Blast, fire hit campus in Hazard

A chemical fire rocked the campus of Hazard Community College Wednesday, forcing the evacuations of the college and neighborhood businesses. The explosion, in a laboratory in the main building on campus, blew out windows close to a biology lab.

Federal and state investigators along with experts from the University of Kentucky are trying to determine the extent of environmental damage from the blast, according to Lori Kincaid, a spokesman for the college.

Officials believe the fire started at 2:30 p.m. when phosphorus in a chemical storage area exploded after it came in contact with water, Kincaid said.

It took 60 firefighters six hours to bring the fire under control, and a neighboring car dealership and golf course were evacuated. The fire was contained to two rooms on the bottom floor of the building.

No injuries were reported but toxic fumes were blowing downwind, Lt. Sam Gibson of the Hazard Fire Department said. The large clouds of smoke and fumes were dispersed by the winds, Gibson added.

Classes are cancelled at the college through Saturday and officials

Seven resign, five more expected to follow :

Martin firefighters quit posts

by Tim B. Preston
Staff writer

Seven of twelve active volunteer firefighters at Martin resigned their posts Thursday evening in protest of working conditions and the department's relationship with the Martin City Council. The five remaining firemen are expected to turn in their equipment this week.

The walkout Thursday is the result, firefighter Rick Caudill said, "Mainly because we've been ignored by the city council. When we get mentioned in the city council meetings we get bumped around like a pinball machine."

Martin Mayor Raymond Griffith responded to questions about the effect the walkout on insurance rates paid by homeowners in the city saying, "I guess they'll have to go up."

Fire insurance rates for homeowners are based on the quality of fire protection in given areas. Those areas are ranked by the state Insurance Services Organization (ISO) on criteria which includes manpower, equipment, the availability of water and communications.

The mass resignations by firefighters Thursday is an apparent extension to a heated council meeting Wednesday that saw one fireman resign in an unrelated dispute.

At least 30 Martin residents appeared before the Martin City Council Wednesday to complain about street conditions, and the actions of a city patrolman were also questioned.

Martin firefighter Dennis Hutchinson addressed the council with a complaint concerning the actions of city policeman James Burke, alleging that Burke had recently pulled his service revolver from its holster when he approached Hutchinson's vehicle in a restaurant drive-through.

"I could have understood if I was armed with a gun or a knife," said Hutchinson. "But, all I had was a cheeseburger."

Hutchinson said Burke had checked his vehicle's taillights while in the restaurant drive-through, and that the officer appeared to be finished with the safety check. Hutchinson said he pulled from the driveway into the parking lot and said that the officer approached his vehicle, with his revolver drawn, and continued to interrogate him.

"He wasn't pointing the gun at me," said Hutchinson, "but there was no reason for him to have the revolver drawn in the first place."

Council members opted to take the meeting into executive session to discuss action toward the officer.

After returning to open session, councilman Joe Simpson made a motion to take no action against Burke. Council members, with the exception of councilman James Robinson, who abstained, voted to pass the motion.

River ride

Congressional candidate Will T. Scott takes a break Wednesday in Prestonsburg from his four-day river ride to inflate a rubber supply raft which sprung a slow leak during the second day of the trip. Scott and his wife Tracey are making the trip in order to bring attention to his efforts to have locks and dams installed on the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River. The proposed system of locks and dams would allow coal operators to transport their product at lower cost than by rail or trucking. (Photo by Tim Preston)

Out-of-court settlement okayed by Patton, board

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Proceedings in the federal civil rights case between former county school transportation director Edward Patton Jr. and the Floyd County Board of Education ended Wednesday after both parties agreed to a $75,000 settlement in favor of Patton.

"I feel vindicated," Patton said after learning of the settlement. "It's a fair settlement. I feel the American system of justice has run its course here today."

Patton's attorney Ned Pillersdorf said he felt the settlement was fair and he felt "both sides faced reality."

As part of the agreement, Patton will also receive up to $1,800 toward legal costs and no adverse records will be placed in his personal file.

On the other hand, the settlement dismissed Dr. Mary Hall from the lawsuit and the board has no admission of liability in the case.

Neither Hager, Hall nor their attorneys would comment after the settlement was announced.

However, board members Tommy Boyd, James Duff and Ray "Shag" Campbell were relieved the matter was settled.

"We come out of it in good shape,"

Boyd said. "It won't cost the county anything or the taxpayers. The insurance will pay for it."

"I'm glad it's settled," Duff said. "I'm glad to see it's over," Campbell echoed.

F.C. Bryan, representing the board, did say the settlement and costs would be paid through insurance.

Judge Joseph Hood announced to the jury at 2 p.m. Wednesday the case had been settled and dismissed them from service. Testimony was scheduled to continue at 1 p.m. after the noon recess but, in a flurry of activ-

Water woes plague Duff

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Garrett/Wayland school children began classes Tuesday at the new James Duff Elementary with an unusual ornament on the school grounds—a fire truck.

The sight of the fire truck at the school has prompted concerned parents to question its purpose at the school. Other concerns, including the lack of caution lights at the school entrance, overcrowded school buses and used school furniture in some of the new classrooms have also been aired.

According to James F. Francis, school system director of buildings and grounds, there is not enough water pressure at the school site to activate the school's sprinkler system in case of a fire.

According to Terry Slade, assistant director of the division of codes and enforcement in Frankfort, an agreement with the state fire marshal's office allows classes to be held if the truck and a trained firefighter are on the premises at all times the building is occupied.

A 60-day temporary certificate of occupancy for the school was granted by the state to the board of education, and a list of eight deficiencies must be corrected in that time frame or another agreement will have to be made, Slade said.

An August 28 inspection by the department of codes and enforcement found deficiencies in the water and sprinkler system which have to corrected before a permanent certificate of occupancy can be obtained, Slade said.

The requirements include:
-submitting the sprinkler contractor's material test certificate for above and underground pipes at the site;

-submitting certificates the sprinkler system is supervised by a central station;

-data plates permanently placed at the base of the riser for each sprinkler

Senator touts U.S. policies at Rotary meet

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor

Senator Mitch McConnell was in Prestonsburg Thursday to speak to the Prestonsburg Rotary and other invited guests during a luncheon at the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn.

The day after his debate with Democrat challenger Harvey Sloane, the senator said he was pleased that the Lexington Herald-Leader saw the debate as a clear victory for the Republican incumbent. McConnell said that debates afford a great opportunity for voters to see the candidates in a spontaneous, unrehearsed format, allowing them to make a better decision how to vote. A second debate is scheduled for Sunday, Sept. 30 at 5 p.m.

Senator Mitch McConnell

Before taking questions from the floor, Senator McConnell summarized his remarks from the previous night. He said that he believed the president acted "quickly and wisely" to the situation in Kuwait, noting that if Iraq had been allowed to get control of Saudi Arabia, the Iraqis would hold more than 50 percent of the OPEC oil reserves and could economically control the world.

Former Floyd County Times staff writer Frank S. Clark Jr. died Thursday after a short illness. Clark left the Times in May to work with the Appalachian Civic Development Program at Hazard Community College.

Funeral services are Monday :

Former Times staffer Frank S. Clark Jr. dies

A friend of the community and former employee of the Floyd County Times, Frank S. Clark Jr. died Thursday, Sept. 6 at the age of 27. Clark had lived in Hueysville and had just moved to Hazard, accepting a job with Hazard Community College, when he became ill and was hospitalized in Harrisburg, Penn.

After a three-month illness he died Thursday at his residence in Harrisburg.

Born on June 23, 1963, in Long Beach, Calif., he was the son of Frank S. Clark Sr. and the late Cynthia Wehrle Clark, who preceded him in death in 1967.

In addition to his father, Clark is survived by his stepmother, Mary Clark of Ocala, Fla.; and his maternal grandmother Margaret Wehrle of Hollidaysburg, Penn.

Having attended high school in both Toronto, Canada, and Denville, N.J., Clark graduated from Colorado State University in Ft. Collins, Col., with a Bachelor of Arts degree in political science and earned his Masters Degree in international affairs from the University of Pittsburgh in 1989.

While in Eastern Kentucky, Clark taught at the David School, was a volunteer for Christian Appalachian Project and free-lanced for the Associated Press.

He began work as a freelance writer for the Floyd County Times in September, 1989 and was hired full-time in October of 1989 as a staff writer. In May, 1990 he began work with the Appalachian Civic Leadership Development Project at Hazard Community College.

Funeral services will be Monday, Sept. 10 at 10 a.m. at the St. John Baptist Church in Altoona, Penn., with Father Michael Santeasano officiating. Burial will follow in the Calvary Cemetery in Altoona under the direction of Stevens Mortuary, Altoona. There is no visitation.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests memorials be made to the Good Counsel Church, 329 Poplar Street, Hazard, KY 41701.

McConnell, Slone trade charges

LOUISVILLE -- Sen. Mitch McConnell and challenger Harvey Sloane traded a number of charges last night during the first of two televised debates in the campaign for U.S. Senate. McConnell, a Republican seeking his second term, tried to show viewers his experience and painted Sloane as an East-coast liberal who wants to increase taxes. Sloane, a Democrat, attacked McConnell for his ties to special interests and accused him of being against the "hard-working families of Kentucky." (The Courier-Journal)

Lottery cancels Keno game

LEXINGTON -- For the second time in less than a year, the Kentucky Lottery Corp. has had to halt a highly publicized game it was ready to play. Keno, based on a casino game of the same name, was to have gone on line Friday. Apparently the game was halted due to concern over the Lottery Corporations possible encouragement of casino-type gambling. "Anything that would encourage someone to sit around playing the game all day is something I would strongly oppose," said board member Al Brown. (The Lexington Herald-Leader) ity, attorneys for both sides met behind closed doors to agree on the settlement.

During the morning, testimony was heard from six witnesses, including two people who have similar federal lawsuits pending against the board.

First to testify was Freddie Hall, a McDowell school teacher, who alleged he had talked to Mary Hall at McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital concerning the 1988 fall school board election.

"I told Dr. Hall that Eddie Patton was a good political organizer and it would be hard to cut into the opposition's (Ricky Hamilton) support," Hall said. "I told her he could give us some problems. She said, 'Yes, Eddie Patton never was for me.' She said, 'Never since I've been a board member have I done anything to cause any problems with anyone's job but it looks like in Eddie Patton's case I'll have to make an exception.'"

Hall testified Dr. Hall went on to say, "I've already sent word by Larry Foster Stumbo that Eddie better get in line."

Under cross-examination attorney John Prather, representing the board, asked Hall if he thought Dr. Hall had been serious or just making that remark in jest.

"I believe she was very serious," Hall said.

