Chamber dishes out awards at banquet

by Scott Perry
Times Editor

A county native and a visitor who came and decided to stay were inducted Tuesday into the Floyd County Hall of Fame during the annual meeting of the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce.

John M. Stumbo, whose political career has spanned 40 years as a member of the county board of education and currently as county judge executive, was recognized Tuesday for his contributions to Floyd County and for a lifetime of public service. Stumbo served as chairman of the board for the Floyd County Board of Education, and is currently serving his tenth year as judge-executive.

Dr. Chandra Varia, a native of India, was recognized by the Chamber Tuesday for 15 years of service as an obstetrician who has delivered more than 3,400 children in Floyd County.

Dr. Varia, who is now retired from her practice in Martin, was also recognized for her community service, which includes the development of scholarship programs at Prestonsburg Community College.

Also during Tuesday annual meeting, the Chamber named Prestonsburg businessman Paul Phillip Hughes as Floyd Countyman of the Year, recognizing Hughes for his efforts to develop the Mountain Arts Center. Hughes has served as fund-raising chairman for that project, which should be under construction this fall.

Dolores Smith, a partner in R&S Body Inc. at Allen, was selected Businessperson of the Year by the Chamber. Smith is a member of the Floyd County Board of Education and also sits as an active member of the Floyd County Development Authority.

Business of the Year recognition went to Highlands Regional Medical Center, which is currently marking its 25th anniversary.

Special achievement awards were

Work began Thursday on the site for a new Floyd County Jail, which will be built behind the courthouse. Part of the courthouse parking lot was roped off, which is expected to cause some parking problems. The new jail is expected to be finished in just over a year. (photo by Susan Allen)

Former presidential guard now guards eastern district

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

Joe Russell Mullins was a member of the Marine Honor Guard at the White House during the Eisenhower and Kennedy administrations, served as a member of the security force at the United Nations and at the Camp David Accord meetings, and for 28 years was deputy marshal of the Eastern District of Kentucky.

But the pinnacle of the Wayland native's career as a lawman occurred February 16 when he was sworn in as United States marshal of the Eastern District of Kentucky.

Mullins, 57, comes from a family of lawmen. Mullin's father, the late Oak Mullins, was a policeman at Wayland for 25 years; his uncle Troy Mullins was a Wayland policeman for about 40 years; and his cousin Eugene Mullins was a policeman of the town for 20 years. Sergeant Jim Mullins of the Prestonsburg City Police Department is also Mullins' cousin.

Law enforcement, you might say, is in the marshal's blood.

As an officer of the federal court,

Mullins oversees the administrative and operations for the Eastern District composed of 67 counties in the eastern half of Kentucky. His headquarters is Lexington, where he spends three days a week. Once a week he visits one of the district's satellite offices located in Ashland, Covington, Pikeville, and London, where there are five federal courts.

Comparing the duties of deputy marshal to marshal, he said in a recent interview at the Times, "As deputy marshal, you transport prisoners to and from all penitentiaries all over the continental United States and Alaska and Hawaii. You're on the road seventy-five percent of the time."

As marshal, "You become boss. You tell them (deputy marshals) to (transport prisoners) to the penitentiary instead of you driving," he said, smiling. "My responsibility is to see that the prisoners are transported to their destinations...I have the same duties as the sheriff of a county, but now I have 67 counties. It's like being sheriff of 67 counties all at the same time."

Mullins could be thought of as a modern-day Marshal Dillon. He doesn't wear a badge or carry a weapon, but he commands respect nonetheless. Tall and distinguished-looking with white hair and a military bearing, he is an imposing figure, impeccably dressed in suit and tie. He seems the perfect candidate to be a marshal. But he found his way into law enforcement almost by accident.

After graduating from Wayland High School, Mullins took a job in Panel set to review bids in closed session

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

An agenda item for today's (Friday) special meeting of the Floyd County Solid Waste Commission, which lists going into closed session to review bids for garbage services in Floyd County, appears to be in violation of the state Open Meeting Law.

Under the Open Meeting statutes, there is no exemption for reviewing bids of this nature in a closed session.

Item six of the commission's special meeting agenda is to go into closed session "to commence evaluation of bids" received for solid waste collection and disposal.

A spokesman for the Legislative Research Commission said Thursday that the reason listed for the closed session on the commission's agenda "doesn't seem to fit within the exceptions" under the Open Meeting Law.

Under the law, exceptions to open meetings include: discussions of future acquisition or sale of real property; proposed or pending litigation; collective bargaining negotiations; the appointment, discipline or dismissal of an individual employee; and discussions between a public agency and a representative of a business entity and discussions concerning a specific proposal, if open discussions would jeopardize the siting, retention, expansion or upgrading of the business.

There is no provision in the statute which allows for the evaluation of sealed bids to be discussed in private.

The Floyd County Fiscal Court

voted last month to advertise for proposals to privatize the county's garbage pick up and disposal after the court voted down a privately negotiated deal by County Attorney Jim Hammond and Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo for those same services with Rumpke of Kentucky.

At the May 20 fiscal court meeting, Magistrates Jackie Edford Owens and Tommy Neil Adams suggested that the services be put out for bids to insure the county received the best proposal. In an unanimous vote, the court agreed to advertise for bids for the services.

The Big Sandy Area Development District put together the request for proposals, which included door-to-door collections; construction and operation of a transfer station; and transportation and disposal of the

Lawyers say drug company holding back information

The attorneys of two Floyd County widows, who claim their husbands were driven to suicide by the sleeping pill Halcion, have accused The Upjohn Co. of withholding documents in the case.

Ned Pillersdorf of Prestonsburg and Gary Pillersdorf of New York are representing the widows of Billy Johnson and Luther Messer. Johnson, 59, formerly of Weeksbury, and Messer, 68, formerly of Garrett, shot themselves in 1991. Johnson shot himself in February and Messer shot himself in October.

Floyd Circuit Judge John David Caudill has ordered the Upjohn company to supply the attorneys with the documents, but he cautioned the attorneys that the documents could only be used in these cases.

"You can't have these documents for someone else to practice their case with," Caudill said.

An attorney for Up-John, which is based in Kalamazoo, Michigan, last week told a judge that he had been waiting to receive confirmation from the widows' attorneys that the documents would not be used in other cases.

"All we want to do is to be able to come here and try these two cases," Upjohn attorney David Brooks said. "Next thing you know, you have Upjohn research and development documents, which is the lifeblood of any pharmaceutical company, spread all over the place."

Gary Pillersdorf claimed that plaintiffs are being intimidated and that Upjohn is making the documents hard and expensive to get. He argued that expert witness were afraid to testify.

Purchase order methods at Martin may cause legal trouble for council

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Martin City Council members may find themselves in a legal quandary because apparently purchases are being made for the city without using purchase orders.

At Wednesday's council meeting, councilman Everett Akers Jr. was apparently upset that several items were up for approval on the monthly expense report which had not been issued purchase orders.

Council members voted earlier this year to use a purchase order system to document city expenditures, but in several instances, items have been bought without purchase orders being used.

City clerk Johnnie B. Stephens told council that state law requires that a purchase order system be in place to document expenditures.

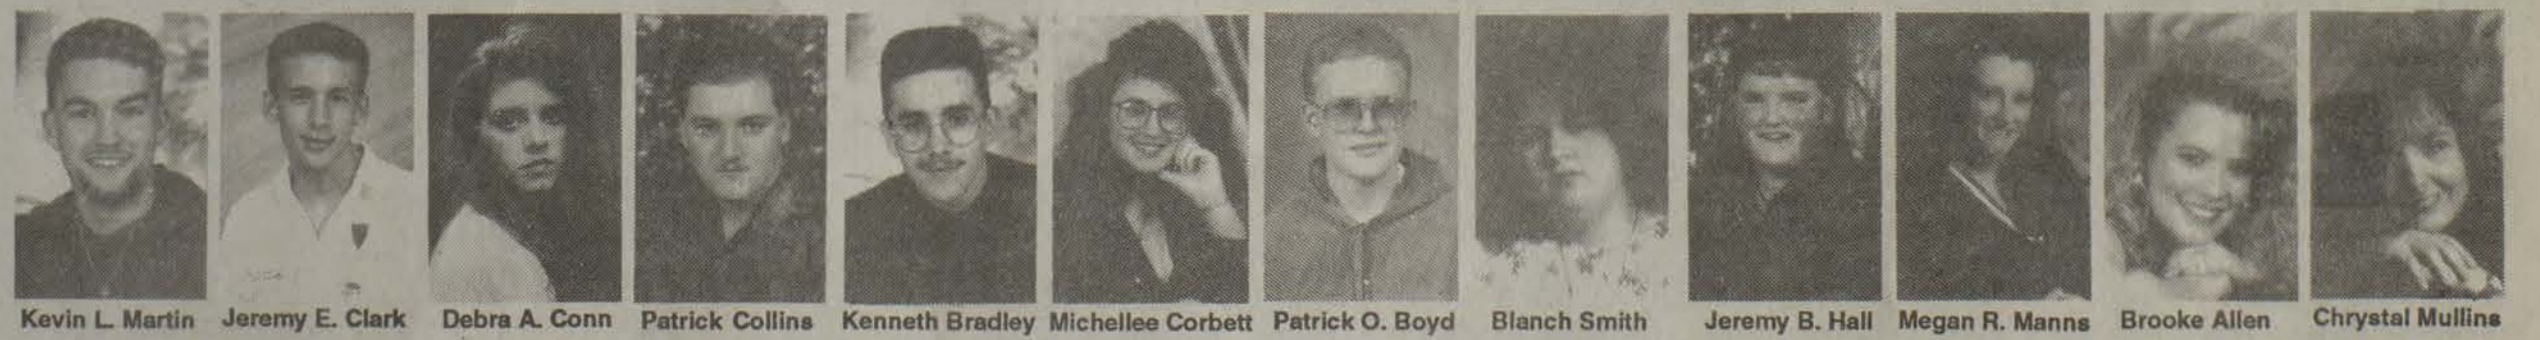

Councilman Akers tried to impress upon other members the importance of using the system.

"I need to get it across that we can be impeached if we don't follow the law," Akers said. "We should not approve paying for anything without a purchase order. There has to be a purchase order for everything you buy."

Akers also chided Mayor Raymond Griffith for approving purchases without following the system in place and told the clerk, "if Raymond Griffith tells you to pay for something without a purchase order, don't do it."

Twelve seniors are in Allen Central High School's top ten

Allen Central's graduating class will be the last of the four county high schools to hold their commencement exercises as Allen Central seniors will graduate this Tuesday, June 14 in the school's gym.

There are 105 seniors set to receive their diplomas and among those graduating, 12 students have earned the distinction as tops of the class as they rank among the class's Top Ten. The school decided to have 12 in the Top Ten due to a tie at the ninth and tenth spots.

The Top 12 graduates are:

• Kevin L. Martin. Martin is the son of Lowell and Patricia Martin of Langley and is the valedictorian of Allen Central's class of 1994.

• Jeremy E. Clark. Clark is the son of John and Anita Clark of Eastern and ranks as the salutatorian of the class.

• Debra A. Conn. Conn, the daughter of Perry and Ann Conn of Martin, finished as the third ranking senior in the class.

• Patrick W. Collins. Collins is the son of John and Rebecca Collins of Wayland and ranks number four in the graduating class.

• Kenneth W. Bradley. Bradley is the son of Ballard and Patty Robinson of Estill and is fifth in the class.

• Michelle R. Corbett. Corbett is the daughter of Beverly and Lee Corbett and ranks sixth in the class.

• Patrick O. Boyd. Boyd, the son of Carla Boyd of Eastern, ranks number seven in the class.

• Blanche Smith. Smith is the daughter of Tom and Dee Smith of Langley and is eighth in the class.

• Jeremy B. Hall. Hall is the son of Dale and Marla Hall of Martin and is one of two seniors to finish in the ninth spot.

• Megan R. Manns. Manns, the daughter of Roy and Sandy Manns of Hueysville, also tied for ninth in the class.

• Brooke Allen. Allen is the daughter of Ricky and Teresa Allen of Garrett and ranks in a tie for tenth in the class.

• Chrystal Mullins. Mullins is the daughter of Jody and Eileen Mullins of Hueysville and rounds out the top ten of this year's class.

U.S. Marshal

the Elkhorn Mine at Wayland. "It was the only job I could get. I wanted to see the world," he said. "I was fresh out of high school, waiting for college."

One day while he was working in the mine, a rock fell on him. "I was not injured, just scared," he said. "I thought, 'Well, I might start looking for another job.'"

Instead, in 1958, he was drafted into the Marines and stationed in Washington, D.C. He was 22 years old. Soon after, a team from the White House came to inspect his outfit. "They got us out of our barracks and lined us all up and said, 'I'll take you, and take you and you,'" he said, pointing his finger at imaginary selections. "I was four months fresh out of Marine boot camp. I thought, 'What am I getting into now?'"

The team was selecting soldiers for the prestigious Marine Honor Guard, which served as part of the White House and Camp David security force and was present at all state affairs.

"The FBI did a background investigation. Out of about 25, three of us made it," Mullins said. "...They took us to boot camp to learn how to shine shoes, how to march, walk, how to wear a uniform. We also learned our duties and secrets of Camp David and the White house."

He added, "I was impressed. I was a little boy out of the head of Right Beaver, and then I was standing in the White House."

After 18 months, he became the sergeant of the honor guard. As sergeant, "You inspect everything," he said. "You make sure the platoon is out and spotless... We worked very hard at it. There was no room for error...It was very demanding. Everything had to be spit and polish."

From 1958 to 1961, the last years of the Eisenhower administration and the first year of the Kennedy administration, Mullins was present at state affairs that included dignitaries such as Charles De Gaulle, president of France; Nikita S. Khrushchev, premier of the Soviet Union; and Harold Macmillan, Prime Minister of England.

"For the first six months, I was in awe (of the dignitaries)," Mullins said. "Then you see the pressure they are operating under and slowly see them as human beings. They have problems like me, only bigger."

