Progress needed :

Seeking the right answers

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor

Plan your work and work your plan is the idea behind the Floyd County Development Authority which met Wednesday, August 21 to continue plans to develop industrial development sites.

One concern of the authority, which was deemed important in economic and industrial development, was the access to higher education and job training programs in Eastern Kentucky. Since the announcement by Morehead State University of plans to put an extended campus center in Prestonsburg, the authority had several questions as to why the University of Kentucky did not expand Prestonsburg Community College to meet the four-year degree needs of Eastern Kentuckians instead of bringing in another university.

Gary Cox from the Council on Higher Education met with the authority this week in an attempt to answer these questions. According to Cox, this region is "MSU's territory" and they put in a bid for the extended campus. Kentucky was broken down several years ago into service areas for all the universities in the state. It was determined then that MSU served the greatest amount of Eastern Kentuckians, according to Cox. That was the reason for MSU coming to Prestonsburg.

Cox also pointed out that one of the goals set when the contract was awarded to MSU was to make sure MSU and PCC worked together "to provide people, who may not otherwise have the opportunity to complete a four-year degree, the opportunity to do so as economically as possible."

In addition to good educational opportunities, the authority also strives to develop a catalog of industrial sites and get these sites prepared for prospective builders. The Floyd County authority members will be meeting with the Pike County I.D.E.A. board on August 27 to look at a site in Ivel which they have been working on for some time.

The authority has also given the chairman and vice chairman, Paul Gearheart and Dolores Smith, the authorization to explore the possibility of joining forces with Pike County and to create a single development board for the two counties.

Another topic of discussion between the authority members Wednesday was the problem of getting water to proposed sites. Nothing definite was decided on this issue.

The next meeting of the Floyd County Development Authority will be on Wednesday, Sept. 18 at 4 p.m. at PCC.

Looking it over

Burglary suspects nabbed, two local break-ins solved

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor

Two suspects have been arrested and charged with the burglary of two separate Prestonsburg businesses on July 24.

A 17-year-old Prestonsburg male was arrested three days after the burglary of the Archer Clinic in Highlands Plaza when he tried to sell prescription drugs to a police informant, according to Prestonsburg Police Detective Jeff Stumbo. Stumbo was monitoring the drug sale and, during the transaction it was indicated that the drugs came from the break-in.

A day later, another police informant brought in some snake skin he had purchased illegally, which had been stolen from the Cobbler Shop in downtown Prestonsburg the same day as the clinic break-in, Stumbo said.

Stumbo found 10 leather jackets also stolen from the Cobbler Shop dumped over a hill in West Prestonsburg and, through other information, connected the two break-ins.

The youth was arrested and charged with two counts of burglary in the third degree and one count of trafficking marijuana within 1,000 yards of a school. The boy pleaded guilty to all charges and was sentenced on Thursday, August 22 to 30 days in the juvenile detention center and ordered to make restitution for half the value of the drugs taken from Archer Clinic, valued at $4,700, wholesale.

Stumbo estimated the street value of these medications at $25,000-$30,000. The items taken from the Cobbler Shop were valued at $2,300.

An altercation at the Super 8 motel in Prestonsburg on Tuesday, August 20, led to the arrest of the second burglary suspect, Tommy Music. Police had been searching for the 20-year-old Prestonsburg resident, who had been out of town since the break-ins, according to Stumbo.

Music has been charged with two counts of burglary in the third degree and is lodged in the Floyd County jail on a $10,000 bond waiting indictment by the grand jury in September.

A Prestonsburg woman was killed Wednesday afternoon in a two-car auto accident at Banner.

According to Kentucky State Police reports, at approximately 1:30 p.m., Dessie H. Setser, 71, of Prestonsburg was killed when her 1981 Toyota Corolla was struck at the junction of U.S. 23 and Rt. 1426 by a 1986 Trans Am driven by Dennis Osborne, 43, of Ivel. Setser was attempting to cross U.S. 23 when her car was struck.

Setser and her passenger, Nora Hamilton, 74, were both taken to Pikeville Methodist Hospital. Setser was pronounced dead at 4:17 p.m. Hamilton was treated at Pikeville Methodist and released.

Osborne was taken to Highland Regional Medical Center. He was treated and released. Osborne was the only person involved in the accident wearing a seat belt.

The fatality was the third on U.S. 23 in the last two weeks.

The accident is still under investigation by trooper Dave Watkins. The Floyd County Rescue Squad also responded to the accident.

Local Job Corps receives funding

The Carl D. Perkins Job Corps Center has received funding for the next three years through the U.S. Department of Labor, according to U.S. Senator Wendell Ford.

Career Systems Development Corporation, the company which operates the center, has received $6,812,877 for the operation of the Job Corps Center in Prestonsburg. The period of funding is October 1, 1991, through September 30, 1993, with the possibility of three additional one-year option periods.

Search held for man thought lost

by Susan Allen

Two Little Mud Creek men got quite a scare Wednesday after they lost their 86-year-old father while ginseng hunting on a hillside at Martin.

Palmer and Darrell Yates called the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad at 4:02 p.m. Wednesday and reported their father, Preston Yates, as missing, said rescue squad member Chuck Hall.

The squad assembled a search party in the First Guaranty National Bank parking lot at Martin. Searchers from the Floyd County squad, Left Beaver Rescue Squad, the Floyd County Sheriff's Department, Maytown Volunteer Fire Department and the Kentucky State Police mapped out their search and moved on to the hillside at Stephens Branch where Yates was last seen.

The rescuers got a pleasant surprise just as the search got underway when Yates walked off the hillside directly where they were and got into the truck with his sons.

Illegal aliens in custody :

Trio arrested at Watergap

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Life in the fast lane Tuesday evening led to the arrest of three persons and opened a case of international intrigue for the Floyd County Sheriff's Department.

The fast lane is where deputy sheriff Roy Compton stopped a black four-door Buick on U.S. 23 near Watergap at approximately 5 p.m. Tuesday after the driver failed to move into the right lane.

Compton ran a standard license check on the vehicle, found the Ohio license plates on the car had been stolen and two of the occupants in the car turned out to be illegal aliens from Mexico.

Flavio Vazquez Alanis, 19, of Dayton, Ohio, and Gudberto Olvera, 20, of Fairborne, Ohio, were arrested along with Angela McKenzie, 25, also of Fairborne. An inquiry to the United States Customs and Immigration officials showed Alanis and Olvera were not registered to be in the United States. Immigration special agents John Lawrence and Robert Medellin said that Alanis and Olvera were suspects in an illegal alien smuggling operation, said a spokesman for the sheriff's department. It was also reported that McKenzie had several federal warrants pending.

Also in the vehicle was a 15-year-old female juvenile from Ohio whose mother told deputies she was not allowed to be with the trio. She picked up her daughter at the sheriff's office at 2:47 a.m. Wednesday morning.

The Buick was impounded by the sheriff's department and after getting a search warrant, Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson, deputies Ricky Thornsbury, Chuck Ousley and Dingo, the department's drug dog, searched the vehicle Wednesday afternoon.

The search produced a small quantity of drugs in an improper container and drug paraphernalia. Officers also found several identification cards for the Mexicans. An Illinois license plate registered to Alanis was discovered in the backseat and his address was listed as Chicago, Illinois.

Also found in the vehicle were directions to Pound, Virginia and an incomplete parental consent form for marriage from Dickenson County, Virginia.

The three remained lodged in the Floyd County Jail Thursday. Alanis was charged with improper registration, receiving stolen property, no insurance, no registration receipt and permitting an unlicensed driver to operate a motor vehicle. Olvera was charged with receiving stolen property. McKenzie was charged with no operators license, receiving stolen property and holding the second lane of traffic.

No bond has been set for the suspects. The case is expected to be turned over to the U.S. Customs and Immigration Department.

Weighing the evidence

Prestonsburg Detective Jeff Stumbo weighs the Vallium sold to a police informant recently which led to the arrest of two suspects connected with the Archer Clinic break-in on July 24. A juvenile pleaded guilty to the burglary charge and has been sentenced to 30 days in the juvenile detention center. An adult awaits indictment by the grand jury. (photo by Tess Whitmer)

Osborne and Setser's passenger, Nora Hamilton, were treated at area hospitals and released. The fatality was the third on US 23 in two weeks. (photo by Mike Rosenberg)

Workers still seek union, Teamsters poll board

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Non-classified employees of the Floyd County school system are continuing their quest for union representation from the International Brotherhood of Teamsters.

Teamster representative Ron Abshire polled Floyd County Board of Education members individually at Monday's board meeting asking them if they would recognize the union as a bargaining agent for the employees.

The informal vote showed that board member Tommy Boyd was the only one who would endorse Teamster representation.

Chairman Ray "Shag" Campbell said "no"; board members Eddie Billips and James Duff said "not at this time"; and board member Mary Hall said she had no comment on the issue.

"Why not at this time?" Abshire asked the board.

Campbell answered that the clas-

PCC welcomes new members, recognizes former for services

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor

The Prestonsburg Community College Advisory Board held their first meeting of the 1991-92 school year Monday night with new PCC president Dr. Deborah Floyd.

Following a reception in the art gallery of the Magoffin Learning Resource Center, Dr. Floyd began the meeting by recognizing three outgoing board members and welcoming their replacements.

Robert M. Conley of Paintsville, who retired from the board after serving for 20 years, told those present at the August 20 meeting that he saw the advisory board as a support group.

"I believe we are the cheerleaders. What the board has done is very minimal," he said. "The success of PCC is because of the faculty, leadership, administration and friends of the college."

Also recognized for service during the 1990-91 school year were out-going members Dr. Charles Robertson Jr. of Prestonsburg, faculty representative, and student representative John Austin, also of Prestonsburg transferring to the University of Kentucky.

