Body discovered in creek, autopsy planned :

Missing man found dead

Road bill passes:

More money coming

The Senate passed a five-year $123 billion transportation bill by a 91-7 margin Wednesday night that will give states more leeway in dividing the money between roads and mass-transit programs.

With this bill, Kentucky could gain $600 million over the next five years, bringing the state's total to $1.48 billion in federal highway funds for fiscal years 1992-96.

The House is also working on a five-year $150 billion bill that would be financed, partially, by an additional gasoline tax of five cents per gallon. Currently the tax is 14.1 cents with each penny yielding about $1 billion in revenue.

After meeting with key House and Senate members about the highway bill, Governor Wallace Wilkinson said he was hopeful the House version would be "every bit as good if not better" than the Senate bill.

The new Senate bill will permit states more flexibility in how road revenue is spent. The legislation will also enable Kentucky to designate roads to be built as part of a national highway system.

The state's allocation includes an estimated $146 million in additional funds from the federal highway trust fund, which would return to Kentucky a dollar for every dollar the state contributes to the fund in gasoline tax revenue. The state had been getting back about 80 cents for every dollar contributed, the governor said.

"I feel pretty good about it," Wilkinson said of Senate approval to return all but about $3 billion to the states. "I've repeatedly said let's put the trust back in the trust fund," he added.

U.S. Senator Wendell Ford also called the legislation a good deal for Kentucky.

"Kentucky has clearly been carry-miles from his residence by Rodney Blackburn and Gerald Maynard. Boyd's brother, Luther, reported him missing on Wednesday.

Boyd had been dead approximately four to five days, said deputy coroner Glenn Frazier. Boyd was last seen alive last Thursday. The body was sent to Louisville for an autopsy, but foul play is not suspected at this time, Frazier said.

Boyd's brother and his wife visited him about two times a month to check on him and bring him food, Frazier said. They became alarmed and notified authorities when he was not at home Wednesday.

Blackburn said he and Maynard began their search Wednesday after hearing Boyd was missing. They found the body about two hours later.

"We used to see him out in his yard sometimes, but we didn't know he was missing until today (Wednesday)," Blackburn said. "We just started looking up and down the road for him. We decided to look on the creek bank and we found him."

Kentucky State Police detective Les Stapleton and Floyd County Deputy Sheriff Linzie Hunt are investigating Boyd's death. Police officials went to Boyd's residence and found nothing missing from his home. An article of Boyd's clothing was found on a path behind his house.

Members of the Floyd County Emergency and Rescue Squad removed Boyd's body from the scene.

The death is still under investigation by detective Stapleton and the Floyd County Sheriff's department.

Cancer patient seeks cure in Bahamas:

Alternative therapy gives family hope

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

The diagnosis of a terminal illness for a parent can be devastating to a family. There is always hope that a treatment can be found to cure or battle the deadly disease. When it appears that that hope can be turned into a reality, families unite in an effort to provide any chance at living.

Monnie Beverly, 64, of East Point was diagnosed with colon and liver cancer in March and was given three to seven months to live. Conventional chemotherapy treatment was not a viable option in her case. Doctors gave her a 15-20 percent chance of responding to the treatment, said Janie Beverly, her daughter.

Beverly's children then began to search for an alternative cancer treatment for their mother. An article in "Woman's Day" magazine led the family to Patrick McCrady, a Washington State research consultant, who started a nationwide information bank listing alternate treatments for cancer patients. McCrady not only keeps a list of facilities and doctors providing treatment, he also visits the sites in order to evaluate the treatments.

McCrady's research provided five alternate treatments for Mrs. Beverly's condition and he recommended the Burton Therapy developed by Dr. Lawrence Burton. Burton practices his procedure at a clinic in the Bahamas.

Burton's therapy is immuno-augmentative, a process that pools blood from the cancer patient to develop a serum that contains no cancer cells and it is injected back into the patient to activate the immune system.

Beverly and her sister began researching their mother's disease; talked with patients who had the treatment; and their mother decided to have the therapy.

"We checked with patients who have had this procedure at Dr. Burton's clinic and the success rate has been 70-80 percent," Janie Beverly said. "That's a far cry from 15-20 percent. Some of the patients who had the therapy six years ago were given two months to live at the time. At least it gives us some hope."

The cost for the therapy and living expenses for Mrs. Beverly and her daughter, Vicki Morgan, is a major factor facing the family. In order to begin the treatment, the family had to pay $5,000 up-front and the treatment is $500 a week, not including doctor's fees. The family pooled their resources to pay their mother's and sister's initial expenses.

But, the cost of living expense plus cost of the treatment are beginning to put a financial drain on the family. Their mother, a widow, did not have medical insurance when she was diagnosed with cancer and she is not eligible for Medicare, Beverly said. Non-traditional cancer treatments are not usually covered by insurance, she said.

Mrs. Beverly arrived in the Bahamas on Memorial Day and has been responding well to the treatment, her daughter said.

"She's gained three and a-half pounds and her hemoglobin is up," Beverly said. "She had lost over 30 pounds. She receives a certain number of injections each day. The last four days have shown a very high tumor-kill rate in her blood. They believe the cancer cells have quit multiplying. Now they're concerned with shrinking the tumors."

To avoid Chapter 11 :

Pricing relief is a must

Because of contracts entered into in previous years to protect the company from fluctuating gas prices, Columbia Gas System, Inc., is now paying prices much higher than those available to non-contracted buyers and threatening to seek bankruptcy court protection.

The board of directors of the Columbia Gas System, Inc., as a result of financial difficulties facing Columbia Gas Transmission Corp., its principal pipeline subsidiary, suspended the dividend on its common stock Wednesday.

The company blamed warm weather in recent years for depressing gas prices on spot markets, leaving the company locked into contracts to buy gas at much higher prices set years ago when supplies were tighter.

The gap between what the company pays for gas and what it sells it for could be as much as $1 billion, the company said.

James P. Holland, chairman and CEO of Columbia Transmission, said he and other company officials were contacting all producers to notify them of the company's serious financial difficulties and to begin efforts to restructure all of its high-cost contracts to make them market sensitive.

"We must have strong encouragement from representative producers by the end of July and commitments from substantially all the producers by the beginning of the heating season if these efforts are to succeed," he added.

Columbia System Chairman John H. Crooms cautioned that the Columbia System's failure to reestablish and continuously maintain adequate lines of credit with its banks or the failure of producers to respond promptly and favorably to Columbia Transmission's efforts to restructure its contracts could force the System, the pipeline subsidiary, or both to seek protection from creditors under the bankruptcy laws.

The Columbia Gas System, headquartered in Wilmington, Delaware, is one of the largest natural gas systems in the United States. Its subsidiaries are engaged in the production, purchase, storage, transmission and distribution of natural gas at wholesale and retail levels as well as related energy development. Directly or indirectly Columbia companies serve more than 8 million homes, businesses and industries in 15 states, including Kentucky.

According to R.T. Daniels, president of Kentucky-West Virginia Gas Company, which services much of Floyd County, Kentucky-West has several contracts with Columbia Gas, including transportation and some supply. However, due to much of the

The Plastic Shop :

Creative company fills void

by Tess A. Whitmer
Assistant Editor

A little known company operating in Floyd County makes items you won't find in most stores. The company is called I.P.F. (Innovative Plastic Fabricators), or more simply — The Plastic Shop.

The Plastic Shop is operated by three partners, David Boesen, his wife, Cathy, and Randy Humble. All three are originally from Michigan and moved here in January under Humble's recommendation. Humble has family in the area.

David Boesen said he and his partners moved here because there wasn't another operation like theirs around.

"Plastics are a new concept," Boesen said, "which has kind of worked against us because no one knows exactly what we do."

What Boesen does, is manufacture just about anything the mind can imagine out of plastic, from customized display cases, paperweights containing bumble bees suspended in mid-flight, and baseball card holders to blackout covers for headlights.

"There are a million different things you can do with plastic," Boesen said. "A lot of people come in having an idea of what they want but they don't know exactly. I'll sit down with them, find out how much they want to spend and design them a piece to fit their specifications."

For example, Boesen had a police officer come in who needed a piece for his car that would cost him $15 from the manufacturer. Boesen looked at the piece, cut it, polished it and installed it while the customer waited and charged $4.

Other popular plastic items that can be obtained through The Plastic Shop include boat windshields, patio table replacement tops, rear car windows, sliding doors and aquariums. Large or small, The Plastic Shop's motto is, "if you want it, we'll make it."

"He (Boesen) has an imagination which will make things work," Cathy Boesen said. "If it's at all possible he'll find a way to make it."

