Making the calls...

JERRY LAYNE completed his fourth season in the National League. Layne is formerly from Floyd County.

The 'Big Show's' Floyd County connection

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

It seems just about every day we hear about some success story. You know, boy does good, girl finds success. That kind of news. And, it is a welcome story compared to all the negative news that we read today.

Such a story was in Prestonsburg this past week in the person of Jerry Layne. No, Layne is not a big time lawyer nor has he attended medical school and discovered some great cure. Jerry Layne has been successful in another occupation. Jerry Layne is a National League umpire who wears number 24 on his sleeve.

The climb to success for Layne was a road of determination and it took him 12 years to make it to the "Big Show."

Layne was born in the Miner's Hospital in Pikeville, the son of Robert and Mary Ellen (Music) Layne of Prestonsburg. He is the grandson of Amanda Music of Prestonsburg and the late Estill Music. He is also the grandson of the late Carl and Ollis Layne formerly of Betsy Layne. Carl Layne was a well-known preacher.

At the age of one, Layne and his family moved to Prospect, Ohio where he grew up in a town of 1,200 people. This small town in Ohio was the home town of three other well-known sports individuals. Prospect also was the home of the Texas Ranger manager Toby Harrah, California Angels manager Bob Rodgers and American League umpire Larry Barnett.

"Larry Barnett lived down the road from us in Prospect," explained Layne, "and I wasn't a good ballplayer and knew that I could never make it as a ballplayer. I started watching Barnett work games and then I decided that was what I wanted to do."

Layne then traveled to Daytona Beach, Florida and enrolled in an umpire school at the early age of

17. The school was owned and operated by one of major league's well-known umpires, Harry Wendlestedt.

After graduating from Wendlestedt's school, Layne became involved in an umpire development program in St. Petersburg, Florida, and soon began his professional career in 1978 in the Appalachian League where he worked for one year. In 1979 Layne moved to the Florida State League which, like the Appalachian League, was Class A. Layne spent the next three seasons in the Florida League.

In 1982 Layne moved up to the Double-A Southern League where he worked for three seasons before moving up to Triple-A in 1985. It seems that Layne was destined to spend three years in each league before he finally got called up to the big time — the major leagues.

"The first game I did in the major league was in Los Angeles when they played the San Francisco Giants," remembered the four-year veteran. "The place was packed. There were over 48,000 fans there and I was very nervous."

Layne said that it was easier to call in the big leagues as compared to the minor leagues.

"It is easier in the big leagues," he said, "but in the big leagues you have something you don't have in the minor leagues and that's four television cameras looking over your shoulders."

"You just want to prove yourself worthy of being in the major leagues," continued Layne. "I feel that I have proven myself. I have gotten some good reviews."

Layne's sumpiring career hasn't been without any milestones.

"I was behind the plate in Los Angeles when (Fernando) Valenzuela pitched his first no-

Wheelwright Commission trims department, limits police coverage :

City down to a force of one

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

The Wheelwright City Commission raised eyebrows, temperatures and more than a little suspicion Wednesday evening at a special budget meeting when it voted to lay off all auxiliary and part-time police, leaving the city protected by only one officer who is restricted to only 40 hours of duty per week.

"We need to stop living like big shot spenders and save some money," Commissioner Lowell Parker said at Wednesday's meeting. "We're over budget all around... and we need to cut all the way back."

Parker said that the police department continually overspent its annual $16,000 budget and would be a good place to begin any budget cutbacks.

Wheelwright citizens assembled at the meeting called for the commission to attempt to channel funds from the utility commission into the city's budget in order to keep the police department at full strength.

"In the past two years, I've felt safer in this town than I've felt in all my life," one man said. "When you start cutting back, you need to start where cutbacks need to be made, like (with the commission itself)."

Akers said that channeling funds from the utility commission would be difficult since it was a separate entity from the city commission, but that every effort would be made to put the city's budget in order as quickly as possible.

In the meantime, Akers said, "We're broke.... When (your employer) doesn't have any more money, do you get mad at him for laying you

Condition of school stirs rift in boardroom

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A discussion on the physical condition of Martin Elementary sparked a debate at Tuesday's school board meeting between a parent and the school system's director of buildings and grounds.

Tallina Rayburn, who has a child at Martin Elementary, asked Frankie Francis, buildings and grounds director, if work had been done to correct problems noted in an engineer's report on the condition of the school.

Francis said the work had been complete and the building had been inspected by architect Randy Burchett.

Rayburn disagreed with Francis and passed out to the board recent photographs taken at the school.

"I brought some pictures for you to look at and a lot of (these repairs) have not been done," Rayburn said. "There is fiberglass laying in the storage room where they have speech (class)."

"This is pertaining to the cafeteria, in 1984 there was an exhaust fan that was purchased. We still have it in the cafeteria in a box. Is there any way you can get maintenance up there to hook it up?" Rayburn asked. "The exhaust fan they have in there now is covered with grease and they can't clean it."

"Why can't they clean it?" Francis asked.

"Well, they have a new one. Why did they get a new one?" Rayburn asked.

"I don't know," Francis responded. "The storage building. Has that been fixed?" Rayburn asked.

"I don't know," Francis said.

Prestonsburg police hard at work

Million-dollar cache is destroyed by city police

The Prestonsburg Police Department on Wednesday afternoon destroyed nearly one million dollars worth of marijuana, cocaine and illegal prescription medication that had been confiscated in several of the department's raids and undercover sting operations.

Chief of Police Greg Hall and Assistant Chief Roy Roberts dumped two garbage bags full of illegal drugs taken between December, 1989 and December 1991 alone into the incinerator at the Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Hall said Wednesday that the contraband included nearly 35 pounds of marijuana, with an estimated street value of approximately $1,200 per pound; over one pound of cocaine; and several bags containing such prescription narcotics as Tylenol 3, Tylenol 4, Xanax, Soma, Valium and several other types of anti-depressants.

One of the bags, Hall said, contained nearly 100 pounds of pills, with an estimated street value of around $288,000.

"These are the fruits of our labor," Hall said. He added that between 40 and 50 convictions had resulted from the police stings that netted the illicit substances.

Hall commended the entire department for its diligent efforts and extended a warning to drug users and pushers:

Missing student is found dead in Georgia

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

A body found near Atlanta, Georgia last week has been positively identified as that of a missing Carl D. Perkins Job Corps student.

John Bankhead, public affairs director for the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, said Thursday that dental records sent to the bureau proved conclusively that the body was that of Walter Cropper, 21, formerly of Panama City, Florida.

Cropper, who was attending career re-training courses at the Job Corps in Prestonsburg, disappeared under mysterious circumstances last month. He was last seen in Prestonsburg at around 1 p.m. on September 20.

Bankhead said a cattle farmer found the body on October 3 lying in a wooded field just off Interstate 75 near an industrial park in Adairsville, Georgia.

Although Cropper's wallet and identification were found on the body, Bankhead said, the pathologist was not able to conclusively verify its identity due to decomposition and extenuating circumstances.

The coroner is waiting for pathological test results from the laboratory before confirming the cause of death, Bankhead said, but authorities suspect foul play.

The next-of-kin have been notified.

Persons who have information regarding the September 20 disappearance of Walter Cropper and his subsequent death are urged to contact the Georgia Bureau of Investigation at (404) 244-2501; the Federal Bureau of Investigation at 1-800-752-6000; or the Prestonsburg Police Department at 886-1010.

To change or not to change...

Three new state constitutional amendments will appear on the ballot for the November 3 general election. Kentucky's Legislative Research Commission has compiled information on these amendments, which will appear in its entirety in the Floyd County Times.

The following is an explanation and summary of proposed constitutional amendment # 1. Information regarding amendments 2 and 3 will appear respectively in the Friday, October 23 and Friday, October 30 editions of the Floyd County Times.

The following question will appear on the ballot November 3, 1992:

Constitutional Amendment Number 1

Are you in favor of allowing the General Assembly to permit the conduct of charitable lotteries and charitable gift enterprises by charitable organizations provided the General Assembly passes statutes to assure the proper functioning, honesty, and integrity of charitable lotteries and establish a Kentucky state lottery and may establish a state lottery to be conducted in cooperation with other states. Any lottery so established shall be operated by or on behalf of the allowed. The general assembly shall enforce this section by proper penalties. All lottery privileges or charters heretofore granted are revoked.

If the proposed amendment is adopted, the following language would be added to Section 226:

The General Assembly may by general law permit charitable lotteries and charitable gift enterprises and, if it does so, it shall:

- (a) Define what constitutes a charity or charitable organization;
- (b) Define the types of charitable lotteries and charitable gift enterprises which may be engaged in;
- (c) Set standards for the conduct of charitable lotteries and charitable gift enterprises by charitable organizations;
- (d) Provide for means of accounting for the amount of money raised by lotteries and gift enterprises and for assuring its expenditure only for charitable purposes;

Chairman defends no-show at hearing man says, Education Commissioner Thomas Boysen told them not to be there. Boysen, however, said Thursday that is not the case and that he told board chairman Ray "Shag" Campbell it would be up to the members to decide. At Tuesday's school board meeting, chairman Campbell said Boysen told him in a September meeting in Frankfort not to attend the public hearing.

"A lot has been said about why board members were not at that meeting," Campbell said. "We were told by Dr. Boysen not to be there. That's why we weren't there."

Steve Swift, spokesman for the Department of Education, said Thursday that Boysen said he does not recall telling Campbell that and that Boysen didn't know "why he would say that."

The latter part of the 19th Century saw lotteries worth millions of dollars. Even though they were ostensibly for public works, many were in fact being used for private gain. Upon the adoption of the 1891 Constitution, lotteries were once again prohibited. The constitutional prohibition also had the effect of outlawing bingo, which has been defined in legal history as a lottery. A lottery is defined as a scheme involving more chance than skill in which a person pays a consideration (buys a ticket, for example) in hopes of winning a prize. Every attempt at getting this form of lottery legalized has failed because of the constitutional prohibition. A bill introduced in the 1952 General Assembly which said that bingo was not gambling when it was conducted for charitable purposes was defeated in the House of Representatives. A 1970 law which required the licensing of bingo operations was declared invalid because it essentially sanctioned an illegal undertaking. And finally, a 1980 law which established charitable gaming as a defense in a gambling prosecution was declared unconstitutional in 1991 by the Simpson Circuit Court. That ruling is being appealed to the Court of Appeals. Of course, in 1988, the voters of Kentucky approved a lottery amendment to the state constitution, but it allows only a lottery operated by or on behalf of the State of Kentucky.

Personally, I feel this is an act of political retaliation," Harmon said Wednesday, "in relation to my arrest of a friend of one of the commissioners."

Mayor Kenneth Johnson said Wednesday that he felt the commission's actions were completely arbitrary and wholly improper. "I feel this is a personal vendetta between some of the commissioners and the city," Johnson said. "I think we've been having these problems since January 1 when we got a new commission.... I feel there should be a public outcry. I mean, the city of Wheelwright is now left without police protection 128 hours a week."

Akers said that any problem between the city and the commission was purely related to the budget and had no bearing whatsoever on personal matters. He added that the commission would attempt to put the police officers back on duty as soon as possible. Harmon said that he felt the commission's decision was illegal, and that he had filed a written complaint with the attorney general prior to Wednesday's meeting. He added that he would also file an injunction in Floyd Circuit Court to stop the commissioners' actions.

"I'm going to run for constable of District 3," Harmon said. "(Maybe that way) I can give the citizens of this area a little protection with no interference from people who know nothing at all about police work."

(e) Provide suitable penalties for violation of statutes relating to charitable lotteries and charitable gift enterprises; and

(f) Pass whatever other general laws the General Assembly deems necessary to assure the proper functioning, honesty, and integrity of charitable lotteries and charitable gift enterprises, and the charitable purposes for which the funds are expended.

HISTORY

Charitable lotteries and charitable gift enterprises have a long history in Kentucky. During the state's first one hundred years, lotteries were used to fund various projects, including roads, churches, bridges, schools, and colleges. In those days, however, the General Assembly would grant a specific charter to an organization to hold a lottery. The charter was valid until the amount specified in the charter was raised. A charter could also be sold for ten percent of the amount to be raised. The first state-sanctioned lottery was granted in 1792 to the Lexington Dutch Presbyterian Society for the purposes of buying a lot and erecting a house of worship.

Soon, lotteries began to be used less for public good and more for private gain. In 1816 the General Assembly passed legislation which prohibited lotteries "without... any objects of public utility in view."

Twelve years later, a law was passed which prohibited out-of-state ticket sales, and in 1852, the General Assembly outlawed lotteries altogether. This last law did not stand up under scrutiny by the state's highest court. In the case Gregory's Executrix v. Trustees of Shelby College, the court essentially said that the owners of lottery charters had property rights that the government could not violate.

