Proposal to change form of government fails on 4-4 vote :

Council bid to usurp mayor deadlocks

by Dodie Webb
Staff Writer

Councilman Billy Ray Collins presided over the Monday evening meeting of the Prestonsburg City Council in the absence of Mayor Ann Latta as several items were debated including a bid by several councilmembers to have Prestonsburg's Mayor-Council form of government changed in the November, 1994 election.

Councilman Jerry Fannin, in a surprising move, motioned council to include on the November, 1994 general election ballot that Prestonsburg's city government be changed to a city commission plan of administration.

The commission plan is a significantly different organizational structure of government than the current mayor-council plan. Instead of powers being divided among the executive (mayor) and legislative branches (council), all executive, legislative, and administrative powers are equally administered by a mayor and a four-member commission. In short, the mayor's powers and individual authority is diminished and shared among a five-member commission, which would include the mayor.

The present system grants executive authority solely to the mayor and includes a strong veto power over all ordinances passed by the city council.

Several of the council members appeared exasperated over the ongoing issues concerning the Prestonsburg-Paintsville airport and of the two-year discussions concerning the salary differences among city employees.

Fannin said that to sit on the council at present is a "waste of time."

Councilman Billy Ray Collins stressed to the council that a "checks and balances" system of government needed to be enacted for the good of the city and said that the newly introduced city commission form would only, in his opinion, help Prestonsburg advance and grow.

Councilman George P. Archer said that he didn't think the council should be so quick to change, suggesting that the new council had, as yet, not been able to counteract or balance Mayor Ann Latta with the power of limiting through budgeting or ordinance. Billy Ray Collins countered that the city commission form of government is a way to return to the people the power of local government.

"This wouldn't affect the present mayor at this time, but you would (later) have a mayor, a city administrator, and four commissioners with the power to agree on who's hired, fired, on what policy is set, and agree on what democracy is set for the voters," Collins said. "Otherwise,

Floyd County is an even-money favorite for track

by Dodie Webb
Staff Writer

Prestonsburg apparently is now an even money favorite in the race for a $3 million harness racing track that will be known as Kentucky Downs.

Prestonsburg businessman Clyde Woods has obtained a signed, written agreement from Louisville Downs owner Chester Porter to purchase the corporate entity of Louisville Downs. Woods has purchased Louisville Downs' stocks, the remaining racing license, and the right to simulcast races through the facility. This means, ultimately, with the final approval of Churchill Downs and the state Harness Racing Commission, the proposed harness racing track will be owned by Woods and will be built in Prestonsburg. Woods told the Times in an exclusive interview last week.

The plans are contingent on approval by Churchill Downs and the state Harness Racing Commission, although, "We're 99 percent sure we've got it," Woods said.

The track, apparently, would have live harness racing only a few days out of the year but simulcasts of other races would be presented full-time at the facility which would house a restaurant and a lounge.

Woods added that he would have to have the track, grandstands, and fieldhouse completed by July, 1993.

Louisville Downs was bought by Churchill Downs at an earlier time, Woods said.

State Harness Racing Commission representatives met with Woods about a month ago, and will be in the area January 30 to meet with local officials, including Mayor Ann Latta, County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, and members of the Chamber of Commerce to gauge public support for the project. A luncheon

Floyd County man is electrocuted after touching line

A 43-year-old Floyd County man was electrocuted at his home Saturday while installing a citizen's band radio antenna.

Connie Lee Thompson of Abbott was pronounced dead at the scene by Floyd County Coroner Roger Nelson when the antenna came in contact with a 7,650 volt power line.

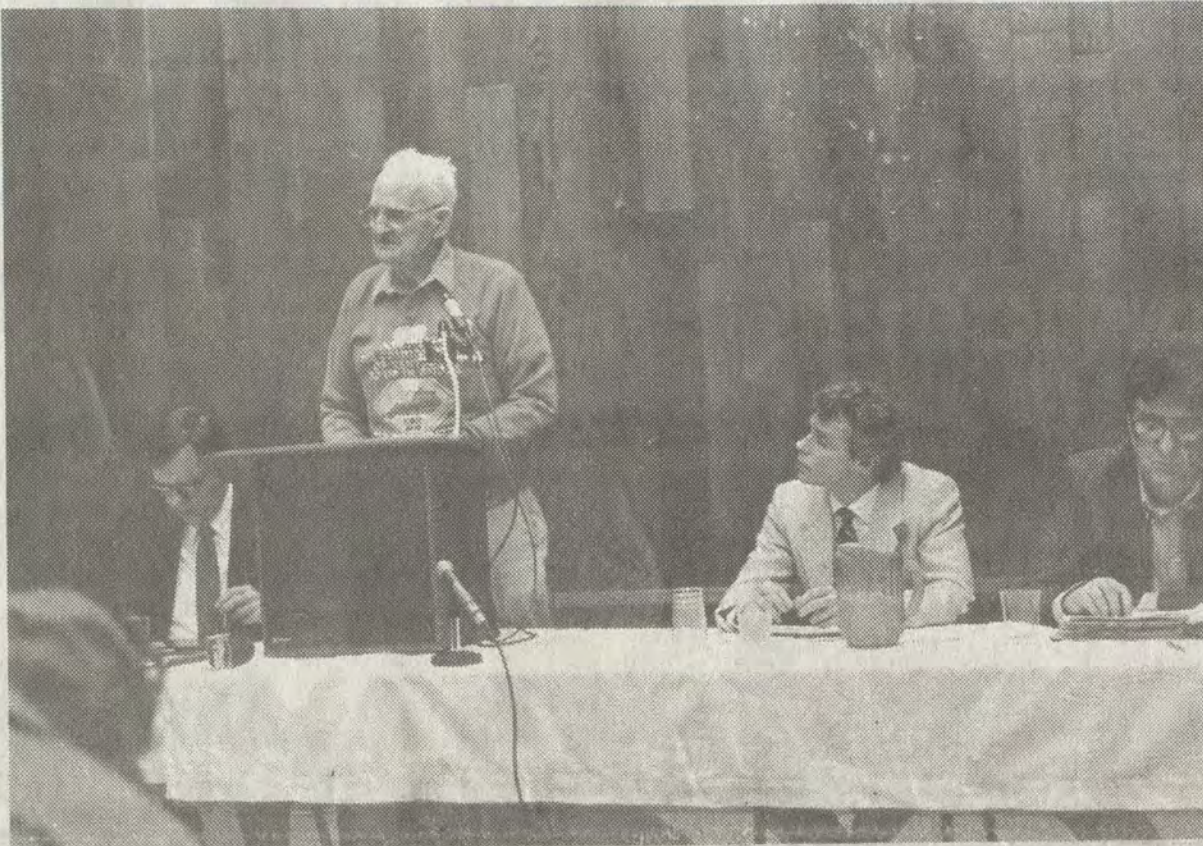

Floyd County chief deputy Linzie Hunt said Thompson was standing on a stack of two-by-fours as he was attempting to install the 31-inch antenna when it came in contact with the power line.

The case is under investigation by Kentucky State Police detective Les Stapleton.

Thompson was a former Prestonsburg City Utilities worker.

Survivors include his wife, Renee L. Thompson, and his parents Braxton and Edna Thompson.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday, January 29, beginning at 10 a.m. at the Cow Creek Freewill Baptist Church.

Emotions are feverish at hearing on waste burners

by Susan Allen

Comments made at public hearing Thursday by residents living near a medical waste incinerator will cause the state to take a closer look at a pending permit for that facility.

Officials with the state Department of Air Quality listened intently as 14 speakers told of their concerns about the incinerators at Auxier operated by Medisin Inc.

Opponents claimed that Medisin representatives did not list all the waste material being burned in the two incinerators and gave false information to state officials concerning the fuel used to operate the burners.

Scott Walker, a member of Floyd County Citizens In Action (FCIA), a citizens' group opposed to the incinerators, told state officials that the group planned to submit depositions from two former employees of Medisin that will show the company burned hazardous waste not included in their permit application.

"These two employees will tell that X-ray screens, toxins from laboratories and chemotherapy matter is being burned there," Walker said. "Those are not listed in their permit. You can't trust what (test) results they will send you."

Joe Childers, an attorney for FCIA told hearing officers that the company submitted stack test results...that weren't performed on Medisin's incinerators...

Joe Childers, an attorney for FCIA, told hearing officers that the company submitted stack test results to the state that weren't performed on Medisin's incinerators, but instead were the results of an incinerator in another state.

"The stack test filed with the application is for the wrong model and model number for those incinerators," Childers said. "It also said they only ran hospital waste in the incinerators, but they burn pathology waste as well."

Dallas Sammons, an Auxier resident, told the officers that Medisin's claim that they use liquid propane as their fuel source was not true.

"They do not use propane gas, they're hooked up to the Auxier Gas Company," Sammons said. "They're using natural gas and it only burns at 10,000 BTU. It doesn't get hot enough to burn the waste properly."

Sammons asked Bill Eddins, commissioner for air quality, if it was true Medisin had to ship the bottom

Eleven Democrats to square off :

Rowe tosses hat into ring

With enough Democratic candidates to field a football team, the race to replace departing U.S. Congressman Chris Perkins drew an unprecedented lineup of challengers Tuesday as the filing deadline passed.

Eleven Democrat candidates will crowd the ballot for the Congressional seat that, for most of the past 45 years had been shared by just two men—both named Perkins. Rarely had the Perkins' hold on the 7th District—now the 5th District—seat been challenged in primary elections.

But Chris Perkins' announcement last week that he would not seek a fifth term in the seat he inherited in 1984 following the death of his father, Carl D. Perkins, opened the floodgates. The response was not surprising.

Prestonsburg attorney Robert Rowe became the second Floyd County to file for the Democratic primary race Tuesday, announcing his bid in a 10 a.m. press conference in Frankfort. Rowe, 34, was Floyd County co-chairman of Brereton Jones' successful gubernatorial campaign.

Another Prestonsburg attorney, Ned Pillersdorf, announced his election plans last week, shortly after Perkins said he would not seek reelection.

The rest of the Democratic field includes some well known and some not-so-well-known challengers.

This list includes former state Superintendent of Public Instruction, John Brock, of Frankfort; Carol Hubbard, of Somerset; Jerry Cecil, of Winchester; John Doug Hays, of Pikeville; Logan Turner, of Jackson; Stephen Maynard, of Inez; and Nelson Bingham, of Harlan County.

The winner of the Democratic primary will square off against incumbent Republican Congressman Hal Rogers, who is unopposed on the GOP ticket.

In other races on the May 26 ballot, the casting goes like this:

• For U.S. Senate, incumbent Wendell Ford is unopposed on the Democrat side while Republicans Denny Omerod, of Louisville; Phillip Thompson, of Frankfort; and David Williams, of Burkesville will face off.

• In the non-partisan race for Floyd

Rowe

County District Judge, Prestonsburg attorneys James Allen, Danny Caudill and Dan Rowland will compete. The top two vote-getters in the May election will meet again in November.

• In the race for State Representative in the 92nd District, incumbent

Woman cited for assault in stabbing

A 25-year-old Martin woman was charged with first degree wanton endangerment and first degree assault after allegedly stabbing her husband Saturday.

Rebecca Collins of Martin was charged with stabbing her husband, Larry Collins, twice with a knife after an altercation at their home Saturday afternoon.

Larry Collins suffered a collapsed lung after the incident, according to an arrest warrant issued for Rebecca Collins. Larry Collins was taken to Our Lady of the Way Hospital and transferred Sunday to Central Baptist Hospital in Lexington. He was listed in serious condition Tuesday.

Rebecca Collins remained lodged at the jail Tuesday under a $50,000 bond. The case is under investigation by Martin city policeman James Slone.

Empty gun saves sheriff

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A Floyd County woman unknowingly saved the life of Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson when she took to heart a threat allegedly made by her husband.

The woman called the sheriff's department Saturday asking that a deputy be sent to her home and the situation turned out to be a domestic violence complaint.

Sheriff Thompson, who was on his way home, said he would answer the complaint.

"I was walking toward the residence carrying my flashlight when I heard someone yell 'put out that light,'" Thompson said. "I stepped from around the house and naturally, I turned my light toward the voice. The man had a shotgun pointed right at me. Then I heard 'click'."

Thompson said he dived for cover behind a vehicle that was parked near the home and when he heard the shotgun being cocked again, he took cover behind a second vehicle.

"He pointed right at the vehicle he thought I was behind," Thompson said. "He couldn't see me or anything. Then, I heard 'click'. He cocked it again and 'click'."

The sheriff said he saw the man put the gun down, go into the home

State won't enforce deadline on converting jail to hold-over

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Floyd County officials will get a reprieve on a January 31 deadline imposed by state Corrections Cabinet officials to downgrade the county jail to a 96-hour holding facility.

Corrections Cabinet spokesman Michael Bradley said Tuesday that state officials have not ordered that the facility be used only as a hold-over facility for prisoners. Bradley said the order is not likely to be issued soon even though the fiscal court did not meet a December 31 deadline to submit plans for a new facility.

Corrections officials have been reviewing the condition of the Floyd County Jail for several years and have noted structural and administrative deficiencies to the court. Last Octo-

Times takes honors in annual contest

The Floyd County Times picked up two firsts, a second and a third-place award in the Kentucky Press Association's 1991 Better Newspaper Contest.

Times staffer Susan Allen and editor Scott Perry were first-place winners for Investigative Reporting in the multi-weekly newspaper division, taking the top honor for a series of articles on an investigation into illegal bingo games operated at Prestonsburg High School.

Perry also took first place in the judging of Editorial Columns, Variety of Subjects, for his weekly column "Coffee Break." Perry has won the top award in the category in three of the last four years, taking first place in 1988, 1990 and 1991.

Times sports editor Ed Taylor took second place in the category of Sports Picture Essay for a photo spread on the 1991 Floyd County Grade School Basketball Tournament.

Former Times assistant editor Tess Whitmer won third place honors for Story Series for her entry concerning the handling of hazardous waste spills.

The 1991 Kentucky Press contest entries were judged by members of the Mississippi Press Association.

Newman to dismiss lawsuit against Conley

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A lawsuit filed against former Circuit Judge Hollie Conley by a Floyd County man indicted for a 13 year old murder will apparently be dropped.

Wendell Ray Newman filed suit against Conley in June 1991, claiming the judge was derelict in his duties for failing to dismiss a $75,000 peace bond imposed on Newman when he was indicted for the 1978 murder of Walter Hall of Letcher County, who was shot to death at a home in Jacks Creek.

Newman's attorney, Daniel Taylor III of Louisville, issued a statement this week saying Newman would drop his suit against Conley and issued an apology for any "embarrassment or distress to Judge Conley." Taylor's letter also commended Conley for "his many years of service on the bench."

Newman was a co-defendant in the 1978 murder case with Dave Slone and Danny Meade. Charges of complicity to commit murder against Slone and Meade were later dropped.

At the time the peace bond was imposed on Newman, April 1991, Conley's order said Newman had allegedly threatened to kill two witnesses in the case, Slone and Meade.

A Court of Appeals ruling overturned the $75,000 peace bond which said there was no statutory authority for a peace bond.

Newman was later indicted in U.S. District Court in Pikeville on a murder-for-hire charge and conspiracy to distribute 15 kilograms of cocaine.

Newman pleaded guilty to the charges in federal court January 6, 1992 and is scheduled to be sentenced March 23.

Slone was also indicted by a federal grand jury for conspiracy to distribute cocaine. Slone pleaded guilty to the charge in December 1990 and will be sentenced February 10.

Ex-driver files federal lawsuit

A former Floyd County contract bus driver has filed a federal lawsuit against the Floyd County Board of Education alleging her civil rights were violated when her contract was not renewed.

Margaret Steffey of Banner claims in her suit that political retaliation is the reason the school board did not enter into a contractual agreement for bus routes in Daniels Creek and Ivel.

The suit claims Steffey and her husband, James Steffey, supported opposing candidates in the 1990 school board race.

"During the 1990 school board election the plaintiff and her husband, James Steffey supported Delano May for school board member in a race against the defendant, Ray "Shag" Campbell," the suit claims, "and in the 1988 race had supported Brent Clark in his race against the defendant, Tommy Boyd."

"The plaintiff and her husband likewise supported James D. Adams in a school board race against the defendant, Eddie Billips in 1990," the complaint said.

The lawsuit claims Steffey lost $35,000 in profits because she was not employed as a contract bus driver.

Steffey seeks $1 million in punitive damages, a contract with the board and compensatory damages.

Note: A civil suit complaint lists only the plaintiff's cause of action.

Stockholders await decision

The Bank Josephine of Prestonsburg could be under new ownership after a January 30 deadline for bids for controlling interest of the bank are tabulated.

Fifty-two percent of the bank's stock is being sold as required by the courts to settle the estate of E. R. McGuire, a former stockholder and owner who died in 1982, Bank Josephine vice-president Wanda Caldwell, said Tuesday.

The corporation of Hilliard-Lyons of Louisville has been authorized by the court to accept bids on January 30, Caldwell said.

Services provided by the Bank Josephine are not expected to be changed or hindered by the change in ownership.

Wedded bliss

Mr. and Mrs. John Little of Eubank, formerly of Floyd County, will celebrate their 67th wedding anniversary on Monday, February 3. They were married on that date in 1925 in Johnson County. They have eight children, 28 grandchildren and 40 great-grandchildren.

