Pikeville woman injured :

Ratliff dies in car crash

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A Floyd County woman was killed Wednesday morning in a two-car accident at Stanville.

Betty S. Ratliff, 56, of Stanville, was killed just after 7 a.m. Wednesday when the car she was driving pulled into the path of a vehicle driven by Carolyn J. Bevins, 44, of Pikeville, according to a police report.

A Kentucky State Police report said that Bevins was traveling north on U.S. 23 and Ratliff, who was attempting to pull onto U.S. 23 from Mare Creek Road, pulled into the path of Bevins' vehicle.

Ratliff was pronounced dead at the scene by Floyd County Coroner Roger Nelson.

Bevins and the passenger in her vehicle were transported to the Methodist Hospital in Pikeville where they were treated and released.

Police said seat belts were in use in both vehicles and air bags deployed in the Bevins vehicle.

Responding to the scene were members of the Floyd County Sheriff's Department, Betsy Layne Volunteer Fire Department and Respond Ambulance Service.

The accident is under investigation and is being reconstructed by KSP trooper Scott Hazlette.

Ratliff is survived by her husband, John Graham Ratliff; a son, Joseph Fred Schmidt of Richfield, Idaho; and a brother, Fred Douglas Schmidt of Chicago, Illinois.

Funeral services will be Saturday, August 7 at 2 p.m. at the Perry A. Justice Memorial Chapel at the Justice Funeral Home in Pikeville with Roger Shepherd officiating. Burial will be made in Davidson Memorial Gardens at Ivel.

Knott man killed in roof fall

A roof fall at a Knott County coal mine near the Floyd County border claimed the life of an Eastern Kentucky man Wednesday.

According to reports issued by the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals, 31-year-old Leon Hall, of Topmost, was killed Wednesday at the Brimstone Number 1 mine at Kite when a nine feet long, 3.5 feet wide and one foot thick portion of rock fell from between two roof bolts, landing on Hall's chest as he rode a shuttle car out of the shaft.

The accident happened at around 11:15 a.m. Hall was pronounced dead at 12:40 p.m. at the Appalachian Regional Hospital in McDowell.

Fire marshal nixes Auxier folk festival

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

Legal battles and intervention by the state fire marshal have at least temporarily postponed one of Floyd County's oldest and most time-honored summer tourist events.

Auxier's annual Pioneer Folk Festival, formerly known as the Sadie Hawkins Festival, draws hundreds of visitors each year. Although the event was slated to be conducted this month, it has now been tentatively rescheduled for December.

Robert D. "Bobby" Castle, one of the organizers of the event, said Thursday that the festival was postponed in part because the Floyd Fiscal Court had, based on a fire marshal's recommendation, ruled that power boxes at Auxier Park were unsafe and inadequate to provide electricity for the festival's events and should be removed.

Further compounding the problems, Castle said, the fiscal court is also considering a request from an Auxier resident to close a portion of Richmond Avenue, one of the community's major thoroughfares.

However, Castle said, he and members of the Auxier Historical Society and other Auxier residents are trying to raise the funds for an adequate power supply and plan to petition the fiscal court for aid in placing new conduits at the park.

Auxier's Pioneer Folk Festival has tentatively been scheduled for December 10, 11 and 12.

Betsy Layne group to meet with board

Concerned citizens from Betsy Layne are scheduled to meet with Floyd County School Board members Tuesday, August 10 at 6 p.m. at Betsy Layne Elementary.

Citizens want to voice their concerns and ask board members questions about their decision last month to cancel a 21-classroom addition at the school.

Akers recalls incident

Bus driver aide, Betty Akers, describes to a Floyd County Jury a November 1991 incident on a school bus which allegedly injured a Betsy Layne student. The student, Tammy Hunt, sued the Floyd County Board of Education for injuries she claims she received in the incident. The trial began Thursday. (photo by Susan Allen)

Faulty lift blamed for student's injuries

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Testimony is scheduled to resume at noon today (Friday) in a civil case between a 17-year-old student and the Floyd County Board of Education.

Tammy Hunt sued the school board after she allegedly was trapped in a school bus lift in November 1991 for approximately 20 minutes. Hunt, who has muscular dystrophy, and her mother, Doris Hunt who drove the bus, claim the school system's transportation department failed to correct reported problems with the lift.

In opening arguments Thursday, Hunt's attorney, Ned Pillersdorf, said that because of the incident the girl's neck was twisted and that her ability to walk for short distances has been impaired. The attorney claimed that transportation department employees failed to make a conscientious effort to repair the bus lift.

"Tammy's mother, Doris Hunt, and Betty Akers reported problems with the lift to various representatives of the school board," Pillersdorf said. "They were made aware and given notice of the problems with the lift. Representatives of the board responded to the complaints. (Mechanic) Jeff Campbell looked at the lift, but he doesn't have any particular expertise with these lifts. It's not a typical piece of equipment."

"On November 5, 1991, Tammy was put into the bus in route to Betsy Layne High School," Pillersdorf continued. "When she was being helped out of the bus, the lift, instead of coming out and going down, it went out and up. It rammed her head into the top of the van and her neck was twisted. She was caught like a bird in a bird cage."

Defense attorney Sandra Spurgeon argued that the school's transportation department responded to every complaint made concerning the bus lift and that the mechanics were qualified to work on the mechanism. She said Tammy Hunt was not permanently injured and suffered only a neck sprain.

"Her condition pre-existed and was not caused by the accident," Spurgeon told the jury. "Tammy was taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center after the accident and was x-rayed. There were no broken bones;

Towler said concerns raised a year ago :

OEA handed school probe

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

State officials are continuing an investigation into allegations of improper spending in the Floyd County Head Start program.

Head Start director Janie Bailey and bookkeeper Ruth DeRossett were suspended without pay last week following a week-long investigation into the program by local school officials, the state's Office of Education Accountability (OEA) and officials with the Big Sandy Community Action Program, which administers Head Start programs in the Big Sandy region.

Floyd superintendent Steve Towler said Tuesday that the investigation has been turned over to OEA and a report on the probe is expected within 30 days.

"We are not actively doing any work ourselves," Towler said Tuesday. "We are relying on the OEA. If they determine they are not going to do anything else, we'll probably wait to see their report before we make a final decision."

Towler also said Tuesday that former assistant superintendent Pete Grigsby Jr., who supervised the Head Start program, had "mentioned concerns about travel expenses" in the program last July.

"I don't know the details about past problems," Towler said. "I do know when I first came here a year ago, Mr. Grigsby mentioned some concerns he had, immediately, right there. It had to do with some travel and so forth. But, there was never really any formal investigation or any formal report done at that point. The year went along without any other serious problems that I was aware of. And, then toward the end, I heard some (things) that had to do with another meeting or so. Then someone mentioned a credit card and I didn't know about that. One thing led to another and I thought we needed to check the whole thing out."

Grigsby said last week that he had initiated the in-house investigation in May after "a large bill came across" his desk concerning trips made by Head Start personnel. He said questions over the May expenses were

McKenzie shot after dispute

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

A Prestonsburg man remains in a West Virginia hospital following multiple surgeries for three gunshot wounds suffered in an altercation Saturday evening.

According to a report issued by the Pikeville Post of the Kentucky State Police, 21-year-old Mark McKenzie was shot in the forearm, back and chest after allegedly arguing with Raymond Lee Carroll, 34, at Carroll's West Prestonsburg residence.

McKenzie was taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center and later transferred to Cabell-Huntington Hospital in West Virginia.

A spokesperson for Cabell-Huntington said Thursday that McKenzie's condition has been upgraded to fair.

Carroll was charged with first degree assault and lodged in the Floyd County Jail pending ten percent of a $15,000 cash bond.

Street level drug dealers targeted :

Multi-county drug task force formed

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Regional law enforcement officers met Thursday at May Lodge to receive a $134,000 grant presented by Justice Cabinet Commissioner Billy Wellman for the formation of a Mountain Area Drug Task Force.

Sheriffs and chiefs of police from six counties and two cities will be the governing body for the task force which will target street level drug dealers. Local agencies contributed $44,000 in matching monies for the task force to be added to the federal grant for a total of $178,000.

Floyd, Knott, Magoffin, Pike, Perry and Letcher counties along with the cities of Prestonsburg and Hazard will be represented on the task force.

Wellman told officers Thursday that cooperation is the key to have an effective task force and equipment used by the Governor's Marijuana Task Force would be made available to the group.

"By working together, there's nothing we can't accomplish," Wellman said. "One of the greatest things we can do is combine our resources. We've got the assets available to assist you. It's a team effort. We're sending notice to those involved with drugs that we're after the users, sellers and growers."

Wellman told officers that as a result of an audit of another task force, the group needs to maintain accountability and to maintain unity.

"I encourage you to be accountable with inventory and equipment," Wellman said. "Equipment needs to be made available to the task force, not just one department. You can't let one county dominate the task force in days to come. It could cause dissension. I don't anticipate problems with the groups as there have been with others."

Wellman also advised the group that the Kentucky State Police are willing to work with the task force and he asked the task force to offer their cooperation.

Teacher given "golden apple"

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

Reba Sue Hammond, a teacher at Betsy Layne High School, knows from experience what it is like to be a high school dropout.

Married at 14, she quit school. However, she soon realized that a lack of education was a financial dead end. She returned to school at 16 and graduated from college at 19. As a teacher, this experience and her enthusiasm for education have inspired many of her "at risk" students to finish high school and pursue vocational job training.

Her work also has caught the eye of a teacher recognition award program.

She was recently named an Ashland Oil 1993 Golden Apple Teacher Achiever Award winner for excellence in teaching. Eleven thousand teachers from four participating states (Kentucky, Minnesota, Ohio and West Virginia) were nominated for the honor. Hammond was one of 156 selected.

Hammond, a teacher for the federal Job Training Partnership Act program (JTPA), was nominated by Betsy Layne principal Al Osborne for her teaching efforts in the Project Esteem program. The program is designed to prevent "at risk" students from dropping out of school.

Each nominee was judged on a portfolio submitted to a panel of educators. Portfolios included essays describing the teacher's teaching methods, teaching as a profession, teaching philosophy, educational development/professional achievement and community service.

Hammond, a native of Prestonsburg, said she didn't really intend to teach, but "fell into it."

She graduated from Morehead State University with a degree in law and accounting with a minor

Two of Times staff say adieu

Two members of the Floyd County Times editorial staff will be moving on after this issue.

Staff writer Geoff Belcher exits after an eighteen-month reporting stint at the Times. Belcher will be the new editor of The Big Sandy News in Louisa. His two columns, "Ask Dr. Bubba" and "Truth, Justice and the American Way" will continue to run in the Times.

Editorial assistant and "Solitaire" writer Mike Rosenberg takes his leave after working on and off with the Times for the last four years. Rosenberg will be pursuing a master's degree in Higher Education at the University of Arizona on Tucson.

in English and social studies. After a brief stint with the IRS, she was offered a high school teaching position in vocational education at a Louisville school. Soon she was hooked on teaching. She was voted teacher of the year and she was also the first woman to become president of Louisville City Schools' Vocational Association. From September 1985 until this past school year, she taught English at Betsy Layne High School.

In preparation for her job as JTPA teacher and for the self-esteem project, she has taken workshops in dropout prevention, self-esteem, and drug abuse prevention.

Hammond believes that the secret to success in any field, especially teaching, is enthusiasm. "Enthusiasm, or the lack of it, shows through our students," she wrote in her philosophy essay titled "The Enthusiastic Teacher". "Enthusiasm is contagious..."

"Teaching makes me feel that I'm accomplishing good and great things for my life and others as well," she added. "I feel the most important thing I do for my students is give them the desire to learn and succeed in every area of their lives and not just in school..."

In the JTPA program, she wrote that she "works on individual student needs and learning styles by having conferences with my students, teach them what they are interested in and are best able to do in the job market."

She did that this past year through individual student aptitude testing, teaching basic reading, math and computer skills, and through cooperative learning ventures with local businesses.

Hammond compared her work as a teacher to that of a gardener. "It's like putting a garden out and you sow and sow and sow and think that you will never reap anything and one day you do reap. You reap all these awards. And I saw kids who wanted to quit school and then they didn't."

Osborne is pleased his nominee has been recognized. "Anytime you can give recognition to a staff member, the entire staff benefits...She can be proud of what she has accomplished and the school and the school system can be proud of her."

State to conduct flood management workshops

The Kentucky Division of Water will conduct two workshops in Prestonsburg on Floodplain Management, the National Flood Insurance Program and the Community Rating System during September.

These workshops will be conducted for local and regional officials, lending officials and insurance agents interested in reducing flood losses and flood insurance premiums in their communities.

The workshop will be held September 27 at Jenny Wiley State Park. The community rating system begins at 8:30 a.m. and concludes at 11:30 a.m. The National Flood Insurance segment of the workshop will be held from 1-4:30 p.m.

The National Flood Insurance Program workshops will focus on state and local floodplain management programs, issuing floodplain development permits and administering local Flood Damage Prevention Ordinances.

The Community Rating System (CRS) workshops main focus is toward city and county officials implementing floodplain management and flood damage reduction programs. CRS uses an insurance rate schedule patterned after the fire rating schedules. Communities wishing to reduce insurance rates for their citizens are urged to attend. Manuals and applications will be available at the workshops.

Workshops No. 2, Community Rating System: September 27, 8:30-11:30 a.m., Jenny Wiley State Park. For more information or registration, contact Division of Water, Water Resources Branch, Floodplain Management Section, 14 Reilly Road, Frankfort, KY 40601, Phone: (502) 564-3410.

Childbirth classes at Our Lady of the Way Hospital

Our Lady of the Way Hospital, in collaboration with the Big Sandy Family and Childbirth Education Association, will begin the next series of six weekly Childbirth Education Classes on Monday, August 23, at Seton Complex from 6:30-8:30 p.m. The series will run through September 27.

The following series will begin on October 4. A maximum of ten registrants will be accepted for the series. In order to secure a place in the class it is recommended that you register immediately. Interested couples or individuals may register for the series that will begin August 23 or October 4, by contacting the Community Health Education Office at 285-5181, Ext. 388 for more information.