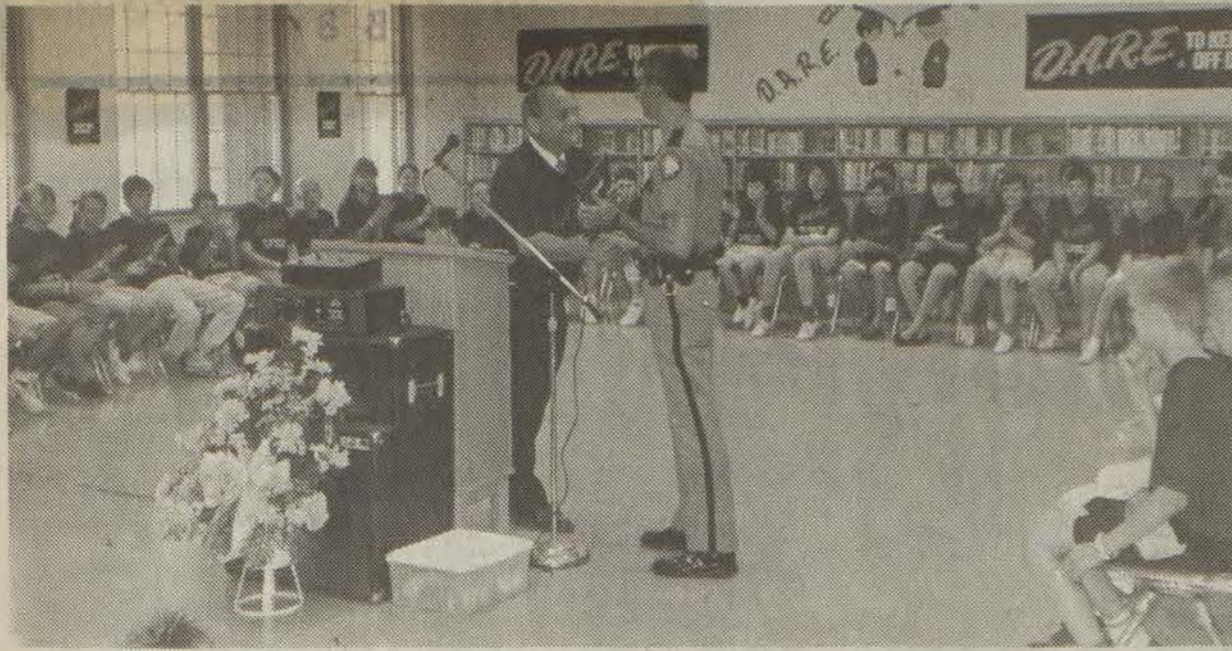

Another side of the manufacturing operation is work for companies making hard to find pieces. For example, Tel-Com has sought Boesen's talent to make a small plastic box to fit over electrical circuits in cable systems. The part was discontinued through Tel-Com's original supplier and, in order for the company not to have to redesign their system, it needed to create a replacement for

Richly deserved

Sporting his new DARE t-shirt, Ralph O'Quinn, principal of James A. Duff Elementary School, presents a plaque of appreciation to State Trooper Ghomer Prater at the DARE graduation on Thursday. Prater was the DARE instructor for the school. At the ceremony, Kevin Meyers, reporter for WYMT-TV, spoke about people "whose lives had been put on hold" by drug use. The third grade class performed a dance and rap entitled "DARE Drugbusters" and some of the graduates read essays, poems and performed skits about drug awareness. The fifth grade teachers, essay winners and Principal O'Quinn all received "Shoney's DARE bears" from Trooper Prater. this small item. Boesen supplied that service.

Business started off slow at first, with customers hearing about the shop through word of mouth and relatives purchasing items. Today business is picking up, but still many people do not know about the products and services available at the shop, located on Route 550 near Allen Central High School.

"We want to get large enough so we can start to hire local people," Boesen said. "It (plastic work) is not something you need a masters degree for. It's basically like a shop class. I like to stress the machining part of it, not selling plexiglass, because there is so much you can do with it."

"If a person wants to get some little dippy-doodle cut out of plastic while they wait, where can they go?"

Boesen asked. "There's nowhere. Our nearest competition is in Lexington."

In addition to creating things with plastic, the three partners also play in a band they call the "Highway 80 Bluegrass Band." David Boesen plays the banjo, Randy Humble plays the guitar and Cathy Boesen plays the bass. A fourth member, Perry Ward, plays the mandolin. They recently played at the Bluegrass Festival in Elkhorn City and were invited back for a second night.

"The band helps us pay they rent while we are getting started here," David Boesen said.

So, if you need a display case for that first baseball Junior pitched, you have a china doll collection that needs protection or you just want to buy a small piece of plexiglass, The Plastic Shop is the place to go.

Part II: The destruction of a people : Understanding the struggle

by Dr. Tom Matijasic

Few people realize that Adolf Hitler was more a product of the old Austrian Empire than he was of Germany. The old Austrian Empire encompassed much of East-Central Europe prior to World War I. Even though the German Austrians dominated the political and economic positions within the Empire, they made-up less than twenty percent of its population. Hitler grew up sharing the fears of many Austrian Germans that they were about to be submerged in a sea of Slavs, Magyars (Hungarians) and Jews. In the major cities of the Empire, like Vienna, Prague and Budapest, Germans were forced to compete with Jews for positions in trade and the professions. Historian A.J. Ryder noted that even though Jews formed, "just over 8 percent of the population they accounted for about one-third of the university students, and industry and trade were to an overwhelming extent in Jewish hands."

The brilliance of East-Central Europe's Jewish community was remarkable by any standard. The old Jewish quarter in Prague produced writer Franz Kafka and the celebrated sixteenth-century scholar Rabbi Low. The career of psychiatrist Sigmund Freud is closely associated with the city of Vienna. Yet their success produced as much envy as it did respect. After spending several years in Vienna, Hitler declared, "The Jew was no German." He left Vienna for Munich in 1913 a converted anti-Semite.

On January 30, 1933, Hitler became Chancellor of Germany. Within months he began to consolidate his power, turning a functioning democracy into a totalitarian dictatorship. In the process, he redefined traditional definitions of treason and prepared to purge Germany of what he considered "undesirable elements." By March, 1933 it was apparent that Germany's established prisons could not hold the new influx of political prisoners so special concentration camps were established to serve as detention centers. Dachau was the first and largest of the original camps. It also has the distinction of being the first camp guarded by the infamous "Death Head" units of the SS. In 1937 the smaller camps were closed down and prisoners were concentrated in Buchenwald and Sachsenhausen. By the end of that year there were over five thousand soldiers in the Death Head units.

The creation of concentration camps coincided with Nazi attacks upon the Jewish population of Germany. Under the 1935 Nuremberg laws, Jews were deprived of full citizenship and marriage between Jews and Gentiles was prohibited. In 1938, the Nazi government began expropriating Jewish businesses and sending hundreds of Jews to Buchenwald, Dachau and Sachsenhausen. On the nights of November 8 and 9, mobs burned Jewish synagogues, businesses and homes throughout Germany. Thousands were subjected to violent attacks and almost a hundred were killed. A week later, Jewish children were barred from attending school. The following year, Jews were systematically expelled from Germany.

Editor:

I would like to comment on a report released by the Appalachian Center of the University of Kentucky on unemployment figures in Eastern Kentucky. This report has been getting a lot of attention from both the press and the public, and I believe justifiably so.

The reason I say that is we've known all along that the unemployment statistics provided to us are low, inaccurate and misleading. They do not tell the true story of joblessness in our region. Instead, they paint a hazy picture of the unemployment scene here with broad strokes that completely miss the target. They do not signal the urgency that we feel to recruit industries and get jobs in our area.

The method by which our country and the states tabulate unemployment figures is outdated and needs to be changed. When the study was released, I contacted the General Accounting Office (the congressional agency in charge of investigations and research) and challenged them to go beyond the numbers and see why we do not have an accurate portrayal of how many unemployed working Americans there are in this country.

Republican presidents and administrations have time and time again told us that the system is fine just the way it is and doesn't need to be changed. What these administrations have done is keep the numbers artificially low so they can provide a rosy picture of a healthy country with a healthy economy. They create an artificial image of a prosperous workforce when, in reality, we know better than anyone else that it's simply not the case.

We see on the news that the nation's unemployment rate is five to six percent. While what they say may be true for the rest of the country, we sure know it isn't the case here. Our unemployment rate is much higher (as the report points out), so high sometimes that it defies logic and leaves us grasping for an explanation.

I am tired of being misled. The system must be changed. I look forward to finding out what the General Accounting Office recommends and taking action to fix a system that is definitely in need of major repair.

I was very disappointed to find out that the Jenny Wiley Amphitheater this summer, for one of its four plays, was presenting Jesus Christ Superstar. We have, for several years, taken our employees to see some of the plays at the Jenny Wiley Theater. We will not be attending the Jenny Wiley Theater this year.