Blood "Donorama" is a huge success

In the month of December 223 people from the Floyd County community volunteered to donate blood in Prestonsburg. Central Kentucky Blood Centers 11th Annual "Donorama" was a tremendous success. One hundred and sixty-four people volunteered to donate for the holiday season. Twenty of these volunteers were first time donors to CKBC.

ber, the court was ordered to submit a plan of action by December 31 to correct the flaws.

Waivers had been granted in the past to the court concerning the physical deficiencies at the jail. Bradley, however, said Tuesday that the waivers will expire Friday and are not likely to be extended. Bradley said a decision from cabinet officials could be made by mid-February.

Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo said Tuesday that he was unaware of the January 31 deadline and that no building plan will be submitted to the state until a decision is made concerning a second circuit judge for the county.

"We waiting to see if we get a second circuit judge before we decide what to do," Stumbo said. "We should know in the next couple of weeks. We need to know, if the jail is renovated, whether or not to include an extra courtroom."

"After talking with an architect about the project, it's going to cost just as much to renovate the jail as to build a new one," Stumbo added.

Stumbo said he was not worried if the state decides to order the jail a holding facility because the county can appeal the decision.

"They can't just come in here and close it down," Stumbo said. "We can protest the order within 90 days before having a hearing on it."

If the jail is ordered to be a 96-hour hold-over jail, prisoners ordered to serve more than 96 hours would have transported and housed at adequate jails willing to accept the inmates.

Company fined for spill

by Dodie Webb
Staff Writer

A road construction company has been cited by the Environmental Protection Agency's Division of Water for allegedly causing 300 to 400 gallons of diesel fuel to spill into the waters of Turkey Creek near Martin.

Bizzack Construction Company reportedly spilled the fuel at 2 p.m. January 22 after allegedly overfilling a bulk storage tank, Ferris Sexton, oil and gas inspector and member of the environmental response team from the Division of Water out of Hazard, said Monday.

Sexton worked with Bizzack through the night last Wednesday to contain the spill which, according to Sexton, is very hard to completely remove from water.

Sexton said that the company did not notify the EPA until approximately 5 p.m. and that the (Bizzack) foreman claimed he didn't know anything about it until after the fact. Bizzack was informed by Sexton that as long as a sheen remained on the water they were to continue the containment effort.

"They (Bizzack) will be issued a notice of violation for failure to report a spill, degradation of the waters of the Commonwealth, and creating an environmental emergency," Sexton said, adding that Bizzack could be fined for these violations.

Officials were unsure how much of the diesel entered Turkey Creek and how much soaked into the ground. There were no reports of evacuations or of any effect on the area's drinking water, Maleva Chamberlain, spokeswoman for the Cabinet for Natural Resources' Division of Water said last week.

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

Coffee Break

by Scott Perry

A University of Kentucky survey suggests that an overwhelming majority of Kentuckians favor the enactment of a mandatory seat belt law.

Interestingly enough, the survey shows that some of the most positive support for the proposed law comes from Eastern Kentucky, an area where the word "mandatory" has often been considered by some to be synonymous with "communism."

This leads us to two possible conclusions:

(A.) Only the commies were surveyed.

(B.) Folks have realized that there is no constitutional right guaranteeing an individual's freedom to fly through the windshield of their choice.

Of course, common sense tells us that if more people used their common sense there would be no need for a seat belt law.

Unfortunately, common sense is not so common.

How 'bout those weather forecasters?

There's a saying in Kentucky that if you don't like the weather, wait a few minutes and it'll change.

You better believe it.

We were in Frankfort Friday night when the weather world put out the word that a winter storm was imminent and five to eight inches of snow were expected.

Given our luck, which runs generally from bad to worse, we expected the worst, especially considering that we had planned for weeks a trip to Lexington and the UK-Arkansas basketball game and had taken a second mortgage to finance the tickets.

Naturally, we assumed the weather would put those plans into the deep freeze, since the tickets were to arrive from Pikeville which, if the forecasters were correct, would be 130 miles and eight inches of snow away come Saturday morning.

To make a long story short, it didn't snow, we got to go.

The Cats got thumped.

Maybe those storm warnings were right after all.

Speaking of storm warnings, looks like the Prez is facing some rough weather in his bid for reelection as his popularity continues to take a sleigh ride downhill.

Bush was king of the hill just a year ago when the bombs were falling on Iraq but so far he seems to have run out of ammo in the battle against a stymied U.S. economy.

Not that Bush is the only soldier in the fight, but history tells us that the general is either the hero or the hound in any war.

We should know soon whether he'll be wearing the collar or the crown as his plan "to get America back working again" goes from the drawing board to the testing ground.

If it fails, George Bush could very well find himself in search of a new job.

Part of the president's plan to spur economic recovery involves a tax break for families and a one-time tax credit for first-time home buyers.

The first will, theoretically, increase personal disposable income and the latter, again theoretically, should spark a resurgence in the home building industry, which has a huge supporting cast.

Both proposals will impact our area but not as significantly as, say, an energy policy tied to the use of coal or a tax incentive package for industries expanding to depressed regions.

Every little bit helps, true, but more than a little bit of help is necessary.

A story we saw recently about a gasoline pump which accepts credit cards, no doubt putting another human being somewhere out of work, left us wondering.

If technological advances are so critical to our society, how come a gallon of gas costs 75 cents more than it did 20 years ago when a whole crowd of smiling service station attendants would swarm around your car?

Part II: Mentality of Exploitation by Robert Perry

Assistant Professor of English
PCC
The Jamestown Colony was founded on May 13, 1607. On that first day, Captain John Smith writes, in his General History of Virginia: "Now falleth every man to work, the Council to contrive the fort, the rest to cut down trees to make place to pitch their tents, some provide clapboard to reload the ships, some make gardens, some nets, etc."

In other words, even before they built their own houses, the colonists began harvesting lumber for export to England. There the commodity was scarce, and in London markets clipboard—oak boards used by coopers to make barrel staves—fetched a handsome price. The high priority placed on logging shows that Jamestown was first and foremost a commercial enterprise, and that its financial backers expected a quick return on their investment. It was a pattern that would become a permanent feature of the modern capitalist economy: wholesale exploitation of old-growth forests for the short-term profits of the privileged few.

Today in the National Forests of the Pacific Northwest, timber companies are clear cutting ancient 200-foot Douglas firs, for which they pay the Forest Service less than two dollars a tree. According to the Wilderness Society, in the past 100 years 85% of the original old-growth forests of Washington, Oregon and California have been destroyed.

Although Virginia's oaks were soon put to good use, her Indians proved to be less tractable than Smith had hoped. In 1622, for example, they attacked Jamestown and massacred 347 of its 1250 inhabitants. From then on, the English waged all-out war against them, regularly attacking their villages and burning their crops. After a second massacre in 1644, the Powhatans, their numbers reduced by war and smallpox, were driven from the land they had cleared, confined to reservations, and forced to pay Jamestown an annual tribute of beaver pelts. In his Planters and Pioneers: Life in Colonial Virginia, Parke Rouse, Jr. says:

By the time of the Revolution, Virginia's once-great Indian civilization was in fragments. The Powhatans had been reduced to two tribes, the Pamunkey and the Mattaponi, whom Jefferson numbered at only fifteen men.

However, efforts to enslave the Virginia Indian failed. Rouse says that "Unlike the easy going African, he would not work the settlers' farms." To enslave a man in his native environment is difficult, especially if he retains his own language, culture, and personal identity. Men must be conditioned to slavery. Africans were "easy-going" precisely because they had been uprooted from their native lands, separated from their families, stripped of their language and culture, and brutalized during the Middle Passage. Not having the benefit of such treatment, Virginia's Indians made poor servants.

America's first European colonists invariably saw the continent as an inexhaustible storehouse of natural resources. During that first fall at Jamestown, says Smith, the rivers became so covered with swans, geese, ducks and cranes that we daily feasted with good bread, Virginia peas, pumpkins, putchamins, fish, fowl, and divers sorts of wild beasts as fast as we could eat them.

Reading this makes me wonder what wild swan tastes like. Like most Christians of his era and many in ours, Smith believed that plants and animals lacked souls, and that the only earthly creature so endowed was man himself. He also believed that men had been ordained by God to exercise dominion over "the fish of the sea" and "the fowl of the air" (Genesis 1:26). In other words, God had created the material world and all the objects in it exclusively for man's benefit. This might be called the Lords of Creation assumption.

Of all the attitudes Smith and his fellow Englishmen brought to America, none has been so pernicious as their belief that plants and animals lacked souls. Obviously, creatures without souls may be slaughtered with impunity. In his great novel, The Pioneers (1823), James Fenimore Cooper has shown the appalling ferocity with which our ancestors exterminated the Passenger Pigeon. Every April, during their northern migration, great rivers of this bird would flood the Susquehanna Valley. When the flocks would arrive, the settlers would devote an entire day to their destruction, shooting them with pistols, "ducking guns" and cannons. Sometimes, to save ammunition, they knocked the birds out of the sky with poles. The last known specimen of this species died in 1914 at the Cincinnati Zoological Garden.

In 1642, a Dutch minister, Johannes Megapolensis, came to Rensselaerwyck, a Dutch settlement on the Hudson River, to preach to its pioneer farmers and evangelize its Indians. Two years later he published a description of the settlement entitled A Short Account of the Mohawk Indians. In his book Megapolensis marveled at the abundance of the American countryside. Strawberries were so plentiful that he could lie down in a field and eat his fill. Turkeys and deer browsed in the dooryard of his cottage. Geese were so numerous that during Spring and Fall migration, men stood in their dooryards and shot them by the hundreds. Megapolensis was also pleased to find that the Mohawks were friendly and peace-loving. Mohawk women, in fact, were "Exceedingly addicted to whoring." They would lie with a white man for "one, two, or three schillings." As a consequence, "our Dutchmen run after them very much" (Wright, 129, 132).

It is a truism of American history that our Pilgrim forefathers came to America not to enrich themselves but to escape religious persecution. This conception of the Pilgrim—as a man of high ideals, deep faith, and rock-solid integrity—originated with William Bradford, the first governor and chief historian of the Plymouth Colony, whose book, Of Plymouth Plantation, has become the official version of the Pilgrim story. Although Bradford's manuscript wasn't published until 200 years after his death, the curious history of the document itself clearly reveals that its version of events is the one which he wanted to hand down to posterity.

The manuscript was "handed down" in the most literal sense. Bradford began writing it in 1630, finished it in 1646, and, upon his death in 1657, bequeathed it to his son, William II. William II passed it to his son, John Bradford, who passed it in turn to his son Samuel. From Samuel Bradford the manuscript passed through the hands of Increase Mather, Cotton Mather, Samuel Sewall, and the Reverend Thomas Prince, who drew on it for his Chronological History of New England (Boston, 1736). From Prince's time until the 1770s the manuscript was kept in "The New England Library," a collection housed in the attic of Boston's Old South Church. When the British occupied Boston during the Revolution, the manuscript disappeared, and most scholars believe that it was removed from the premises by Governor Thomas Hutchinson, a Loyalist, before he fled to England in 1774. Hutchinson presumably gave it to the Bishop of London, because eighty years later an American scholar, John T. Thornton, with the help of an obscure footnote, discovered that the manuscript was gathering dust in the library of Fulham Palace, the traditional residence of London's foremost prelate. After extensive negotiations, it was finally returned to Boston in 1896. In such manner does the history of a great country get preserved.

In Book I, Chapter IV of his history, Bradford lists five "weighty and solid reasons" why the Pilgrims decided to leave Holland and emigrate to America. First, they had found it very difficult to make a living on Dutch soil. Second, they wished to establish their own colony while they were still young enough and strong enough to do so. Third, they feared that if they remained in Holland, their children would desert them and become Dutchmen. Fourth, they wished to do their duty as Christians and promulgate the gospel in a remote part of the world. Fifth, they feared that the Dutch would be conquered by the Spanish, whereupon they would be subjected to the barbarities of the Spanish Inquisition.

Seeking a place of refuge, the Pilgrims decided on America. Bradford describes their decision in these terms: "The place they had thoughts on was some of those vast and unpeopled countries of America, which are fruitful and fit for habitation, being devoid of all civil inhabitants, where there are only savage and brutish men which range up and down, little otherwise than the wild beasts of the same." The first thing we should note about this passage is that it contains an allusion to Job 1: "And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? Then Satan answered the Lord, and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it." Bradford's allusion shows quite clearly that he shared John Smith's belief that the American wilderness was the domain of the Devil, and that the Indians were his helpers. We should also note that Bradford is going to extraordinary lengths to persuade his audience that the Pilgrims came to a country that was uninhabited. Not only was it "unpeopled," it was "devoid of all civil inhabitants." These remarkable assertions notwithstanding, we know today, from archaeological evidence, that hundreds of thousands of Indians were living on American soil when the Pilgrims arrived in 1620. For Bradford, of course, this fact was beside the point, because he didn't classify Indians as people. On the contrary, they were "only savage and brutish men."

We also know that these "brutish men" weren't merely hunter and food-gatherers, ranging up and down the country like wild beasts. On the contrary, they lived in towns and villages, raised corn, squash and other crops, made pottery, and engaged in extensive trade with distant tribes. Anthropologist Alice B. Kehoe of Marquette University claims that one of their towns, Cahokia, which was located near present-day East St. Louis, Illinois, boasted in 1450 A.D. a population of 25,000 and a burial mound as large as the pyramids of ancient Egypt. To be sure, when the Pilgrims landed on Cape Cod peninsula in 1620, they found that region to be sparsely inhabited, but only because its residents had been decimated by the white man's smallpox.

In the passage I have just quoted, Bradford expresses a strong bias against men who "range up and down" the countryside, against a culture based on hunting and food-gathering. To put it another way, he believed that farm-based cultures were superior to hunting and food-gathering cultures. This belief has deep roots in the Judeo-Christian tradition. In Genesis I, for example, God commands Adam "to replenish the earth and subdue it," presumably by plowing it. In Genesis III, after Adam suffers the Fall, God sends him forth from Eden "to till the ground from whence he was taken." Furthermore, Bradford believed that the Pilgrims, because they practiced agriculture more extensively than the Indians, were justified in appropriating the Indians' land. Under European ownership, the land would become more productive. This belief might be called the Tillers of the Soil assumption.

In his A People's History of the United States (1980) Howard Zinn points out that when the Massachusetts Bay Colony was founded in 1630, its first governor, John Winthrop, issued a decree declaring Massachusetts to be a "vacuum." He also decreed that since the Indians hadn't "subdued" the land, they had only a natural right to it, not a civil right. In Winthrop's scheme of things, natural rights had no legal standing. In his ruling, Winthrop appealed to Psalms 2:8: "Ask of me, and I shall give thee, the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession."

Bradford and Winthrop both believed, along with John Smith, that European Protestants had been chosen by God to conquer and subdue the American wilderness and bring its savages under the sway of Christian civilization. Although Bradford stops short of calling the Indians devils, he emphasizes that they are "cruel, barbarous and most treacherous," and that they delight in tormenting their enemies by mutilating them or burning them alive. To be sure, the Indians of Massachusetts did engage in such practices, as the Narrative of Mary Rowlandson (London, 1682) makes clear. They were probably as cruel as the English Catholics who, at Smithfield, England in 1555, barbecued fifteen English Protestants because their opinions weren't satisfactory to the Catholic Church. They may even have been as cruel as Captain John Mason, the Connecticut Puritan who torched a besieged fort and burned 400 Indians to death during the Pequot War. On the other hand, they were probably less cruel than the people who bombed Hiroshima.

Opinions expressed in this column are the views of the writers and not necessarily those of the Times.

Report to Kentucky

Sen. Wendell Ford

"READISCOVER" Kentucky
Kentucky has proved itself again. We are barely into the new year, and Kentucky has already begun to show promising accomplishments and results for the year 1992.

To remind Kentuckians of the importance of reading as a way of learning about the world around us, the Kentucky Department for Libraries and Archives has worked successfully in making Kentucky the 25th state to win approval for a book center affiliated with the Center for the Book in the Library of Congress.

One of life's simplest joys is to be able to pick up a book of your choice and read it for pure enjoyment and knowledge. That is what our newly approved Kentucky Center for the Book wants — to stimulate interest in books, reading and libraries.

In order to promote reading, the Kentucky Center will use the Library of Congress themes such as "1992: Explore New Worlds — READ!"

This couldn't be more appropriate. 1992, Kentucky's Bicentennial and the 500th anniversary of the landing of Columbus in the Americas, couldn't be a better time to emphasize the significance of geography, reading and literacy projects. It not only brings together the literature of exploration and travel but brings together the links between place and imagination.

Although the Kentucky Center for the Book will receive guidance from the Library of Congress on setting up programs and promoting literacy, many of its efforts will be focused at the grass roots level — for children and adults in communities throughout the Commonwealth.

The Center will be a visible player in activities currently under way for this year's Kentucky Bicentennial. Its plans include "READISCOVER KENTUCKY", a wide-ranging children's program of reading activities which celebrates Kentucky's history.

With this and many other programs, the Kentucky Center for the Book brings about an opportunity for Kentuckians — authors and readers alike — to volunteer and help in placing an emphasis back on reading, literacy development and the state's intellectual heritage.

Reading, I believe, continues to open the minds and fires the imagination of people of all ages. It is the key to understanding people, places and other cultures.

I am proud to support the Kentucky Center for the Book's efforts to promote reading as a lifetime pursuit.

I congratulate our state officials, including Kentucky Librarian James Nelson, on this fine program. I look forward to the implementation of their plans to establish new partnerships on behalf of future generations of readers and lifetime learners.