The Brimstone mine is operated by the Shipyard River Coal and Terminal Company, doing business as Knott County Mining.

Gene Atkisson, legal counsel for the Department of Mines and Minerals, told reporters Wednesday that the incident was especially troubling because the state has now recorded nine mine fatalities since January 1, 1993. Only nine people were killed in Kentucky mines in all of 1992, Atkisson said, setting a record low for the state.

Atkisson said that although Hall's death may not be considered a fluke, it was "clearly a case of being in the wrong place at the wrong time."

"Any coal mine fatality is a matter of significant concern to us," Atkisson continued. "We remain committed to alleviating all such fatalities through vigorous inspecting and retraining programs."

According to figures compiled by the Governor's Office for Coal and Energy Police and the Kentucky Coal Association, 20 Kentucky miners were killed in mine accidents in 1990, the same as the preceding five-year average.

7th Annual Kentucky Association Reunion

The 7th Annual Kentucky Association Reunion will be held Saturday, August 21, between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. at the Anheuser Busch Park, 700 E. Schrock Road, Columbus, Ohio. Anyone interested in attending or who needs information may call Freer Martin at (614) 890-4445.

with you and be part of the program," Wellman said. "We want to be partners to enforce the law throughout Eastern Kentucky. I promise that you will get the recognition and credit that you deserve. I know that's not the most important part, but I want the Mountain Area Drug Task Force recognized."

Floyd County Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson said that the county sheriffs and chiefs of police will act as the task force board of directors to develop policy for the organization. Thompson said the individual departments would not be involved in the organization's operations.

"We will not know about the operations or who they are investigating," Thompson explained. "We will be involved in the actual bust. We will hire a director and personnel will be drawn upon from the participating agencies in the multi-county area. Agents will have six-county jurisdiction. Drug dealing doesn't stop at the county line and police jurisdiction shouldn't stop there either."

Thompson said that the task force will have a computerized intelligence data base. He added that a separate intelligence file will be maintained for each of the sheriffs and police departments involved in the task force. No one will be allowed to have access to files other than their own, Thompson said. He added that the group will have the latest in electronic equipment to conduct investigations.

The board of directors have met twice to review proposed policies for the organization, Thompson said.

Injuries

there were no lacerations. A doctor will tell you that on February 6, 1992, she complained of neck pain—three months later."

Pillersdorf claimed that people with muscular dystrophy suffer diminished muscle strength, but do not have pain. He said that Tammy Hunt did not experience any neck pain prior to being trapped in the bus lift.

"She likes to walk," Pillersdorf said. "I'm not going to tell you that she can walk great distances. She can walk for a short distance. When she walks, her head jiggles and it causes pain. She also loves to read and now she has to hold her head at an awkward angle, so she can't read as often. (The transportation department) treated the complaints with indifference and made a non-conscientious effort to fix the lift."

Spurgeon countered that the department's response to each complaint proved that they had performed their jobs and had not taken the complaints lightly.

Jurors got a look at the bus which was brought to the Floyd County Courthouse. Betty Akers, who was an aide on the bus, explained to the jury what happened when the malfunction occurred on November 5, 1991. Akers gave her testimony while standing beside the bus in front of the courthouse.

"the first irregularities" he had noticed as supervisor for the program.

Grigsby said he turned over the information he had gathered to Towler.

Towler said Tuesday that he did not receive anything "in writing" from Grigsby. He said he had received copies of some bills for the Head Start program.

"(Grigsby) did make me aware of some concerns he had," Towler said. "He gave me sort of a verbal summary, that he had some concerns. I got a copy of some bills and sort of a summary on how the questions about the bills arose."

Towler said OEA's investigation has uncovered "a bunch" of details that he didn't know about. He added that OEA will determine how much more involved the investigation will become.

"How far they go, how many more people they talk to or how thorough or how much additional work they will do... (is up to that agency)," Towler said. "OEA had two people in here last week who worked for the better part of two days. At this point, we are going to manage the Head Start program and get it open on time. Then we'll deal with the other issues for the next several weeks or so."

Head Start is a federally-funded program to provide pre-school education to under-privileged children. Over 200 students are enrolled in the Floyd County program.

Allen/Clark Speech-Language Rehabilitative Services, Inc. owners Tish Clark and Jayne Allen, both of whom have Master of Science degrees and Certified Clinical Competence certifications, counsel people who have some form of communication impairment new ways of speaking, either through physical or electronic means. Staff Writer

It's not just a job. It's an adventure.

At least, that's how speech pathologists Tish Clark and Jayne Allen, proprietors of the newly-opened Allen/Clark Speech-Language Rehabilitative Services, Incorporated, feel about their chosen profession.

Even more important, they say, it's affords them the opportunity to help those in need.

Allen and Clark, both certified members of the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association, served a brief stint as speech therapists for the Floyd County Board of Education before opening their own private practice, a step that was necessary, they say, to more adequately serve the ever-growing number of people that need their services.

And contrary to popular belief, Clark said, those services extend far beyond helping people overcome speech impediments.

"A better name for us..." Allen said, "might be 'communication facilitators'... because it's just a misconception, people have the wrong idea of what we do."

Speech pathologists today work closely with dentists, surgeons, hospitals, nursing homes, medical clinics, schools and home health agencies to help treat laryngectomy patients, stroke victims, brain-injury or coma victims, people with birth defects, hearing defects, nerve damage, stutters or people with cleft palates, phonological disorders or other similar impairments.

"The demand still by far outweighs the number of (pathologists) out there..." Allen said. "It's so broad that it's almost getting to where there'll be a need to specialize."

"There's so many people we can help," Allen said, "and I guess that's what makes me enjoy it so much."

Allen and Clark are based in the Martin Professional Building in downtown Martin. They will host an open house at their new clinic today, Friday. The event is open to the public.

Their services are eligible for many insurance policy plans.

For more information, please contact Jayne Allen, M.S., CCC or Tish Clark, M.S. CCC at 285-0925.

Corporate filing deadline extended

Corporations in Floyd County that missed the June 30 deadline to file their annual reports have a reprieve until October 30, according to Secretary of State Bob Babbage.

A total of 19,772 corporations are classified in "bad standing" for failure to file their required reports by the June 30 deadline. A total of 60,271 corporations met the filing deadline.

The corporate annual report is required by law and is sent to each corporation at the address given by the corporation as its principal office address. The annual reports are mailed by the Secretary of State's office between January and May annually.

When a corporation misses the filing deadline, a 60-day notice of pending revocation is mailed to the registered office address. Failure to file the annual report within the 60-day time period results in administrative dissolution of the corporation.

A change in the registered office or registered agent must be on the forms supplied by the Secretary of State, accompanied by a $10 filing fee for profit, stock corporations and $5 for nonprofit, nonstock corporations.

A total of 2,627 new corporations filed their papers with the Secretary of State during the second quarter of this year. During the first quarter 2,732 new corporations filed their papers with the Secretary of State.

PCC players present summer fare

Prestonsburg Community College's Summer Players will present the comedy Snatch a Falling Star by Craig Alpaugh on Friday, August 13, and Saturday, August 14, at 8 p.m. in the Pike Auditorium on campus.

Admission is free and the play is open to the public.

Directed by Alice Adams, the play takes place in present-day Los Angeles. It centers on the kidnapping of Ned Reardon, a comedian/movie star played by Ryan Briggs of Hager Hill.

Reardon is carried off to an apartment in the barrio by a brother and sister, Jan and Jimmy Fuqua, portrayed by Stacy O'Bryan of Sitka and Mark Vanderpool of Prestonsburg. The character Jan has been in love with Ned since the first time she saw him on stage and has decided to rehabilitate him because he has "degenerated into a pill-popping, coke-snorting, booze-swilling disaster."

Jan and Jimmy chain up Ned and attempt to get him to lay off the booze and start exercising. Instead of accepting the situation, Ned turns out to be a foul-mouthed, conceited manipulator.

As the play builds to a climax, the unanswered questions include: Will Ned rehabilitate himself? Will he have his revenge against Jan and Jimmy?

Will Jimmy become an actor? And, most important, will Ned fall in love with Jan?

Snatch a Falling Star was first presented in 1990 by Actors Ensemble of Kansas City, Missouri.

Briggs, the lead, is also assistant director. This summer, he is a dancer in the Jenny Wiley Theatre production of Cinderella. A drama major at Morehead State University, he performed this spring in the MSU production of The Marriage of Bette and Boo.

Last year at PCC, Briggs starred in Who Am I This Time? and Wallstreet's Ultimate Son, as well as Flowers for Algernon.

Vanderpool, a PCC student, last year wrote and directed the play Wallstreet's Ultimate Son. This year he was in Come Blow your Horn and Rumors.

O'Bryan, a PCC student, is a disk jockey for Q95 radio in Prestonsburg. She has a background in speech and drama and performed the role of Rizzo in Grease at Johnson Central High School.

Behind the scenes workers are Sinae Risner of Prestonsburg, Charles Parsons of Betsy Layne and Alisa Ratliff of Ivel, who worked on sets, lighting and technical effects.

Director Adams warns that this drama is not suitable for children. The language and situations will be offensive to some, she said.

PCC's drama club is open to members of the community as well as PCC students. The group usually performs one play per semester.

Though admission is free, donations are accepted at the door.

PCC players

Guest editorial Sound Advice

New ethics commission wisely tells legislators to heed intent of the law

George Barker, chairman of the new Legislative Ethics Commission, has offered some sound advice to legislators: "Go that extra mile to avoid the appearance of unethical conduct."

Ethics legislation approved during a special session of the Kentucky General Assembly earlier this year created the independent commission and gave it the power to interpret the law and to investigate legislators accused of violations.

Already, the commission has discovered possible loopholes in the statute. Lawmakers might be surprised at the leeway, which the commission is just now discovering, according to Commissioner Cornelia Atherton Serpell.

Serpell suggested last week that the commission start flagging problems for attention during next year's legislative session. That's a good idea, but in the meantime, commission members say they are likely to advise against activities that may not be technical violations of the law but that nonetheless contravene its spirit.

Legislators and lobbyists already have begun asking the commission for opinions about various scenarios that technically aren't illegal.

For example, a legislator wanted to represent a friend for free before a state agency. The law only prohibits representing clients for pay before certain state agencies.

Technically, the legislator could represent the friend because he's not being paid, legislative lawyers have said. But Barker said Tuesday that doesn't seem to be the law's intent. He said a member of the public "doesn't know whether he's being compensated or not, and it gives the appearance of impropriety."

Right. The intent of the new law is to discourage legislators from being unduly influenced by paid lobbyists and special interest groups and to prevent them from using their positions to influence the decisions of state agencies in non-legislative matters. If actions are so questionable that legislators or lobbyists think it necessary to seek opinions from the ethics commission, they would be wise to avoid them.

Grateful to Hospice

Editor:

The recent illness and death of my father has brought to my attention the tremendous work of Hospice of Big Sandy. As many others, I had heard of this organization but was unaware of how really important it is to our community. I hope to make others aware of its function and to encourage them to support its efforts.

A terminal illness can be emotionally and financially devastating to a family. It is difficult to explain the overwhelming loneliness and fear you feel when told to take your loved one home from the hospital to die. You wonder if you can handle the needs of the patient and if you can face the emotional trauma of death. Hospice provided my family with the professional medical service and the emotional support which sustained us through our crisis.

It was such a blessing to have 24-hour access to medical advice and help. Not only did they buy and administer medications, but they also provided aid for patient bathing and hygiene. Their most important service to us, however, was the emotional support. They gave us counseling on the acceptance of death and the grief process, financial advice and, above all, they were there when Dad died.

Each Hospice employee who came to our home was professional and loving. We will forever be in their debt.

Hospice is not a government sponsored agency. They accept whatever payment is allowed by the patient's insurance, but no one is ever denied service or asked for extra payment.

Not all Kentucky counties are lucky enough to have Hospice. I cannot imagine how my family could have endured our loss without them. I hope our community will continue to support this wonderful organization with generous donations.

In greed's grasp

Kentucky Republicans had reason to wince when they learned that ex-Congressman Larry Hopkins is keeping the excess campaign funds that he accumulated during 14 years in the U.S. House of Representatives.

For years they supported his campaigns for the legislature, Congress and finally governor. He promised time and time again during his last, unsuccessful race that he wouldn't pocket the $665,000, less taxes. In spite of the GOP bias against big, intrusive government, he has a high-paying federal job in Washington and a congressional pension. Members of his chronically strapped party back home had reason to hope he might share a little. No such luck.

The nicest thing that can be said about the law that allowed Mr. Hopkins to take his nest egg home is that it has been changed. Now, only House members whose service began before 1978 and ended before December 1992 can keep unspent campaign funds. But for years, congressmen had an extra incentive to collect contributions from special interest givers, as Mr. Hopkins did, even when they had little opposition. The money piled up in what amounted to a nice retirement fund, which did double duty by scaring off opponents.

The House had the decency to end this malodorous practice, although stories about Mr. Hopkins, Carroll Hubbard and others cashing in their campaign funds help to ensure that Congress remains in low public esteem.

But judging from the beleaguered status of election finance reform, Congress has an infinite capacity for enduring embarrassment and little zest for change. Mr. Hopkins could have proved himself an exception by using a bit of his horde to boost the two-party system. —Louisville Courier-Journal

Custody wars

Think of your parents, and of all the memories you've made with them.

Mom and Dad are what you've known your entire life, and they exclusively define the words "parents" for you.

But what if they don't meet the biological definition of that word, if they weren't the two people that created you? Should that change the way the law sees your relationship with them?

We don't think so. But two highly publicized custody battles highlight the emotional and legal difficulties that are always involved in trying to answer this question.

One case centers around 2-year-old Jessica DeBoer, whose natural mother gave her up for adoption but lied about who the father was on the consent form. She and the real father later reconciled, and petitioned to regain custody of the child. The U.S. Supreme Court last week upheld a state court's decision that granted them that right.