My personal feeling is that this play is blasphemous and we, as Christians, need to take a firm stand against such plays and shows. Jesus Christ is not a superstar. John 14:9 says "Jesus saith unto him, 'Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Phillip? He that hath seen me hath seen the Father.'" Jesus Christ is not a superstar — He is God and is not to be put on the level of the Hollywood stars.

I realize if only one person takes a stand on this, they probably will not listen. I also know if enough Christians take a stand and let them know our feelings, they will listen.

Let me say again, Jesus Christ is my Savior and it offends me when they use his name this way and do not show Him the reverence He deserves.

I read with interest last week the letter from Joseph Martin. I do not know Mr. Martin; but, bless his heart, I am sure the good hard-working taxpayers of Floyd County appreciate his concerns about the need for more dedication from you public school teachers. I, too, was educated in the Floyd County School System and have several relatives in school there now. With sadness, I read in your paper a year or so ago when the state Education Department said "Floyd County has education in system only." When I attended school there, the students respected the teachers and the teachers respected the principals and others in positions of authority. No candidate for public office, unless he or she were foolish or deceitful, would promise a perfect school system or all the money teachers desire. But, the people in Floyd County are in urgent need of educators that will work with vigor training the little children — guiding, directing and encouraging the proper impetus towards a good education.

I do not fully distrust the future of essential education in your county. The people of Floyd County have not failed. In their need, they must register a protest that they want direct and vigorous action, i.e. teachers in the classroom at the beginning of the school year ready and willing to instruct the children. It is one thing to be soft and weak in body, but it is something else to be weak in character, devotion, commitment, conviction and love for your children's education. To the good teachers there that have their priorities in order, I tip my hat to you.

In the final analysis, when Floyd County puts children first and educators' selfish greed second, they can then go a long way toward fulfilling John F. Kennedy's statement, "in our educational system, we must climb to the hilltop."

Editor:

I roamed those beautiful mountains of Floyd County, especially of Eastern Kentucky, a lot when I was just a boy. My dad taught me the names of all the trees that grew on them. I worked every day, except Saturday afternoon and Sunday, and when I wasn't working, I was exploring the mountains and the Indian graves. There are some at Pyramid on the top of the mountain between Middle Creek and Pitts Fork if the coal mining industry hasn't destroyed them.

On the west side of Middle Creek on top of the mountain is a high rock which I climbed on top of many times as a boy. Looking east, I counted mountain tops. What a beautiful sight. Many times, I could see smoke from the old train going up and down Beaver Creek and hear that lonesome whistle. There were times I would cry. I knew there was a God and he created everything for me to look at. How I loved those good old days and those wonderful old mountains. Many young kids of today never climb the mountains and find out what there is for them. The time will come when the coal companies will have them all leveled. What a disgrace to destroy a beautiful country that God created for us.

I'm not able to climb any more — I was 77 last Monday. However, I still have a good mind and so much love for Floyd County.

The Prestonsburg Women's Club urges you to participate in a community beautification project. As part of this project, please help us by following these suggestions:

As a pedestrian, hold on to litter until you reach a container.

As a motorist, use a car litter container and keep parking lots clean by using litter containers provided.

As a householder, have enough trash cans; dispose of trash in them carefully to keep it from scattering; secure lids on trash cans; secure brush and yard trimmings and put them out at the curb for collection; keep sidewalks, driveways, yards and alleys clean; call 886-2335 the first week of each month for pickup of larger items and recycle cans, plastics and newspapers.

As a merchant, look around your business property for unsightly litter; make sure all fences are cleaned of blowing trash and check the alley behind your property for trash.

As a citizen, encourage others to follow these same practices.

Coffee Break

The plight of the pot-bellied pig. An animal rights group is protesting an American Diabetes Association fundraiser in Louisville which involves a Vietnamese Pot—Bellied Pig.

And what vile plot is being hatched to abuse this porker's privilege?

It will be the recipient of a smooch.

Animal rights activist Eric Reed decried the promotion as using animals "for fun and profit."

Holy hamhocks, Batman, is this guy for real?

If kissing a pig to raise money for diabetes research is abusive, Arnold Ziffle's rise to TV stardom on "Green Acres" was downright sadistic.

A kiss is just a kiss.

Porkchops are forever.

If pig-kissing is animal abuse, we're the Marquis de Sade of fleadom.

Yes, we confess that we take great pleasure in torturing and murdering fleas.

Any pet owner knows that these tiny ankle-biters are the scourge of summer and they seem to proliferate only when you are away from home for a few days.

After spending three days in Cincinnati, we came home to the mother of all flea family reunions and we have spent the last few days mass murdering the little vampires.

We've given up on driving stakes through their hearts and just started smashing them with the hammer.

The only good flea is a dead flea.

The Floyd County Solid Waste Commission has a hit in Kathy Hamilton's coloring book, to be used to indoctrinate youngsters on the issues of litter and solid waste disposal.

Littering, like heart disease, is often an inherited trait. Youngsters pick up the habit from their parents, who picked it up from their parents.

Breaking the cycle means breaking the habit and the best way to accomplish that is to start educating children while they are still impressionable.

The solid waste commission's coloring book will help make that learning process fun.

A great idea.

A bad idea.

Senator Mitch McConnell's nomination of a close friend for the office of U.S. Attorney appears to be a case of cronyism at its worst.

McConnell's attacks on critics of his choice of Karen Caldwell for the post is absurdity at its best.

The Senator from Kentucky claims only "sexists" would object to Caldwell's appointment.

That's baloney.

There are legitimate concerns about Caldwell's credentials and her relationship with McConnell.

Looks like Tailgunner Mitch is at it again, and it appears that Good 'Ol Boy politics are alive and well in Kentucky.

Too bad.

Accountability

Making public employees, whether they be school personnel or county road workers, submit an itinerary detailing where they go, who they see and what they do is an excellent idea.

The decision by the Floyd County School Board to require administrative personnel to file a proposed and actual itinerary will bring some accountability to the system. It will also inform the public as to what are administrator's responsibilities and duties.

It will, at the very least, attempt to show why Floyd County's administrators are some of the highest paid in the state and, hopefully, put to rest some of the public's doubts and concerns.

We'll see.

This is one bandwagon all public agencies should jump on.

Dope Hunting

Law enforcement agencies are busy this time of year hunting through the hillsides and on mountain tops searching for fields and patches of marijuana. Big finds are usually the ones widely reported, but little is known about the countless, and usually unsuccessful, trips beforehand. Checking out tips and looking in likely places are also a big part of Kentucky law enforcement's biggest summer activity.

The Floyd County Sheriff's Department hasn't had one of their "big finds" so far this year, but it's not for lack of trying.

Several days of mountain climbing by one of the department's "dope hunters" didn't pay off, but it did give a peek at what is involved in doing the looking:

Get a tip; following up on it by searching for hours in the area with an out of shape, inexperienced, but willing to try reporter; finding nothing; rechecking the tip; getting more details; spending several more hours searching; finding nothing; and doing it all again.

Whether or not the big pot patch is ever found doesn't take away from the effort, sweat and sore muscles the "hunters" experience during and after the "hunt." The letdown of coming up empty handed doesn't diminish the desire to go "hunting" again, it just increases it.

It's like most everything else—Pot Luck!

Field obituary

Big Sandy Civil War units are regrouping after 125 years

The 14th Kentucky Volunteers, USA, and the 5th Kentucky Volunteers, CSA, are again calling all good men of the Big Sandy Valley to arms! However, membership will be far more fun and a great deal safer than when these units came into being long ago.

The 14th Kentucky was formed in Lawrence County, early in the Civil War as was the 5th which was based in Floyd County. Men from most all counties of the valley were members of these two units and each have impressive regimental histories, a fact that most present day citizens do not realize.

Both the 5th and 14th spent the early part of the conflict sparring each with the other in and around the Big Sandy Valley with the forces of the Union gaining dominance after the Battle of Middle Creek. Later on each was involved in the chess match that was played out for control of the Cumberland Gap though no real battle was ever fought there. It was in 1864 that the 5th and 14th, all our ancestors, got their chance for glory.

Early that year the 14th was assigned to the Army of the Cumberland under General Sherman and participated in all the important battles in the Atlanta campaign. They fought at Peach Tree Creek, Marietta, New Hope Church and others with the 14th one of the leading regiments in the attack on Kennesaw Mountain which was a heavily fortified Confederate position. The attack was the only mistake Sherman admitted to in the campaign. Three thousand Union casualties resulted with Confederate losses less than 750.

The 5th Kentucky, CSA, was much involved in the Atlanta campaign and it is very likely that our local fighting men exchanged a volley or two sometime along the way.

There will be a meeting on Thursday, June 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the library in Paintsville for anyone interested in joining the 5th or the 14th with the aim being a re-creation (with other existing units being invited to help out) of the battle of Middle Creek next year as part of the Kentucky Bicentennial celebration. It is hoped re-enactments of the Battle of Middle Creek can become an annual event.