Hall testified he was at the hospital at the time because his mother was terminally ill.

Next on the stand was Larry Foster Stumbo, the man witnesses testified took the message from Dr. Hall to Patton.

Stumbo, a school bus driver, first said he didn't remember the conversation, but later testified Dr. Hall had told him to go to Patton and tell him "things had better be right."

Ned Bush, health coordinator for the board, testified at one time he felt the board had attempted to penalize him for political reasons and gave testimony pertaining to a "Hager Connection."

Bush, along with co-food service operator Sharon Newsome and financial officer Russell Frazier, were slated for a demotion in an attempt to comply with state recommendations to reduce administrative staff. Bush testified that he felt those three were singled out in retaliation for their support of board member candidate Tommy Boyd in the 1988 election.

"Yes, I thought it was a political retaliation thing," Bush testified.

The day after the 1988 election, Bush testified several women at the central office building were wearing tee shirts with "Hager Connection" printed on the front.

"There was some celebrating (the result of the election)," Bush said.

"Because apparently Hager's supporters won."

Under cross-examination by William Francis, Bush said seven administrators were recommended to be demoted by the state, which included his job as health coordinator, as well as a position in the food service department. "I came out on the short end of the stick and had to have a hearing," Bush testified.

Others testifying were Joyce Reynolds Blackburn, a former teacher, and Rudolph Lewis, who formerly held a bus contract with the board.

Blackburn testified she felt she no longer held a position in the system for being outspoken against what she felt were concerns with the school system. Blackburn also has a federal lawsuit pending against the board.

Lewis, who also has a lawsuit pending, testified Hager called him before the 1988 election and asked him to "carry his precinct" in the Betsy Layne area for Boyd's opponent Brent Clark.

"He said, 'Rudolph, we need your help up there. I know you can carry that precinct.' I told him (Hager) that I'm friends with both sides and I'm just gonna vote," Lewis testified.

Lewis testified that Hager replied, "You remember I'm your superintendent and I will be for the next four years. If you don't obligate yourself to me, don't expect me to do the same for you."

Under cross-examination by F.C. Bryan, Lewis testified he had testified at a due process hearing for Frazier, Bush and Newsome and when asked to identify Hager he could not. Lewis said at that time, he did not know Hager personally.

When asked by Bryan how he knew it was Hager who called him, Lewis responded, "Cause Doc Adams called and said 'Here's Mr. Hager, I want you to talk to him.'"

Former Superintendent Ray Brackett also took the stand and testified on the condition of the transportation department during the period Patton oversaw the operation.

Brackett praised the work of Patton and Jesse Morton, who served as head of maintenance and purchasing. He testified there were no major problems in the department at that time.

Patton filed the lawsuit last August after he was not re-hired for the 89-90 school year as transportation director. He claimed in the suit his

First Amendment rights of freedom of speech and freedom of association had been violated and sought $1 million each from Hall and Hager individually, as well as reinstatement in his position and back wages. Patton claimed he was not re-hired because he opposed Dr. Hall in the 1988 school board race by supporting Ricky Hamilton for the board seat.

system;

- to provide current water flow tests;
- install a high/low dry pipe for the sprinkler system;
- install additional fire alarm pull stations at all required exits;
- install emergency exit lights in the second floor handicapped restrooms; and
- combustible materials should not be stored in the building until a certificate of occupancy is issued.

Francis said the fire truck on the school grounds is just precaution and it will remain on site until the water pressure problem can be corrected, either with the installation of another water pump or by constructing a water tower.

When asked why the site was selected for construction of the school if water problems existed, Francis said a problem with water pressure was not foreseen and a low input into the water system at this time of year had contributed to the water problems.

As for the other concerns parents have expressed, caution lights are expected to be installed at the school entrance within two weeks, according to the state transportation department in Frankfort.

In the meantime, increased patrols from the Kentucky State Police and the county sheriff's office will be conducted each morning and afternoon when students are arriving and leaving campus, KSP Captain Gary Rose and Chuck Hall of the sheriff's office said.

Floyd County Schools Transportation Director Earl Ousley said the transportation problems are being studied to see if extra buses are needed to serve the schools.

"We are running the same number of buses we did for both schools," Ousley said. "We looking to see if we need to add an extra run."

Furniture for the school is ordered, Francis said, but some of the current furniture will remain.

"Some desks were bought from the Jefferson County school system and it's good furniture," Francis said.

Just a precaution

This firetruck at the James A. Duff Elementary on Route 80 has caused some parents to be concerned over the water problems at the school. Floyd County Schools Director of Buildings and Grounds James F. Francis said the firetruck is being used as a precautionary measure until either a storage tank is built or enough water pressure can be achieved to activate the sprinkler system. heavily on OPEC oil, its allies do, and McConnell said "we have a stake with our trading partners being in good financial standing." He added that this was the first time in history that there has been "multinational cooperation against aggression" and it was a good sign, noting that other "tyrants might think twice about doing the same thing after seeing the negative response Iraq has gotten."

In response to a question of having other countries such as Japan and Germany build up their armies and helping out with manpower, the senator thought this was a bad idea saying, "remember what happened last time the Japanese and Germans had a strong army. This would not be a stabilizing development." He did agree that Japan and Germany should help out financially.

McConnell said this was a good time to "re-learn the lesson of the need for energy independence and how low oil prices have made us complacent. With our foreign oil reliance up to 50 percent we were vulnerable." He recommended that America start looking at Alaska again for more oil supplies, adding that oil spills need to be gotten under control and that more drilling would not environmentally hurt Alaska.

McConnell would not rule out a shooting war in Iraq and Kuwait, saying "there is no point in having the military there if we say in advance there won't be any shooting. We need to maintain the option to keep Saddam Hussein from sleeping well at night."

"Everyone, except the oil companies, is reacting properly to this crisis," the senator said, listing the contributions of other countries. "There is no oil shortage and these oil companies are price-gouging. This behavior needs to stop and stop now."

McConnell said he hoped that when Congress went into session next week they would be able to do something about this.

In response to a question of forgiving Egypt's debt to the U.S. in exchange for their help in this war, McConnell said, "it would have been much more expensive for us if Egypt didn't jump in and help. This is a small price to pay for cooperation," adding he would have to look into it more. He noted that foreign assistance was less than one percent of the U.S. budget and most of that is spent back in the U.S.

"Foreign aid is not the huge waste of dough that people think it is," McConnell said.

He said that military spending was not a waste of money, either.

"We've gotten a lot of good out of it (a large military force)...that was the absence of war. The Pentagon and defense spending is good business, too. For example, if we close Fort Knox and Fort Campbell that would be bad for Kentucky."

McConnell said he also supported proposed child abuse legislation and missing children programs, paternity and sick leave policies, veteran's issues, and education and flood control programs. He did note that there was slow but steady progress being made on the national deficit in that, as a percentage of the Gross National Product, it was declining.

River ride plugs plan

by Tim B. Preston
Staff Writer

Congressional candidate Will T. Scott of Pikeville embarked on a journey down the Levisa Fork of the Big Sandy River this week in an effort to promote a system of locks and dams on the waterway.

Scott and his wife Tracey boarded a 12-foot aluminum boat which they called "Opportunity" at Pikeville and plan to float to Cattlesburg to conduct a visual inspection of the waterway.

Although a small rubber supply boat developed a slow leak during the journey, the Scotts said Wednesday in Prestonsburg that the trip down river had been very successful at the halfway point.

Before hitting the water, Scott said that a system of locks and dams on the river would allow coal producers to lower transportation costs and allow truck drivers to make more money on shorter hauls.

Citing a 1946 study by the Army Corps of Engineers which said that the waterway from Pikeville to Cattlesburg could be made navigable using four locks, Scott said that the lock and dam system could be built at a cost of approximately $374,619. The river would have to be widened to 150 to 200 feet and maintain a channel nine feet deep.

A second proposed system of seven locks, three on the Levisa Fork, three on the Tug Fork and one on the Big Sandy, would make both the Levisa and Tug Forks of the river navigable from Pikeville and Nolan, West Virginia to Cattlesburg at a cost of approximately $657,230,000.

Scott explained that he felt the waterway transport systems would give Eastern Kentucky a price advantage over other coal producing areas marketing coal to European communities.

The Scotts began their river journey on Tuesday morning in Pikeville and expect to be in Cattlesburg by Friday.

"There has not been one place on this river that would present a problem," said Will Scott when he landed Wednesday in Prestonsburg for additional supplies. "Our share of the severance tax could pay for it all, so there would be no additional burden on the taxpayers."

son, father of Dennis Hutchinson, showed his dissatisfaction with the council's action by resigning from the fire department, the Red, White and Blue Committee and the Martin Area Community Recreation Organization.

Martin residents addressed the council at the beginning of the meeting, indicating that they found the condition of city streets littered and in "unacceptable condition."

Council members responded to the complaints by declaring October 8 through 12 Martin Cleanup Week.

Councilman Joe Simpson drew heavy criticism for a comment he made to the crowd during a discussion concerning activities for children in Martin. During the discussion, which centered on a proposed basketball goal to be placed somewhere in the city, Simpson said, "Why in the Hell don't you put them (the children) in a cage?" Audience members said that Simpson did not direct the comment at any one person and seemed to be addressing the entire crowd with the statement. No action was taken regarding the issue of youth activities in the city.

Before adjourning council members approved a motion to create a nine-foot wide walking track around the city baseball field and approved a motion to get property leases signed so that work may begin on a proposed park for the city.

All council members were present with the exception of councilman E.P. Grigsby Sr. The Martin City Council will meet again on Wednesday, October 3, at 7 pm.

Art group seeks entries from Appalachian artists

Images from the Mountains: A Traveling Exhibit of Appalachian Artists is an opportunity for established and emerging artists from the Appalachian counties of Kentucky to exhibit their work throughout the state. Sponsored by Appalshop, Inc., and the Appalachian Center of the University of Kentucky, this fourth annual exhibit is a juried exhibition of original paintings and works on paper.

The exhibit is open to any artist currently residing in eastern Kentucky defined as those 48 counties including and east of Lewis, Fleming, Bath, Montgomery, Clark, Madison, Garrard, Lincoln, Casey, Cumberland and Monroe. Artists may submit up to three entries for which there is no entry fee. Entries must be postmarked by Oct. 6.

For more information and/or to request an entry form, contact: Images Exhibit, Appalachian Center University of Kentucky, 641 S.

Limestone, Lexington, KY 40506, 257-4851.

The show will open at Appalshop in Whitesburg on Nov. 11 and then tour in Kentucky through December 1991.

We do Saturdays For You!

If you're like most people, there just doesn't seem like there are enough days in the week to get things done.