The newest members of the board include Daniel Greene of David, John D. Sammons of Prestonsburg and Ronnie Leedy II of Betsy Layne. A former student of PCC, Greene's term runs through 1995. Sammons, a professor of mathematics, is the faculty representative, and Leedy, student government president, is the student body representative.

Other members of the board are, O.T. Dorton, H.D. Fitzpatrick, Chalmer Frazier, Paul Gearheart, John Triplett and Ronald Wright. Fitzpatrick was elected chairman, Dorton vice chairman and Wright secretary/treasurer, at Monday night's meeting.

Advisory board members agreed to meet on a quarterly basis and at the college president's discretion. Dean Robert Allen presented them with faculty and staff statistics while Dean John Herald gave past enrollment statistics.

Following the meeting, board members and guests were given a tour of the campus, which included a first look at the new science building, opening for classes this fall, and a look at the newly completed renovation of the administration building.

Recycling day

The Floyd County chapter of Kentuckians for the Commonwealth will hold another Recycling Day on Saturday, August 24, from 11-2. Area residents are asked to bring their glass (rinsed and separated by color, without lids), two liter plastic bottles and plastic milk jugs (rinsed, without lids) and aluminum cans to the M & M Toyota trailer truck parked along the Mountain Parkway just past the Glynview Plaza (Food City). Newspapers will not be accepted at this time. For more information, call 886-0043.

The path of progress

In an effort to modernize and upgrade operations, the state of Kentucky allocated approximately $36,000 to install new filing systems in the circuit and district court clerk's offices. Computer systems are due to be installed in October. Pictured with the new filing system in the Floyd Circuit Clerk's Office are Tom Calme, president of the Kentucky Circuit Clerk's Association; Frank DeRossett, Floyd County Circuit Court Clerk and Doris Anderson, supervisor. SOAP will provide assistance to more coal mine operators

Beginning October 1, more coal operators in Kentucky will be eligible for financial assistance through the Small Operator Assistance Program (SOAP) than ever before. The program will include coal operators who produce up to 300,000 tons per year as of October 1, 1991.

Operators can currently save as much as 40 percent of the permitting costs by utilizing the program. The financial assistance pays for such items as water monitoring, geologic sampling, and other engineering work required before mining can begin.

Officials for the program encourage operators to begin applying for the assistance by contacting either the Department for Surface Mining Reclamation & Enforcement - SOAP office at (502) 564-2356 or their engineering firm.

Consulting firms and laboratories are presently renewing contracts that enable them to assist these eligible coal operators. Additional firms will be available to help the coal producers realize the savings of the programs.

Revitalization of the program includes not only the increase in yearly production eligibility to 300,000 tons per year, but may also include additional benefits if federal legislation recently introduced by Senator Wendell Ford and Senator Mitch McConnell is passed by Congress. If passed, the financial assistance will cover more activities necessary to obtain a permit and provide further help for these operations involved in the mining industry of Kentucky.

For more information call SOAP collect at (502) 564-2356 or write to SOAP, #2 Hudson Hollow Road, Frankfort, KY 40601.

Partnership begins campaign to implement education reforms

The Partnership for Kentucky Education Reform, a non-partisan coalition, today began a statewide grassroots campaign to promote implementation of the 1990 Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA).

The Partnership, whose 57 members represent business, civic, government and educational organizations, formally unveiled the centerpiece of the campaign — a brightly decorated school bus full of exhibits — during a news conference at the Kentucky State Fair.

The bus, purchased and equipped through the support of United Parcel Service, will be open to the public in Booth 369 of the East Wing through the end of the fair on August 25. It will then begin a statewide tour, making stops at towns and cities throughout Kentucky.

Persons interested in having the Partnership "school bus" visit their community can call Ken Hoskins or Vicki Dennis at (502) 589-1700.

Visitors who tour the bus will see exhibits that explain the main provisions of Kentucky's nationally acclaimed education reform act. They will also learn how they can help successfully implement those plans in the schools of their own communities.

The Partnership, whose members have made a 10-year commitment to assist in the implementation of the reforms, was organized last spring under the leadership of three member companies of the national Business Roundtable — Ashland Oil, Inc., Humana Inc. and United Parcel Service.

Activities of the Partnership are being coordinated through the Pritchard Committee for Academic Excellence, an organization of citizen volunteers from across the state whose common interest is improving education.

Give me popcorn

Each performance of the Kentucky Opry throughout this summer attracted more and more people. The crowd is getting so large that "Elvis" had to bring a security entourage with him this past Monday. Jaycees, Rotary ask people to give desperately needed blood

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor

If you've ever donated blood, now's the time to do so again. Or, if you've never donated, now's the time to start. The Central Kentucky Blood Center is dangerously low on blood and, with the Labor Day holiday coming up, the need is likely to increase.

Georgia Sanders of the Prestonsburg Donor Center said that an appeal is being conducted now, by letter, for people with O+ and O- blood to donate.

"We don't like to do big appeals more than once or twice a year because then people don't think it is as important as it is," Sanders said. "We are hoping that the blood drive being conducted next week by the Prestonsburg Jaycees and Rotary will bring enough blood that we won't have to go on the T.V. and radio and beg for blood."

During the "Great American Blood Drive" members of the Jaycees and Rotary will be competing with each other to recruit the most donors. The drive will be conducted on Wednesday through Thursday, August 27, 28 and 29 from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. at the Prestonsburg Donor Center in the municipal building on North Lake Drive.

All donors will receive a free T-shirt, sunglasses and Dairy Queen coupons, and will be eligible for a drawing for U.K. football home opener tickets; Reds vs. Los Angeles Dodgers tickets; Tom Whitaker and Tim Sizemore prints; and dinner for two at Kelsey's at the Holiday Inn.

Although the drive does not officially begin until Tuesday, Sanders said that people can come in anytime during regular business hours and donate for their favorite group.

All the blood collected by the Central Kentucky Blood Center stays in central, south-central and south-eastern Kentucky, which includes Floyd County.

The drive begins on Tuesday, August 27 and ends Thursday, August 29, running all three days from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. (photo by Georgia Sanders)

Kentucky retailers declare war on shoplifting

It's Back-To-School time in Kentucky. Time for consumers to stock up on school supplies, clothing, shoes and all of the other necessities for the start of a new school year. It's a busy time for Kentucky's retailers. Unfortunately, it's also a busy time for Kentucky's shoplifters. Crowded stores and increased sales bring with it an increase in shoplifting, a crime that costs Kentucky retailers and consumers millions of dollars each year.

Shoplifting takes an enormous bite out of Kentucky's economy. It is estimated that honest shoppers in Kentucky pay between $50 and $80 per person and between $150 and $225 per household each year because of shoplifters, according to the Kentucky Retail Federation. Some 10 million dollars in retail sales will have been exposed to shoplifting during 1991.

Mack Morgan, president of the Kentucky Retail Federation, says shoplifting is a crime Kentucky cannot afford. According to Morgan, "shoplifting is an economic crime that hurts all Kentuckians...We all pay for stolen merchandise through higher prices and increased security costs." Morgan is calling upon law enforcement officials throughout the state to be tough on shoplifters.

Mr. Morgan also commented that the general assembly was also concerned about the crime of shoplifting. "In the 1990 session, the legislature passed an additional law against shoplifters that will require thieves to pay for what they steal. "If caught, under the new law, a shoplifter will be liable for the cost of the merchandise plus an additional penalty of $100 to $250.

"Retailers have the tools to make shoplifters pay for their crime," Morgan said.

Also a comprehensive new anti-shoplifting public awareness campaign has been launched for the Back-to-School season by the Kentucky Retail Federation. As part of the campaign, public service announcements have been distributed to television and radio stations warning would-be shoplifters that it is a serious crime with tough punishment for those who are caught. The TV and radio spots portray a person being caught in the act of shoplifting, being arrested, and taken to jail.

Summer has come and almost gone. Monday night we will say goodbye to the amphitheater at Jenny Wiley State Park. It has been a wonderful summer for all of us working with the Opry. I want to thank the board of directors for the Jenny Wiley Theatre; Bill Gordon Francis, president of the board; Tedi Vaughn the director of the theatre; Leon Russell and Judy who are always ready to help. It was a wonderful gesture on their part to invite the Kentucky Opry in on Monday nights. I will always be grateful to these people.

I want to thank all of those in Eastern Kentucky that have come out and supported us this summer. I think you now realize the great asset we have here in our midst, that being our talented youth.

Monday night, August 26, is our final show. We will not have an opening act. We plan to do the complete show. We want to give you the full scope of the talent on stage with the Kentucky Opry troupe. Come early, we will start at 8 p.m. and do our very best to give you your money's worth.

Editorial:

Back to school

by Scott Perry

It appears that a walkout this year by Floyd County teachers is becoming more and more unlikely, and that's good news for the school system, the students and the teachers.

While teachers do have legitimate concerns about salaries, working conditions and their involvement in the educational process, they are more likely to see their questions answered by following a diplomatic route than they would be by taking an adversarial stance.

Fundamental changes are taking place in Floyd County schools, but none of us can expect perfection overnight.

Last year, Floyd teachers let it be known that they are a force to be reckoned with and that they can, indeed, serve as a catalyst for change. They garnered widespread support from the public.

But Rome was not built in a day and a truly progressive school system won't be built on a foundation of hostility.

Patience is a virtue that could very well prevent last year's gains from becoming this year's losses and, in this matter, losing the battle for public support is tantamount to losing the war.

The Floyd County Board of Education should make good on its promises to the teachers from last year and the teachers should go back to school, on time, so that education can move out of the cellar and into the light.

