 13-1, in five innings on a one-hitter by John Clark and Chris Cavins and 14-3 in five in game two.

Senior League starts with Reds over Cubs

The Prestonsburg Senior League got its season underway last Satur-day under cloudy skies and balmy temperatures as Phillip Tucker's Reds defeated Cecil Lester's Cubs, 8-2. The Reds scored four times in the sixth inning to break open a close game. The Reds loaded the base in the inning on Jason Burke, who came on in relief of starter Scott McGuire. Ben Johnson's single plated two runs in the inning. Two more scored on wild pitches.

Tucker's Reds got two runs in the first on a double by Jason Crisp and scored single runs in the fourth and fifth innings. The Reds collected six hits in the game while playing error-less baseball. Lester's Cubs were guilty of three miscues.

The Reds pulled off 13 stolen bases against the Cubs. According to Coach Tucker, the defensive play of Chris Music at third base saved some runs being scored against his team in the top of the seventh when the Cubs loaded the bases. Jason Crisp was the winning pitcher for the Reds in striking out two batters and firing a three-hitter. Scott McGuire took the loss while recording six strikeouts.

Crisp also had a double for the winning team and Jason Burke doubled for the Cubs. Also Jeff Hicks had three hits in the game. The Reds are 1-0 and Cubs fall to 0-1.

Time has changed a lot of things. Mama needs you now -Give her a ring. Tell her you love her; This she needs most of all. Make life a little easier dedicate this to you Mammaw Prater

She been gone now

for some twenty odd years,

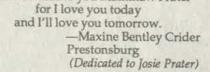

I still see her face

through eyes filled with tears.

They say you were so special and that I would have loved you, but it breaks my heart that I've only seen old black and white photos.

I just wish that you would have lived long enough so I could have met you. This is a non-rhyming poem to let you know that I love you dearly and I miss you even though I've never met you, but I still love you very, very much. -Ann Case

For Mama as she waits for Jesus to call. Mama is entering her twilight years. Take time to wipe away Mama's tears. -Nola Skeen Lorain, Ohio

(in memory of Bulah Case)

She taught you how to tie your shoes, tell time and tell the truth. Your mother's been at your side through good times and bad. Although it's hard to repay her for all the things she's done for you, this Mother's Day presents the perfect opportunity to say "Thanks, Mom.'

Start by giving Mom the day off while you serve up a delicious brunch in her honor. Hand over her favorite book or magazine and tell her to put up her feet while you tie on an apron and head for the kitchen.

Mom probably has a few favorite dishes of her own that you can prepare, but didn't she always tell you to be adventurous and try something new for a change? So, listen to your mother and surprise her with a "berry" special start to the day with Creamy Garlic and Bacon Pitas.

These creamy, colorful pita rounds are sizzling with the flavor of bacon and a creamy garlic cheese spread. Fresh strawberries not only add scrumptious sweetness, but a touch of springtime. And, while you will be pleased at how easy they are to prepare, Mom will be even happier when she finds out that each serving has only 77 calories!

CREAMYGARLIC AND BACON PITAS

Preparation time: 10-11 minutes Assembling time: 10 minutes 6 slices of bacon, halved 2 cloves garlic

1 Tbsp slivered almonds, toasted 2 ozs Neufchatel or light cream cheese 2 Tbsps plain yogurt 1/4 tsp Worcestershire sauce 1 pita bread, split 6 large strawberries, sliced Boston or leaf lettuce

Place bacon on microwave-safe rack; cover with paper towel and microwave at high 5-6 minutes. Roll up half of the slices to make 6 bacon curls. Crumble remaining bacon; reserve. Meanwhile, place garlic and almonds in blender container or processor; cover and blend until finely chopped. Add cheese, yogurt and sauce, cover and blend until fairly smooth. Stirin reserved bacon. Spread each pita circle with bacon mixture. Place strawberries around outer edge; arrange lettuce in center and top with bacon curls. Cutinto quarters to serve. Makes 8 pieces, about 77 calories per piece.