He remembers President John F. Kennedy as being very personable. "He would stop and talk to the people. He was a very personable type."

Eisenhower was the opposite. "He would drive right by. He never forgot that he was a general or president."

The only time Mullins saw a president cry was at Camp David during one of the last days of Eisenhower's term in office. Mullins recalled that the president called the guard out and gave them each a silver dollar as a "thank you" for their service. "He said he had been at Camp David so long, he thought it was his, he was so attached to it. He shook our hands. The president was crying."

Did Mullins cry? "A little," he admitted.

He shared a few anecdotes about

President Kennedy: "Once at the White House, President Kennedy came through, stepped outside and took a briefcase he was carrying and tossed it over his shoulder back into the White House. A Marine Corporal Colonel came running after the briefcase and snatched it up. I've always wondered what was in that briefcase," Mullins mused, smiling.

Another anecdote: "It was winter-time and a secret service agent came through and said, 'Better clear out the area. The boss is coming through.' I said I would take care of it later. I was sitting in a lawn chair (near a corner of the White House) trying to get some sun. I looked, and there was President Kennedy coming around the corner. I popped up. I scared him as much as he scared me. He was very, very considerate. He talked to me several minutes to calm me down. He knew I was nervous and young."

In 1961, Mullins' enlistment was up. "I declined to re-enlist," he said. "I wanted to come home. I went with the Kentucky State Police. I was assigned to Boyd County for 30 months."

In 1964, he applied for and was appointed deputy marshal of the Eastern District, where he was in charge of the field office. During his 28 years as deputy, he was given special assignments by the U. S. Department of Justice, such as providing personal security to visiting foreign dignitaries. He was selected to serve as member of the security force for the Camp David Accord meetings during the Carter administration. The meetings were attended by the leaders of Egypt, Israel, United States and their staff.

"The Carter administration worked with the Israelis through the United Nations," he said. "When the Israelis went from New York to Camp David, I went with them."

Mullins became friends with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and two other Israeli leaders. "I made them Kentucky Colonels," he said, grinning.

But Mullins' greatest career achievement was his appointment as United State Marshal on February 14, after being confirmed by President Clinton and by a unanimous vote of the United States Senate.

Mullins chose to keep Eastern

Kentucky as his home base because, he said, "of the low crime rate, the integrity of the people, the friendship and the goodness of them...If you look at the cities and look at Eastern Kentucky, Eastern Kentucky is a lot better — if you can make a living. Sometimes you get tired of the fast lane."

Mullins and his wife, Emma Ruth Vanhose, also of Wayland, now live in Ashland, but visit their hometown often. "We have friends there and cousins and aunts," he said. "We try to go back every few months. The coal camp house I was raised in is still there."

Mullins said that despite witnessing historic events at the White House and meeting heads of state, his most memorable experiences are "being sworn in as marshal and having President Clinton write me a letter personally. It ranks right up there with seeing a president cry."

Mayor Griffith told council he had approved several of the purchases and seemed unfazed by Akers' ire about the situation. The mayor added that council should define what constitutes an emergency in case he had to approve an expenditure without prior council approval.

Councilwoman Hazel Robinson also appeared to be concerned about the situation saying, "we're just everyone going to the pen."

Also Wednesday, council voted to advertise for a city attorney, saying they felt that their attorney, Keith Bartley, had "abandoned" them.

"We've got to have legal advice," councilman Alan Whicker said. "We need to advertise for another attorney. If our attorney doesn't show up at the meetings, he's abandoned his position. He's resigned from us."

Bartley said Thursday that he has been considering resigning his position because of an increased caseload in his private practice. He added that he postponed announcing his resignation until all legal work had been done on the city's sewer project.

"With my increased caseload, I don't have the time to give the council the time they think I should," Bartley said. "I wanted to resolve the litigation involving the sewer plant project before I left, and a judgment was signed in the case last month."

Big Sandy Area Development District representative Libby Ratcliff cautioned council to follow proper procedures to hire an attorney.

Councilman Whicker joked that council needed to hire a lawyer to tell them how to hire a lawyer.

In other action Wednesday, an order by council that city police officers park their vehicles at the police station after their shift, touched off a heated exchange between councilman Akers and police supervisor James Burke.

Burke accused Akers of "being against the police department" and when Burke made a comment and used the word "hell," Akers told him he could lose his job if "he didn't watch his mouth."

In other business Wednesday: • Walter Clyde Dingus, member of the Red, White and Blue committee, told council that the committee will meet Monday, June 13 at 7 p.m. at city hall and that anyone interested in helping with the event is welcome to attend;

• council issued a directive that utilities clerk Ester Rice attend the next council meeting or be fired; and • council voted to make it top priority to pay a past due debt for water to the City of Prestonsburg.

Councilmen Steve Jenkins and Denzil Halbert were absent from Wednesday's meeting.

Clarification:

An article in Wednesday's paper about "The Littlest Hero" Hailey Scarberry said that Mary Terry took Hailey to Wal-Mart and bought her two dolls on the morning of the accident. Terry took Hailey to the home of Debbie Bailey. A few days after the accident Terry bought the dolls for the four-year-old heroine.

fearing a lawsuit because the company had obtained orders in other states protecting certain documents.

"To put it in plain language, they're scaring the heck out of my witnesses," Gary Pillersdorf said.

Judge Caudill told the Pillersdorfs that expert witnesses could testify to their general knowledge of the drug, as long as the attorneys don't cite the protected document. Brooks concurred with the ruling.

"I can't lobotomize the experts," he said. "Their knowledge is intact; they certainly can use it."

Brooks said the documents have business value and that he is trying to keep Caudill's courtroom from being "turned into some kind of clearing-house for Halcion documents."

The Pillersdorfs claim that Upjohn has lied to federal officials about the side effects of Halcion, once the world's best-selling sleeping pill, and that the company was negligent in its marketing.

The Messer trial has been scheduled for August 29; the Johnson case will be heard on September 26. The suits also name Highlands Regional Medical Center at Prestonsburg and several physicians.

State treatment centers help young offenders join class of '94

Grads despite great odds—those are the 108 teenagers who have completed high school credentials this year while living at the state's 12 residential treatment centers for juvenile offenders.

"We believe they would likely be 108 school dropouts were it not for their own determination and the focus that staff members at all of our treatment centers have on education," said Dan Childs, director of the Department for Social Services' Children's Residential Services Division.

The youth have been convicted of public offenses and many have been suspended or expelled from school; they are at treatment centers for periods averaging six months but ranging up to two years.

They are in classes on site for six hours a day, and may take their diploma or GED on to college, vocational training or jobs upon release from the facility.

"Many of these teen-agers grew up in tough circumstances," Childs said. "Our staff members know that the kids desperately need successes and have little chance of 'making it' outside unless they complete high school.

"So I can't say enough for our staff, teachers and counselors who help them believe in themselves and then work really hard to help them achieve that first education goal and prepare for a fresh start at the same time."

If they finish their GED and there is time while they are at the centers, college correspondence courses are arranged to give them a taste of what college would be like—and the realization that they can achieve even higher goals, he said.

Alice Martinson, state coordinator for the division's education programs, said that about 35 completed a college correspondence course last year, "taking away with them on more boost of success."

They also take resumes that translate their work experiences, training and chores to job skills; transcripts and certificates for academic achievements, and job search and interview skills, she said.

In addition to their academic courses—and many of them come with poor reading skills and have to start with basic literacy—they can take courses offered at various centers in horticulture, industrial arts, business and health occupations and auto mechanics.

Martinson said national research shows that of juveniles who have been in trouble with the law, only 10 percent go back to school. Of that 10 percent, only 1 percent graduate.

"That's why we push for high school completion while they are with us, so they have that ticket to go on to jobs, colleges, and vocational and/or on-the-job training opportunities."

She added that by the end of June, "graduates" at all of the division's treatment facilities will number around 200 for the year. That includes troubled youths in special classes at day treatment centers and those living in group homes who attend local schools.

New legislation affects tire retailers

Beginning July 15, 1994, tire retailers must comply with the new reporting and fee assessment requirements of the recently enacted House Bill 399. This new legislation, which amends the current waste tire law, is designed to minimize the number and size of illegal tire dumps and to promote recycling and proper disposal of used tires.

Tire retailers will be required to report to the Revenue Cabinet the number of new tires sold and the number of waste tires disposed of each month. Retailers will have to file the Motor Vehicle Tire Fee Report regardless of whether they are exempt from paying the $1 per tire fee on each new tire sold. The fee supports the Waste Tire Fund, which is used to promote tire recycling and to clean up existing tire dumps in the state.

Fee exemptions for retailers are limited under the new legislation. The Natural Resources and Environmental Protection Cabinet can grant exemptions to those retailers that have, and can provide, copies of contracts with recovered material processing facilities, waste tire recycling facilities and residual landfills designed to accept waste tires only (monofills). If tire retailers do not have contracts with any of these facility types by July 15, or have not updated their exemptions to reflect a new contract, the Cabinet will revoke any existing exemptions.

Information about tire fee exemptions and proper disposal is available by contacting Richard Jett at the Division of Waste Management, 14 Reilly Rd., Frankfort, KY 40601.

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

Guest editorial:

Open and closed

On Tuesday, if you were of a mind to do so, you could have hopped in the old car, driven to the state Capitol and sat in on the House Republican caucus.

There, you could have heard Reps. Ken Harper and Lonnie Napier debate the merits of spending state money on new golf courses. You also could have heard Rep. Steve Nunn's pitch for adding $10 million to the budget for such programs as cancer screenings, immunizations and tuberculosis testing.

When all the talking was done, the House Republicans decided to support a lean budget—similar to the Senate spending plan—that adds the $10 million in human services programs and provides for repair work on state parks, but does not include any new construction.

This was a small exercise in representative democracy; a group of elected officials discussing budgetary issues and reaching a decision about how best to address those issues. And it was done in public. Anyone could walk in, sit down and watch the action.

If, while you were in Frankfort, you wandered over to where House Democrats were having their own caucus, you would have found a different story. There, you would have encountered closed doors— with perhaps a few reporters hanging around outside, waiting for the meeting to end.

What did the Democrats talk about? Presumably the same issues discussed by Republicans. But the Democrats' discussions were conducted in secret, so the voters of Kentucky don't know what went on during the meeting. The public's only knowledge of the debate comes from the Democrats' own sanitized version of the debate.

The same scenario plays itself out in the Senate. The public is welcome at Republican caucuses, but the doors are closed to all corners when the Democrats get together. Because Democrats control both houses, that means key legislative decisions affecting everyone in the commonwealth are made in secret. It is in caucus that Democrats adopt a party line on any given issue; and that party line, by virtue of the Democrats' majority status and their methods of enforcing party discipline, usually determines the fate of any piece of legislation.

Now, don't get the idea that GOP lawmakers are unfailing paragons of legislative openness. When delegates from the House and Senate get together later this week to iron out their budgetary differences in a conference committee, Republican lawmakers will join in the secret proceedings. Of course, they don't have a lot of choice. They don't have enough votes to change the rules of the game.

If anything, the secrecy is more objectionable in conference committees than in caucus meetings. Particularly when the budget is involved, a conference committee tends to produce an entirely new piece of legislation, one that most lawmakers haven't even seen before they asked to vote on it. And particularly when the budget is involved, a conference committee's work tends to include a lot of "you-scratch-my-back, I'll-scratch-yours" deals—all consummated behind closed doors.

This is no way for a democratic (or Democratic) government to work. The legislative process may be as visually unappealing as the sausage-making process; but it must be conducted in the open, for all the world to see. Lawmakers who opt for secrecy in their proceedings do so only because they don't want to be held accountable for their actions by the voters of their district. That's something for Democrats to ponder—and for Republicans to exploit—as the fall election campaigns draw nearer.—Guest editorial from Lexington Herald-Leader

Have listened, watched, read, and talked with advocates on both sides of the educational fence for almost two years now. There are some who blindly support the Kentucky Education Reform Act, almost as if it was handed to us on tablets by Moses himself. Then there are some who think KERA is the work of the devil, a socialistic experiment whose creation is a conspiracy of the left wing Marxists, big business, and otherwise reasonable politicians. Of course, they're both wrong.

Right or wrong, the Kentucky Supreme Court forced the Kentucky legislature to attempt to reverse our state's history of ineffective education. In 1989, those 138 men and women had a difficult job to do, and less than a year to do it. As the 1994 session winds down we should reflect on what our legislators tried to do in 1990 and what they are still committed to today.

First, the funding in many of the state's school districts was abhorrent. From the top to the bottom, we were spending far below the national average per pupil. It was clear that in many cases, you get what you pay for, and we were getting exactly that. Many districts didn't have money to pay for the most essential of needs—one school I visited even had buckets placed throughout the school to catch the water when it rained. As a consequence, funding has increased by 38 percent since 1989. No district receives less money than they did pre-KERA.

Second, the legislature wanted to get rid of the corruption that existed in many of our state's school districts. In most communities the school district is the largest employer, making the fight for control of the district's money and jobs very tempting. While there are multiple examples of success stories here, the important thing to note is that the commissioner now has the authority to do something about it—power that didn't exist before.

Third, it was obvious that children were not coming to school ready to learn. Poverty has taken a heavy toll on Kentucky children. Children worried about being hungry, abused, or neglected are simply not going to have the desire to learn. They have more pressing needs. As a result, the legislature created Family Resource and Youth Service Centers, which place a coordinator in needy schools to help channel needs for social services to the appropriate agency. Without question, this has been the most successful strand of KERA to date. Also, KERA created pre-school programs for those children in need of it most—at-risk four year olds and children with disabilities.

Fourth, too many children were falling behind, and didn't have ample opportunity to catch up. The end result was inevitably a dropout, a drain on society through unemployment, welfare, and/or prison. We needed to have a system where children who needed it could have extra class time before or after school to keep them on track for graduation. Extended School Services was created to fill this need. Research recently released also shows that this program is succeeding.