Hearing

ash out of state to a hazardous waste landfill.

Eddins told the group that Kentucky did not have a hazardous waste landfill and the ash had to be shipped out of state for disposal.

Hisham M. Saaid, acting director for the Division of Air Quality, said after Thursday's meeting that allegations made during the hearing would be further investigated.

Saaid explained that the level of toxins from the incinerator's emissions were measured by the information provided by Medisin. He said that if the claims that other materials were being incinerated were true, it could alter the level of toxins in the air and soil.

Prior to the citizens' testimony, Saaid told the group that based on the information from Medisin in their permit application, the incinerators posed no health risks.

FCIA founder Phyllis Walker told the officers she suffers from debilitating headaches and nausea. She said residents who live near the incinerators suffer from eye and ear infections, skin burns and intestinal problems.

"Listen to what these people say," Walker said. "The state don't own our lives, but it's their responsibility to protect us. The state owes us and Medisin owes us. We want our homes and gardens back, but most of all we want our lives back."

Others who spoke before the officers told them they wanted to remain in their homes without the fears of becoming ill or being subjected to thick, foul-smelling smoke.

"I'm concerned about my health," said 85-year-old Graham Burchett. "I'm glad to be here this long and I hope to see a few more years. My eyes and nose water and sometimes I get deathly sick. If I don't get away from these incinerators, I'm going to have to leave my home."

Ethel Sammons told the officers she missed being able to grow and garden and sit in her yard in the summer.

"I used to be able to walk around in my yard and garden," Sammons said. "Now, if I do that I have to pull my shoes off outside because they are covered with a film. What is this? It wasn't here before."

Wilma Sturgill testified she suffers from a liver ailment that could be attributed to emissions from the incinerator.

"This is a life-threatening illness," Sturgill said. "My doctor told me it could have been caused by those emissions. I don't want to die."

Jeannie Wells testified she has had seven cats to die from difficulty in breathing and loss of muscle control.

Barney Walker told the panel he wanted to see Medisin's incinerators closed because of "falsehoods" told to the residents living near the facility and "out and out lies" on their permit application.

"They have said on their permit the size of their facility is two and one half acres and they employ 450 people," Walker said. "They have one truck driver, two operators and one or two others working there."

Scott Walker gave some of the most emotional testimony when talking about his mother's health.

"I travel a lot in connection with my job and I try to stop on my way back home to visit my mother," Walker said. "She's usually laying on the couch with a wastebasket beside her; her face swollen and she's unable to speak. She's been like this at least once a week for the last six months. I want to be able to come and visit my mother and have a normal conversation."

Magistrate Jackie Owens told officers it boiled down to one issue—

Local students named to president's list

Two Floyd County residents are among 380 students at Eastern Kentucky University to be named to the President's List for fall semester study.

Local students named to list include: Arnold Brent Turner of Allen and Amy Allen Ratliff of Prestonsburg.

The honor was recently established by the university as another way to recognize outstanding academic achievement. It is bestowed upon full-time undergraduate students who attain a perfect 4.0 grade point average for a semester.

money. "Medisin's in this business to make money," Owens said. "They burn more waste than U.K. Medical Center. They only care about making money and they don't care about the people. Medical waste is megabucks. They will tell you you can eat the ash for breakfast cereal."

All citizens who testified said they were not opposed to the hospital and felt it was an asset to the community.

Eddins said citizens could submit written testimony to the department until February 6. He said no determination on Medisin's permit would be made until the issues raised are investigated.

There were no Medisin representatives at Thursday's meeting. Medisin vice president Robert Ford could not be reached Tuesday for comment about allegations made during the hearing.

Sheriff

for "about 10 seconds" and come back to get the shotgun. The man laid the gun down on the kitchen counter and then picked up the telephone.

A passenger in Thompson's vehicle saw what was happening and radioed the sheriff's department for backup.

Chief deputy Linzie Hunt arrived at the scene along with several other deputies to assist the sheriff. While Hunt was en route to the location he instructed the dispatcher to call the home and talk to the man.

"When I got there, I put the spotlight right on him. He was standing in the kitchen doorway holding the phone," Hunt said. "Then me and the sheriff dropped down with our guns drawn and started toward the house to take him into custody."

After a somewhat brief, but physical struggle, the two, plus three other deputies managed to handcuff the 6'7, 350 pound man.

Greg A. Little, 35, of Water Gap was arrested and taken to the Floyd County Jail, charged with attempted murder, first degree wanton endangerment, two counts of terroristic threatening and fourth degree assault.

Thompson said he was confused when the man continued to fire the empty weapon.

"At first, I thought he might be trying to get me to kill him," Thompson said. "But, after we questioned his wife, we found out he told her he was going to kill her and everybody else. She unloaded the shotgun. I'd be dead if there had been a bullet in there. It really scared me."

Dispatcher Crystal Chaffins said the man's wife had talked to Hunt earlier about her husband's threats and called back asking for a deputy to come to her home. Chaffins said when she called the Little residence, Gary Little answered the phone.

"I told him who I was and asked him if his wife was at the residence," Chaffins said. "He said she had run from the home. I asked him if this was Gary Little and did he have a rifle. He said yes, and by that time the sheriff and deputy Hunt had entered the residence."

"He caught me sleeping," Thompson said. "I broke my own rules. I never allow a deputy to go on a domestic complaint alone. They can be very dangerous situations."

When asked why he didn't shoot Little, Thompson responded, "The question would have been asked then why did I shoot him because the gun was empty. I knew the gun was empty."

Little remained lodged in the Floyd County Jail Tuesday under a $100,000 bond. He was on parole from a gross sexual abuse conviction in Michigan, Thompson said.

you've got one king or one queen at the top, and I don't know what we are, servants or peons, but some of us are darned sick and tired of it," Collins added. Collins said that the issue should be placed on the ballot to let the citizens decide.

Archer was concerned that the current system would be bogged down for the next two years if the motion was adopted and strongly suggested waiting to see the effect of the current council as a checks and balance body of government.

Councilman Charles Hale called the current system a "dictatorship."

The vote on the motion to change the city's form of government tied with Councilmen Jerry Fannin, Billy Ray Collins, Gormon Collins, and Charles Hale voting in favor of the change, and Councilmen George P. Archer, William Callihan, Michael Vance, and Danny Hamilton voting no. The issue died with no tie breaking vote.

Archer said if the council could not improve on the current system he would carry the banner at a later time for a change to the city commission form of government.

The council also discussed the airport board issue, but the matter could not be settled in the absence of the mayor.

In other business, council:

-approved the second reading of an ordinance amending the requirements involving residential and non-residential construction relating to the prevention of flood damage.

-recommended that the occupational license fees for city businesses be increased and made retroactive to January 1, 1992.

-discussed whether city council is eligible for health insurance benefits.

The issue was tabled for further study into a health plan document.

-suggested that a move to an old system of pay schedules for the fire department and police department be made which would make the pay between the two departments as close as possible with adjustments for excessive overtime. Council's main objective is to get city workers, including the Public Works Department, back in harmony with each other and with city administrators. A study to see what other cities of equal size pay their employees was recommended.

-accepted the Hazmat (hazardous materials) mission statement provided by the Prestonsburg Fire Department.

-adopted a Volunteer Firefighters application procedures and processing document.

The council went into executive session midway through the meeting to discuss both personnel matters and current litigation.

Man injured retrieving safe

A Melvin man received minor injuries Friday when he dashed into the burning home of his father to retrieve contents of a safe.

The home of Homer Sloan on Abner Fork of Melvin was engulfed in flames when Sloan's son attempted to save the contents of a safe. The son, whom firefighters were unable to identify, had to exit the home and received minor injuries to his hands, said Daniel Gullett, captain of the Southeast-Floyd County Volunteer Fire Department.

The fire was reported around 2 a.m. Friday morning and the fire was totally involved when firefighters arrived on the scene. Nine Southeast firefighters battled the blaze and three Wheelwright firefighters responded as a backup. The house and its contents were a total loss, Gullett said.

Combustible papers near a water heater were a factor in the fire, according to Gullett. The owner of the home was in Michigan at the time of the incident. Arson is not suspected, Gullett said.

Track

for the racing commissioners will be open to the public at the Prestonsburg Holiday Inn Thursday, where an announcement is expected to be made concerning the project.

Woods learned about a year and a half ago, through Louisville attorney Chad Jennings, that Chester Porter would be liquidating his assets in Louisville Downs and selling it to Churchill Downs, Woods said.

With the help of Woods' local attorney, Greg Stumbo, and Jennings, negotiations began with Porter and the state Harness Racing Commission to secure the purchase of the track and gain approval of the plan to locate it in the Prestonsburg area, Woods said.

"We'd been trying to make this come about for quite awhile, but others (presumably, Pikeville, Hazard, and Ashland) got hold of it and tried to butt in on it. They made their statements, but we (kept quiet and) kept on with Chester Porter, who owns Louisville Downs, negotiating with him for the right to build the track here," Woods said.

Woods is enthusiastic about locating the facility in Prestonsburg.

"This will probably be the biggest tourist attraction in Eastern Kentucky. It will attract more people into our community than anything we could ever do," Woods said, adding that "When we get into full swing, we will employ something like over 200 people. Every business in our community should benefit from it. You can't imagine the economic boost to the area this facility can provide."

Woods suggested that motel chains and restaurants might follow the racing facility into the area to accommodate the influx of people from nearby West Virginia, Virginia, and Ohio who might begin to frequent Floyd County.

Woods acknowledged the role Greg Stumbo played in securing the agreement with Porter.

"He's (Stumbo) been behind me 100 percent in trying to help, because he feels it's going to be a great thing for Floyd County too. He's very, very enthused and tries to do everything he can do for Floyd County. Greg's worked hard for it (the track)," Woods said.

Until the announcement is officially made, specific details, such as the proposed site of the track, cannot be released.

Clyde Woods is a current owner of Dillinger's Restaurant, Thunderbolt Protective Services, and Center Stage of Prestonsburg, and Center Stage Two of Hazard.

This is dedicated to my Dad
 Herman Mullins
 on his 64th birthday.

"Proud He's My Dad"
 He's strong and all so handsome,
 How proud does he stand?
 When God made my Daddy,
 He made one giant of a man.
 He worked so hard most all of his life,
 Not for himself but for his family and wife.
 He's always been willing
 To lend a helping hand,
 Not only to his family,
 But to his fellowman.
 He's kind and so thoughtful,
 His love is sincere,
 When I'm in trouble
 He comforts me with these words,
 "Can I help you, my Dear?"
 Yes, he's my Daddy,
 I'm proud, proud to say,
 Daddy, my love for you grows more each and every day.
 So Dad, I'm writing this poem to say, "Happy Birthday."
 And that I love you in my own special way.

Happy Birthday, Popsie
 I love you.
 Your daughter, Diana Adams

Even one year olds need Social Security numbers

Parents are reminded that all children age 1 or over must have a Social Security Number when showing them as a dependent on their 1991 Federal Tax return, said Jim Kelly, District Director for the Big Sandy Area Social Security office.

You can get an application form for a Social Security number by calling 1-800-772-1213 or the area office listed in your local telephone directory.

However, the law requires that proof of age and identification must be submitted with the application.

The child's birth certificate and a vaccination-shot record should accompany the application form.

The parent must also submit some form of identification such as a driver's license, Kelly said.

With the required proofs, the process takes about two weeks to get the number. Without the proofs the application can't be processed at all, so make sure you send the proofs with the application form, Kelly said.

Only original or certified copies can be used. These documents will be promptly returned.

Anyone having questions or needing assistance should contact the Big Sandy Area Social Security office located on U.S. 23 between Prestonsburg and Paintsville.

In Memory of Anna S. Gibson

I would like to give you a little background of this great lady. I am taking you back in a different time. When she was courting her husband, Ewing, she always said laughing, and told her children I married your dad, because he always had the most beautiful horse to ride. Oh my, she loved Ewing dearly.

In her young days, Ann taught school in the day to children and adults at night. She continued teaching while rearing her children and later she retired. She was proud of the third generation teacher in the family. She taught Sunday school at Sizemore. Ann loved all the children she taught.

She learned to play the piano by ear. She played the song "My Old Kentucky Home" the most. Ann could play the piano until this past year.

Ann was curious about the world and adapted well through the horse and buggy days, to our present computerized society. She adjusted to living from the old days and three different states because she needed the love and care of her daughters.

She has traveled and returned to the land that meant so much to her, because she was tired and ready to rest in her "Old Kentucky Home" on the mountain that she climbed so many times, to visit Ewing. Now Ann is in Heaven with him and taking their son, Daniel with her.

Ann was patient, kind, thoughtful and friendly to everyone. Ann had a verse she quoted many times:

"Be kind and gentle to those that are old, for kindness and gentleness are dearer than gold."

Here is Anna Gibson's legacy:
I leave you love.
I leave you hope.
I leave you peace.
I leave you the challenge of developing confidence in one another.
I leave you a thirst for education.
I leave you faith.

Anna S. Gibson was a member of the Baptist Church.

Her daughters,
Betty Roberts
and Ruby Mitchell

In loving memory of my twin sister and our sister Bessie (Terry) Skiver who passed away February 4, 1991.

*God took her home, it was his will,
But in our hearts, we love her still.
Her memory is as dear today
As in the hour she passed away.

You never truly part.
Like a flower her memory
blossoms,
Forever in our hearts.*

PICC Line seminar held

The peripherally inserted central catheter, or PICC Line has simplified the lives of many patients who receive Intravenous Therapy. The PICC Line is an Intravenous Access Catheter that can and is being inserted by the Registered Nurse for patients who need reliable sometimes long-term Intravenous Therapy as ordered by their physicians.

A PICC line workshop was held January 18 from 8 a.m. till 5:30 p.m. The seminar was designed to fulfill the didactic requirement for the placement of PICC Lines, a specialized field of vascular access for infusion therapy. The care, use and maintenance of the PICC Line were discussed in detail. The complications of PICC Lines were covered with emphasis on prevention as well as appropriate nursing interventions. Guidelines were provided for proper patient selection and policy development. Supervised simulation insertions allowed a critique of the skills learned and an opportunity for individualized instruction. Opportunity for actual live insertions were provided for all participants on a voluntary basis.

The workshop was sponsored by I.V. Management Services and the speaker was Arthur Davies, R.N., BSN. The workshop was organized by CME I.V., Inc.

A Look At Sports
by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

WHO WAS THE BEST OF THEIR CLASS IN GRADE SCHOOL BASKETBALL?

Well, the question could be understandably controversial because of the many outstanding players we have here in the Floyd County basketball program. I know that many of the fans around the county would say that their players in each class would have to be chosen as the best. But, being realistic, who would you say is the best in their grade level? Let's look and see. Here's how I rate them. You don't have to agree with me but I believe the following players have to be ranked number one in their grade.

EIGHTH GRADE

The top eighth grader in Floyd County basketball has to be Steve Adkins of Anxier. Adkins is much quicker than anyone I have seen play this year. He can shoot the basketball as well as any eighth grader I have seen come along in a while. An excellent rebounder and defensive player. Adkins is so quick that he can beat you on the first step. Averaged close to 28 points per game and pulled down an unofficial 12 rebounds per game.

SEVENTH GRADE

Martin's Thomas Jenkins gets the nod here. Jenkins does so many things without the basketball that others in his grade level just don't do. He is quick for a big man and gives it all that he has. An excellent postup player, he can also hit the short jumper as well as rebound. Runs the floor very well and can hit the free throws. Jenkins averaged 15 points per game and rebounded at close to nine a game. Very talented player and never opens his mouth to complain. He just goes out and does it all on the court.

SIXTH GRADER

Maytown's Todd Howard undoubtedly will be a premier basketball player the next two seasons for Maytown. Very good court sense for a sixth grader. Can hit the long jumper as well as fill the lanes. Good defensive player with a lot of desire in his play. Doesn't rattle easy and a very good free throw shooter. Averages close to 10 points per game and about four assists. Will be a good one in the years ahead.

Now, there are others in the same grade levels who are talented and promising prospects in basketball. I just feel that these three are the top of the three grades.

CANTRELL'S REGIONAL RATINGS ARE A JOKE

I don't know which rating poll you follow the most, Dave Cantrell's of the Lexington Herald or Litkenhous of the Courier-Journal. But Dave Cantrell's rankings show clearly how close he follows 15th Region basketball. I have no argument with the top two choices in his poll — Belfry and Elkhorn City. But from there I differ with him considerably.

I personally don't think there are more than four teams better than Wheelwright or Prestonsburg in the 15th Region. Yet, Cantrell's rankings have them 11 and 15 in the polls. Magoffin County, who has won a total of three games all season, is ranked 12th ahead of Wheelwright. Pikeville and Johnson Central are fifth and eighth respectively in the polls but, yet, Prestonsburg has beaten both teams.

Sheldon Clark is definitely a top five team in the region. Paintsville also should be higher than they are.

Here's the way I see the top ten teams. 1st - Belfry; 2nd - Elkhorn City; 3rd - Paintsville; 4th - Sheldon Clark; 5th - Wheelwright; 6th - Prestonsburg; 7th - Pikeville; 8th - Johns Creek; 9th - Shelby Valley; 10th - McDowell.

CONGRATULATIONS TO...

Adams Middle School girls and Martin boys upon winning their division of the Floyd County Grade School basketball tournament.