If a full brunch is too much, why not invite Mom over for a mid-morning visit with fresh baked Cherry Almond Tea Ring. Hotroll mix eliminates a multitude of measuring and mixing steps. Brilliant red and seductively sweet maraschino cherries add color and flavor to the almond filling.

If time is at a premium, add maraschino cherries and chopped walnuts to your favorite muffin or quick bread recipe or mix. Stir maraschino cherries into your favorite cookie dough.

Then, sit Lack, brew a pot of tea or coffee and catch up on all the news. For a touch of sweetness, flavor and color, steep maraschino cherries in a jar of sun tea. Serve over ice.

CHERRY ALMOND TEA RING

package (16 oz) hot roll mix Tbsps sugar cup hot water 6 Tbsps butter or margarine, divided 2 eggs, divided l can (8 oz) almond paste l cup maraschino cherries, drained and halved 1/4 cup chopped almonds Almond Glaze Toasted almond slices Combine hot roll mix and sugar in mixing bowl; stir in water, 2 Tbsps butter and one egg plus one yolk reserving remaining egg white. Stir until dough pulls away from side of bowl. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead about 5 minutes or until smooth

Cover and let rest 5 minutes. Beat remaining egg white in small bowl until foamy; gradually beat in almond paste a little at a time. Beat in remainng butter one Tbsp at a time until smooth. Reserve 8 cherry halves for garnish; fold chopped almonds and remaining cherries into almond paste mixture

Roll tightly, jelly roll fashion, from long edge; seal and shape into ring, sealed edge down, on greased cookie sheet. Slash ring about 2/3 of way through from outer edge at 1-1/2 inch intervals; turn each section onto its side. Cover and let rise about 20 minutes. Brush top of ring with milk if desired. Bake at 325 degrees for 25-30 minutes. Cool 30 minutes. Drizzle with Almond Claze; garnish with reserved cherries and to asted almond slices. Makes one ring

ALMOND GLAZE: Combine I cup powdered sugar, 1 to 2 Tbsps milk and 1/ 4 tsp almond extract; beat until smooth. 4 tsp atmonu cup. Makes about 1/2 cup.

Another fun and easy breakfast treat you can put together for Mom and sit and enjoy together is Sunshine muffins. Add V8 vegetable juice and a cup of tea or coffee, and you have a balanced meal.

These muffins are also fun because you can get very creative with the fruit topping and create dozens with no two alike

SUNSHINE MUFFIN

1 English muffin, split and toasted 1/2 cup part-skim ricotta cheese 1/2 sliced fresh fruit (try bananas, straw-berries, cantaloupe, blueberries or kiwi) Spread each muffin half with cheese; spoon fruit on top. Sprinkle fruit with cinnamon sugar. Makes one serving, 370 calories each.

For years Mom has told us that breakfast is the most important meal of the day. Yet, most people, including busy moms, grab breakfast and run or simply skip it altogether

So set Mom down and show her how easy and quick breakfast can be with this little time saving tip you've learned. Waffle and pancake batters can be made easily in a blender. Once mixed, pour the batter directly from the blender to the griddle or waffle maker. It is a simple two-step process that can make cleanup a breeze.

SPEEDY OATMEAL PANCAKES -1/2 cups oatmeal 3/4 cups skim milk l egg whites 2 Tbsps oil 2 Tbsps brown sugar 1 Tbsp baking powder 1/4 tsp salt To make oat flour, put oatmeal into blender container. Cover and process at a medium-high speed until the consistency of all-purpose flour.

Remove from container. Place all other ingredients into blender container. Add oat flour. Cover and process at a high speed until smooth. Allow to stand for five minutes before using.

Pour onto preheated, lightly reased griddle. Cook over medium high heat until browned, turning once. Yield: Eight 4-inch pancakes.