The other struggle involves 14-year-old Kimberly Mays, who was somehow "switched at birth" with another girl, who is now dead. Mays' natural parents want visitation rights, but she went to court this week to try to legally sever ties with them.

It's true the decision in the DeBoer case reflects law that has traditionally honored biological ties between parents and children. It's also true that, in the DeBoer case, the father never knowingly resigned his parental rights; in the Mays case, neither parent did.

But the law should have equal or superior interest in preserving the well-being of children like Kimberly Mays and Jessica DeBoer. Their young lives are now caught in a whirlwind of confusion because of adult mistakes in which they had no part.

Jessica DeBoer will now leave her world to live with near strangers who want to give her a different name. Mays could soon face the same situation.

To be sure, it's hard to imagine any legal conclusion that could satisfy everyone involved in these cases. But it's harder — and nearly unconscionable — to condone the utter devastation of a young person's life, and then call it justice. —Lexington Herald-Leader

More controls

At least three state legislators say they plan to introduce bills that would place reasonable limits on the power of companies to drill for oil and gas. Instead, they should work together on one bill that would stand a greater chance of enactment.

The three — Sen. Benny Ray Bailey, D-Hindman, and Reps. Clayton Little, D-Virgie, and Paul Mason, D-Whitesburg — sponsored similar measures in 1992, but none of them gained approval during the General Assembly. Unified action in 1994 likely would increase the chance of approval.

The 1992 proposals would have required the consent of surface owners before companies could drill for oil and gas. Little's and Bailey's measures would have required the replacement of water sources destroyed by drilling operations.

Those are reasonable requirements that protect the rights of surface owners, much as a recently upheld 1988 state constitutional amendment protected surface owners from having their land destroyed by companies using strip mining to claim coal owned through broad form deeds.

Working together would give Bailey, Little and Mason the best chance of accomplishing their goal. —The Daily Independent, Ashland

Policy on gays in military is a mess

By Leonard Larsen

Scripps Howard News Service
All the best and sometimes worst intentions of President Clinton, White House aides, military leaders, members of Congress, homosexual activists, legal experts, sideline advisers and rabble-rousers from everywhere have mixed the issue of gays in the military into indigestible hash.

The compromise that's become the Clinton plan to end the gay ban without ending it is said to be workable but it's also unworkable. It attempts to clarify policy and ends up certifying confusion. It's a solution which solves nothing.

The Clinton plan may prove of some use, bringing the nation and all the participants in the argument to a simple either-or proposition: Either the U.S. military keeps the present ban on homosexuals—acknowledging some will enlist and serve secretly—or it drops the ban without conditions. There's no compromise.

The core of the dispute remains as it's been from the moment Clinton embarked on his excursion into pandering for the homosexual vote during his presidential campaign, promising then and later repeating the promise that as president he—easy as the stroke of a pen—would end the military ban against gays and lesbians.

The apparent import of the promise was what homosexuals themselves had not before held to be possible or an urgent priority of the gay community; that homosexuals could openly serve in the military services.

In the emotion-laden discussions that followed, gay and lesbian service personnel and their supporters rejoiced that the promised Clinton action would allow them to "come out of the closet" and "stop living a lie."

What President Clinton may not have known then but does now is that it's impossible—not just difficult, but impossible—for gay men and lesbians to serve "openly" in the American military.

Some day, not when the media judges the national mood in New York or San Francisco or Washington, D.C., but when and if there's a genuine change in the attitude of Americans everywhere, it may be possible for homosexuals to serve "openly" in the military.

But not now. And many critics of the Clinton plan, whatever their sexual lifestyles, are right in branding it as tinkering of the worst kind, a product that only aggravates a situation that for now defies compromise.

Gays and lesbians, if and when the Clinton plan is finally adopted, may not in fact "come out of the closet" or "stop living a lie" in the services. They could not be openly homosexual in the military, on or off base.

The ban against homosexuals would actually continue but recruiters wouldn't be allowed to ask about homosexuality. Some limits would be set on in-service investigations of suspected or acknowledged homosexuals.

Then again, as it became clear in a Senate hearing the day after Clinton's plan was announced, nobody—certainly not the nation's top military leaders—appears to fully understand what will flow from the Clinton compromise plan.

Members of Congress, who could if the mood comes on them, abandon the Clinton plan and codify the military ban against homosexuals into law, are less clear about it than the military leaders.

At one point Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga. the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee and the most influential military authority in Congress, complained at the prospects for confusion and contradiction in the president's proposal.

"This has to be pinned down," said Nunn, suggesting every superior officer in the services might sometime or another have to "call the attorney general" for legal guidance.

Defense Secretary Les Aspin, hectoring for nearly three hours during the Senate hearing as he tried to explain the inexplicables of the Clinton plan, reached what sounded like his own exasperated conclusion.

"If a person is homosexual, they would be much more comfortable pursuing another profession than the military," Aspin declared. It's something to think about.

Magoffin man shot by officers

An Eastern Kentucky man was hospitalized in good condition yesterday with a gunshot wound after a gunfight with an off-duty Kentucky State Police trooper and a sheriff.

J.B. Minix, 60, of Royalton was charged with attempted murder and first-degree wanton endangerment after allegedly firing on Sheriff Chalmer Wireman and Trooper Larry Preston.

Preston was driving on Ky. 7 around 6:30 p.m. Tuesday when he noticed what he believed to be a drunk driver. Preston notified Wireman and the two stopped Minix near Royalton.

As the officers approached, Minix allegedly drew a gun, threatened them and fled the scene. When he got to his home, Minix allegedly fired on the men as they were getting out of their car.

Preston returned fire and struck Minix once in the left side of the head. Minix was taken to the Paul B. Hall Medical Center but was later taken to Cabell-Huntington Hospital.

The incident is under investigation. - Louisville Courier-Journal

GOP sheriff's race murky in Johnson

Secretary of State Bob Babbage calls it "Dropoutgate."

Johnson County Chief Deputy Sheriff Don McFaddin won the May Republican primary for sheriff, but he withdrew last month after receiving what he now says was bad advice about his campaign finance report.

McFaddin changed his mind this week about quitting the race, but Babbage said Wednesday that he and all relevant state agencies — the attorney general's office, the Registry for Election Finance and the Board of Elections — agree that neither McFaddin nor any other GOP candidate can be on the November 2 ballot.

Democratic nominee A.C. "Pete" Cantrell, a former state trooper, is now unopposed on the ballot.

The GOP has filed a lawsuit in response. - Lexington Herald Leader

Hindman teen's suit says police beat him

Four police officers have been sued in U.S. District Court for involvement in an alleged beating of a 15-year-old Hindman youth.

The lawsuit seeks $5 million for what it says was a violation of the teenager's civil rights. The suit also names Knott County, the city of Hindman, Knott County Judge-Executive Homer Sawyer and Hindman Mayor Kenneth Blair.

The complaint states that the teenager, Clinton Hursey, was beaten by Hindman police officer Walter Ridener at the Knott County Gingerbread Festival on Sept. 12, 1992.

Hursey had been fighting with someone when Ridener arrived on the scene, the complaint says. Ridener used his police baton to beat Hursey on the back, knees, arms and head area. Once at the police station, Hursey was also beaten by county sheriff's deputy Oakley Thomsbury. State trooper Greg Mullins placed his baton on Hursey's head and threatened him. State trooper Dean Craft saw the abuse but did nothing to stop it.

Hursey and his mother, Linda Sharon Slone, filed the lawsuit, which does not indicate guilt. - Lexington Herald-Leader

Hip replacement surgery at PBH is first for region

The six-county area of Johnson, Lawrence, Magoffin, Morgan, Martin and Floyd reached a new medical milestone last week with a total hip replacement surgery performed July 28 at Paul B. Hall Regional Medical Center of Paintsville.

Dr. Timothy Wagner, orthopedic surgeon at Paul B. Hall, replaced the entire left hip joint of 79-year-old Martin County resident Edward Moore in a two-and-a-half hour procedure. This marked the first such surgery performed in the six area counties.

In the surgery, Wagner took out the diseased hip ball, inserted a metal cup with a plastic lining and then attached a steel ball and a long steel stem to the hip into the left femur (thigh bone).

Moore was walking and undergoing physical therapy just two days after the surgery. — Bob Marsh, Paintsville Herald

More funds available for first-time homebuyers

Kentucky Housing Corporation announced recently that it has made available $22 million in mortgage loans for qualified first-time homebuyers. The loans carry an interest rate of 6.75%, fixed for 30 years. The maximum purchase price of a newly constructed home is $67,000, with an existing home being no more than $64,000. All loans will be FHA or VA insured and are available on a first-come, first-served basis through participating financial institutions across the state.

For potential homebuyers having problems accumulating funds for the required downpayment and closing costs, Kentucky Housing Corporation offers a mortgage assistance program called EPIC (Equity Partners Investing in the Commonwealth).

For more information on home financing, EPIC or a local participating lender, contact Kentucky Housing Corporation's Homeownership Department at (502) 564-7630, (800) 247-2510 (for the hearing impaired only).

Community Calendar

TO THE ONE IN NEED

If the person who wrote the ad addressed "TO ALL CHRISTIANS" will call me evenings at 358-3033, I will endeavor to help, through listening and prayer.

No Names Needed.

To All Christians:

My life is so messed up. I have to take antidepressants to prevent depression and seven tranquilizers to sleep. I have been sick for three years and started to get better twice and had set backs! My wife has left me because I have failed to communicate with her and show her the love and affection that she deserves! When I am sick, I am grouchy and don't want to participate in family activities! I am tired of being sick! I am fasting and praying that my wife will take me back and that I can be healed. I will pray and fast until she takes me back or if it be God's will that I am healed or die. I want all the Churches to pray that my wife and I will get back together and that God will help me find a hospital that can help me get off all medication! I am willing to stay three to six months in a hospital that will not make me suffer through severe withdrawal. My biggest fear is I won't make it to Heaven. I am asking everyone to pray that I can feel God's spirit like I used to, and learn to pray daily without ceasing like I used to, and God give me the full confidence of salvation! (A Christian in need of God's grace and love!)

DR. ROBERT C. PORTER

Dr. Robert C. (Bobby) Porter, 64, Pastor of the Community Free Will Baptist Church of Westland, Michigan for 35 years, died suddenly July 13, at his summer cottage in Somerset, Michigan.

Born July 1, 1929, in Floyd County, he was the son of Louellen Porter of Westland and the late Oliver Porter. He was married to Dorothy F. Sizemore, the daughter of the late John and Hettie Sizemore of Town Branch.

Dr. Porter was a quality control man for Ford Motor Company before becoming a minister. He won the silver, gold, and diamond award for production improvements on the Thunderbird which was then a small sports car.

He obtained his doctorate degree from the California Christian College and was ordained as minister in 1957. He founded the Westland Church in 1958 and served as pastor until his death.

In 1973, he received the title of Kentucky Colonel from Governor Wendell Ford and was recognized by former President Gerald Ford for 25 years' community civic duties. The U.S. Flag was flown over the White House in his honor and presented to him in a ceremony.

An accomplished harmonica player and recording artist, Dr. Porter received rave reviews from World Harmonica Magazine of London, England and the American Harmonica Newsletter. He and his wife also ran a successful real estate business in both Michigan and Florida.

He gave credit to God for everything he accomplished in life. His church was his first priority. He rarely took vacations or even a day off. He was fervent in meeting the needs of his congregation where on Sundays he preached three sermons and taught Wednesday evening Bible classes. His favorite Bible verse was Philippians 4:13, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me".

Although he had lived in Michigan for over forty years, he still kept in contact with friends in Floyd County, especially his elementary school teacher, Mrs. Opal May. Their phone conversations several times a year were extra "special" to him.

In addition to his wife and mother, he is survived by a daughter, Victoria E. Porter-Wood of Westland; eight grandchildren: Bobby C. Porter III and Billy Ray Porter of South Lyon, Michigan; Timothy David, Terri Faye, and Elizabeth Ann Marshall; Michelle, Chris and Andy Wood all of Westland. He is also survived by five brothers and four sisters.

Funeral services were conducted at the church on July 17th at 10:00 a.m. with the Rev. James Allen officiating. Interment was at Knollwood Memorial Park in Canton, Michigan. Serving as pallbearers were: Henry Green, Bobby, Brian, Bruce and Bernie Rich, and grandsons, Bobby Porter III, Billy Ray Porter, and Timothy David Marshall.

Dr. Porter will be missed by his family, congregation, and all who knew him.

ANDREA LEMARR'S WEEKEND OF CATASTROPHIES

School was out and it was time for vacation. Andrea and her family decided to go on a weekend vacation. They planned to go to Cincinnati and go to a Red's ballgame, to the zoo, and then enjoy a day of relaxation on a boat fishing.

The day they left didn't start out too well. While Andrea was getting packed, she realized that her suitcase was too full. She informed her dad to come help close it. He was doing just fine until Andrea had to help. She stuck her finger right between the crack of the suitcase. Her dad accidentally smashed her fingers while slamming it shut. Andrea screamed with pain. When he released it all of her neatly packed clothes leaped out. Therefore, she had to pick every single one up. Her dad just steamed with anger from the waste of time.

That Friday afternoon they left. They arrived in Cincinnati in approximately two hours. They received a hotel room and got unpacked. There they rested up for the late night game at the stadium.

It was a couple hours away from the game and the Red's spirit was overwhelmed by her dad. He had been in the bathroom for more than an hour and thirty minutes. When he came out was he ever patriotic! Red's cap, t-shirt, red socks, and you know, the works! Andrea was so embarrassed. They went to the game, got seated, and took a few pictures. Everything was just fine until the singing of, "The Star Spangled Banner." Any normal family would never sing along with it. Low and behold Andrea's dad was the only person singing in that whole section. Andrea just sunk in her seat with embarrassment.

The game started with a home run by Davis. Within the crowd Andrea heard a faint voice, "Get your hot roasted peanuts, cold draft beer." Andrea then had a sudden urge for a hotdog and pop. She waded through the crowd to get to the concession stand. She came back and as she started down the steps, the peanuts and draft beer salesman wasn't watching where he was going and he knocked her all the way down three flights of stairs. She was covered from head to toe with beer and peanuts. As she was falling the hotdog slung out of her hands, traveled five hundred yards and landed smack dab in Jose Conesco's mouth. He sure got a dog out of that one!