The latter part of the 19th Century saw lotteries worth millions of dollars. Even though they were ostensibly for public works, many were in fact being used for private gain. Upon the adoption of the 1891 Constitution, lotteries were once again prohibited.

The constitutional prohibition also had the effect of outlawing bingo, which has been defined in legal history as a lottery. A lottery is defined as a scheme involving more chance than skill in which a person pays a consideration (buys a ticket, for example) in hopes of winning a prize. Every attempt at getting this form of lottery legalized has failed because of the constitutional prohibition. PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGE

Constitutional Amendment #1 would amend Section 226 of the Kentucky Constitution to allow the General Assembly to permit the conduct of charitable lotteries and charitable gift enterprises by charitable organizations. If the amendment is adopted, the General Assembly would be authorized to statutorily define a charity or charitable organization, and to specify the types of charitable lotteries which may be engaged in. The General Assembly would then also set standards of conduct for charitable lotteries, specify a means of accounting for the amount of money raised, establish penalties for violations, and pass any other laws necessary to ensure the proper functioning of charitable lotteries.

EFFECTIVE DATE

Passage of the proposed amendment would immediately authorize the General Assembly to enact legislation permitting and regulating charitable gaming. The procedures for conducting charitable gaming would become effective after the passage of such legislation.

Board member accused of intimidation, threats

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Floyd County school administrators have accused a member of the Floyd County Board of Education of trying to intimidate them by threatening to eliminate their jobs.

At Tuesday's school board meeting, Frankie Francis, president of the administrators association, lodged a formal complaint with the board and superintendent Steve Towler against an unnamed member of the board. Francis added that the administrators intend to pursue legal action against the board member.

Francis said Thursday that the association has employed attorney John David Caudill to represent them.

Caudill said Thursday that he agreed to meet with administrators next week to evaluate their information concerning their complaint.

Francis declined Thursday to name the board member and he added that their complaint has been given to the state's Office of Education Accountability.

Francis read a prepared statement at Tuesday's board meeting outlining their complaints against the board member.

"The Floyd County Administrators Association (is) very concerned about repeated statements that we hear are made by a member of the Floyd County Board of Education," Francis read from a prepared statement. "Everyone has a right to an opinion, but we are concerned when integrity and professionalism are challenged and questioned.

"The complaints are against a member of the Floyd County Board of Education," Francis continued. "These complaints are as follows: threatening bodily harm to administrators; threatening the elimination of administrative positions in public meetings and through the news media; threatening reprisals for administrators filing lawsuits against the Floyd County Board of Education; superseding the superintendent in giving work performance assignments to administrators; creating an environment that is not conducive to efficient job performance among administrators through threatening and intimidation; and we believe that the above complaints do jeopardize the implementation of KERA in Floyd County."

"You're reporting it tonight, you tell me."

Architect Randy Burchett said after Tuesday's meeting that he had not reinspected the school. Burchett said he planned on doing an inspection at Martin by Monday.

Board member James Duff suggested that Francis and Rayburn meet with Martin principal Frank Pack to review the problems shown in the photos.

"I would like for her (Rayburn) go address the principal and have the principal address me with it and I'll respond to it," Francis said.

Rayburn spoke up and said principals have submitted a list of maintenance items to Francis and he has not responded.

"We cannot get things done," Rayburn said. "I have spent $46 on pictures to say, hey, this is going on what are you all going to do? It's not fair. And if I call and go see people, they treat you like you're nobody."

Rayburn said that she had attempted to talk with finance director Tommy Thompson, who is Francis' supervisor, and Thompson would not talk with her.

"I beg your pardon on that. . .," Thompson began. Thompson did not continue his comment after Rayburn spoke up and said she had two parents with her when she tried to address Thompson on the issues.

Superintendent Steve Towler told Rayburn she would receive a response within a week on the condition of the school.

On Wednesday, Rayburn sent a letter to the state's Office of Education Accountability which said Francis grabbed her wrist and tried to get her copy of a list of repairs needed at the school and that he tried to threaten her by saying she will hear from his attorney because of her statements.

In other action Tuesday, Bob Isaac, representing the Maytown PTA, asked the board to construct a fence around an active gas well located on the school grounds.

"There's a gas well on the property and there is no protection around that gas well," Isaac said. "Kids can get to that well and open those valves and be overcome with gas fumes. I think the maintenance department ought to look at trying to put some kind of barricade around it. It's an active well."

Francis suggested that board attorney Cliff Latta find out who owns the well.

"I don't know if we can fence someone else's well," Francis said.

"Frankie, if it's on our property and endangering kids lives, we can fence it," board chairman Ray "Shag" Campbell said.

Towler told Isaac the board could give him a reply on the issues when the district finishes the 1992-93 budget.

Isaac also told the board that no work had been done at the school on maintenance problems that he had addressed to the board at the September meeting.

"We haven't seen any progress made except that some of the windows in the downstairs portion of the building have been caulked," Isaac said. "The upstairs floor has not been touched. We would at least appreciate some effort from the board to let us know what's going on and if anything is being planned."

Isaac told the board in September that shelves needed to be built in storage rooms at the school and that there was no fire escape on the second floor of the school building.

Francis said that the maintenance department had "looked at" the fire escape on the second floor.

Also at Tuesday's meeting, the board agreed to create the position of budget director and advertise for someone who has an accounting background to fill that position.

Towler told the board that he felt a certified public accountant was not needed to fill the post. The state Department of Education recommended the board hire a CPA to oversee the financial matters of the district.

Board member Eddie Billips said he thought the board should advertise for a CPA in accordance with the state recommendation.

Other board members and Towler disagreed and said someone with an accounting background could fill the position.

Also Tuesday, the board voted to move its regular monthly meetings to the third Tuesday each month beginning at 6 p.m. The next regular meeting will be held Tuesday, November 17.

In other action Tuesday:

- the board heard progress reports from the architect and construction manager on the Left Beaver High School and Betsy Layne Elementary projects;

- the board voted to create the position of driver safety trainer to work at the school bus garage;

- the board approved change orders for the Left Beaver High School project and extended the general work contract for B & J Construction at Left Beaver;

- the board voted against paying Lexington Fire Protection for rock removal at the Left Beaver site until the company reimburses the board for an overpayment at Duff Elementary;

- the board received a preliminary drawing from Paul Hoffman, architect for the physical education facility at Left Beaver; and
- named chairman Campbell as the board's representative on the district's local planning committee.

All members attended Tuesday's meeting.

Groups meet to discuss incinerators

The first step was taken Thursday to improve relations between a local citizens group and the operators of two medical waste incinerators when both sides met and discussed the possibility of moving the facility.

Floyd Countians in Action and Robert Ford, vice president of Medisin Inc., met with Greg Higdon, deputy secretary of the Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet, at Prestonsburg Community College to discuss the issue.

Ford suggested at Thursday's meeting that the facility could be moved from its location at Auxier if an industrial park is built in Floyd County.

"We're not opposed to looking at other locations," Ford said.

Ford cautioned that relocating the operation isn't likely unless an industrial park is built in the county.

Higdon, who said the issue is a high profile one, said his office is reviewing discrepancies in test results on soil and bottom ash taken from the incinerators. Higdon added that he has asked someone from the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta to do a health assessment on the area around the incinerators.

Residents at Auxier have claimed that emissions from the incinerators have caused health problems and have damaged their property.

Phyllis Walker, spokesperson for the citizens group, said Thursday's meeting was encouraging and that she was pleased by the state's interest in their situation.

All of his children were there except for one daughter, Betty Kirsch, of Seattle, Washington. Also attending were his 17 grandchildren, 16 great-grandchildren and his many sons-in-law and daughters-in-law. He still enjoys working in his garden and attends church regularly.

The young and the ruthless

by Scott Perry

The frightening news this week that violent crime is on the upswing among the nation's youth provides hard evidence that our system of dealing with juvenile crime is a failure.

Homicide arrests among those aged 13 to 16 have nearly doubled since 1985, while statistics show that the arrest rate for 17-year-olds has jumped 121 percent.

Many factors have been cited for the increasing violence among the generation dubbed "the young and the ruthless," including the desensitizing of violence by the media, television and movies.

A key element in the problem, though, has to be our system of justice, which has failed to counter the growing crime rate with suitable punishment.

There are few deterrents built into the system to cause juvenile offenders to seek atonement and their crimes are often erased from the records once they reach adulthood.

The fact is, though, that juveniles are committing heinous crimes with the full understanding that they cannot or will not be held accountable.

We can blame the movies for the problem until the cows come home, but we'll make no impact unless those who commit the crimes are forced to pay.

Color commentary

Not all juveniles are bad seeds; some are role models despite their tender years.

We know a couple of hundred of them by name from right here in Floyd County.

Each has made a commitment to serve in the battle against drug abuse by declaring themselves drug free through this newspaper's Color Me...Drug Free project.

This world is full of the good, the bad and the ugly.

These kids have added a little color to the good side. We salute them all.

"Junk mailings"

Editor:

There should be some curtailment of delivery of the junk mail we receive each week.

Tuesday of this week we received six legal size envelopes plus one approximately 12 X 14 inches, which had a five cent postage stamp attached. Had you or I mailed these, the cost of mailing would have been at least $2.03 plus.

We feel sure these mailings cost the same as what you and I pay for letter-size mailings, and the postal department deems them profitable. If so then we are being rooked twenty-nine cents.

We have been informed that the telephone companies furnish to junk mail businesses lists of consumers who would be interested in their products. If this is true, there should be some way to stop such practices since we pay the phone companies for their service.

What others are saying

The following articles are excerpts of editorials taken from Kentucky newspapers

Health and politics

The presidential candidates have been talking a lot about health care, but one of them — Bill Clinton — has been closemouthed about his own health.

That's troubling, because the public has an obvious interest in knowing how fit he is. At 46, Mr. Clinton is by far the youngest of the three major candidates, but youth doesn't guarantee a clean bill of health.

Last week, two pathologists who were present at John F. Kennedy's autopsy in 1963 disclosed that the late president's adrenal glands were almost gone. Evidently, he had suffered from adrenal insufficiency, or Addison's disease, for many years and was being treated with replacement hormones when he was elected president in 1960, at age 43.

Earlier this year, doctors revealed that Paul Tsongas, one of Mr. Clinton's rivals in the Democratic primaries, had suffered a recurrence of lymphatic cancer in 1987, less than a year after a bone marrow transplant that he claimed had left him cancer-free.

Mr. Clinton cites his right to privacy in refusing to let reporters interview his physicians. But others, including Indiana University historian Robert Ferrell, make a strong argument for openness. Professor Ferrell would even require that the Senate approve a president's choice of personal physician.

We're not ready to go that far, but we believe a candidate's health is a legitimate campaign issue. And although Mr. Clinton has released letters from his physicians, we wish he would authorize them to speak freely to reporters — The Courier-Journal

The doctor is out

While we're on the subject of debates, we can remember when a debate was much more narrowly defined.

Remember when debaters had to present a well-organized speech and hard evidence to support their points? During rebuttal, evidence and strength of delivery were even more critical.

Judges might give some points for colorful use of the language, but the ideas and evidence were of chief importance. If the debaters' ideas were shoddy, they couldn't win.

That doesn't seem to hold true for today's highly orchestrated shows that could more aptly be called insult matches or barb-throwing contests.

The sad part is that candidates seem to think that we voters don't have the intelligence or won't spend the time to think through a presentation of ideas and solid plans. They seem to think we want to hear a volley of slogans and quick-cures that will make us feel better for a few days or months.

Sadder still, they may be right. For the last 15 years or so, Americans have been hung up on "happy talk." We want to be told that there's a miracle cure for our disease. Pump in the ether. Don't hurt when you cut. Let me go home in the morning. And please don't leave a scar.

Better yet, we don't want to believe that the disease is our own. Or if it is ours, somebody else — somebody less clean — gave it to us. And sure as shootin', somebody else ought to have to take the medicine.

He might get tarred and feathered, but we'd welcome a candidate for national office who'd give us an accurate diagnosis and present a healing regimen that he acknowledges is going to hurt.

All we seem to be getting now is a sugar-coated placebo that makes us feel better today. Tomorrow, alas, the virus will continue to grow.

And what these so-called presidential debates do is just give us a headache. — Pam Shingler, Appalachian News-Express

Love letter, two hours may be missing clues

A love letter and a missing two hours are two pieces of evidence that William "Bo" McNeeley hopes will give him a new trial and a new life.