Here's one more treat to serve Mom that is nutritious, wholesome and inexpensive, yet it looks and tastes like a gourmet deli salad. There's a subtle interplay of flavors and textures that works especially well with these ingredients. Fusillie, or "corkscrew" pasta and black-eyed peasare the heart of the salad, but it's California black ripe olives that really make it tantalizing. Olives add a nutty, distinctive flavor and striking color contrast. Slivered red bell pepper and minced parsley add to the confetticolor

"A Special Mother"

Mommy, it has been six months now since God called you away; but I still hold your picture close everyday. My eyes fill with tears; as I recall my childhood years, I can remember when I would feel so feverish and Ill; how the touch of your loving hand seemed to take away the chill. Then I would think soon I'll be able to play; because Mommy is here to make everything okay. Now I sit by the window and I feel so alone; I can see the place where she called home. She no longer waits for her children there anymore; she'll be waiting for them on that golden shore

Mommy worked so hard for us all and everyday; then when she thought we were asleep, at night for us she would pray.

She would not have cared if she didn't have a pair of shoes to wear; just so each of her children had a pair.

Of an education, Mommy was deprived; though she didn't make famous speeches on her word I could rely; she was a great teacher, she knew the values of life. As I go on through life each day, there's always the advice that Mommy gave.

Mommy would never tell us one word wrong; they were more truer than words of a song. As I grew older I truly realized; all those things she told me, they were so wise.

If there were many things in life I could be; and only one that I did achieve; I wish for that to be, the kind of mother to my child as mine was to me.

She would never tell us how to live our life; she gave lots of counseling and hoped we would take her advice. She loved us even when we made our mistakes; she knew that was part of her advice we didn't take.

Of all the sacrifices Mommy made for us, from a list so large; we always knew the final results there was no charge. She did it from a heart so full of love; the way a loving Mother does.

Mommy devoted her life to her family; she didn't have any regrets, and this she wanted me to see. She reassured me as I sat beside on the hospital bed; as I reached and held her hand. When I said, "Mommy, while raising your children I know you had a rough life," with these words she seemed to revive, she said, "Raising my children was the happiest time of all, I would like to call back the time when they were all small; I would love to have them all home again." She looked so happy and her face wore a grin.

She was a wonderful Mother, and a Grandmother so dear; if they ever needed her help they knew she was near. All they had to do, was to give her a call; for she loved them so much, one and all.

Mommy said from this world she was not afraid to leave; because God would take care of her every need. She hated to leave the love ones who were so dear; that's why her eyes were filled with tears; As the tears ran so gently down her face; I remember how she so bravely wiped them away. She would always try to prepare us for the time when she would be gone; as she would say she would soon be going home; and how that she didn't want us to grieve; because that was the way God intended it to be. All through the years; of losing her I carried a fear; I would try to consider the fact; that soon Mommy might have to leave to never come back. When this thought to me would occur; then I would always go visit her. I would be so relieved, because once more she was there smiling at me

I always knew, she I would terribly miss; but how could I have known it would be like this? The pain of missing her, I don't know if I could stand; if had not she told she was going to a better land. When I miss her so much I don't think I can face another day; that's when as though I can hear her sweet voice say, I don't want you to grieve for me this way; just be ready to met me again someday. Mommy's love of a bond so strong; it will always remain with us even though she is gone. No matter of the years we may be sad and blue; she has left us those loving memories to see us through.

sort, Lexington, from March 13-15. Attending from the John Graham Chapter were KSDAR State Chairperson Mrs. Ray Brackett, Regent Mrs. Carl Horn and KSDAR Meal Reservation Chairperson Mrs. James B. VISITORS FROM OHIO

Cynthia Alley and son Neil of Cincinnati, Ohio, spent a weekend recently at Jenny Wiley Lodge and with her sister Thelma Spencer and children, Rickey, Lavonna, Jennifer and Chris Meade. They spent one day at the Breaks Interstate Park.