They rushed her to the hospital. The only doctor on duty was a foreign quack. He stuck two feet long needles in her legs and set the broken bones. He put casts on both legs, but only one of them were broken, which one, who knows, he seemed to not care. He told her to stay in a wheelchair for six weeks. He gazed over some pills in the cabinets and pulled down two pills, a valium and a Trylonol Three, he said, "Take duo of dese and call me in de morning, ya."

So much for the Red's game. Anyhow the Red's won over the Braves. Jose hit eight homers. Wonder if that hotdog had anything to do with it?

The next day, which was Saturday, was the big event for Andrea. They were going to the zoo. Andrea loved the zoo. Although she couldn't enjoy it because she was in a wheelchair. Her dad had to push her around to the exhibits.

The first place they visited was the reptiles. Andrea simply hated snakes. While her dad was taking a few pictures, Andrea wheeled herself over to the reptile pit. It was a rather large, glass container where people could put their hands on the glass and watch the animals eat and do strange things. Andrea made an ugly face at a Blue Python. The Python looked at her, drew back, and struck at the glass. She jumped back in the chair and her legs, which were broken, flung up and crashed into the cage. Andrea screamed repeatedly, "Oh, oh, my leg."

The next place they visited was the birds. Andrea went to the ostriches and her dad went to the storks. She observed the cute movements of the birds. She just put her hands on the rails not thinking anything about it, when her dad told her to turn for a quick snapshot. As soon as she turned around, the ostrich pecked a hunk out of her hand. Andrea made a horrid face of pain. To beat it all her dad snapped the camera. Hopefully that picture will not turn out.

The zoo was the pits for Andrea. But her dad got some nice pictures of different animals. Maybe some day Andrea can go to the zoo and enjoy it.

It was Sunday, the day of relaxation, fishing, and to go home, to get out of town, leave the horrible forsaken place.

They went to the boat dock and rented a fast speed boat. Three hours would do it for them on the lake. Her dad was sort of new at boat operating.

They started out slow but speed suddenly increased. Were they ever riding their waves. They were going so fast that Andrea's mouth was glued to her ears. Her dad was hitting stumps, bottles, and all sorts of garbage, he even hit a boat bouy. He must think he's playing "Space Invaders." He finally slowed down and tried to do some fishing. They caught quite a few. They both were sun burnt very bad, in fact they looked alot like two crazy bobsters. They went back to the boat dock to return the boat and pay the rental fees. The rent was tripled so that it would pay for the boat repairs.

Poor Andrea had just about had it with Cincinnati. I assure you she will never go there again.

They loaded up the family car. They were on the road again. In two hours they were home sweet home. Andrea made it through the door and upstairs okay. She stayed there for six hours enjoying just simply nothing happening to her.

TAG students tour historical and government sites

Floyd County School System's Gifted and Talented (TAG) students took a June 2 through 6 tour of historical sites, including Colonial Williamsburg, Jamestown Settlement and Carter's Grove. Students are shown in front of their hotel in Washington D.C. where they visited several government, cultural and historical sites. TAG teachers are Mary Frazier, Pat Barnette and Tammy Francis.

Area kids shine in children's theatre

"Without a doubt, it is the children," Betsy Hunter says when asked what has been the best part of her experience this summer as Education director for Jenny Wiley Theatre. "These are excellent kids," she adds. Hunter is in the midst of rehearsing the members of the Children's Theatre for their August 11 performance of James and the Giant Peach. The performance begins at 10:30 a.m. at the Amphitheatre.

It is no accident that the play is based on a popular children's novel by Roald Dahl. Hunter, a former elementary school teacher and director of gifted programs, who holds an MFA in acting from the University of Virginia, sees acting as a way to inspire children to improve their reading skills and to become excited about all kinds of learning. "You'd be surprised how many of these kids have come in carrying copies of the novel," she notes. In addition to her education director duties, Hunter performs roles as the wicked stepmother in Cinderella and as Holly in Footloose.

As education director, Hunter not only directs the Children's Theatre for its three-week session and coordinates the Summer Arts Workshops on Saturdays, but also supervises the eight members of the youth company and the 10 teenagers who make up the apprentice company. Both of these groups appear in Cinderella and receive instruction in dance, voice, and other areas of acting scheduled and coordinated by Hunter. "I have been impressed with the dedication of some of these young people," Hunter says, "as well as the enthusiasm of the actors and technicians in helping with this program." Most of the instruction is done by members of the Jenny Wiley cast and crew. The program is designed to provide a true apprenticeship in theatre.

Speaking of plans for next summer's education program at the theatre, Hunter mentions that she would like to provide two sessions of the Children's Theatre to make it more accessible to children who might not ordinarily get to come to the plays. She believes that continuity in education programs from year to year will be good for the kids who have embarked on developing their talents. The focus in the future will be on more Children's Theatre opportunities and on a even more intensive instruction for apprentices. These programs will complement Jenny Wiley Theatre's commitment to the region's arts education in the presentation of school day matinees and the theatre's continued sponsorship of performances by state and national touring theatre groups (such as Poetry Alive! and the Appalachian Children's Theatre Series) in area schools.

Changes in our Schools A Commentary

Extended School Services provide one-on-one help

By Marilyn Bailey
Director of Communications
The Prichard Committee

When Bill Greene, 68, retired from insurance sales he certainly didn't think he'd be spending his "golden years" finger painting with chocolate pudding.

But that's exactly the kind of thing Greene does two days a week through the Grandparents Program of Extended School Services in the Ashland Independent School District.

Greene is one of several senior citizens who serve as teacher aides in the Ashland area to help give a little more individual attention to students in the classroom.

The ESS program has been widely proclaimed as one of the immediate success stories of the Kentucky Education Reform Act. This particular reform initiative provides additional instructional time using certified teachers, aides and others for students who need a little extra attention.

While tutoring may have been available in the past at some schools, state law did not require it. Now every school district must provide additional instruction time in a structured way and funding is provided by the state. In the summer of 1990 (before KERA) 37 districts across the state offered summer school programs. In 1991, 163 out of 176 districts offered summer learning programs.

And school districts throughout the state have created some very innovative programs through ESS, particularly for at-risk students.

Two days a week Greene goes to school for two hours and works with individual children in a primary classroom. The finger painting exercise had origins in a lesson he taught on measuring. He taught the children how to prepare pudding and they used the finished product to finger paint.

He also worked on individual reading problems with the primary age students.

In this small group students receive individual attention they may not be able to get from the classroom teacher.

"We see this as more of a nurturing role," said Dr. Jim Winters, coordinator of cooperative programs between Ashland Community College and the Ashland public schools.

This grandparents program is only one of many innovative ways school districts are providing extra help for students. In Mercer County, parents and students sign contracts of participation in an after-school tutoring program.

"Basically the students and parents agree the child must attend on a regular basis and be cooperative," said Gerald Lister, ESS coordinator in Mercer County.

In Mercer County the program meets two days a week after school for about 75 minutes. Door-to-door bus transportation and an after-school snack is provided. Several merchants in the area provide such things as pizza and hamburgers at a discount to the after-school program.

"I try to meet individual needs of students in my classroom," said Pam Elam, Mercer County Elementary ESS coordinator who has taught for 19 years. "But when you have 25 kids you just can't do that for everyone. In the after-school program I have seen students who, after getting that attention, really begin to blossom because they really gain a lot of self confidence."

Project POWER (Parents, Opportunities With Educational Resources) in Knott County approaches individual attention through a different tactic. Selected parents were taught how to help children with their studies. Parents received about 12 to 16 hours of training and then went into the classroom to work individually with their own children.

"Some of these parents didn't want to come to school at first," said Lee Esther Perry, Knott County's ESS coordinator. "Many of them said they didn't know how to help and they really didn't know what the teacher expected, but once they went through the training, they couldn't wait to get into the classroom."

Parents were paid a stipend of $6 a hour and spent two hours, two days a week after school with their children.

The plus for this program is that now many of these same parents serve as volunteers in the classroom during the day.

"The parents are so excited about this. We've won these people for life!"

Parent training was also provided in Hopkins County through a Parents as Partners program. Parents of primary-age children were selected to participate in a program which taught parents how they might help their children with school.

Parents met once a week in the evenings for six weeks. Child care and a light meal was provided. They were shown how to read with their children, how to talk about books, what questions to ask when discussing books.

"Parents who have been to these sessions were then used to contact other parents," said Carolyn Ferrell, Hopkins County ESS coordinator.

This summer selected students will also receive a book in the mail through the ESS program. With it comes a postcard on which the child writes about the book and returns the card for another book.

"We use this as a program to encourage reading and they will receive up to six books this summer. And if they don't return that first card, the book is still theirs to keep," said Ferrell.

This summer Christian County will conduct a summer school program in which students will attend school in the morning in two three-week sessions with a two-week break in between.

School is being held at almost all the schools in the district so that individual school indexes might be raised. This is based on a KERA premise that all school are accountable for their own progress and the summer school program will help raise those scores. Over 1,600 students will attend school this summer.

According to the state Department of Education during the spring 1992 semester, 40 percent of the 96,079 students taking part in Extended School Services improved by one letter grade or more; 13 percent passed to the next level or graduated; and 31 percent maintained their performance level.

"We really feel the Extended School Services program is the most powerful part of KERA in meeting the performance outcomes," said Bill Scott, ESS Division Director. "And as time goes on, we're really encouraging ways any student with a need can access it, not just in a remedial sense but by bringing in more students who need help with short-term difficulties as well."

Prime Country wins talent contest

Gift of music

Prime Country keeps on winning talent contests. The group recently won one of Kentucky's major talent contests in Lexington.

Prime Country won the first round of a talent contest sponsored by WVLK-fm (K-93, Lexington) August 3 at "Sundance" in Lexington. Prime Country will compete in the final round of the contest on Tuesday, August 14, at 8 p.m. at the "Sundance."

Prime Country will also compete in the True Value Hardware Country Showdown this Saturday, August 7, a 2 p.m. at the Martin County Fair.

Prime Country has participated in a Day in The Park at Allen for the past four years and has recently opened for the Timmy Cline Band and the Kentucky Opry.

Prime Country, a band based in the mountainous coalfields of Eastern Kentucky, uses multiple musical influences to create their own style of high-energy country-rock.

Members include Barry Potter, Greg Garrett, James Hall, Bob Wooten and Vernon Lewis.

Barry Potter, 29, of Floyd County, sings lead vocals and plays a vital role in the song-writing chores. With influence from such greats as Jerry Lee Lewis, Waylon Jennings and Hank Williams Jr., Potter has developed a powerful vocal style which has proved ideal for both recorded and live situations. Aside from having the rare ability to capture the emotion of a song, he is also an outstanding song-writer. Many of his songs are already regulars in Prime Country's show, and are often requested by local followers.

Greg Garrett, 28, of Floyd County, is the lead guitarist. He is also one-half of the harmonies that have become a Prime Country trademark. With influences that range from Albert Lee and Ricky Skaggs, to Stevie Ray Vaughn and Eddie Van Halen, he has developed the ability to play leads that are suited to the song's needs. He also possesses a good harmony voice, which can be attributed to years of singing in church and with various other kinds of bands.

James Hall is another 28-year-old musician, but he makes his home in Johnson County. He plays acoustic guitar, mandolin, and provides the other half of Prime Country's harmony. Musically, he is deeply influenced by bluegrass music. His musical talent is showcased during the portions of their show in which he plays the mandolin. His bluegrass influences are also evident in a smooth, well-controlled harmony voice, which blends perfectly with the other two singers. Yet, the one place where he leaves bluegrass behind is in his song-writing. Along with Potter, he has developed the skill into an art.

Bob Wooten, 46 is another Johnson Countian. He plays bass guitar for the band, holding up one end of the rhythm section. His love for traditional country bass is obvious in his style. Choosing not to take the technical approach, he plays a solid, smooth bass line that gives the band a big, fuller sound, and is greatly responsible for the tremendous feel that the band exudes.

Vernon Lewis is 35-years-old and a resident of Morgan County. He is the band's drummer, responsible for carrying the tempo of Prime Country's music. His style could best be described as aggressive, holding nothing back during a performance. This also contributes to a good stage presence. But, unlike a lot of drummers, he has a great knack for the use of dynamics.

Prime Country has been working on their sound, and polishing it, now for four years. In the last year, their popularity has begun to spread outside of local boundaries. On October 24, 1992, Prime Country won the Tennessee/Kentucky combined-states title in the True Value Hardware/GMC Truck Country.

Those who would like to show their support for the group by attending the event, may call 886-2410 or 886-9884 for directions to "Sundance."

Registration August 19 at Big Sandy campus

Registration for Morehead State University's 1993 fall semester will be conducted Thursday and Friday, August 19-20.

Students, who did not advance register, will develop class schedules in their major departments, before going to Laughlin Health Building to pay fees.

Students, who have not declared a major, will go to 233 Allie Young Hall to schedule classes. Undergraduate students, who have not previously been admitted or were not enrolled last spring, will need to stop first at the Admissions Office, 301 Howell-McDowell. For graduate students, that stop will be 701 Ginger Hall.

Registration will be from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. both days and entry time into the payment area in Laughlin is based on an alphabetical system by last name. All fees should be paid at this time.

Part-time students taking classes on the main campus also will process their schedules in their major department and may pay fees in Laughlin between 5 and 6 p.m.

Registration at MSU's Ashland Area, Big Sandy and Licking Valley Extended Campus Centers and the Appalachian Graduate Consortium will be conducted from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Thursday, August 19.

The registration period for regional classes at Jackson, Maysville and Whitesburg will be from 5 to 7 p.m. also on August 19.

All MSU classes, including evening and off-campus, will begin meeting on Monday, August 23.

Schedule adjustments will be processed Monday, August 23, through Wednesday, August 25, in the student's major department without a penalty fee. Effective Thursday, August 26, drop-adds will be processed in the Office of the Registrar, 201 Ginger Hall, with a $10 fee to be assessed at this time.