McNeeley, 23, of Beauty, was convicted on September 23 of the January 20 slaying of two-year-old Sherman Jay Newsome. McNeeley is unhappy with his representation at the trial and wants a new lawyer to bring forth the missing evidence.

One piece of evidence is a letter written to him by girlfriend Rebecca Sweeney, when McNeeley was serving time for driving on a suspended license. Sweeney, as a witness for the prosecution, testified at McNeeley's trial that she was afraid of him and that he was a violent man.

The missing letter from Sweeney says that she was in love with him and that "she'd go crazy" if he wasn't with her, according to McNeeley.

Another piece of evidence is a missing two-hour time period on the day of Sherman Jay's death. According to McNeeley, the prosecution said the baby could have lived two hours after being injured, and that the coroner said the baby had been dead for about two hours when the coroner examined him at approximately 10:12 p.m. McNeeley contends that he could not have been present when the baby had been hurt because that meant the baby died at 8 p.m. and could have been hurt at around 6 p.m. McNeeley said he had gone to his sister's house at 5 p.m. and came back at 10 p.m. to find the baby had died. — The Mountain Citizen, Inez

Free Medicine check-ups help all people stay healthy

On October 27, from 9 a.m. - 2 p.m., Our Lady of the Way Hospital will provide a FREE personalized check-up of medication for anyone interested, especially Senior Citizens and others who are on/or taking maintenance doses of medications. Known as a "Brown Bag" medicine review, this service will be held in the Specialty Clinic area of the hospital.

"Improper medicine use causes about 25 percent of nursing home admissions," says Shuler Harmon, R.P.H., pharmacy director at Our Lady of the Way, and "older people are also at greater risk for hospitalization and death from adverse drug reactions. Regular medicine check-ups can help older people stay independent and avoid these outcomes."

During the medicine check-up, Harmon will review each medicine and discuss the individual's medicine-taking routine. The conversation is private and confidential; Harmon may follow up with the person's own doctor about serious concerns.

"We look for problems that are easy to solve, but which can lead to severe consequences for a patient's health," notes Harmon. "For example, some medicines should not be taken together, but patients may receive prescriptions from different doctors — who may be unaware of a patient's other medicines. About half of all medicines prescribed are taken incorrectly, sometimes because patients don't have complete instructions or don't understand why it is important to follow them exactly."

School Buses

Many children travel to school by bus. The most important rule to remember is that school bus drivers are trained to help bus riders. Students should always listen to what the driver tells them. School-bus related injuries often occur because the driver does not see the children. Remind children to always cross in front of the bus and that they should always be far enough away to see the driver's face. If the child can see the driver's face, then the driver can see the child.

In Memory

CLARA JARVIS
1959-1992

You were someone that we were all proud to call our friend, That special person on whom we could depend.

Your time here may not have been long, But our memories of you will always live on.

We will not think about the sad way that you were called away, We'll only think about the sunshine you gave in each and every day.

This is our final farewell To our precious Clara Bell.

Work without you will never be the same, We all love you. —signed The Deli Gang.

Grethel kids to ride bikes for St. Jude's

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital announced recently that Debra Tackett has agreed to be the Coordinator of the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital Bike-A-Thon in Grethel on October 24.

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital was founded by entertainer, Danny Thomas. The institution opened its doors to the public in 1962 to combat catastrophic diseases which afflict our children. St. Jude Hospital is non-sectarian, non-discriminatory, and covers all costs of care beyond those reimbursed by insurance.

At St. Jude, scientists and physicians are working side-by-side seeking not only a better means of treatment, but also the causes, cures, and prevention of these terrible killers.

The Bike-A-Thon program this year is dedicated to Ryan Martin, a six-year-old Wilms' tumor patient at St. Jude Children's Research Hospital. He was diagnosed in June, 1986. He had not shown any signs of illness, but when his mother took him to the doctor for his six-month check-up, the examination revealed an enlarged kidney. Further examinations disclosed his tumor. The kidney was removed, and he had six months of chemotherapy at St. Jude Hospital. Today he is cancer free and will return to St. Jude Hospital only once a year for a check-up. He is a living example of the successful research, patient care, and educational programs made possible by the Bike-A-Thon campaign at this internationally recognized hospital.

Write-in candidates to file with clerk

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

New absentee ballot and write-in vote laws passed by the Kentucky 1992 General Assembly may affect Floyd County voters in the upcoming November 3 general election.

According to a press release issued Monday by Secretary of State Bob Babbage, write-in candidates are now required to register their intent to run for office with either their county clerk or the Secretary of State's office at least ten days in advance of the election.

Write-in votes will only be filed for those candidates who have declared their intent, except candidates for a fifth or sixth class city office.

Also under the new laws, provisions have been made for emergency absentee ballots that will help accommodate those who will, for some unexpected reason, be unable to go to the polls on election day.

Under the old law, persons wishing to file an absentee ballot were required to complete the forms at least seven days before the election. The new law allows persons to apply for an absentee ballot up to the day before the election, provided they sign an affidavit stating that they had no prior knowledge of a need to be absent and file it in the office of the county clerk during regular business hours.

The county clerk must submit all absentee ballot forms to a grand jury. Misuse of an absentee ballot is a Class D felony and is punishable by law.

For further information, please contact Secretary of State Bob Babbage at (502) 564-3490 or Floyd County Clerk Carla "Robinson" Boyd at 886-3816.

Layne explained that at the time he was called to the big leagues, two positions were available with nine umpires in line for the two openings. "I remember when I got the call," said Layne. "I was shocked that I got the job." He contributed his success to a lot of hard work on the field.

"When I started out in the minor leagues that was no guarantee that I would ever make it to the majors," he stated. "I made the minimum salary and it wasn't like making what a doctor or lawyer would make. After calling a season in the minor leagues I would have to go out and find a job to hold me over till the next season.

"Now that I have made it to the big leagues, I have security and have managed to save a little," he commented. "I really had no inclination that I would ever be there."

Layne said that it is not always good news for some who enter the minor league umpire development program. Some umpires are told that it would be good to look for other things.

"Now, after two to three years at the Triple-A level," explained Layne, "if they don't think you are going to make it they will just tell you to look for other things and get on with your life in another field.

"Sometimes most of them can look in the mirror and make that decision for themselves," he said. "No longer do umpires spend a lot of years in the minor leagues. They either make it or they don't in the first two to three years.

"Look at Dutch Rennert and Bruce Fromenig who spent 15 years in the minor leagues and then Larry Barnett spends two."

Layne said that it is more than calling balls and strikes that makes you a major league candidate. "You have to have some personality about you," he said. "You have to be able to deal with the players and managers when you arrive in the major leagues."

Was there ever a time when Layne felt like giving up?

"Well, there are always those times, but a person like Harry Wendlestedt will sense that you are getting discouraged and he will call you up and tell you that you're going to make it. He was an encouragement to me and to others. Wendlestedt has certainly contributed to my success as an umpire. He is well connected and a good man to put a word in for you."

With the problems surfacing in baseball today with free agency, realignment and the search for a new commissioner, Layne views some hard times for the game.

"Baseball definitely has some problems," said Layne. "It has gotten to the level that the larger franchises such as New York, Los Angeles and other areas that have the larger amount of revenue coming in can afford the Bobby Bonilla's or the Daryl Strawberry's," said Layne. "But cities like Pittsburgh, Seattle and Cincinnati cannot. Major League baseball cannot work under the present system."

Layne feels that baseball will eventually be forced to adopt the salary cap that the NBA currently has which has been successful over the years.

"It's going to come to the point where the owners have to decide if player A, B, C is worth so much money or not. How many ballclubs can afford to lose six to seven millions dollars a year for the next five years? It's the owners who have to do something about it. They are the ones who are paying the bills.

"The owners are the ones who must realize they need to control the salaries," Layne said, "because that is the biggest problem in baseball today — salaries."

Layne said he wasn't knocking the players but there had been a lot of finger pointing. While a lock out by the owners next year looms, Layne feels that it will not happen next year but might in two years.

"Former Commissioner Fay Vincent was the obstacle to the owners controlling the leagues," said Layne. "With the two expansion teams coming in next year, I don't look for the owners to stage a lock out next year but I believe it will happen the year after.

"Major League baseball needs to go to the profit sharing concept that the NBA has also. They must develop a bonus structure for profit sharing. Pittsburgh keeps losing six to seven million each year and they cannot afford to sign Bobby Bonds this coming year. The owners need to understand they cannot police themselves."

On realignment, Layne feels that what was proposed by Vincent made sense.

"Geographically, Cincinnati and St. Louis should be in the West," Layne said. "They just need to use common sense in the matter. With the new team (Florida Marlins) coming to Miami and if the Giants move to Florida, just think of the rivalry that will develop between the two teams in the years ahead. Do you think that the Giants, if they move to Florida, should remain in the Western Division?"

On the sale of the Giants and their pending move to the Sunshine State, Layne feels that it makes sense to move and the failure of the people of San Francisco were responsible for the move.

"It was over a place for the Giants to play," said Layne. "The people voted not to build a new ballpark after they were given every opportunity to keep them there."

Layne had his opinion on the worst park in the National League.

"To me there are no worst parks," said an appreciative Layne. "I personally like Candlestick Park. The players don't like it, but I do. You can leave a place like Cincinnati where it may be over 100 degrees on the turf and fly to San Francisco and you appreciate the cooler weather. I look forward to going to Candlestick.

"I will miss San Francisco and I personally wish they would not move, but the organization cannot stand to lose millions of dollars each year," said Layne. "I enjoy going to all cities."

Layne said that St Louis was the best park to visit and call games in.

"They are the kindest people you will find in Major League baseball," said Layne. "They are a family-oriented organization. They hire senior citizens to work for them. The Dodgers organization is a good one. There you have to walk a mile once you park your car. At St. Louis, you park close to the park."

Layne said that he became a Reds fan during the hey-day of Johnny Bench, Pete Rose and Tony Perez. "I attended a lot of games back in the '70s," he said. "After I got involved in umpiring, I ceased being a fan of any team. I can remember the first time I met Rose. Here was a player that I admired as a kid and when I met him it was a big let down. Pete's a great guy, but I was disappointed in him. I got along with him when he was managing and we had no problems. Lou Piniella was the same way. I had no trouble with him. He would throw his tantrums but I still respected him as a manager.

"Piniella was a manager that managed with desire," Layne stated. "If I was an owner that is the kind of manager that I would want, one that manages with a lot of desire. The report was that he was asked to take a cut in pay and let one of his coaches go. He refused to do that and left. He was raised in the Tampa area and he knows a lot of people down there and could end up as the Giants manager if they move. Roger Craig, though still has a year left on his contract."

While umpiring in the big leagues is rewarding, it still has its drawbacks, according to Layne.

"It takes you away from your family. When you've got a six-year old and a two-year old, you miss them. It's nice in the off season to be able to take them to school, go back, pick them up and to be with them."

Layne said that he never umpired a game, outside Little League, until he went to umpire school. He also had some advice for those who have entertained the thought of giving it a try.

"I would first of all tell them to make sure that is what they want to do," said the former Floyd Countian. "Know what you are up against. Nothing is impossible.

"They should not be married because the pay is rotten," continued Layne. "They must be able to apply common sense and execute fair play. Learn the rules. Be the best rule man they can be. Then give 110 percent and don't lose sight what they are there for.

"Rules are made to be fair. Rules apply to everyone. The balk rule, batting out of order — all are there to keep the game clean.

"Two years ago we were told to enforce the balk rule more. Then we were having a lot of balks called and it was causing a lot of controversy. Then the league office told us to back down some."

Layne said that at each televised game they had to allow two minutes between every half inning but that the delay didn't bother him.

What about the future for Layne? "Twenty years from now I will be 50," he said. "But the retirement age is 55. I would like to see them lower it to 50 and I would like to retire and let go of baseball. Baseball has a way of dominating your life. But, between now and 50, it will continue to take up my time."

While reflecting on his career in the past, Layne took time out to hail a Floyd Countian who has touched the lives of a lot of people — Johnny Hall.

"I was back this past summer when my grandmother passed away," explained Layne. "Before that, my grandfather had died. Both times I met Johnny. At the time that my grandfather passed away, I was umpiring in the minor leagues. Johnny was interested in me then and he wanted to talk baseball. He was very knowledgeable of the game. He told me that he was 'really proud of me!' It is good that this community has someone like Johnny Hall who cares about others and is sincere in it. While I may be a Major League umpire, Johnny Hall is a major league person. He has touched the lives of many people in many areas."

Layne took time to relate a story that happened to him while in Los Angeles.

"I was in L.A. and there was this little Italian restaurant there that I always like to go to after calling a game," related Layne. "The owner of the restaurant knows that I come there after every game. So he keeps the place open until I get there.