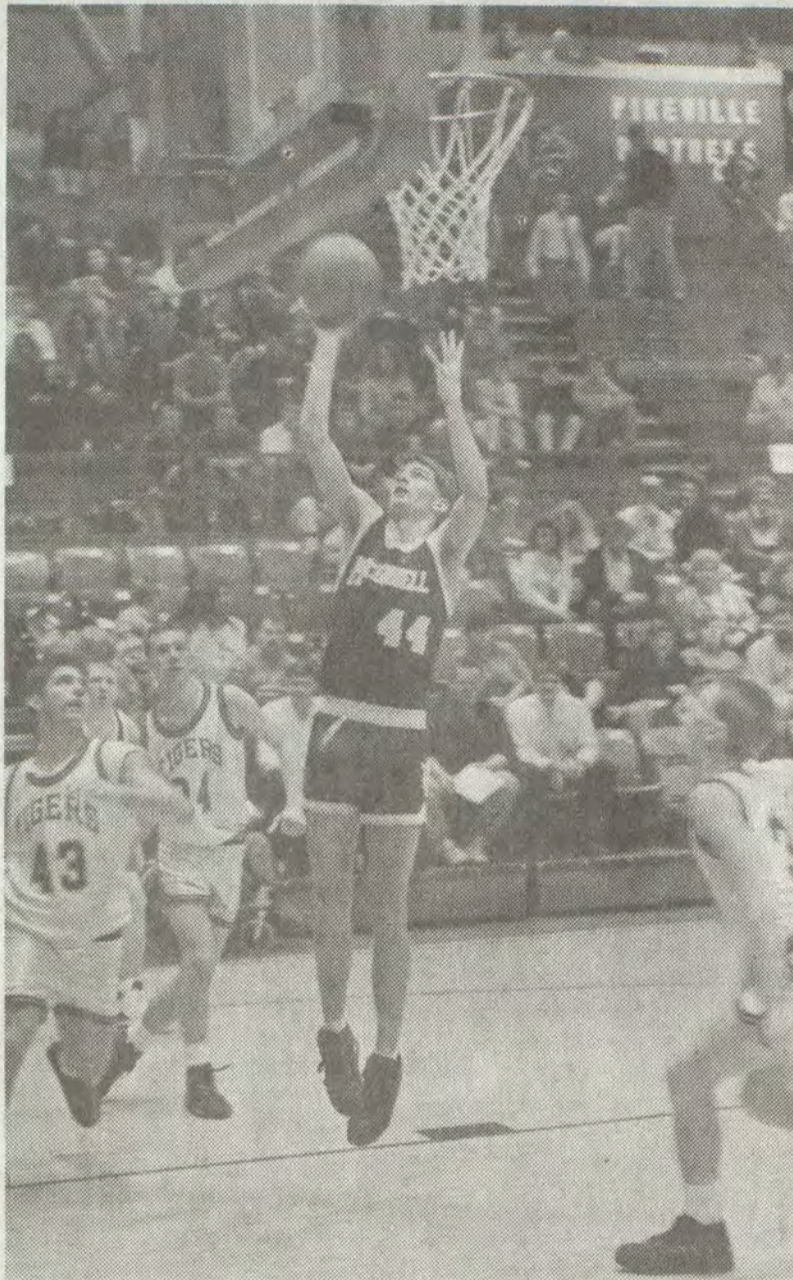

MCDOWELL/WHEELWRIGHT TO MEET YET ANOTHER TIME

Wheelwright and McDowell will square in the first game tonight of the Kentucky Class A regionals at Pikeville, and it will mark the third time the two teams have met this season with Wheelwright holding a 2-0 edge.

Many coaches fear playing one team three times in one season, knowing it is harder the third time around. Well, if things go as they could the two teams could meet in the district tournament somewhere along the line for a fourth meeting.

Remember the year that Kentucky defeated LSU three times but the fourth game was a big one — a loss in the NCAA tournament for Eddie Sutton's Cats.

Until Friday, good sports everyone and be good sports. It makes life nicer!

Leads Daredevils!

McDowell Advances In Class "A" With 74-54 Win Over Mullins

The Kentucky Class Single-A High School state basketball tournament was designed to give small schools a chance to win a state title without having to compete against the larger state schools. Two of the smallest schools in the 15th Region got together at the T. W. Oliver Memorial Gymnasium Monday night to kick off the 191-92 Class A regional tournament.

McDowell faced a determined Mullins squad in the opening game and needed a second half effort to put away the pesky Tigers 74-54 to advance on to the second round Wednesday night. McDowell will face county rival Wheelwright, a team they lost to twice, in the first game Wednesday evening.

Matt Johnson tossed in a game high 24 points and pulled down six rebounds to lead the Daredevils to their win. The victory also snapped a seven game skid McDowell had been on. McDowell hasn't won since they defeated Allen Central back on January 3. The win improved the Daredevils record to 10-12 on the season. Dale Hinkle scored 15 points for McDowell with Doug Hopkins adding 14.

It was a game that saw the Daredevils struggle in the early going as they did not look sharp on offense. Missed layups and freethrows helped keep the smaller Tigers in the game, plus the outside shooting of Jamie McPeek and Chuck Lowe. Lowe, who led the Tigers with 19 points, bombed in five three-pointers. McPeek, a second distance scorer with 18, had four treys against the Daredevils. McDowell scored the first eight points of the fourth quarter to build a 17 point deficit, 62-45 as Johnson scored eight points in a 12-2 spurt by McDowell. Johnson hit a three-pointer and then added a free throw with 3:02 left in the game to give McDowell a 66-48 lead. After a basket by McPeek, McDowell ran off six unanswered points to open up the game.

Mullins (2-13) just wouldn't go away for the bigger McDowell team as coach Joe Marson's squad stayed closed through three quarters of play. Lowe's three-pointer at the 4:35 mark of the third quarter kept the Tigers within four points at 43-39.

In the first half, McDowell looked confused and let Mullins whip them on the boards.

McDowell's Hinkle scored the next five points to give the Daredevils a 48-39 lead with 4:03 showing. McDowell held a nine point lead after three quarters.

The Daredevils had better ball movement the second half in putting some distance between them and the Tigers. In the first half, McDowell looked confused and let Mullins whip them on the boards. The margin of rebounds changed in the second half also as McDowell was blocking out better. However, Mullins ended up out rebounding the taller Daredevils 20-18 for the game.

McPeek hit three treys in the second quarter to keep Mullins in the game. The last time the score tied was at 21-21 in the second period when McPeek hit a three-pointer. McDowell outscored Mullins the rest of the half 11-3. Mullins never led in the game.

Alan Joe Moore saw a lot of playing time for McDowell in scoring five points and pulling down four rebounds. Scotty Stanley added six points with three rebounds.

Doug Hopkins had 14 points but also picked up six assists. More had five assists with Johnson and Earl Cook passing off four. McDowell turned the ball over 16 times with Mullins committing 12 mistakes.

Breck Hammonds scored five points for Mullins with Brad Gibson netting four as did Bud Barnette.

Martin Captures County Title Over Allen, 61-49

It's over. The grade school basketball season is over. And the Martin Purple Flash are the boys' county champions after posting a 61-49 win over the Allen Eagles in the championship game Saturday night at the Maytown gym before a packed house of frenzied basketball fans.

Thomas Jenkins scored 21 points to lead the Martin charge. Jenkins, a seventh grader, had a strong supporting class with Jason Bevins adding 15 points in a foul prone game for the big center.

But it wasn't the kind of game that Allen came to play, according to Coach Jackie Day Crisp.

"We wanted to hold the ball on them and make them play a half-court game with us," said Day. "But they came out and scored four quick points and we were forced to play their type of game. We wanted to be able to take the ball to Cory (Patton) and let him go one-on-one."

Patton did respond well even in the running game with the Purple Flash by taking game scoring honors with 23 points. Teammate Timmy Nunnemaker added 13 points.

It was Martin setting the tone for the championship game as the two teams met for the third time this season splitting the first two games. Allen was the team to hand Martin their only loss of the season as the Purple Flash had an outstanding 29-1 finish. Martin got revenge in the finals of the Shag Campbell Invitational, Allen's tournament, and then again in the championship game.

One thing that stood out in this championship game which set it apart from others over the years was the sportsmanship displayed by both players and fans. It was not unusual to see an opposing player help another, even to the point of putting their arms around the player and encouraging him. The fans were outstanding in their behavior and made the game that much more enjoyable.

Martin had built a 26 point lead, 50-24, late in the third quarter as the game began to slip away from Allen. However, the gamed Eagles began fluttering their wings for one last attempt and cut the lead to 13 points. Patton hit back-to-back baskets just before the third period ended to make it a 22 point game. Allen scored the first nine points of the fourth quarter that saw the lead shrink to 13 points, 50-37. Nunnemaker hit a basket to make it 50-30. Kevin Robinson was called for a traveling violation and in disgust slammed the ball to the floor which warranted him a technical foul. Nunnemaker connected on both attempts from the free throw line.

Nunnemaker then hit a jumper as Allen took the ball out of bounds to make it a 50-34 game. Nunnemaker again went to the free throw line where he hit one of two and James Jarrell followed with a jumper to cut the lead down to 13 points, 50-37.

Robinson's layup broke the dry spell for Martin and after Patton scored underneath for Allen, Martin went on a 7-4 spurt for a 57-41 lead. Allen got as close as 12 points, 59-47, but could get no closer.

"We got down in the first half and we just never did get into the kind of game we wanted to play. When you

"We made it to the finals and there's a whole lot of other schools not here."

Martin came out in the opening period and established the tempo as Robinson took the opening tipoff and drove the lane for a layin. On a turnover against the Martin press, Bevins hit a short turnaround jumper for a 4-0 lead. Allen's Patton made it 4-2 with a leaner in the lane.

Martin got back-to-back baskets from Robinson and Jenkins to make it 8-2. Patton and Bevins exchanged baskets to make it a 10-4 ballgame, but Allen caught fire and cut the lead to one, 10-9, on baskets by Keith Marsillett and a freethrow by Patton. Martin led at the first stop, 16-11, on a basket by Jenkins just before the horn.

Martin's big center, Bevins, picked up some early foul trouble and had to lead the game in the second quarter (See Martin, B 2)

MARTIN PURPLE FLASH
1991-92 FLOYD COUNTY CHAMPIONS

Wheelwright, McDowell And Allen Central To Vie For Class A Title In Tonight's Games

The third annual Kentucky Class A High School basketball tournament will resume tonight after a one night layoff. The tournament officially opened Monday night with three games that involved one Floyd County team — McDowell.

Tonight, Wheelwright and Allen Central will take part as they join the list of 11 teams that want to advance to state competition at Rupp Arena and also in Richmond.

The high flying Wheelwright Trojans will be pitted against the McDowell Daredevils, winners over Mullins on Monday night. This will be the third meeting between the two Floyd County teams with Wheelwright holding a 2-0 edge. Both wins have come in conference games with Wheelwright posting a 72-63 road win at McDowell last week. In an earlier game, Wheelwright won 70-67 at Wheelwright.

But this will be round three and the old thought that it is hard to beat a team three times comes to mind.

Allen Central will be making their first appearance in the tournament and will face the Elkhorn City Cougars in tonight's second game scheduled for 8:45 p.m. Coach Johnny Martin's Rebels have been denied entrance during the past two sessions because of the school's enrollment in the top three grades. However, Martin has his team in and ready to face perhaps the tournament favorite — Elkhorn City.

The tournament began back in the 1990 season with Pikeville pulling off a 91-81 win over Elkhorn City to move on to state competition. The Panthers faltered to eventual champion University Heights in the first round, 82-64.

Last season saw a repeat performance for the Panthers as they once again moved to Rupp Arena after defeating Randy McCoy's Cougars 89-63 in last year's regional finals. This time it was a more prosperous trip for the Panthers as they moved to the semifinals before losing out to University Heights 69-61.

McDowell will depend on their inside game in facing the Trojans as the guard play of the Daredevils was absent in the last meeting. Power forward Dale Hinkle tossed in 20 points in the last meeting between the two at McDowell and center Matt Johnson scored 15. After those two, the scoring took a nose dive with only Mike Duddleson getting close to double figures with nine points.

Wheelwright has the tall timber underneath and the guard play to go with it. Layne Bailey cannot only score, but is a good floor general as well. Down in the block will be Mike Newsome, who must have a good game for the Trojans to win. Super senior Harold Johnson leads the Trojans in scoring but must have some help from a strong cast that includes John Hall and Bailey. All four, along with Jimmy Helton scored in double with his third personal. It was then that Jenkins took over the offense and made things happen for the early struggling Purple Flash. Jenkins scored 10 points in the second quarter as Martin went to the locker room with a 37-20 lead.

Allen experienced some cold freethrow shooting in the second period as they misfired on seven attempts. Three were front ends of bonus fouls.

Martin, leading 39-24 in the third period, ran off 11 unanswered points for their 50-24 lead. Bevins scored five in the spurt with C. K. Dingus scoring four.

The county championship gave Martin five tournament titles this season along with one runners-up finish. The Purple Flash won the Right Beaver Classic which kicked off the grade school season. They were runners-up to Allen in the Mountain Christian Academy's invitational tournament. They later won the Shag Campbell Invitational, Section I play-offs and the prestigious RAX Invitational at Pikeville College.

Doug Derossett took over as head coach of the Martin team after Jimmy Hopkins decided to concentrate more time on coaching at McDowell. It was a pressure situation that Derossett stepped into.

"Sure, there's pressure," he said after his team won the county title. "There's always pressure when you take over a winning program like Martin. Pressure to keep it going and keep the winning tradition."

"It was the same when I first took over the girls' program at Martin. We won the county that year also with the girls. I'm just happy to get this win because we have come close the last two years reaching the finals."

Derossett recognized some of his players who have contributed to the success of the Martin team and described Kevin Robinson as his stalwart on defense.

"Kevin is just a good basketball player who takes care of the ball for us," said Derossett. "He plays hard nose defense and the way he plays just tears the other teams up."

"Another great defensive player we have is Beau (Tackett). He does a great job for us at guard and even though he doesn't score a lot, he can. He is the type of player who can take over a game offensively when we need it. He can certainly turn things up for us."

"Jason (Bevins) got into some early foul trouble for us in the second quarter but he came back in the second half and picked it up some, pulled down some key rebounds and got some put-backs."

Thomas (Jenkins) hustles all the time. He is one kid who gives all that he has to give and that is because he loves to play basketball. You can't say enough about him.

"Adam (Coleman) plays a good defense for us as well as rebounds really well. He gets a lot of cheap fouls called on him and that hurts us, but Adam is a hard worker."

Robinson finished with 12 points on the evening and Tackett had seven before leaving the game with an injury. Keith Marsillett tossed in six points for Allen and James Jarrell added five.

Boaters Checklist

The following is a pre-season checklist presented by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for all boaters.

- Make sure the boat is licensed by the state in which you live and the registration numbers are properly spaced. As an example: KY 1234 XX. The numbers must be at least three inches high, of a contrasting color and placed towards the bow (front) of the boat. Also remember to move all previous years registration stickers as it is unlawful to leave these in place.

- Clean and wax your boat's hull to enhance its appearance and to reduce drag, resulting in improved performance and increased fuel economy.

- Make sure your trailer and hitch are roadworthy including bearings, tires, lights, attaching ball and safety chains.

- Tune your engine for quicker starts and improved performance.

- Double check your safety equipment, including personal flotation devices, fire extinguisher(s), navigation lights and horn or whistle. Also recommended but not required are first aid kit, paddle, bailing bucket, anchor and rope.

- Charge that battery! If you use a trolling motor, consider a separate power system for it.

- Last but not least, don't forget the plug!

Prestonsburg Goes Into Overtime Before Subduing Allen Central 65-61

Weather conditions outside the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse weren't ideal as cold winter temperatures chilled those entering the gym. But inside it had really warmed up as the Allen Central Rebels invaded the fieldhouse to meet up with the Prestonsburg Blackcats, who stand just half a game behind Wheelwright in the Floyd County Conference basketball standings.

Senior guard John Thomas Clark lit up the fieldhouse with some hot outside and free throw shooting. The Blackcats leading scorer tossed in a game high 29 points hitting five three-pointers and was a sizzling 10 of 11 from the charity stripe. But more importantly was the floor leadership shown by the stand out senior. His ability to handle the basketball down the stretch in overtime was of vital importance to the Blackcat win. Clark scored seven of the nine Blackcat points in the overtime.

It seemed also that Rebel coach Johnny Martin has settled on a starting lineup that includes four seniors and a sophomore. The Rebels got a good outing from senior Stewart Hall and Todd Lucas. Hall led the Rebels with 20 points and Lucas added 15. Lucas was instrumental in leading a fourth quarter Rebel charge that helped the Rebels stay close.

It was an exciting ballgame that had all the ingredients of a top conference game. Good passing, defensive play and three point shooting by both teams.

With the score tied at 56-56 at the end of regulation play, Clark hit a three-pointer to start the extra period to give Prestonsburg a 59-56 lead.

Larry Patton missed an uncontested layup for the Rebels and then came back to misfire on a bonus free throw attempt. Hall went to the charity stripe and hit two free throws for the Rebels to make a two point, 59-57 lead. Mike Allen picked up his fifth personal foul when he sent Burke to the free throw line where the big 6' 8" center nailed both attempts to the applause of his bench. (Burke has really struggled this year at the free throw line). The two free throws made it a 61-57 game. Hall went to the foul line after being fouled by Clark and hit two free tosses to keep Allen Central close at 61-59. Clark hit two more charity tosses and Hall came back with a field goal with eight seconds left in overtime to make it 63-61. Clark was intentionally fouled with three seconds left in the game and hit both for the final 65-61 count.