Mommy was always so hu nble, kind and sweet; she had a handshake and smile for anyone she would meet. For everyone, her heart was so full of love; the and that is only sent from above

She is now the angel I always thought her to be; she has received her wings now and the angel is made complete. Even though we have lost her, I feel she Heavens gain; and forever with the angels she will sang

With Mother's Day only a few days away; I hope I can visit her grave; and there as I may stand; with a wreath of flowers in my hand; I'll b so thankful that she doesn't know; how sad and lonely we are here below

There is nothing else for Mommy that we can ever do; and I know there is only one she would ask us to; be ready to meet her when our life is though. If she could speak to us I believe she would joyfully say; "I wish my loved ones could be here today; I would love for them to see; this beautiful city God has built for me; and this one is built to last; now all my troubles have come to pass.

Mommy, I know you don't hear me, but I still have to say; how much I love and miss you each day

Cancer Telethon is Saturday

A total of $32,000 in pledges is the goal for the 5th annual American Cancer Society Telethon, set for Saturday, May 12, over WYMT-TV Channel 57 in Hazard. ACS officials and volunteers, as well as WYMT personnel, hope to exceed the previ-ous record of $25,148 set last year.

57 Mountain News Weatherman Jeff Noble and WYMT's Co-Anchor Sheri Sparks will co-host this year's telecast, which will originate live from the Hazard studios. This will be Noble's fifth straight telethon, beginning as a production assistant with the first one back in 1986, and then moving infront of the cameras as a co-host for the next three years. This will mark Sparks' second consecutive year on the ACS Telethon

Other WYMT-TV personalities scheduled to appear on the broad-cast include Tony Turner, Jay Crawford, Kevin Myers, Neil Mid-dleton, Kelley Dearing, Keith Case-bolt and Scott Stayton.

These people will join scores of volunteers from American Cancer Society units from throughout Eastern and Southeastern Kentucky, in answering phone pledges and presenting information on cancer treatment and programs that are vital to you. During this program, viewers will see what strides have been made in the fight against the disease which affects people of all ages and economic backgrounds.

Several performers will be seen on the telethon via videotape. Those scheduled to appear include the Goins Brothers Bluegrass Band, who are seen on WYMT-TV Saturday mornings; the Sugar and Spice Cloggers from Corbin; Sandy Short, a singer from Hindman; Sherry Hall; singer Eddie Isaacs from Jackson; and The Harlan Boys Choir.

In addition to the entertainment, several businesses and organizations from throughout the mountains will present pledges during the telethon.

For the first time, some members of the Mountain Firefighters Association, an organization representing paid and volunteer fire departments throughout eastern and southeastern Kentucky, will hold road blocks in their communities this Saturday morning. Afterwards, they'll bring the money they've raised to the station in firefighter's boots to add to the total pledges raised in this year's telethon. The purpose of this telethon is to raise money for cancer treatment, public education, public service and cancer research. The money raised from this event will go to the counties in eastern and southeastern Kentucky that participate and will be used to continue the progress being made in fighting the many forms of cancer.

WHY WE ARE AFRAID OF PUBLIC SPEAKING by Robert E. Looney Communication instructor

It begins as a slight worry in the back of our minds, an uneasy feeling, the kind we have when we wonder if we had left the gas stove on when we left the house. Then the butterflies begin in the stomach telling us absolute nausea is on its way. At this point a flood of horrible sensations overwhelm us, dry mouths and shaky hands and legs. We wonder if we can even stand up.

Our palms begin to sweat. Our breathing and heart rate begin to race as if we would explode. Our blood pressure reaches abnormal heights creating that throbbing in our head that feels like someone is hitting us squarely between the eyes with a 16pound sledge hammer. We get dizzy, our mind goes blank, and we look for any possible rock to hide under or corner to slither into. What could cause such an intense reaction? Could it be a heart attack? Did we just experience an automo-bile accident? Have we confronted a wild beast such as a bear, wolf or perhaps a differed fearsome creature

Hale, Paugh to wed in July

EDWYNNAHALE

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Hale of Blue River announce the forthcoming marriage of their daughter, Edwynna, to Robert C. Paugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Paugh of Bridgeport, W.Va.