"He came up to me one night and said 'Jerry, there's someone here that I want you to meet. He said that he wanted to introduce me to Dwight Yoakam. Well, in the back of my mind I knew about Dwight Yoakam. So, he was sitting in this booth and we were introduced by the restaurant owner.

"When he stood up and we shook hands, I asked him when was the last time he had been to Betsy Layne and his eyes got real big. I asked him again when was the last time he went L.D. Hunter's store and bought him a moon pie or some candy and pop.

"We sat there and talked for two and a half hours. We talked about everything — traveling down 23 from Ohio. We had a good talk."

Layne said that he and Yoakam discussed the Muddy Gut segment of 48 Hours and that Yoakam expressed his disappointment over the program being aired.

"He told me that he never meant to hurt anyone and that he learned a lesson from all of it. He said that he 'must be aware of where I am from and learn to control myself as not to hurt others from this area.' He said, 'I know I hurt a lot of people's feelings,' and that he was going to make it up to the people of the area."

Layne ended the regular season in San Diego. "I had a great year this year," he said. "I spent some time with Paul Runge, who is a respected umpire in the major leagues. Paul and I have a lot in common and sort of came from the same background."

Layne said that he will not become eligible to call any of the playoffs, World Series or All-Star games until he has completed five years in the majors.

"It would be great to work a World Series," he said, "even though it would be added pressure."

In a study of umpiring it was concluded that the umpires are 98 percent right in the calls they make, leaving two-percent for controversy and misses.

"I don't like the idea of having instant replays to determine a close call," Layne said.

Layne will be taking some time off before working the Harry Wendlestedt Umpire school this winter.

"Harry did so much for me when I was getting started and it is a small thing that I do for him by working as one of his instructors in his school."

Layne and his wife Jackie reside in Winter Haven, Florida, with their two daughters, Brittany, six, and Monica, two.

How would you like to enter this world knowing that one day all this could be yours?

Some children are born facing problems that terrify the most capable adult. Alcohol, homelessness, hunger, abuse, neglect. And more. And worse. It doesn't matter why they're born into such a threatening world; they are. They can't handle it alone. So, with your help, we help. Please donate to your local United Way of Eastern Kentucky. Brittany Sue Meade

Young Authors' Award winner

Brittany Sue Meade was the kindergarten winner for the non-illustrated category in the countywide Young Authors' program. She was a student in Mrs. June Stephens' class at Prestonsburg Elementary. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Meade of Abbott Creek. Her story is published with permission.

Young Authors' writings originate from classroom activities. Books were judged in the classroom, then they went to school-wide competition, and then to countywide competition. Winners were named at the end of the 1991-92 school year and each winner received a $50 U.S. Savings Bond at a spring awards ceremony. Over 5,000 elementary and middle school students participated in competition throughout the county.

Spring

by Brittany Meade

It was spring. The leaves came out on the trees. The days grew longer. The flowers came out. The caterpillars turned into butterflies. The grass grew pretty and green.

The bear came out of his hole in the trees. He had been asleep all winter.

The ground hogs came out of their holes. They had been asleep all winter.

The frogs came up from the mud where they had been sleeping. The birds came back from the South where they had been for the winter.

It was spring again.

#####

Young Authors' writings are underway for the 1992-93 school year as Blast Off Week begins October 5-9. Each school will be involving students in activities which range from having guest speakers, decorating bulletin boards, having reading guests, to having competitions. The idea is to generate new stories for a spring countywide competition.

In conjunction with the Blast Off Week, last year's winning books will be on display at Wal-Mart starting Monday, October 5 and will continue throughout the week.

Big news from McDowell 1 Primary Block

The five and six year olds are off to a wonderful start. The students have accomplished a lot of skills already. They have been doing many hands-on activities and are now doing the theme teaching approach of seasons.

For hands-on-art activities, they have gathered leaves to help make leaf people, and used all colors construction paper to make Autumn trees.

Parents who have a child in a Primary School are encouraged to take part in activities. Primary 5-6 year old teachers are Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. Hicks, Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Slone.

Jeri Turner's 7-8 year olds are also hard at work. They started a "Space" theme so, of course, they had a blast. They had an actual rocket in the classroom where the students could crawl around in it. They did many space related stories and outside activities, such to find out how far away the planets are from the sun. Each inch they measured was equal to 20 million miles. Pluto was 15 feet away from the sun on their scale. For a follow-up activity, the class had a Mission Day where the students took an imaginary trip and tasted real astronaut food. Ice cream!

The other primary teachers are Mrs. Blackburn, Mrs. Slone, and Miss Layne.

ABCs OF EDUCATION

by Jennifer Little

Parents have many options in raising their children. They can care for them or neglect them in subtle ways. Children will not complain or say anything about what parents do because they know no difference. They love and accept the parent who abuses as much as a parent who praises. However, as a child grows older, experiences more adults as in schools, neighbors or relatives, they learn what a "good" parent is and is not.

Children will avoid going home to parents who neglect or abuse. Children will seek out loving people to act as "substitute parents." Perhaps you are one of those "substitute parents." You are the person in the child's life who shows care and concern, who speaks lovingly and helps the child make decisions or appreciates what the child's feelings or thoughts may be. You may be the one in that child's life who changes his or her destiny.

Many children seek alternatives for "parents" in their lives. They search through their friends' families for those adults who care for children. Some parents naturally are surrounded by children of all ages. That is because they know how to think as a child thinks, to know what is important to a child of any age.

These "parents" will influence the children in many ways. These are the people who show a neglected or abused child another way to be an adult. These are the people who care about the child so the child can learn to care about himself or herself and then about others. By showing a child he or she is worthwhile, just as he or she is, teaches the child self-acceptance and value.

Without this self-acceptance or valuing, the child learns to condemn himself or herself and his or her actions. Then, to feel better, he or she will turn on other children and condemn them by teasing, making fun of, or even abusing verbally or physically. These are the children most in need of love, but it is often difficult to show them love. They seem to do everything they can to avoid being loved by anyone, including themselves.

These children are the ones who destroy out of fear of being rejected. To make sure they control what happens to them, rather than being the victim, they become the aggressor. They reject others so they can assure themselves that no one will reject them. They become aggressive rather than admit to being tender, gentle and vulnerable to others.

By getting "under the skin" of that hardened exterior, we can change these children from being aggressive and hostile into loving, supporting and supportive children. We can change their lives with kindness. Why not try it and see? Educators do on a daily basis. Why else will the children keep returning when school experiences are difficult?

It is more than being with friends. It is being with someone who cares about the child. Can you care? How will you show you care? Will you share experiences with the child? Will you share kind words and compliments for jobs well done? Will you encourage the child to try a difficult task or homework in spite of whatever handicaps he or she may see.

Will you see the world through the child's eyes? You can, for you were a child once yourself. You know what you needed most as a child. You know what you enjoyed most as a child. Share those times with yourself and rejoin your own childhood, lost in struggle for survival and aggression of the adult world. See the world through your child eyes and change yourself as you change others.

"Budding Electrician?"

When aquarium lights don't work and you can't afford new bulbs, just call on Jeremy Johnson at Wheelwright High. Johnson took a basic electricity course provided by a science grant given several years ago. Now, in Biology II, when the aquarium lights go out he is called on first. He replaces plugs, splices cords and generally "remakes" the light. Saves quite a bit of money! The Biology II class currently has 21 projects in progress and will begin working with the grade schools next six weeks.

Mountain Voices

And the winner is...

There are many factors that go into the election of a Presidential candidate, and, unfortunately many of them have little or nothing to do with the idea of picking the best man for the job. These factors that have little to do with choosing the best man will more than likely sway the American voters to elect Bill Clinton. Normally I would bemoan such a system, but if these factors can help us get rid of Bush, we should count them as blessings.

The news media keep insisting that Bush will come up with a plan that will turn the election around on the eleventh hour. I don't think so. I'm sure that the Bush campaign is going to play up the affair angle against Clinton (even though Bush claims he will not stoop to such tactics) and the marijuana smoking incident. The American voters love to hear this kind of stuff, but I don't think they are going to let it stand in the way of new leadership. Let's face it—if we rejected everyone that has had an affair or smoked marijuana (whether inhaled or not), we would eliminate many qualified candidates.

So what are some of the not-so-important factors that are on Clinton's side? For one, he is better looking. I know you are chuckling to yourself, but there are thousands of women out there who will vote for Clinton because of his looks. I'm not saying it's the only reason but the deciding one.

Another plus for Clinton is his running mate. We all know how useless the vice-presidential position is (and should be abolished). Many voters won't necessarily be voting for Clinton as they will be voting against Bush and particularly Quayle. Maybe voters are thinking that the vice-presidential position can take on some real meaning. With Al Gore this could be a possibility.

The biggest intangible going for Clinton is his newness. We all know in any sporting event that a player or team will go so far with the game plan. At some point the team or player realizes that the plan is not working and comes up with an alternate plan. Clinton is our new plan. I don't know if it will work, but we know where the old plan has put us: in a recession.

So come January we should have new leadership in Washington. Having said all this, I realize that I may have put the kiss of death on the Clinton campaign. If I have, it will take me a long time to forgive myself. It will take Bill forever to forgive me.

"Coverup"

by Jay Bennett

Brad wonders why he and his friends drink so much—especially when he wakes up with a terrific hangover like the one he has this morning. He can't remember anything that happened—only that his best friend, Alden, drove him home from last night's party. But this hangover is worse than any Brad has ever had. Through the dull throbbing in his head comes the nagging feeling that something happened as he and Alden drove down Wilson Lane last night—something awful and irrevocable.

When both Alden and his father, a powerful judge, deny that anything has occurred, Brad nearly convinces himself that he has been imagining things. But then he meets Ellen, a beautiful girl who is searching for her homeless father. Slowly, the terrible truth begins to dawn on Brad, as he and Ellen retrace her father's footsteps. And Brad is forced to choose: Will he hide behind a lie? Or will he turn against his cushioned world of power and privilege to reveal a scandal of corruption—even at the risk of losing Ellen's love?

Once again, Jay Bennett, the grand master of mystery, delivers a chilling, suspenseful tale that will keep you guessing until the very last page.

This is a good book for all teenagers to read.

The Rag Coat

by Lauren Mills

More than anything, Minna wants to go to school. But first she needs a winter coat. The Quilting Mothers, who gather at Minna's House every day to sew and tell stories, offer to make her a coat from scraps of quilting material, and Minna carefully chooses the pieces that have the best stories behind them.

Finally the new coat is ready. Minna proudly wears it to school, but she is quite unprepared for the reaction of her new classmates.

This evocative story of a resourceful mountain girl will charm readers with its message of love and friendship. Lauren Mills's sensitive watercolors capture all the beauty and atmosphere of Appalachia.

A wonderful book! All ages will enjoy this book.

MCA :

Educating with nutrition

This past month MCA completed the installation of a kitchen and cafeteria. This marks the first year the school will be participating in the School Lunch Program. Much of the equipment and labor was donated from both out of state and locally.

The Student Lunch Program has two goals this year: to provide a quality and nutritious lunch for the students, and to raise the awareness of the students to the relationship between a healthy body, mind and soul. Each class will nominate and elect bi-monthly student representatives to the Student Lunch Union.

The SLU representatives will participate in a nutrition education seminar and will make reports to their class about their findings. During the two week period of their term, the students will meet once weekly to discuss nutrition and its relationship to the body, mind and soul. The students will be encouraged to share the knowledge they gain with their peers and family.

The SLU representatives will be challenged with discussion and questions such as: What are vitamins, calories, fats, proteins, carbohydrates, etc.? and how do they relate to our body? What are drugs? and what effect do they have on our body and mind? Why is balanced nutrition important to the education process?

Memories of Wheelwright High School

I stood at the doors of Wheelwright high and tried to see thru the tears in my eyes
Tho I love it dearly, I must confess I saw the worst, along with the best

The paint now is peeling, the wall coming down

The sidewalks are broken, I look and I frown

The classrooms are empty - where once thousands stood

Tho it's almost over, the memories are good

Voices from class nights of long years ago

Bases for softball, where grass still won't grow

Sounds of the band and the 'ole school song

Cheerleaders and fans, helping the Trojans along

Rows of trophies so proudly won

Tell of student deeds well done

And now as the last year begins to unfold

Each treasured moment in my memory I'll hold

The best years of our lives? Yes, I truly believe

Then why the lump in my throat as I grieve?