Fifth, teachers were making it known that they considered themselves professionals, and expected to be compensated and otherwise treated as such. Fair enough. The legislature looked at the compensation programs across the country, and determined that our teachers' salaries ranked 42 out of the 50 states. Since our goal is to have a first rate education system, we can't have our employees' pay at the low end of the scale. Now teachers salaries rank 29 out of the 50 states—a substantial improvement. Like other professionals, teachers need high quality and frequent professional development. In response, the legislature has agreed for the past four years (and now for two additional years) to allow individual districts to add up to five more professional days to their school calendar. As teachers will tell you, it takes every bit of that to prepare for the kinds of restructuring it will take to make our children internationally competitive.

Sixth, the public was demanding more accountability of our education system. With the large tax increase needed to fund the changes, the public (70 percent of whom don't have children in the public schools) wanted assurances that the money was being spent wisely. Additionally, business people were demanding that high school graduates have more skills than just the ability to memorize facts. They needed to be able to think. Using these two guidelines as a beacon, the legislature applied tried-and-true business principles to education: if you don't succeed in meeting your targeted performance, you have to improve; if you don't improve after getting training, you could lose your job. It's pretty simple. And hard for a business person to understand why some teachers are so resistant to a standard that the rest of society lives with.

There are more issues that I could address, but I'll stop here. The point is that the legislature of 1990 looked at the problems facing Kentucky's education system and did something about them. I applaud them for the solutions they came up with. They addressed nearly all the ills of our state's education system. Only a dreamer would think that we could become a national leader in education if we didn't start with these basic principles.

Was the 1990 legislature divinely inspired? No. Will we continue to identify areas where we need to make adjustments as circumstances change? I hope so. But we need to do so in an honest, factual forum, without the inflammatory, misleading, and—frankly—hateful rhetoric I've heard in the past few months.

My high school history teacher taught us that we needed to study history because he who is ignorant of history is doomed to repeat it. Let's not repeat it here. Our children deserve better.

Young Authors books judged—winner chosen for 1994

by Thelma Spears
Part-Time Writing Program
Assistant of Floyd County Schools

The judging of school winning Young Author's books for determining County Winners was held at the Wilkinson/Stumbo Convention Center, Saturday, May 7.

Those who participated in the judging included 14 staff members from Prestonsburg Community College and 18 people from various communities—retired teachers, professional writers, clergy, and business people who are named in the following: Patty Scalf, Mildred Brooks, Geneva Hamilton, Jo Branham, Beulavene Hall, Madeline Clark, Chessie Cornette, Imogene Caldwell, Polly Ward, Judy Goble, Crate Meade, Jr., Ernestine Meade, Tom Matijasic, Jean Justice, Russ Holland, Martha Perry, Eileen Lewandowski, Dolores Smith, Hope Bennin, Robert Looney, Melissa Forsythe, Carolyn Turner, Phyllis Honshell, Pam Shingler, Robert Perry, Alice Adams, Monnette Sturgill, Ken Stone, Sarah Laven, Julia Curtis, Audrey King, Edith Roberts, Sandra Robertson, and Hope Blackburn.

The day began with everyone enjoying a buffet breakfast which was followed with a welcome by Thelma Spears, part-time writing assistant, who coordinated the event. Patricia Watson, Writing/Language Arts Coordinator for the Floyd County Schools made other remarks and introduced teacher coordinators.

These individuals included: Nancy Sherman, Mountain Christian Academy; Ramona Aiken, Allen Elementary; Davida Bickford, Auxier Elementary; Clementine Tackett, Melvin Elementary; Donna Collins, Prestonsburg Elementary; Kathy Dingus, Harold Elementary; Linda Elliott, McDowell Elementary; Gayle Justice, Stumbo Elementary; Donna Gray, Martin Elementary; Lela Layne, Betsy Layne Elementary; Ruby Miller, Maytown Elementary; Paula Collins, Adams Middle School; Faye Robinson, Duff Elementary; Charlotte Smith, Clark Elementary; Sherry Tackett, Prater Elementary; and Sheila Vance, Osborne Elementary.

As the judging concluded, 67 students had been selected as County Winners. The highest number of winning students came from Harold Elementary—13 winners were chosen from this school. A special recognition award of $100 was presented to this school to be used for writing. The school that had the second highest number of winning students was Betsy Layne Elementary with 12 winners.

Winners are named in the following list by grade levels and by categories of competition: (Kindergarten - Primary I) Illustrated: Kateland Moore, from Mrs. Linda Elliott's class at McDowell Elementary; Non-illustrated: James Sexton, from Ms. Tonya Horne's class at Clark Elementary; Poetry: Brandon Hughes, from Mrs. Kathy Wagner's class at Betsy Layne Elementary; Informative: Amanda Hunter, from Mrs. Goldie Hamilton's

Each of these 67 winners received a $50 U.S. Savings Bond at the county awards program which was held to honor these students and their teachers June 2, 1994, at the Wilkinson/Stumbo Convention Center in Jenny Wiley State Park. Guest speaker for the evening was Dr. Charles Whitaker who spoke about the emphasis writing has in each of our lives. During the program, Dr. Whitaker interacted with student writers such as Kelli Newsome and Emily Jamerson who shared their writings with an audience of more than 300.

Approximately 5,100 students participated in this program. There were 416 school winners and 905 classroom winners who were recognized with ribbons and certificates at the school level.

Local station to sponsor cancer society telethon

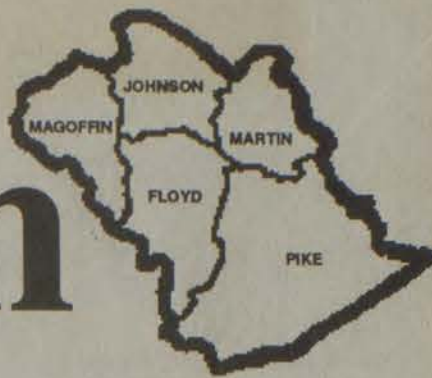

Paul Gearheart and WPRG-TV5 will sponsor a telethon on Thursday, June 16, from 7 p.m. to midnight, to benefit the American Cancer Society.

Money raised during this telethon will support the American Cancer Society programs of research, public education and patient services in the area.

Volunteers will be available to explain the Cancer Society's services and to answer questions about these services.

Any business, civic group or church group that would like to make a donation is invited to come to the studio and make the donation on the air during the telethon.

Man pleads guilty to million dollar bank fraud scheme

A Shelbyville man pleaded guilty Tuesday in Pikeville to running an elaborate bank-fraud scheme that tricked a major corporation into paying him nearly $1 million.

Bradley C. Hembree, 36, who also had lived in Louisville, entered the plea in U.S. District Court at Pikeville. He was set to go to trial June 20.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Rawlins said Hembree used two Louisville-based collection agencies — Capital Recovery of Kentucky and Commonwealth Collections — to run the scheme. Rawlins said Hembree set up the firms.

Hembree allegedly used a forged letter from Humana Inc., to convince Advanced Payroll Systems of Louisville to write him checks from New Jersey-based AT&T Financial Services for collections. Rawlins said Hembree claimed to have sold the Humana collections accounts to AT&T.

Rawlins said Hembree contacted Advanced Payroll in November 1993 to prepare the AT&T checks because the scheme would not work without magnetically encoded checks.

Hembree then deposited checks totaling $960,000 into accounts at Citizens Union Bank in Shelbyville within a 45-day period between November and December 1993. He withdrew $620,000 during the same period before the bank became suspicious and uncovered the scheme, Rawlins said.

Hembree is scheduled for sentencing August 16. He faces up to 30 years in prison and a $1 million fine, Rawlins said.

In return for the plea, prosecutors have agreed to drop another bank-fraud charge returned by the same grand jury on January 6. Hembree had been charged with writing $30,000 in checks on closed accounts at Bank One in Lexington — Appalachian News-Express

Whitaker files suit to keep teaching job

Former Magoffin County Schools Superintendent Carter Whitaker has sued the state school board and Education Commissioner Thomas Boyesen to keep a teaching job in the district.

The lawsuit, filed last week in Magoffin Circuit Court, cited an alleged agreement between Whitaker and Boyesen when Whitaker resigned as superintendent in June 1993. The suit claims the agreement said Whitaker could retain his status as a tenured teacher if he resigned as superintendent.

Whitaker's attorney, Alva Hollon Jr. of Hazard, also claimed in the suit that Whitaker's scheduled removal hearing on March 30 this year was not within the time limits of state statutes. A state law that allowed Boyesen to charge Whitaker also was called "vague and overboard."

Whitaker resigned as superintendent after Boyesen leveled 19 charges of administrative misconduct against him. But the Magoffin County school board hired him as a math teacher just before all five resigned. — Lexington Herald-Leader

Washout adds to muddy hollow woes

A washout occurred Tuesday in an Eastern Kentucky hollow that had been declared an emergency almost three months ago because of a mud slide from an abandoned strip mine.

Every culvert and drain in the narrow hollow was plugged up after a brief thunderstorm hit Tuesday, sweeping down more mud and debris in the runoff, said Tommy Phillips, whose ranch-style home was inundated with mud March 9 after the old strip mine above Peach Orchard Hollow began giving way.

The U.S. Office of Surface Mining declared the site of an emergency in mid-March. At that time, all of the federal money to fix such emergency landslides was exhausted.

The state agreed to give OSM $5 million from its grant to cover non-emergency reclamation projects. That money was supposed to be used on the Peach Orchard Hollow slide and 17 other emergencies around the region.

But Phillips said he hasn't seen any workers at his house for about a month, and no bids have been taken to complete reclamation there.

OSM officials could not be reached to comment. Phillips, whose house was protected from the latest slide by a temporary barricade, said he was watching the sky and hoping the rain would stop. — The Courier-Journal

Informant pleads guilty in drug case

James Braddock, 44, the Letcher County man who helped state police get an Eastern Kentucky judge for taking a bribe, pleaded guilty Tuesday in U.S. District Court at Pikeville to three counts of selling marijuana to an undercover agent in November 1991.

Judge Joseph Hood scheduled sentencing for August 1.

Braddock was the informant in the state case against former Letcher Circuit Judge Larry Collins. Braddock allegedly gave Collins money and drugs to keep him out of jail. He also allegedly paid Collins to keep a child molester out of jail. Collins pleaded guilty last August to one count of taking bribes and is serving a five-year sentence. — The Courier-Journal

Report to Kentucky

by Congressman Harold Rogers

It's Time to Get Tough on Criminals

As a state prosecutor in the 1970s, I worked hard to put criminals in jail. I have worked just as hard during my career in Congress, always fighting for tough measures to fight crime.

Today we face our toughest fight yet in the war against crime. For too long we have been too soft on criminals.

I applaud President Clinton for finally bringing this debate to the front burner.

While the President is talking tough, I remain very concerned that his actions do not match his rhetoric.

Serving on the Subcommittee that funds the government's crime-fighting agencies, I have to report that the President has proposed the largest budget cuts ever for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Agency, and the U.S. Attorney's Office.

I have met with the directors of the FBI, DEA and the other crime-fighting agencies and they say these cuts will be devastating. They need more help, not less, to stop crime in its tracks.

So I have told the President, now is the time to stop the rhetoric and start helping our crime fighters. This is what I intend to do.

I am pushing tough measures to put, and keep, criminals where they belong—in jail. It is time to send the message loud and clear, if you do the crime, you WILL do the time.

I am also pushing to:

Put More Officers on the Streets:

I support a measure providing $2 billion to help our communities, rural and urban, put more police on the streets. I also want to strengthen and fully fund the FBI, DEA and U.S. Attorneys.

Enact Tough Penalties:

Increasing penalties for violent crimes and eliminating parole for repeat offenders will keep criminals off the streets. I support expanding use of the death penalty for drug kingpins, copkillers, and carjackers. Truth in sentencing will make offenders serve their full jail time.

Stop Endless Appeals:

We must stop the endless process of appeals by limiting costly, time-consuming appeals.

Build More Prisons:

More prison space will allow judges to put violent criminals away, keeping them off the streets.

Fight Crimes Against Women and Children:

We must establish tough penalties for rape, double the length of sentences of repeat offenders and tougher penalties for criminals who sexually abuse or assault children.

These measures, along with protecting our borders, reforming our current welfare system, and restoring strength in our families, will make America safe again.

This is a battle we can win. You can count on me to be on the front line.

Words of life

LET JESUS CHRIST INTO YOUR LIFE

by Rev. David Powers, Sch.P.
Pastor, Saint Martha Catholic Church

In this fast-paced world of money, Maytag reliability, and MTV, people often do not pause to consider what should be most important in their lives. Sometimes it is not until there is a crisis that we may finally stop and ask ourselves, "Is that All There Is?" The following two true stories may help illustrate my point.

In an old church in Maryland there is a beautiful stone crucifix that has given comfort and strength for two hundred years to many who have approached it in the spirit of faith. Bernard was the name of the master workman who engraved the Christ figure, and it is said that he had tried for years to achieve that image. Twice he had attempted to carve a figure that would be more than cold stone, and both times seeing that his handiwork did not represent the image in his heart, he had broken the marble.

After twenty long years, he started the work for a third time. However, during this time God had entered his life in a very real way. At one time Bernard had been envied by others because he had such a perfect life, a good job, a wonderful wife, and a loving family. Bernard had always gone to church, but he never took his faith very seriously. He went because he was expected to go, and not because he felt a need to worship. But times had changed, people could no longer afford the services of a highly skilled sculptor. His wife and children had died either from disease or as casualties of war, and he had begun to drink far more than he ever had before. His old friends stopped coming to see him, and soon he recognized that he could not continue. He began to pray and let God gradually take over his soul. When this happened, he discovered he could bear his sorrow more easily, and God's love purified him.