Course directories with a complete listing of classes and registration information are available from the Registrar's Office. Additional information is available by calling that office, locally at 783-2008 or toll-free from elsewhere in Kentucky at 1-800-262-7474.

RAINY DAYS AND BIRTHDAYS

It has always been my belief that birthdays are special and should be treated as such. Everybody celebrates Christmas and the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving, but a birthday is personal—a special occasion—to be savored and enjoyed by the honoree. And because of this strong belief my family and I were delighted to share in the birthday celebration of one of our closest lifelong friends, Tommy Jean Hazelrigg.

You could not have asked for a more beautiful day to celebrate a birthday. The sun was shining, it wasn't too hot, and then, approximately five minutes before everyone left for the restaurant where the party was being held, the rain started. It was a steady downpour of torrential magnitude; a gully-washer. Relentless in its flow as it pounded onto the pavement, rendering our windshield wipers virtually useless against its power.

If it was excitement Tommy Jean was looking for on her special day, everything was gearing up in her favor, particularly the weather as the rain refused to relinquish its appointed duty of saturating the entire earth. If you want to know how hard it really rained all I can say is, on our way to the restaurant we saw a man building an ark. Nevertheless, the company was too good to notice the deluge. After greeting each other, we didn't care if it rained for forty days and forty nights as long as we were together celebrating our friend's special day. We just shook ourselves off like dogs after a bath, made our way to the table and started deciding on what we wanted to eat. "I'm Cheryl and I'll be your waitress," the blue-eyed girl said.

"Great, Cheryl," Tommy Jean's son-in-law said. "We're here celebrating T.J.'s birthday and we'll be your customers." After we ordered Tommy began opening her cards and gifts. She was thanking everybody when the food arrived. When the waitress finished serving everybody, we got down to serious birthday eating. That's when we first knew something was not quite right.

"Owen, did you spit on me?" his wife Jean asked.

"Jean, I don't think that qualifies an answer. I'm eating, not spitting. I really don't see how you can confuse the two."

"Jimmie, did you spit on Jean?" I asked my husband. "Why would I spit on Jean? If Owen doesn't care enough to spit on her, why do you think I would?"

At that exact moment, a stream of water fell directly on Owen and Jean's heads at the same time. As they looked up, the light fixture was immersed and leaking rain water. When they tried to move to another table, the water began leaking above where my mother was seated.

"Do you all want to move?" the waitress asked.

"Not me," Tommy Jean's grandson Vann answered. "A little water never hurt anybody. Anyway, I'm almost finished. At this point, we all picked up our plates (Vann included), and moved to another section of the restaurant. Just as we all got situated and were seated, a bead of water dripped down my nose.

"Phew! All that work of moving over here caused me to sweat," I said as I wiped the water off with my napkin.

"Well, I didn't think I'd worked up a sweat," Jean said, "but I feel water, too."

"Don't look now," Owen said calmly, "but the ceilings leaking directly overhead." Without missing a beat my husband motioned for the waitress and casually asked,

THE TIMES' WEEKEND Extra

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

When he has a verse composed in his head, he pulls over and writes it down. Billie Jean Osborne, founder of the Kentucky Opry.

"It's just rolling out of him," said Osborne believes Taylor has the potential to become

Things are moving fast in the field of music for Jim Taylor, 27, of Pike County. His music is becoming a familiar sound in the area. Taylor's original song, "I Started Loving Her Too Late," is a favorite with Pike County listeners, and is often requested on Pike County's radio station WDHR.

Taylor recently won the Kentucky Opry Little Theater's Talent Search in Prestonsburg with his song "Broken Hearts and Promises." As part of the prize, he is performing with the Kentucky Opry.

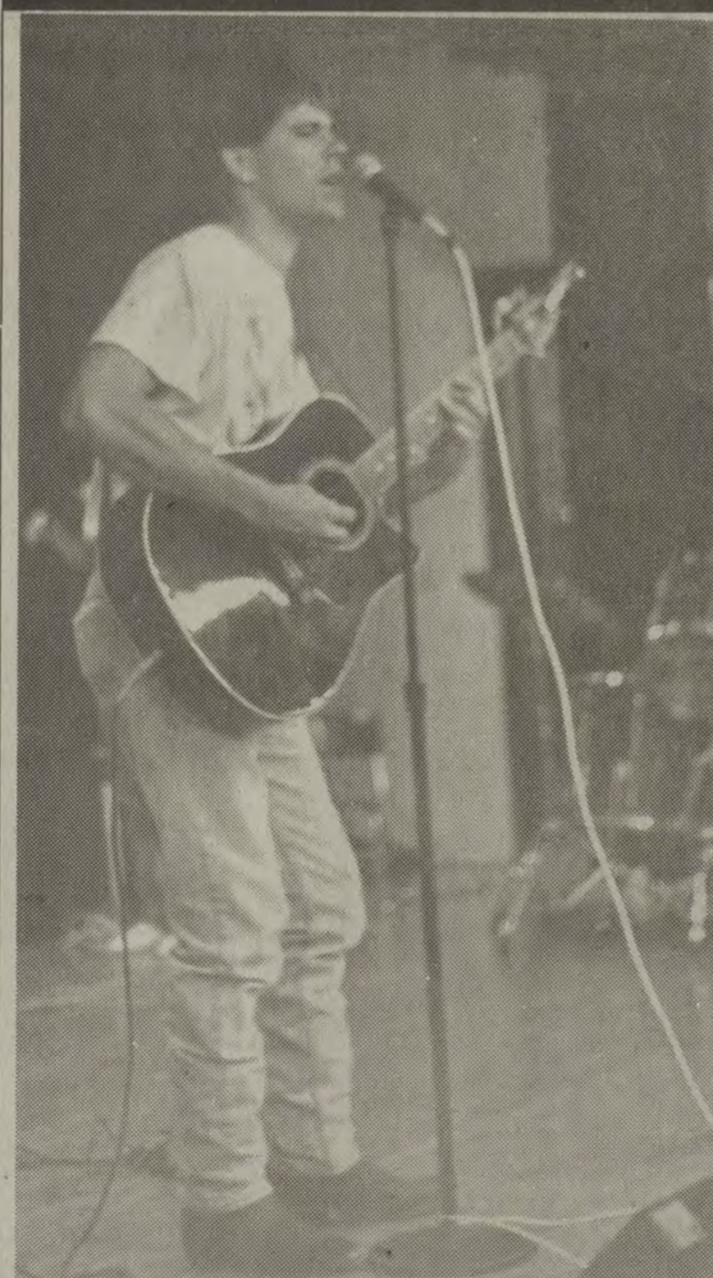

Taylor hails from Mt. Sterling, but he has called many places home. He traveled from Nicholasville to New Mexico when he was 18, and later to Arizona. In Arizona, he performed with a band at parties, but the band broke up. He continued to write his own lyrics and music and to "record a little bit."

"Homesick for the hills," he transferred from his job as a service technician with Sears in Arizona to the Pikeville store. He began playing the guitar at 16. He started playing musical instruments when he was in Junior High School with his school band, and in high school, he played the trombone for three years.

He also began writing songs at 16. He writes as he drives.

Country Spotlight

Extra! Extra!

Jim Taylor is Eastern Kentucky's bright new star to become a top-notch performer. When he knocked on her door late one evening seeking advice, she was impressed with his sincerity and with his music. Taylor had been told by WDHR that he was another George Strait, but Osborne told him "he's Jim Taylor."

"We don't want him to be anybody else," she said.

David Morris, a member of the Kentucky Opry, agrees with her. "He has his own unique style of singing and the ability to write songs and music," Morris said. "And he's a very nice guy — very easy to work with."

Taylor's biggest — and maybe his smallest — fan is his two-year old daughter, Morgan. She attends his practice sessions and his performances.

"She always stands up at his performances and says 'That's my dad, Jim Tater,'" said Jim's wife Dana. During a recent practice session, the youngster seemed to love the music and constantly danced while her dad played. She also wants to join him on stage to be a performer and is begging her parents for a set of drums.

Taylor is excited about his entry into the Eastern Kentucky limelight, and he plans to enlarge that spotlight until it merges into the bright lights of Nashville.

PRESTONSBURG, KY.—The city streets still burn in the devastating wake of newspaper columnist Geoff Belcher's shocking announcement that he will no longer darken Floyd County's door with his foul presence.

Belcher, who last week announced that he would henceforth be ruining some OTHER community, unwittingly set the wheels of disaster in motion through a tremendous outpouring of public relief, emotion and joyous celebration that ran amok after sparks flew from the victory bonfire at the Floyd County Courthouse to set fire to the litter left behind by the ticker-tape parade.

Belcher, running true to his slimy, cowardly form, fled the scene before authorities could reach him for questioning, leaving behind only a cryptic, poorly-written message, printed below in its entirety (although some text has been edited for publication in a family newspaper):

"And now, a little poem," In the words of the cartoon moose—
To say "Farewell,"
And "It's been swell,"

But the boss has turned me loose. To those who've stood beside me When times were dark and bleak— Have no fear And shed no tears, And don't you spring a leak.

'Truth,' and 'Bubba' will continue on, So don't you fret or grieve, And someday, somehow, I'll come home, like the cows And make my critics heave.

To all my many enemies, It's really been a gas. I've had some fun,

But now I'm done, And you can all just kiss my..."

The remainder of Belcher's message was lost in the flames, authorities said, as was any evidence that Belcher himself may have escaped. However, they cautioned, the fugitive may still be at large and poses an extreme danger to the mental health and welfare of the public.

Unless of course they send him large amounts of cash c/o The Big Sandy News, P.O. Box 766, Louisa, Ky. 41230. Please use small, unmarked bills. This is Geoff Belcher, signing off.

Remember When...

END OF WAR GOOD NEWS FOR BASEBALL

Boston baseball fans rejoiced. The end of the Korean war meant that Captain Ted Williams would be changing back into his Red Sox uniform for the remainder of the 1953 season. The power hitter returned home after flying 38 Korean combat missions.

Newsmaker of the month

Fearing for his life, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi of Iran fled his country on August 16.

He had issued a decree dismissing Premier Mossadegh, but Premier stood his ground, rejected the decree, and accused the Shah of leading a coup. The Shah fled to Iraq. By August 19, a ground swell of public support for the Shah led to rallies and protests.

The masses in the streets of Tehran and elsewhere opted for the stability of the monarchy rather than the alternative of chaos and instability.

By August 22, Premier Mossadegh was out, and a triumphant Shah was back at his palace. U.S. officials, fearful of Russian intervention in the oil-rich country, were pleased with the quick return of the Shah.

Something we don't miss

With 5,373 cases reported, 1953 was running close to 1952 in the number of polio cases reported. One third of the gamma globulin set aside for inoculations had already been parceled out. Dr. Jonas Salk of the University of Pittsburgh announced successful tests of a polio vaccine early in 1953, but it would be three more years before the vaccine was widely available.

Up to their ankles in debt

As Congress hurried to finish their agenda and adjourn, President Eisenhower suddenly injected a red-hot issue into their deliberations. The national debt ceiling of $275 billion needs to be raised, said Ike. His controversial request for an extension to $290 billion was defeated, forcing the president to look for spending cuts. (1993 readers, who are used to annual deficits of $290 billion or more, are reminded that Eisenhower was talking about raising the entire accumulated debt to $290 billion. Today the national debt is over four trillion dollars).

Were the cars that bad?

An August '53 ad boasted, "A Ford car is probably the most helpful car you ever had laid your hands on. Just turn the ignition key and it starts! If you're driving a Fordomatic Ford, just put the drive selector in 'Dr' and it 'shifts' for you!" Granted, automatic transmission was still a great new option, but did the car starting when the key was turned really deserve an exclamation point from the copywriters? Well, maybe!!

Old blue eyes bounces back

The film version of From Here to Eternity opened in August. The movie chronicled the lives and loves of servicemen in Hawaii just prior to the attack on Pearl Harbor. Frank Sinatra, whose career was stalled, offered to work for free to get a part in the film. It paid off. Sinatra won an Academy Award for Best Supporting Actor and he was back on track. Also starring Burt Lancaster, Montgomery Clift, Donna Reed and Deborah Kerr.

August 1953

trivia question

"Roman Holiday," starring Gregory Peck, received rave reviews at the 14th Annual Venice Film Festival in 1953. The film also starred a lovely young actress in her first major film. Who played the pampered princess? Answer next time.

ALL MY CHILDREN: Tad reassured Brooke that he told Dixie he was a happily married man. Ted, meanwhile, fibbed to Dixie that he had no romantic feelings for her. Derek called off the wedding. Edmund admitted to Brooke she was the model for the love of his life in his autobiographical novel. When Brooke insisted she wouldn't leave Tad, Edmund quit Tempo. Jack helped Lily communicate through the computer. Erica and Jack went to see Bianca in Seattle, while Kendall tore up Erica's note for Dimitri. Opal told Palmer she lied about coming home. Later Palmer confronted Tad, then sadly said goodbye to Peter. Gloria feared her marriage wouldn't stand up to Adam's convalescence. Wait To See: Dimitri makes a difficult decision.

ANOTHER WORLD: Grant followed Ryan into the cave where he saw two men fighting. In a panic, Grant fired his gun and realized he hit Vicky. Ian helped Vicky, then fled. The police asked Ryan to corroborate Grant's story. Carl reminded Ryan that if he had been honest with his feelings, Vicky might not now be fighting to live. Dennis and Marley broke up. Unaware she planned revenge for his part in the Cory takeover, Jake joined Paulina at the altar. After telling an unconscious Vicky he loved her, Ryan was upset when Grant later made her believe it was he who had been with her all along. Lorna received an upsetting telegram from Carl. Wait To See: Ian has another surprise for Grant.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Simone was puzzled by Leslie's forgiving attitude toward Linc. Hutch wrongfully assumed Rosanna and Evan had an intimate relationship. Later, Evan did not react when Rosanna called out Hutch's name in her sleep. Hal went to Peoria to find Cynthia. John asked Lily to support Iva in her battle against Holden for Aaron's custody. Graham paid off a witness who offered new evidence linking Royce to Neal's murder. Iva turned down John's proposal and left town with the children. Janice threatened Jeffrey about his gambling. Scott wrote Lisa he's not returning to Oakdale. Wait To See: The case against Royce seems airtight.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Jack told Sally about Brooke's claim to the Belief patent. Later, Sally told Connor her company could do more with Brooke's process than the Forresters could offer. After Connor rejected the family's offer of $3.5 million, he insisted on a detailed accounting of all profits from Belief.