As a bonus those who belong to a re-enacting unit can apply to participate in battle re-enactments in places like Perryville (this October), or Shiloh, or Gettysburg, but of course these would be extras and not required.

"Trash Bash '91" was a smash

By Ranger Bonnie Maki

Dewey Lake's celebration of Earth Day turned out to be a smashing success. The Corps of Engineers got together with Jenny Wiley State Park to sponsor a Lakewide Cleanup. The heroes of the day were 91 volunteers who contributed their time to make everyone's Dewey Lake a clean and pristine place. They picked up four tons of garbage from around the lake. After the clean-up Jenny Wiley State Park treated them to an old fashioned cook-out with hamburgers and hotdogs off the grill.

The Bash started with registration at 11 a.m., April 20. The Corps provided trash bags and each group was assigned a section of the lake to clean up. Even though it was a chilly Saturday all the volunteers worked very hard and filled 165 bags of trash to the brim.

These volunteers are true heroes. The Corps of Engineers and Jenny Wiley State Park would like to thank all the members of the following groups for giving of themselves:

Adams Middle School 7th graders; Brew Crew Softball Team; Doug DeRossett's group from Martin Elementary; Group from Carl D. Perkins Job Corps; Cub Scout Pack 854 Den #1; Dewey Lake Fish and Game Club; and Judith Carter and a friend.

Also Debbie and Jason Turan; "Alligator" John Spurlock; Margaret Zlotky and Carol Mulling; Sharon and Roger Lee Collins; Dustin and Amy Theis and Sarah Sizemore; and everyone who helped out.

If you would like to become a volunteer with the Corps of Engineers, call Ranger Bonnie Maki 886-6709.

NOT WASTED TIME

Some things seem like they never change, like my constant worry about what I'm going to do with my life after graduation. Options for English majors with bachelor's degrees are limited. When I ask people if they know of a career that I could go into, one person's response was, "Why don't you go into education? There are some really easy jobs there."

"What are they?" I asked. "Classroom teachers, of course. They're paid a good salary for only six hours a day and nine months of work. They've got the whole summer to sit around and relax while the rest of us keep working." This person continued with this line of thought, culminating in the assertion that teachers are overpaid and have a cushy lifestyle.

I don't know if I'm going into education as a career or not, but I'm not far enough removed from high school to forget my teachers and the job they do.

I owe a lot to some of the teachers I had while I was in the Floyd County school system. I saw some of the most dedicated men and women in any profession within the ranks of the teachers.

Given, there are some teachers who are simply collecting a paycheck and doing the absolute minimum to keep their job, but most teachers I come in contact with do not fall into that category.

Our society places a great deal of emphasis on social standing. Social standing comes largely through wealth. Teaching does not pay great sums of money, as with most public service jobs, and it is looked upon as a second class employment opportunity. With many college students today, teaching is looked upon as a "safety" job — one to fall back on if every other conceivable option falls through. College students are usually chasing money, and teaching can't provide that. Only the truly dedicated choose teaching as a first profession. The nine-month-on, three-month-off "lazy teacher" assumption is a myth as well, since many teachers use the summers to further their educations.

Society sees nothing wrong with paying six-digit salaries to doctors, private-practice lawyers and CEOs. We expect these people to make that kind of money. Teachers prepare students for these professions. Society trusts these underpaid, underappreciated people with creating the "leaders of tomorrow." Teaching used to be a prestigious career. Teaching could become so again, if new blood could be attracted — enthusiastic young people who care about the future.

To attract the cream of the crop to the profession, the salary needs to be raised to a respectable level so that these new teachers feel they are being compensated for their work. A happy worker is a good worker, and a few dollars more — plus some additional influence for the teachers on the system, such as site-based management — would improve the quality of teaching across the board.

However, I can hear the rumblings from the boardroom, "Typical liberal — just wants to throw money at the problem. How can we pay for this?"

The money is there. If this country can protect its national security by building billion-dollar Stealth bombers, then it can protect its national security by chipping in the cost of one of these plans to boost teachers' salaries.

Monks take vows of poverty to prove their dedication to God. Teachers should not need to make the same vow for a school system.

Miscellaneous... Recently, I attended the smashing debut of the new rock/blues band "Pass The Hat" in an intimate venue on Lower Twin in Johnson County. Not bad chops for a newly formed bunch. Their drummer is a reincarnation of the late John Bonham. Potential exists.

Also, I'm taking a break. Yes, I know I just got here, but I have another summer job in Connecticut. I'll be back in a few weeks to finish up my stint here. So, until next time, "There's a Red House on the corner..."

Later days.

Readers reactions

Since I have been writing this column, I have had several people to comment on the articles. Most people have positive things to say. I suppose my worst critic is Ryan, my 10-year-old son. Sometimes I let him look over an article before I send it in. His typical comment is something like this: "five misspelled words and a pack of lies." This from a child who gets into hot water quite often because he won't check over his work and could talk his way out of a Watergate Scandal. Maybe he will grow up to be a critic or, heaven forbid, a politician.

Several of the people who have mentioned the column to me are from out of state. It seems that people leave

Floyd County, but they keep in touch by subscribing to the Floyd County Times. I saw Wally Cook at the flea market in Prestonsburg the other day, and he asked me why I didn't write about some of the Caney (Alice Lloyd College) stories. Wally lives in Franklin, Ohio, but he is basically still a hillbilly. I told him I could get shot if I brought up some of those stories. He said, "That's ok." I took that to mean that it is all right for me to get shot as long as Wally is miles away and safe. Wally, if I ever have an opportunity to do such a story, I'll be sure to include the worst thing you ever did. (I don't know what it is yet, but I will find out.)

Last week, I got a letter from Magdalene (Bentley) Little from Columbus, Ohio. This is her letter:

Dear Mr. Elliott
I am writing you to let you know how much I enjoy your column in the Floyd County Times.

I wanted to ask you who your parents were or are. When I taught school at Frasure's Creek (49-50), I had a Willie Elliott for a short period of time. I didn't know if this could be you since I don't know how old you are. This Willie had two aunts, Tamara and Doris, both of whom I taught. His grandfather was Shird Elliott. Since I've been reading your column, I was just curious if you could be the same person I knew long ago.

I would appreciate hearing from you. I know you are very busy. Maybe when school is out you would have time for a few lines.

Sincerely,
Magdalene (Bentley) Little

I must be the person she is referring to since all the information matches. Ms. Little, I can't remember you, but I will look in old yearbooks and maybe I can match a photo with the name. Nevertheless, it was very nice to hear from you. I talked to Ruby Damron, first grade teacher at McDowell (who was also my first grade teacher when I went to Frasure's Creek) and she told me who you were and how you and she were related. I am always surprised the way our lives tend to cross and recross, or as Yogi Berra would say, "It's Deja Vu all over again."

Soapbox

I'm a full-fledged Eastern Kentuckian now. However, I didn't particularly like the initiation — my place was flooded Monday night.

by
Tess Whitmer

Who would have thought? I was out at a Jaycee meeting when the downpour hit Prestonsburg and driving home was an experience to remember. I had to go around and around town to find a route home that wasn't blocked by water. A friend was driving and I told her I'd rather leave my car at the paper than get out in the rain anymore than I had to. So she dropped me at home and left.

When I walked up to my door I knew I was in trouble. There I stood, holding an umbrella and digging out my keys, in water over my ankles. Even the cans I had set out to recycle were floating around my patio.

I looked at the water rising slowly up the door, looked back at the driveway and my friend was gone and so was my car. I thought I could wait out the storm in my car, or go some place and give the water time to go down, but that option was out.

I thought "I'll go in the back door, it's higher and there won't be any water there." Then I remembered I had that door bolted from the inside. My landlords weren't home, so I couldn't go there.

I had no choice but to open that door and try to get it shut before too much water got in. I forgot that I would have to wrangle this big umbrella through the door and then fight the floating cans.

Well, I got in, but so did about 50 gallons of water, several cans and some kind of little, ugly bugs. My cat, who was waiting on the other side of the door for me, did two back flips, dodged the flying umbrella and landed on dry land. Cats have a knack for that.

I wasn't so lucky. I was soaked to my knees and my new leather moccasins were ruined. I grabbed a couple of dish towels and started sponging up the water, wringing the towels out in the sink. My cat, who had decided to explore the open cabinet under the sink wasn't too happy when the water started raining down on his head from the dripping towels, so he started dancing around the kitchen and getting under foot.

The water was now coming in under the door. I must have broken some sort of vacuum seal or something. The more I mopped, the quicker the water came in. I wasn't making much progress, but I was working as fast as I could. However, things were going better since I had dug out a pot and was wringing the towels into it to save time.

Then the phone rang. I hadn't had a chance to shut the answering machine off yet, so I dashed into the living room and grabbed the receiver. To beat all, it was a recording, so I cussed at it and slammed down the phone and went back to the task at hand.