Legislative Perspective

by Rep. Greg Stumbo

Rep. Greg Stumbo
Majority Floor Leader

This interim of the Kentucky General Assembly has not followed its standard consistency — interim meaning the period of legislative activity between sessions. The special session called last January to address urgent environmental needs placed interim committee activities on hold, which meant most issues being researched and studied by committee members lost several weeks of critical time.

The interim is a very important element to insuring effective legislative sessions and an efficient legislative process. Before the committee system was initiated into the process, members of the General Assembly were expected to consider hundreds of bills for the first time, within a thirty day period, and make knowledgeable decisions on whether the bills should become law. Now, during the interim, bills are scrutinized and testimony taken from state agencies and the general public, allowing us to make responsible decisions.

An issue receiving intense scrutiny this interim has been the development of the new educational system which is currently being phased into place. It has certainly been an exciting time for education in Kentucky. I believe when the new programs are complete, Kentuckians will have the best educated children in the United States who will be ready to take their place in our highly technical workplace.

I have also been hearing highly charged testimony from vocational education teachers across the state, as well as from representatives of the Workforce Development Cabinet. Vocational education teachers are deeply concerned over new policies initiated by the new Workforce Development Cabinet involving salary, annual leave, and extended employment policies. While legislators on the committee sympathize with the concerns of the teachers, a majority of the committee agreed to make no immediate recommendations to change the Workforce Development Cabinet's policies until they are given a chance to prove their success.

In listening to the testimony, it became clear to me that vocational education has evolved throughout the years in a very disjointed, unorganized way and the intention of the Legislature, when creating the Workforce Development Cabinet, was to put some consistency and unity into the program. The people within the Cabinet who obviously are committed to vocational education and have worked extremely hard to modernize and improve this important facet of education in Kentucky deserve the opportunity to show the merit of their ideas. It should also be noted that because of financial constraints, some key improvements to vocational education reform, such as equipment modernization and teacher salaries, must be phased in.

Lately, it has become an accepted rumor in the State Capitol that a special session of the General Assembly will be called sometime this fall to redesign legislative and congressional districts to conform to the 1990 census population figures. Final statistics from the Census Bureau in Washington indicate Kentucky will lose a Congressional seat. How the lines will be drawn to accommodate the remaining six seats is still speculation.

Please feel free to contact me on these issues or any other that may require legislative attention.

Letters

Editor:

As a taxpayer and concerned parent with children in the Floyd County school system, I would like to express my concern about the "mess" our children are being subjected to. The "mess" I refer to is the internal controversy in the school system between the board of education and the teachers. All these individuals seem to forget that their purpose is to provide quality education in a safe environment for our children.

To my knowledge, there are few other professions that the employees receive an annual salary exceeding $20,000 for approximately eight months' service with the added advantages of 6 1/2 hour work days and summers off. Wouldn't we all like to get a salary increase of 30 percent over a two year period?

The children are the ones punished by all this controversy. They are not only being denied a quality education but an extended summer break! The children have to make up school days missed because of a teachers' strike. Is this right? Teachers, if you don't have an interest in educating the children of Floyd County, get out! There are teachers in the Floyd County system that genuinely enjoy teaching and do an excellent job, others that are adequate and there are some that would not even qualify as responsible babysitters.

Regarding the construction of new school facilities in the county, the children of Floyd County are entitled to the same opportunities of new buildings and modern educational materials as children elsewhere in the state and in the United States. There are buildings in use for classes in this county that would not be good barns.

The board members are elected to represent the best interests of the students rather than the interest of themselves. Education must be the major focus rather than returning favors to influential figures. If the city of Prestonsburg is so opposed to the construction of a new high school for the benefit of the children of Floyd County, they can take their city tax money and invest in the construction of an independent school system of their own. In or out of the city limits makes no difference, only the best educational opportunities for our children is number one. The money appropriated to the county for education is to benefit all children in the county. Renovating buildings that are unsafe and ready for condemnation is foolishness.

The children of Floyd County are entitled to the best that we can provide. Given the resources, among our youth may be a future president, who knows? The future is theirs to be the best they can be, but they must be given the tools and resources to excel.

A more competitive marketplace. More American jobs. Strengthened foreign trade. More consumer choice and responsiveness. Rapid advances in technology. More innovation.

These are the benefits promised by the regional Bell telephone companies if they are permitted to manufacture their own equipment. But experiences and a closer examination suggest that exactly the opposite would be likely. Vibrant and growing competition in the industry could be devastated, unprecedented innovation would be impeded, American jobs would be placed at risk, and consumer process could be driven higher.

The Bell companies have been prohibited from manufacturing, long distance and information services by the consent decree that broke up the Bell System in 1984. The restriction was imposed to prevent the Bell companies from using their monopoly stranglehold on local phone service to choke off competition in these related industries. As long as this monopoly condition exists — which it does today — the restriction is essential to these related industries and to consumers.

There is no doubt that if the Bells are allowed to manufacture their own equipment or provide long distance or information services, that we will simply recreate the anti-competitive environment that led to the Bell System breakup in the first place. In the manufacturing area, they will buy from their own manufacturing affiliates, not from the thousands of innovative companies that have entered the industry since 1984. That is why the three major manufacturing trade associations are strongly opposing this ill-advised legislation.

A competitive manufacturing industry did not even exist before the Bell System breakup, because there was no real competition in the industry. The Bell System manufactured its own equipment, and bought virtually exclusively from itself. Today, in contrast, thousands of new companies are engaged in the industry, competing ferociously for business. This competition has produced one of the strongest and fastest growing segments of the American economy, marked by high productivity, unprecedented innovation and rapidly falling prices.

Congress is now considering legislation, that if enacted into law, would turn back the clock on the vigorous competition. The Senate recently passed S.173, a bill by Senator Ernest Hollings (D-SC), that would lift the manufacturing ban on the Bell companies imposed by the antitrust court order. Companion legislation is pending in the House of Representatives. Many U.S. manufacturers have invested their capital, their brainpower and years of their employees' hard work into building successful companies, but because of this legislation, they now see it all at risk.

Consumers also oppose this legislation. They know that the Bells are giant monopolies that would want to buy exclusively from their own affiliates, regardless of price. And they know that the inflated cost of those purchases would inevitably be passed along to captive ratepayers.

The workers in telecommunications equipment manufacturing companies are equally concerned. They know that if the Bells are allowed to manufacture, they will self-deal with their own manufacturing subsidiaries or joint venture partners. They see their jobs — jobs created by a competitive marketplace — in serious jeopardy if competition is shut off.

Proponents of legislation to change the industry structure say it is needed because America is falling behind the rest of the world in telecommunications technology. That's simply wrong. We are the dear global leader in telecommunications equipment and infrastructure. We are the envy of the entire world, which is why we now enjoy a healthy foreign trade surplus in network and switching equipment. Our competitive marketplace is the reason for that.

All this legislation would accomplish would be to crush strong competition. It will inevitably put many small American companies out of business and thousands of American workers out of jobs. It merits a prompt defeat in the House, which should not follow the Senate's lead.

'Green lights' to highlight energy awareness

A special presentation of the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) Green Lights Program will be part of the Sixteenth Annual Governor's Conference on the Environment. The conference is being held September 11-13 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Lexington.

Green Lights is a new, completely voluntary, non-regulatory program that encourages U.S. corporations and other institutions to install energy-efficient lighting technologies in their facilities where profitable. The Green Lights presentation will be conducted Friday, September 13, from 8:30 to 10 a.m.

Electricity required for lighting can be reduced approximately 75 percent when new energy-efficient lighting technologies are used. This would save the nation $18.6 billion in energy costs. If these technologies are fully implemented, the reduction in carbon dioxide emissions would be equivalent to removing 42 million cars from the nation's highways.

Kentucky employers can learn from the panelists how to take advantage of new lighting technologies' opportunities to reduce their energy usage, prevent pollution and improve facilities — all at a profit. EPA will formally recognize these efforts.

For further information on the Green Lights program or the environmental conference, contact John Stapleton, Kentucky Division of Energy, 691 Teton Trail, Frankfort, Kentucky 40601, or phone (502) 564-7192 or (800) 282-0868 (toll free in Kentucky).

Robert,

It doesn't seem like a year has gone by since you were here, and we were preparing for another school year—your last year, a senior finally. I never saw you so excited about school and the coming year.

This has been a very lonely and sad time for me this past year without you being here and near. I think of you every day. Wishing you were here, under foot, and in the way.

With school opening soon and your birthday here, it has already been a year. Time goes by too fast—seems like only night before last we laughed and talked.

You were here and now you are gone, you have left me all alone.

I love you so much,
Mom

From Someone Who Thought You Were Special:

To D.J. Conn:

Between two people in love, a seed was planted. From this grew D.J., one of the nicest people anyone will ever know. To his mom, he was her little boy; to his dad there was no greater joy than his little boy.

This boy they called D.J. was their pride and joy. He began to make friends of his own. He became a special person all on his own. Like a very special ROSE he did bloom, not another just like him to be found.

But somewhere along the way something went wrong. D.J. wanted to go home. Not to mom and dad, but to a Father who could hold his head and make all his heartaches go away.

Although he had friends who would have loved to have helped, he had a mom and dad who would have given their life for their boy.

This special ROSE like so many others, died too soon, and left a great hole in all our lives that will never be filled.

FOR D.J. IS HERE NO MORE!

Webb, Maynard exchange vows

Mr. and Mrs. William Maynard

The marriage of Patricia Webb to William Alden Maynard was solemnized Saturday, June 22, at the First Baptist Church in Allen. The Rev. French Harmon performed the double ring ceremony before an altar decorated with greenery and floral arrangements of peach and white. Candelabra, holding white tapers, completed the setting.

A program of music was presented by Shawna Aiken, Heidi Campbell, Lynn May, Kari May, Pamela Frasure and pianist Tamyra Hughes.