One day it seemed to him as if the divine plough had passed over his heart and opened furrows in it. Experiencing a change within, he tried once more to carve out the image and this time was successful. The crucified Christ he had married in his soul grew like a tree, nourished by the purest love. Now, he could carve the Christ that was within him, and to this day people comment on that striking work of art. The Savior's arms open as if to embrace us all. Forgiveness shines on his brow, mercy overflows from his eyes, and his mouth speaks to use of gentleness, but the Savior's limbs writhe with pain and move us to profound contrition. But that was just an image. The real Jesus is not made of marble. Christ is a living presence who can be our companion in everything we do. Christ's presence in our life can make us come alive today, no matter how cold we may sometimes feel.

Bernard had found his redeemer, and so too would another. The time was the late 1960's, during the years of Vietnam. I did my basic training at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and it was there that I met John and Trevor. Trevor was a model soldier, exactly what was needed by the army during those days. He was big, tough, and feared neither God nor man. He was popular with everyone because he seemed to be able to do everything just the way it was supposed to be done. John was a young beanpole of a boy who tried very hard at everything but couldn't seem to do anything particularly well. He was always being yelled at, but he never complained. The three of us became good friends during those weeks of basic training. None of us had been drafted; we were all volunteers, ready to defend this great nation of ours. I carried a small copy of the New Testament with me. John wore a crucifix around his neck. But Trevor always said he didn't need God, and God didn't need him. So it was the last day we all ever saw each other.

John and Trevor were in the same unit, while I was assigned to another. One night they left their trenches to form a night patrol. Upon their return, under intense fire from the enemy, Trevor discovered that John was missing. Under the circumstances it was dangerous to be outside the trench and face almost certain death. In spite of this Trevor insisted on going out and brave the enemy fire to look for his missing buddy. The commanding officer was greatly opposed, but he finally gave in when he saw Trevor's determination. He made his way very slowly until he disappeared into the darkness of the night. The following day at dawn he returned to the trench seriously wounded. While the stretcher-bearers were attending him, the officer said, "I understand you found your buddy."

"Yes, sir, but he only lived a few minutes."

The officer replied, "I didn't think it was worth while, and it would have been better to deny your request."

"But sir, it was worth while because on seeing me he was so glad and said, 'My old buddy, I knew you would come! Take this and remember me.'" Hanging from Trevor's neck was the silver crucifix that once hung around his friend's neck.

I didn't see Trevor again until after the war, at one of several memorial services we would both attend. John's crucifix still hangs around his neck, and Trevor has finally allowed Jesus to enter into his life. He mentioned to me about how much better he feels now that he finally has a relationship with Jesus. He said that people used to think that he was tough, but that tough exterior was just masking a heart that was searching for something real and something true, but he didn't know until that night just what it was he was looking for, and he had to be shown it by a dying soldier, the one who could never do anything just right.

At one of those veterans gatherings, Trevor was asked to speak, and he recounted what had happened between him and John and how John had paid the ultimate sacrifice for love of his country, but then he surprised us all by adding these final words, which best sums up what each of us is challenged to consider.

"Let Jesus into your life. Believe in Christ as a living person. Make Christ the center of your thoughts, words, and actions; and accept Christ's offer of salvation by repenting, and by rejecting sin and temptation, for such is Christ's love. Out of love for us, if necessary, he would give his life again for each one of us. Can we do anything less for one another?"

Corps to conduct visitor survey at Dewey Lake

The Army Corps of Engineers is asking boaters visiting Dewey Lake near Prestonsburg to assist them with a Visitor Survey that they are conducting this summer season.

The Corps, with the help of their research lab (Waterways Experiment Station in Vicksburg, Mississippi) is conducting the survey from Memorial Day weekend through mid-August to help determine how the continuing development of Dewey Lake will affect the quality of recreation experiences at the lake. The survey is an important on-going effort to gather information the Corps needs to make decisions concerning Dewey Lake.

According to Dewey Lake Resource Manager Patti Williams, "Dewey is one of the most concentrated lakes for boating activity in the area, we (the Corps) need to know what our boating public likes and dislikes in regard to our management of the lake in order to make informed decisions on how we do manage. The boaters should have a say in any future development or improvements. The Corps cannot make informed decisions without feedback from the public."

Knowing the perceptions and opinions of present lake customers concerning their recreational experiences, Corps officials can better estimate the probable consequences of additional development and boating activity on future water-related recreational activities on the lake.

Boaters using the public launch ramps at Dewey will be interviewed at randomly selected times and locations as they exit the lake. Corps officials are asking lake customers to cooperate with persons conducting the survey, which takes about 10-15 minutes. Boaters renting slips at Brandy Keg Marina will also be randomly selected and will receive a mail-back questionnaire.

"The overall goal of this study is to maintain or improve the quality of the recreational experience for our customers" says Manager Williams.

Riveria selected for academic camp at Transy

Mark Riveria

Mark Riveria, a sophomore at Paintsville High School, was chosen as one of 40 participants in Transylvania University Summer Academic Camp for Appalachian Students, July 10-July 22. His many academic accomplishments as well as teacher/counselor recommendations were official in this selection.

He was selected among other applicants from: Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and Georgia. He will commit himself for two summers—the summer of '94 for two weeks and summer of '95 will be for three weeks.

He will have an experience very similar to college life and the opportunity to take two academic courses on Transylvania campus.

Students who successfully complete the two camps and meet Transylvania's admissions requirements will be given scholarship to attend Transylvania University upon high school graduation.

He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Francisco Riveria of Prestonsburg.

Signing session

Betsy Layne High School political science students shadow elected officials

by Cynthia Hamilton

The Political Science classroom at Betsy Layne High School stretched its boundaries to the Floyd County court system. Teacher Jackie Dillion and eleven of her students shadowed elected officials for one day on May 10.

Inside the courthouse, volunteers such as retired Circuit Court Clerk Frank DeRossett and County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo allowed their assigned student to follow them through the routine and not so routine events of their daily duties.

Civic leaders with offices housed outside of the courthouse such as Coroner Roger Nelson and Justice

Janet Stumbo volunteered their knowledge as well.

Student Louie Hamilton who shadowed Jailer Roger Webb probably witnessed the most impressive event of the day when he actually witnessed an attempt to smuggle contraband into the county jail. He commented, "Roger Webb is good at his job, taking it very seriously and gets things done."

Other hands-on activities that Ms. Dillion arranged for the students at Betsy Layne High School this year have been lectures by Judge Danny P. Caudill, Judge John D. Caudill, County Court Clerk Carla R. Boyd, and Justice Janet Stumbo. The time and support that these people have lent to the students at Betsy Layne are what is necessary to truly educate student to real life.

Ms. Dillion expressed her thanks to the office of the county court clerk for coming to the school and registering over one hundred seniors, preparing them to take their places as responsible, involved citizens.

Other officials who participated in this learning experience was Lovell Hall, Magistrate Erma Tackett, Commonwealth Attorney John Earl Hunt and Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson.

National award winner

The United States Achievement Academy announced recently that Penny Moore has been named a United States National Award winner in honor roll.

This award is a prestigious honor very few students can ever hope to attain. In fact, the Academy recognizes less than 10% of all American high school students.

Penny Moore, who attends James A. Duff Elementary was nominated for this National Award by Kitty Frazier, a counselor at the school. Penny will appear in the United States Achievement Academy Official Yearbook, published nationally.

Penny Moore is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Moore. The grandparents are Jr. and Quanta Thomely of Wayland, and Nora and Odis Conley of Hueysville.

ABC MUSIC CONCERT

The Gospel Heralds, a summer touring group from Appalachian Bible College near Beckley, West Virginia, will be in concert at the Faith Bible Church on June 15 at 7:00 p.m.

Sponsor and coach of the Gospel Heralds is Mr. Kevin Suiter, an instructor in Appalachian's Music Department, who received his training at Appalachian Bible College and Pensacola Christian College.

The Gospel Heralds present music aimed at expressing the joy of being a Christian. Their program is interspersed with English handbells and testimonies relating to their personal faith in Jesus Christ.

ABC is an independent Bible college located one hour south of Charleston, West Virginia. The college specializes in training men and women for vocational church-related ministries. It is West Virginia's only accredited Bible college, offering 4-year Bachelor of Arts and 2-year Associate of Arts degrees, plus a 1-year Bible Certificate.

You are invited as guests of the church—there is no admission charge.

In Memory Of

Michael Allen Hamilton

June 13, 1956-October 16, 1993

A million times we've need you,
A million times we've cried,
If love alone could have saved you,
You never would have died.

In life we loved you dearly,
In death we love you still,
For in our hearts you hold a special place,
That no one else could fill.

It broke our hearts to lose you,
But you didn't go alone,
For part of us went with you,
The day God took you home.

There is not a day that passes,
That you're not in our hearts,
And in our thoughts
During June, Mike,
We want you to know
We love and miss you very much!

Happy 38th

Birthday

Michael

Love,

IF THIS IS JUNE IT MUST BE BASEBALL SEASON, RIGHT?

In five months, basketball season will be starting. That is, if it's ever over because my family is still watching the NBA playoff games.

When I was growing up, there were three seasons; baseball, basketball and football. Baseball began the first part of April and ended in October, overlapping into football season. During the latter part of the November football season, basketball came on strong and lasted until a couple of weeks before the baseball season.

Now that everything has changed, I'm never really sure what sport I'm supposed to be watching. Sometimes I see my husband watching baseball and at the next flick of the remote he's watching basketball. Quicker than I can say, "Who's playing?" he's watching another baseball game.

It confuses me. Unfortunately most things do. However, it intrigues me to know why professional basketball and baseball teams play nearly all year long.

"Money," my husband replied when I posed this question to him. "The players are paid astronomical salaries so they need all the gate receipts and T.V. coverage they can get."

"Sounds logical, but why can't you play football seven months out of the year?"

"The human body couldn't stand it," he answered.

"I see," I answered, "but couldn't you have more players that way?"

"What way, Sara?" "If you had twice the amount of pro football players on a team, you could play a longer season."

"That would be even more expensive."

"Would people watch football seven months out of the year?"

"Are you crazy? Of course they would. They watch it six months now."

He was right. Football season begins during August and ends after the Superbowl in January. If I'm not mistaken, I think the Superbowl now coincides with ratings week. It means big bucks.

My son gave me more food for thought.

"Mom, I don't know why you're so upset. If we weren't watching the play-offs and baseball, we'd be watching car racing, golf, tennis, fishing or bowling."

"We never watch bowling," I insisted.

"We might if we didn't have some other sport to watch."

He had a point. We haven't watched a television program in years where people weren't wearing uniforms or the commercials didn't have someone popping the lid on a brewsky.

Since half the population is female, it is no wonder women have started playing sports. Men might be upset that women want to play professionally, but they are just adhering to the old saying, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em."

If women have to be subjected to sports 12 months out of the year, we may as well get paid to do it just like the boys.

Our vow to keep you up to date on how your federal tax dollars are working for you leads us this week to Denver, where federal researchers have put your money where Lassie's mouth is.

Yep, the Center for Disease Control has determined after months of study which kinds of dogs are more likely to be biters.

German shepherds, chow chows and collies topped the dog-bites-man list.

The safest breeds were determined to be golden retrievers, which were more likely to slobber than bite; and poodles, which consider biting to be undignified.

The bad boys of the dog world...pit bulls...weren't considered in the study because they aren't allowed to live in Denver.

We certainly wouldn't want to suggest that taxpayer money was wasted on this study, but we can't imagine who might profit from the findings...outside the postal service, that is.

Fact is, we probably could have saved all the money spent on this review by just asking mailmen to keep a record of their dog bites.

Nah, that wouldn't work.

They'd probably have to jack up the price of a stamp to pay for the questionnaires.

Anyway, the federal government is always looking for new and innovative ways to spend your money.

They spend money trying to decide which kind of potato makes the best french fries.

They pay for research on all sorts of things you didn't even know existed...like helium storage facilities.

So, we're not surprised that tax money is allocated to discover why dog bites man.

Next, we suppose, we'll see a report on why man bites dog or why dogs chase cats.

These things may sound frivolous to you, but remember...

For everything there is a reason, and as long as the money holds out, your government will make every effort to find out what it is.

A good critic is one who tells the story of his mind's adventures among the masterpieces.

Jenny Wiley Theatre celebrates 30th season

by Jeremy Burnette

Kentucky Arts Council; Melody Doom, Executive Director of the Kentucky Tourism Council; Mark A. Lovely, Kentucky Parks Commissioner; Jerry Fannin, Mayor of Prestonsburg; and Congressman Hal Rogers. Tickets for Opening Night are still available, but the seats are filling up quickly. A donation of $35 for adults, $30 for seniors, and $25 for students and children under 18 is all it takes for an evening of celebration and superb entertainment.

Another special night at Jenny Wiley Theatre is V.I.N.—"Very Important Night." V.I.N. is August 2, and is presently the source of suspense for many. An official announcement of the event is expected on Opening Night, but one thing is for certain—it will be an event you will not want to miss. Mark your calendars for August 2, but do not wait too long to order your tickets. When the secret is out, it is sure to be a sell out!

The feature production at Jenny Wiley Theatre this summer is Peter Pan, a classic tale loved by children of all ages. This production is sure to be one of the most professional shows to ever take place at Jenny Wiley, as Flying by Foy, the same company which flew Peter Pans Mary Martin on Broadway and Kathy Rigby on tour, will be teaching the Jenny Wiley cast and crew how to fly in an outdoor amphitheatre. This is going to be a truly phenomenal show, and you and your family will not want to miss seeing Peter fly!

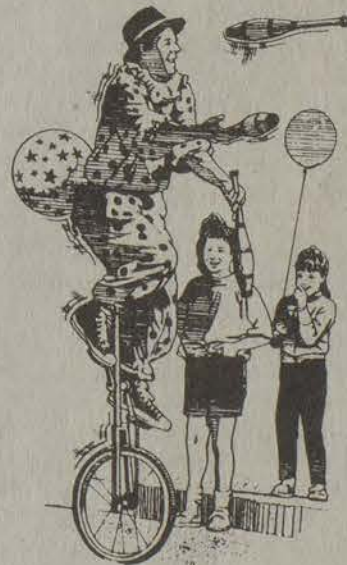

The Gin Game will be performed inside the Wilkinson-Stumbo Convention Center. The Pulitzer Prize winning show, which opens June 30, is a bittersweet comedy about two elderly people living in a retirement home who play a game of cards which personifies their lives. Luncheon matinees, dinner theatres, and evening performances are available for this moving presentation in air-conditioned comfort.