About that time, I started to smell something funny. My cat, probably just to punish me, decided to take a healthy, stinky poop in his litter box, which happened to be about three feet from my nose at that time. The cat has perfect timing.

So now I'm holding my breath, kneeling on wet carpet, plucking up little, ugly, brown bugs while shoving towels under the door to stop the flow of water.

Lord what a night. Wednesday I called the professionals. Towels just didn't cut it.

Scott Jones, Betsy Layne High School art student, was selected to attend the Appalshop Media Summer Program this summer. Appalshop is an arts and education center in Whitesburg that produces films and videotapes for home and educational use. These materials document cultural and social issues pertaining to the Appalachian and rural areas of America. Jones, a 16 year-old sophomore, is actively involved in the BLHS Technical Club as well as Art and General Woods. He is presently maintaining a 3.9 unweighted grade point average following the pre-college curriculum guidelines. Scott is the son of Lorene Jones of Harold.

BOYS WILL BE BOYS FOREVER

It came as no surprise to learn that a recent survey showed 32 percent of single men 25-34 years of age have chosen the option of living at home with their parents rather than setting-up households of their own.

Although only 14, our son has already mentioned that he intends to stay on with us after he completes his education and finds a job. I don't blame him.

"Mom!" J.R. called to me one day as I was in the bathroom. "Would you fix me something to drink?"

"I'm busy."

"How much longer are you going to be in there?" he asked.

"An hour."

"I can wait."

Extraordinary I thought. If I stayed in the bathroom for a week, there was a real possibility he'd die of thirst.

"Fix me something to eat, too," he added.

"Can't you get it yourself? All you have to do is put it on a plate."

A few minutes later he returned and knocked on the door and asked,

"How long does it have to stay in the microwave?"

"About 30 seconds," I wearily replied.

Two minutes passed before he was back knocking on the door again. "It's too hot. Just bring it to me when you get out. Have you seen my new jersey?"

"It's hanging in your closet," I replied.

"It's not there. I just wore it yesterday. What did you do with it?"

"If you only wore it yesterday, it's probably in the utility room."

"You mean you haven't washed it yet?" he asked.

I bit my tongue and replied, "No, I haven't washed clothes since yesterday morning. Can't you find something else to wear?"

"Phew!" I heard him mutter under his breath.

"J. R., can't you wait until I'm finished in here? I'll find you something when I get out."

I listened as he trekked back to his room and turned on the tape player. Since it was turned up to a decibel that would deafen a dog, I failed to hear his footsteps coming back down the hallway.

"Yes," I answered when I heard the knock.

"Where did you put my socks?"

"Have you looked in your drawer?"

"Oh, yeah. I forgot," he answered.

"Are you about done?"

I could have been I thought if I hadn't had to play Twenty Questions. As I emerged from the tub and toweled off, I wondered what would happen to J. R. if no one was around to do things for him. Would he starve to death or run around naked?

"Mom," J. R. again called through the door. "Have you seen my T. V. changer?"

"Have you looked under your bed?"

"No."

"Well, look then!" I shouted.

He was back in a few seconds saying, "It's not there."

I stormed out of the bathroom and started for his room. I found the changer under the bed. "There," I announced as I handed it to him.

"It wasn't there a few minutes ago."

"J. R., what's going to happen to you when you get out on your own? Today's women don't cater to men like their mothers do."

"Don't worry about that, Mom. I'm never going to leave you. I'm going to stay here forever even if I do get married."

Somehow, the idea of J. R. and his wife living with us under one roof did little to console me. In fact, the thought of that happening almost induced an anxiety attack.

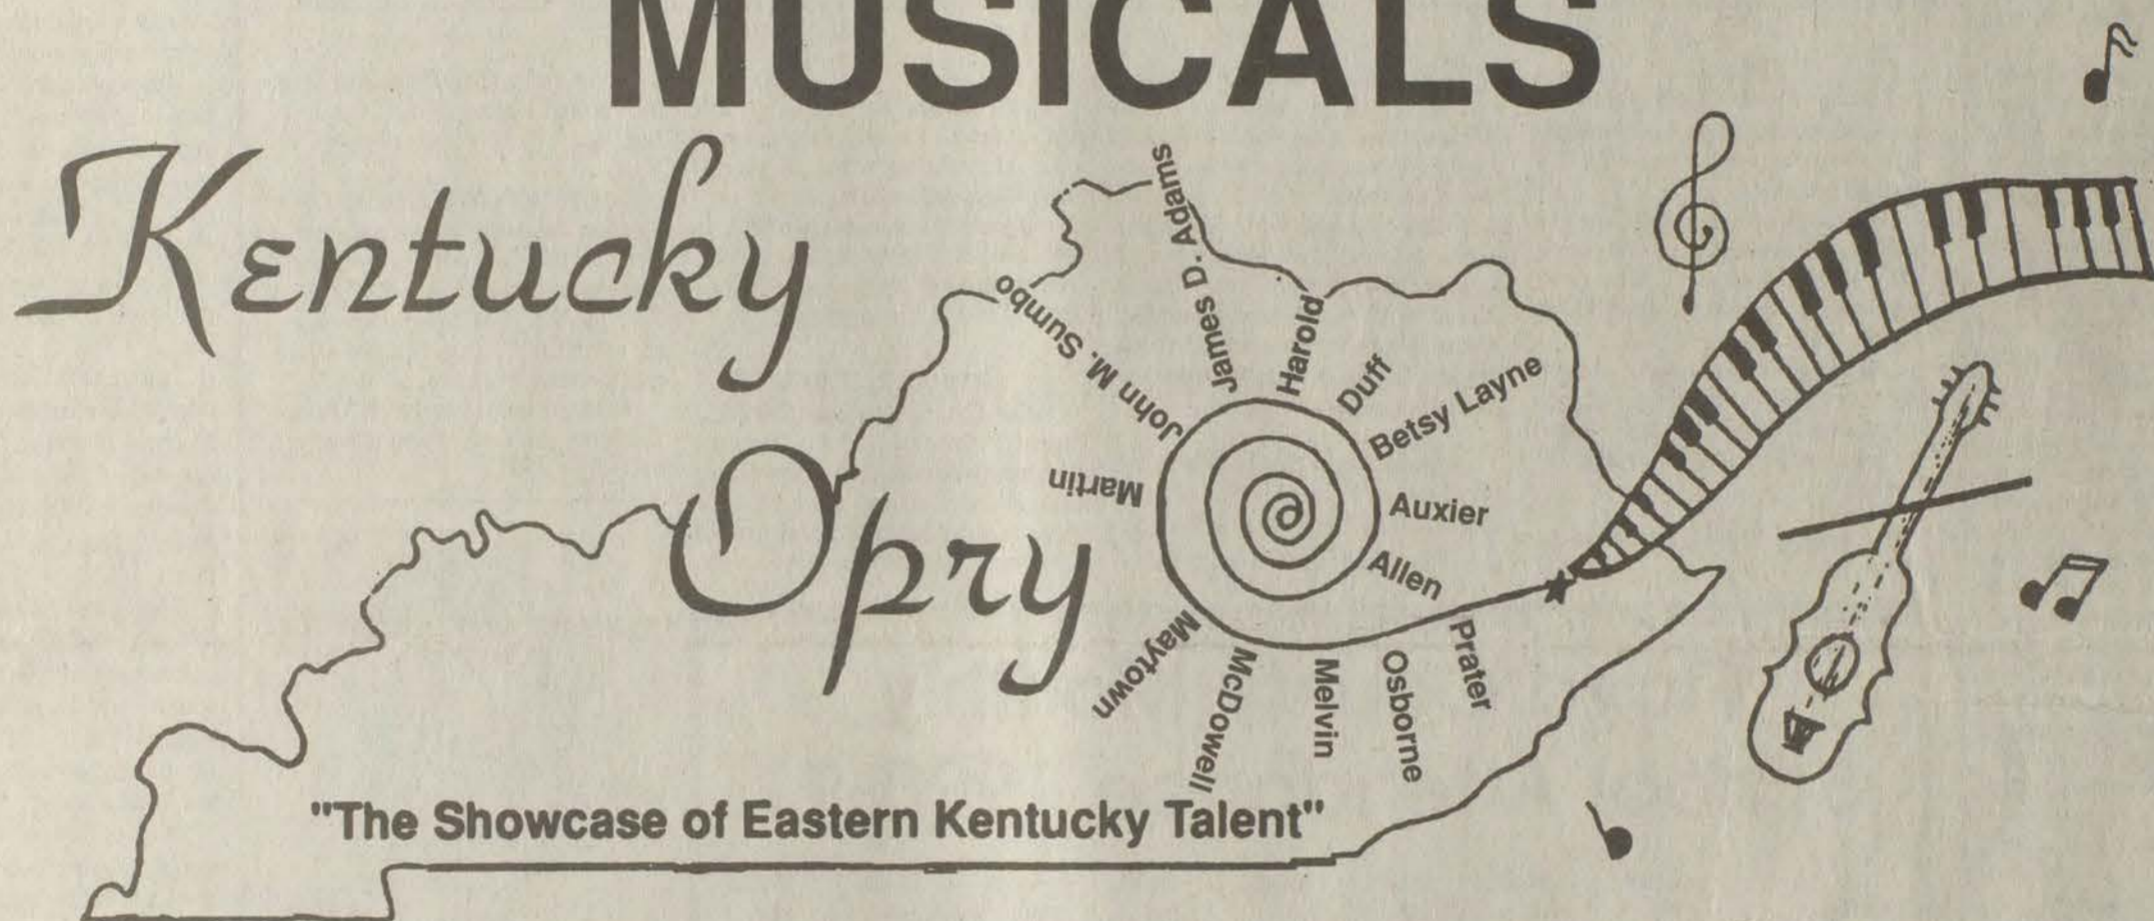

"Mom, I need a new lamp. This one doesn't come on when I flip the switch."