The bride-elect is a graduate of Transylvania University and the University of Kentucky College of Dentistry. She is in private practice at Horse Cave.

The prospective groom is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University where he received a bachelor's degree in music education. He is em-like a spider or snake? Or perhaps we have just found ourselves face to face with the most fearsome of situations, a tax audit?

Actually, any of these situations could create our responses for they are all threatening circumstances. Our minds and bodies scream for us to stand and fight or runaway from the situation. This fight or flight feeling is a defense mechanism designed to give you the extra burst of energy needed to overcome your obstacle. For many of us the trigger for this feeling is fear. Topping the list of almost every poll conducted regarding people's fear is PUBLIC SPEAKING.

Just the mention of the possibility of having to give a "speech" strikes terror into the hearts of even the strongest of characters. It is not unusual to hear of persons who have turned down promotions, changed jobs, careers and even lifestyles due to a fear of communication. What is it about the act of public speaking that causes so much anxiety in our lives? What is it about giving a speech that ranks it more feared than financial ruin, death and snakes? And most importantly, are there ways to overcome or at least manage this fear better?

When talking with someone who is nervous about giving a speech, his or her "stage fright" generally comes from four possible directions, 1) fear of being judged, 2) fear of failure, 3) fear of rejection, and 4) fear of the unknown. Keep in mind, these are not silly or foolish fears just as the reactions to them are not imagined. The fears we have of public speaking are real. It is through understanding them that we begin the journey of overcoming the fears.

Label collection benefits hospital

More than $7,400 was raised in 1989 for cancer research and treatment at Kosair Children's Hospital through labels collected from baby food jars.

Heinz Baby Food and the H.J. Heinz Company Foundation donated six cents to the hospital for every label collected from a Heinz baby food jar. The collection was coordinated by TWIGS, a hospital fundraising organization. Other participants included members of Junior Beta Clubs around the state, hospital employees and individuals who mailed labels to the hospital.

Å total of 123,748 labels were collected last year, the eighth year Kosair has participated in the Heinz project. Nationwide, 150 hospitals participated in the 1989 campaign.

One of the more common thoughts that runs through our mind as we prepare to give a speech is that the people in the audience are judging us. The mere fact that they look at us tends to be a bit unnerving. In a public speaking setting we often get the feeling that it is us against them and they have all the good weapons. Audience members may look threatening, but consider this, a group is always made up of individuals, the speech is like an enlarged conversation. Further, we find that most listeners are charitable and supportive. They know how difficult it is to address the group and generally a speaker is admired for doing so.

A second major fear is that of failure. This feeling happens whether you are an accomplished speaker or doing your first public speech. We worry about looking foolish, making mistakes, stammering, stuttering, forgetting what we were going to say, tripping over our shoe laces, falling down, forgetting to button our pants, can we achieve world peace, are we going to die soon, will they say nice things at our funeral - the list is endless

The point is we often worry about things that have nothing to do with the speech itself. Any normal person will have this fear. Your goal is not to let it control you. Build your confidence through extensive preparation and practice. And anyway, if you do make a mistake, that's okay. We are all human and are bound to make a couple on the way. Knowing this can ease some of the pressure of the ac-*tual speaking event.

The fear of rejection often looms in the back of our minds when we prepare to give a speech. What if we do our best, what if we deliver a polished speech but the audience still does not like us? At this point our ego is involved. Most of us want to be liked and it is scary to think we can put our thoughts and feelings in the open and not have people like them.

To deal with this fear we must first have the faith and confidence in ourselves. Preparation and practice tend to solve this problem. Yet, if it still hangs over you like a cloud of doom, remember one thing, if you feel you have done the best speech possible you have tasted success. Differences tend to be based on opinion, not personality. Everyone is entitled to her/ his opinion (even if you know they are wrong).