Because I know there are many who care

A huge part of their life is tied right there

We have small town memories and hold them dear

We had the best of life - no reason to fear

So many have gone, but they each left a part

We hold so closely - down deep in our heart

Listen one last time, to the sounds of the past

Think of those who helped as your future was cast

Don't be embarrassed if the tears start to fall

Close you eyes and wander - one last time - down the hall

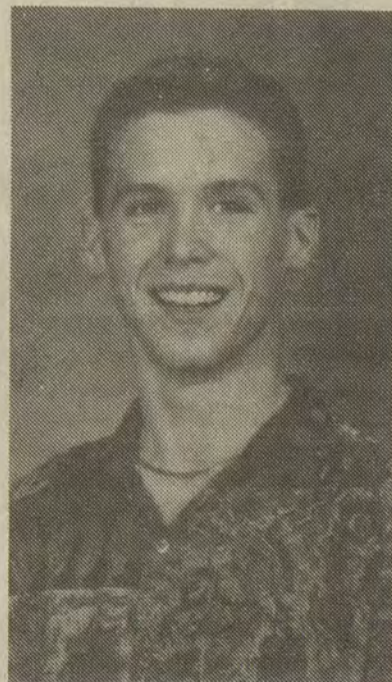

I stand at the doors of Wheelwright High

Knowing the closing days are nigh

To some you meant nothing, but to the rest

Like me - in their hearts - you'll always be the best!

Who's who

Who's Who Among American High School students has accepted Mark Estill Reed to receive honorary award recognition and to have his biography published in the 26th Anniversary Edition of Who's Who Among American High School Students—1991-92. Who's Who is the most respected student recognition publication and award program in the nation. Only five percent of all high school students nationwide are included in Who's Who each year. He is the grandson of Emogene Reed of Betsy Layne and the late Estell Reed and Margaret Nunemaker of Pikeville and the late Carl Nunemaker.

Winning volcano

The group constructing the most "realistic" volcano at McDowell Elementary was group four (Mt. Vesuvius): Marty Gibson, son of Debbie Gibson of McDowell; Steve Hall, son of Terry and Shirley Hall of Minnie; Monica Moore, daughter of Ernie and Rita Moore of McDowell; and Kenneth Romain, son of Ken and Jennie Romain of Price.

Fourth grade class "erupts" with excitement

After a week of studying, researching, and learning about changes in the earth's surface, a McDowell fourth grade class constructed volcanoes outside on a warm, sunny Friday afternoon!

Class members and their volcano replicas were Mt. St. Helens: Scottie Stumbo, Richie Noble, Amanda Adkins and Kenneth Kidd; Kilauea: Matt Caldwell, Brandon Howell, Monica Hopkins and Joe Mullins; Mauna Loa: Justin Blankenship, Jared Elswick, Paula Stanley, Adam Daniels and Angela Taylor; and Mt. Vesuvius: Marty Gibson, Steven Hall, Monica Moore, and Kenneth Romain.

After their successful effort, the winning group members were treated with snacks from their teacher, Kitty Frazier. Additionally, the class enjoyed visits by several who saw the volcanoes on display.

You find it—I'll draw it (By the way—what is it?)

The microscope is one of the most enjoyable tools of learning for the student. Using prepared slides, students view anything from the cross section of a leaf to the intestinal tract of the frog! Shown above are Bellinda Walker and Claudette Isaac, students in Biology I at Wheelwright High School.

MCA students enter contest :

What would I do if I were President?

The fifth grade class at Mountain Christian Academy participated in the essay contest entitled "What I Would Do if I Were President." The contest is sponsored by the Flowers Family Bakeries and prizes will be awarded by Texas Instruments. The students studied some of the history of our country and its presidents. They discussed the importance of the election process and learned about some of the issues the president faces. The upcoming election provided an excellent opportunity for this learning experience.

More volcanoes at McDowell

Cheryl Hall's fourth grade class at McDowell Elementary recently demonstrated a volcano eruption using scale models.

Each group used clay and materials gathered from the surrounding campus to build their models. Students stood in awe as their mixture in the volcano erupted and overflowed.

The volcanoes were judged on the groups ability to create a life-like model.

The winning volcano was constructed by Tara Gray, Chris Mosley and Joseph Caudill.

Making friends in school

School teaches a child reading, writing, and arithmetic—but school is one of the best places for kids to make friends. The transient years represent the most crucial time in learning socialization and how to make friends. And you can lend a hand with your child's social development as well as with his homework.

Your child imitates you. For example, if you have many friends and invite people into your home often, your child is more apt to regard friendship as an important value in his life, too.

When your child invites classmates home, welcome them—even if at times this may mean confusion or inconvenience. It is important to your child that you willingly accept his friends—just as you entertain your friends.

If your child is new in the neighborhood or school, you can ease the "getting acquainted" process with some planned activities. Give a special invitation to a friend of your child's in the neighborhood to accompany your family on a Saturday outing. Or plan an informal get-together in your home for a small group of your child's classmates.

Remember one thing, making friends is an important aspect of the grade school and middle school years.

Try Halloween at home this year

A home costume party can be a fun way to share Halloween with your family and friends this year. Knowing your children are safe participating in supervised activities rather than becoming possible victims of tricks or pranks that might cause injury make it especially fun, according to Dr. James Van Horn, associate professor of rural sociology, Penn State Cooperative Extension.

Bobbing for apples, decorating pumpkins, or having a costume parade or contest are just a few of the numerous activities you can consider for a party.

Planning for the party can be much of the fun. Family members can share in the preparation by shopping for pumpkins to carve, decorating the house or baking and decorating cookies together. You might want to try writing and producing a Halloween play or puppet show at home.

Dr. Van Horn warns that costumed people and scary stories may frighten very young children because they confuse what is real with fantasy ideas. It is wise to avoid scary themes unless the children are more than five years old.

Fun learning with the scientists' "toy" at PCC

Who says science has to be boring? Science is fun...and for everyone! At least it is to those who took part in the PCC evening course on October 1st, "How to Care For, Use, and Enjoy the Compound/Light Microscope," under the instruction of Dr. John G. Shiber. Participants included 3rd through 8th graders, as well as some adults, all of whom said that the course was not only very informative, but also lots of fun!

How can learning a microscope be fun? Well, just imagine being able to see tiny little organisms, cells, and even chromosomes that we hear about nearly every day, but never get to see because they are not visible to the naked eye. Perhaps you would like to see what a strand of your own hair looks like under magnification, or maybe see some of the tiny plant and animal organisms which live in the creek near your home. Once one learns how to care for and use the microscope, it can be the most fascinating and useful "toy" one can have. Some scientists spend all their lives "playing" with this "toy" and never get bored—a life-long "toy"!

During the 2-hour session in the zoology laboratory, the students first became acquainted with all the parts of their compound/light microscopes and learned how to care for them and use them in a professional manner. (After all, the microscope, which is a very costly and delicate laboratory instrument, can last a lifetime if cared for and used properly.)

The real fun for everyone began when the students were permitted to prepare their own microscopic slides for examination under the microscope. They prepared wet-mounts of creek water and their own cheek cells. They looked at Drosophila fruitflies and strands of their own hair. Also, Dr. Shiber provided slides of fleas, human head lice/"nits," and fruitfly giant salivary gland chromosomes. Many of the students even tore a piece of ordinary paper and looked at the shredded ends that, under the microscope, showed the single fibers of cellulose, the most abundant carbohydrate on earth.

It was a busy lab, and everyone had fun. Still hard to believe? Well, then go and see for yourself! Just call the CE/CS office at PCC and enroll yourself and/or your child in one of Dr. Shiber's evening classes on the microscope, if you've never handled one or have had only sporadic or very little experience with it. Another class may be scheduled for late November, if requested by at least 12, and will definitely be offered during the Spring semester. This free class is limited to 12-20 people so each person will be able to have a microscope with which to work.

Truth, Justice and the American Way

by Geoff Belcher, staff writer

Political language— with variations this is true of all political parties, from Conservatives to Anarchists— is designed to make lies sound truthful and murder respectable, and to give an appearance of solidity to pure wind.

—George Orwell, Politics and the English Language

Under democracy one party always devotes its chief energies to trying to prove that the other party is unfit to rule— and both commonly succeed, and are right.

—H.L. Mencken, Minority Report

Heeeeere I come to save the dayyyyyy!

—Mighty Mouse

I'm b-a-a-a-ck!

That's right friends and neighbors. I have thrown my super-duper extra large propeller-beanie back into the presidential ring.

Yes, friends, I intend to steal the office of the president and give it back to the American people.

Now, I'm not reentering the King Rat-race because an overwhelming groundswell of supporters asked me to, and not because of any hidden personal agendas, and not even because of any latent desire to be character-assassinated.

No, I'm taking the big plunge back into the political compost heap because, after watching the first presidential and vice-presidential "debates," I am convinced that y'all do not in any way, shape, form or fashion want any one of them six bozos running the government.

In case you happened to have had the good fortune to be watching some higher-quality television show (such as the network television adaptation of Jackie Collin "Debbie Does Leave it to Beaver") instead of watching the first presidential "debate," (or "The Three Stooges: The Lost Episodes, as I like to call 'em") I'll fill you in on what you didn't miss.

First of all, in the presidential debates, Ross Perot, who looks sort of like one of those little Troll dolls without the Buckwheat hair-do, actually spoke about issues, like the economy and budget deficits instead of concentrating on belittling and humiliating his opponents. Jeez-o-mighty, you know we don't need a man like that in office. He obviously knows absolutely nothing about being president.

Then there was good 'ol Bill Clinton, the man of the people. 'Ol Billy just looked to me a little bit too much like he'd been to the Jimmy Swagart School of Soul-bearing, Sincere Hand-Clasping and Solemn Puppy-Dog Looks.

He kept calling for Change. Over and over and over. If I'd actually been in the auditorium, I'd have been sorely tempted to throw him just enough Change for bus fare back to Little Rock.

And then there was... BUSH, who kept saying "This is America. There's nothing wrong. This is America. There can't be anything wrong."

WAKE UP, YOU MORON!!!!!!!!!!!!!! If that kind of thinking worked, the whole country would be saying "This is America. I'm rich. This is America. I have over three billion dollars. This is America, we're not all helpless sheep being led to the economic slaughterhouse by the bloodless, heartless, soulless and brainless blankety-blank beaurocrats." AND THEN THE WHOLE #%@$#@!!@* COUNTRY WOULD NOT BE IN THE MESS THAT YOU PUT IT IN!!!!!!

He actually said that if you want things to get better, you should vote him back into office. That's kind of like the defense lawyer who asks to handle your appeal after he gets you 20-life for doing 35 in a school zone.

Then there was Tuesday's vice-presidential debates, featuring Dan "Yes I'm Dumber Than a Box of Rocks But If I Hear Another Potatoe Joke I'll Barf" Quayle; Admiral James Bond "I'm A Really Nice Guy And A Highly Decorated War Hero But I Have Absolutely No Clue What In The Name Of Ross Perot I'm Doing Up Here With These Jokers" Stockdale; and Al "My Wife Is A Nazi Censor And My Boss Is A Pathological Liar And I Really Oughtta Be Running For President Instead Of The Number Two (In All Possible Meanings Of The Phrase) Spot" Gore.

Quayle really, really reminded me of the little terrier with the derby hat in the Bugs Bunny cartoons who runs alongside the big bulldog yipping "Hey Spike! Hey Spike! Gee, that sweater sure looks good on ya, Spike!" Except for the simple fact that Spike wasn't there and all he could do was look at Gore and say stuff like "Boyyy, if Spike was here he'd really make you sorry you was talkin' ta me like dat, bruddah." Still, his remarks were much more effective than Bush's "I'm okay, you're okay, we're all okay" drivel at Sunday's debate. But then again, a good loud gas attack would have been, too.

Admiral Stockdale, Perot's running mate, certainly exuded a great amount of character and personal integrity, but he looked like Orville Redenbacher with a beer-belly and spoke like his microphone was going out: "Well, I certainly... economy... and uhh... my boss Ross... too much Nyquil!"

Gore made more sense and better speeches than anyone else in either of the two debates, but let's face it, the man's wife is named Tipper. How can you take him seriously?

So now we're back to me and my candidacy. I know. It's hard to take me seriously too. But at least I know when I'm full of it and freely admit it when I am. So here's my plan:

If you elect me as your president, I unconditionally guarantee you that I will straighten out the mess that the politicians have made of this country. I won't have to contend with an uncooperative congress because, frankly, I intend to send all the senators and representatives back to their home states and districts where they will be forced to set up offices and ACTUALLY HELP THE PEOPLE WHO HIRED THEM.

I will then set myself up as dictator and will make all the rules and laws and will eliminate anyone who

MONEY TALKS AND...
After listening to Sunday night's presidential debate, I have changed my mind and agree that the old adage "money talks and..." is true.

My husband always contended that it was factual, but I was naive enough to believe that the smartest, not the richest, person usually prevailed. And contrary to popular belief, sometimes the richest was not the smartest.