Prestonsburg look a 45-41 lead into the final frame when Clark hit a three-pointer just before the buzzer ended the third period. Allen Central rallied at the start of the fourth period to assume a 48-45 lead. In fact, Prestonsburg was unable to score on their first four possessions of the fourth quarter. Carl Watkins grabbed an offensive rebound for a put-back and following a Prestonsburg turn over, Lucas drilled a three-pointer to give Allen Central a 46-45 lead. Watkins scored again for the Rebels on another offensive rebound but this time he was fouled by Aaron Tucker. Watkins missed the charity toss but the Rebels owned a 48-45 lead that went to 50-45 on Lucas break away basket with 4:17 remaining in the game.

Just as quickly as they went hot, the Rebels cooled off, and Prestonsburg picked up the momentum. Chris Burke's layup plus Clark's trey and two free throws netted Prestonsburg a 52-50 lead. Burke took a nice pass from Tucker down low and laid in the basketball to give the Blackcats — a four point, 54-50 advantage.

After Watkins' basket with 2:11 remaining, Prestonsburg went into a stall and that seemed to take the momentum away from the Blackcats. A turnover pursued with 1:10 showing on the clock and Lucas was fouled. Lucas connected on both free throws for a 54-54 score at the :59 mark. With 20 seconds remaining, Clark hit two charity tosses to give Prestonsburg a 56-54 lead. After an Allen Central timeout Hall was fouled by Joe Whitt on a drive to the basket with just 12 seconds on the clock. Hall hit both pressure free throws to send the game into overtime as Prestonsburg was unable to get a good shot off.

Central outstanding sophomore, Phillip Patton had trouble scoring underneath as several of his shots inside were a little soft. Patton was playing his first game against Prestonsburg since transferring to Allen Central last year.

Allen Central took an 8-1 lead early in the first quarter after Prestonsburg led 1-0 on a free throw by Burke, Clark's first three pointer of the game gave Prestonsburg their first lead at 11-9. A jumper by Hall and an offensive rebound basket by Patton gave Allen Central a 15-14 first quarter lead.

Prestonsburg took a 38-31 lead into the locker room at the half.

Both teams struggled in the third quarter with Allen Central outscoring Prestonsburg 10-7 to trail 45-41 after three quarters.

Burke finished with 15 points for Prestonsburg hitting 50 percent from the free throw line. Aaron Tucker, added 13 points. Tucker came out hot in the first quarter hitting two three-pointers and a field goal for eight points.

Watkins had eight points for Allen Central. Phillip Patton netted seven with Allen scoring six.

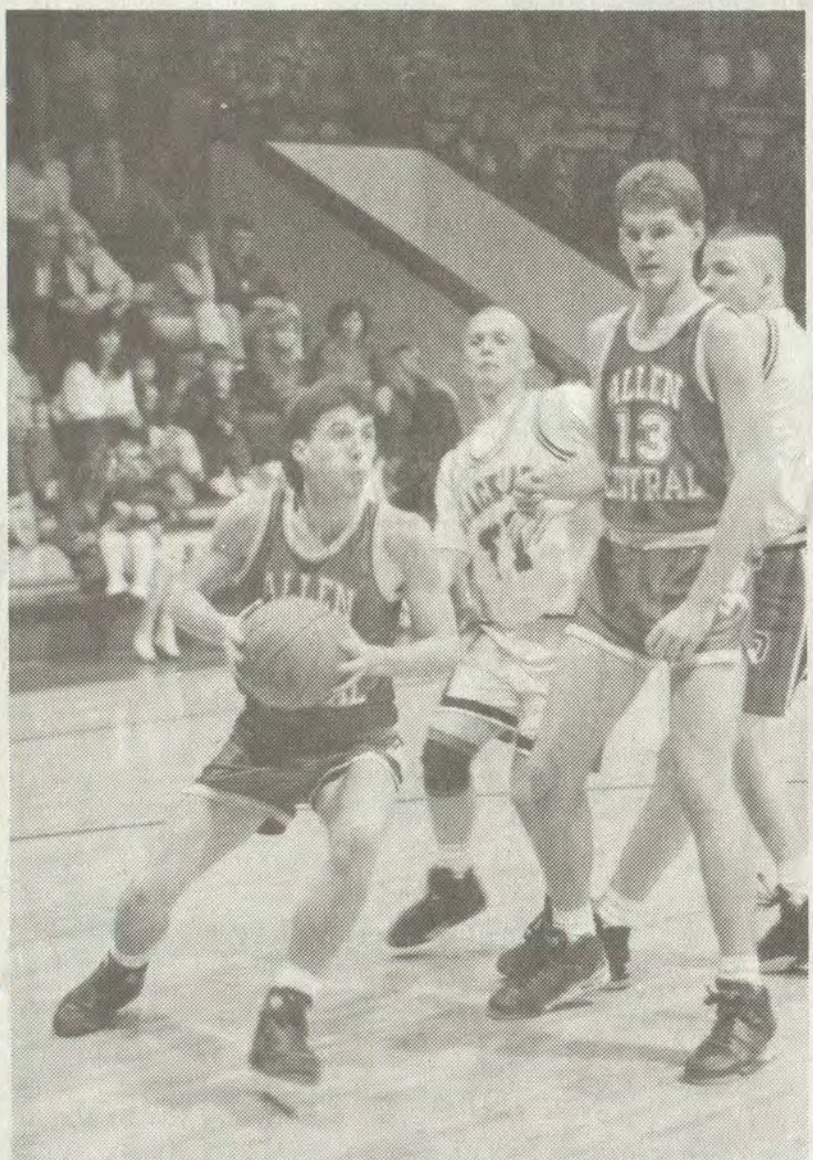

Allen Central (5-6) falls to 1-4 in conference play and will face either Elkhorn City or Millard in tonight's Kentucky All "A" Classic at Pikeville. The Rebels are scheduled to tipoff at 8:45 p.m. Prestonsburg (7-5) stays close to Wheelwright by improving to 3-1 in the conference. The Blackcats will host Whitesburg Saturday night in a nonconference matchup.

AARP volunteers give free tax assistance

Tax time does not have to be a traumatic time for senior citizens thanks to a group of retired Floyd Countians. Each year, the American Association for Retired People (AARP) co-sponsors a free tax program at the Floyd County Library.

The program, which is also sponsored by the Internal Revenue Service, begins on February 4 and concludes April 15. Those who are 50 or older, or whose family income is less than $30,000 are eligible for the service.

The tax service has been in operation for the last eleven years and helps about 700 individuals annually, said Earnest Hayes, ADC Associate District coordinator. Hayes said the service will be manned by at least six members of the AARP on a rotating basis, from 8:30 until 3:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Wednesdays, with time out for lunch from 12 until 12:30.

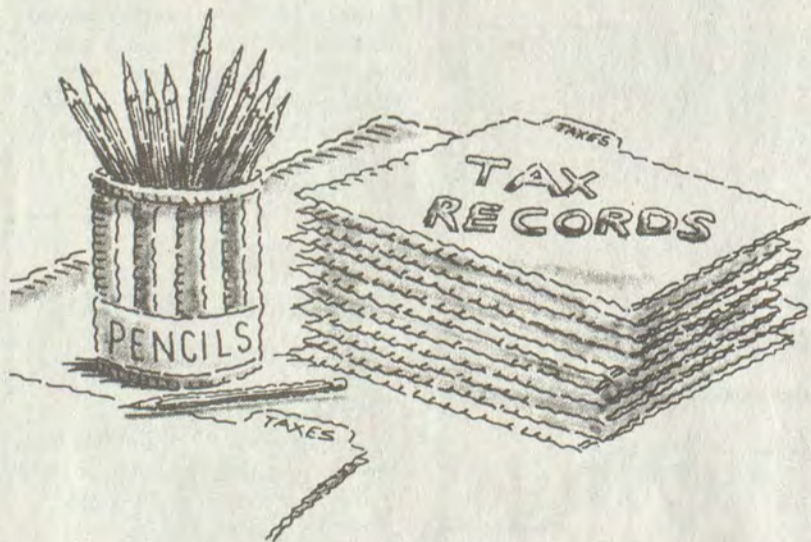

These members will fill out tax forms or offer tax counseling.

"We're here to help," Hayes said, "It's a good program."

Hayes said these volunteers were rewarded by the smiles on the faces of those they help. Several senior citizens receive letters from the IRS, Hayes said, and they're concerned. "It makes us feel good to show them they don't owe any money; or sometimes we can save them money," he explained. "They come in sad and go out smiling."

Assisting taxpayers sort through the middle of tax season will be Hayes; Arnold Moore, local coordinator; Arthur Haywood, instructor; Chester Patton, counselor; Burieta Gearheart, counselor; Oliver Allen, counselor; Chalmer Frazier, coordinator; Jimmy Goble, coordinator; Brad Warrix, coordinator; and Will Hows, coordinator.

The tax program dates will vary in March. The service will not be open March 5 and 12 due to conflict in scheduling. It will, however, be open Friday, March 6 and 13.

Kentucky State Income Tax Who Must File?

FILING STATUS	AGE*	GROSS INCOME EXCEEDS
Single person	Under 65	$5,000
	65 or over OR blind	5,000
	65 or over AND blind	5,000
Husband and wife	Both under 65	5,000
	Age 65 or over	5,000
	Both age 65 or over	5,400
Non-resident with income from Kentucky		5,000

Any person with gross receipts of $5,000 or more from self-employment must file a Form 740 regardless of the amount of adjusted gross income or the number of tax credits claimed.

*If you were age 65 on January 1, 1992, you are considered to be age 65 at the end of 1991.

What's new for '91

Social Security Number for Dependents Age 1 or Older. If you can claim any person age 1 or older as a dependent, show that person's social security number on your tax return. If your dependent does not have a number, see your tax forms package for instructions.

More Benefit with the Earned Income Credit (EIC)—Use New Schedule EIC. You may be able to take this credit for 1991 if you earned less than $21,250 and a child lived with you. But you must file new Schedule EIC with Form 1040 or Form 1040A to do so. Read the instructions in the tax package to see if you can take this credit.

Increased Deduction for Exemptions. The deduction for each exemption—for you, your spouse, and dependents—is $2,150 for 1991. But your deduction may be limited if your adjusted gross income is more than $75,000. See further information in your tax package.

Limit on Itemized Deductions. If your adjusted gross income is more than $100,000 ($50,000 if married filing separately), you may not be able to deduct all of your itemized deductions. Read the Schedule A instructions in your tax forms package. Also, personal interest (such as interest you paid on car loans and credit card balances) is no longer deductible.

Maximum Tax Rate of 28 percent on Capital Gains. If you have a net capital gain, your tax may be less if you can use the tax computation on Schedule D (Form 1040) to figure your tax. See Part IV of Schedule D to see if this applies to you.

Alternative Minimum Tax Increased. The tax rate for individuals has increased to 24 percent.

Standard Deduction Increased. Because of the increase, it may be to your benefit to take the standard deduction this year even though you itemized deductions in the past. Use the Standard Deduction Chart in your tax package to figure the correct amount.

Lost tax forms can be replaced

Copies of federal income tax returns from prior years not only serve as good financial records, but also can be a guide for filling out future returns as well. Previous years' returns are especially helpful when financial situations stay almost the same from one year to the next.

Also, copies of prior year tax returns can be very useful if a change or amendment has to be made to previously filed returns, or if later there are questions about the returns.

If prior year tax returns are lost or destroyed, copies can be requested from the IRS by completing Form 4506, "Request for Copy of Tax Form," and mailing it to the service center where you sent the return. There is a charge of $4.25 for each year's return.

Form 4506 is available from the IRS by calling 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676).

Mixing business with pleasure

Entertaining prospects and associates as part of your business is a long-accepted practice. But claiming those expenses as legitimate tax deductions requires some knowledge of the tax laws.

Expenses for business entertainment are deductible as a business expense, subject to certain limitations, only if they are ordinary and necessary, according to the tax rules. "Ordinary" expenses are those that are generally accepted in your particular line of business. "Necessary" refers to expenses that are helpful and appropriate to your business.

The entertainment expense you want to deduct must be directly related to or associated with your business. This means that you should have more than a general expectation that the entertainment will result in making money or getting more business. You must either conduct or discuss business during the meeting, but the entire meeting does not have to be business. Even if your entertainment expense was not directly related to business, it may be a business deduction: for example, if your meal or entertainment comes before or after an important business meeting. Business entertainment can take place in a restaurant, night club, sporting club, or convention center.

You cannot deduct the cost of entertainment for your spouse or a family member unless his or her presence plays a central role in the business meeting. In such cases, his or her expenses are "associated" with the meeting.

Remember, for tax purposes, not all business expenses are equal. Generally, only 80 percent of the cost of meals and entertainment, including taxes and tips, may be deducted as a business expense. But transportation expenses to and from deductible meals and entertainment are not limited to 80 percent.

See IRS Publication 463, Travel, Entertainment, and Gift Expenses, for more information on entertainment expense deductions. It is available free by calling 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676).

Tax tip for the self-employed

In business for yourself? Do work on the side? If your net earnings are $400 or more, you must file Form 1040 and Schedule SE.

Keep your business, business

Another common mistake is to use business items for personal reasons. While there is no reason you can't do this, you should keep track of anything you take from your business for personal use. Make sure that the cost of such items is removed from business expenses.

Tax "Guides" Get Into Your Business

The Internal Revenue Service publishes a number of free tax publications for businesses. They are full of items of interest to businesses ranging from employer responsibilities to allowable business expense deductions. These tax guides are updated either annually or when tax law changes take effect, so that they reflect current and accurate tax information.

Some business-related publications include:

- Pub. 1, Your Rights as a Taxpayer, clarifies the rights taxpayers have whenever they deal with the IRS.
- Pub. 334, Tax Guide for Small Business, is a basic primer for small businesses. This publication explains business organization, accounting practices, depreciation, deductions, credits and other rules.
- Pub. 15 (Circular E), Employer's Tax Guide, contains withholding tables, information on tax deposits and how and when to file returns. It is a "must read" for all employers.
- Pub. 463, Travel, Entertainment, and Gift Expenses, explains what you may legitimately deduct for business related travel, meals, and entertainment, and discusses related recordkeeping requirements.
- Pub. 534, Depreciation, discusses the various methods of depreciation. It also contains related tables.
- Pub. 538, Accounting Periods and Methods, explains acceptable accounting periods and methods for federal tax purposes.

- Pub. 541, Tax Information for Partnerships, is a basic explanation of partnerships and overview of Form 1065, and Schedules K and K-1.
- Pub. 542, Tax Information on Corporations, discusses corporations with a review of Forms 1120 and 1120-A.
- Pub. 583, Taxpayers Starting a Business, reviews identification numbers, types of business taxes, and recordkeeping for a small business.
- Pub. 587, Business Use of Your Home, can help you decide if you qualify to deduct certain expenses for using part of your home in your business.
- Pub. 589, Tax Information on S Corporations, explains how S corporations do not pay tax on its income; instead it passes its income and expenses to its shareholders who then report them on their own tax returns.
- Pub. 910, Guide to Free Tax Services, lists IRS publications and their corresponding forms and a subject index.
- Pub. 917, Business Use of a Car, gives the expenses that you may deduct for the business use of your car. It also explains the taxability of the use of a car provided by an employer and rules on leasing a car for business. To order these or any other free IRS publications, call 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676).

"Priceless" Tax Help Designed for New Businesses

The Internal Revenue Service has trained experts who teach small business workshops throughout the year free of charge.

These workshops are especially useful to those starting a new business, but they offer information helpful to all small business taxpayers.

Topics include employment taxes, federal tax deposit rules, quarterly returns, accounting methods, and other tax-related issues.

Call the IRS at 1-800-TAX-1040 (1-800-829-1040) for the times and places for workshops near you.

Section 179 deductions: a tax savings option

Opening a new business can be an expensive undertaking. During the first year, owners may find their "outgo" a lot greater than their income. But the Internal Revenue Code may offer some help to the new business owner, and others, who buy, and place in service, qualifying business property.

Generally, when you buy business property that has a useful life of more than one year you must depreciate it; that is, you spread your cost over the life of the property. This means it could take you three, five, seven, or more years to deduct your cost on your return.

Section 179 of the Code allows you to treat some or all of certain costs as a current year expense. This may be particularly important to a new business owner, because it may allow you to deduct the cost of some business property the same year you purchase and begin to use it, subject to certain limitations. You will often hear this called a "section 179 deduction."

Section 179 property must have a useful life of at least three years and generally includes tangible personal property like machinery, office equipment, and cars and trucks. Buildings and their structural components, and heating or air-conditioning units do not qualify for the section 179 deduction.

To claim a deduction under section 179, you must make your choice the year you place the qualifying property in service. The total annual deduction is limited to $10,000 per taxpayer. Other limitations may also apply.

IRS Publication 534, Depreciation, has additional information on the section 179 deduction. There are special rules for automobiles and trucks in Publication 917, Business Use of a Car. You may order these free publications by calling the IRS at 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676).

Going into business: start-up costs may be deductible

Getting ready to go into business can be expensive, but some of those start-up costs may be deductible.

All the costs you have to get your business started are usually treated as capital expenses and become part of the basis of the business. But you may elect to amortize, or write off, certain qualifying expenses over 60 months or more.

Amortizable costs include business start-up costs, and certain organizational costs for a partnership or corporation. The costs must also meet the following tests:

1. They would be deductible if paid or incurred to expand an existing trade or business, and
2. You must pay or incur them before you begin business operations.