Given in marriage by her brother, Kenneth Webb, the bride wore a floor-length Victorian gown of white Schiffler embroidered net and Venice lace with chapel train. Her veil was edged with Venice lace and sprinkled with seed pearls. The bridal bouquet was of white orchids and lilies.

Matron of honor was Lynn May, sister of the bride, of Allen. Bridesmaids were Kari May of Allen, Christe Maynard of Harts, West Virginia, and Melissa Fadlevich of Lakeland, Florida. Brittany Frasure, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She carried a white and peach basket filled with peach rose petals.

The best man was Robert Adkins of Ferrellsburg, West Virginia. Groomsmen were Dennis Gilliam of Harts, West Virginia, Bryan Hughes of Langley and Charles G. May II of Allen. Chad Cantrell, nephew of the bride, served as ringbearer.

The mother of the bride chose a teal-blue dress with matching accessories and white corsage. The mother of the groom wore a pink dress with matching accessories and white corsage.

The guest register was attended by Sherri Conn and Sharon Lawson. Tony Stephens was in charge of the sound system. The wedding was directed by Debbie Martin of Dye's Floral.

A reception and dance followed immediately at the Holiday Inn. The theme of peach and white was used to decorate the banquet room. The wedding cake, baked by the bride, was four-tiered with six satellite cakes. The all-white cake was decorated with fresh peach roses, greenery and miniature, clear lights. A two-tiered chocolate cake adorned with a puppy dog served as the groom's cake. Music was provided by the Gum Branch Heartbreakers.

The bride is a graduate of Maytown High School and Eastern Kentucky University. She is currently employed by the Floyd County Board of Education. The groom is a graduate of Harts High School and Marshall University. He is currently employed by Consolidated Cable Service Inc.

The couple is residing in Prestonsburg.

New help for Parkinson's available

New understanding about exercise and diet can now help some of the most distressing symptoms of parkinsonism, enabling the patient to function better than previously thought possible, according to recent studies. Stiffness and slowness of movement are characteristic of Parkinson's Disease. New physical therapy, coupled with dietary considerations, has resulted in dramatic easing of symptoms. Physical therapy is advantageous because it can be practiced at home by most patients. Information is available upon request by writing Parkinson Research, Dept. 409, Winona, Texas 75792

SO LONG, GOODBYE, FAREWELL AND AMEN
I guess this is it.

My summer's about to come to a screeching halt as I'm about ready to head back to school. This internship at the Times has been very educational. I've learned (in no particular order):

- How to survive in a smoke-filled environment. I can now survive in any locale without breathing. Between Susan Allen's Winston's and whatever those things are that Tess smokes, I realize what it must be like to live in the bottom of an ashtray.
- How to write a news story without getting it back looking like it's been attacked by Freddie Krueger. Editors are like English professors. They shop for pens in the same place. They only write with implements that make marks to make you feel stupid. After a summer's employ, I finally feel comfortable writing in the AP style. AP stands for Allan Perry, in case you're wondering.
- Don't argue with the head of an advertising department. She'll bury you.
- That freedom's preciousness is only as strong as the will of a people. Tinnemen Square and Red Square proved that. A government can only last as long as it holds the support of the people. To hold the support of the people, it must support the people — not take rights away. I hope that if rights begin to "mysteriously" disappear in this country — such as the right of free expression and the right to privacy — that Americans will be able to speak as well and not simply say "This is America. Nothing ever goes wrong here."

- A system based on freedom requires maintenance, not neglect.
- You don't give pizza to someone you don't know.
- New paint jobs don't take to wax very well.
- Teachers really do care about their work. People who complain that teachers are greedy or don't pull their load are in a dream world. Parents know how hard it is to make a child listen to what they're saying. That's just one child and one parent.

- Try it with 30 children and ask yourself if teachers are overpaid.
- Relationships must be built on trust and mutual respect. When one half of a couple tries to use coercion, entrapment or any other kind of underhanded method to hold a relationship together, including jealousy or force, the relationship is doomed to fail.

- I wish some of my high school classmates would have remembered this before they tied the knot.
- Elvis is dead.

- So is the career of Ricky Schroeder.
- A woman told me once that she was thirty-six years old and had screwed up her life beyond belief. She said she had a failed marriage, three children to support, and had no hope for the future.

- There's no such thing as no hope. Time has a way of lending itself to people who decide to start over. A wise man said, "A journey of a thousand miles starts with a single step."
- A wise man also said, "The first step's a doozy."

- It's never too late to take a first step.
- I always knew this, but I really love my parents. John Meinhardt and Jean Voelker Rosenberg are two of the best people that I know and not just because they're my folks. I hope I can have the effect on others that they do.

- There's nothing wrong with singing "Oh What A Beautiful Morning" while waiting with a broom through the office. It'll just get you some strange stares from time to time.
- Republicans aren't all bad.

- Journalism is not a bad business. In fact, an honest, competent newspaper person can't be shaken by connections or influence is one of society's best friends. It's just when the power of the papers is abused that we all get a bad rep.
- I still don't know what I'll do next year, but I'll let you know. (my well-practiced answer)

- stands for "No Mas." I've had a great time this summer and I guarantee that I'll have something to say when the Blue Devils meet the Wildcats in the NCAA tournament.
- Take care everyone. It's been surreal.

- Until next time.
- Later days...

Job Corps student honored for community commitment

by Janice Shepherd
Staff Writer

A Carl D. Perkins Job Corps student has received top honors for his dedication to Floyd County and to his fellow students. Gregory Bernard Turner won the first runner-up position in the 1991 annual Job Corps leadership competition. Turner competed against 9,000 students from more than 24 Job Corps across the south to win the runner-up student leadership award.

While in the process of learning important job skills at the job center, Turner devoted his spare time to lending a helping hand to the Floyd County community. He has helped the crew of Jenny Wiley Theater to build background sets, to unload material and equipment, and to set up the stage scenery. He also served as an usher at the theater.

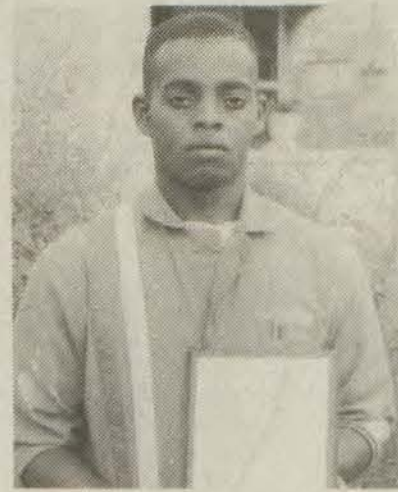

Turner also lends a helping hand to God's Pantry. When the agency calls for assistance, he's always ready to volunteer to help with the heavy work — the unloading.

Turner also serves the county as a volunteer firefighter with the Forestry Department. He received his firefighter training through the department and has helped extinguish fires at Wheelwright.

Though he is busy with community service, Turner finds time to be a big brother to his fellow students at the Job Corps center. He particularly helps incoming students to become oriented to the center, which houses more than 300 students.

Turner said the center has helped him, and he's helping others. Turner received his GED and hands-on training which will allow him to return to North Carolina with marketable skills. Because he enjoys working outside, Turner said he hopes to go into the landscaping business when he returns home. Though he had briefly worked with landscaping in North Carolina, the first skill he learned at the center was landscaping.

He is completing his last skill training at the center by learning the cobbler trade. He currently works with Kenny Wayne Damron at the Cobbler Shop in downtown Prestonsburg.

"It's very interesting. It's different," said Turner, who said he enjoys working with the cowboy boots, the shop's speciality. He works with snakeskin and has learned about tanning leather.

"The center is teaching me a lot of new things — things I never knew," said Turner.

Through his work in the community and the center, Turner, 19, is also learning something about himself — that he can compete and come out a winner.

Soapbox

The Dating-Zone

I had a really good topic that I was going to write about this week, but I've forgotten what it was. Kim says it's PMS, besides making you crave chocolate it makes you forgetful.

by Tess Whitmer

Since Kim is the wisest person I know on the subject of PMS and the only person I know who laughs at all my columns (funny or not), I'm inclined to believe her.

So I called my mother, as I always do when I can't think of anything to write about. She always has these whopper ideas, which I never write about, but our conversations usually lead me to some idea or another.

I was telling my mom about a good friend of mine (actually I barely know her, that ought to throw you off the track) who has started dating after a dry-spell of a few thousand years. I told her how this friend had waited home by the phone because a gentleman told her he was going to call.

All you self-proclaimed feminists out there better not be booing, because I'd lay odds that we've all done that more times than we care to admit. As a matter of fact, one of the first things I did when I got my new apartment was to buy an answering machine and get call waiting, so I wouldn't miss any of those calls I knew I got but was either out or on the phone and never received.

Each day I religiously check my answering machine first thing upon returning home, nothing except calls from girlfriends. When I talk on the phone I hear these beeps and excitedly ask, "is that your phone or mine?" The answering is always, "mine." I don't even know what my beep sounds like.

Anyway, back to my friend's dating. She got her call (I was impressed) and then she got her date (astounding). What I found relevant about all this enough to write about, was the fact that the guy asked her when she wanted to go out and what she wanted to do.

This question always leads to a myriad of problems which could be avoided if he would just say, "I'd like to take you out to dinner tomorrow night, how 'bout it?"

When you ask a woman "what do you wanna do?", especially on the first few dates, I can guarantee that you will get the answer "I don't know, what do you wanna do?"

This happens for the simple fact that women weigh everything that comes out of their mouth very carefully when they begin dating.

If I say I want to go to dinner, he'll think I'm a pig; if I say I want to go to a lounge, he'll think I'm a lush; if I say I want to go for a drive through the park, he'll think I want to make out; if I say I want to sit at home and watch T.V., he'll think I'm lazy or have ulterior motives; if I say I want to go to the movies, he'll think I don't want to engage in conversation or, worse yet, he'll ask me what I want to see and then I'll have to make another decision.