Thorne was upset that Macy wouldn't go to her A.A. meetings. Ridge told a distraught Stephanie to call Jack and have him cheer her up. After hearing Jack agree to meet Stephanie, Saul took Sally to the cafe where she (unaware that it was a bye-bye buss) saw Stephanie kissing Jack. Wait To See: The Forresters now face two spurned women, but this time, Sheila is on their side.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: As Carly lay trapped underground, Vivian taunted her through a two-way radio, describing the limited oxygen and water supply in the coffin. Unable to sway Vivian, Carly tried to soften up Ivan to rescue her. Kate sent herself flowers, letting Kiriakis assume they were from Jack. Billie was shaken when she realized the man she saw firing at John and Kristen now knew she saw him too. After being hit by the bullet meant for Kristen, Rebecca told John she's leaving town, and warned him about Ms. Blake. The mysterious gunman was shaken when he overheard Carrie call Austin by name. Wait To See: Jennifer's "hooker" disguise brings trouble from an unexpected source.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: As Rhonda became increasingly upset with Karen for her new involvement in the underground party scene, Karen became closer to Stone whom she assumed was on her side. At Dominique's grave, Lucy expressed concern that Katherine could cause trouble for a troubled Scotty. After dinner with Alan, A.J. went on a wild bender. Seeing A.J. drunk at work, Julie stepped in to help him out. Felicia told Jagger she would help him find his younger brother. Victoria realized Bill's not the man she remembered. Wait To See: A puzzled Bill tries to unravel new complications in his life.

GUIDING LIGHT: Roger warned Holly he'll spurn her the next time she wants him. She warned him to be afraid if he tried to come to her house again. Jenna was puzzled when Buzz (who assumed she preferred Roger) rejected her. Marina was christened in a Greek Orthodox ceremony. Later, Marina's doctors told Frank and Eleni their daughter had a hearing problem which could be corrected with very expensive surgery. Nick arrived at Mindy's place to find her having a barbecue dinner with Macauley. Later, he searched Macauley's old police file and was alarmed at what he found. Wait To See: Hart defies Jenna's warnings not to come between her and Roger.

LOVING: Ava and Jeremy fled to Universal Studios after their train pulled into Orlando. Meanwhile, Faison, followed by Shirley, whose passion for him grew stronger by the minute, followed the pair to their hiding place. Trucker was stunned to see Mac at the Tides. Mac was stunned when his friend, Dolly, turned up in town. Tess began her plan to reconcile Trucker with his long-absent father. Buck reinjured his back when he and Gwyn were stranded in a deserted boathouse. Casey began to suspect Cooper's disinheritance was a scam. Buck learned more about Gwyn's past. Jeremy contacted Europol. Wait To See: Jeremy and Ava face inevitable capture by Faison.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: On the stand, Todd swore Marty was a willing sexual partner. Urged by Kevin and Jason, Carol Swift agreed to tell Hank that Todd raped her two years earlier. Hank, however, was unable to recall her as a witness. Meanwhile, Nora realized the boys were guilty and put Powell on the stand, hoping he'll confess. Cord was released from the hospital as Angela fed Cain's fears about Cord and Tina. Viki and Bo returned from visiting Clint. Hank apologized to Kevin. Wait To See: Angela plays on Cain's rising jealousy.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Jill told John she would name their baby after her father, William Foster. John was not sympathetic to Jack's complaints about the baby's all-night crying. Kay told Liz she had a new grandson. Victor asked Hope to let him stay on the farm for a while. Later, Cliff asked Hope for her answer to his proposal. Cricket suggested Lynn let Paul know how she felt about him. Brad gave Sherman the tape incriminating Jack in a conspiracy. Cricket warned the tenants their fight with their landlord wasn't over. Victoria felt increasingly drawn to Cole as Douglas tried to find a way to tell Nikki Victor was still alive. Wait To See: Danny makes a potentially risky decision.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

In separate incidents this spring, three men died in mishaps on bridges in Portland, Ore., and two others survived long falls. One man was crushed as a drawbridge opened, three fell after apparently losing their balance walking across a bridge (one survived), and a 19-year-old man rejected pleas by rescuers and leaped off a bridge—though his suicide failed when he was plucked, dazed, from the Willamette River. In addition to the bridge incidents, a 35-year-old man suffered broken legs after he jumped several stories from a window of a downtown Portland hotel in April to escape security guards.

THE LITIGIOUS SOCIETY
— The Atlanta Constitution reported that "U-John, King Priest of the Universal Sovereign" filed a $10 trillion lawsuit in U.S. District Court in Atlanta in April against 36 Bible-based religions for years of "fraud, breach of duty, global disruption of peace, slander, blasphemy and wanton greed."

— In June in Santa Rosa, Calif., a 49-year-old woman, whose son shot his father to death in December during a domestic squabble, filed a $100,000 lawsuit against the city and Sonoma County. The woman claims that her husband's brain had fallen on the floor when the coroner came for his body, that the coroner failed to remove it, that eventually it wound up in a county landfill, and that the brain is important to the case because the son is claiming that his father's chronic alcohol abuse led him to batter the family.

— The widow of Piedmont, S.C., preacher Edward Eugene Wood filed a lawsuit against the county in April, alleging that it was the government's negligence that allowed a dead tree to fall on her husband and kill him in 1991. The county responded that the tree's falling was an "act of God."

— Monique Louise Cote filed a lawsuit against Cineplex Odeon and its employee, Sara Louise Carr, in Calgary, Alberta, in February, for injuries in a 1991 incident. Cote claimed that Carr improperly charged her extra for buttered popcorn at the theater refreshment stand and then, after an argument, followed Cote back to her seat, grabbed her hair from behind, pulled it from side to side, and shouted obscenities until other theater personnel restrained her.

— A California Court of Appeals turned down a lawsuit in November by stuntman Frank Sanza against a production company that directed him to ride a tricycle into a fireworks booth for a movie scene. Sanza said that he had noticed beforehand that the booth was not made of the usual "collapsible" material and that he had asked for but was not given a "protective (scrotal) cup" in case he was thrust against the tricycle's handlebars. He had proceeded with the stunt, anyway, and sustained a serious scrotal injury. The court ruled that Sanza had "assumed the risk."

NAMES FROM HELL
— In June, a judge told an Army sergeant that he would have to wait 30 days to undo the name change that he had just been granted and about which he was having second thoughts. ("Tyronne Victor Wright" had become "Jesus Christ Hallelujah.")

— According to the Washington Post, an interfamily conflict kept Imelda Marcos from the recent wedding of her son, Bong Bong.

— Among those arrested in New Haven, Conn., during a marijuana-selling sweep last year: 25-year-old Victorious Sweet.

— The chief Republican fundraiser in a Democrat-Republican squabble in Oklahoma about whether a state Museum of Natural History will be built in Tulsa or Norman is named E.Z. Million.

— One of the organizers of an "alternative," pro-environment regatta in Seattle over Memorial Day weekend was veteran sailor Bo Nanna.

— Among the discoveries by a contractor working to computerize the state of Virginia's birth and death certificates were the following names given by parents to their children: Salts, Alien, Navel, New Fang, Nicey Horsie, Molegold, Comfort Care, Turnipseed and Cigarette.

Fish used to outnumber fishermen

by Lowell Branham
Scripps Howard News Service

It's nothing short of amazing how far fishing has come since I first ventured onto the TVA lakes of East Tennessee as a kid in the late '40s and early '50s.

Compared to modern gear, the tackle we used back then was so crude you'd be laughed off the water if you set forth with it today.

Plenty of people felt no need for anything fancier than a cane pole with a length of coarse linen line attached and a bobber to provide notice of bites.

Fly rods were in existence, of course, but the only place I'd ever seen one had been in pictures in the outdoor magazines. Spinning gear was in the first stages of its transatlantic migration from Europe to the U.S.A., and most fishermen had never heard of it.

Thus, if you wanted to step up to something that offered a little more versatility than the traditional cane pole, bait casting tackle was the only reasonable option and it was a primitive one.

Metal rods were still the order of the day, and while they may have worked fine as radio antennas, they left a good bit to be desired for fishing. A few venturesome souls were beginning to use the new fiberglass rods that were just beginning to make an appearance, but they were stiff, solid affairs with about as much action as a telephone pole.

Reels weren't a lot better. The only drag to be had was that supplied

Hodges' three-run blast sinks Paintsville, 8-7

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

LONDON—Stranding base runners has been a thorn in the side of the Paintsville Big League baseball team ever since the season began.

In the just completed Southeast Regional Big League tournament held in London, the local team missed a trip to the nationals in Miami, Florida after they allowed Georgia to post a 8-7 win Tuesday night at South Laurel High School.

The loss was the second in the tourney to Georgia thus eliminating Paintsville.

Georgia had only one big inning and that was enough as they scored five times in the top of the fifth inning to take a 7-5 lead. The big blow was a three-run home run off the bat of Mike Hodges after two were out in the inning.

Billy Elam, who started on the mound for Paintsville, struggled for the first time in the game as he showed signs of tiring. Elam entered the inning nursing a 5-2 lead until the five run explosion.

Elam walked the leadoff batter and then gave up a base hit by Little. With one out and runners in scoring position Dwayne Hicks signaled home the two runners for a 5-4 game. After retiring Donnelly on a pop foul for the second out Elam, with a two strike count, hit Guest with a pitch and Hodges then unloaded his home run to make it a 7-5 game.

Georgia added a run in the sixth to make it 8-5.

Paintsville tried to come back realizing that it could be their final game of the season. A lead off walk to P.D. Kinchloe set the stage for Brad Tiller monster drive over the rightfield fence and it was 8-7 with no one out.

Brent Adams was plunked with a pitch representing the tying run. However, John Holbrook struck out, Bud Kidd popped to second and Justin Hall forced Adams at second to end the game.

Paintsville took a 4-0 lead with two runs in the first inning and Tiller's first home run, a two-run shot in the second, made it 4-0.

Georgia got on the scoreboard with single runs in the third and fourth inning before tying and taking the lead in the fifth.

Tiller had five RBIs in the game with his two home runs and a sacrifice fly in the fifth.

The Paintsville team played some strong defense but failed to get the runs in while they had them on base.

Paintsville left 13 runners stranded in the game and left the bases loaded in the fourth and sixth innings. Two runners were left on in the first, second and fifth frames.

Elam suffered the loss for Paintsville working the first five innings. Brent Hamilton went the final two and gave up one run on two hits.

Maddox, one of four pitchers Georgia used, picked up the win in relief.

In an earlier game played Tuesday afternoon, Paintsville collected 13 runs as they handed Louisiana a 13-5 setback to keep their tournament hopes alive.

Louisiana had tied the game at 5-5 with a two-run fourth inning but Barry Clark, who started for the Paintsville team, righted himself and shut the Bayou team down on just two hits over the remaining three innings.

Clark went the distance in securing the win. He also had two runs batted in for the winners. He fanned just two batters but only walked one.

Clark was able to keep his pitches low and forced Louisiana to hit the ball on the ground.

Tiller hit a solo home run leading off the fourth inning.

Paintsville scored four times in the opening inning with three coming in on Brent Hamilton's triple down the rightfield line.

Paintsville left the bases jammed in the second without scoring and a single first inning run for Louisiana and two in the third made it a 4-3 game. Tiller's homer gave Paintsville a two run cushion but the Bengals tied the game at 5-5 with two runs in the fourth.

Paintsville sent 10 batters to the plate in the fifth as four runners crossed the plate for a 9-5 game. The local team added four more in the seventh to put the game in the win column. Kidd had a two run double and Brad Scott singled home a run.

Louisiana used three pitchers in the game with Becha going away the loser.