"It won't come on because it needs a light bulb," I said as I unscrewed the old one. "I'll go get another one."

"Good. And while you're in there, could you get my plate out of the microwave and fix me something to drink?"

I'd better start taking better care of myself because if something happens to me, there's a good possibility that J. R. might never eat or wear clean clothes again.

A Look At Sports

by Ed Taylor—Sports Editor

STALKING THE SIDELINES...

Up and down the sidelines. Stop. Kneel down. Instruct the batter not to swing at the next pitch. Time out. Out to second base for a conference with the runner there. Back to the sideline. Up and down. "Don't swing at the next pitch, Shannon." Kneel down. Up and down. "Make him throw you your pitch, Boss."

So was the scene as the Harold Braves and Harold Dodgers hooked up to decide who was to be the champions of the Harold Pee Wee League. Pee Wee League! You would have thought you were watching a high school game or at least a Little League encounter. But, no, the Pee Wee coaches are more fun than "a barrel of monkeys" to watch.

Winning is very important to them and they really get into the game. They are continuously coaching, are never still, and are always looking for a way to get an edge on their opponents.

Randy Kidd and Jack Gibson, two coaches in the Harold Pee Wee Tournament finals, were very active and you could see that they knew the game of baseball. It didn't matter if the level was Pee Wee, the desire to win was there.

Jack had the lead for the first four innings and then Randy's team pulled it out in an extra inning. The pressure was off. No more stalking. No more being nervous. Just handshakes from players and coaches for a well played game. It was very impressive the Harold Pee Wee League.

The time came to give out the trophies. Who would be the league's Most Valuable Player? Who was the Most Improved Player? Who hit the most home runs? Who would win all of those trophies? The answer. No one! Every player on all seven teams received a trophy just for being part of a team. No one was singled out as the best. That is the way it should be. There was no difference made between players or teams. The Harold Braves were the league and tournament champions, but when the game was over, you could see that all the kids were the real champions.

They would gather and look at one another's trophies and you could see the smiles on their faces as having a feeling of accomplishing something. No feelings were hurt. No one got mad. It was very refreshing.

The folks who headed the Harold Pee Wee League should be congratulated for the outstanding job they did in putting the league and tournament together.

Ken Hamilton, Paul Conway, Phil Coleman, Tommy Jones and Brian Meade did great jobs of coaching their teams. Another good thing was the recognition of each coach. Each received a very nice plaque.

Another note about the Braves. They have won 31 straight ball games over the past two seasons. In their initial year, they were 4-5. So, in three years they have won 35 and lost only five. That's quite an accomplishment.

We offer our congratulations to all the teams in the Harold Pee Wee League for having an outstanding season.

OTHER PEE WEE'S...

The Mud Creek Pee Wee League will be finishing their season before long and they also have a very strong program there. The Martin Pee Wee League will start their league tournament on Saturday, June 29 (or it could be put off until after July 4). Tournament time for the Minnie Pee Wee League should be coming up soon also. We do not have their schedule but they usually hold a tournament at the end of the season. Prestonsburg, who refers to their league as a Farm League, has completed their season at Archer Park.

MANY REQUESTS...

I get a lot of requests when I go to a ball game. Most of the requests come from parents or players themselves. No, not a request to sing, but to take a picture of a particular player and put him or her in the paper.

One Saturday, I kept count of all the requests I got. All totaled, I received 15 requests. Thirteen were for pictures, one was to assist in getting a dog off the field and the other was for me to get off a player's foot I had accidentally stepped on.

KENTUCKY JUNIOR ALL-STARS

WILL BE AT PRESTONSBURG JUNE 28

I am looking forward to the All-Star series coming up at the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse June 28. Seems like no matter what the season, basketball is always a welcome sport.

As of yet, who will coach the 15th Region All-Stars hasn't been told. Coach Gordon Parido was asked to handle the job, but Coach Parido says that he wants to get the All-Star night together and may pass the duties on to another county coach.

The 15th Region All-Stars will furnish the opposition for the Kentucky Junior All-Stars (those who will be juniors this coming school year) in the first game at 6:30 p.m. In the second game of the evening, the Kentucky Junior West All-Star team will face the Kentucky Junior East All-Stars squad. This group are juniors that will be seniors next year.

Some of the top players in the state of Kentucky will be there and all you have to do to enjoy it is be there.

SPEAKING OF ALL-STARS...

I would welcome the return of the All-Star teams in grade school football this season. You remember the game that was played at Prestonsburg at the end of the grade school season. Boy, it used to be a big event. I believe that a resurrection of the game would renew some interest in the grade school programs.

It would be an honor for the kids on the elementary level to get to play in the event. It would be an incentive for the players to play hard during the regular season so that they might make the All-Star team.

Several people around the county would like to see the classic return.

ROSENBERG A SPORTS PROPHET...

Our own Mike Rosenberg, a Duke fanatic, said it first. The Charlotte Hornets would look to trade Rex Chapman and J.R. Reid for a true center. Now Mike said that to me when he returned home for the summer from Duke.

Item in Thursday's Lexington Herald-Leader: "Hornets Chapman, Reid May Join Spurs." The Hornets are considering trading the twosome for the services of Willie Anderson. Who says that an education is all you get at Duke University. Way to go Mike Rosenberg!

INDIANA ALL-STARS VS KENTUCKY ALL-STARS

After a 103-101 win over the Indiana All-Stars, the Kentucky boys will try to sweep the series this year as they face off at Freedom Hall in Louisville. The series had been one-sided in the past four years and this year's Kentucky team seems to be more of a hustling team. No one seems to be resting on their preseason laurels for an automatic win. Each player seems to be playing as if he has something to prove.

Case in point, Chris Harrison, who has signed to play basketball for the Wildcats next season. Harrison has had the rap that he can't play with the big boys and, therefore, he should have gone to a smaller school. Harrison did not fair too well in the Derby Festival but did shine in the first meeting against the Indiana All-Stars.

Harrison made the point that he is a quality basketball player who averaged 39 points per game to lead the state and that he can play with the big boys.

Darrin Horn, headed for Western Kentucky University, is in the same boat. Horn has always been a big-time high school player that could have gone to a larger program than Western's and made good. He is a hard-nosed player who will fair very well at WKU.

Performances in All-Star games do not really dictate how good or bad a player is. In such a two game series, if you have a bad night, they say you stink. If you happen to be hitting the shots, they say you're going to have a great college career. You cannot base the outcome of a player's future on two games. Horn and Harrison will do well in college.

WILL REDS MAKE TRADE...

Will the Cincinnati Reds make a deal around All-Star time? Will they look for a consistent fourth starter for their faltering rotation? Chris Hammond and Scott Scudder will not be able to get the job done for the Reds and if they are going to be serious about repeating they will have to make a trade for a experienced, consistent pitcher.

Who would they let go? Todd Benzinget would be a likely candidate. They would still have to add a player or two with Todd to complete a deal. How about Benzinget, Duncan and Scudder? No. Benzinget, Duncan, and Jack Armstrong?

No matter who is deemed expendable, the Reds will definitely have to make a move to be able to make up some ground on the Dodgers in the second half of the season.

Until next time, good sports everyone and be good sports!

Braves Repeat As Champions

Fact. The Harold Braves have won 30 straight baseball games over the past two years. Fact. The Braves were the tournament's clear cut favorite to repeat as champions. Fact. The Braves did repeat, but it was not easy.

The Braves won their 31st consecutive game over the past two years when they posted a come from behind 7-6 victory over the Harold Dodgers in the championship game of the Harold Pee Wee tournament at Conn Field Tuesday evening.

The game actually got underway on Monday evening, but after two innings when the rains came, the game was postponed.