The momentum continues with the opening of

A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum on July 8. This Broadway-hit production, based in ancient Rome, centers around Pseudolus, a Roman slave and a conniving, quick-witted rascal anxious to obtain his freedom by resorting to all kinds of trickery. This is a classic comedy which is sure to be a source for continuous laughter night after night.

The final show to open this summer is a festival in itself. The magic of Carnival begins on July 21. Carnival is a heart-warming, romantic fable of life in a traveling French circus. The show brings magicians, puppeteers, jugglers, and acrobats to the stage of Jenny Wiley. The music in this show is unforgettable, and the story will catch your heart.

Do not miss the festivities at Jenny Wiley Theatre this summer. Everyone is invited to help celebrate the 30th anniversary year, so call 606/886-9274 for reservations or information today!

Two Serbian designers announced in Belgrade in May that they would soon begin manufacturing cologne called "Serb," in a canister that resembles a hand grenade. In a press release, the two said, "We don't have to be ashamed, because everything vile has already been blamed on the Serbs."

POLICE BLOTTER

— In April, the Kansas Bureau of Investigation used laser light technology to identify the prime suspect in a hit-and-run injury in rural Johnson County. Although witnesses said only that the hit-and-run vehicle was a black hatchback, bureau investigators found that the collision was so hard that the first two numbers of the license plate and the month of expiration were imprinted on the victim's pants, and the only black hatchback with those numbers belonged to a 51-year-old man, who was arrested.

— In February, William James Silva, 44, was arrested in San Jose, Calif., when he allegedly robbed a police decoy posing as a street-corner drunk. It was the 550th time Silva had been arrested, and his record reaches 127 feet of computer paper. (According to police, before robbing the decoy, Silva had argued with a friend about whether the man was a police officer, with Silva insisting he wasn't.)

— Assault and indecent exposure charges were filed against Shakespearean actress Barbara Kinghorn in St. Joseph, Mo., in April after she, naked, allegedly attacked a 52-year-old woman on the indoor track at Northwest Missouri State University. Kinghorn allegedly had first thrown herself at the woman's husband, asking him, "Can I give it to you?" and when the woman objected, Kinghorn attacked her. Kinghorn was in town to play Lady Macbeth in a local production.

— In February, customs officials in Taiwan seized 11 tons of chicken testicles, which they said had been smuggled in from Hong Kong. The Chinese delicacy, said to be an aphrodisiac, was disguised as frozen shrimp.

— According to a police affidavit

(uncovered by The Oregonian) in support of two prostitution arrests in Portland, Ore., last summer, a confidential informant was given enough police department money that he was able to procure masturbation services six times from the A-I Massage Studio, which was operated by two sisters, ages 73 and 70.

— In Enumclaw, Wash., in November, a woman summoned police to her home when she thought she had found a mysterious supply of drugs, but police determined the substance to be caulking material. And in Oakland, Calif., Louis C. Clark filed a lawsuit against the city in December for their roughhouse behavior in arresting Clark for possessing cocaine, which turned out to be only his denture adhesive.

SCHEMES

— Last July, Hidekazu Watanabe, 36, was arrested in Kawasaki, Japan, by a store security guard as he was attempting to shoplift a handbag and 16 other items. A search of his home turned up about 1,700 more stolen items, and according to a police officer, Watanabe said he had hoped to steal enough goods to open a discount shop.

— In October in Orlando, Fla., James Zimmerman, 39, was charged with grand theft of gasoline. According to police, Zimmerman used a specially equipped van with a hose that could suck-up gasoline from service-station storage tanks into containers in his van. He would then empty the gasoline into a 600-gallon drum in his back yard, then sell it from his front yard at about 80 cents a gallon.

— Malaysia's New Straits Times reported in February that a man in Perak, Malaysia, was arrested after several incidents in which he climbed on roofs at night and, using a fishing line and hook, lifted the sarongs of sleeping women to look at their bodies.

— At least a dozen Hungarians have committed suicide since 1989 as a result of a widespread pyramid scheme in earthworms that spread with the country's diminishing economy. (See Weird, B 2)

SOAP UPDATES

ALL MY CHILDREN: Erica was dismayed when Dimitri arrived just as Trevor blurted out the news of her New York tryst with Jack. Despite Erica's plea for another chance, he said he would reinstitute divorce proceedings. Later, Jack found Erica crying over Dimitri. Trevor turned up in time to stop Laurel from taking comfort in a bottle of champagne. Unaware that Adam was posing as Stuart, Brooke accused "Stuart" of kidnapping his brother. Gloria and Alec planned to get to the lodge without being followed. Meanwhile, Stuart returned and demanded to know what Adam was up to. After Dixie admitted to her bitterness over Seabone, Del made a cryptic call. Wait To See: Kendall has a plan to discover Corvina's secret.

ANOTHER WORLD: Carl gave Rachel a gun for protection. Jake recognized Barry and followed him to Iris' New York hotel room. Later, Jake tried to persuade Paulina that Iris was behind the threats. Ian noticed Kate was unconsciously treating Josie like a daughter. Maggie was shaken when Tomas revealed the shocking truth about Luisa. Kate told John she no longer wanted to see him. Each member of Rachel's wedding party had access to the gun. Barry gave Iris something disguised as a wedding gift. Later, as Carl and Rachel were about to recite their wedding vows, the place exploded in violence. Wait To See: More shocking truths are revealed.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Shannon made a mysterious call to Toronto and cited her experience in Africa. Felicia warned Duncan to keep a sharp eye on Eduardo. After learning Samantha had once been married, Craig said he hoped she'd be around once his life settled down. Emma hid her concern from Lily (who had returned to Oakdale with Damian) when Julie said Holden was unaccounted for. Meanwhile, Holden was lying unconscious in an Italian clinic. Damian asked Eduardo about Gregory's involvement in Barbara's accident. Wait To See: There are new fears for Holden.

BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: After speaking with Stephanie, James felt both Lauren and Jay Garvin (Sheila's former therapist) could help him uncover Sheila's secrets. Sheila panicked when she realized Garvin could reveal she'd switched the paternity test specimens. She arrived at Garvin's office just as he was about to tell all to James. Dylan was tempted by Ivana to break a Forrester rule and have dinner with her. A distressed Macy told Anthony that Sally threw her out, believing Macy had stolen Anthony from her. Wait To See: A stunning event causes James to change tactics.

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Stefano dragged "Hope" when she refused to go away with him and dragged her to the river. Holding his St. Christopher's medal in his hand, John broke free of his shackles and began giving Marlena mouth-to-mouth resuscitation when Roman arrived. Kristen was shocked when a flash of lightning illuminated Stefano's face. John rescued "Hope" when she fell overboard. Stefano told Celeste to hide a notebook, then slipped away but vowed to return. Kate flew to New York to consult a specialist about transplanting the embryo from Vivian's uterus to hers. Determined to find Stefano's papers, Kristen went back into the burning house. Wait To See: Roman and Marlena face another crisis.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: The body found by Luke and Laura was identified as the missing Bradley Ward. Sean wondered how much Mary Mac could actually recall about Bradley's disappearance 20 years earlier. Despite Bobbie's decision not to shoot Damian, Luke and Alan continued to plan his elimination. In New York, Lois and Miguel met Julio Iglesias, whom Miguel knew from Puerto Rico. Mac and Felicia found themselves on opposite sides as they debated the issue of Robin's budding sexuality. Wait To See: Ned's jealousy of Miguel could become troublesome.

GUIDING LIGHT: Frank, unaware that Alan-Michael pocketed his note of apology, was devastated when Eleni didn't respond to it. Jittery over her upcoming marriage to Ross, Blake sought advice from Madame Varda, who said she'd have the future she dreamed of. After Roger told Blake he'd do nothing to ruin her wedding day, Blake overheard him make a mysterious phone call. Later, a gift arrived from Alan Spaulding. With the verdict in, Vanessa finally decided to do what she felt needed to be done regarding Peter. Jenna learned from Cutter that Buzz did show up at the Towers the night they had planned to elope. Wait To See: Blake's "future" suddenly seems confused.

LOVING: Janie brought an unconscious Angie to the hospital as Charles and Jeremy flew to Boston to look for her. Clay and Deborah declared war on each other. Cooper told Steffi Deborah blackmailed Clay into marriage. Buck reassured Dinah Lee that Trucker would come to terms with his memories of Trisha. Angie was diagnosed with a blood disorder. Wait To See: Janie makes a life-changing decision.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: The Buchanans were stunned to learn of Alex and Asa's engagement. Cord and Marty were upset by the media attention to C.J. and Sarah's "Free Todd Manning" campaign. Jason visited Dorian in jail. Later, David gave Dorian some hope for freedom. Luna refused Max's bid for a reconciliation. Viki confided her feelings about Dorian's conviction to Clint. Mary told Jason about a disturbing dream. Wait To See: Dorian's hope for freedom could be dashed by circumstances.

YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Livia and Dru were startled when a suddenly lucid Lillie decided to return home to her husband. Jack agreed to fill in for Brad at Newman Enterprises even if Victor refused to guarantee job security after Brad's recover. Meanwhile, Brad awoke in his hospital room to find Lauren and Traci tiffing over him. Jack confided to Mari Jo about his Vietnam experiences. He also spoke of his happiness at marrying Nikki, and his anguish over losing their prematurely born son. April testified that she had collapsed following one of Robert's attacks. With John still impotent, Jill told Jed she needed him. Wait To See: Nikki makes an overture toward Jed.

MAVERICK

I usually cast a jaundiced eye on the entertainment industry when television networks try to milk a hit movie and make a series out of it. Lately, though, the opposite seems to be happening. Hit television shows of the past are being turned into big-screen offerings. We've already had "The Beverly Hillbillies," "Car 54, Where Are You?," "The Addams Family I and II," and "The Flintstones." This week's review centers on the latest one, "Maverick," based on the TV show of the late '50s and early '60s. (By the way, the show had two incarnations. It was resurrected, I believe, in the late '70s.)

Mel Gibson stars as Bret Maverick. When we first meet Bret, he's got a noose around his neck. In a flashback, we get to see just how he got himself into this mess—with a poker game (what else?). Maverick has won the game but he's made a mortal enemy out of a guy named, ironically, Angel (Alfred Molina). Much of the beginning of the film is devoted to how Maverick manages to shake the bad guy after him.

Turning his attention to his livelihood, gambling, Bret is determined to set up a high-stakes poker game on a river boat. Joining him in this venture are a woman named Annabelle (Jodie Foster) and a veteran lawman, Zane Cooper (James Garner, the original TV Maverick).

Once the game is finally set, we move to the river boat, where James Coburn portrays the Commodore, host of the event. The exciting poker game is what ultimately wraps up the movie.

Naturally, a western couldn't be a western without the requisite wild-Indian sequence as well as the runaway stagecoach number. The reliance upon these particular stereotypes serves the movie well; the results are hilarious. Graham Greene, a real-life Indian, is phenomenal in his role as an "Injun."

There are numerous cameos in the film as well, utilizing television veterans of westerns. You may not know all the folks by name, but you'll certainly recognize them. Other cameos are culled from the world of Country-Western music, adding yet another interesting facet to this flick.

Taking a cue from the plot, I'm going to make a bet: This film is going to be one of the season's hottest summer hits.

HOME TIPS

FAST I.D.—This tip concerns how to manage refrigerated leftovers.

I bought a grease pencil and write the name of the leftover on the lid of the plastic container I store it in. It is easily removed with warm water and a little kitchen cleaner.

I also keep a roll of masking tape handy, and if there is no place on the lid to write, I put the name on a small piece of tape.

Either method marks each container individually and works much better than a list hanging on the refrigerator or freezer door. Mandy R., Brooklyn, N.Y.

DAINTY DUDS—Those perfumed pages in magazines are useful to me. I open the pages so the perfumed paper is exposed and place them in the folds of my newly laundered towels, lingerie and handkerchiefs. Betty H., Philadelphia, Pa.

ODOR ABSORBER—A few years ago, my wife and I had a problem with odor in our new refrigerator. We tried many solutions, including throwing out opened and leftover foods. When nothing worked, we contacted the manufacturer's representative. He said to put several flat trays of deodorized catbox filler in the refrigerator and leave it there for several days. That did the trick! Hal M., Jersey City, N.J.

MEMORY PRODDER—I realized some time ago that as I get older, my memory is shorter and shorter. At home I have a telephone answering machine which helps me a lot. When I'm at work and I think of something I need, I call my answering machine and leave myself a message. Enid F., Lowell, Mich.

NO MORE SKINNED KNEES—I have a solution to skinned and grubby knees on babies who are just starting to crawl. My husband wears out the toes of his tube socks before the tops, so I cut the tops off and put them on my daughter as knee pads. The different colors match her outfits and keep her knees clean and protected as she crawls around. It also makes wash day easier and keeps those little outfits looking brand new. Mary Anne G., W. Nyack, N.Y.