There's church on Sunday, school on Monday, those dirty clothes need washing on Tuesday, the PTA meeting is Wednesday, the boss is coming to dinner on Thursday, and Friday is for grocery shopping.

All that after your nine to five work schedule.

One of these days, you need to get your banking needs done. There's that new house you've had your eye on, or that new car. Maybe you want to open a checking or savings account.

Where do you find the time?
FAMILY FEDERAL SAVINGS BANK, THAT'S WHERE!

You don't have to wait until Monday to buy a house or take care of your other banking needs.

FAMILY FEDERAL IS OPEN SATURDAY with full service banking.

If you can't find the time for banking because your bank is closed on Saturday, come join the family...

Don't shoot the messenger

by Scott Perry

Covering the news is not often easy, it's not often kind and it's not often pleasant.

There are many occasions when we would rather be doing something else.

Covering the news, the issues, the concerns...whether we like them or not...is our job and it is the duty of this and every community newspaper.

We intend to fulfill our responsibilities.

We take no pleasure in reporting negative news nor do we reap any rewards by doing so.

We, like anyone else, suffer from the images and the crosses our area is forced to bear.

Certainly it would be easy for us to ignore our problems and print only "good" news. We could turn our backs to the wrongs and fill our pages with only the positives.

Perhaps then we would all feel safe and comfortable.

Don't worry, be happy.

But everyone isn't happy and this isn't a church newsletter.

This is the real world and this is a real newspaper.

Real newspapers don't make news, they print it.

So if the news is bad, don't blame the messenger, and if it's good don't give us the credit.

We're just the middleman, and we neither apologize nor accredit ourselves for performing our function.

TO A DEAR FRIEND...GOODBYE

This is definitely the toughest column I've ever had to write — so difficult I barely know where to begin.

When you lose a friend no words are able to accurately describe who you feel. Myself and the entire staff here at the Floyd County Times, including past employees, lost a friend yesterday morning — Frank Clark Jr. died at 3 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 6.

I write the obituaries in never had to write a harder we found out here at the and fell silent, not knowing the standard "it's not soon" and "that's awful."

Well you know someone NOT fair, Frank Clark was ever met in my life. I don't say that because he is no longer with us, I said that when he was here. I hated when he left the paper to work at Hazard. Sometimes I can't help thinking that if he had never left he wouldn't have gotten sick. I know that's not true, but...you know how it is.

In a way it did happen too soon. We all knew that Frank was very ill and the prognosis wasn't good, but he was so young and so full of life yet. His fiancée Linda's mom told me once that even after the operation and his failing condition he still fought. She said he was confident and positive about his recovery. Frank was a fighter. He never let you down. He always had a kind thing to say and rarely was in a bad mood (something very unique in this business, especially when working on deadline).

I remember the long Tuesday nights when Frank, Ed and I shared an office, someone would say something not particularly funny but for some reason we would all start laughing. I liked to compare it to getting the giggles in church, you know you shouldn't be laughing but every time you think about what was said you can't help it. Frank had a very contagious laugh. I miss those times and that laugh.

I always thought Linda was such a lucky girl to have captured Frank's heart, to see them together always made me kind of wistful. They made such a good couple, both light, happy people. I envied that relationship, they were so in love and every thing seemed so perfect...and then this happens. I do feel for Linda very deeply now. I try to think how I might feel if someone I was marrying died, I can't even imagine. God bless you Linda, I pray He helps you through this awful time.

Sometimes, when things get hard in your life you think you've hit the bottom. Something like this makes you realize that your life isn't so tough, others are having many more difficulties. I want to say something memorable. I want to write something that would make the hurt go away. But there is nothing. I wish I was a poet.

The hurt will pass in time, and I will hold good memories of Frank, as I'm sure many others will. I'm glad I knew him, even for only a short time. I will continue to remember him as he was, a vibrant, intelligent, good-humored, handsome, hard-working and gentle young man. He was loved and will be missed.

I've never been very good at handling death (who is?), and I find it hard to talk to people about it. It is one time in my life that I am at a loss for words. Calling up a couple people that knew and loved Frank to tell them the bad news was a very hard thing to do. I thought writing about it would be easier — it's not.

this newspaper and I've line than that above. When paper everyone just gasped what to say. A few mut-fair," "it happened too

I hated when he left the paper to work at Hazard. Sometimes I can't help thinking that if he had never left he wouldn't have gotten sick. I know that's not true, but...you know how it is.

Gun control is disinformation

Dear Editor,
A lot has been said about gun control, both for and against. The problem is that statements such as was said in the recent letter from Jim Brady to the Floyd County Times contained what has come to be called dis-information. Clearly 91 percent of American people do not favor gun control laws or handgun control, Inc. (The Brady Sponsors) or National Coalition to Ban Handguns would not exist. Another point the Brady's try to make is that a seven day waiting period on the purchase of handguns would have kept the president and others from being shot. The person who shot them had purchased the gun at least three months prior to the attack. Clearly a motivated mad-man can always find suitable weapons to carry out his deed.

It seems that a lot of politicians are either a victim of the dis-information or prime sponsors of the out rights and attempts to change the rights of honest people to accomplish what ever perceived sense of values the politician has. Clearly votes for gun controls are going to change the face of a lot of people on Capital Hill. Does Kentucky really need another 12 years of Reagan Legacy.

—Marion Taylor
Martin

Gun sales need controlled

Dear Editor,
It has been one year since Joseph Wesbecker walked into Standard Gravure and "got even" with his employer by shooting his co-workers. Carrying 1200 rounds of ammunition, an AK-47, two MAC-11 assault pistols, and six other handguns, Wesbecker killed eight people, wound 12 more and then shot himself to death. For most of us the memory of that horror has begun to fade. For others more personally touched by the tragedy the grief, the pain and the hardships go on. Ask the spouses and children of the people killed last September. Ask the wounded, like Mike Campbell who just got out of the hospital, again.

Kentuckians responded generously to the victims and their families (who are also victims, of course). But we cannot afford to go on responding to tragedies with charity after the fact. Last year emergency room care for gunshot wounds cost Americans $15 billion. Subsequent medical care and death and disability benefits cost even more. We paid for most of that with our taxes. The rest helped keep our insurance costs going up.

Until we deal with the millions of guns in our midst, the personal, emotional and financial costs will continue to increase. We are in the midst of the most violent year in American history. Some 23,000 of us will be shot to death in America this year, twice as many as died in Vietnam in any single year. Police officials say drug gangs using assault weapons account for much of the increase.

The time to deal with gun violence is before it happens, and the only effective way to deal with it is to persuade our legislators to pass the laws we need. Important legislation will be voted on very soon in the House of Representatives. Write or call your congressman now to tell him you support HR 4225 and 1154 to ban assault weapons and HR 467, the Brady Bill, to establish a waiting period for the purchase of handguns.

Polls say 80 percent of us want to ban assault weapons and 90 percent of us want a waiting period, but most of Kentucky's lawmakers vote the NRA line. Legislators listen to organized voters, and the NRA is well organized. Its members write letters and make phone calls; its PAC makes large donations. Until the rest of us get as well organized (it's not hard to write a post card or make a phone call), the number of guns and killings will continue to grow.

Good education in Floyd County

Dear Editor,
Moving from Floyd County to Danville was a rather traumatic experience for me and my family. However, I wanted to write to let you know of how much we appreciated Floyd County.

Much as been in the paper about the recent struggles in the area of Floyd County education; and I am sure that the image of Floyd County education has not been improved because of the publicity.

Let me say that when my two children, Ginny and Adam, entered the Danville Independent School System I was not sure how well they would do. However, their education at Clark Elementary and Prestonsburg's high school prepared them well.

I would like to thank the teachers and administrators who are responsible for my children's education.

I would also like to tell all those person in that community that Floyd County has some of the finest teachers we have encountered in our many moves.

It's time to speak up and speak out

Dear Editor,
Last week I had lunch alone in a Lexington restaurant and could not finish my sandwich. Oh the food was good, but while waiting for my order to arrive, I heard the following conversation behind me.

One man said, "I wonder what will be the outcome of that teacher's strike in Eastern Kentucky?" And another man answered, "Ah, my opinion is that those at the sixth grade level who can't make it should be sent into the mines, and the rest sent off to prep school!"

Right then and there I decided to write my first essay for a paper.

What will our children do if we as individuals, as parents, or as teachers refuse to stand up and voice our opinions, our ideas, or our outrage against such comments as these? How can we ever expect our children to take a stand against injustice if we, as responsible adults, do not speak out? We do not have to fight stereotypical attitudes so much from the large television corporations, it seems, as we do from our very own people.

And I wondered, how did this fellow know so much about the value of a prep school education? Could he have been the product of one? Is his comment an indictment against our public schools? If it is, then this is elitism at its very worst and all the more important that our teachers should stand up for better pay and have input into their taught curriculum. The time has come for elitism to go, whether in administration or in the classrooms. We want our children to inherit a better world, one of a Renaissance spirit, one where comments like I heard last week would never be uttered. There would be no need.

New flu vaccine works faster

by Robert Engleman
Scripps Howard News Service
Protecting yourself against the flu may become as easy as using a nasal spray, if University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine researchers can follow through on a new vaccine idea.

The researchers report they have developed a vaccine application using a live but weakened influenza virus that does more than help the body develop antibodies against the flu. At least in animal tests, it actually blocks the growth of the viruses that cause disease, the researchers report.

The "attenuated" vaccine virus is harmless to humans, they say.

That could mean that those vaccinated won't have to wait two weeks after being vaccinated to develop antibodies but could gain "almost instant protection," said Patricia Whitaker-Dowling, an associate professor at the school.

This quick protection could be critical in stopping epidemics, the researchers noted. Conventional vaccine is next to useless in such cases because people catch the flu bug before anti-influenza antibodies have time to build up and protect them.

Human trials, which could take several years, are now planned, the researchers said.

The Cabbage Patch

by Marie Harmon

I have just finished "putting up" our second patch of sweet corn. It turned out quite well. The later the garden products come in the more problems you have with insects. As we do not use insecticides we have to plant more than normal.

Sweet corn varieties differ a lot in quality and time of maturity. High temperatures and wet or dry seasons will affect the maturing time more than the types of seed planted.

A good time to plant corn for an early crop is between May 1 and May 10. This is the normal time for blackberries to bloom. The ground always warms up and there is no more frost at this time. Any garden crop can safely be planted during this time period.

Another good rule to follow is to plant corn about every two weeks to have a continued and steady crop coming in. It makes it easier to can and freeze small amounts at one time rather than a large amount that can over work you.