Finally, the one big fear that grinds in our mind like a millstone grinding meal, is the unknown. It seems like whenever we have to try a new thing this fear is there. We cannot quite put our finger on the problem, but we know it is there. It is not easy to describe or define, but it is there. Like reinforcement: "I'm ready, this is the calm before the storm, we worry that some unpredictable disaster is bound to occur. This is a fear centering around not knowing the outcome. It is the nervousness a ballplayer has right before the big game. Or the feeling you have the day after the warranty has run out on your car or appliance. You know something is out there, but what is it? What will be the end result? Fortunately, this fear usually begins to fade as our experience in speaking grows. We begin to realize that nothing terrible is going to happen to us after we get two or three speeches under our belt.

So, now we know the fear is real and it is normal, now comes the big question—What can I do to get rid of this feeling I have right before a presentation? The first suggestion is the easiest to say but the hardest to do. You must realize that being nervous and a little afraid is normal. Use the anxiety to your advantage; accept is as an indication that you are charged and ready to present. Remember to breathe deeply and get that good steady oxygen flow to your brain. This will help you stay alert and focused on the task at hand. Keep in mind, this fear is NORMAL!

Other things you can do prior to giving your speech is to prepare yourself and the content thoroughly. Practice delivering your speech to anyone who will listen; family, friends, co-workers, even furniture can act as a substitute to practice your speech. List the things that make you nervous about giving the speech and practice each one individually. Also, imagine yourself giving a good presentation. Rather than say, "I'm not ready, I don't want to do this, I'm going to fail," try using the positive going to be a great experience. I've practiced and I'm prepared!" The key is to THINK POSITIVELY, ACT POSITIVELY!!!

When you actually give your speech there are a few things that you can do to ease the anxiety. Do not concentrate on being nervous this only worsens the problem. Remember, if you do not tell people you are nervous they often will never know. Most of our nervous reactions cannot be seen; no one can see your heart beat faster or your hands and knees shaking

Feel free to use movement of your hands and body to illustrate a point. This gives your nervous energy a place to be used. Use visual aids, posters, charts, models, etc. to illustrate your ideas. This takes the attention away from you briefly while you explain them. Take a deep breath before beginning, look at your audience, and prepare to dazzle them with your brilliance. Let your self-confidenceshow. You know your material better than your audience.

Speaking in public amazes and delights us in a variety of ways. We admire people who have this skill. Rarely is the talent of speaking a natural one. We all can be good public speakers, but it takes practice and a willingness to give it a try.

Hospital seeks volunteers

Highlands Regional Medical Center is accepting applications from persons interested in contributing their time, talents and experience to its innovative new Volunteer Services Program.

Volunteers are assigned to work in areas where their experience and talent can be most utilized, according to coordinator Kathy King Allen.

Some of the departments needing volunteers are dietary, patient escorts, ICCU, laboratory, nursing, out-patient surgery, public information, purchasing and quality assurance.

"Volunteers are important to Highlands," said Allen. "Our staff greatly appreciates the time each volunteer donates to the program. A volunteer can be a tremendous asset to the patient and their families.

"They can provide some services not feasible or possible for paid staff. Sometimes, their presence helps dis-pel some of the overpowering and personally frightening aspects of hospitalization and related care."

The opportunity to be a health care volunteer is open to men, women and young people over the age of 14. To become a volunteer or to receive more information on the Volunteer Service Program, contact Allen at 886-8511 or 1-800-533-HRMC.

DVA Home Loan Guaranty Program A Viable Mortgage Financing Tool

A recent increase in the maximum no-down payment home loan that can be guaranteed by the Department of Veterans Affairs (DVA) is making that mortgage program a more useful financing tool, according to an article in the April issue of Real Estate Today, published by the National Association of Realtors.

"Be a Star in the Veterans' Housing Market" notes that the DVA's guarantee limit for mortgages requiring no down payment is now $184,000, $40,000 higher than the formerlimit of $144,000. "This change will provide welcome relief to qualified buyers in high-priced areas who previously had trouble getting VA loans," says author Michael H. Bedsworth, a Burke, Va. Realtor.