Start-up costs may include such expenses as a survey of potential markets; advertisements for the opening of business; salaries or wages of employees in training; costs for contacting suppliers, distributors or customers; and fees for professional services.

Generally, these qualifying expenses are deductible in equal amounts over a period of not less than 60 months. Make the election to amortize start-up costs on Form 4562, "Depreciation and Amortization." File Form 4562 with your return for the year you start doing business.

Choose the Form that Fits

Continuing tax changes make it possible for many taxpayers to file simpler returns. Although you may receive in the mail this year the same type of form you used to file last year, you should review your tax situation to see if filing a different form is necessary or more beneficial.

Generally, use the green "EZ" form (1040EZ) if your filing status is single; you are under 65; you are not blind; you claim no dependents; your taxable income is less than $50,000 and is only from wages, salaries, tips, taxable scholarship and fellowship grants, and certain interest of $400 or less; and you do not itemize deductions, claim any adjustments or credits, or owe any other taxes than amounts from the tax table.

If you do not qualify to use Form 1040EZ, use the pink "short form" (1040A) if your income is only from wages, salaries, tips, taxable scholarship and fellowship grants, certain interest, dividends, pensions, annuities, IRAs, social security and unemployment compensation; your taxable income is less than $50,000; you do not itemize deductions; your only adjustment to income is for certain contributions to an IRA; your only credits are the credit for child and dependent care expenses, credit for the elderly or disabled, and the earned income credit; and, your only other tax is for advance earned income credit payments.

From a tax savings standpoint, use the blue "long form" (1040) if you have itemized deductions that exceed your standard deductions and have adjustments to income or credits that you cannot take on Form 1040A or Form 1040EZ. You must use Form 1040 if your taxable income is $50,000 or more; you had certain types of income such as capital gains, self-employment earnings, rents or royalties; you itemize deductions or claim certain tax credits or adjustments to income; and you owe other taxes or claim certain additional payments.

Choosing the simplest tax form that fits your tax situation:

- may save you time if you are able to use one of the shorter forms,
- reduces the possibility of errors,
- could get you a faster refund if you can file Form 1040EZ, and
- can put your tax dollars to better use; filing simpler tax forms helps the IRS reduce the cost of processing and storing the returns.

See your tax package to help you choose the best form. If you have not received a tax package in the mail, you may order forms and instructions by calling 1-800-829-3676. For recorded information, call the IRS Tele-Tax service at 1-800-829-4477 and select topic number 152, "Which Form—1040, 1040A or 1040EZ?"

Withholding: Getting it right

If you received a big federal tax refund last year, or if you ended up writing a check with your tax return, it may be time to check your withholding. Generally, you should have your employer (or employers) withhold only enough tax to cover your liability.

Claiming fewer withholding allowances than you are entitled to means extra money is coming out of each paycheck to pay income tax. This could create a problem because you will not be able to get that extra money back until you file your tax return and receive a refund.

However, if you claim too many withholding allowances, you might create an even bigger problem if you do not have enough federal income tax withheld. Since income tax works on a pay-as-you-go system, you may be liable for a penalty for the underpayment of estimated tax.

Basically, the amount of income tax withheld from your pay depends on two things:

- The amount you earn and
- The information you give your employer on Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate."

Your employer will use the information on your Form W-4 to determine your income tax withholding. Many things can happen during the year that may affect your withholding status. You may have to change the information on your W-4 if you: get married, or divorced; add a dependent or lose one; get a second job; or have a change in itemized deductions, adjustments or tax credits.

Can't pay? file anyway

If you can't pay your taxes, you should still file your tax return on time.

The IRS says this way you will save money because you won't have to pay a penalty for filing late. You should send as much money as you can with your tax return.

Sometimes the IRS will let you pay your taxes in installments. Other times the IRS will ask you to get a loan. You may need to sell something to pay your taxes.

One of the worst things to do is not to file a tax return at all. That could add a lot more to your taxes.

If you have any questions about how to pay your taxes, you can call the IRS. The number is 1-800-829-1040. This is a toll free telephone number.

If any of these things has happened to you, ask your employer or the Internal Revenue Service for a Form W-4. Give a completed form to your employer as soon as possible.

For more information on income tax withholding and Form W-4, refer to Publication 505, Tax Withholding and Estimated Tax, or Publication 919, Is My Withholding Correct for 1992?. Both are available free from the IRS by calling 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676).

New child... new tax credit

Was your baby born in 1991? If so, you may be able to claim a new child credit worth up to $357 when you file your federal income tax return due by April 15, 1992. Even if you don't owe any tax and do not have to file, you may file and get money back if you qualify.

You must qualify for the basic earned income credit (EIC) to claim the extra credit for a child born in 1991. The EIC is for working parents whose income was less than $21,250 and had a child living in their home for more than six months during 1991. A child born anytime during 1991 would qualify the parent for the EIC. If you can claim both credits for one child, the extra credit for a child born in 1991 added to the basic earned income credit may be as much as $1,549.

There is also a credit called the child and dependent care credit for those who pay for child care while they work. You can choose either the extra credit for a child born in 1991 or the child and dependent care credit. You need to figure out how much you will get under each credit. Then, choose the credit that is best for you. You cannot take both credits for the same child. Yet, you may still take the child and dependent care credit for any other qualifying children you have.

Two free publications can help you learn more about these credits.

Getting Your Refund

After you mail in your federal income tax return, you should get your refund within eight weeks. If you do not, or you think your refund is lost or stolen, call the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

Their toll-free phone number is 1-800-829-1040. The best times to call the IRS are late in the week, early or late in the day.

Or, you can use the IRS Tele-Tax service. You do that by dialing, toll-free, 1-800-829-4477. You will need to know your social security number, the amount of the refund, and if you filed your return as single or married.

If you move after mailing in your tax return, be sure to give the post office and the IRS your new address.

Good records needed for taxes

Good tax records can save you time and money when filling out your tax returns. You must have statements and receipts that support the income, deductions, and credits claimed on your return. If your records are in order, you can save hours of looking for W-2 forms or lost receipts and cancelled checks. These records will help you prepare a return that is complete and correct. Also, you can save money when you have records of expenses that may be tax deductible.

- Remember to:
- Keep copies of your tax returns. They can help you prepare future returns or if you need to file an amended return.
 - Save all statements showing income you received. This includes Forms W-2 and W-2P, showing wages and pension payments, and Forms 1099-INT and 1099-DIV, showing income from interest and dividends. Keep track of income from work in which you were not an employee; for instance if you had odd jobs or temporary work.
 - Keep careful records of payments you made to someone to care for your children or dependents while you work or look for work. Cancelled checks or receipts for cash payments usually are proof. Also, have your day care provider fill out Form W-10, "Dependent Care Provider's Information and Certification," and keep it in your files. You can use these records for the child and dependent care credit, which can be claimed on either Form 1040 or Form 1040A.
 - Make notes in your checkbook. It can be a basic source for keeping a record of your deductions. When you prepare your return, you can figure out if the amount is a deductible expense. Cancelled checks alone are not always proof that an amount can be deducted. Save the receipts, sales slips, and any other documents to support the items in your checkbook.

- Get receipts for cash. If you make payments in cash, get a completed, dated and signed receipt for any payments that may be deductible.
 - Store your records together in one safe place. You can keep records in a way that best suits you as long as you can support each deduction you take. One method is to keep an envelope and mark it for each kind of expense. For example, all child care receipts can be kept in one envelope and all income statements in another. Usually, records should be kept for three years after the due date of your tax return. Some records should be kept even longer.
- To read more on recordkeeping, get free IRS Publication 552, Recordkeeping for Individuals.

Seniors get once-in-a-lifetime tax benefit

For senior citizens, up to $125,000 of the profit from the sale of their home may be tax-free. Certain age, use and ownership restrictions apply to this once-in-a-lifetime exclusion from gross income.

You are eligible for exclusion of the gain if:

- You were 55 or older on the date of the sale or exchange, and
- You owned and lived in your main home for at least 3 years out of a 5-year time period ending on the date of the sale or exchange, and
- Neither you nor your spouse has excluded gain on the sale of a home since July 26, 1978.

There are some special rules for disabled individuals and widows or widowers.

Order free IRS Publication 523, Tax Information On Selling Your Home, for detailed information on the exclusion and the special rules. Call 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676) to order.

SWORD, ALLEN CENTRAL MISUNDERSTOOD
"It was a matter of understanding," said Rick Hancock, who was the tournament director of this year's Floyd County Grade School tournament. Hancock wanted everyone to know that he just misunderstood the policies of the administration at Allen Central in deciding where to hold this year's tournament.

"I want to apologize to Mr. (Jody) Sword and the people at Allen Central for the remarks I made," said Hancock.

Hancock thought that a previous school policy of two years back still stood this year as to the use of the Allen Central gym.

Not so, said Jody Sword, principal of Allen Central High School. "We offered our facilities for the county grade school tournament," he explained. "I told Mrs. Chaffins that Allen Central wanted to host the tournament and the facilities were available."

Cost for use of the gym was the point misunderstood, Hancock said. "It used to be that we had to pay $100 a day, plus hiring their clean up crew at a $100 per night, in order to use the gym," he explained. "But I just misunderstood what was told to me. That is the way it used to be two years ago."

"I told them that they were welcome to use the gym at no cost if they cleaned up the gym themselves," said Sword. "If they wanted us to clean it up, it would cost them only $25 per night."

Knowing Sword as I do, it was hard for me to conceive that he would have a policy such as that. Sword has always been a strong supporter of grade school athletics here in Floyd County. I remember seeing him at grade school basketball games and he said he was there to "just watch some good grade school basketball."

The Allen Central High School gym was available for the Floyd County Grade School Basketball Tournament.

CENTRAL, BETSY LAYNE TO HOST BOYS AND GIRLS' REGIONALS

In a press release from the office of the Kentucky High School Athletic Association dated January 22, Allen Central High School will be the Allen Eagles basketball team, has been seen limping around lately. Conley had a second operation on the same knee he had surgery on last year. We wish Kenny a speedy recovery because it won't be long until softball season.

WEBB 10TH IN NATION IN SCORING

Here's a good news item. Henry Webb, former McDowell Daredevil standout, is currently tenth in the nation in scoring in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA). The hot shooting Alice Lloyd guard is averaging 26 points per game.

WORTHY OF CONSIDERATION

With the boys and girls regionals being held in Floyd County, I sure hope that Frankie Francis, Floyd County athletic director, will encourage the officials at Allen Central and Betsy Layne to hold their tournament drawing and meetings at the school board conference room at different times instead of having one meeting at Allen Central and then another at Betsy Layne at the same time.

One meeting could take place at 1 p.m. while the other could be held at 2 p.m. or 3 p.m. It could save a lot of time in moving from one place to another.

Also, the problem of having to end our tournament in the county on Saturday night, draw Sunday and play Monday night needs to be taken into consideration right now. If our county tournament ending on Saturday causes a problem, why not start the tournament on Tuesday night (instead of the traditional Wednesday) and end it on Friday night? That would give the teams two days off before the tournament starts.

the site of this year's boys 15th Regional basketball tournament, according to Commissioner Billy Wise.

It will mark the first time a boy's regional has been held in the school, although the school was host to a girl's regional at one time in the '70s.

A new floor at Allen Central helped the selection committee in approving the site for the regional. If the school hosts a regional like they did last year, then fans are in for an entertaining treat.

The girls' 15th Regional basketball tournament will also be staged in Floyd County as Betsy Layne High School will play host to the rest of the region this year. This could be a first here in Floyd County with both sites being in Floyd.

MARTIN MADE FIFTH STRAIGHT TRIP TO FINALS

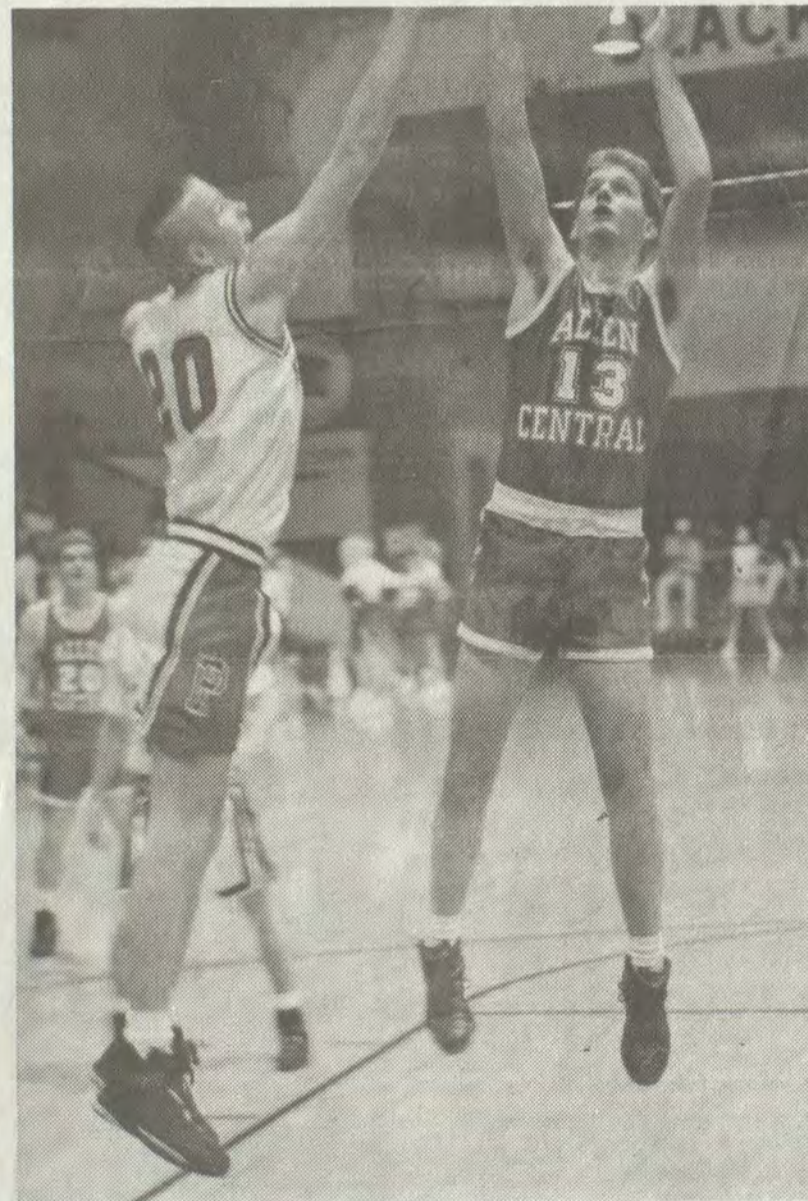

The Martin Purple Flash basketball team has been one of the most successful elementary programs in this part of the country. And it would be extremely difficult to rate each team in year's past as to whom was the best.

Well, while I will not touch that at all, I will say that this year's team certainly had to be one of the top Martin teams. Winners of five differ-

Tough in the middle!

The Floyd County Grade School has many good basketball players but an upcoming one is Cory Patton (40) of Allen. Here Patton pulled in a rebound against Martin as Thomas Jenkins (15) and Beau Tackett (32) looked on. Martin won over the Eagles 61-49. (photo by Ed Taylor)

Match of centers!

Chris Burke (20) of Prestonsburg went for a block of Allen Central's Mike Allen (13) shot during conference play at Prestonsburg Friday night. Burke scored 15 points in the game and Allen had six. (photo by Ed Taylor)

ROBERTS PLACES NINTH IN KENNEDY MEMORIAL 5K RUN

Paintsville's Rick Roberts placed ninth overall in the 28th annual John F. Kennedy Memorial 5K Run in Washington, D.C. Sunday, January 19.

Several hundred runners departed from the Jefferson Monument to battle each other and the weather. At 10 a.m. the temperature was a very cold 15 degrees with 40 mile an hour winds coming off the Potomac River for the first half of the race.

Rusty Moore of Alexandria, Va., won the 3.1 mile even in 17:14. Roberts finished with a recorded time of 19:00 flat, second in his age group of 35-39.

figures against McDowell the last time out.
Allen Central will look for some solid senior leadership in Stewart Hall, Todd Lucas, Mike Allen and Larry Patton. Sophomore Phillip Patton has been slumping lately but is due for a big game.
In facing the Cougars of Elkhorn City, Allen Central must play hard on the boards and take care of the basketball.
Inside player Mike Fraley will be hard to contain. Fraley, one of the region's most underrated players, can score once he gets the ball down in the paint area. Super soph Todd Conley, scares everyone. A very hard player to guard, he can shoot the three-pointer from NBA range or drive on an opponent and draw the foul. Conley seems to shoot a lot of free throws during the course of a game. He is deceptively quick despite his size.
The key here will be to contain the play of Fraley and Kevin Hunt and keep a close eye on Larry Puckett.
The semifinals will be played Friday night with the championship round played on Saturday night.

PEOPLE, PLACES AND THINGS by Beth Jones

"THE KING IS DEAD — I THINK"

Is Elvis really dead? I know this is a burning question in the minds of many Americans. Why? Because the tabloids, talk show hosts, and the American public in general won't let him rest in peace. Just last week, there was a two-hour documentary devoted to exploring Elvis's "alleged" (that's what they called it) death. There was a panel discussion, people who have actually seen "The King," took pictures of him, or made voice analysis of recorded telephone conversations between Elvis and other people after his death.