The Dodgers were not ready to toss in the towel just because they were up against the season league champions. In fact the Dodgers took a 6-4 lead going into the bottom of the fifth inning. All the Dodgers needed was three outs and the "apple cart" would have been upset and a second game played.

But being the good team they have been all season, the Braves showed their determination by scoring twice in the fifth to tie the game and the winning run on third.

The game went into extra innings as the Braves scored a run in the bottom of the sixth on an error at first base, to win the game 7-6. Justin Hughes singled to lead off the Braves sixth as coach Randy Kidd stalked the sidelines shouting instructions to his batters. Clayton Case bounced back to the mound and was out at first base as Hughes advanced to second. Robert Rose hit a roller back to the pitcher as Hughes raced for third. The throw to first was mishandled by the first baseman and Hughes was frantically coached home for the winning run.

Three walks with the bases loaded helped the Braves tie the game in the fifth. Brent Rose lead off with a base hit, and "Boss" Keathley doubled him to third. Barry Rose drew a walk to load the bases for the Braves with no one out. Jaime Cole and Wesley Senters fanned with the bases jammed, but Josh Kidd coaxed a walk to force home Brent Rose with a run. Shannon Williams came to the plate and walked on a 3-2 count. Keathley came home with the tying run. With the winning run at third base, Bill Josh Kidd hit a roller to third where the third baseman fielded and stepped on third to force the third out.

The Dodgers scored twice in the second to take a 2-0 lead. After Scott Collins doubled, David Johnson scored Collins with a one-out double. Johnson scored on a base hit by Cain Williams.

The Braves went on top 3-2 with a three-run second. Justin Hughes drew a one-out walk, and Clayton Case doubled him home. Anthony singled and both runners scored on Brent Rose's three base hit.

The Dodgers tied the game with a run in the third as Elkins scored on Josh Hall's triple.

The lead was short lived as the Braves made it 4-3 when Wesley Senters crossed the plate on Shannon Williams' double.

The Dodgers added two runs in the fourth and a single run in the fifth to go ahead of the Braves 6-4. Kyle Potter's base hit in the fourth scored one run and the second run came across on John King's single. Dustin Elkins, who had doubled, scored in the fifth for the Dodgers on a triple by Scott Collins.

Brent Rose had two hits in the contest including his second inning triple. Josh Hall and Scott Collins had triples for the Dodgers. Elkins had two doubles for the Dodgers. He also collected two runs batted in.

Justin Hughes, Clayton Case, Robert Rose, "Boss" Keathley and Shannon Williams had doubles for the winning Braves. Cain Williams and David Johnson had two-baggers for the Dodgers.

Shannon Williams was the winning pitcher for the Braves.

Martin Braves Capture South Division With Win Over Giants

It came down to the final game of the season for the Martin Braves. They had been chasing the Drift Giants all year. Finally, last week they caught them, and Tuesday evening at Minnie Park, the Braves posted a 9-6 win over Ed Moore's team and won the divisional title in the South Division for the second consecutive year.

Thomas Jenkins was on the hill for the Braves and won his sixth game of the year against no defeats. Jenkins out dueled the Giants Chris Moore and struck out 15 batters while giving up seven walks.

Moore had a good outing, but experienced some control difficulty when he walked 10 batters. Moore added to his strike out total when he fanned 14 Brave batters.

Neither team had their hitting shoes on for this one, but the defense had to be sharp with so many walks in the game.

"It was a game that I was dreading to play," said Steve Jenkins, coach of the Braves. "But it was a good ball game. A well-called ball game. There were no problems, and it went well."

The Braves took a 3-0 lead in the first inning on Jenkins' three-run home run, only to see the Giants strike for three in their half of the first on a RBI triple off of the bat of Moore. Jenkins' homer scored Philip Holbrook and Travis Johnson who had walked. In the Braves second, doubles by Beau Tackett and Chris Cornette helped the Braves to a 8-3 advantage when they scored five times. Jacob Skeans walked, and with one out, Jeana Hall drew a walk from Moore. Phil Holbrook singled off of Moore to score Skeans. Moore got the next Brave on strikes for the second out, but Tackett doubled home Holbrook and Hall. Jenkins worked Moore for a two-out walk and Cornette's two-bagger scored two more runs.

The Giants pushed across a single run in the third to make it an 8-4 game when Moore drew a lead off walk and scored on a wild pitch. The Braves scored once in the top of the fifth much the same way when Cornette walked and later scored on a wild pitch. Drift came back with a run in the bottom of the inning. Justin Hopkins and Moore walked. Hopkins scored on Jason Woods' RBI single. Jenkins was in trouble in the fifth inning with Moore and Woods at first and second. However, Jenkins got off the hook when he fanned the next three batters to wiggle off. Jenkins also fanned the side in the Giants' third with a runner on and no one out.

Drift scored their final run in the bottom of the sixth inning when Huff tripled with one out and scored on Steven Hamilton's double. Huff entered the game in the sixth inning.

Moore gave up nine runs on five hits to the Braves but only three of those runs were earned. Moore faced 24 batters during the game and fanned 14.

Jenkins allowed five hits and six runs to the Giants. Only one run was earned. Jenkins faced 23 batters in retiring 15 by strike outs.

Martin finishes the season with a 10-3 record and the Giants, with one game to play, falls to 8-4.

Tackett and Cornette each had two RBIs for Martin. Hamilton, Moore, Woods and Barry Howell had RBIs for the Giants. No player had more than one hit in the game as each team managed just five hits.

The Beaver Creek Little League tournament gets underway this Saturday at the Martin Park. The Martin Cardinals will face the Garrett Cubs in the first game at 10 a.m. In the second game, the McDowell Stars take on the Drift Astros at noon. The Braves face the Martin Blue Jays at 2 p.m. and at 4 p.m. The Wayland Dodgers go up against the Martin Reds.

P'burg Cubs Win Second Straight League Title

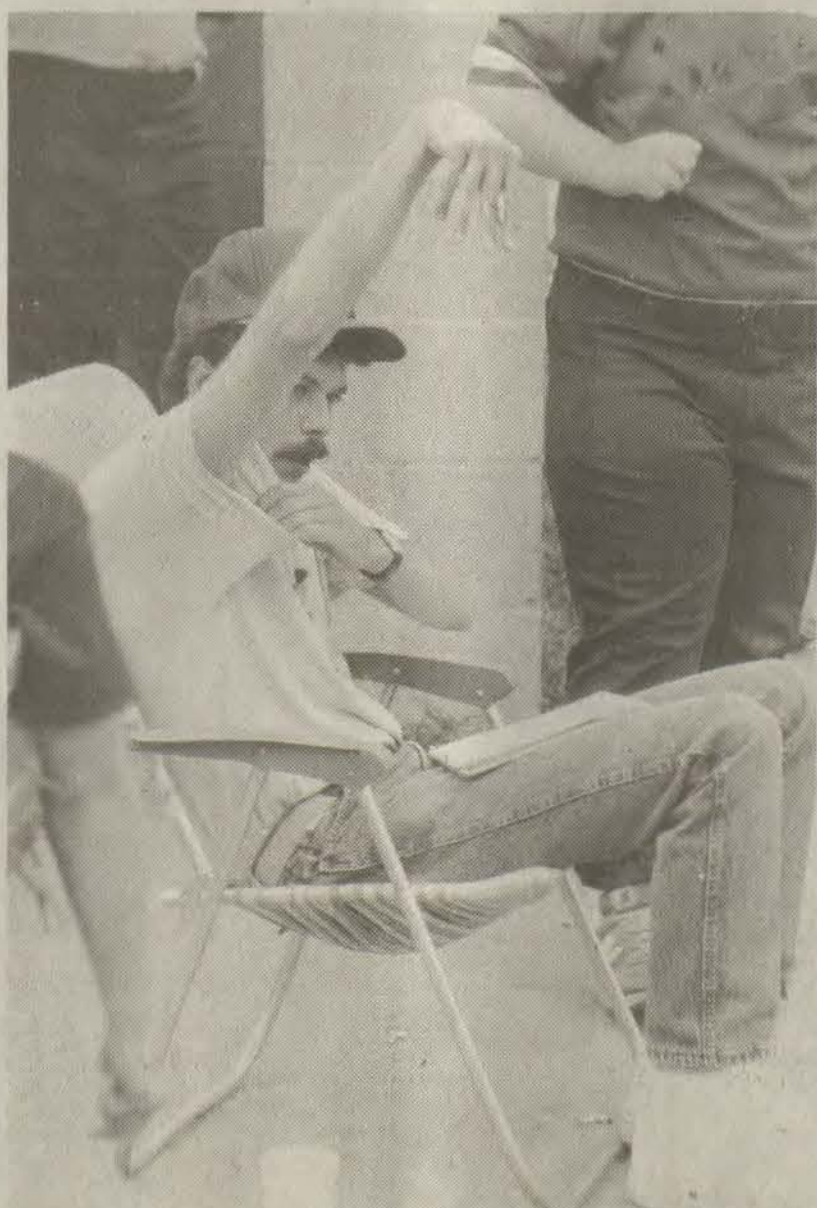

Coach Rodney Osborne and the Prestonsburg Cubs won the Prestonsburg Little League title for the second year running as they finished with a 13-1 record. The only loss for the Cubs came late in the season when they fell to the Prestonsburg Mets.