The loan adjustment was due to federal legislation enacted last December that raised the DVA entitlement, which is the amount of funds DVA guarantees to pay the lender if the borrower defaults. The Veterans Benefits Amendments Act of 1989 raised the entitlement to $46,000 for homes priced more than $144,000. Since lenders generally will lend up to four times the entitlement amount with no down payment required, the maximum DVA-guaranteed loan rose to $184,000.

In addition to the no down payment feature, Bedsworth points out that the relatively easy assumability of DVA loans makes them attractive, particularly in times of rising interest rates. Unlike assumption conditions for many privately-insured mortgages, the interest rate and terms for DVA home loans cannot be changed upon assumption. "Chances are that buyers who use VA financing will be sellers sometime in the future. VA financing will give them a similar safeguard," Bedsworth says. Although the DVA home loan program is only available to veterans and active duty service personnel, the loans may be assumed by nonmilitary buyers as well as military buyers. Buyers assuming loans committed after March 1, 1988 must pass a credit check, he notes. Additional advantages of DVA financing are that no mortgage insurance is charged and the mortgage qualification requirements are more lenient, Bedsworth says. There are two methods for qualifying a VA borrower. Through one, the residual method, all the obligations of buyers are subtracted from their income, leaving an amount that can be made for mortgage payments. Using this amount, the full mortgage for which a borrower qualifies can be calculated. The second method qualifies a buyer through a ratio limiting the amount of housing costs and all monthly bills as a percentage of gross monthly income. Although the formula is flexible, the portion generally is limited to 41 percent, according to Bedsworth.

Borrowers who have used their entitlement to obtain a DVA-guaranteed loan may still have a partial entitlement left due to periodic inpercent of the loan amount. The DVA requires that the discount points, which are collected at closing, must be paid by the seller. Bedsworth cautions that the possibility of paying points can make sellers reluctant to accept an purchase offer stipulating DVA financing.

Although borrowers do not have to pay discount points, they are required to pay a funding fee to the DVA, which may be included in the loan amount, rather than paid upfront, Bedsworth notes. The 1989 law changed the fee amount, basing it on the amount of the down payment. Borrowers making no down payment, or paying down 5.0 percent or less must pay a fee of 1.25 percent of the loan amount. Those making a down payment of more than 5.0 percent up to 10.0 percent must pay a fee of 0.75 percent. Those paying more than 10.0 percent down must pay a 0.50 percent funding fee.

An option is available for buyers who are unable to locate DVA financing. If a prospective borrower is turned down by three lenders because the home loans are not offered in the area, he can apply for direct funding from the DVA, according to Bedsworth.

The more mortgage alternatives Realtors can provide, including the DVA program, the quicker a sale can be closed, Bedsworth says, noting that details on DVA loan guarantees should be explained to sellers as well as buyers. "By understanding the intricacies of VA financing, you can demonstrate how you can bring more qualified buyers to your listings," he adds.

The National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association, is the voice for real estate, representing more than 800,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

creases in the entitlement amount. The borrower may use the partial entitlement to buy a second home without having to sell the first. Bedsworth explains that a veteran who purchased a home in 1975, when the entitlement was $17,500, now has a partial entitlement equaling the difference between $17,500 and the current entitlement amount.

If the DVA borrower seeks to purchase a home priced higher than four times the entitlement, he must make a down payment totaling the difference between the loan and the price, Bedsworth notes. To fully restore an entitlement, the veteran homeowner must fully repay the loan and sell his home. Or, a veteran buyer may substitute his entitlement for the homeowner's entitlement, or a veteran buyer can assume the homeowner's loan.

The DVA sets the maximum interest rate to be charged for the home loans it guarantees. If the rate is below the market rates for previously-insured mortgages, lenders may charge extra discount points for DVA financing, to raise the yield on the loans. One discount point equals 1.0