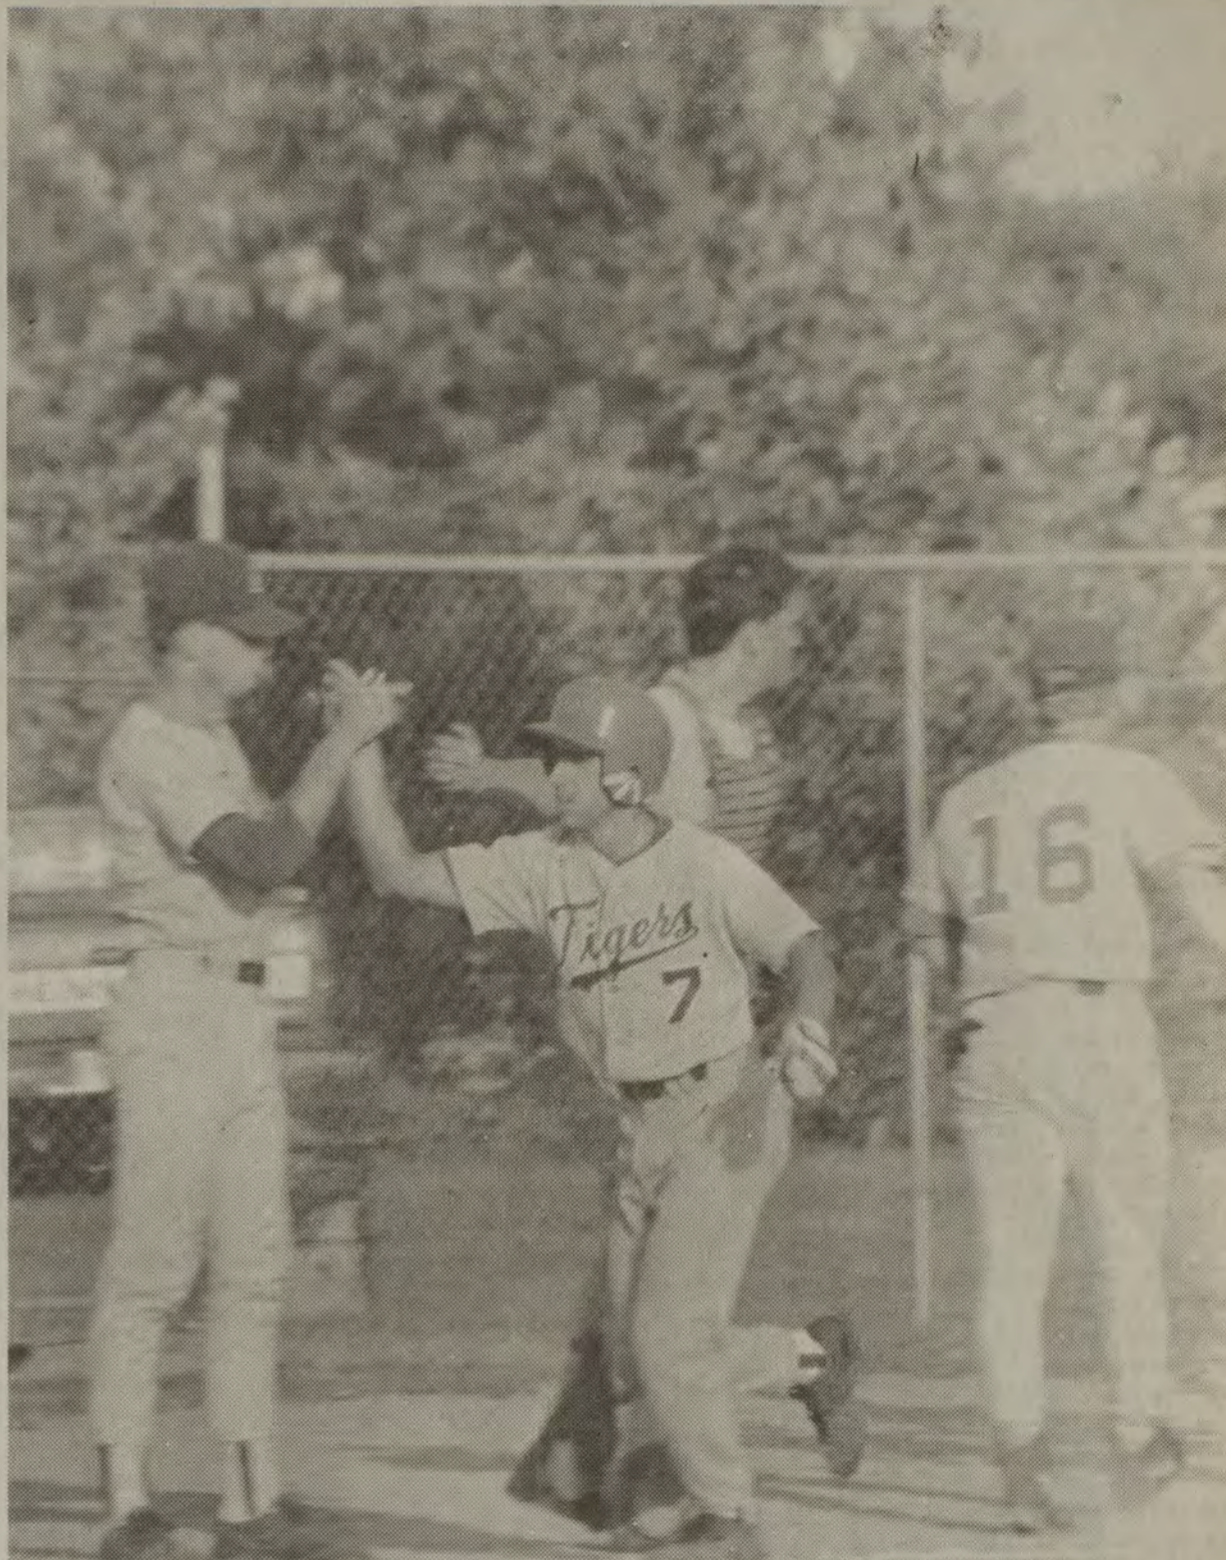

Paintsville fell 8-4 to Georgia in the first game of the tournament as Hatler Riddle made his first appearance for some time. Riddle had been out with an injured knee forcing him to miss the entire state tournament.

Riddle opened shaky in the first giving up four runs in the inning but settled in and was impressive over the next five inning shutting out Georgia before giving way to Scotty Caudill in the sixth.

Georgia scored three times in the seventh to add to a 5-4 lead.

Paintsville scored first in the third on Justin Hall's RBI single to make it a 4-1 game. After Georgia put another run on the scoreboard in the fifth, Paintsville plated two in the bottom of the inning to make it 5-3. Kidd had an RBI single in the inning.

Paintsville scored their final run in the bottom of the seventh to make it 8-4 but also left the bases loaded.

Golf championship to benefit American Cancer Society

The Floyd County Unit of the American Cancer Society is hosting its annual ACS Golf Championship on Saturday, August 7, at John M. Stumbo Golf Course. Tee-off begins at noon. Committee members Eddie Clark, John Goble, William O. Goebel and Doug Turner plan to top last year's tournament.

"It will be scramble format, shotgun start," reports Eddie Clark. "Players will be limited to the first 18 teams to sign up. All monies will go to the American Cancer Society and each donation is tax deductible."

John Goble, of John's Clubhouse, encourages everyone to compete for a Ram Zebra Driver to be given away for the longest drive. The longest drive is separate from the tournament and will be held after the scramble at 5 p.m. Golfers don't have to play the championship to enter.

During the tournament, a Tommy Armour Bag with woods and irons will be awarded to anyone sinking a hole-in-one. A putter and tickets to Autumn Jam will be given to the winner of closest-to-pin.

Winners of the local championship will advance to state competition, at Doe Valley. State winners will go on to compete on a national level at Walt Disney World, Florida.

Area golfers are urged to participate in this event and help raise money to fight cancer. Cancer strikes three in four families and funds are needed for research and public education.

If you would like to make a donation or sponsor a hole, please call John's Clubhouse at 886-0674. Registration forms for the ACS Golf Championship are available at John's Clubhouse, or contact Eddie Clark at 285-5121.

Bassin' with the Pros

Shallow cover near deep water often holds summer bass

If locating and catching bass have been a problem for you this summer, it may be time to change your fishing philosophy. You don't necessarily have to work deep water, just close to it.

That's the advice of former world champion Larry Nixon, a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff and winner of more than $1 million in bass tournament prize money.

"I normally try to fish adjacent to deep water, concentrating on underwater humps, ridges, or long tapering points," says Nixon. "It doesn't matter if you're fishing a shallow lake or a deep lake. In summer, bass prefer to locate near dropoffs where the depth changes."

One of the easiest places to locate a depth change, he adds, is along a creek channel. Channel bends, as well as tapering points falling into that channel, are often productive, especially on natural, river-type lakes.

On deeper man-made impoundments, Nixon looks more for the ridges and bars that rise above the bottom to create depth changes.

Nixon's favorite lure choice throughout the summer is usually a plastic worm, but water conditions may dictate other choices, such as jigs and crankbaits.

"In current, I really prefer a crankbait because I can control it better," explains the Evinrude pro, "and if I'm fishing deeper water, a jig usually produces better results. On some lakes where vegetation is present, I may even use a topwater lure at certain times of the day."

The depth at which summer bass may be caught often surprises anglers, Nixon continues. If fact, if he isn't catching bass at one particular depth, he often moves more shallow instead of deeper.

"Depending on water clarity, I may only fish seven to 12 feet deep," he explains. "To me, the major key is to always be near deep water, not necessarily in it."

"Of course, you have to decide what constitutes deep water in the lake you're fishing. On some lakes, 15 feet is deep, and on others, 35 feet is deep. It depends on the type of lake and what the bass have available to them."

One thing that will nearly always hold bass more shallow in summer, says the Arkansas pro, is cover such as bushes, flooded timber, and even boat docks.

"The ideal situation is to find heavy cover in shallow water adjacent to a depth change into deeper water," he explains. "If you can find a stumpy shoreline or point, for example, along the edge of a creek channel, you'll almost always find bass there."

"I've done it many times."

USING LIGHTER RODS CAN ELIMINATE LOSING FISH

If you lose more than your share of bass because of missed strikes, the problem may not be finicky fish or dull hooks on your lure.

It might be your fishing rod.

That's the opinion of Texas guide and professional tournament angler Randy Dearman, who says changing to lighter action rods has solved the lost-bass problem for him.

"It's especially critical with topwater lures like buzz baits and spoons," explains the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler, "because the fish need an extra second or two to actually engulf the lure before you set the hook."

"A limber rod that flexes easily gives you this time because it bends as soon as the fish hits, and it continues to flex as you do set the hook."

"With a stiff rod, you actually take the lure away from the bass before the fish has a chance to get it."

This is one reason many serious bass fishermen now use fiberglass rods instead of graphite rods for crankbaits, adds Dearman. A limber fiberglass rod flexes the instant a fish strikes, and because the lure is normally moving rapidly when the strike does come, the fish hooks itself.

"Anglers probably miss more bass with topwater buzz baits than on any other lure," says the Johnson pro, "because of the way the fish strike it. Some of the problems are due to the lure design, but most anglers miss because their rods are too stiff and don't allow the bass to completely get the lure."

"As soon as the bass feels the resistance of the rod, it opens its mouth and drops the lure."

Dearman, who has been a bass fishing guide in east Texas for two decades, formerly used only heavy action rods for all his fishing, because that was the accepted practice in fishing.

"Today, I don't use any heavy action rods," he laughs. "My favorite rods are medium action, and they have limber tips so the rods bend easily. I use them for spinnerbaits, jigs and even plastic worms, and don't have any problems with getting a good hook-set."

"Many fishermen believe you need stiff, heavy action rods to be able to bring bass out of heavy cover and up to the surface, but in truth, a lighter action rod will do the same thing, and do it better. Just look at the size of the fish fly fishermen hook and land with their light rods."

"All you have to do is learn to use the rod properly."

Fishermen

by the fishermen's thumb. Free-spooling reels were as yet unknown, so whenever you made a cast or hooked into a big fish that headed for parts unknown, you were likely to get a sharp rap on the knuckles from the whirring reel handles if you let your attention wander.

Hardly anyone owned their own boats in those days. The majority of fishermen depended on rental fleets maintained by boat docks to make their trips afloat. Most of the rental boats were crude wooden affairs put together in the cheapest, most rudimentary way imaginable. They were somewhat more seaworthy than bathtubs, but not by much.

The typical rental boat wended its way from here to there by means of oar-power furnished by the rentee. However, if the rentee really wanted to splurge — or if perhaps he wanted to travel further than he figured his suffering back could propel him — he contracted for an outboard to go with the boat.

Rental outboards were mostly in the 5- to 6-h.p. range and so temperamental it took a mechanical genius to keep one of pesky things running for more than two hours back to back. Many an excursion that began amid snarling exhaust notes and clouds of oily smoke ended in the subdued creak of oarlocks and a fuming monotone of a tired angler's muttered curses.

If memory serves me right, the standard fee for an all-day boat rental was $2. That sounds like a ridiculous pittance nowadays when most boat docks will charge you 4 or 5 bucks just to use their launch ramps. But it was a sizable sum at a time when plenty of folks counted themselves lucky if they earned wages of $8 or $10 a day.

If all this sounds about as appealing as a return to the Dark Ages, it's because I'm leaving out one important part of the equation. Fishermen may have been few and far between back then, but fish surely weren't.

The lakes were still flush with that initial surge of fertility that's characteristic of new reservoirs, and they teemed with crappie, stripes, sauger, walleye, bream, catfish and largemouth and smallmouth bass. Some of the catches chalked up in those days would bring gasps of disbelief from anglers too young to remember.

What got me to thinking about ancient angling history was a fishing trip I took recently on Fort Loudoun Lake, one of the most heavily used impoundments in the TVA chain. Normally you couldn't drive me onto Fort Loudoun Lake with a bullwhip even on a weekday, much less a weekend.