Corn should be planted 8-9 inches apart in the rows with at least a 10 inch balk. Fertilize with a complete fertilizer, say 10-10-10 or 12-12-12 if you can find it. Generally we have to take what the farm stores handle in this area. After the corn is up 6-8 inches is a good time to sidedress with ammonia nitrate and 0-0-20. A teaspoon of each beside the plants and then covered with soil is about right. Too little or too much is worse than none.

Corn should be gathered early in the morning while it is still cool and dew is on the plants. Heat will cause texture changes and sugar to turn to starch. If you can not freeze or can your harvested corn, always place it in the refrigerator right away. If you have more than the refrigerator will hold, place the balance in cold water.

There are several varieties of sweet corn on the market and recommended for our region. Gold Cross and Golden Cross Hybrid are the two most people plant here. Extra Early Sweet, Gold Queen, Silver Queen and Seneca Star are a few of the others.

I can remember when you asked for sweet corn seed and the clerk would say "yellow or white?" Now it's like reading a catalog.

After the ears are all harvested the plants should be tilled into the ground or cut off at the ground and taken out of the garden. This prevents insect infestation for next year's crop and a later crop can be planted in the corn patch.

Sweet corn can be frozen, canned, boiled, roasted, cut off, shaved off and "Gnawed" off. It is also used, in different forms, to add to molasses (corn is easier and cheaper to raise than cane), corn syrup, corn starch, coffee creamer, candies, cakes, pies and oleo to name a few. Then, too, it's first cousin, field corn, is used to make "Corn" or "White Lightening" a plant of many uses!

Can you think of a more versatile plant?

LEADING EDGE MODEL D2/LPS

FULL FEATURED, ENTRY-LEVEL 286 SYSTEM WITH AN EDGE
The Model D2/LPS is your key to having a true 16-bit performance system with a full array of features at a very affordable price. This compact, low-profile system was designed to expand with your growing needs by providing 1 MB of main memory which can be expanded to a full 4 MB on the motherboard, and further increased to a full 16 MB.

You'll find that the D2/LPS is a system that can grow with you due to its power and expansion capability.

A WARRANTY WITH AN EDGE.

The Leading Edge Model D2/LPS also comes with one of the industry's strongest warranties: 20 months. Proof that with Leading Edge, a low-end price doesn't come at the expense of quality.

THE NEW EDGE OF LEADING EDGE.

Leading Edge, which created and led the PC-compatible market, is now part of the $22-billion Daewoo Corporation, a diversified manufacturing leader. Backed by Daewoo's strong financial and manufacturing resources, Leading Edge is positioned to increase its marketing strength and provide a complete line of fully featured industry-standard computer systems at affordable prices.

The D2/LPS can operate at speeds of either 8 MHz or 12 MHz, which allows you to choose between higher throughput and speed-sensitive software. And you can switch speeds from the keyboard without returning to DOS. The system has other features you would usually expect to find in more expensive systems, such as integrated IDE and analog VGA circuitry, three 16-bit expansion slots, support for up to three 3.5" drive bays, and serial, parallel and mouse ports.

Keeping PACE

by Carl Lafferty

This week the COPY command will be discussed, but first we will want to know why we should copy our files. The files that you have created are on your disk and they will not be going anywhere, right? WRONG!! It is possible that you could drop your disk in the mud, get it too close to a magnet or simply have a hard disk or floppy disk go bad. All of which will cause you to lose your data. One measure you can take against these types of disasters is to copy your files onto other disks.

The COPY command is a very powerful DOS command. With this tool you can make a copy of your file that is just as good as your original file. You may create files out of a group of files or even rename files as you copy them to another disk. I will explain how to do an exact copy and how to rename during a copy in this article. For purpose of these examples, I will assume a hard disk (C:) and one floppy disk (A:).

Suppose you have a word processor and have been typing a letter for your boss and saving it on drive C: in a subdirectory named C:/LETTERS. Your boss then wants it copied to a disk so that it can be taken home and reviewed on that computer. You can make a copy provided that you have a formatted diskette of the proper size (how to format a disk is discussed in a previous article).

Place the disk in drive A: and type the following command. COPY C:/LETTERS/LET1.DOC A: and press the ENTER key. Now the hard drive will spin for a moment and the floppy will activate for a moment and the file will be copied to drive A:. Now suppose that the boss wants the file copied but wants it named LETTER1.DOC rather than LET1.DOC (this is the boss we are talking about). You would type the command COPY C:/LETTERS/LET1.DOC A: LETTER1.DOC and press the ENTER key. This will copy the file on to the diskette while giving it a new name only on the diskette in A:. Your original file is still called LET1.DOC and is in the subdirectory C:/LETTERS.

With this tool you are able to prevent data loss by making frequent copies of your old documents so that if the unfortunate should happen you will be prepared. Next week we will discuss a better means of doing a backup of a hard drive using only commands that come with DOS.

If you want to know more about the COPY command, attend the next PACE Computer Users Group on Sept. 18 at 7 p.m. at the Floyd County Library.

FRANK CLARK
June 23, 1963 to September 6, 1990

"Lord, sometimes we don't understand why things happen as they do. But Lord, we pray, that you will help us to accept it as your will in the passing of a dear friend. We know that the scriptures teaches us that all things work together for good to them that love God. Lord, this tells us that even the bad things can work for our good. Help us to accept that promise in the passing of our good friend, Frank. He was a gentle person. Full of life and with plans for the future. Now, Lord you have called him home to a land where there will never be anymore sad good-byes. There will be no more sufferings, pain or heartache for the former things will have passed away. Grant us the grace we need at this hour to accept this as thy plan. In Jesus Name, Amen"

Health Watch

What to do when frozen food isn't

By Robert Engelman
Scripps Howard News Service

In much of the United States, violent thunderstorms this summer have left hundreds of thousands of people without electricity for hours or even days at a time.

Doing without house lights and air conditioning is bad enough. What's worse is trying to safe the food in the refrigerator—and figuring out, as time passes, what's safe to eat and what's a total loss.

This no trivial matter. It doesn't take long for an unpowered refrigerator to lose its cool. And it doesn't take long for bacteria normally held in check by the cold to proliferate in thawing and warming food. Most food safety experts view such contamination as a far more potent health threat than artificial chemicals in food.

Yet the fresh and frozen food in a well-stocked refrigerator may have cost $100 or more. It hurts to throw away steaks and cartons of premium ice cream on the fear, perhaps unfounded, that they aren't safe to eat.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture suggests two sensible approaches to food safety during and just after a power outage. One is to prolong cold temperatures in the refrigerator as long as possible. The other is to follow some basic guidelines for knowing when food is too far gone to eat.

For the first, open the refrigerator and freezer doors as little as possible. Temperatures in a freezer, especially a free-standing one, can stay below freezing for up to a day or so—if it's full and rarely opened. If the freezer isn't full, group frozen foods together for an "igloo effect."

Refrigerated foods will only keep a few hours before being spoiled. If possible, transfer dairy products, meats and leftovers to the freezer.

If you know the power is going to be off a long time, try to find dry ice, which utilities sometimes offer communities that have lost electric power. Several dozen pounds of dry ice can keep a large freezer going for three or four days, the USDA says.

Frozen or refrigerated food such as ice cream, meat, poultry and fish should be thrown away once it's thawed out thoroughly and has been above 40 degrees Fahrenheit for more than two hours.

If the power comes back on and these foods still feel partially frozen—if they still have ice crystals, for example—they can be refrozen. Hard cheeses, vegetables (fresh or cooked) and vegetable juices may last for up to six hours once thawed and above 40 degrees, if quality isn't obviously affected.

Salad dressing, mayonnaise, tartar sauce and horseradish can last up to eight hours at 50 degrees, the USDA says.

Finally, it's not a good idea to taste the food to see if it's still good. You probably can't tell by the taste, but your stomach may provide an unwelcome verdict in short order.

UK College of Medicine receives $150,000 grant from Foundation

A call for reform of medical education by leading medical educators, students and expert observers has prompted the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation to award the University of Kentucky College of Medicine nearly $150,000. The UK College of Medicine was chosen as one of 12 medical schools to participate in the Foundation's initiative, "Preparing Physicians for the Future: A Program in Medical Education." In addition to Kentucky, grants were awarded to Yale, Johns Hopkins, Case Western Reserve, Brown and Columbia universities, and the universities of Chicago, Rochester, Nebraska, New Mexico, Oregon and Hawaii. Approximately $1.8 million was awarded nationwide for the first phase of the project.

"We are in excellent company. The schools that were selected for the grant are considered some of the most outstanding schools in the country and we appreciate being included in that group," said Dr. Emery A. Wilson, dean, UK College of Medicine. "However, this grant does more than just provide us with national recognition. It allows us to concentrate on new methodologies and educational techniques that hopefully will result in a more sophisticated curriculum for medical students."

During the initial stage of the program, each of the 12 schools chosen will use the next 18 months as a planning period to develop a new curriculum. A second phase of this program is planned for 1992 in which up to eight of the 12 schools may receive further funding for implementing their plans.

"It is important to understand that the initial phase of this program is a developmental process, not an implementation process," said Wilson. "At no time during this phase, will we implement any of the changes under discussion into our present curriculum. We will use this time, under the direction of an appointed steering committee, to work closely with all faculty in an effort to design a more effective curriculum. The proposed curriculum will be the result of a collective effort between faculty, department chairs and administrators."

According to Dr. Phyllis Nash, US associate professor of behavioral science and director of UK's project, the proposed reform has resulted for a number of reasons. "With the continuous development of new medical technology and an expansion in knowledge, there has been a vast increase in the amount of material presented to students during their medical education. It is important for students to be able to manage this explosion of knowledge. For example, being able to use data bases will help physicians manage information," Nash said. "Fifty years ago students could retain in their memories most all there was to learn. Today, that is impossible. For example, many medical procedures have thousands of pages of information available on the subjects. It is not possible to memorize all the information. So, we must decide what the critical information is to memorize. And then, we must teach students ways to access the wealth of information that exists, and ways to obtain the information that is being discovered daily."

One issue UK will examine is the sequence in which medical subjects should be presented. Currently, most medical schools' curriculum are designed to introduce first- and second-year students to the basic sciences, such as anatomy, biochemistry and pharmacology. During the third and fourth year, curricula consists of clinical subjects such as internal medicine, surgery, pediatrics, and obstetrics and gynecology. Many medical educators believe there should be more interaction between the basic and clinical sciences throughout the four years of medical school. This would allow students to better apply information to clinical care.