Why do Americans and others believe such outlandish things? I can understand that people might hate the thought that their hero is dead, but can't they leave well enough alone after all these years? I hardly think Elvis would give up a life of fame and fortune to spend the rest of his days in disguise, not wanting the public to know he is still alive. I know he got a little pudgy and lost his figure, but faking death to keep fans from seeing him transform into a mere mortal is a bit outrageous.

The Kentucky Opry should have been on the documentary. Of course, all of us who have been to one of their performances know that "The King" has resurfaced (chicken bucket and all) just to sing with the group. The case should be dismissed, don't you think?

I do have another more scientific solution to this controversy. I think Geraldo Rivera should go out and buy himself a pick and shovel. He should then get a camera crew, go down to Graceland, and dig the casket up. If Elvis is indeed six feet under, then he is dead. If his body is not in the coffin, he's alive.

Then there would be no more mystery. Isn't that a great solution? Of course, the public would have to find some other topic to fulfill their lives.

Getting back to the subject, if Elvis was still alive — if he had been involved with the FBI or the mafia or whatever and faked his own death — would he still go out in public wearing long sideburns, sunglasses, and lots of gold jewelry? I don't think so. One would think he would want to remain inconspicuous. All the "alleged" sightings and the pictures taken of "him" were of an overweight guy with a pompadour hairdo and long sideburns. If Elvis was smart enough to safely fake his death and funeral, wouldn't he be intelligent enough to cut his hair and grow a beard or mustache before going out in public? I think so.

I hope that I've shed a new light on this Elvis mystery. I've got another one for you guys to work on now. Does Dick Clark know where the Fountain of Youth is located — he hasn't changed in forty years.

See ya.

Small World

A HOME GOING

Aunt Lillie didn't travel a lot in her 91 plus years, but a few days ago she made a journey to that other world — a world of splendor, beauty and peace.

Born Lillie Akers, April 21, 1900, she loved her native Kentucky in a way few people do. Circumstances caused her to live in Florida for the past few years, but a part of her heart remained in the place she called home.

She might not like our saying she'd had a hard life. She just assumed that everybody had tribulations of some sort, and she took hers for granted. She found pleasure in the simple good times she experienced, and truly she was blessed with true friends and a long life.

Those of us who knew and loved her best will miss her gentle personality. After all, she had been with us for all our lives. For me, she was a link to my mother — her sister — who so long ago went before her.

We can't help but wonder how she was ushered into her new home and if the new realities were shown to her gradually. When she no longer had problems with breathing and the frailties that wore her body out, she would have known she was in Heaven. She was the last in her parents' family of six children, and so a once broken circle is now complete again. The other members were Farley, Floyd and Charlie Akers, Zella Hall and Nancy Sellars.

Heaven will be such a different experience for Aunt Lillie. She probably never looked on pure gold before. If she had any pearls, they would have been fake; and they'll probably have to tell her what jasper is.

She was in her teens when she first met Tom Scaff, and she thought he was a handsome prince. They married young and their only child, Evelyn, was born when she was 18. But two years later, her husband was severely crippled in a coal mine accident and he would spend the rest of his life in a wheel chair.

In 1920 there was no such thing as compensation, insurance or a retirement program for him, and so they literally lived from hand to mouth. They had the most wonderful and loving neighbors, and they managed in whatever way they could for food, clothing and shelter.

Aunt Lillie was a small woman, not quite five feet tall, but she had an inner strength that helped her to do the nearly impossible. Though he was heavier, she would lift Tom between his wheel chair and bed and do the things he couldn't do for himself.

She raised a garden in the plots their neighbors shared, and she canned the foods she grew. She gathered coal for heating by going into the "coal bank" that had broken Tom's back and his legs and had since been abandoned.

Aunt Lillie heard other women talk about style but it meant nothing to her. It was enough that she had something to wear to her beloved church and that there were garments that fit to work in. She usually had two pairs of shoes — one for church and another for every day. Of course Tom didn't need shoes at all for he would never walk again.

Aunt Lillie's house was the most special place I could go as a child. Each cousin has his or her own special memory, but there was warmth and laughter, and we never noticed any lack of material things.

Uncle Tom could make anything with his hands. One treasure for me was a perfect little ring for my finger.

It was made from a melted penny and mounted with a set from a broken strand of beads. No diamond was ever more special, and if it cost him a penny it truly was valuable.

Tom died in the 40's and Lillie later married Edgar Hamilton. Ed worked for the railroad and life was good for them. They were accustomed to modest living and that didn't change much, but they were more comfortable now.

She was widowed again in the 70's when Ed, too, died of cancer. He left her with an income and, after a time of living alone, she moved to Florida to be near her daughter and a number of nieces and nephews. She looked forward to visits from friends and relatives "from home" and remembered with great feeling that good times some of us thought of as "hard times."

Malta Howell who attended church with her says, "Lillie enjoyed life more than most people I know, and whatever she had she shared freely."

I can imagine Aunt Lillie's surprise when she first looks on Heaven for, after all, it will be so different from anything she ever knew.

Local entrepreneur learns basics of business from hands-on experience

by Kim Frasure
Contributing Writer

In the fall of 1980, just after graduating high school, Melinda Hall Stephens found herself entering the business world.

When her parents, Ken and Rita Hall, offered her the chance to enter into partnership with them on a venture into the fashion world, Stephens jumped at the opportunity. Together, the entrepreneurs chose the name "Rita Renee Fashions" from Stephens' middle name and her mother's first name.

Stephens put all her energy into the business. "I learned this business from the ground up — from keeping books to buying and handling the operation in its entirety," she said. "Fashions change, and keeping up with them kept me on my toes in this business," said Stephens.

The opening of the fashion shop couldn't have come at a better time, according to Stephens. "Catching the tail end of a coal boom, business was fantastic," she continued. "In '81, though, I could see a decline but somehow we struggled through."

Stephens believes that the decline of small business ventures has been caused by the emergence of major chain stores. She warns those who are thinking about entering the world of business to think carefully.

"If I could give any new small business venture advice, it would have to be, 'be careful.' Don't sink a lot of money into your business starting out. Build slow. Learn from your customers; meet their needs. Make your shop unique and you'll succeed," Stephens advised.

Stephens contributes the early success of her business to the wide selection of formalwear available at the store. Another factor which contributed to the business' early success, said Stephens, was her mother's beauty shop which was located beside the clothing store.

"With my mother's beauty shop adjacent to the store, a girl could get it all in one stop, and be ready for her special night," she said. "Many times we provided the customer with her formal; mom did her hair; I did her make-up and she was ready for the prom. It was great; I miss it," she said.

After eleven years in business, Rita Renee Fashions recently closed its doors. Stephens is now helping her father with his latest enterprise, The Green Door Family Restaurant and Lounge. Stephens lends a helping hand in the kitchen, helps out as a waitress, plays keyboard and sings in the family band, Mistaken Identity.

Melinda Hall Stephens

Born: May 28 in Martin
Graduated: 1980 from Allen Central High School
Business: Partnership in Rita Renee Fashions in 1980; assisting with Green Door Family Restaurant

The band has been together for three years and members of the Stephens family, who play by ear, rock the socks off their listeners. Her brother, Devan plays keyboard, her dad sings lead vocals and plays a mean guitar, her cousin Wayne Shepherd is on bass guitar, and long-time family friend Donny Burke keeps the beat on the drums.

Stephens said the group plays everything from Top 40 and country to 50's "Twist and Shout." Though she enjoys participating in the restaurant business and singing in the band, Stephens said she'd love to return to the world of fashion.

Businesswoman

After closing out one aspect of her business life, Melinda Hall Stephens is venturing into another business field.

A NEW STAR ON OUR FLAG

Folks around here ought to be paying attention to what's going on out west. According to a report I saw on TV the other day, some fairly important political leaders out there are making a good case for dividing California into two separate states. Their primary complaint is that lawmakers in Sacramento are giving all the tax dollars to big cities like San Francisco and Los Angeles, while the rest of the state gets either what's left over, or nothing at all.

Does this sound familiar, or what? As Yogi Berra would say, "It's deja vu all over again."

Well, if they can do it in California, why can't we do it here? Instead of us complaining about our taxes building streets in Louisville or horse parks in Lexington, why don't we just slice off the eastern half of the state and form a state of our own? As a matter of fact, if we'd just lay us a ruler on 84 degrees west longitude, it'd be done. Of course, that'd split a bunch of counties on our newly-formed western border right half down the middle, but they could hold a special election to see if they wanted to stay with them or go with us.

Our northernmost city would be Dover in Bracken County, while Gatliff, in Whitley, would be farthest south. Right in the center of the new state would lie Salyersville. We could make it the capital.

Look at the advantages we'd have. At last we could keep our severance tax money. At last we could be assured of electing a governor from Eastern Kentucky...every time. An Eastern Kentucky team would win the state tournament every year. And look, if things didn't work out, it'd be easy to just secede from the union and apply for foreign aid.

Not that we'd ever have to, though.

We've got enough natural resources to make us one of the wealthiest states in the union. I'm not just talking about coal, either. I'm talking about all our native sons and daughters who've made it big in country music. We could build music parks all over the place.

Dwight Yoakam could build one in Whitesburg; Loretta and Crystal in Van Lear; Ricky Skaggs in Louisa; Hylo Brown could stage bluegrass festivals at River; and the Judds... make that, the Judd, could draw thousands to Ashland. The rest of us could sell parking spaces, T-Shirts and pork rinds.

If we ever tired of mining, we could convert our coal trucks into tour buses. We could turn Eastern Kentucky into another Branson, Missouri. We'd have it made in the shade.

Morehead could become our state

Kim's Korner

Last week a very kind grandfather went out of his way to drop by and say how much he enjoys and relates to this column, with two grandchildren of his own. After he left I got the idea to have you readers share your "Out of the Mouths of Babes" experiences with us. Maybe your children or grandchildren have said or done something you'd like to share. If so, write it down and send it to Kim's Korner, c/o The Floyd County Times, P.O. Box 391, Prestonsburg, Ky 41653.

Please include a phone number in case we might have questions.

We'll take your entries throughout the month of February.

To give you an example: Melinda Stephens and her husband Steve shared a cute experience with their daughter Samantha.

Early on a Sunday morning, Melinda, just waking up, headed downstairs and met Samantha on her way. Excited about their trip to King's Island, Samantha told her mom she almost never got to sleep the night before.

"Mommie," she said, "I had a real hard time going to sleep last night." "Did you baby?" her mother asked.

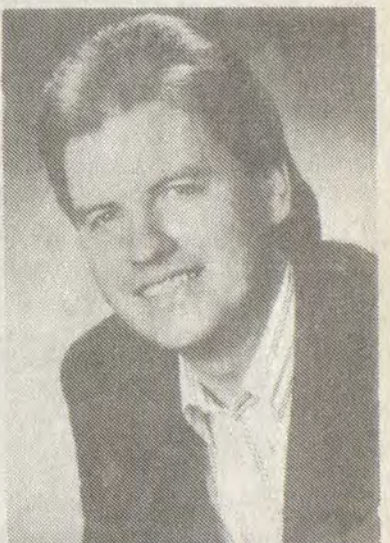

"Yes, I tried counting sheep, but my sheep kept running into the fence and dying."

How sad, her mother said as she patted Samantha. Out of the mouths of babes, there's nothing sweeter.

Get busy — send them in and we'll get them in print. Thanks so much to the gentleman who stopped by and to Melinda, Steve and Samantha.

Till next week, Keep Smiling.

Congratulations to Scott, Susan, Ed and Tess on their KPA awards this past weekend. I've always known this paper had an Award Winning Staff.

Exchange wedding vows

Mr. and Mrs. Williams

Heather Susan Shaffer and Jackie E. Williams exchanged wedding vows on November 23, 1991, at 7 p.m., at the Beckley Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Sherwood McKay officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Chaffer of Beckley, West Virginia, formerly of Ivel. The groom is the son of Mrs. Drema Almond and Mr. Jack Williams of Beckley, West Virginia.

The bride given in marriage by Mr. and Mrs. W. Arthur Shaffer, was attired in a gown of white silk taffeta, designed by Demetrios, For Sposaeuropa Bridals of New York. The gown featured large puffed long sleeves and a high collar. The bodice and sleeves were lavishly decorated with Venice lace, sparkling with iridescent sequins and pearls, accented with dangling pearls. The front of the full skirt was highlighted with large motifs of the decorated lace. The cathedral length train was beautifully accented with cut-outs of the decorated Venice lace and scalloped lace hemline. To complete her ensemble, the bride wore a wreath of small flowers, lace and pearls with a pouf and two tiers of fingertip silk illusion.

Her bridal bouquet consisted of a cascade of white butterfly roses, baby's breath, stephanatic and trailing ivy. The attendants carried a crescent bouquet of French carnations and baby's breath embellished with swags of matching pearls.

Serving as maid of honor was Kimberly Shaffer, sister of the bride of Beckley, West Virginia. The maid of honor wore a floor length gown of amethyst satin with long dropped pearls in the back. Ms. Michelle Goode of Beckley attended the guest book and the flower girl was Miss Trista Tackett, daughter of Stephanie Tackett of Ivel.

Serving as the best man was the father of the groom, Jack Williams. Ushers were Aaron Cline, the groom's brother-in-law and David Crookshanks, all of Beckley, West Virginia. Acolytes were Shawn and Kevin Shaffer, brother of the bride.

The bride, a 1987 graduate of Betsy Layne High School, is employed at the Raleigh County National Bank. The groom is employed by Lewis Chevrolet in Crab Orchard, West Virginia.

After a short trip to Bluestone State Park, they reside in Beckley, West Virginia.

Organist was Daniel Spurgeon and soloist Mr. David Robinson of Beckley with the music selection "Wedding Song," "Because," and "The Lord's Prayer" being performed.

A reception was held in the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Choose Your Weapon

February is National Heart Month

Heart disease is the leading cause of death in eastern Kentucky. It's also the leading cause of disability, pain, loss of income, back breaking health care costs and a heartbreaking toll on people and families. The real tragedy is that many of these can be avoided through prevention, early detection and early treatment.

Your best weapon is knowing what to do and acting on it. The free Heart Test on the right is a good way to start. So is a visit with your doctor to check your blood pressure, cholesterol, triglycerides and other factors. Then learn to recognize the early warning signs of heart attack:

- ♥ Recurring pain or tightening in the chest which occurs with exertion, but eases with rest. Often mistaken for heartburn or gas.
 - ♥ Pain, pressure, fullness or squeezing in the chest for two minutes or more. This may radiate to neck, shoulders, arms, jaw or teeth. Often mistaken for indigestion.
 - ♥ Shortness of breath, sweating, dizziness, nausea, vomiting and anxiety.
- Not all signs occur at the same time in every heart attack, but if they do, don't delay, call your doctor or an Emergency Medical Service immediately. Minutes count.

This weapon is FREE!

It can help reduce your risk of heart disease.

Are you at risk for heart disease? The Heart Test can help you find out. It can tell you what risks you face and, most important, what you can do to reduce controllable heart risk factors. In other words, it may help save your life.

The Heart Test has been featured on ABC-TV's "20/20" and PBS-TV's "OK Heart." Now you can take it yourself. Simply complete this confidential questionnaire as accurately and honestly as possible and return it to us.

We'll analyze your answers and send you a personalized report that will tell you how you can change your lifestyle to increase your chances of remaining healthy and active as you reduce your risk of heart disease.

You, your doctor and the heart team at Highlands, working together, have a better chance of preventing or reducing the severity of a heart problem.

Fight Heart Disease

Stress Testing closely watches the heart when it is pushed to peak performance on an exercise machine. This can help doctors tell the kind and severity of a possible problem.

Echocardiography uses sound waves to create moving pictures of the heart in action and to measure its blood flow. By seeing valves and muscles at work, problems can be detected and measured.

Cardiac catheterization permits doctors to look at the tiny blood vessels that feed the heart muscle. Blockages in these vessels send a warning—heart attack! But we now have new ways to break up blockages before they kill.

Monitored exercise is prescribed for certain high risk or post-heart attack people to improve conditioning of body muscles, breathing, blood vessels and heart, enabling them to work harder and withstand exertion. Good physical condition helps lower risks.

Continuing a family tradition

Benjamin Maynard watches as his father, David Maynard, stokes the fire and Scottie Goble stirs the fat in the kettle. The three spent a cold Saturday afternoon rendering fat and waiting for the cracklins to get done. Nowadays, not many people render lard and it is a tradition in the Goble and Maynard family. Langley League sets goal for tree plantings

Bill Robinson opened the January meeting with a prayer for guidance in the undertakings of the Langley League. Old business included setting goals for further live tree plantings, replacing the concrete flower boxes, which Kentucky Hydro Carbon donated, and going ahead with the natural stone wall at the welcome sign.

Duna Combs announced names of two donors contributing to the cost of the stone wall: Justin Turner, Ph.D., of Murfreesboro, Tennessee, and Nick Turner, of Virginia. Both are former residents of Maytown.

All former residents of Maytown will be contacted to help with this project and those who donate $20 will have their names inscribed on a bronze plaque.

In other business, Christmas ribbons, for the most unique outdoor display of Christmas symbols were given out to the following:

Cabbage Patch

By Neil Harmon

by M.L. Harmon

At last the season has arrived for the true gardening lover to come into their own. As frigid Arctic cold fronts sweep down, we gardeners must begin preparations for our early spring planting. Start cabbage, cauliflower and onion seeds indoor now, if you haven't already, for transplanting in mid-February, weather permitting.