"It was a team effort all the way," said Osborne of his teams finish. "No single player can be singled out, but a whole team effort. They are a fine bunch of kids to coach and they played with a lot of determination."

For winning the league title, Osborne will once again take the helm of the league's All-Star team.

"We're having tryouts this Friday (today) and Saturday," Osborne explained. "We should have it all settled by this Saturday and then we will practice all next week getting ready for the tournament."

The All-Star team will take part with other regional All-Star teams in the playoffs as they begin their journey to the Little League World Series. Last year the Prestonsburg All-Stars placed second behind Paintsville in the tournament.

Modern day coaching!

Is that a bunt sign? No, it's a hit and run! Whatever it is, Martin coach Jeff Sammons is just taking it easy as his team, the Martin Cardinals, went up against the Martin Reds at Martin. Sammons should have gotten more excited as his team fell 11-10. (Photo by Ed Taylor)

VIDEO BIJOU

King of the Undead has recurring life on big screen

By Steven Alan McGaw

By now I'm sure you know Francis Coppola is at work on a new version of Dracula, starring Raul Julia and Winona Ryder. The Count is, of course, one of the screen's most enduring characters (and, when done well, one of the most fascinating). Let's pause to look at the great cinematic Draculas of the past.

Bela Lugosi's 1931 version is still considered the definitive rendering, although the movie seems a bit stiff and mannered now. Still, Edward Van Sloan is terrific as Professor Van Helsing, Dwight Frye chills the blood as Renfield (remember that laugh?) and Lugosi seems other-worldly as the Count. It's also memorable for the fabulous sets.

In 1973, Jack Palance starred in a made-for-TV version, directed by Dan Curtis. Palance played the Count as a victim of fate and it worked beautifully. Simon Ward co-starred as Jonathan Harker, and the movie featured some marvelous sets and costumes. It also boasted a teleplay by respected writer Richard Matheson.

Frank Langella hit it big in a Broadway revival of the play in the late '70s. In 1979 they filmed it, with a large budget and a great cast. Curiously, the movie wasn't that well received. Maybe it's the accentuated romantic aspect of the film. In any case, Langella is magnetic in the title role, and co-stars Kate Nelligan and Laurence Olivier lend fine support.

Viewers are enchanted by 'Bewitched' star

By Polly Vonetes

Q: My best friend and I are fans of Elizabeth Montgomery. Can you please tell us all about her? —Lacy Christian, Carsbad, N.M.

A: Born in Hollywood, Calif., on April 15, 1933, Elizabeth Montgomery is the daughter of the late actor Robert Montgomery. She attended Westlake School for Girls and completed her education in New York, where she was graduated from Spence School and attended the Academy of Dramatic Arts. Montgomery made her TV debut in 1954 with her famous father when he was host of the anthology series Robert Montgomery Presents. However, it was her role as the good witch on the series Bewitched that made her a household name. Thrice married and divorced, Montgomery has three children from her last husband, director William Asher. She has been romantically involved with actor Robert Foxworth for many years.

Q: The incredible movie Anne of Green Gables has in it a fantastic actress named Megan Follows. She is so talented, why don't we see her in more movies? Is she still acting? Do you have any other information about her? —Claire Tillman, Lahaina, Hawaii

A: The pretty young Canadian actress, who is 22 years old, began her acting career 12 years ago. The daughter of Canadian actors Ted Follows and Dawn Grenhalgh, Megan began performing at the age of 11 when she appeared in the Canadian television movie Clare's Wish. Since then she has worked steadily in both Canada and the United States. Her credits include the made-for-television movies The Mating Season, Sin of Innocence, The Faculty, Hockey Night and Inherit the Wind. Her feature film credits include A Time of Destiny, Stacking and Silver Bullet, all of which are available on video. She recently starred in the Canadian miniseries Champagne Charlie.

Q: We really need your help. Some of us guys here are collecting autographed celebrity pictures, cast photos, etc. Do Christine Applegate and Jonna Lee have fan clubs? If so, do you have the addresses? Also, there are a lot of places that sell 8x10 photos of celebrities. Do you know of a reliable place that is reasonable? —J.S. Fehrmann, Iowa State Penitentiary

A: For fan club information write to: National Association of Fan Clubs, 2730 Baltimore Ave., Pueblo, Colo. 81003. The association has more than 1,500 listings of your favorite stars. For celebrity photos, the following businesses offer 8x10s for sale. (Having never purchased any, I am not in a position to advise about their prices.) I suggest you write for a catalog to: Sy Sussman Celebrity Photos, 2962 S. Mann St., Las Vegas, Nev. 89102 or Star World Celebrity Photos, 6655-8 Hollywood Blvd., Hollywood, Calif. 92632.

Stranded on third!

What could have been the winning run for the Harold Braves, was left stranded at third base as the game with the Harold Dodgers went into extra innings. The Braves pulled out the win by overcoming the Dodgers 7-6. (Photo by Ed Taylor)

Martin Tigers Win Two Over Padres, Royals

The Martin Tigers Pee Wee team remained the number one team in the Martin Pee Wee League as they recorded two wins this week. The Tigers slipped by a good Martin Padres team 14-12 and posted a 10-4 win over the Martin Royals.

In the first game against the Padres, the Tigers scored two runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to snap a 12-12 tie to post the 14-12 final. Trish Hall had a one-out base hit but was erased on a play at second base. Corie Ratliff followed with a single and scored on Adam Hutchinson's home run.

The Padres went out in order in the top of the fifth inning. The Padres collected four hits in the top of the fourth inning but were unable to score.

A six-run first gave the Padres an early 6-0 lead. Dwight McKinney doubled leading off and scored on Brandon Hansford's base hit. Nick Martin doubled home Hansford and scored on Rossi Samons base hit. Graden Allen collected a base hit. He and Samons scored on a RBI single by Tony Wakeland. Wakeland later scored on a two-out single by Zack Stone. The Padres collected seven hits in the inning.

The Tigers went on top 7-6 with seven runs in the first. Josh Yates doubled and scored on Shannon Sizemore's triple. Sizemore came home on a base hit by Alex Patton. Brandon Sizemore made it 7-4 with a two-run home run.

The hit parade continued for the Tigers when Trish Hall doubled and scored on Ratliff's base hit. Hutchinson got a base hit and both runners scored on a two-out single by Dee Mullins.

The Padres went on top 11-7 with five in their half of the second. The big blow was a three run triple by Nick Martin. Base hits by Jordan Slusher and Charles McGlothen accounted for two more runs.

A four-run second tied the game for the Tigers as Brandon Sizemore hit his second three-run homer of the game.

The Padres went up 12-11 with a single run in the third as McKinney scored on Hansford's base hit. The Tigers again tied the game with a run in the bottom of the third. Dee Mullins scored on Shannon Sizemore's base hit.

In the second game, the Tigers got past the Royals 10-4. The Tigers scored five times in the third and added four more in the fourth to put the game away.

Jason Holbrook had two hits for the Royals with two singles. Brandy Samons had a double and single. Garry Mullins got a first inning double with one RBI. Chad Samons collected two hits for the Royals.

Adam Hutchinson had a first inning home run and tripled in the fourth for the Tigers. Shannon Sizemore had three hits with a double. George Hall was two-for-three in the game and one RBI.

Brandon Sizemore had two doubles and three runs batted in. He also singled in the first inning. Ann Hall had a perfect night at the plate with three hits and two runs batted in.

McDowell Closes Regular Season With 7-4 Win Over Drift Astros

The Drift Astros limited the McDowell Stars to just one hit but lost the game 7-4 as the McDowell Stars closed out their season with their second win over the Astros.

Scott Johnson got the win in relief of starter Rusty Hall. Johnson fanned eight batters in the two-and-a-third innings he worked. He walked three. Hall had seven strikeouts and walked seven.

Drift starter Joe Hall had a problem finding the plate against McDowell as he issued nine base-on-balls in the game. Hall fanned nine batters. He was relieved by Clabe Hall in the fourth inning. The Stars scored three times in the fifth off Clabe Hall to pin the loss on the reliever. Hall fanned one and walked one in the innings he worked.

The only hit the Stars could manage was a third inning single by Nick Compton, but the hit scored two runs. The Stars took a 4-2 lead with their three-run third but the Astros came back and scored two and tied the game at 4-4. Josh Hall scored for the

Astros on a wild pitch and Ricky Hall