AAAAGH!!!
Why does it have to be so difficult? A.) Because men and women don't know how to communicate. B.) Because women want a relationship and want it now and men are afraid. C.) Men are scum and they know it (Ref. "Solitaire" 8/16). D.) Neither really know what they want. Or E.) All of the above.

It's a trick question. I say, "why ask why, drink Bud Dry!" Which, if you've seen the commercials, really means "don't bother thinking about it, just get drunk."

I must admit though, since Mike has been working in our office I've learned that men have the same problems. This is more refreshing to know than I can ever express.

Mike said he's tried the line "dinner tomorrow night, how 'bout it?" But has always gotten the answer "I don't care" (read with a whinny inflection). Now he wants to know what that means. Don't ask me, I'd never say that.

I told him, that as women mature they learn to appreciate the direct approach and will answer "Great! Sam an Tonios?"

Well, got to go, I'm expecting a phone call so I've got to go home and sit by the phone. I don't trust my answering machine anymore. Besides, as my girlfriend (the dating one) pointed out to me, what are you going to do, record the message, "Yes, I'd love to, leave a message at the beep.?"

Mother, daughter reunite after 25-year separation

by Janice Shepherd
Staff Writer

A Floyd County woman received a shock earlier this month when her daughter, whom she had not seen for 25 years, paid her a surprise visit.

After she and her husband, Denzil Barnett, divorced, Emma Jean Bradley consigned the raising of her two children to her former husband's mother. The young mother remarried; her children and their grandmother moved to California. One year after their departure, Emma Jean visited her children in California. Her daughter, Barbara, was twelve years old.

Emma Jean watched her children grow through the exchange of photos. Occasionally, they talked on the telephone. When Barbara left her childhood behind and became a wife, she moved to Alaska, and the miles continued to separate her from her mother.

Although she continued to hope, Barbara thought she would never see her daughter. On August 8 that hope became a reality when her son Ricky, who now lives in South Carolina, brought Barbara to Kentucky for a surprise visit.

Emma Jean was expecting Ricky's visit, but she thought he'd be alone. When she looked out her window to watch her son approach the house, she expressed curiosity about the "nice young woman" walking with him. As the two came closer to the house, Emma Jean recognized her daughter and ran out of the house. Emma Jean was finally able to wrap her arms around her daughter, and the two wept so long and so hard, they had to be helped into the house.

While in Floyd County, Barbara also had the opportunity to meet with her half brothers and sisters: Tim Bradley of Conley Fork, Linda Johnson of Rough and Tough, Missy Stanley of Conley Fork and Michelle Hughes of Cow Creek.

Though Barbara's stay in Kentucky was brief, about a day and a half, mother and daughter garnered memories that miles cannot separate.

Ties that bind

Smile Awhile

Eastern Kentuckians have long been stigmatized as being barefooted, illiterate, red-necked hillbillies who wouldn't know how to count to ten if they didn't have toes. I, for one, take exception to this theory.

Though raised in "town," it's preposterous to believe that I'm an urbanite because, whether we like to admit it, all of Eastern Kentucky is considered rural.

In many ways, we are thought to be culturally deprived because we don't have professional orchestras, ballet companies or the opera. What we do have is the Opry.

Last Monday night, my family and I were overwhelmed with the performance we watched at the Jenny Wiley Amphitheatre by a group of musicians, singers and comedians known as the Kentucky Opry. In attendance, only because my mother had purchased extra tickets and invited us, my husband and I begrudgingly drove the 13 miles just to appear her. Two minutes into the show, our ingratitude turned to sheer pleasure.

During the next ninety minutes, we, and the standing room only crowd, applauded, cheered, laughed and were practically moved to tears by the outstanding performances of the entire entourage of multi-talented individuals.

For the first time in many years, I became aware of how exceedingly proud and fortunate I am to be from the mountains. This experience was even more significant because two of the 12 performers were from Johnson County, and their performances were superb. Jody Conley and Ray Salyers were neither mediocre, nor adequate; they were spectacular as were the rest.

If I'd closed my eyes, I could have been at a concert in Los Angeles when I heard the '60s hit "Unchained Melody" performed. (Bill Medley would have been impressed.) I'll even venture and say that had Baryshnikov been present, he would have unlaced his ballet slippers, stripped off his tutu and donned clogging shoes and a pair of Levi's. Even imminent conductor Arthur Fiedler would have loved waving his maestro's baton before the band as they strummed out "Blue Moon of Kentucky." And if Elvis truly is alive as some reports indicate, he was on hand that night, quivering and shaking all over the stage.

Though I am neither worldly, nor a critic of the arts, I have been to four county fairs and two pie suppers, so I feel qualified to say that I feel very few people would have failed to be moved by the skills and abilities these artists exhibited.

If you like Bluegrass, they can set your feet to tapping. If you prefer gospel, they can uplift you spiritually. If you like pop, they can rock 'n roll you out of your seats. If you like country, they can put your hands to clapping. And if you like to laugh, they can keep you in stitches. Nothing escaped them, and every person in the theatre reluctantly left when the show ended.

Although the instruments they play don't necessarily put them in the category of what is usually perceived as being classical music, the melodious strains struck by the alto sax, steel guitars and electric organ were unsurpassed in their excellence.

Each year, tourists circle the globe to enjoy different cultures and centers of enlightenment in places such as New York, Los Angeles, Boston and Nashville when they could be here.

Nothing will ever change my perception of these places and nothing we do will ever change the way the world perceives us, so why not make the most of the culture we have? We should because ours is a talented and colorful culture; rich in heritage, and only poor economically.

Think of it.

Within a 60 mile radius of our homes, diverse talents such as Dwight Yokum, Keith Whitley, Loretta Lynn, Ricky Skaggs, Tom T. Hall, Richard Thomas, Ronnie Blair, Tommy Kirk and many others too numerous to mention have found their way from here to there, making indelible marks in the arts and entertainment field. I'd venture to say other regions of the United States could not boast of this proving what I always knew — we hillbillies are unique.

If Eastern Kentuckians are ever going to attain recognition for what we can accomplish, we must overcome our fear of allowing others to see us for what they already think we are.

The Kentucky Opry is helping to do just that.

Pikeville and see what is happening there. Others go to the races at Isom or Clay City. While these places do provide a change of pace, most teens stick with going to Prestonsburg.

I hope I have informed the parents of Floyd County teens as to what happens on Friday and Saturday night. We kids only want a chance to release some tension and make new friends. So parents, loosen up and give your kids a little freedom (Mom, this goes for you, too).

THE KENTUCKY STATE FAIR: SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

On August 15, I had the opportunity to visit Opening Day of the Kentucky State Fair. The fair, held in Louisville, was an exciting and enjoyable experience. There is something for people of all ages and lifestyles.

Before the Little Miss and Mr. Kentucky County Fairs Pageant, an Opening Day ceremony took place. Appearances by Governor Wallace Wilkinson, Daniel C. Ulmer Jr., and other prominent Kentuckians were made at the ceremony.

In the "Pride of the Counties" showcase, exhibits from various counties and cities were presented. It was very informative and interesting. I only regret that Floyd County did not have a booth in this section. Our county has many fine tourist attractions and is full of natural beauty.

Many types of arts and crafts were on display. Handmade quilts, clothing, wreaths, dolls and wines were being exhibited on the first day of the fair. There is so much talent in our state. A photography and art display was also located in this area.

The Emergency Networks Inc. High Dive Show was one of the highlights of my day. The show consisted of high dive champions. There were graceful dives, comedy performances, and daring stunts in this action-packed show. People of all ages enjoyed this presentation.

One large area of the fair was devoted to flea market stalls. This area also included promotional-type booths from companies and businesses. Many of these stalls had registration for free prizes. Appliances, eyewear, windows and quilts were just a few of the prizes to be given away during the course of the fair. Some companies gave away free products. Among those products were rulers, canned goods, and various tobacco articles.

Many types of food were sold throughout the fairgrounds. Greek, Mexican, Chinese and other international foods were available as well as the famous one-inch thick "State Fair Pork Chop". The pork chop was a very popular item.

The Kentucky Kingdom Amusement Park was giving free admission to fairgoers. However, one had to buy tickets for rides, I didn't make it as far as Kentucky Kingdom, much to my regret. The rides looked very thrilling, however, and the crowds seemed very pleased.

I regret that I didn't get to see the racing pigs or the skateboard show, but there was simply too much fair to see in one day. Besides, there are some new attractions every day.

My evening at the fair was capped off by a concert in Freedom Hall. The Oak Ridge Boys, Travis Tritt and Aaron Tippin had an excitement-packed, high-energy show. I think any country fan would have enjoyed it.

The fair runs from August 15-25. I suggest that anyone that plans to attend to try to stay two days. The admission price is $4 per day ($1 for senior citizens and children under 12). The fair is a great bargain at this price. The Kentucky State Fair is well worth the trip to Louisville.

Artistic display

Kentucky is a state of talented artists and craftspersons as evidenced by this display of handmade quilts and dolls at the Kentucky State Fair.

The wedding is planned for October 12 at 3:30 p.m. at Anderson Hills United Methodist Church, Cincinnati. A reception will be held at the Omni Netherlands in Cincinnati at 5 p.m. Invitations will be sent.

Tracy Lane Frazier and Michael Reed Newton, both of Chicago, have announced their engagement.

KEA documentary to air Thursday

On Thursday, August 29, at 7:30 p.m., a KEA-produced documentary highlighting the first year of the Kentucky Education Reform Act will air on eight television stations across Kentucky.

The show, KERA: The First Year, contains two segments which deal with aspects of the reform act which have already taken place: school-based decision making at Alton Middle School in Vine Grove (Hardin County schools) and superintendent screening committee in Boone County schools.