NATASHA'S STARS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Thinking may be unclear about a career concern. Visits with old friends are favored. Try not to be bossy with a family member. Be sensible about your use of credit. You may feel that others aren't being straightforward at this time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Keep the lines of communication open with those close to you. You will make progress with a career matter. Be leery of those who exaggerate. A promise may be made to you that has little chance of being kept.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) This is not a good time for financial risk-taking. Further investigation is needed before you part with any money. Also, try not to let things slide on the job. This weekend, you may be entertaining out-of-town guests.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You'd like to spend time on a career concern early in the week, but demands made by friends and relatives keep you from making much progress. Do what you can. When socializing, avoid going to extremes in behavior.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Others may not be receptive to advice you have to give this week. However, partners are very supportive. Those who travel may meet with mix-ups or delays. Be sure to follow through on a commitment made to a family member who's counting on you.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Unexpected expenses could arise in connection with pleasure interests. Be judicious in your use of credit. Some time will be spent on a work-related concern. You may not be able to place much stock in much of what you hear now.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Some mix-ups at home are likely now but it's a wonderful week for socializing. Communication is not favored at this time. Also, your judgment is off regarding shopping and money. Avoid purchasing items that are overpriced.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Family interests take priority. You're not quite sure just where to begin regarding a career concern early in the week. Try not to overextend yourself. You may make promises you won't be able to keep.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Don't try to do too many things at once this week. Creative interests are favored. There's a tendency to let things slide and you may underestimate the difficulty of a certain project.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You may be making a major purchase for the home this week. You may not get around to completing an unfinished task at work. Much of what you hear this week is not exactly the truth. Exercise discrimination with this.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) The early part of the week could find you absent-minded. Concentration improves later. Mixed messages from a loved one leave you confused. It's especially important to keep practicalities in mind in business this week.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Money seems to slip away this week on a variety of minor expenditures. A friend may keep you waiting. Time by yourself leads to important insights. Don't be rushed into making a decision about a business concern.

nomie fortunes. Typically, a family would purchase several hundred thousand earthworms with proceeds from their life's savings or borrowing heavily at 30 percent interest. Earthworms eat manure and excrete their own nutrient-rich dung, and promoters, with the help of government agencies and banks, fraudulently convinced the investors that such rich soil could easily be sold abroad.

MOST DYSFUNCTIONAL FAMILY

In January, Colin Wood, who has spent 17 of his 35 years behind bars, escaped from prison in Guelph, Ontario. Colin, his twin brother Douglas, brothers David, 40, and Philip, 37, and the wife of another brother have between them more than 140 criminal convictions. Yet another brother had a lengthy criminal record, but has recently gone straight. When Douglas was deported to England in 1985, he had to be flown on a military airplane because commercial airlines would not take anyone so violent. The other brothers will be deported, also, at the end of their prison sentences. At Douglas' deportation hearing, their mother, Patricia Wood, described her sons as "a family of young gentlemen."

Fort Worth, Texas, police arrested Philip G. Rojo, 24, in April after they had stopped his car at a roadblock because he was not wearing a seat belt. The police said they began backing away from the car when they spied three silver pipe-like packages on the floor, telling Rojo they feared the packages were a pipe bomb. Reportedly, Rojo tried to reassure the police and blurted out, "Man, that ain't no pipe bomb. That's cocaine." (Send your Weird News to Chuck Shepherd, P.O. Box 8306, St. Petersburg, Fla. 33738)

3. A good basketball
4. The proper size of goal
5. Good surface to practice on

Playing basketball appears to be a very simple thing to do. The object is clear-get the ball in the basket. But there is much to learn about skills like dribbling and passing. You need to be a complete player. You need to learn all skills in order to play the game well. In basketball, they are seven different basic skills. They are: (1) lady position (2) dribbling (3) passing (4) catching (5) shooting (6) rebounding and (7) defense.

The Floyd County Times and the Department of Instruction of Floyd County Schools jointly wish to feature the student work of Travis Francis, a fourth grade Young Authors' winner from Mrs. Karen Hall and Mrs. Gladys Gibson's class at Duff Elementary. Travis is the son of Larry and Neva Francis of Garrett. His book, How to Play Basketball, printed with permission, was the winner in the fourth grade, "skills and content" book competition.

Travis was a room winner, a school winner, and a county-wide winner for the 1992-93 school year for his book. He received a $50 U.S. Savings Bond at a spring awards ceremony. Approximately, 5000 elementary and middle school students participated in competition throughout the county.

HOW TO PLAY BASKETBALL

by: Travis E. Francis
If you want to be a good basketball player like Micheal Jordon or Larry Bird, you must make sure you have proper equipment. This is for your safety, as well as to help you develop your skills. So make a list of what you need to play basketball.

1. Good athletic shoes

Now you're ready to start your drills. One of the most important drills is how to dribble the basketball correctly. First you will dribble with your right and left hand. You must do this drill every time you practice. If you do, you will get better handling the ball.

Now you're ready to work on your shooting. First start with free throws. You stand at the line and concentrate. Practice until you master the shot. Now work on a jump shot. Do this until you become comfortable with your shot. Always face the basket when you shoot and never shoot the basketball off balance.

The three-point basket is a longer shot in the NBA than it is in college or high school. It can help a team get back in the game quickly after falling behind. But it is still important to shoot the three pointer properly.

The last thing to work on is the lay-up. It is important to learn correctly how to shoot a lay-up. You dribble in and shoot against the square on the back board and always go up on the proper foot.

If you practice these techniques for a long time and work hard on performing them correctly, you may become another Rex Chapman or Shaquille O'Neil.

Special competitors

On April 30, the South Floyd High School Special Olympics Team competed in the area track events at Bob Amos Park in Pikeville. The team went on to state level events on June 4, at WKU in Bowling Green. Athletes were accompanied by coaches Kim McKay and Sandi McGarey. (photo by Kim McKay)

Melvin Academic Team

The 1993-1994 Melvin Academic team had an exciting and successful year with its new coach, Mrs. Hope Tackett. The team consists of Kacy Johnson, Amy Tufts, Candi Clemons, Matthew Curry, Jessica Young, Oleika Paige, Amy Tackett, Brandi Thornsberry, Shawna Hall, Betsy Johnson, Stacey Hall, Chasity Little, Justin Holbrook, Coby Little, Nick Compton, and Brent Holbrook. The team's captain, Brent Holbrook, placed first in the district competition and seventh in the regional.

Think about it

by Sheldon Lee Compton

THEN AND NOW

I have sat and enjoyed many stories that my parents used to tell about when they were kids, and I have to say that I wouldn't have minded living during that era.

Some of the changes include:
1. Cars. Back when my father was just learning to drive smashing into a guard rail was nothing because he was behind the wheel of a '57 Chevy otherwise known as a tank. Today we cars made completely of fiberglass and whatever was left over from someone's milk cartons. Ahh, the wonders of technology.

2. Entertainment. The part about cars I envy but when it came to entertainment back in the days of my parents I would just as soon had been dead. Often when they had nothing better to do they would do homework! And they had a game called "Mumblypeg" or something like that where they would take turns throwing a knife into the air and see who could get it to stick in the floor. Some fun.

3. Music. This is the big one. The change music has taken has been a terrible one in my opinion and of course also in the opinion of my parents. Parents now have 2 Live Crew to worry about when use to all they had to watch for was Elvis shaking his hips on the Ed Sullivan Show or Jerry Lee setting fire to his piano and causing a little trouble. But at least they sung from the heart and at least you could understand it. That's the part I hate most about music today. I can hardly understand the words to any song out and I'm the kind of guy who likes to hum a tune every now and then so this is very disappointing. What happened to music that wasn't just screaming?

In the days of my parents early youth they would enjoy taking a drive on warm, breezy afternoon and having a picnic at the lake. Today there is very little of that. Now it's just the than going home. Not much has changed on the surface but it's the overall situation that has changed the most. The traditional Cleaver family set up has been changed with women's rights and rebellious teens. Back in the days of old kids thought of their parents as role models, almost of their heroes, but today they use their parents as examples of what they don't want to become. Why is this?

For me my dad and uncles have been role models. Their crazy days as teens has very much influenced the things I do. I remember how my uncles Gary, Teddy Dale, and Gayle use to sit around with dad and talk about when they use to get down between the railroad tracks and let the train go over top of them or when they would hobo a train to Tennessee. They even claim to have ridden them as far as Louisiana. The funny part is that my dad expects me to not do these things after they all talk about how much fun it was. Fat chance.

The worst experience I ever had trying to live up to my dad's crazy ways happened about five years back. My cousin, Gary and I, were riding our bikes across the railroad bridge just above my house and Gary calls to my attention that our dads once rode a bike across the top ridge or a railroad bridge. I had heard the story but never thought of giving it a try, but Gary did. I helped him get the bike on top of the ledge and quickly scampered off. Gary asked if I was going to do it after he had already mounted the death trap on wheels. His feet were barely touching the ground and I told him that I would rather have someone kick the top of my head off than get up there. This caused him to panick knowing now that he was going to have to do it himself so he backed out too. It was when he was trying to get off that I had my cardiac arrest. Sometimes you have to lean a bike a bit to get off and this was the case with Gary. Getting to the point, he didn't fall off, but he came close and ruined a pair of my good underwear.

I guess you could say that my dad and uncles finally grew out of "Mumblypeg" and found a more exciting way to pass time. Or you could just say they were crazy, that's my theory. But things were different then, some things were better and some times were worse, but I still wish I could have lived it. I haven't forgotten about my trip to a country store to buy Hershey bars and cartons of Nehi peach that I planned about a month back. I haven't been able to do it just yet but I will. Maybe I'll get Teddy Dale, Gary, Gayle, and Dad to go along with me, I'm sure we could find a nice country store in Louisiana.

The sounds of Scotland

Eddie Bailey, dressed in the garb of the Highlands, explained Scottish traditions to students at Adams Middle School. He also gave a musical demonstration of the bagpipe.

Guest musical performers entertain AMS students

As part of music in our school week, AMS students were treated to some outstanding entertainment and fun. Mrs. Caudill, music teacher, had nine different people in the community to come in and perform for students.

Eddie Bailey entertained students by playing his bagpipe. He explained the Scottish tradition and wore his plaids to demonstrate the Scottish dress.

Meredith Slone demonstrated dulcimers he has made. Mr. Slone had the students involved by his playing of the dulcimer.

Keith Caudill added a whole new dimension to the word "music" with his demonstration of music and computers. The students were fascinated and awed by his performance.

Miss Townes Osborne provided a selection from her senior recital scheduled for March 31 in North Carolina. Osborne performed for the students in front of the scenic spring background in our art room.

Mark Stephens entertained students with his electric guitar. He demonstrated how the electric guitar worked and informed the students of the advancement from the 1st guitar made until now.

David Leslie entertained students with his piano. Leslie is a classical pianist. He played a classical from Chopin, and selections from the Phantom of the Opera. He also taught the students the history of the piano. He played music from classical to modern.

Beth Hall, an E.K.U. student who is a performing arts major, performed vocal selections and played the piano. She also gave insight to musical careers.

AMS students receive QSP recognition

Adams students who participated in the QSP sales were treated to some fun recently. Four students were allotted one minute in the money tank. These students were Jason Hall, who won $22, Eddie Gardner $23, Matt Zemo $15, and Chris Frasure $11. Chris Frasure also won the chance to be "assistant principal for a day." QSP is a division of Reader's Digest and Cliff Townsend is a regional representative.

KMEA district 9 band

Tasha Little and Chris Noble, both eighth graders at McDowell Elementary, were selected to participate in the 1994 All-District Junior High Band. Tasha and Chris both play the clarinet. The KMEA (Kentucky Music Educators Association) District 9 Junior High Band consists of students in grades 7 and 8 from eleven counties in the area. Twenty-four schools were represented this year. The concert was held May 1, at 2 p.m. at the Carriage House in Paintsville.

Self-esteem

The Christian Appalachian Project presented sessions on self-esteem to primary grades at Maytown Elementary. The 4-part presentations discussed topics such as Feeling Good About Me, All About Anger, Bullies, and Individualism. Invitations were sent home to the parents inviting them to participate with their children in the classroom. This is an opportunity for families to learn together and parents to become more involved in their children's education. The events were sponsored by the Maytown Family Resource Center. The presenter was Angie Hall.

Academic banquet tonight:

Floyd County honors students

Floyd County's top academic students will be honored Friday night, June 10, at the 11th annual Floyd County Schools Academic Banquet.

The honors banquet begins at 6 p.m. at the Wilkerson/Stubbo Convention Center at Jenny Wiley State Park.

Dr. Stephen Towler, Floyd County superintendent, will open the banquet. School board members Chairman Ray Brackett, Dr. Brent Clark, Phyllis Honshell, Edward Patton Jr. and Delores Smith will be introduced.

Gary Frazier, deputy superintendent for instruction, will again serve as master of ceremonies at the honors banquet. Libbi Hall, coordinator of professional development, will offer the invocation.

Entertainment will be provided by the Kentucky Opry Floyd County All-Stars directed by Billie Jean Osborne, founder and director of the Kentucky Opry.

The highlight of the evening will be the presentation of certificates by Robert Allen II, vice president of administrative services at the First Commonwealth Bank, to the top academic students of the 1993-94 school year.

Governor's Scholars will also be recognized at the ceremony. They are Aaron David Bond, Kathryn Rose Mullins and Stewart Elias Robertson, all of Prestonsburg High School, and Jeremy Nathan Elliott and Joshua Shane Flaherty, both of Allen Central High School.

Allen defeats HAP 8-2

The Allen Babe Ruth team was able to overcome an early 2-0 deficit as it came back to defeat Harold-Allen-Prater (HAP) 8-2 in Floyd County Babe Ruth action Wednesday evening.

Brandon Castle gave up the two runs on only three hits as he struck out 14 batters en route to his complete game win. Castle also walked two.

HAP got to Castle early with two runs in the second inning as Craig Hamilton and Brad Kidd each came around to score.

Castle settled down, though, allowing only one hit the last five innings.

Allen battled back to tie the score in its half of the first with Wesley Collins and Castle scoring. Castle and Kaleb Yates each had doubles in the inning.

Allen took the lead for the good in the fourth, scoring three runs. Chris Moore, Collins, and Eric Cook scored for Allen.

The victors added one more in the fifth and two in the sixth to round out the scoring for the game.

Lance Jones pitched the first five innings for HAP, allowing six runs on seven hits with two walks and seven strikeouts in picking up the loss.

Chad Case went the final inning, allowing two runs on one hit. He also fanned three and walked two.

The win pushed Allen's record to 6-1 as they sit atop the league standings.