UK College of Medicine associate dean for academic affairs, Dr. H. David Wilson, believes that several factors led to the selection of UK. "We have all the tools to do the job," he said. "We have a gifted and sensitive faculty. We have an excellent and highly selected student body. I think the Foundation was impressed with this combination of a dynamic leadership and altruistic student body. I also think they were impressed that we have taken a lead already by introducing several innovative changes into our curriculum."

In 1989, the College became the first medical school in the country to introduce an accelerated family practice program. The program, designed to recruit more family physicians, allows students to complete their medical education and training in six years, instead of the usual seven. In addition, the College was the first to provide a problem based learning curriculum during the junior surgical clerkship in the clinical years without having a problem based curriculum during the pre-clinical study years. The concept allows students to problem solve through interaction, rather than by lecture.

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation was established as a national philanthropy in 1972. Since then, it has awarded more than $1 billion in grants to improve healthcare in the United States.

Technology Conference helps local districts prepare for the future

The Kentucky School Boards Association's first annual Technology Conference of the '90s will be held in Lexington Sept. 28-30 at the Hyatt Regency and Radisson.

This conference, in the planning stages for over a year, is especially important due to the emphasis on technology in education in the Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA) of 1990.

"Technology is of critical importance to school board members and educators and will continue to be as they help prepare students to live and work in the 21st century," said David Keller, KSBA executive director.

Several nationally-known speakers as well as state and local technology experts will be on the program. Demonstrations and exhibits will give participants a firsthand look at the latest applications of technology.

Speaking at the opening session on Friday, Sept. 28, 7-9 p.m. in the Patterson Ballroom, Hyatt Regency, will be William E. Lord, vice president, ABC News InterActive. He formerly served as executive producer of ABC's acclaimed "Nightline" news program with anchorman Ted Koppel. Lord will speak on "Technology — Why Not Use It."

Saturday morning's program will include several breakout sessions on such topics as Interactive Video, technology and training as partners in school restructuring and KET's Star Channels/Distance Learning.

The Saturday luncheon speaker (11:30 a.m. - 1 p.m.) is Dr. Jim Kern, an educator, writer and speaker who will discuss "The Challenge of Change" in the Patterson Ballroom, Hyatt Regency.

Afternoon breakout sessions are scheduled from 1:30 - 2:45 p.m. and 3-4:15 p.m. Among the speakers will be James Mecklenburger, director, Institute for the Transfer of Technology to Education. His topic is "It's Time to Snap Out of the Technology Coma."

Other afternoon sessions include: "Technology In and Around the Classrooms," the district-wide computer system in Fort Thomas schools; "Using Technology for the Whole Language" and "Assessing Your Technology Needs."

The Sunday morning session will include breakout session for 9-10:15 a.m. Additional topics include "Clark County Uses Technology to Teach Writing" and "Technology and School Policy." Other topics will be repeated from Saturday's sessions.

Tom Snyder, a software developer, will address the Sunday Brunch session from 10:30 a.m. - noon in the Patterson Ballroom, Hyatt Regency Hotel. He will talk about how important the teacher's role is in the success of a technology program.

Ground School set for PCC

A 12-week course to prepare participants for the FAA written examination for the private pilot license is being offered by Prestonsburg Community College. Taught by Larry Short, the course will meet Mondays beginning Sept. 17 and will continue through Dec. 3. An organizational meeting will be held from 6:30-9:30 p.m., Monday, Sept. 17 in room J102 in the Johnson Building on PCC's Prestonsburg campus. Subsequent meetings will be held at Comb's Airport. A minimum of 6 participants is necessary for the class to be taught. For more information or to register for the class, call PCC's Office of Continuing Education and Community Services, 886-3863, ext. 278.

Dance Classes to begin at PCC

The fall session of dance classes for children and adults begins Monday, Sept. 10 at Prestonsburg Community College. According to instructor Virginia Crawford, classes on Mondays will include Pre-Ballet: Creative Movement for children 4 and 5 years old; Ballet for Children for 6, 7 and 8 year olds; Pre-Teen Ballet for 9, 10 and 11 year olds; and a new class for teens and adults in Modern Dance. Thursday classes will include Children's Tap for 6, 7 and 8 year olds, as well as Jazz and Ballet for teens and adults. Advanced Tap will be taught by Linda Frances on Wednesday evenings. New and returning students may enroll any time this week and next by calling the Office of Continuing Education and Community Services, 886-3863, ext. 278, or by stopping in room J102 in the Johnson Building.

In addition to classes in Prestonsburg, classes will be offered in Paintsville beginning later this month. Persons interested in taking classes in Paintsville should call the above number.

Lice—those minute creatures

by Patricia A. Leatham
Consumer Affairs Officer
Food and Drug Administration

With your young scholars going back to school, it's time to be on the lookout for those minute creatures that are guaranteed to make them scratch, and scratch again — cooties. Cooties, or lice, have been around for a very long time and were prevalent in Medieval England. However, it's no trick to dislodge them if you're determined.

Head lice, officially called Pediculus humanus capitis, represent one of the most common contact diseases among school aged children. According to the Non-prescription Drug Manufacturers Association as many as 12 million folks, most of them school children, are infested each year. This often results in their missing precious school days. American Blacks make up less than 1 percent of these cases.

Often people are embarrassed and horrified at the thought of lice because of old beliefs that lice were caused by poor sanitation conditions and poor personal hygiene. However, these critters are no respecter of person, infesting rich and poor from some of the cleanest schools and homes.

Head lice are typically transmitted among children at school or at play from the sharing of hats, combs, pillows and other objects. Parents should stress the importance of children not sharing these items.

Head lice are difficult to spot with the naked eye. They deposit their eggs, or nits, on the hair shafts close to the scalp or skin. The whitish sacs may be identified with the aid of a magnifying glass.

Lice maintain themselves by sucking the blood of the victim. This causes an intense itch. Thus, your child's unusually vigorous scratching can be a definite signal that something is wrong. Treatment is simply a matter of using an effective prescription or non-prescription product and making sure you follow the directions.

There are several products for lice treatment. Products containing pyrethrins with piperonyl butoxide are available without prescriptions. Parents can give the treatment, which normally consists of applying shampoo to dry hair and scalp or to any other infested area until entirely wet. Do not use an eyelash or eyebrow! Shampoo should remain on area for approximately 10 minutes but no longer. Then wash thoroughly with warm water, soap or a regular shampoo. Dead lice and eggs should be removed with the special nit comb provided. Most treatments call for repeating the application in 7 to 10 days to kill newly hatched lice. Do not exceed two consecutive applications within 24 hours.

Since infestations are spread by contact, each family member should be examined and treated if necessary. Contaminated hats, coats and other clothing should be dry cleaned or boiled.

Welcome Back Dinner at Pikeville College

Pikeville College President William H. Owens donned his apron on Monday, August 27 for a Welcome Back Dinner for returning students. The students were served at the restaurant-style meal by about 20 faculty and staff of the college, including President Owens. The dinner was followed by a comedy who, Blizzard of Bucks, from New York.

Welding offers many job opportunities

The major objective of the welding program at Mayo State Vocational Technical School is to prepare students for employment in the field of welding technology.

The philosophy of the welding program is to provide maximum welding training at a minimum cost to the student and to provide training that prepares students for employment upon satisfactory course completion.

Students in the welding program learn oxygen-acetylene welding; oxygen-acetylene cutting (flame); plasma cutting; shielded metal arc, gas tungsten arc, mig and pipe welding; layout, blueprint reading and mathematics for welders; as well as electrode selections. Students learn to identify and use various types of welding equipment and electrodes, characteristics of welding flame and techniques used to fabricate and assemble metal parts. The instruction is based on the study of the welding industry, with particular emphasis on requirements of the commercial metal fabricating shop.

Individuals completing the welding program have several job options in industry. They can qualify to work in the automotive, manufacturing, appliance, construction, mining and farming industries or may choose self-employment. Welders are employed in establishments which produce fabricated metal products, primary metals, machinery and transportation equipment, construction firms and various repair services. Upon completion of the program, students may take the state welding certification test.

The major purpose of welding skill training is to teach the welding techniques and manipulative skills required for each major welding process found in industry today.

For more information about the welding program or other programs offered at Mayo, call 789-5321 or write Mayo State Vocational Technical School, 513 Third Street, Paintsville, KY 41240.

Mayo accepting applications for evening classes

Mayo State Vocational School is offering a number of evening classes during the 1990 fall semester.

Courses offered are Auto Body Repair, Office Technology, Welding, Data Processing and Woodworking. Each course is 60 clock hours in length and the cost for all courses except welding is $75. Persons enrolling in the welding program will pay $120.

The Nursing Department is planning training in IV Therapy for LPN's and Nursing Assistant. Dates, costs and other details are being worked out at this time.

An organizational meeting will be held in the Mayo auditorium at 6 p.m. on Monday, Sept. 24. Classes (except those in the Nursing Department) will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 25 at 6 p.m.

Anyone interested in enrolling in one of these classes should apply at the office, in person or by phone, or be present at the organizational meeting. Those persons who have preregistered will be given priority.

For further information, call Mayo State Vocational Technical School at 789-5321

It's never too late to go back to college

Growing numbers of people are finding that it's never too late to get their college degree. According to a recent report, about six million students 23 or older are enrolled in college the majority of them pursuing an undergraduate degree. These older, "nontraditional" students make up a considerable 45 percent of current enrollments at two- and four-year colleges, says the Student Loan Marketing Association (Sallie Mae).

The reasons for this college boom among the non-traditional set are many, according to Sallie Mae: to keep up with tougher career demands — and tougher competition in the job market; to develop the credentials to change careers altogether; to complete a degree program abandoned earlier; and to undertake college courses for self-fulfillment.

"While many such students attend school part-time as they collect their regular paychecks, they may in fact, need — and qualify for — financial aid," says Sallie Mae Senior Vice President Dennis A. Kernahan. "If you're attending or planning to attend college and need additional financial resources, check with your school's financial aid administrator who will help you plan your financing program and outline various options available to you."

Kernahan suggests that older students bear the following in mind when discussing financial aid options:

- to be eligible for federal financial aid — including grants, college work-study and loans — students must be enrolled in school at least half-time, which generally amounts to at least six semester or quarter hours. Many older students take fewer courses one time than do students of traditional college age.

— If you still have guaranteed student loans outstanding from your prior coursework, and are repaying those loans, you may be eligible to defer payment on them. Similarly, if you have borrowed under the supplemental PLUS loan program to help send your own children to school, those payments also may be deferred while you are in school at least half time. Be sure, however, to keep making timely payments until you have obtained the lender's approval for deferment.

— If you take out a loan, make sure that you pay careful attention to your ability to repay it. For example, if you're making a career change, make sure that the new career (which may not pay more than your current job) can support loan payments, together with any other payment obligations you already have, or are planning to incur, such as home mortgage, car payment, even helping send your own children through college.