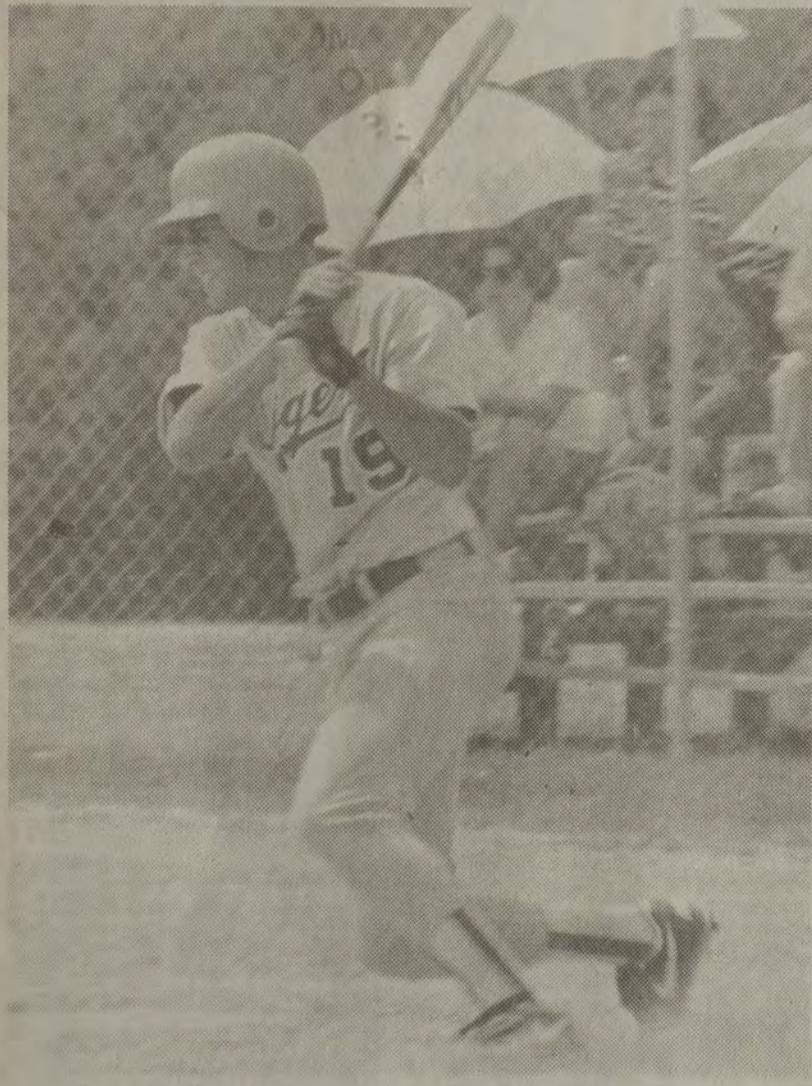

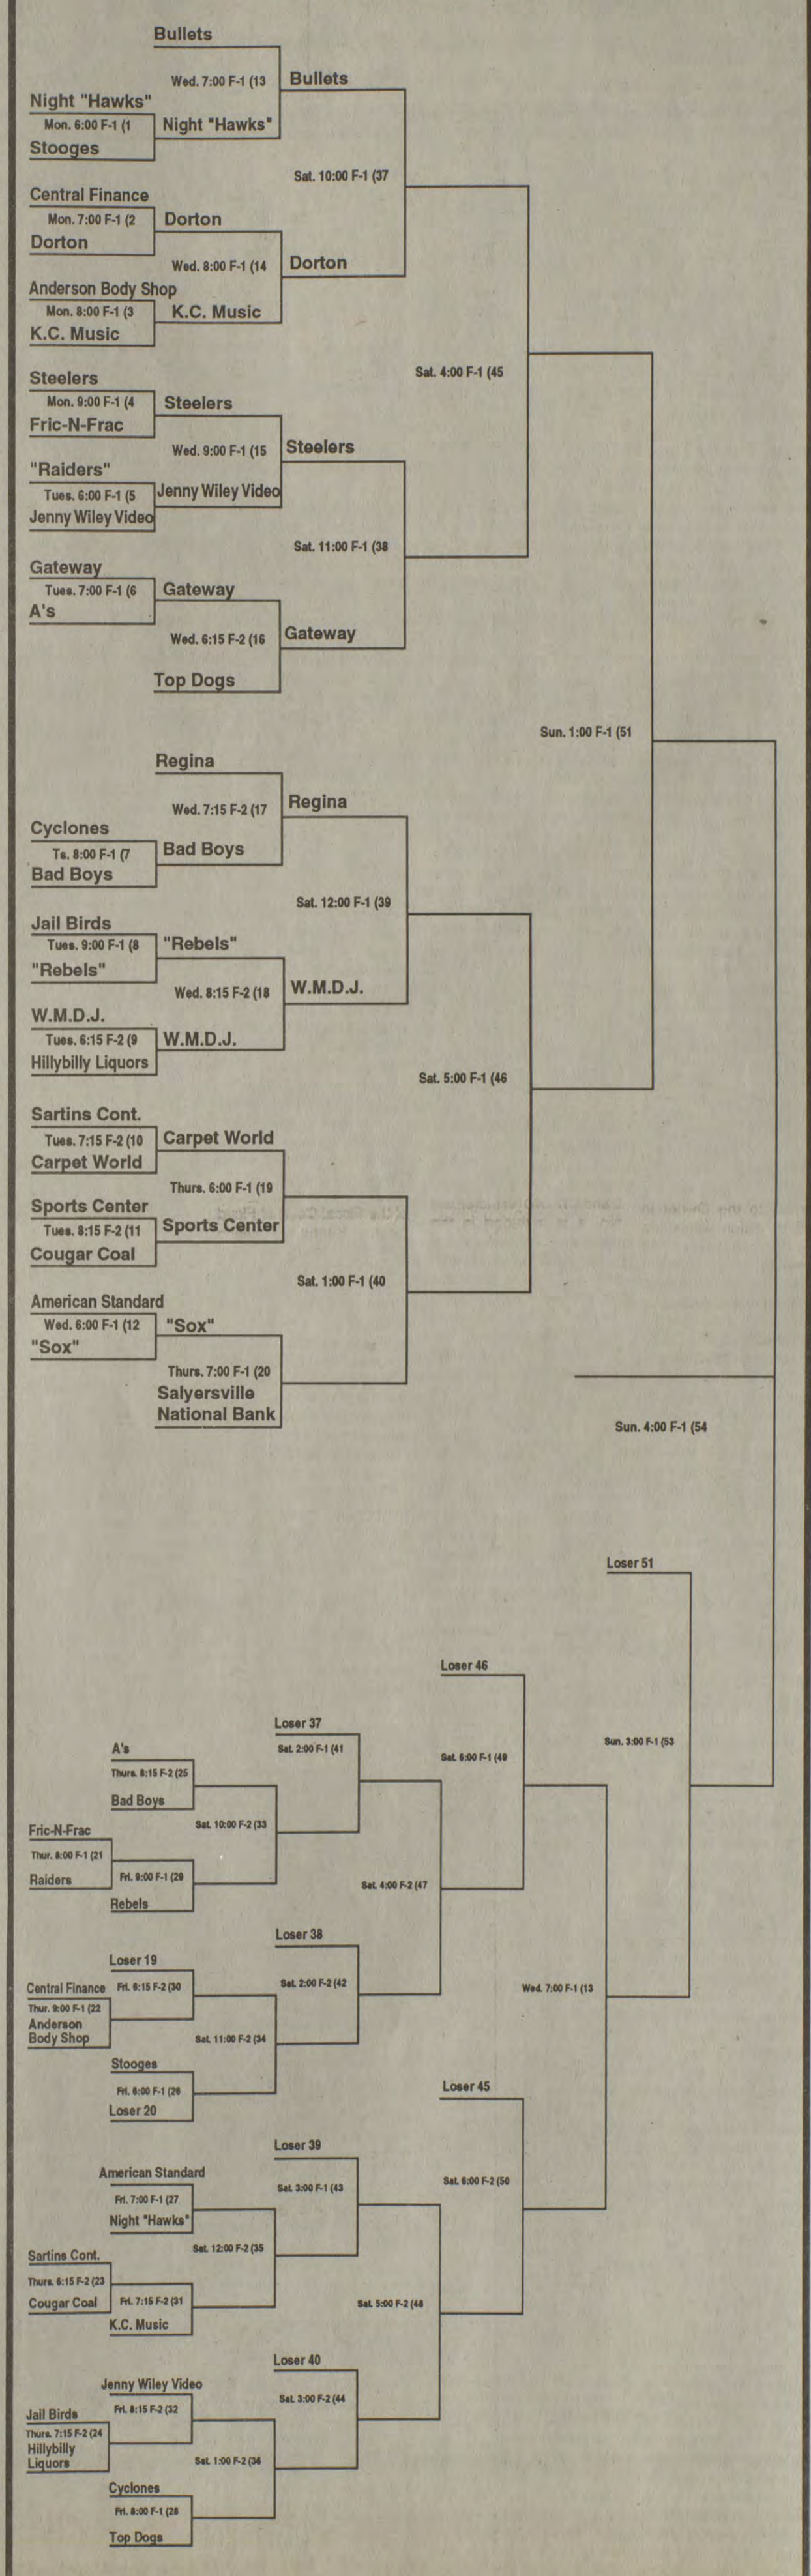

But an old pal of mine from Virginia was down to fish in a Red Man tournament, and he invited me to join him in practice excursion the day before the contest. Not wanting to miss a chance to renew an old friendship, I joined him on the lake.

From past experience, I knew weekend boat traffic on Loudoun is horrendous. But it having been several years since I had been foolish enough to venture onto the lake, things turned out to be much worse than I expected. If you could transplant a carnival midway onto the water, you'd have a rough approximation of what it was like.

My pal was well equipped with all the latest in angling technology — Ranger boat, 150-horse Merc, 3-D depthfinders fore and aft and enough rods and lures to start up a tackle shop. We fished all day under a sun that was like a broiler and got not so much as the first nudge.

Isn't progress a wonderful thing?

STAN SMITH'S TENNIS CLASS

Being Smooth ON CLAY

When playing on clay, like at the French Open, it is important to be smooth and graceful in your movements.

Running on clay must be fluid and without effort. Many players do not feel comfortable on clay, as a result their movements are not as smooth as they need to be in order to win the French Open.

LEGAL NOTICE

SECOND READING OF PROPOSED ORDINANCE '93-004 RELATING TO THE ISSUANCE BY THE FLOYD COUNTY, KENTUCKY PUBLIC PROPERTIES CORPORATION OF ITS FIRST MORTGAGE LEASE REVENUE BONDS SERIES 1993 AND BOND ANTICIPATION NOTES.

The Fiscal Court of Floyd, Kentucky will consider at its August 11, 1993, special called meeting, the second reading of Ordinance 93-004 of the Fiscal Court of Floyd County, Kentucky, relating to the issuance by the Floyd County, Kentucky Public Properties Corporation of its first mortgage lease revenue bonds series 1993 and bond anticipation notes, for the purpose of financing the cost (not otherwise provided) of the construction and equipping of a fairgrounds, convention center and related parking facilities located in Floyd County near Prestonsburg on Ky. Rt. 3, pursuant to the "Holding Company" plan of financing, which plan contemplates a lease of said project property by the corporation to the county on an annual lease-option basis; evidencing the agreement of the county to accept a reconveyance of said property after the retirement of all of said bonds.

The Fiscal Court meeting for consideration of the proposed ordinance will be held at the Floyd County Courthouse/Annex, Prestonsburg, Kentucky at 9:00 a.m. on August 11, 1993. Members of the public may attend the meeting.

The full text of the proposed ordinance is available for public inspection at the office of County Judge/Executive John M. Stumbo during regular business hours at the Floyd County Courthouse Annex, Prestonsburg, Kentucky, 41653.

The Fiscal Court of Floyd County, Kentucky, hereby certifies that this summary of the proposed ordinance is accurate.

QUICK FIX PICNIC TIPS

(NAPS)—Picnic...the perfect antidote for that menu dilemma. Picnics offer the perfect solution to hot weather, even hotter kitchens and the "what's for dinner?" blues. World famous chef Charles Saunders of the Eastside Oyster Bar & Grill in Sonoma, California is acclaimed for his light, piquant specialties and perfect picnics. He's also famed for his helpful hints, both simple and practical, on delighting taste-buds. How does he develop the perfect picnic?

"A little organization and advance planning can save you time and keep you cool," says Saunders. "Keep the standards simple—no need to pile on the pounds at picnic time." His idea is to breeze through the preparation and focus on three courses. Easy to cook, easy to pack and easy to carry.

Avoid those heavy mayonnaise-laden foods, once the mainstay of picnics. One example of an excellent picnic entree is the MARINATED GRILLED BREAD OF CHICKEN AU JUS, covered overnight in a special Florida citrus marinade, then grilled. The chicken is then topped with a moderately spicy orange salsa, wrapped individually in aluminum foil and served chilled from the foil at picnic time. The chicken is moist and perfect for eating with the fingers.

Chef Saunders' California cuisine seems a natural for new age appetites: light, low in salt and fats, and focused on fresh fruits and vegetables. A perfect salad accompaniment for the chicken is a pasta salad like PASTA TROPICANA. It's angel hair pasta (which cooks quickly), tossed with a ginger raspberry vinaigrette dressing. Steamed shrimp and toasted sesame seeds complete this simple, yet exotic dish.

For the final course, Saunders suggests serving fresh strawberries, grapes, cheese and shortbread cookies. You'll have a healthy sampling of the four food groups to move you deliciously through your picnic.

Passionate about the right pairing of fruit with food, he adds that selecting an exciting beverage will complement the perfect picnic. One of today's newest beverages is fruit tea. Saunders likes to pack chilled bottles of new Tropicana Fruit Tea, in raspberry, tangerine and peach flavors, because they are ten percent fruit juice and thirst-quenching. Bury them in a bucket of ice and watch the gulping begin.

MARINATED GRILLED BREAD OF CHICKEN AU JUS WITH SALSA To serve 8: estimate two-3 oz. chicken breasts per guest. The ginger vinaigrette is used for both the marinade and the pasta salad.

GINGER VINAIGRETTE 1 cup low-salt soy sauce 1/2 cup balsamic vinegar 2 Tbsp. grated fresh ginger Touch of cayenne pepper 3/4 cup sesame oil 2 cups Tropicana® Raspberry Fruit Tea Combine and mix well (set aside)

THE MARINADE: 2 cups each Tropicana® Pure Premium® Original Orange Juice and Pure Premium® Golden Grapefruit Juice 2 cups Tropicana® Tangerine Fruit Tea 1 cup ginger vinaigrette Cook first two ingredients on medium heat until you have 1/3 less liquid. Cool. Add fruit tea and ginger vinaigrette, stirring slowly. Pour over chicken and refrigerate overnight. Remove chicken and grill for 2 minutes on each side, garnish with orange salsa.

ORANGE SALSA 2 fresh peeled oranges, diced 1 red pepper diced 1 cucumber diced 4 Tbsp. cilantro chopped

Mix together and top each piece of chicken with salsa before wrapping in foil.

PASTA TROPICANA FOR 8 8 cups cooked angel hair pasta, broken into two inch pieces, (2 Tbsp. oil in water as it cooks) drained, rinse and cooled 1 1/2 pounds steamed medium shrimp, set aside and cooled 2 fresh cantaloupes, sliced (if desired) 2 bunches fresh watercress 2 1/2 cups ginger vinaigrette 3 tsp. roasted sesame seeds Layer pieces of cantaloupe, watercress, pasta. Arrange shrimp on top. Pour balance of ginger vinaigrette over pasta and shrimp, and top with sesame seeds.

Rhode Island has the largest population density of any U.S. state; however, Puerto Rico is even more densely populated.

The population of the U.S. increased by an estimated 22,167,670 between 1980 and 1990.