The documentary also points toward other aspects of KERA which will be implemented all over the state during the next few years. Greenwood High School in Bowling Green (Warren County schools) exemplifies a technologically active high school. The Math Their Way program at Morganfield Elementary (Union County schools) is the type of developmentally appropriate instructional strategy that will be used in the ungraded primary. And Wheelwright High School (Floyd County schools) teacher Carol Stumbo discusses new teaching and assessment strategies that will come from her work as a member of the Council on School Performance Standards.

U.K. head football coach Bill Curry is the show's guest host, introducing the entire show and each of the five segments and closing the show.

The documentary will be shown on WLEX (Lexington) and WYMT (Hazard). All stations will show the program on August 29 and on at second time of their choosing. After the show airs copies of the video will be available for check out from KEA's sixteen field offices.

The program was produced by KEA in conjunction with WAVE-TV 3 in Louisville. KEA chose to produce the documentary this year in lieu of traditional advertising. KEA President David Allen said, "With the passage of KERA, we realized that the story of school reform could not be told in a 30-second or 60-second or half page ad. The format of the documentary allowed us to showcase schools that are leading the way to better education for our children."

Warmth of commencement at MSU

Morehead State University President C. Nelson Grote conferred degrees on more than 400 undergraduate and graduate students during summer commencement ceremonies in Johnson Arena of the Academic-Athletic Center. As temperatures outside soared into the 90s, many of the graduates as well as other members of the audience followed Dr. Grote's suggestion "to sit back, relax and fan a little." Over 400 earn degrees at MSU summer commencement Encouragement and change were the themes at Morehead State University's Summer Commencement held Saturday in Johnson Arena of the Academic-Athletic Center.

MSU President C. Nelson Grote conferred graduate and undergraduate degrees on 405 students before an audience of more than 2,300 friends and family members of the graduates as well as members of the University community.

As temperatures outside soared into the 90s, the crowd chuckled as Dr. Grote welcomed them and urged them to "relax, sit back and fan a little."

While student speaker Katherine E. Ison of Sandy Hook reminded her classmates that the importance of "positive and uplifting words" can not be measured, Dr. Grote urged the graduates to make change an exciting factor in their lives as they face an exciting new time.

"You will face an extraordinary amount of change in your lifetime," MSU President Grote told the graduates. Those changes, he said, would not be limited to technology. "You will face the most pervasive economic and political changes of a global nature, reaching far beyond the United States," he said.

Urging them to travel and study, Dr. Grote told the new graduates to meet change head on and be the better for it.

"You never know what just one small compliment can do for a person's morale or their self-confidence," said Ison, a 1972 graduate of Elliott County High School who received her Bachelor of Arts degree with honors.

Ison worked full-time for the Elliott County Board of Education while earning her degree. The elementary education major plans to teach in her home county while pursuing her master's degree at MSU.

"If one person had told me that I couldn't make it in college, I may not have had the courage to even begin," she said.

Recounting a story about how Stevie Wonder's elementary school teacher had encouraged him to use his hearing to compensate for being blind, Ison reminded her listeners that everyone needs a little encouragement now and then.

"Who knows there may be another Stevie Wonder, Barbara Walters or George Bush among us today just waiting for that little shove to give them the confidence to move ahead," she said.

The wife of Phillip Ison and the daughter of Lonnie and Jean Click of Sandy Hook, she is the last of five Click children to graduate from MSU.

Following the conferring of degrees, Ted Coakley of Harrison, Ohio, MSU Alumni Association president, inducted the new graduates into the association.

After commencement, President and Mrs. Grote greeted the new alumni and their families at an Alumni Association-sponsored reception outside the AAC.

ALC classes of '65-'67 hold reunion

Alice Lloyd College alumni classes of 1965, 1966 and 1967 gathered at the Holiday Inn in Prestonsburg, on August 17, to renew acquaintances and share memories. The reunion was organized by Willis Newman, of Hi Hat, Kentucky, a member of the Class of 1966, and the alumni office at Alice Lloyd College, under Director of Alumni Affairs, Teresa Grender.

More than 150 alumni and their families were present at the reunion. The day began at 10:00 A.M. with a tour of the Alice Lloyd campus. Registration started at 4:00 P.M. at the Holiday Inn and was followed by hors d'oeuvres and a short program. Former college choir members sang for the group. Dianna Donahoe (1966) performed "Gypsy Rover." The program highlight featured a recreation of a tradition known as "Christian Forum." Former President Will Hayes and his wife, Edith, along with former students and staff members recounted stories of earlier days. The film, "Miracle on Caney Creek," a documentary of the history and work of the College was shown.

Newman was pleased with the success of the event. "It was a special time for us all. Many thanks to everyone who attended. They made the event a success," he noted.

Music was provided by Butch Hayes, station manager of WKCB, Hindman.

Greider named ALC alumni director

M. Fred Mullinax, President of Alice Lloyd College, has announced the appointment of Teresa Slone Greider as Director of Alumni Affairs. Greider assumed the position on August 1.

She is the eldest daughter of the late Archie Slone, former postmaster of Pippa Passes, Kentucky, and Shirlene Slone Collett of Campton and the wife of Armemann Greider, former student and instructor at Alice Lloyd College, now an engineer at Johnson Industries, Pikeville.

Greider is a 1977 graduate of Alice Lloyd College. In 1979, she worked for and later became assistant manager of the Hazard Radio Station, WSGS, until her resignation in May 1991 when she moved back to Knott County.

"I am very excited about coming back home and working at Alice Lloyd College," commented Greider. "This is a very special place. I'm looking forward to becoming acquainted with the Alice Lloyd College alumni. It will be a challenging work."

Greider's first task was that of representing the College at an alumni reunion of the classes of 1965, 1966, and 1967 at the Holiday Inn in Prestonsburg. She has been working with Willis Newman, a Floyd County alumnus, who organized the reunion. "All of us at Alice Lloyd College welcome Teresa to our staff," noted President Mullinax. "She has already become a valuable addition. We expect great things from her leadership among our alumni."

Local educators attend summer artists-in-residence workshop

Four Floyd County educators attended the Artists-in-Residence Summer Orientation Workshop for artists and coordinators, July 22-23 at the Kentucky Leadership Center at Faubush, Kentucky.

The AIR Program places professional artists into residencies in Kentucky Schools and communities to work, to demonstrate their art forms, and to share their ideas, creativity, and talents. The program is based on the premise that when artists, students, teachers, and community members work together, the educational experience of all groups is enriched.

The Floyd County educators met with Nancy Sherbourne, theatre artist, who will be working in the Floyd County Schools during the 1991-92 school year. She will be working with the fourth grades and with the high schools throughout the county.

Diane Hunsucker, Clark Elementary; Sally Miller, McDowell High School; Roberta Davidson, Floyd County supervisor; and Kitty Frazier, McDowell Elementary also attended many sessions conducted by various artists during this conference.

At Sports

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

ALWAYS BEEN A SPORTS NUT....

Well, some will tell you that I have always been a nut. Sports has always been a part of my life. I certainly enjoy all phases of it and lately have come to enjoy those events that I never thought would be fun.

I hear a lot of people say that they hate the game of golf and can't stand to watch it on television. I can't say that I ever hated the game but there was a time I wasn't interested in it as I am now. Since following it more closely and being around some of those that do play it, I have learned to enjoy watching.

Tennis. "Who likes to set there and move your head sideways while two or four people volley the ball backwards and forwards." Well, I enjoy watching a good tennis match locally or on television. Tennis is an exciting sport with two good players going at it.

Here in Floyd County, our first love has always been basketball and I guess that it always will be. I certainly love the game, I'll not deny that. The other day I was passing the building where Hoss Halbert's sporting goods store once was. The times we would just go in there to talk with Hoss and get a cold Coke out of his spin-around machine. He still has that machine. Those were memorable days. Hoss was always an "idol" of mine for many years. To me, Hoss Halbert was like a sports hero. And how many have I heard say almost the same thing over and over.

The old Martin gym where so many great basketball games were played. The tradition of a Martin team when an opposing team came to town. The rivals between different teams in the district.

I remember when the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse was built and the pride all Floyd Countians had when the fieldhouse was first used. It was the best place around to play the game of basketball and as far as I am concerned it is still the best place. The large gyms began to go as consolidation took place, The Allen Central gym and the "dome" at Betsy Layne are excellent places to play. McDowell got a new fieldhouse, although it is smaller than most. Still, it is cut above the old "cracker boxes" that once dotted the county.

Sports affords a person a place to let loose and just get involved in athletics. Now, in the county, track and field is beginning to make a move as well as swimming. New coaches with new philosophies are arriving on the scene with new ideas and methods.

Radio, and later television, had a bearing on the sports scene as ball games became more frequent on the air waves. A limited number of sporting events appeared on television. Then, with the advent of cable television, all systems now promote athletics. It was a special treat to see a Cincinnati Reds game on the tube back in the '50's.

I remember listening to KMOX out of St. Louis and then the "voice" of the Cardinals, Harry Carey, as he did the play-by-play for the Redbirds. He also did the broadcast for the old St. Louis Hawks pro basketball team. Harry never sang "Take Me Out To The Ball Game" there.

Carey was one of the great ones in the business. Bob Prince of the Pittsburgh Pirates was a hard act to follow, as was Waite Hoyt, "voice" of the Cincinnati Reds. I remember listening to the game when Hoyt announced that he would retire and Claude Sullivan replaced him on radio.

Remember the double-headers they used to play every Sunday. Not many double dips anymore.

Well, sports has always been a big part of my life and I guess it will always be. Until Wednesday, good sports everyone and be good sports!