When you sow your cabbage seeds, sow 1/3 of the package only. In two weeks sow 1/2 of the remaining seeds. Then after these have been transplanted into the garden, sow the rest of the seeds outside. This way you will stagger your cabbage crop out over at least a month, and won't have them all coming in at the same time. Makes less work on the kraut maker. If something does happen to the first batch of sauerkraut, and sometimes it does, you will have more to fall back on.

With seed catalogs in hand, plan this season's garden on paper. If space allows, be careful to rotate crops at each planting. Never grow tomatoes, potatoes, eggplants and peppers on the same ground more often than every third year. If rotation is not possible, grow only disease-resistant varieties. Heavy nitrogen feeds, such as melons and cucumbers will benefit from growing where beans and peas were grown last year.

Stock up on garden bulletins from your county extension agent. They provide a wealth of information on planting dates and on recommended vegetable varieties tailored to our own area and climate. The extension home economist can supply valuable information on processing, storing and cooking about any garden crop.

Nare-root fruiting trees can be planted this month as soon as it becomes available locally. Soak the roots overnight before planting. Dig planting holes just large enough to accommodate roots and do not add peat moss or other additives to the soil. Plant the trees the same level they grew in the nursery, being sure to keep grafts at least an inch above ground level. Soak the ground thoroughly to eliminate air pockets, but DO NOT fertilize. Prune only the damaged limbs. Leave growing tips alone, since the terminal buds produce growth hormones as the new trees break their dormancy in spring.

If your fruit garden is still in the planning stage, don't invest in more than you can handle. No more than two trees of each fruit will supply a surplus for a family of four. Dwarf trees generally bear years ahead of standards, and with enough fruits to supply any need. If more fruits are needed, you can always add another dwarf easier than cutting one down.

Capsules give corn pest a fatal dose of wasps

Soft cardboard capsules the size of oyster crackers—spread in corn fields—hold a deadly surprise for a nasty corn pest. Within the capsules are wasps that kill corn borers.

"Inside each capsule are more than 500 eggs of the Mediterranean flour moth. And inside each moth egg is a tinier egg of a wasp known to kill European corn borers and other crop pests," said Larry Ertle of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

After young wasps hatch from their eggs, they feed on the flour moth's eggs. The capsule's paper casing protects the immature wasps from predators and the environment.

When the wasps mature, they mate inside the capsule. Then the females exit through a tiny hole in the capsule and start looking for corn borer eggs to lay their own eggs in.

Wasp-carrying capsules are "probably the most unusual natural pest control we have imported in recent years" as an alternative to farm chemicals, said Ertle, a quarantine officer at a Newark, Delaware, laboratory of USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Made by a French firm, the capsules are called Trichocaps after the wasp, Trichogramma Maidis. It doesn't sting people or animals, but has an appetite for corn borers, Ertle said.

He sent thousands of Trichocaps, containing millions of wasp eggs, to Iowa State University entomologist David Orr last summer, so Orr could begin a two-year test in cooperation with an ARS lab in Ankeny, Iowa, and Pioneer High-Bred International.

Orr spread the capsules on test plots and called the early results promising. "There were 26 percent fewer corn borers in the Trichocaps plots than in the plots protected by insecticide," he said. Further tests will be carried out on the potential use of the capsule-wasp technology to protect corn crops.

Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club meets

An enthusiastic presentation of the many services offered by the Head Start Program was given Monday evening, January 2, by Janie Bailey Smith, local director of the Head Start Program. Ms. Smith was guest speaker for the Lackey-Garrett-Wayland Woman's Club in the home of LaFaye Hughes at Garrett.
 Smith listed and explained the various programs for the children enrolled. Beginning with education, she advised that the program is adjusted to also deal with handicapped children, who make up 13.3 per cent of Head Start's total enrollment. She explained the health program which includes medical and dental examinations, nutrition (enrolled students are given breakfast, lunch, and a snack of nutritious food), mental health with a staff trained to recognize psychological problems. Parent involvement is urged, she emphasized, and parents are encouraged to help as aides and later this may mean preference for employment in non-professional Head Start staff jobs. The speaker passed out pamphlets explaining in detail the comprehensive child development program that is Head Start. A question and answer period followed.

 Devotions were given by the club's vice president and devotions chairman, Marsella Bradley. The Club Collect was read by LaFaye Hughes, and the Pledge to the Flag by Vera Allen.
 The treasurer reported on the Adopt-A-Child program, in which the club participated during Christmas, and also gave a financial report.
 Refreshments were served by the hostess to the following: Marie Mullins, Louise West, Blanche Bamer, Elizabeth Duff, Vera Allen, Loretta Martin, Libby Martin, and the guest speaker.
 The next meeting will be February 17 at the home of Marsella Bradley, Garrett.

Kiddie tax may affect strategy for savings

TAXES AND YOUR CHILDREN

Sharing your wealth with your children may have more tax consequences than you think. In saving for your child's future, consider how the kiddie tax may affect your savings and tax strategy, says the Kentucky Society of CPAs.

WHO IS AFFECTED BY THE KIDDIE TAX?

The purpose of the kiddie tax is to discourage parents and relatives from shifting some of their income to children simply to reduce their own tax liability. The kiddie tax applies to children who are under age 14 and who have over $1,100 of unearned (or investment) income, such as dividends, interest and capital gains.

Under the tax law, a child may apply $550 of his or her standard deduction to offset the first $550 of investment income. This means the child's first $550 of income is tax free. The next $550 will be taxed at the child's rate, but — and here's the catch — any amount over $1,100 will be taxed at the parents' top tax rate. As a result, your child's income may be taxed at a rate as high as 31 percent.

These rules do not apply to children who are 14 years of age and older. They will continue to have their investment income taxed at their own rate.

ITEMIZED DEDUCTIONS

A child subject to the kiddie tax may get a tax break if he or she has accumulated more than $550 in itemized deductions that are directly connected with producing investment income. If these expenses, plus other itemized expenses, exceed the 2 percent floor on miscellaneous itemized deductions, the expenses can be deducted over and above the basic $550 standard deduction. The kiddie tax would then apply to the child's lower taxable income, rather than to the net investment income.

THE DEPENDENT EXEMPTION

When Congress tightened the rules dealing with children's income, it also eliminated a personal exemption for dependent children. Prior to the Tax Reform Act of 1986, a parent could claim an exemption for the dependent child and the child could also claim an exemption for himself or herself. Now, however, children who qualify as dependents on a parent's tax return are not allowed to take an exemption on their own tax return.

HOW INCOME IS REPORTED

Children subject to the kiddie tax must file a tax return. They may file a separate return or under certain circumstances, they may have their investment income reported on their parents' tax return. To do the latter, the child's income must be derived from interest and dividends, and it must total more than $550 but less than $5,000. Additionally, the child must not have made an estimated tax payment, nor had federal income tax withheld under the backup withholding rules. (These rules require persons making certain payments to you to withhold and pay to the IRS 20 percent of such payments under certain circumstances, such as if you failed to provide them with your taxpayer identification number, or supplied them with the wrong tax ID number.)

However, parents who report children's income on their own tax returns should be forewarned: The increased income could adversely affect their ability to take some itemized deductions and IRA deductions.

BEYOND THE KIDDIE TAX

There are ways to transfer assets or shift income to close family members without subjecting yourself to the kiddie tax. For example, money spent on paying for a child's college education or medical expenses is not taxable to the child as income, nor considered a taxable gift by the donor if certain conditions are met.

There are also other avenues for saving for your children's future without increasing your tax liability. For example, consider investing in tax-free and tax-deferred assets until the child reaches age 14, at which time all income will be taxed at the child's lower rate.

Buying series EE U.S. Savings Bonds, registered in your child's name, is one of the easiest ways to defer interest income. Generally, you will not have to pay federal taxes on the interest earned until the bonds are cashed or mature. Also, Series EE Bonds purchased after 1989 could be entirely tax-free if they are redeemed to pay for qualified higher education expenses. Participation in this Education Savings Bond Program is subject to certain modified adjusted gross income (AGI) phase-out limits ending at $56,950 for taxpayers filing as a single, head of household, or qualifying widow(er) with a dependent child, and $92,900 for married taxpayers filing jointly.

If you're unsure of how the kiddie tax affects your tax liability, consult a CPA, and if you would like to receive a free copy of the brochure "Tax Tips For Preparing Your 1991 Individual Taxes," send a self-addressed stamped envelope to the KSCPA, 310 West Liberty Street, Suite 604, Louisville, KY 40202.

Veterans News

The following are representative questions answered daily by VA Counselors. More information is available at any VA office or by calling 1-800-827-2050.

Q—During the Persian Gulf War, I was called to active duty in the middle of a semester and could not complete my courses. Will I be charged entitlement for the payments I received?

A—No. President Bush signed legislation October 10, 1991, which stipulated that educational assistance payments to reservists who were called up for the Gulf War while attending school are not chargeable against entitlement.

Q—I originally financed my home with a bank mortgage. As I did not use my VA eligibility, can I refinance using a VA-guaranteed home loan?

A—Yes, but you must first request a Certificate of Eligibility from your VA regional office. The certificate is then presented to a lender when applying for a VA-guaranteed loan.

KET series explores constitutional issues

Legal and medical scholars, journalists, and activists from both sides of the abortion debate explore the legal questions surrounding this politically explosive issue in "Life and Choice After Roe," airing on KET at 10 p.m. on Tuesday, February 4. The program is the premier episode of That Delicate Balance II: Our Bill of Rights, a new five-part series that will examine some of today's most compelling and divisive controversies.

The first episode is especially timely, as the U.S. Supreme Court has recently agreed to hear a Pennsylvania case that could lead to a reconsideration of Roe v. Wade, the 1973 ruling that established a legal right to abortion.

UK professors promote bed and breakfast industry

Two University of Kentucky professors are helping people across the state turn their homes into money-making enterprises that don't require major investments.

The bed and breakfast industry is growing rapidly in Kentucky, but there is room for more, especially in the eastern regions of the state, according to Allan J. Worms and Patty Rai Smith of UK's College of Agriculture.

Worms, a recreation and tourism specialist, and Smith, a home-based business specialist, began offering seminars and workshops in 1989 on how to establish bed and breakfast businesses. They plan more start-up sessions this year.

In 1989, only six such businesses were listed in the Kentucky Department of Travel Development's "Traveler's Guide to Kentucky."

In 1992, 56 bed and breakfast homes are members of the new Bed and Breakfast Association of Kentucky. And another 75 to 100 non-members of the association have opened in the past two years, Worms and Smith say.

In their initial start-up seminars three years ago, Worms and Smith consulted with bed and breakfast experts in Indiana and Illinois to offer advice to people interested in converting their homes.

Seminars dealt with such subjects as insurance, food service regulations, marketing and tourism connections.

And the response was "really positive," Smith recalls. "At our first, in Louisville, we expected 50 people and 105 showed up. In Paducah the next day, we figured 25 people would come and I think we had 63. There was an amazing interest in doing this."

And start-up costs are surprisingly low, Worms adds.

In research surveys of a limited number of existing bed and breakfast businesses, Worms and Smith concluded that the average start-up cost is $26,950, but most can begin with a much smaller investment.

By comparison, the average start-up cost for an inn is $161,666, Worms and Smith discovered.

"In most cases, you don't have to renovate," Worms says. "And you don't have to make over your kitchen into a full-service restaurant kitchen. You may wish to add a bathroom, for example, and make the house attractive and safe for paying guests."

And a historic home is not necessarily a requirement, the professors point out. Their research surveys show that, of the 32 Kentucky establishments responding to questionnaires, 25 were built before 1900, but seven others — built since 1900 — are thriving.

Their surveys of bed and breakfast owners and customers bring out one "really positive aspect of the business," Smith says, "and that's the high quality of the guests. Some of these homes are quite old with lots of valuable antiques, and we have yet to hear that anything has ever been stolen."

Worms describes most bed and breakfast guests as "legitimate tourists looking for a special place. They're mostly affluent, well-educated and willing to pay for quality accommodations and a special experience."

Most bed and breakfast establishments are in the central, western and northern regions of Kentucky, "but eastern Kentucky has a lot to offer and that area is pretty much untapped right now," Worms says. "We think there is a lot of potential there, and elsewhere, too. It's a business with plenty of potential."

Floyd County Chamber of Commerce members and Martin Engineering Company promote area economy

"Promoting the needs of business and working to better our county are two goals of the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce. One of our members that actively puts that philosophy to work is Martin Engineering &

Construction.

Formed in 1967, the company grew and prospered with the coal boom and later expanded to meet the needs of clients outside the coal industry.

According to office manager and public relations director, Elizabeth Rowe, the company is committed to giving back to their community—not only through financial support, but also with active participation in a variety of local programs.

"Ninety-nine percent of our staff is from Floyd County, so we do our best to support and promote programs that can help our people and our community," explained Rowe.

The company is a member of the Floyd and Pike County Chambers, as well as the Kentucky and U.S. Chambers.

Rowe is an active member on several of the Floyd County Chamber's committees: education, economic development, and she is chairperson of the newly formed Ambassadors, a sort of welcome wagon for the county.

"Many of the programs this company supports involve school children," noted Rowe. "We're always called when the local radio stations are having fund raisers. We co-sponsor sports tournaments, sponsor Babe Ruth Leagues in the spring and summer, and support programs like drug abuse awareness and seat belt usage.

"We never turn our backs when it's something that involves the schools," she continued.

Each year Martin Engineering gives summer employment to several recent graduates from county high schools. "In most cases we hire them, then keep after them while they're here to continue their education. We've given many of those who have gone on to college financial support for books, tuition or whatever was needed," said Rowe.

Sam Martin, president of the company and one of its founders, is also Rowe's father. Rowe shows obvious pride when discussing her father's accomplishments and says she has learned a lot about business from him. But it's also obvious that Rowe is proud of Floyd County and wants to make the area a better place to live and do business.

"This is where my roots are," she explained. "I grew up here, went to McDowell High School, then to Lexington for college and came back ten years later. I'm here now and this is where I plan to stay.

"My father and others like him who have succeeded in business here would not have made it if they had not worked together. It's the same now with others who have new businesses in the area. We still have to continue to work together for the benefit of all of us."

As Rowe sees it, that's where the Chamber of Commerce plays a role. "There are a lot of people out there who want to get involved in projects to help this area—they just need a little push to get them started. The committee work of the Chamber can be just the push many people need to become involved."

As the mother of two young children, Rowe is also concerned about the economic future of the area. "We have to develop industry in this area," she stressed. "There are a lot of young people who leave here to go on to college and never come back because there's no work here for them to come back to.

"I want to see businesses grow here so that if my two children leave to go on to college, they have a reason to come back and other children have the same option."

All members of the Chamber of Commerce are encouraged to become involved in community projects. If you're not currently working with one of our committees and would like to become involved, call Keith Akers at 886-1341.

Active participation

Elizabeth Rowe, office manager for Martin Engineering and Construction, and her father, Sam Martin, president of the company, are active members of the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce.

New realtors' chief is no 'sofa lady'

by Kenneth Eskey
Scripps Howard News Service

To most of us, the real estate business is a woman who drives into the neighborhood on a Saturday or Sunday, hops out of her car, puts up an Open House sign and tries to sell a $90,000 house for 5100,000.

It's not an occupation for the frail or timid. It's a tough, competitive business that attracts smart, engaging women like Dorcas Helfant — women who can sell anything, given a chance.

Helfant, who owns a residential real estate company in Virginia Beach, Va., is a pioneer of sorts. She's the first woman and youngest person (at 45) to serve as president of the National Association of Realtors and its 750,000 members.

Why it should take so long for a woman to head an organization in which 60 percent of the members are female is a mystery. She'll tell you that some of the early agents were ladies who dabbled in real estate and weren't taken seriously by the fast talkers and good old boys who dominated the industry.

"I was only 21 when I got into the business," she says. "I wasn't a sofa lady. I needed to earn a living for myself and my daughter. Only about 12 percent of us were women in 1967, but there was no glass ceiling. The opportunity was there."

Since then, real estate—especially residential real estate—has become a magnet for women, many of them middle-aged mothers with good community connections who need money to send children to college. Some are doctors' wives and other affluent types, but most are women who need the income to pay bills and support families.

Lately, it's been a rough road to hoe. Home sales have been slow. Values aren't rising the way they did in the 1970s and 1980s. If you bought at the top of the market, your house may be worth less than it was a few years ago. No more get-rich-quick in real estate.

Helfant is not dismayed. "People ask me why they should invest in a house," she says. "I tell them you can sleep in a house. You can't sleep in stocks and bonds."

Besides, the housing market is picking up.

"We're in extremely good shape," she says. "We had good Novembers and Decembers. We had two walk-in customers on Christmas Eve. Those low interest rates—they're the lowest since 1976—are fabulous. Those smaller monthly payments are wonderful."

Helfant has the usual real estate wish-list. She wants lower down payments for first-time home buyers and thinks the new costs imposed on mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration are killing the FHA program.

She thinks workers should be able to take money from their Individual Retirement Accounts and company savings plans to buy homes. She wants Congress to restore tax breaks to entrepreneurs who lose money on commercial real estate. She agrees with President Bush that tax rates on capital gains are too high.

She argues that banks and government agencies would be able to unload more of the distressed properties they own if purchasers could claim future losses against other income.

"Why buy it?" she asks. If you buy it, you have to fix it up. And you can't write off your losses."

One loss she foresees during the 1990s is of bright, energetic women who might have gone into home sales in past years. "Women have more choices than they had when I went into real estate," she says. "We'll have to try harder to get the women we want."