This may be the case with this Perot guy. Somehow I keep expecting to see him peeking out of the inside of a tree hawking Keebler cookies. It's hard for me to believe a guy that looks and talks like he does actually has the guts to run for president of the United States.

"Why do you think he's so unusual?" my husband asked.

"Oh, I don't know," I laughed. "He's just so comical looking."

"Yeah, and he's laughing all the way to the bank."

"I know that, but I just can't see people actually voting for him."

"He's on the ballot in 50 states. How many are you on?"

"I'm not disputing he isn't intelligent. I just don't think the public can take him seriously enough to vote him into office."

"Why not?" my husband asked incredulously. "Reagan was in for eight years."

"But that's different"

"Why? Because he didn't look like an elf?"

"You just don't understand," I replied. "Anyway, why would a billionaire want to run for president of the United States?"

"I don't know why, but he made several good points. And in this case, money talks and it talks pretty good sense."

"Maybe so, but I was always leery of rich people holding political offices. They make me nervous."

"No wonder you're spastic then. Half of congress is rich."

"I'm serious. Rich people tend to forget about the common people; people who work for a living. Don't you remember Bush didn't even know there were price scanners in supermarkets."

"Tsk, tsk," my husband replied sarcastically. "I'm sorry the fellow had to find out. If his wife had been doing the shopping like she was supposed to, he would never have had to know."

"I bet Ross Perot knows about scanners."

"No doubt he invented them," my husband gushed.

"Just forget it," I said angrily. "All I said was that I thought Perot was too comical to be elected president and now we're talking about price scanners. Maybe having big ears and looking funny is what the public wants."

gets in my way.

Now before you pitch a fit, think about it. A dictatorship is the only form of government in which anything really gets done. It doesn't matter how much a president, vice-president, senator, representative or anybody else promises you.

Congress drafts bills that may have some very good points, but Senator So-and-so from Armpit, U.S.A. decides there ain't no way, no how that bill could possibly be made into law until his constituents back in Armpit get that there cow patty-recycling factory/barbecue pit they've been a wantin' and he gets that there new Mercedes and the purty sec-a-tary with the big hooters.

Then, after about three years and after the bill has been studied by 18 congressional sub-committees and revised and rewritten, costing taxpayers approximately eleven-million dollars, it then goes back before the entire congress and is revised and rewritten again and finally voted on and sent to the president, and then he vetoes it because it didn't include that special tax incentive to help out the poor down-trodden multi-billionaire special interest group that got

Dear Abby

Survey taps our memories: Where were you on Nov. 22?

DEAR READERS: We have all experienced a moment in our lives that is literally unforgettable.

One for me came on Nov. 22, 1963. My husband and I were in Japan, and it was about 4 a.m. The phone rang. It was someone calling from the States to give us the news—President Kennedy had been assassinated. Later that day, when we emerged from our hotel room, all the Japanese we encountered bowed respectfully and said, "So sorry about your president."

So, where were you when you heard that President Kennedy had been shot?

Please respond to Dear Abby, P.O. Box 539, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Postcards are preferred.

DEAR ABBY: Stan and I were married three months ago, and we were disappointed in the wedding gifts we got. Since we lived together for two years, I didn't think it was necessary to have a wedding shower because we already had everything we needed. We also hoped the wedding guests would be more generous if there wasn't a shower involved. Boy, were we ever wrong!

We paid for our own wedding and the cheapest dinner was $32 a plate, so you know it was no tacky affair. Three couples gave us only $25, and one couple left a card with no money in it.

I was considerate enough to extend an invitation to a mentally slow cousin so my aunt and uncle wouldn't have to worry about him. They didn't even give us a card!

Abby, if people don't know enough to give a gift that will at least cover the cost of the dinner, they shouldn't attend. If it weren't for the generous gifts from the parents of some friends, it would have been a total loss. We didn't expect to make a lot of money; we just wanted to break even, but we ended up $2,000 in the hole. Sign us
DISAPPOINTED

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: The purpose of a wedding is to celebrate the union of two people who love each other and want to spend the rest of their lives together. It is not a fundraiser.

It's too bad you didn't have a crystal ball. You and Stan could have eloped and been married by a justice of the peace, saved yourselves a bundle and avoided a major disappointment.

DEAR ABBY: The other night I was at the home of a friend and was dismayed to observe that she allowed her young son and his friend to make prank calls in her presence.

I asked her why she permitted it, and she said, "Children will do improper things with or without permission, and I would rather have him do it while I'm here to supervise so he won't make any toll calls."

I then asked her if her son wanted to smoke, would it be OK as long as she supervised?

I would appreciate your opinion on this, as it is causing a rift in our him into office and then the whole process starts all over again.

That may not be Justice, but it's certainly Truth and the American Way.

So vote for me. I'll be a good dictator. I promise. I may even get you that cow patty-recycling plant.

But don't expect the barbecue pit. We're in a recession, you know. Now where's that sec-a-tary?

decided to make a movie about the Randy Huston murder. John took a dying Isabella back to her home in Italy. Stella accused Roger of having an affair with Marlena when he murmured her name in his sleep. Later, Stella told Roman Roger would never kiss another woman unless she encouraged him. Wait To See: Jack faces a confusing prospect as fatherhood draws near.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: A.J. and Nikki moved into the Quartermaine mansion and made plans for their wedding, while Alan and Monica chafed at the thought of coordinating the event, and Tracy fumed at having Nikki living back under their roof. Scott suggested he and Dominique sort out their feelings for each other before she left to promote "Deception" in Italy. Bill and Holly went to an art auction in New York, and ran into Ned and Julia in a bidding war. Tiffany reunited with her parents in Phoenix as they waited at Cheryl's bedside. Wait To See: Brenda gets involved in a serious problem.

GUIDING LIGHT: Holly "arranged" for Roger to find Blake and Ross together. Watching the special relationship of trust break down between Roger and Blake, Holly agonized over the scene. But later, she refused to comfort Roger, reminding him that now he knew what it was like to be hurt by their daughter. Eve urged Mallet to be honest with Harley about his medical condition. Eleni was delighted to see Frank turn up in Greece. At Alan-Michael's subtle urging, Vanessa had Nick arrested. Wait To See: Blake is determined to make Ross see things her way.

LOVING: Stacey helped Trucker to remember things about his life. Later, as he slept, she confessed her love for him. Casey avoided mourning his father by plunging into his school work. Kate donated her "Mother of the Year" winnings to 35 Maple Drive, and was appointed its director. Dinah Lee called Hannah from Pine Valley to say she'd been beaten up, and to please come, but not to tell anyone. Catching Stacey at a vulnerable moment, Clay made a move on her—determined to get her A&E shares even if he had to marry her. Wait To See: Isabelle's plans for Ally could backfire, badly.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: The Buchanans were shocked when Blair announced her pregnancy. Nora was puzzled over Rachel's decision to remain in Llanview. Luna wondered if she were in danger because of Suede's mysterious activities. Suede had flashbacks of his dead wife when he saw bloodstains on the carpet at Ravenpoint. He told Luna his wife had been murdered there. Blair allowed Dorian to see Addie. Wilma argued with Dr. Ruth over Mort. Addie was distraught at the news of Blair's pregnancy. Wait To See:

"We could ask Prince Charles. He'd know if anybody would."

"You're right, but he inherited the position. Perot has to be elected," I countered.

"Well, it wouldn't matter if he had one big eye in the middle of his forehead. If you have that much money, you can do just about anything you want and get away with it. Even run for president."

My husband was right. A virtual unknown with no money could not feasibly run for president of the United States even if he looked like Billy Ray Cyrus. What gives Perot the credibility is not his looks (they're actually a hindrance), it's the money. Yes, the money makes people believe that what he's saying is true. People think that if he's rich, he's smart and that's not necessarily the case. Daddies have fathered a lot of stupid children that inherited their money. This may not be the case in Perot's situation, but it happens often.

"Well, don't you agree?" my husband asked.

"About what?"

"That money talks."

"I suppose it does, but I'd really like to know one thing about Perot. Do you think he could pick up the Disney Channel without a satellite if his wife tilted his ears in the right direction?"

If Perot wins, I may never work in this country again.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

The local board of health closed down the Wing Wah Chinese restaurant in South Dennis, Mass., briefly in August for various violations. The most serious, said officials, was the restaurant's practice of draining water from cabbage by putting it in cloth laundry bags, placing them between two pieces of plywood in the parking lot, and driving over them with a van. Said Health Director Ted Dumas, "I've seen everything now."

THE CONTINUING CRISIS

—To get a "specific use permit" for a building in San Marcos, Texas, the occupier must qualify for a certain number of points. Among the ways San Marcos State University fraternity houses can qualify: 1 point for notifying the police 48 hours before a social event, 3 points for posting a "maximum occupancy" sign, and 6 points for passing formal rules against doing things that result in death or sexual assault.

—In Zanesville, Ohio, in August, two firefighters fought each other instead of the fire at Connie Rider's house. The assistant chief had warned one of his men, who was carrying a fire hose, not to get too close to a downed power line. When the man continued to approach it, the assistant chief pulled the hose to halt the man's progress. The two men fell to the ground scuffling while a bystander grabbed the hose and fought the fire.

—A Los Angeles Times story on fear of heights in July featured an interview with the psychotherapist who heads the Anxiety Disorders Association. He reported that one of his patients could cross the 200-foot-high Chesapeake Bay Bridge in Maryland only if his wife drove the car and locked him in the trunk.

—The Simon Wiesenthal Center revealed recently that Iran's philatelic contribution to the 1991 International Day of the Child commission was a commemorative of a young boy hurling a rock through a window on which was emblazoned a Star of David. (The delegate from Iran was elected vice chairman this year of the Commission on Human Rights.)

—Australian professor Brian Taylor, head of the University of Sydney's Language Centre, told reporters in August that the government should teach newly arrived immigrants to cuss as a stimulus to acculturation. However, he said, English cussing is much "weaker" than cussing in Russian, Hungarian or Spanish.

PEOPLE WITH TOO MUCH TIME ON THEIR HANDS

—The European reported that a wildlife park in Somerset, England, booked a 60-piece symphony orchestra to serenade an elephant in order to encourage him to mate with one of the five females that have been available to him for several months but in which he had not shown interest. Cost: about $18,000.

—The most popular video in Sweden earlier this year was a 60-minute fireplace fire, shown from the point of ignition until it burns into cinders, and featuring a sound track of fire-crackling wood. Price: about $35.

—Library officials in Sidney, a town north of Victoria, British Columbia, report that a "mystery editor" has been stalking the library this year, compulsively "correcting" text of which he disapproves. For example, long notes hand-written in margins of books explain why "the British Isles" is not the same thing as "Great Britain."

—As of July, the Pentagon has awarded nearly 4 million National Defense Service Medals for work in Desert Shield and Desert Storm, even though only 500,000 troops actually served in the Persian Gulf. The medal will be routinely awarded to everyone in uniform until the conflict officially ends.

—Recently arrived on the market is a new computer toy, SimAnt, whose purpose is to put players in charge of an ant colony. The goal is to conquer a suburban back yard and drive the residents from their home. Says the advertising brochure, "SimAnt is more than just a game. It's a way of life."

THE WEIRDO AMERICAN COMMUNITY

A 22-year-old man, discharged from the U.S. Army on Aug. 3, showed up at a day-care center in Escondido, Calif., on Aug. 6, wearing a wet diaper under his jeans and a note pinned to his shirt stating that he was retarded and asking that someone change the diaper. At first, center personnel took the note at face value, but they called police when they noticed that the man had become aroused by the diaper change.

In March, Steven A. DeFoor was arrested in Warren, Ohio, moments after allegedly robbing a downtown Bank One branch. According to police, DeFoor planned to exit the bank building through an elevator. However, DeFoor incorrectly assumed it was an automatic elevator. Actually, the elevator operator had stepped down the hall to help move some furniture. As DeFoor waited in the elevator for the door to close, bank employees pointed him out to arriving officers.

Jr. Bobcats defeat Osborne on late TD by Keathley

The Sandy Valley Bobcats elementary football team took on a previously unbeaten Osborne Eagles team this past Wednesday evening at the Lloyd Hamilton Field on the campus of Betsy Layne High School.

The younger Bobcats were very impressive in the outing coming away with a 20-16 win for their first win of the season.

Richard Keathley's 4-yard run capped a fourth quarter comeback for the Bobcats that put Sandy Valley ahead for good, although Osborne did threaten them later. Keathley carried the ball into the end zone with 4:34 left in the game.