— Investigate carefully the private loan plans available, too, which can provide supplemental or alternative financing to the federally-sponsored loan programs. While these plans typically have higher interest rates than the federally-sponsored programs, many of them have fewer need requirements.

— Finally, shop carefully for your student financial aid programs.

Guidance Counselor workshop scheduled

A workshop for guidance counselors will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 26 at Morehead State University and on Thursday, Sept. 27 at Hazard Community College, both sessions from 12:30 - 4 p.m. The workshop will focus on using "Futures: Your Guide to Life After High School."

This unique publication will be placed in every counselor's office and every school library in early October by Kentucky's rural electric cooperatives, the corporate sponsor of this program.

The author of this first-of-its-kind compendium of career and postsecondary education information, Martha Helen Smith, will be part of the training team. For more information contact Norman Snider at the Council on Higher Education, (502) 564-3553.

UK appoints new director

The University of Kentucky Board of Trustees has named Tim Burcham director of community college development, a new position.

Burcham, former associate director of development for the UK Albert B. Chandler Medical Center, said he will work to recognize and improve development efforts at UK's 14 community colleges.

"Our intent is to promote private giving to the UK Community College System and to recognize what's going on in philanthropy in areas where community colleges are located," said Burcham, who has worked for UK since 1978.

Burcham said there are many reasons for the support given to community colleges, including their roles in economic development efforts. The colleges provide a job-ready work force and foster an attitude of lifelong learning, he said.

Community colleges also provide increased access to higher education and promote collaborative partnerships between the college and the community, he said.

Burcham said his first task will be to assess the development efforts already in place at many community colleges and to develop a plan for the entire system.

Anyone interested in donating to a community college or in learning more about development efforts may call 257-5103.

HOW I REMEMBER FRANK CLARK

Today, Thursday, September 6, when I walked into my office the first question asked of me was "had I heard?" The question of course was, had I heard about the death of Frank Clark, a former reporter here at The Floyd County Times.

Frank and I shared an office together while he worked here at the newspaper. I will always remember him for his humor, which few people have today. He was always considerate of other people and always had a smile for those around him. He had plans to be married this past August until discovery of his illness. The wedding plans were put on hold.

Frank often told me of his ambitions to get in the economical development field that he so vigorously studied for. However, he enjoyed the field of journalism as well. Frank loved to go out and investigate stories that would come into the newspaper office. His first real big story was coverage locally of the community's response to the CBS program "48 Hours", which gave such a distorted picture of our area. Frank did an outstanding job of reporting on the program.

Frank made many friends and when he left the paper to go to work at the Hazard Community College, the Floyd County Times lost a first-rate person and an outstanding employee.

Frank is gone now. But he will never be forgotten. His smiles, thoughtfulness and sincerity will always remain in my memory of a fellow worker who never quit, even up to the end.

BELFRY TO PLAY IN HALL OF FAME TOURNEY

The Kentucky High School Athletic Association announced Wednesday the pairings for the upcoming KHSAA Hall of Fame basketball tournament to be played at the University of Kentucky's Memorial Coliseum in Lexington.

Graves County will face defending state champion Fairdale in the opening game scheduled for December 8.

In game two, defending 15th Regional champion, Belfry will face Lexington Tates Creek. Times for the tournament are to be announced at a later date.

The tournament, normally played in January, has been moved to the December date to act as a kick off for the high school basketball season.

Belfry will once again be a big favorite to repeat as champions of the 15th Region returning most of last year's squad.

BRAVES RETURNING AS AMERICA'S TEAM

How often do you see it happen? The season is coming to a close and a team that has been buried in the cellar of the standings suddenly arises to become the most improved team in the league.

When I lived in Warsaw, Indiana, the Chicago Bears was the team of the area. How often I heard the television sports announcer say after the Bears had won three straight, they were the most improved team in the league — after already being eliminated from post-season play. The indication from that point on was the Bears was the team that would have to be contended with the following year which never proved to be so.

Along come the Atlanta Braves, also buried in the National League West Division and starting to play the best baseball of anyone in the National League. As of this writing, winners of five straight. Winners over the contenders for the title, Cincinnati, two games, and the Los Angeles Dodgers, Wednesday night.

Does this mean then that the Atlanta Braves will be the team to beat in 1991? Are they the most improved team in the National League?

Well, they certainly are a better team than what they started out being. What made the difference? How can a team that trades away a player the caliber of Dale Murphy, improve? The questions may be hard to answer but the facts are there to prove they have played better baseball. After Murphy was traded to Philadelphia, Dave Justice was moved from first base back to the outfield, his original position. Justice responded with "rookie of the year" numbers. Before Murphy left, Justice had seven homers. Wednesday night, Justice, against the Dodgers belted his 23rd. He destroyed the Reds at Atlanta with his homerun power, hitting two in one game.

But, Justice is not the only reason for the resurgence of the Braves. Ron Gant, a steal for the Braves this season, hit his 27th against Tommy Lasorda's ball team.

What team deserves it more than Tommy? Jeff Blouser has made a major contribution to the Braves ball club as well as Jim Presley. Are the Braves the team to beat in 1991? I think not, even though they could be, simply because they need pitching, starters and relief, worse than any other National League club. They could trade for some pitchers in the off season, but who have they got to trade that anyone would want? You can't trade Justice, he will be the National League's Rookie of the Year. Neither can they do without Presley or Gant, they are the players who make the Braves tick. The Braves traded Murphy and got Jeff Parrett, a solid relief man in the bullpen. That is a step in the right direction. The Braves farm system is as bad off for pitching as the parent club.

I see the Braves going into the free agent well this winter and Ted Turner will spend more than millions for some front pitching. If that happens then the Braves will definitely be the team to beat in 1991.

Trojans Get First Road Test Tonight At Hazard

Coach Roger Johnson's Wheelwright Trojans will get their first road test when they take a trip Friday into Perry County to face the Hazard Bulldogs. Wheelwright has played their first three games at Brackett Field and are currently 1-2 on the season.

The Hazard Bulldogs will be without the services of Anthony Sharpey this year as the speedster graduated last season. The Bulldogs challenged the Paintsville Tigers for the District 2 championship last year. The title game went down to the next to the last game last year with the Tigers coming out with a 48-16 victory.

Hazard
Record: 1-2
Friday: Paris 21-6
Next:

Hazard, unlike Wheelwright, played their first three games on the road and also owns a 1-2 record. The Bulldogs dropped a 40-20 opening contest to state power Cumberland. Hazard defeated Knott County Central in a barn burner, where defense was not the name of the game, 44-42. Last Friday the Bulldogs fell to Paris 21-6, again on the road.

Wheelwright comes into tonight's contest, after dropping a 43-0 game to the Paintsville Tigers. Earlier Wheelwright fell to Fairview 18-8 in a heartbreaking loss that saw the Trojans cough up the football five times. Wheelwright has power and speed in their backfield and experience at the quarterback spot. Speed:

Arnold Adams. The fleet-footed running back has averaged 60-plus yards in his team's three games. Power: Mike Justice. Justice is a strong kid who will take the football at the defense and tries to move the defender out of the way. But there's more. Ryan Johnson, who is hard to catch up with in a break away, also provides some speed to the Trojans' backfield. Experience: Steven Johnson can run a team from the quarterback spot. A four-year starter for the Trojans, Johnson can toss the ball and has a dandy target in Bryan Rhea.

Defensively, it is James Branham on the defensive line for the Trojans. The 6-0, 190-pound tackle has been piling up the hits in the Trojans' first three games. He has had 18 first hits. Branham along with Rhea have been the leaders on defense. Rhea also had 16 tackles for the three contests the Trojans have played. The weakness on the Trojans' team seems to lie in the mental mistakes they make and not protecting the football.

Many have given the game to the Bulldogs, but don't count out Coach Johnson's Trojans. As Coach Cooksey of Fairview put it, "this is the best Wheelwright team I have seen for some time." The Trojans are capable of winning the big ones.

Game time is 8 p.m. at Hazard.

Stopping Osborne will be priority for Allen Central win over Hornets

For the second week in a row the Allen Central Rebels will have to face the Hornets. Except this group of Hornets hail from Magoffin County where Chuke Williams has his chargers picking up where they left off last year. Last Friday night the Rebels played the Hornets, except they were from Phelps. The Rebels fell to the Pike County team 25-0.

Coach Dewey Jamerson will be hoping for better results against a different group of Hornets. However, this group will be just as tough as last week's.

Brian Osborne will lead the Magoffin County running game as the fullback carried 23 times for 147-yards rushing against Betsy Layne last Saturday in the Founders Day Bowl. The Hornets as a team amassed 255-yards total offense against Betsy Layne.

A key to an Allen Central victory will rest with the Rebels' defense and the ability to stop the fleet-footed Osborne. Osborne scored both touchdowns for Magoffin County and seems to be the key to the Hornets' scheme of things. Another out of the Hornets backfield to watch will be John Rodriguez. Rodriguez seems to carry only when there is a third down and short yardage.

Terry Traylor, Hornet quarterback, does not pass all that much, getting just 18-yards against Betsy Layne via the passing route. Some 237-yards of the total offense for the Hornets was on the ground.

The Rebels will probably come back with Brett Meadows as the signal-caller against Magoffin County. Meadows filled in for the injured B.J. Aldrich, who is still out with an injured shoulder. Although Meadows did not complete any passes he did a good job calling the game.

The Rebels will have to be mean on defense in order to stop Osborne, who seems to like going up the middle. Osborne is a clone of Danny Estep of Phelps who ran through the Rebels' defense for 168-yards last Friday night. The Rebels will have to "pinch" in the middle on "D" and not allow him his second and third efforts. Allen Central has a good defensive team that looked good the first half against Phelps. This will be another big test for the Rebels' defense.

While the Rebels will have to watch Osborne, the Hornets will need to keep their eye on Tommy Gibson, 6-0, 210, halfback. Gibson had a good game against Phelps, picking up 80-yards for the Rebels. Gibson is a strong power runner and the Hornets will have to watch the middle. Todd Lucas is improving with each game for Allen Central. The 5-10, 160-pound halfback ran for 52-yards on 10 carries against Phelps.

This should be a good football game. The Hornets, however, do have several players out with injuries. The Rebels have Aldrich out and he will be out approximately three more weeks.

So as we enter week four of the high school football season, it will be the Hornets and Rebels at 8 p.m. tonight at the Don Daniels Athletic Complex at Eastern. The game can be heard over radio station WRLV-FM, 97.3 a 6,000 watt station that reaches all of Floyd County.