After 14 seasons as high school umpire, Joyce calls it quits

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Saying 14 years as a high school and college umpire is enough, Andrew Joyce called his final high school game this past Thursday when he umpired third base in the championship game of the Section 4 playoff at Pikeville between Betsy Layne and Corbin.

"I'm still going to run the Big Sandy Umpire Association," Joyce said. "I'll still be the assigning secretary."

Joyce began his career 14 years ago, and three years ago, with the help of some current umpires, founded the Big Sandy Umpires Association.

Until the formation of the association, the umpiring in the 15th Region was in shambles and state tournament games were non-existent.

"Louis Stout told me three years ago, and he told Smokey (Jones) also, that if we didn't form an association, then our state tournament game would go to some other region. So we formed it three years ago."

Joyce said that his dream was to one day call a state tournament final but because of being an assigning secretary he wasn't permitted.

"Louis (Stout) called me the other day and asked me who we (BSA) was sending to the state finals," Joyce said. "I told him that I always let the association vote on who to send. I told him that they voted for me to call it.

"He then informed me that I couldn't do it because of being the assigning secretary. So, our association will send Dale Conn," he said.

Joyce said that he will be getting around more next season and watch some of the association umpires work.

The BSA is a growing association and takes in new members each season.

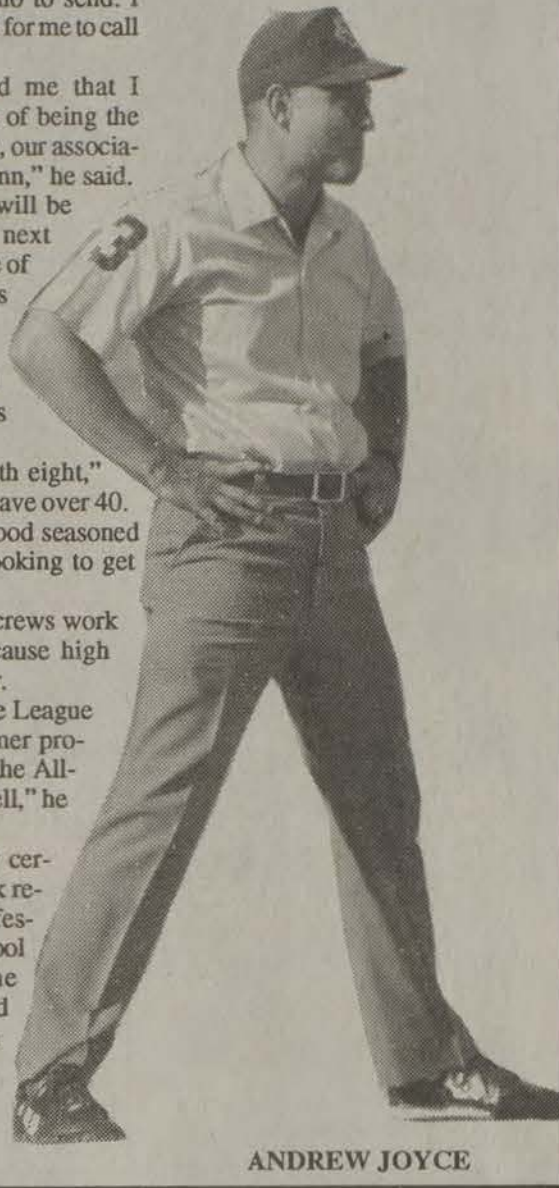

"We started out with eight," he said, "and now we have over 40. We have some very good seasoned umpires and we are looking to get new one's in."

Joyce said that his crews work isn't finished just because high school baseball is over.

"We work the Little League games and other summer programs. We will work the All-Star tournaments as well," he said.

Joyce and his crew certainly has brought back respectability to the profession of calling high school baseball games. The crews are well dressed and very capable in making split-second decisions.

The BSA umpires did an excellent job.

Rangers climb to .500 on the season

The Prestonsburg Rangers overcame a 7-4 deficit in the fourth inning to beat the Prestonsburg Cubs 8-7 in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Ranger third baseman Josh Shepherd walked in the seventh and second baseman Josh Slone reached on a bunt toward third to put two on for center fielder Clifton Jordan. Jordan singled to left prompting Shepherd to try for home. The throw from left to home was on target and Shepherd was out at the plate. In an attempt to stop Slone from advancing to third, the Cubs' catcher threw the ball over the third baseman's head, allowing Slone to walk in to win the game.

Ranger starter Robert Spradlin allowed seven runs in six innings on eight hits while fanning nine and walking two.

Ricky Powers came on in relief in the seventh and gave up two hits in shutting down the Cubs. He walked one and struck out two.

For the Cubs, starter Neil Fannin allowed three runs on three hits, while striking out four and walking two.

Chris Prater relieved Fannin in the fourth, and gave up five runs on five hits, struck out four and walked two.

The Cubs struck hard and fast in the first with four runs off Spradlin. Spradlin, however, settled down and struck out the next four hitters. The Cubs scored once in the third and twice in the fourth to take a 7-3 lead.

The Rangers scored once in the first thanks to an error in left field. Chad Wallen's triple scored two more runs in the second. After a scoreless third, the Rangers cut the Cub lead to three when Powers scored on a passed ball in the fourth.

After hitting a single, Josh Slone advanced to second, then stole third before scoring on a passed ball in the fifth.

The Rangers tied the game at seven in the sixth inning as Wallen doubled to right center, scoring two runs.

The win pushed the Rangers record to 4-4 on the season.

Earlier in the week, the Rangers fell victim to the Prestonsburg Indians.

The Indians used a five-run third inning to defeat the Rangers 6-4. The Indians gave up four runs on five hits, including a two-run home run by Robert Spradlin, with nine strikeouts and four walks.

The Rangers gave up their six runs on three hits, including doubles by John Dixon and Mark Blankenship and a triple by Sam Shepherd. The Rangers also struck out eight and walked five.

Rangers' starter Ricky Powers held the Indians hitless through two and one-third innings, a span of 11 batters, before giving up Dixon's double and Shepherd's triple. These hits plus three errors allowed the Indians to take a 5-2 lead.

Powers settled down and didn't allow a run until the fifth inning when John Dixon added an insurance run thanks to a wild pitch. Spradlin came on in relief with one out in the fifth and gave up just one hit, a double to Blankenship, while striking out four over the final inning and two-thirds.

The Rangers scored early when Spradlin hit his second home run of the year off Shepherd to give the Rangers a 2-0 lead. The Rangers were silent until the fourth when they scored two runs with the help of a sacrifice from Matt Setser and a single by Josh Shepherd. This pulled the Rangers to within one of the Indians but to no avail.

The Rangers failed to advance a runner beyond second in the final two innings.

After losing to the Indians, the Rangers returned to the field Monday to play the Giants.

Ranger pitcher Josh Slone gave up just five runs on five hits, including a double by J. T. Absher and a triple by Greg Arnett, while striking out 11 and walking five.

Giant pitcher Craig Prince yielded 13 runs on nine hits while striking out seven and walking seven. Josh Shepherd, Aaron Bingham and Josh Meade had doubles for the Rangers.

Slone struck out six of the first nine Giants he faced before giving up two runs in the third on Arnett's two-run triple.

He held the Giants scoreless in the fourth and allowed another two runs in the fifth on Absher's two-run double before finishing the game with his 11th strikeout.

The Rangers scored six times in the first, including a double by Josh Shepherd, a two-run double by Bingham and a RBI double by Meade. They added two more in the second and one in the third to take a 9-2 lead. The Rangers also scored four runs in the fourth.

Safety Program will be held at Paintsville Lake

The water patrol division of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will be conducting a boating safety program at Paintsville Lake at the Corps of Engineers maintenance shop on Tuesday, June 14 at 7 p.m.

The program will be open to the public and interested boaters desiring more information may contact the Resource Manager at Paintsville Lake, Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. or at (606) 297-6312.

Pro-Am tournament begins at Paintsville Country Club

When the 53rd annual Paintsville Country Club Pro-Am tournament opens play today (Friday), over 160 golfers, both professional and amateur, will be vying for the title, including the defending champions.

Jeff LeMaster, who is from London, Ohio, won last year's Pro-Am tourney by shooting a six-under 204 for the 54-hole tourney while Scott Vance was the amateur champ.

While LeMaster and Vance hope that they can continue their reign, one change is certain for this year's tourney — the format.

This year's tournament will be a stroke play format rather than a match play system which, according to tournament director and Paintsville Country Club pro Luther Conley, is a much needed change.

"I think it's a change for the better," Conley said. "So far everyone has liked the idea of the change. Out of state players benefit the most because they're guaranteed to play three days, as opposed to losing the first day and having to go home."

"We should have 128 amateurs playing and, overall, I feel it will be a change for the better."

The tourney record was set three years ago when Scott Beard shot a 16-under 194.

Mike Cahill, Florence, Bill Damron, Pikeville, Jay James, Ashland, Anthony Ballester, Orlando, Florida, and Steve Frey, Chillicothe, Ohio, are just a few of the pros who will be competing for the title.

The tournament will run through Sunday.

Martin Reds red-hot during winning streak

The Martin Reds won three games last week which gives them a seven game winning streak and improves their record to 7-2. They are 5-0 in their division.

Tuesday, at Wayland's ball park, the Reds beat the Wayland Dodgers 26-1. Larry Mullins Jr. was the winning pitcher.

In a game called in the fourth inning, Mullins struck out eight batters and walked three and gave up three hits.

Henry Napier, Mark Howard, Jason Fields and Jessica Fields each had three hits. Mullins, Chris Damron and Keith Crum each had two hits.

Wednesday's game was a 5-0 shut out of the Duff Orioles. Napier went the distance in picking up the win. Napier struck out 14 and walked four batter and allowed two hits.

The Reds got some timely two-out hitting from Damron and Jason Fields. Howard had a triple and Crum had a double and a triple.

In Friday's game against the Garrett Cubs, the Reds won 16-10. Damron started the game on the mound. He worked four innings, struck out six, walked four and allowed 11 hits.

Mullins came in to pitch the last two innings, striking out three, walking one and allowing no hits.

Napier and Damron both went 4-4 from the plate. Chad Samons, Mullins, Crum and Howard each had two hits.

For the Cubs, J. Bentley, K. Childers and C. Combs, had three hits each.

Angels heavenly in pair of wins

The Martin Angels scored 60 runs in two days as they improved their overall record to 6-1 with victories over the Royals and the Rangers in Martin Pee Wee baseball action.

On Tuesday, May 31, the Angels used an eighteen run first inning to open the contest as they outgunned the Royals 37-23.

Megan Ousley, Rachael Mitchell, Joelyn Martin, Zach Hilton, Nick Lawson and Andrew Shepherd each went 5-5 from the plate en route to the two touchdown victory.

Ousley had three home runs and a pair of doubles and, along with Mitchell and Martin, scored five times in the contest.

Gary Adkins and Mekala Rice added four hits for the victors.

The first inning was much the same for the Angels against the Rangers on Saturday as they opened up the game with fifteen runs, winning 23-5.

Ousley had four more hits in this contest, including two home runs. Joey Bryant, Gary Adkins, Mitchell, Michael Murray and Rice added three hits for the Angels.

Determined

Allison Pack of the Tigers took a hearty swing in girls' softball action last Friday night at Archer Park. The Reds beat the Tigers 9-7.

Heading Home

Miranda Lafferty of the Tigers was about to touch third before heading to home during the Tigers 9-7 loss to the Reds in girls' softball action last Friday at Archer Park.

Rifles name manager

The final piece of the Kentucky Rifles' championship puzzle has fallen into place.

Palmer Muench, a 25-year veteran of collegiate baseball coaching, has been named the Rifles' manager for the 1994 season. Muench, the head coach of Southeast Missouri State University (SEMO), will be arriving in Pikeville Friday afternoon.

Muench has been at SEMO for the past ten years, where he is a physical education instructor.

Muench's career has spanned four decades and four states, including head coaching positions at St. John's College in Kansas, Davidson College, Whitman College, and Western State College of Colorado.

Muench began his career by playing with the Kansas City A's and then later coached in the Philadelphia Phillies minor league organization.

Muench has received numerous coaching awards, such as NAIA District Coach of the Year.

"Palmer provides for our players wisdom, experience, and teaching skill, which is exactly what we are looking for," Mike Weisbart, General Manager of the Rifles, said.

Bentley having football success

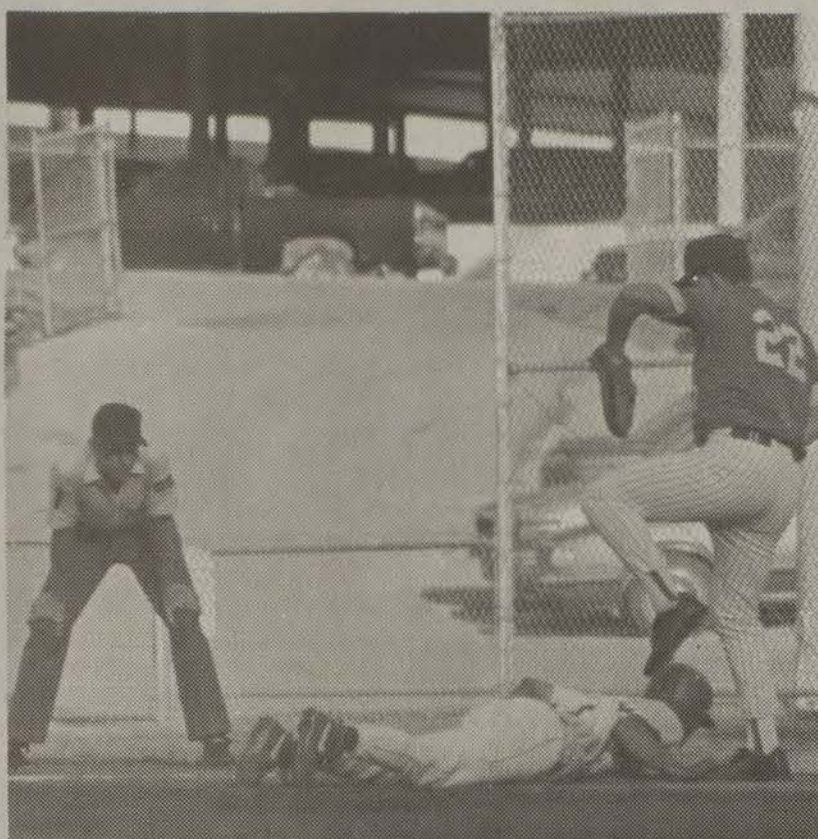

Charlie Bentley, son of Tommy Bentley, formerly of McDowell, is a junior at Hilliard High School where he just completed his first season on the varsity football team.