The Bobcats took the early lead by scoring first in the initial period. Keathley crossed the goal line from 1-yard out with 2:21 left in the first period and Matt Rose ran the conversion play for an 8-0 Sandy Valley lead.

Craig Hamilton, who rushed for 117 yards on 20 carries, scored in the second quarter on a 6-yard run with 2:16 left in the first half to put the Bobcats in front 14-0.

The Eagles were not ready to throw in the towel as they put together a good drive of their own. Eagle quarterback Scott Johnson (remember the name) hit Richard Johnson with a 43-yard touchdown pass with 21 seconds remaining in the first half and then Johnson connected up with Brian Triplett for the two-point conversion pass to make it a 16-8 ball game as the half ended.

On the strong throwing arm of Johnson, the Eagles were able to score early in the third period to take their first lead at 16-14. The Eagles drove the ball 56 yards on 15 plays that was accumulated by Richard Johnson's 32-yard touchdown run with 5:28 left. Scott Johnson hit Chris Isaac with the conversion play.

Sandy Valley took control of the football near the end of the third period on their own 41-yard line. The situation looked grim for the young Bobcats as Hamilton was spilled for a loss of 3 yards. But a 15-yard penalty on the Eagles placed the ball in Eagle territory on the 46.

Keathley picked up a 4-yard gainer with Hamilton duplicating the feat.

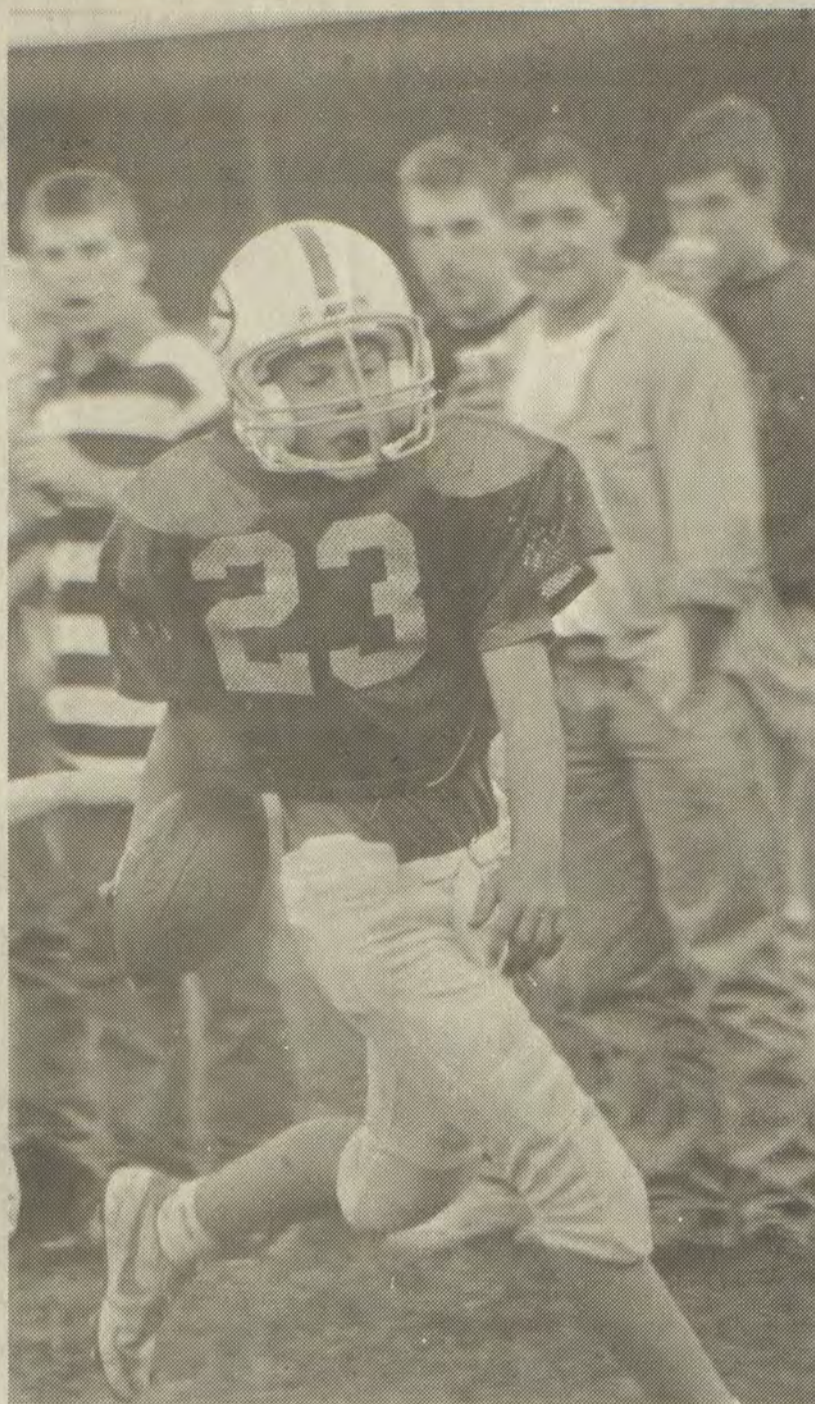

On the strong throwing arm of Johnson, the Eagles were able to score early in the third period to take their first lead at 16-14.

The Eagles defense nailed Jarred Newsome behind the line of scrimmage for a loss of 2 yards to bring up long yardage for the Bobcats as the clock was running.

Hamilton picked up some valuable real estate with a pick up of 20 yards on the next two plays and a Sandy Valley first down, moving the football to the Osborne 15. Keathley ran the ball for some short yardage to the 13, but Hamilton was thrown for a loss nullifying Keathley's gainer. With the ball resting on the 15, Newsome busted through the Eagles' defense before being hauled down on the 4-yard line. On the next play, Keathley gave the Bobcats the lead for good on his 4-yard run.

Osborne took the football with just over four minutes remaining and moved the ball to the Bobcats' 30-yard line; but the drive stalled out and the Bobcats held on for their first win of the season.

Prestonsburg and Sheldon Clark to battle for district title tonight

Did the heading catch your eye? Will the matchup between the Sheldon Clark Cardinals and Prestonsburg Blackcats actually be the District 2 title game? The two powerhouses meet tonight at the Prestonsburg Field at 8 p.m. and all area fans are saying that the winner of this one will take home the district championship.

Prestonsburg, last year's district title holder, burst the Cardinal's bubble last year when the two clubs met at Inez. Sheldon Clark was off to the same kind of start they are enjoying this year — unbeaten. The Cards place Shelby Valley (3-1) and then the Cards will close the season against Betsy Layne (0-6) in a non-district game.

Both coaches will tell you that anything can happen in the game of football. So neither coach will be looking beyond this one game even though the fans are. Area fans have the winner of tonight's game as champions and the loser as second place finishers in the district.

The only two common foes either team has played thus far this year has been Whitesburg and Magoffin County. Sheldon Clark opened with the Whitesburg Yellow Jackets on the road and escaped with a win after coming from behind in the fourth period. Prestonsburg, on the other hand, handled Whitesburg rather easily, posting a 42-18 win. Both teams had their way against Magoffin County.

Some will argue that the quality of the schedule makes a difference in how this game fares. Sheldon Clark, while not playing the non-district teams that possesses a lot of talent, is still an explosive team. Prestonsburg

Both of Prestonsburg's remaining games are district contests with one at home (Morgan County) and one on the road (M.C. Napier). Sheldon Clark has two remaining games and they must travel to third

Allen Central to travel to W'wright for Trojans final home game on senior night

Hold on to your hat. There is yet another bowl game to be played. This time it will be the inaugural Red, White and Blue Bowl between county rivals Allen Central and Wheelwright. But next season, with the consolidation of Wheelwright and McDowell, the rivalry will continue.

"We'll continue it," said Allen Central coach Dewey Jamerson, "because Donnie (Daniels) will be there at the new school. He was out looking for an old beer barrel and was going to have the art class paint it. The winner will take it home."

The Rebels will travel to Wheelwright tonight to help the Trojans close out their 1992 home schedule in what might well prove to be a big district game for coach Donnie Daniels' ballclub.

Allen Central (1-6) coach Dewey Jamerson would like to keep his team's modest one-game winning streak alive, although they are out of district contention this season. The last game the Rebels played was almost two weeks ago when they

... if I had a dollar for every hour I have spent on that field I wouldn't have to coach to supplement my income.
—Dewey Jamerson

posted a win over Betsy Layne. "I want us to play good tonight," said Jamerson, "and that would give us three straight, good games. A win over Wheelwright would be better. A good game against them would carry over to our game against Magoffin County next week." Jamerson said that tonight's game would be the cap on his team's season. "It will be the key to the second half," he explained. "We still have (See Senior Night, B 6)

W'Wright flag football enjoying second season

Some have never played the game of football before but are just glad to be able to get on the field. Some don't even know the way to run once they have the ball. Some get all confused and run in the opposite direction. So goes flag football for the very young.

Pop Warner and other flag football leagues are gaining popularity very fast here in Floyd County as the Wheelwright league enters its second season. Roy Harlow, director of the Left Beaver league, says that it has been a good year for the kids and the league.

"We have tripled in numbers over what we started with last year," said Harlow. "We have about 130 kids this year including cheerleaders for each team."

The Wheelwright league is not a sanctioned Pop Warner League, but plays by the same rules. The league runs from kindergarten to fourth grade and the play style is flag football where there is no tackling. No stats or results are kept.

"We're just out there to teach the kids how to play," said Harlow who coaches the Broncos. "Now, some (See Flag Football, B 5)

A Look At Sports

by Ed Taylor, Sports Editor

VIEWPOINT BY JAMERSON...

In a recent interview with Allen Central coach Dewey Jamerson, he related to me an incident that happened at Wheelwright when he played football for the Trojans.

"I was a junior in high school and we were playing Lewis County," related the former Trojan. "The score was 0-0 and we were on our own 30-yard line. On a running play, I popped to the outside and I'm gone — up the sideline. I looked back to see where the defense was and there was no one in front of me at the time. When I looked forward again, there stood a man who was drunk in front of me pointing his finger and I'm not expecting anyone to be there.

"I'm startled. And when I tried to move around him I hooked my foot on his leg, fell three or four more yards and fell down. We went to the locker room tied at halftime."

Jamerson said that he was asked about the situation five times during his visit to Wheelwright for the Trojan's homecoming game last Friday. He said the incident appeared in the Lexington papers, and the paper said: "It could only happen in Wheelwright."

"It wasn't funny at the time but it is now," laughed Jamerson. "I was wide open for a touchdown and he stepped in front of me."

Jamerson related about taking his team to Wheelwright and being part of the final game at Brackett Field. "I was an eighth grader. I played for the varsity and the first game I played in was against Lynch," said Jamerson. "We ran a reverse play and when I turned with the football there was a 6' 8" defensive player in front of me. When he hit me, I ended up in the end zone. I mean I went flying into the end zone."

It will be an emotional time for football fans, coaches and players alike when the Trojans, supposingly, will play their last home game as the Wheelwright Trojans.

ELEMENTARY COACHES TAKE NOTE...

We are currently beginning to make out our grade school basketball schedule of games to cover for the upcoming season next month. We need all the grade school schedules sent to us ASAP if you want your team's games included on our schedule.

Also, we are not able to cover all games personally, and we wish you would report your games to us so that we can include them in the sports section. Special game sheets will be provided to you if you need them. We need all high school basketball as well as junior varsity and freshmen schedules for boys and girls.

TWO BIG GAMES IN THE COUNTY...

I wish that all Prestonsburg and Wheelwright fans will crowd their team's stadium in support of these two teams that are playing big games tonight.

Prestonsburg faces Sheldon Clark, the tenth rated AA school, and Wheelwright will take on the Allen Central Rebels. The game for Wheelwright is very important as the Trojans are vying for a playoff berth.

Prestonsburg seems locked in but would love to post a win over the Cardinals in tonight's district game.

SCHEDULING SEEMS TO MAKE NO DIFFERENCE...

To the guru's upstate when it comes to making out their top ten list. The Sheldon Clark Cardinals were tied for the number ten spot in this week's latest poll.

One only has to look at who the Cardinals have played this year in running up a 7-0 overall record and 4-0 in district play. The quality teams are certainly missing.

When voting on these teams, it seems that the quality of scheduling should be considered, but evidently not. Prestonsburg's schedule has to be rated as one of the toughest played in 2A football.

While we are not trying to take anything away from the Cardinals, and they are a fine football team, the conclusion is evident — they have not played anyone this year.

Here is their non-district schedule. Tug Valley, Allen Central and Betsy Layne. Now, this is no slap at these three teams, but the Cardinals could have played other teams.