Blackcats will try and forget Whitesburg game against JC

Johnson Central coach Steve Trimble will bring his Golden Eagles into town tonight to face a team that is trying to forget last Friday night's game against Whitesburg and get started off, again, on the right foot. It will be the Golden Eagles and Prestonsburg tonight in a non-district match-up. Last year the Blackcats handled the Golden Eagles 7-0 at Johnson Central. In the game before, Central's starting quarterback Mitchell Johnson broke his ankle in a game against the Betsy Layne Bobcats and was unable to call the signals against the Blackcats.

The Golden Eagles, 0-3, will be looking for their first win of the season as they dropped the previous three games by rather large margins. Anderson County defeated the Eagles 47-12 in the Big Sandy Bowl at Paintsville to open the season. In their second game, Estill County rolled past the Eagles 41-14 and M.C. Napier won last Friday's contest 14-6 over Johnson Central.

Johnson Central is a young team with only two starters returning from last year — Johnson and Chris Casey. The Eagles will run out of the wishbone on offense with Larry Stambaugh, Gary Senters and Herb Stapleton being the top three in the Eagles backfield. The Eagles can go deep in the backfield this season with such players as Kelton Howard, Mike Price, and Casey and James Tackett getting the calls. Guthrie Preston and Travis Tackett will be the ends.

Defensively, the Eagles will be anchored with big man Paris McCarty, 6-7, 275-pounds. Pernell Howard will play the nose guard spot while Tackett and Curtis Dorton will be at the defensive end positions.

Prestonsburg, 1-1, stung by the Yellowjackets last Friday night, will rebound. They are a solid ball club that can overcome a 30-0 setback. The Eagles may feel the wrath of the Blackcats' defense that played the Yellowjackets tough for three quarters. But, as many coaches will tell you, when the defense has to play on the field a lot they get tired, and that held true in the Prestonsburg/Whitesburg game.

If not because the Blackcats have a good defensive team will the team rebound, then try adding one coach who knows how to get his team ready for a game. Bill Letton is perhaps the best with that ability.

Even though the score was somewhat lopsided, the game was closer than the final score indicated. The two teams fought to a 0-0 tie in the first half. The Blackcats could have gone to the locker room with a lead had Worth McGuire's touchdown not been nullified. Interceptions hurt the Blackcats also.

The Yellowjackets scored mostly in the final quarter, going against a tired defense. However, the Blackcats are a good defensive team and the Eagles will have to do more than run the football against Prestonsburg. It might be added that Mitchell

It looks like Mike Burke has picked up where he left off last year. He currently holds first place in our first week of picks. However, last place holder Kim Frasure vows to come out of the basement this time around and deposit someone else in there. Our brave prognosticators see Kentucky winning their second game and Prestonsburg winning on the local level. Cleveland and Cincinnati get the nods as winners from the forecasters on the professional level. So stay tuned!

Young Johns Creek to test waters against winless Betsy Layne Bobcats

The Johns Creek Bearcats of coach Jim Lamb will travel to Betsy Layne tonight to provide the Bobcats some opposition for their homecoming game. The Bobcats will be celebrating homecoming early this year, hoping to beat the bad weather that plagued so many in the previous year.

For the Bearcats, 0-2, Coach Lamb will be fielding one of his youngest teams in quite awhile. Johns Creek will have 19 freshmen among 29 players on the team. According to Coach Lamb, the younger players are going have to step in and contribute immediately. A freshman that Coach Lamb is expecting a lot out of is Hamilton Harris. Harris has good speed and good ball sense according to his coach.

The backfield will see the trio of Jason Taylor at quarterback, Jerry Hunt will fill the fullback position while John Thompson will be running in the halfback spot. Thompson is versatile and can play any position in the backfield for Coach Lamb's team.

The Bearcats will be a 50/50 ball club. They will pass as well as run the ball. Gone from last year's 3-6 team will be Phillip Birchfield, who was Johns Creek's top receiver last year. The Bearcats passed for over 1,200 yards last season but, along with Birchfield, two other top receivers are missing. Johns Creek fell to Sheldon Clark in their opener 27-6. Elkhorn City dropped the Bearcats 21-6 last Friday night at Johns Creek.

Betsy Layne has had problems offensively in their first three outings. The inability of the Bobcats to move the ball has caused the defense to have to play on the field longer. Betsy Layne has a prize runner in Bobby Wise. Wise collected 68-yards on eight carries against Magoffin County Saturday afternoon.

Bobcat coach Gerald Newsome moved Chad Mitchell to the starting quarterback position against the Hornets. Mitchell will probably get the call again against the Bearcats.

Betsy Layne will need more offense out of Blaine Depoy, a 6-1, 185-pound senior running back. Depoy was counted on to add to the Bobcats' attack this year. So far in the three games the senior half back has yet to put up the numbers expected of him.

Defensively, Betsy Layne has played hardnosed. The Bobcats are led defensively by Tony Lykins and Ashley Lykins at the guard spots. Berne Eplin and Doug Hamilton fill the tackle positions while Chris Stewart and James Keathley are at the defensive ends. Wise goes both ways, playing one defensive cornerback and Mike Cecil is at the other. Linebackers are Jamie Kidd and Chad Hunter, with Depoy at safety.

Both teams will be looking for their first win as both stand at 0-3 on the season. It will be experience, Betsy Layne, versus youth, Johns Creek.

Game time is 8 p.m. and the game can be heard over WPRG-Cable

Radio with the golden voice of Joe Back doing the play-by-play.

It will also be homecoming for the Bobcats as four lovely ladies will vie for the title of "Miss Homecoming 1990."

Cats To Growl In '90

During the 1990 college football season, Floyd County Times football expert Larry Atha will be taking a game-by-game look at the University of Kentucky Wildcats.

KENTUCKY FAVORED TO WIN 22-14 BY POWER RATING

The POWER RATING was 18-1-1 the opening week of the season for a fantastic 95 percent record. The only loss was Maryland over Va. Tech (20-13).

Kentucky dropped to 32nd place on the POWER RATING after last week's 20-17 win over Central Michigan. To climb in the ratings, Kentucky must really win by about 14 points. If the Wildcats continue to struggle as they did last week, a winning season is in jeopardy. A highly successful season remains probable if they return to form, or if Central Michigan proves to be a lot better than predicted.

In other games of local interest, Morehead look good, but lost at Marshall (28-14). Morehead plays Western Kentucky this week and is picked to lose to the 14th ranked opponent by 11 points.

Louisville was warned by the POWER RATING of a possible upset last week and did in fact play to a tie with San Jose State. Louisville plays Murray State this week and is picked to win 39-7. Louisville fell to 34th place last week. A 8-2-1 record is still possible for Louisville.

Cincinnati lost to Bowling Green 24-20 last week and the Bearcats are picked to lose this week at Central Michigan.

On the national scene, Clemson is only favored by three points over Virginia in what will probably be the Atlantic Coast Championship. Clemson has the easiest schedule of all the major teams competing for the national Championship—if they get by Virginia.

In Division A-II, Eastern Kentucky fans should be happy to see Georgia Southern picked to lose. Middle Tennessee is favored by two points on their home field.

Eastern Kentucky will open as a favorite over Central Florida by 17 points, this Saturday as the new Roy Kidd Stadium is dedicated.

HIGH SCHOOL PICKS PRESTONSBURG FAVORED

On the local high school scene, Prestonsburg is a 8 point favorite over Johnson Central. Wheelwright will be a 14 point underdog to the Hazard Bulldogs. Johns Creek is a slight 3 point favor over Betsy Layne. The Hornets of Magoffin County are picked to win at Allen Central.

BEECHWOOD LEADS SINGLE "A"

Beechwood (2-0) leads the Class Single "A" high school football ratings this week. Paintsville (3-0) and Pikeville (1-1) are tied for the number three spot. Russellville (2-1) is fifth.

In Class "AAA", Belfry (3-0) is ranked number three. Paducah Tilghman (2-0) holds down the number one position.

THIS SATURDAY'S WILDCAT GAME

KENTUCKY VS RUTGERS
September 8
E. Rutherford, N.J.

Kentucky 1-0-0; Rutgers 0-0-0

Power Rating Prediction
Kentucky 30 Rutgers 17

Kentucky will spoil Rutgers home opener. Rutgers won two games and tied two more in 1989. With only eight starters back this year, those four non-losses will be hard to duplicate. Rutgers upset the Wildcats in 1989, but Rutgers is not that strong this year. Rutgers is so weak on defense that Kentucky should have no trouble passing or running to victory.

EKU To Dedicate Roy Kidd Stadium This Saturday

Eastern Kentucky University will formally dedicate Roy Kidd Stadium tomorrow, September 8, during ceremonies prior to the EKU-Central Florida game.

A crowd of 20,000 EKU football fans are expected for the 7:10 p.m. dedication ceremony and 7:30 p.m. season-opening football game.

EKU's first game also has been designated "Richmond-Madison County Chamber of Commerce Community Night." Reserved seat tickets at the gate are $8 for adults and $5 for general admission seating for students.

EKU's Board of Regents voted in January to name the stadium in honor of Kidd, who begins his 27th season as the Colonels' head coach.

The regents recognized Kidd as "one of the finest coaches in the United States" and noted that he had built and maintained an exceptional football program at Eastern "without compromising his personal integrity or that of the University."

"Coach Kidd has placed the proper emphasis on the overall development of EKU's student athletes, and his students succeed in the classroom as well as on the playing field," said EKU president Hanly Funderburk. "We hope that Colonel football fans throughout the state will join with us in honoring this fine man and outstanding football coach."

Roy Kidd Stadium is part of the Hanger Field and Robert B. Begley Building complex, a unique, architecturally designed academic athletic center. The nine-story structure provides seating on its slanted roof for 16,000 football spectators. An additional 4,000 bleacher seats are located across the field.

Since the facility opened in October 1969, Kidd's teams have compiled a 103-16-1 record at Hanger Field, including a 34-game winning streak from 1977 to 1983 and a 27-game winning streak from 1985 to 1989.

"When I began my coaching career at (Richmond) Madison High School, I dreamed of someday being named head coach at Eastern," Kidd said. "As the head coach at Eastern, I dreamed of conference and national championships."

"Our successes have resulted from having a dedicated coaching staff, players who were committed to our program, and outstanding support from the University and our fans," he said.

"This honor is a tribute to everyone who has worked so hard for so long to build a tradition of football excellence for Eastern."

The 58-year-old Corbin native and former All-American quarterback at Eastern was named head football coach at his alma mater in 1964. His 26 Eastern teams have compiled a 208-77-8 record, won 11 Ohio Valley Conference championships and earned two NCAA Division I-AA national championships.