Field of Dreams

Baseball Bonds Fans On Unique Bus Trip

There are baseball junkies. There are baseball nuts. There are baseball fanatics. In one of these categories — or all three — Gary Frazier, assistant superintendent of the Floyd County Schools and his wife Kitty can be found.

Frazier has lived and breathed baseball since he was a youngster, along with his father Sherrill Frazier and brother Lanny. Frazier was an avid St. Louis Cardinal fan while brother Lanny rooted for the Brooklyn (Los Angeles) Dodgers. Their dad was a die-hard Cincinnati Reds fan. Frazier is also a long-time collector of baseball cards and other Major League baseball memorabilia. He has a section of seats that once were part of the stands at old Crosley Field in Cincinnati, former home of the Reds.

Now, vacation time has become affected with his love for the game of baseball. Frazier and his wife Kitty spent a different kind of vacation this past June when they headed for La Crosse, Wisconsin and boarded a bus that took them on a nine-day tour of major league ball parks throughout the southeast.

"I subscribe to Baseball America," explained Frazier on his choice of vacations this past summer, "and I saw this advertisement about Jay Buckley's Baseball Tours. Well, Kitty and I discussed it and as big of a baseball fan as I am, I called Buckley out the tour.

"When I reached him, he was on a cellular phone and was at the new Comiskey Park (Chicago) as I talked to him."

Plans and reservations were made by the Fraziers, who really didn't know what to expect on such a tour.

"We didn't know what to expect," he said. "We had never been on one before, and what would take place, we did not know. I had heard of tours like Barney Rapp Tours that takes you to one ball park, but never to six or seven on one tour."

In the dark mostly about the trip, the Fraziers flew out of Louisville and headed for La Crosse to find their "Field of Dreams" in the baseball world. To Frazier, it was like being a kid again and having a wife to share those dreams with.

"Kitty is just about as big a baseball fan as I am," he explained about his wife's love for the game. "I've often wondered how I married a woman who enjoys baseball as much as I do. Kitty has an unusual way of marking her all-star ballot. She selects her team by how good the players look in their uniforms."

Frazier explained that the tour group he was with (about 25) ranged in age from nine years old up to 84 years old. "There were people from California, Massachusetts, New York and all over the United States. It didn't take long to find out whether we liked each other or not. Everyone had the same thing in common — baseball."

"I was surprised to learn that most of the people on the tour, I say about a third, were teachers," explained Frazier. "They were all very interesting people to be with."

The first stop for the Fraziers was in Dyersville, Iowa and the movie set of an appropriately named film — "Field of Dreams."

"It was just as it was in the movie," Frazier said. "A house and a baseball field cut out of a corn field. You could even go and walk into the corn field like they did in the movie. When we were leaving, people were out there running the base paths."

Frazier said the movie set had become a tourist attraction and that people came from all over to see the set. "They had a souvenir stand there, and admittance was free of charge, although they did ask for a donation. We drove on a two-lane road just like in the movie. It was great."

Off to a great start, the Fraziers and their group headed out for the Windy City, Chicago, and a first-time look at new Comiskey Park and a game between the Baltimore Orioles. "It was gorgeous," said Frazier. "I particularly didn't like the neighborhood it was in, but the park itself was gorgeous."

St. Louis was next on the Fraziers' itinerary as they saw the Pittsburgh Pirates and Cardinals battle it out. "St. Louis is a nice place," he said. "It is close to the downtown area and the Arch. It has a beautiful park atmosphere, and St. Louis has always had good fans."

One Cardinal fan who Frazier said he thought about on the trip was Denzil "Hoss" Halbert. "Being a former disciple of Hoss", I stopped and paid homage to a statue of Stan Musial. I thought that Hoss would like that."

The tour group was then given some free time to do some sightseeing around the St. Louis area.

After spending the night in Paducah, Kentucky, Atlanta was the next stop on the nine-day tour, but not before a brief stop at Opryland Hotel for a time of refreshing. Once in Atlanta, the Fraziers and others in the group were taken to see Underground Atlanta before going to see the Braves

Turner Receives Outstanding Performance Award At "Mailman's" Camp In Utah

For David Turner of Drift, a seventh grade student, a trip to visit his sister in Utah was more than what he expected. Turner had the opportunity to attend the Karl "The Mailman" Malone's basketball camp, held July 8-12 in Salt Lake City.

Turner not only attended but came away with a very prestigious award — the Outstanding Performance Award. The award was only one of four presented to the 375 campers at the Malone bash.

"We were going to Salt Lake City on vacation to visit my daughter that lives out there," said David Turner, the father of the younger Turner. "They told us about the camp and so we decided to register him for it. They were real nice to us and I was surprised that Karl Malone actually did what he did. In most camps the coaches don't have nothing to with it but make an appearance now and then. Malone not only directed the camp but conducted it also. Malone presented the award to David personally."

The award that the younger Turner won was based on overall performance in the five day camp. Points were awarded on the fundamentals of the game such as dribbling, passing, shooting and overall play. Turner also was one of the five top scorers in the 12-17 age group. Turner also won the free throw competition award. Campers came from all over the United States and some foreign countries were represented also.

Utah Jazz standout John Stockton, along with former Jazz coach Frank Layden, made a surprise visit to the camp. "They still call him coach in Salt Lake City."

"I got to stay in the gym and watch them play basketball," said Turner. "I could just go up and talk with Malone anytime and they were very courteous to us. I talked to him several times and I really enjoyed just being there myself."

Turner played basketball for the Mountain Christian Academy in Martin last year and was the team's leading scorer. This year he will be attending the Adams Middle School where he plans on playing for the young Blackcats.

Pack To Become Wheelwright's New Basketball Coach

It's over. It's officially over. Wheelwright now has a new head basketball coach — Jackie Pack. The decision to name Pack as the new Trojan coach came on Monday afternoon.

Pack is a former player at Wayland High School where he performed for the Wasps for four years. He played the first three years under the tutoring of James Hensley and his senior year was played under coach Jimmy Cox. Pack then went on to play basketball for Austin Peay University.

The new Wheelwright mentor held his first coaching job with Todd Central High School in Elkton where he was the school's assistant coach for five years.

"I handled the junior varsity team," Pack said. "In the five years at Todd Central, our JV team had a record of 82-22. After the stint at Todd Central, Pack took the head coaching job at small and unknown Olmstead (which is now Logan County) High School where he took the team to the regional tournament three of the four years he was there.

"They had not been to a regional tournament for 10 years," explained Pack, "until I got there." Pack had above .500 record at tiny Olmstead, 57-43.

"The last two years there, I had two sophomores on my starting five and the sixth man off the bench was a sophomore also. In their senior year, they won the state championship."

Success came to Calloway County when Pack took the coaching position at the First Region school. In his five year tenure at Calloway County, Pack won 94 games while losing 52. He took his team to the finals of the First Regional tournament three of the five years there.

The junior college ranks beckoned Pack, and he answered by moving to St. Catherine College just between Lexington and Louisville. For two years, Pack worked to build a program at the Junior College only to find himself yearning for a return to Floyd County. After two years and a first year record of 16-13 and going 13-15 in his second season, the decision was made.

"I came back last year for Christmas and decided that I wanted to come home," he explained. "I left Floyd County when I was 18 years old and I was gone for 21 years. I am proud of my heritage. I'm proud to be from Floyd County and always have been. I'm proud to be an Eastern Kentuckian."

Now, Pack inherits the job that was left vacant when Monroe Jones moved on to Powell County to continue his coaching career. The delay in naming a coach has held the returning players back because they could not attend any team camps over the summer. Now the work must begin to catch up, and Pack says the team can do it.

"We will just have to work harder to catch up," he said. The catching up part will begin when he is able to meet for the first time with the team.

"I want to be basically positive with those coming back this year," he said. I want to express to them that we are behind the other schools but that we can catch up. I want to tell them that we will have to work hard order to catch up."

Pack says that he will set some goals that will help the team to catch up, and that it may require putting in more time. "I have heard all summer how the kids coming back can really play basketball," he explained. "That's good. I'm a disciplinarian: I teach and stress the fundamentals of the game. I believe good coaching and good players can win some ball games."

Pack is a stickler for a conditioning program. He said that a month before the opening of practice (October 15) he will install a conditioning program for the players consisting of running, weight lifting, etc.

"I firmly believe that close basketball games are won and lost in the final four and five minutes of the ball game," he commented. "Therefore, if a player or players are not conditioned right, they could lose in the closing minutes as compared to a team that is conditioned."

"I would want them to be in condition when they come to practice on October 15," he stated. "A big factor in the success of a basketball program is how well conditioned they are."

Pack stated that he liked the up tempo type of game and that the Trojans will be a pressure team on defense. "I like that style of game and, of course, it is based on the type of kids you have on a team. Sometimes you are forced to play the way you don't like to."

Pack said the team would be a pressing team and run some traps out of their defense.

Hard work is the way that Pack defines his coaching strategy, and that hard work will be expected of those who want to play. "I believe that we will have to out work other people in ball games. I work hard and I expect for us to do exactly in a game what we learn in practice. I don't care to get beat 10 or 15 points as long as I know that we worked hard in the game. I will be the first one to go to a player and pat him and tell that he played hard. What upsets me is the mental mistakes."

"I will not ask a player to do anything in a game that I have not taught him in practice," he said, "and if a kid doesn't want to dedicate himself to the team then he can't play for me."

For the new Wheelwright coach, it doesn't all begin and end on the basketball floor. Academics is the number one priority with Pack. "Class room work is very important on one of my teams," he said, "in fact it is the most important. I think that what a kid learns in a class room will determine how he acts in public. If a player doesn't act right in public, he can't play basketball for me."

Pack believes that with discipline comes the right attitude. "Self discipline is very important in a player's career. There must be that self discipline. When the players walk on the floor, they need to know there is one player in charge — the coach."