(See A Look At Sports, B 7)

Valley will not be an easy one for the Cards. The Wildcats are a different team on their own turf. Still, Prestonsburg won easily over Shelby Valley.

While all the "Who played who" or "What competition was the best in previous games" may be discussed over and over again, one thing remains true. Football games are decided on the field and there is no doubt in anyone's mind that these two teams are the District 2 best. Both can play football.

The Cardinals have a very talented backfield in Brad Tiller, Donnie Slone and Ray Collins.

Tiller is the talk of the region and ranks third in the state in scoring. The Cardinals have put some points on the scoreboard leading the state with 45.3 ppg. Collins is a hard running fullback, who with Slone, gives the Cardinals all the ground game they need.

Jesse Watts, who had a record setting performance against Allen Central last season, will find the secondary of Prestonsburg a little tougher than what he has thrown against so far this season.

Roaming the defensive backfield for Prestonsburg will be Glen May, Seth Hyden and Aaron Tucker and frequently Thomas Ratliff who, as a sophomore, has been very impressive there.

On the receiving end for the Cardinals will be Jason Pinson, Brian Damron and Bruce Stepp and all three can expect some very good down field coverage.

When opposing coaches are questioned about the Prestonsburg offense, right away you hear the names of Seth Hyden and Dwayne Garza come from their lips. And opposing coaches will readily agree that the two are a duo that is hard to stop. In fact, some coaches will go as far as to admit that you can't stop them, only slow them down.

There is no doubt that Aaron Tucker is one of the top signal callers in the region. He is so versatile and his knowledge of the game makes him another coach on the field.

While the Cardinals' offensive line has been suspect this year, they may find some heavy weights on the Blackcats defensive line. Led by Brian Horn, the Cats have their biggest line in years. Bill Bottoms, Dickie Johnson and Kevin Farthing put some good size on the line. 'Super soph' Larry Morris continues to play all over the field on defense.

But when it comes to defense for the Blackcats, one name quickly comes to mind and that is Todd Clark. Clark is Mr. Consistent on defense, getting a season high of 14 tackles against Shelby Valley. Clark plays one of the linebacker positions for the Cats along with Brad Wells and Garza. One linebacker who has certainly come on strong and who is having a good year defensively is Joey Nunn.

When the Cardinals come to town tonight, Coach Jim Matney will have only one thing on his mind and that is to avenge last year's loss to the Blackcats. If that happens, then the district title will be his. If not, then Prestonsburg should go on to repeat performance and still another district title.

Prestonsburg's (9-1) only loss has come at the hands of the mighty Belfry Pirates who are currently ranked 20th in the state.

"Catch me if you can!"

take it seriously and want to win. I want to win but the important thing is to teach the kids at this age."

Three teams make up the league which includes the Bears and Giants as well as the Broncos.

"One team plays twice every third week," said the Wheelwright league director. "We'll let the little ones play the first quarter of the game and then the A and B squad will play the second."

Each team had their own cheerleaders and sponsors. Harlow praised the efforts of each sponsor for the time they put into the program. Jena Hall heads up the Broncos' cheerleaders while Debbie Ray sponsors the Giants' yell leaders. Karen Williams leads the Bears cheerleaders.

Harlow said that the league is self-supporting, depending on gate receipts and concession stand sales for revenue. "We have a $10 registration fee that we charged each player. That went to buy their jerseys," explained Harlow. "Of course, some kids were not able to pay the $10 but they got to play anyway. We had some parents who bought two shirts. We won't turn any child away from playing."

Harlow said that league treasurer, Anna Ruth Thomsbury, has worked hard this season and deserves the league's thanks.

The league plays at the Wheelwright High School football field every Sunday beginning at 2 p.m. The field is marked down to just an 80-yard field.

This Sunday, the Broncos will face the Giants in a 2 p.m. start, with the Broncos coming back and playing the Bears at 3 p.m.

Senior Night

Magoffin and Phelps to play yet and a possible two wins."

This is an ideal finale for the Trojans in that both Daniels and Jamerson are former Wheelwright players. Also their fathers, Shorty Jamerson and Don Daniels, are former Wheelwright coaches.

"We are going to get a plaque and the winner each year will take it and keep for that year. The plaque will be engraved with the winner's name each time," explained Daniels.

"I'm just glad that I am going to be part of the final game at Wheelwright," said the Allen Central coach, who has many memories of the Wheelwright school and community. "Really, I haven't thought too much about the game with so much going on up here at school as well as in my private life. I'm tickled that I am going to be involved in their final home game."

Wheelwright (4-3), which snapped a three-game losing streak this past Friday night with a win over the Kentucky School for the Deaf, will be looking for several firsts in their remaining three games. The Trojans would love to complete the final year of Trojan football with a winning season. That will require at least two wins in their final three games.

"It's going to be a big game for Donnie and Wheelwright," the Allen Central mentor said. "It's going to be senior and parent night, and it is also a must-win game for them for a playoff berth."

Jamerson said that when it gets game time then the emotions will take over and he really dreads to see the game start. Jamerson said that the final horn will be worse than the first.

"I have told people that if I had a dollar for every hour I have spent on that field I wouldn't have to coach to supplement my income," Jamerson said. "I spent time there as a player in baseball, track and football plus all the hours that I went there with my dad (Shorty Jamerson) when he coached at Wheelwright."

After Allen Central the Trojans will travel to Ironton, Ohio before finishing the season on the road against Elkhorn City. That would be a first in a long time for a Wheelwright football program.

Again, the Trojans need to win their final two district games (Allen Central and Elkhorn City) to keep alive any hopes for a playoff berth this season. Wheelwright is currently 2-3 in the district after jumping out to a 2-0 mark. To be one of the top four district teams the Trojans must finish 4-3 to place either third or fourth.

The third and fourth positions will find four teams (Wheelwright, Elkhorn City, Phelps, Jenkins) battling for the final two spots since Fleming-Neon and Pikeville have locked up positions. Elkhorn City plays at Phelps tonight and Jenkins entertains Johns Creek. Jenkins then gets into the meat of their schedule as they must face Whitesburg and Fleming-Neon in their final two games. Phelps must face Fleming-Neon next week.

For the Rebels, a district title is far from this young team's mind. But a win over the mighty Trojans would go a long way in making it a sweet season for Allen Central. Remaining on the Rebels' schedule is Magoffin County (0-7) on the road and Phelps (4-3) at home.

The Rebels have shown to be an improved ballclub since the season started. Mainly because of the improved running of Dave Gilliam, Kevin Patton and one Glenn Floyd. They will carry the ball the biggest percentage of the time with Floyd getting the call occasionally. Floyd has certainly been a work horse out of the Rebel's backfield doubling some at tight end.

Brad Blackburn has had his problems throwing the football this season but has shown some strong leadership though he is just a sophomore. The Rebels will be playing without the services of two starters — Austin Shelton and Dan Stumbo — as both players have been suspended from one game.

Wheelwright on the other hand is a strong ballclub all the way around. Offensively, they are led by Arnold Adams, a big, hard running fullback who has led Wheelwright all season. Add probably the quickest back in the area, Muntu Oden, and you have a very fast Trojan backfield.

Wheelwright quarterback Steven Shelton will want to make a good showing in the Trojan's final home game and may find the Rebels secondary to his liking. Charles Johnson will be on receiving end for Shelton and Rodney Jackson on the other.

Defensively, for Wheelwright, Todd Daniels has had a good season along with John Caudill, Steven Bates and Merlin Isaac. The offensive line for the Trojans has Shannon McKinney, Derek Little and Daniels.

Jamerson, like many, still wonders if this will actually be the final year of the Trojans after all the talk last year.

"Last year it was supposed to have been the final basketball game at Wheelwright and it didn't happen. You have to wonder if this will be the final year."

This game is scheduled to ring down the curtain on the Wheelwright Trojan's football program as we have known it. For those of us who have never been connected that closely with the program, we cannot really understand the emotional side that countless number of Wheelwright alumni, teachers, and players will experience if indeed this is the final year.

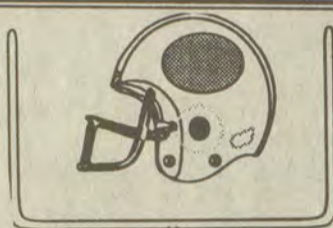

Though Wheelwright is seemingly secluded in the outer limits of Floyd County, you will not meet a finer, kinder and friendlier group of people than you will find there and at the Wheelwright High School.

Threatening to score!

"Big possums travel late," says Times publisher Scott Perry who just enjoyed another 10-2 week that vaulted him to the top level in this week's picks.

On the college scene, Kentucky makes a return after a week off but again it's on the road for the Wildcats where they have failed to win. Look for the Cats to fall in Bengal country. On the high school level, Prestonsburg is picked to win over Sheldon Clark but in a close contest. Wheelwright will prevail. Everyone is fearful of the pro ranks with all the upsets. Cleveland should win along with Minnesota.

But let's root the Blackcats and Trojans on in the playoffs. HAPPY BIRTHDAY TO... Nikki Mullins of McDowell. Nikki just turned 18 years old. Study Shows Prenatal Care And Education Could Save Infants' Lives

Two recently released studies, conducted by Cigna Corporation, reveal that problem births—involving preterm delivery or other significant health problems for newborns—cost American business billions of dollars a year at a time when more effective prenatal care could save lives and lower that bill.

Within their own health benefits programs, American businesses and their employees will pay an estimated $5.6 billion in health care costs for mothers and infants. A surprising one out of 22 pregnancies results in severe health problems. American businesses will pay more than an estimated $4 billion this year for uncompensated health care costs incurred by America's poorest mothers and their newborn babies.

According to one of the studies, conducted by Georgia State University, approximately one out of every four of the babies born to insured women had health problems ranging from mild to severe. If the rate of poor birth outcomes had been 12 percent rather than 25 percent, the total costs of maternal and infant care would have dropped ten percent—an annual savings of nearly $3 billion.

Further analysis showed four and one-half percent of these infants had very severe health problems—ranging from respiratory distress syndrome to extreme immaturity—primarily caused by a premature birth. Eight percent of these infants had moderate problems—ranging from perinatal infections to respiratory illnesses. The studies suggest that increased access to strong prenatal education and care programs for all women will ultimately save billions of dollars, and more importantly, save thousands of infants' lives.

Nationwide, the uncompensated costs for maternal and infant health care are estimated to be $4 billion this year.

It was found that on average these problem births cost about $20,500 for prenatal, delivery and post-delivery care for the infants and their mothers, slightly more than double the cost associated with their healthy counterparts.

The study highlights the need for employers to move beyond simply providing coverage. Increased access to prenatal care and education programs for all women will ultimately save billions of dollars, and more importantly, saves thousands of infants' lives.

Barbecuing Is Anytime

Whether you're picnicking in the Rockies, sailing on the Eastern shore, or hanging out in the South, the cookout remains an American institution. Here's a recipe where just a splash of Harp Lager transforms it from the ordinary to something special. It's a leap from fast-food to the romance of the bistro.

Harp Splash Burger

- 2 lbs. ground beef
 - 2 tbsp. green minced onions
 - 1 tbsp. fresh chopped parsley
 - 2 tbsp. Dijon mustard
 - 2 tbsp. Harp Lager
 - salt and pepper to taste
- In a large bowl, combine the beef with Dijon mustard, onions, parsley, beer, salt and pepper. Mix well and shape into six patties about 1-inch thick. Grill for about 7 minutes for medium-rare, turning once. For a special touch, serve on toasted sourdough dinner rolls with more Dijon mustard and tiny pickles. Serves 6

Guinness "Stout With Clout" Grilling Sauce

Simply thin your favorite salsa with Guinness Stout and add a couple of tablespoons of vegetable oil for a lightning quick grilling sauce. For the truly Stout-hearted, add one or two teaspoons of Louisiana hot sauce to a bottle of Guinness Stout for a marinade with a true Texas kick. Use when grilling steak or chicken.

- Global Barbecue Sauce 1
- 12 oz. bottle Bass Ale
- 1/4 cup fresh lime juice (2 to 3 limes)
- 2 or 3 jalapeño peppers, finely chopped
- 3 cloves garlic, minced
- 4 tbsp. light soy sauce
- 1/4 cup vegetable oil
- 4 chicken breasts, skinless

In a large non-metallic bowl combine Bass Ale with lime juice, peppers, garlic, soy sauce and oil. Add chicken and marinate for at least an hour at room temperature or longer in the refrigerator. Grill over medium heat for about 15 minutes turning frequently and basting with remaining marinade. Be careful not to overcook.

Note: This sauce will work beautifully for Mexican fajitas, for an Oriental dinner with rice and stir-fried veggies, or a Mediterranean evening with pasta or gratin potatoes.