Kidd is the OVC's all-time winningest coach, and he ranks third among active Division I and I-AA coaches. Only 14 coaches have won 200 games or more, and only 10 have won 200 games at one school.

Kidd guided the Colonels to NCAA Division I-AA national championships in 1979 and 1982, and his 1980 and 1981 teams were national runners-up. Kidd-coached teams won OVC championships in 1967, 1968, 1974, 1976, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1984 and 1988. The Colonels shared the conference title in 1986 and 1987.

His coaching honors at Eastern include NCAA Division I-AA Coach of the Year in 1980 and 1981; Ohio Valley Conference Coach of the Year in 1967, 1974, 1976, 1981, 1982, 1983, 1988; Lexington Herald-Leader Sportsman of the Year in 1981 and 1982; Kodak District 3 Coach of the Year Division I-AA in 1983; Kodak District IV Division II Coach of the Year in 1967, 1974 and 1976.

Prior to being named head coach at Eastern, Kidd compiled a 54-10 record during six years as head coach at Richmond's Madison High School. His teams compiled a 27-game winning streak, during which they went 14 consecutive games without being scored on. In 1961, Kidd was named the state's Coach of the Year and his team was top-ranked in the state all season. He served as an assistant coach at Morehead State University in 1962 and at Eastern in 1963.

Kidd is married to the former Susan Purcell of Richmond. They have three children: Marc Kidd of Lexington, Susan Kidd Kuhl of Louisville and Keith Kidd of Tempe, Ariz.

Curp Wins Distance Run; McGuire, Roberts place

Mark Curp of Lee's Summit, Missouri, kicked in at the 10-mile mark and pulled away from Steve Taylor to win the 13th Annual Charleston Distance Run last Saturday at Charleston, West Virginia. The distance run was 15 miles. More than 1,600 entrants challenged the grueling hills of South Charleston under favorable temperatures this year.

Taylor, who had won the race twice, is from St. Mary's, West Virginia. Curp is trying to make the 1992 Olympic team in the marathon. Curp's winning time was 1:13.24.

Julie Isphording, Cincinnati, won the women's division in 1:32.34. Locally, Dave McGuire of Price, placed 188th in 1:44.26. Rick Roberts finished in the 230th place with a time of 1:47.12. Paintsville's Marvin McFaddin was 240th at 1:47.32. Ron "Smokey" Robinson of Hager Hill finished 581st in 2:02.55 while Dave Wright of Paintsville placed 826th in his first Charleston run in 2:13.38.

Joe McGuire, brother of Dave McGuire, was 878th with a time of 2:16.01.

1991 spring turkey season set

Thirteen new counties, or portions of counties will be open for wild turkey hunting during the 1991 spring season.

Approved by the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission, counties added to Zone A are: Edmonson, Green north of Highway 92. Zone A counties will be open April 17-30, for wild turkey hunting.

Those counties or portions of counties added to zone B are: Bath south of I-64, Carlisle except south of Highway 62 and east of Highway 51, Fulton, Graves, Hickman west of Highway 51, McCracken, Menifee north of Highway 460 and east of Highway 36 and Owsley north of Highway 30 and west of Highway 399. Zone B counties are open for one week, April 17-23.

All counties or portions of counties open to wild turkey hunting during the 1990 spring season will be open during 1991, except Webster County. Webster County has been closed for restocking.

Starting with the 1991 spring season, residents of Indiana will not be permitted to hunt wild turkeys in Kentucky because Indiana does not allow non-resident turkey hunting.

COMMISSION APPROVES NEW CRAPPIE, BASS SIZE LIMITS

New size limits on crappie and bass were approved for several major lakes during the August meeting of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources Commission.

Effective January 1, 1991, there will be a 10-inch minimum size limit on crappie at Kentucky and Barkley lakes. A 15-inch minimum size limit on largemouth and smallmouth bass will take effect January 1 at Paintsville, Buckhorn, Fishtap and Carr Fork lakes. Yatesville Lake, to begin impoundment during the spring of 1991 in Lawrence County, will also be under the 15-inch minimum size limit for largemouth and smallmouth bass.

Other commission action taken regarding fishing included legalizing tickling and noodling in the main stem of the North, Middle and South Forks of the Kentucky River. All commercial fishing was banned in the Mud River in Logan County, effective January 1, upon request of the Kentucky Department of Health. Fish in the Mud River have been found contaminated with Polychlorinated Biphenyls (PCBs) and/or chlor-dane.

The next quarterly meeting of the Fish and Wildlife Commission will be held December 3-4 at the Department central office, four miles west of Frankfort on U.S. 60. Commission action (voting) will take place December 4. All commission meetings are open to the public.

KENTUCKY WATERFOWL SEASONS SET

Kentucky's 1990-91 waterfowl season opens statewide on Thanksgiving Day and continues through the four day holiday period, November 22-25.

Hunting for ducks, coots and mergansers resumes December 12 and continues through January 6, 1991. The daily bag limit is three ducks which may include no more than two mallards (no more than one female mallard or black duck), two wood ducks, one redhead and one pintail or either sex. Canvasbacks may not be taken.

In addition to the daily duck bag, 15 coots and five mergansers (only one may be a hooded merganser) may be taken per day. The possession limit is double the daily bag. Shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise until sunset.

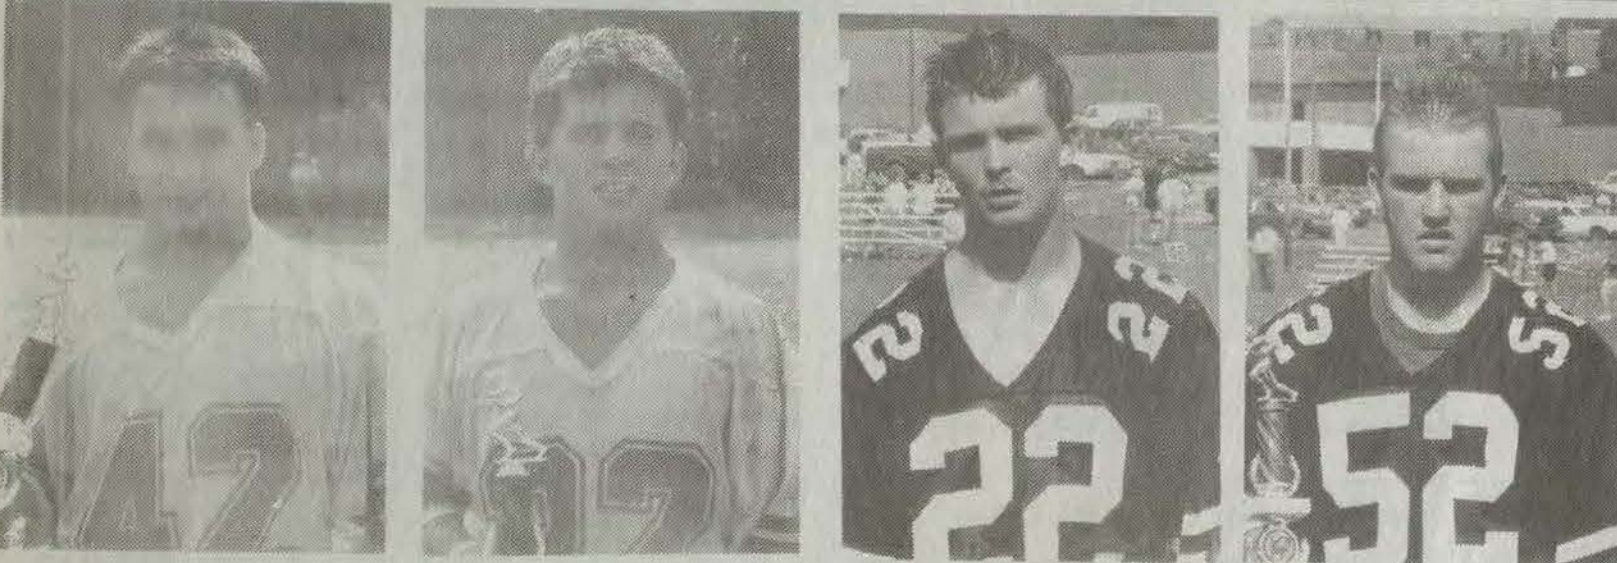

Goose hunting resumes statewide December 1 and continues through January 31, 1991, however, the season may close early in the Western Waterfowl Zone if Canada goose quotas are filled before the last day of January. Fulton County will remain open for Canada goose hunting through February 4, unless the Ballard Reporting Area quota (28,000) is reached before that date.

Shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise until sunset except in the Western zone where shooting hours cease at 3 p.m. from December 1 through January 26. Shooting until sunset will be allowed during the four-day November season and the last five days of January, should the season run that long.

Since this development is located in a base (i.e., 100-year frequency) floodplain established by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), HUD is required by Presidential Directive (Executive Order 11988) not to support the development if there are no practicable alternatives to developing it in the base floodplain. Accordingly, an analysis will be prepared. Comments from the public are invited and will be received for fifteen (15) days from the date of this publication by David A. Powell, Director of Housing, P.O. Box 1044, Louisville, Kentucky 40201. 9-7-11FW.

NOTICE OF INTENTION TO MINE Pursuant To Application Number 836-0210 Revision No. 2

In accordance with the provisions of KRS 350.055, notice is hereby given that Coal Mac, Inc., P.O. Box 3428, Pikeville, Kentucky 41501, has filed an application for a major revision to an existing surface coal mining and reclamation operation. This major revision proposes to add an additional 3.75 acres of surface disturbance for a total proposed permit acreage of 271.25 acres. The operation is located 0.5 miles northeast of Teaberry in Floyd County.

The proposed major revision is approximately 0.5 miles northeast from KY 979's junction with Red Morg Branch Road and located 0.3 miles east of Mud Creek. The latitude is 37° 26' 06". The longitude is 82° 38' 17".

The proposed major revision is located on the McDowell U.S.G.S. 7-1/2 minute quadrangle map. The surface area to be affected by this major revision is owned by Akers Heirs, Holly Conley, Ralph Moore, Beatrice Hall, Coal Mac, Inc., C.B. Spears & Bill Farmer.

This major revision proposes to add three slide areas, relocate various dug-outs add a pond access road, and eliminate (3) three dug-outs. The application also includes a proposed land use change from the forestland pre-mining land use to a wildlife habitat post-mining land use.

The major revision application has been filed for public inspection at the Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement's Prestonsburg Regional Office, 503 South Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, Kentucky 41653. Written comments, objections, or requests for a permit conference must be filed with the Director of the Division of Permits, #2 Hudson Hollow, U.S. 127 South, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601. 9-7-41FW.