"I won't be the kind of coach whom a kid has to worry about if he misses a shot or makes a mistake. They don't have to worry about looking over their shoulder and wonder if they are coming out," he explained. "My offenses are not geared to one player on a team. It's all a team con-and San Francisco Giants play baseball.

While no baseball was involved in the Superdome in New Orleans, the Fraziers had a chance to tour the super complex and was awed by its size. "We had a chance to take some tours in New Orleans, and we went to Bourbon Street (Jazz music). On August 8, the group arrived in Houston, Texas, for a trip to the Astrodome. "The food at the Astrodome was excellent," Frazier commented. "They had all kinds of different food and cafeterias that you could eat whatever you wanted."

Frazier said that he and his wife were taken with how clean the Astrodome was. "It was more like a church," he said, "in that at other parks people just throw stuff down. At the Astrodome, they get out of their seat and drop in a garbage can." Frazier said he just doesn't like a dome stadium for baseball.

Arlington, Texas, home of the Texas Rangers and fire balling, right hander Nolan Ryan awaited the arrival of the group with plenty of sight-seeing for the Frazier's. Frazier assessed Arlington Stadium like this.

"A renovated minor league park. However, the atmosphere was great for baseball. They are supposed to replace the park in '95," he stated.

A stadium that no other stadium can compare to as far as Frazier is concerned is the home of the Kansas City Royals. "In all the parks that I have been to, there are none that compare to Royals Stadium," he said. "It is absolutely beautiful. Spotless. Acres of parking. Easy access. No dirt. No garbage. Food's great and there were no bad seats."

Kansas is where the dream trip ended as the Fraziers flew out of Kansas City and headed for Louisville. "It was sad to see it end," he explained, "and hating to go back to the real world. A tour like this makes a super vacation for baseball fans. If they don't like baseball, then it would be boring."

Included in the tour were the charges for all motels and transportation. "They were good motels," he said. "On the bus traveling from one site to another they had two televisions, and we watched tapes of the places we were heading to. It really helped pass the time between stops." Different games were played on the bus during the group's travels.

"I honestly cannot sit here and say one negative thing about the trip," he said. "It was total relaxation and we are already making plans to go again next year. It is a chance to get to know other people real well. It is a Field of Dreams' vacation."

The tours are for different parts of the country and are taken in the summer months of July through October. Spring training tours are available to Florida or Arizona in March. A $100 deposit is required to reserve a spot on a tour and the balance due 35 days before the tour.

"You have to pay for your own food," Frazier explained. "So extra spending money is needed."

For Gary and his wife Kitty, the memories will never fade in their "Field of Dreams" vacation. "It's just something you can hold on to and be a kid again," said Frazier.

For those who would like to search for their "Field of Dreams" next season, more information will be mailed to you by contacting the Jay Buckley's Baseball Tours, Box 213, La Crosse, WI., 54602-0213 or phone (608) 788-9600.

cept. If a team has just that one player, I can defend that one player. We will be a team. As a team, we will run a lot of motion offense. A person cannot play basketball worrying about missing shots."

Pack said that he wants the kids to have confidence in themselves and what they can do on the court. "I want them to know that when they put up a shot that shot is important to the team."

Pack stated that he is very excited about taking the coaching job and, as far as he is concerned, October 15 cannot come too soon. "I am excited, pleased and glad that things have settled down and that we can now get on with it."

"I'm glad to be home and be around those that I care about — and I am excited about being paid for doing what I love to do."

Pack, who stressed that he is for the total sports' programs of the high school, said he will be attending the football games and hopes to have the support of the football coaches when basketball season starts.

"I just want to thank Mr. (Ron) Hager for giving me this opportunity to coach at Wheelwright and afford me the chance to come back home to Floyd County."

FISHIN' TIPS FROM THE TRACKER® PROS

Lure manufacturers are continually developing new color combinations and patterns from which an angler can choose. Today there are thousands of combinations of hard and soft lures with tempting appearances. Many seem to meet the approval of the fish. Most are designed to appeal to the angler. In truth, most will catch their share when properly fished.

Most pros agree that shades and contrasting combinations are more important than the actual color of the lure. Some combinations have become standards and have survived the test of time. Chartreuse remains a favorite for crankbaits and spinner baits, especially in stained or muddy water. A good fisherman changes color combinations often and is not afraid to experiment. Lure presentation and the confidence an angler places in his tackle probably holds the key to success. Follow the advice of successful fishermen. Use what they recommend.

Fishin' Tips are presented by America's #1 Fishing Boats.

Dr. Says: Be Wheel Wise

Biking, boarding and blading are the "hot" activities for more and more people this year.

Whether it's a means of transportation, an opportunity to exercise or just a pastime, bicycles, skateboards and rollerblades all require proper safety gear and knowledge of safety rules.

The cost of ignoring precautions is high. Every year half a million cyclists are injured in bicycling accidents, and over 100,000 people seek emergency room treatment for skateboarding accidents. In the newest sport of the three, rollerblading, accidents have increased an estimated 10 times over last year.

"These types of sports leave us vulnerable to head injury, because we're typically traveling at higher speeds and on hard surfaces," said Dr. James Wasco, medical director of the New Medico Head Injury System. New Medico provides rehab for individuals who have brain injuries from accidents, or from other causes.

"Any time we take it upon ourselves to go faster without properly protecting ourselves, we run the risk of injury." Though most of us can bounce back from a few bumps and bruises, a blow to the head could cause irreparable brain damage. Without wearing an approved helmet for any of these sports, your chances of serious injury increase significantly.

- Always wear a helmet when you're bicycling, skateboarding or rollerblading. Helmets are lightweight and are relatively inexpensive.
 - Protect yourself by wearing the proper safety gear. Use knee and elbow pads, gloves with padded palms and wrist guards.
 - Avoid poor road conditions. Rocks, bumps, or ruts in the road can cause serious accidents.
 - Go at moderate speeds. The more you increase your speed, the less control you have.
- "An active lifestyle is important for a healthy life, but we must be careful that our activities don't cause us harm," said Wasco. For more information about brain injury and rehabilitation, contact New Medico Head Injury System at 1-800-CARE TBI, ext. 3070.

Two Sets of Rules

Five years ago, Al Campanis, an official with the Los Angeles Dodgers, appeared on the television program "Nightline" and tried to explain the absence of blacks as managers and in the front offices of baseball teams. His comments, such as blacks not having the "necessities" for those jobs, were so obviously prejudiced they prompted an outcry.

Baseball was embarrassed. Many promises were made that an all-out effort would be made to improve the situation. I met with then Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, and he seemed genuinely interested in reform.

Have we progressed in five years? Not really. Other than a very visible action or two, such as naming Bill White president of the National League, nothing has happened. That is why when "Nightline" invited me to appear on the fifth anniversary of its first baseball program, I made no bones about my feelings.

I know Commissioner Fay Vincent has a tough job. But I also know that somewhere along the line somebody's got to take the bull by the horns and say we've got to do something about this problem.

Let's face it, there are two sets of rules for hiring in baseball. I see case after case of white players hired right off the field into important baseball jobs. When blacks apply for these jobs, they are told they have to have years of experience.

This attitude toward blacks may be coming back to haunt baseball. I know of a study that baseball has carefully smothered that shows most blacks view baseball as a white man's sport. This is a shocking statement to me, and it should be to the commissioner.

Baseball isn't doing enough to promote the game in black neighborhoods. Many black communities don't have Little League programs or Pee-wee Leagues. Many poorer schools are dropping baseball as an organized sport. Money also is a factor. It costs a great deal to put a glove on a kid's hand, a uniform on his back, a pair of spikes on his feet and to provide a playing field. In addition, the average black family can't afford to come to the ballpark as often as the average white family. Even if you buy tickets in the Bob Uecker seats, it costs a lot of money.

Many gifted athletes who might have chosen baseball 30 years ago are now choosing football or basketball. They know that for every three or four college baseball scholarships there are 40 football scholarships.

What can be done? Well, there's a small program now that promotes the game of baseball in black neighborhoods. Professional baseball has given the program some operating money in recent months. But that program was created by a scout in the Texas Rangers organization, not by the commissioner's office.

Professional baseball's leadership needs to direct some of its creativity to this problem as well as open up its purse. Team owners also need to reach beyond the same old-fashioned, "Good Old Boy" system and give some of the management jobs to retiring black players. ld

Storie Captures Ohio State Bass Championship

Jack Storie of Butler, Ohio, and formerly of Doty Creek in Floyd County, captured the Ohio State Championship with a 8.67 pound bass that he caught at a farm pond in Ohio.

The catch is the largest in the state and earned Storie a spot in the Big Bass World Championship which will be held at Opryland in Nashville. Storie will be competing for a top prize of $100,000.

He is the son of the late Jack and Irene Storie and the grandson of the late William and Amerge Storie of McDowell.

LMU Announces Men's Basketball Schedule

Lincoln Memorial University has announced its 1991-92 men's basketball schedule, according coach Marc Comstock. Comstock is the former coach at Pikeville College.

The upcoming season will open with the Coca Cola Classic to be played November 22 and 23 in Savannah, Georgia. Other teams participating in the tournament will include Wingate, West Georgia and host Armstrong State.

The Railsplitters will have their own tournament this year scheduled for December 20 and 21. Auburn University at Montgomery and the University of Alabama at Huntsville will play in addition to a fourth team to be announced. This tournament will be unique in that women's teams from the four schools will have a tournament coinciding with the men's.

Teams new to the schedule this year include Pfeiffer College, Longwood College, Catawba College, University of Tennessee at Martin and Queens College.

The Railsplitters have completed their move to the NCAA Division II and will no longer participate in the NAIA activities.

LMU is looking to build on a 6-21 record last season and will be starting the season with nine new members on a 14 member roster.