The Hilliard Wildcats posted the best season ever at the school as they advanced to the state semifinal game before being defeated by Cincinnati Moeller on December 4.

"It was a great season, but we'll do better next year," Bentley said.

Bentley will be a senior at Hilliard this season and will again be a member of the football team.

He is the grandson of the late Charlie and Dora Bentley of McDowell.

Fishing with Scott Patton

Shallow water patterns and techniques for shallow water bass

You can always find bass shallow, no matter what lake your fishing. One of the first things I'll do is get a good topo map of the lake or river I am going to fish. This is a great guide for anyone and you can generally find these maps in your local marina or tackle store.

One of my favorite patterns will be fishing main lake points with top water early in the morning while the fish are still active. If the lake or river your fishing contains milfoil or some other type of vegetation, this pattern will usually be very productive. Most of the time you will have to move up the main river channel to catch more active fish. The reason for this is that there will be current present and off colored water. This means more oxygen, cooler water temperature, and less visibility for active shallow water feeders. An angler can focus on top water here early in the morning and on cloudy days possibly all day long. In most river channels you can find a lot more cover such as fallen trees, stumps, and brush piles. I like to flip a worm or jig in this timber.

My basic equipment would be a heavy action St. Croix flippin or pitchin rod with 20-25lb test Triple Fish camouflage line and a 1/2 oz. All Terrain jig with a guide bug trailer.

While flipping for these shallow water bass use a quiet approach. I'll keep my Nitro boat positioned in the deeper channel side of the area I'm fishing. I'll keep my Mercury motor trimmed half way up so it won't bang around on any stumps that wasn't visible to me. The reason I don't trim the motor all the way out of the water is it works as a rupture to keep the back end of the boat from swinging out of position and possibly spooking my fish. Just remember a quiet approach is a must.

If you will go up into the river systems and fish for these shallow water bass, you'll learn that you can find a lot of different ways to catch fish. You can also use these areas to get away from a lot of skiers and pleasure boater. It is also a safe place to fish out of a smaller boat such as an aluminum boat. There are usually boat ramps up in most of these areas for easy access. Just take a look at your topo map to locate one.

Keep a positive attitude, Keep casting, and Keep fishing!!!

Bassin' with the Pros

LOW SPEED REELS HAVE VARIED USES FOR BASS FISHING

Very often, using a slower retrieve catches more bass.

The problem with making a slower retrieve, however, has been forcing you to constantly think about turning the reel handle. When you're thinking about your reel, you can't think about fish, and when you can't think about fish, you miss them when they finally do strike.

That's the opinion of Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler Ron Shuffield, who has solved the problem by switching to reels with a lower gear ratio.

"Now, even when I turn the reel handle at normal speed, the lure still moves slower because not as much line is picked up," explains Shuffield, "and if I want the lure to go really slow on a particular retrieve, I can still turn the handle slower."

Most bait casting reels have a gear ratio of about 5:1, but Shuffield has started using reels with ratios of 4.7:1 and even as low as 3.8:1.

"Reels with lower gear ratios have been available for years, but they were designed and promoted for use with crank baits," explains Shuffield, "because a slower retrieve with a crank bait actually causes it to dive a little deeper."

"I use these reels not only for crank baits, but also for spinner baits and buzz baits, too. When you're slow-rolling a spinner bait in deep water, for example, the best retrieve is a very slow one, and these reels really make that easier."

The technique of slow-rolling a big blade spinner bait over submerged vegetation or underwater logs and brush is difficult, says Shuffield, because the larger blades tend to create lift and bring the lure up away from the cover. A slow retrieve is the only way to keep the lure down.

The same is true for top-water buzz baits, adds the Johnson pro.

"In virtually every instance, the slower you can retrieve a buzz bait on the surface, the more bass you'll catch," he says.

"You have to really concentrate on the lure when you're fishing a buzz bait, however, but if you're thinking about how you turn the reel handle, you can't concentrate on the lure, so you usually lose a lot of fish."

The low-gear reels can also be used when crawling worms or jigs along the bottom, notes Shuffield, and should be especially useful in the coming winter months when bass are sluggish and these lures need to be worked even more slowly than usual.

"I've been surprised at how many applications I have found for using a low-gear reel," says the Arkansas angler. "Just about the only time you don't want to use them is when you're fishing one of the swimming minnow-imitation lures or some top-water lures you usually retrieve very fast."

Roberts wins three races

Veteran area runner Rick Roberts, Van Lear, chalked up three victories over Memorial Day weekend as he competed in five races.

Roberts placed first in the Trans Financial National Bank mile run in Pikeville. Roberts had a time of 5:41 in taking the top spot.

Battling 40 mile an hour winds, Roberts placed second in the 10K run in Pikeville finishing with a time of 41:24.

It was the Coal Diggers Festival in Belfry that Roberts made his next stop. He took home first place in the 3.5 mile run and then won the mile run.

Roberts had a time of 19:51 in the 3.5 mile. He posted a time of 5:35 in the mile.

This past Memorial Day, Roberts finished 12th overall and second in his age group while competing in the Hardee's Memorial Day 5K. Roberts had a time of 18:08, a time he wasn't to pleased with.

"I should be running in the 17's," he said. "I haven't been able to run like I need to. I've averaged about seven to nine miles a week."

Roberts plans to run the Rail City Run by the River in Russell on June 11.

Student Classroom Placements
Date, June 6, 1994
Dear Parents,
Our staff is making plans for the class assignments for the 1994-95 school year. Students will be assigned to heterogeneous classroom groups this month by their current teachers, who are in the best position to make assignments. They have worked with your children throughout the year and have the best "handle" on their needs. Staff consider many factors as balanced groups are prepared, such as the range of academic abilities, social mixture, gender balance, individual learning styles, student personality and interaction, students benefiting from being together or separated, overall student behavior, student/teacher considerations and class size. The objective of the process is to produce the most "workable" heterogeneous combination of student groups. This important task contributes significantly to the creation of a positive class environment, which enables students to function to the fullest of their abilities. Staff members are assigned to these classes during the summer based upon the best possible "match" of teaching skills and interpersonal needs of students.
Parents may want to share information about their child's learning style to help us in the placement process. This should be put in writing with reasons outlined and related to the balance considerations mentioned above and directed to their child's teacher. Requests for specific teachers are not appropriate. Please rely on our professional judgement, and trust that we will group and provide children with the best possible learning environment. Students and parents will be informed of class assignments in August.
Enjoy the rest of the spring,
Janice B. Allen
Principal

Living history

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

The cannon boomed; the guns cracked, and the sun blazed Sunday during the staging of a Civil War Battle at Middle Creek.

"It was hotter than blazes," said John Wells, a re-enactor with the 5th Kentucky Confederate Unit, which was hosting the event.

The affair drew a crowd of spectators and re-enactors, despite temperatures that reached high into the 90s.

The battle scenario this year did not follow the actual battle in 1862 because re-enactors would have had to take to the hills to do most of the fighting and spectators would have nothing to watch but smoke coming from the hills, said Owen Wright, captain of the 5th Kentucky.

Several re-enactors, though, fought from the wooded hillside as happened in the Civil War battle, Wright said.

A highlight of the battle was a supply wagon that was used in the filming of the movie "Gettysburg."

During the Middle Creek battle, the confederates were running low on ammunition and were being overtaken by the union troops. When the wagon rolled into the fighting area, Capt. Mike Sheets asked for ammunition, but the wagon's driver said "Sorry, but my contract is not with you. I can't supply you with ammunition."

"How can I fight a war with no ammunition," Sheets said as he paced to and fro in front of the wagon.

Other activities during the weekend included a lecture by Bob Perry at May House on Saturday, a pig roast and a dramatization Saturday evening.

Jimmy Epling, representing a union soldier, explained the Battle of Middle Creek that was fought on January 10, 1862.

John Wells, portrayed a con-feder-rite soldier, and told a hilarious true story about his ancestor "half-moon Ward" that kept the audience laughing. On the serious side, Wells told about the aftermath of the Battle of Middle Creek and how it felt to discover a cousin — in Union uniform — dead. His portrayal brought a hush to the crowd.

A small fee was charged for the dinner and drama. Proceeds will be used to produce next year's re-enactment, Wright said.

Spectators are always admitted free to open camps and to battle skirmishes and re-enactments at Middle Creek, Wright said.

Re-enactors participating in the campaign called it a "nice little event."

"You really made us feel at home," a member of the North Carolina unit said.

Into the battle

Led by Captain Mike Sheets members of the Confederate infantry rushed into the battle. The 9th Kentucky infantry unit fought alongside their 5th Kentucky hosts.

Cavalry charge

Three union cavalry units participated in the Middle Creek Battle. The cavalry helped to bring about the union victory in the battle of 1994. During the battle of 1862, the cavalry unit was the first union troops to receive enemy fire at Middle Creek.

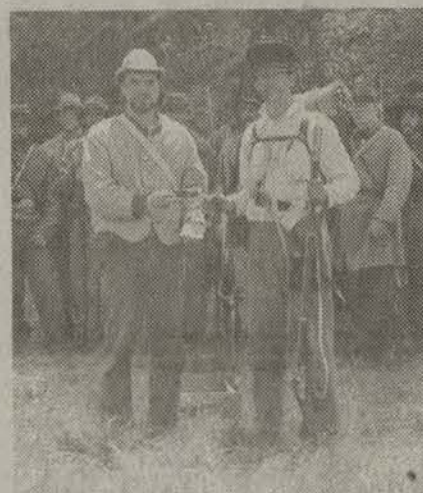

Songs remembered

Mark Romanowitz of Pike County was part of the dinner/drama entertainment Saturday night.

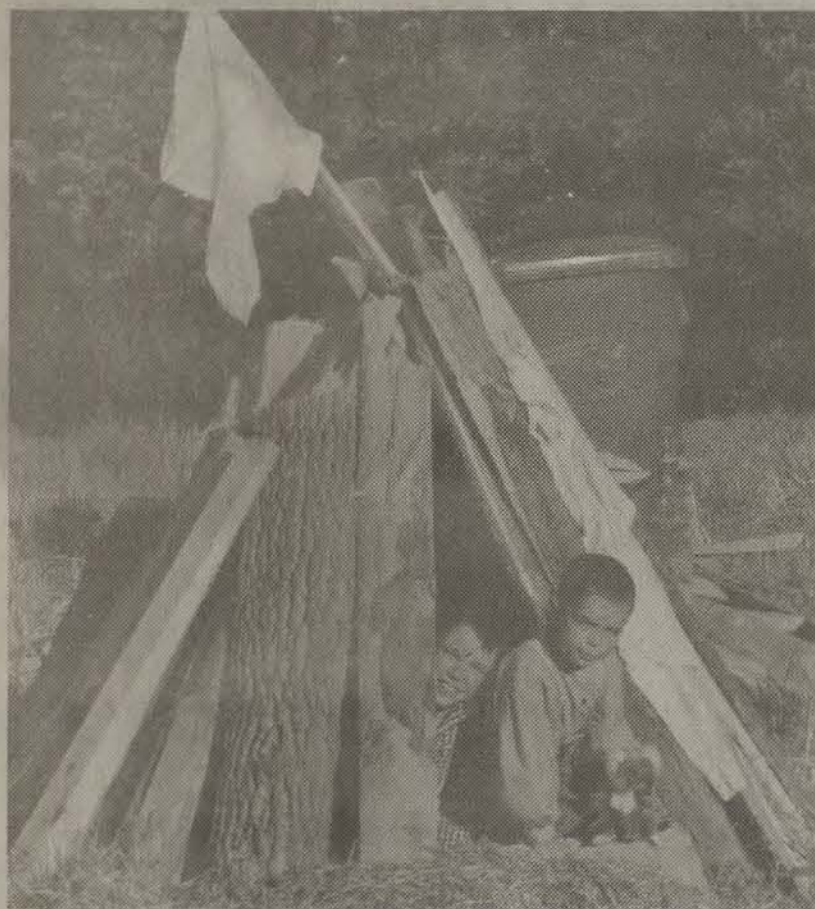

"We licked 'em"

Jimmy Epling told the union's version of events during the 1862 Battle of Middle Creek. Epling's saga was part of Saturday evening's dinner/drama.

Winner

Capt. Owen Wright presented Ricky Bailey of Frankfort with the door prize.

Flag of truce

Erik Gulick, his friend "Koala," and his brother Caleb kept out of the hot sun by staying in the shelter he and other youngsters of re-enactors built at the Middle Creek encampment. They are the children of Chris and Kate Gulick of Big Branch of Abbott.

Tale of half-moon

The highlight of Saturday's entertainment was John Well's tale about his ancestor, Half-moon Ward.

Losing battle

Pat Wood of Paintsville tackled the dirty laundry on her washboard. Pat had a special on shirts during the encampment. Re-enactors could have their battle shirts washed for a nickel each.

Tug of war

David Deskins received a sharp tug on his suspenders after he was brought down by enemy fire. Although they were fewer in number than their confederate counterparts, the union troops were victorious Sunday. Members of the 25th North Carolina unit donned blue uniforms and joined the union ranks for the weekend.

No way to win a battle

Capt. Mike Sheets tried to conjoin the supply wagon driver to give his troops ammunition. The driver refused and drove away. Sheets lost the battle. The wagon is part of the 36th Virginia unit and was used in the movie, "Gettysburg."
