Collections improving, but still a problem :

You dump it, you clean it, panel says

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

People who dump trash in open dumps in Floyd County will have to clean up their messes, Lon May, ecology officer, told members of the Floyd County Solid Waste board at a meeting Monday night.

May told board members that he had visited several dumps in the county, including one on Cow Mountain, and sifted through the debris for names and addresses. He contacted the people whose names he had found and gave them an ultimatum — either clean up so many bags of trash or pay a fine. May said they chose to clean up the trash, and while they were cleaning up the trash, they found more names. He plans to contact those individuals and also have them clean up the open dumps.

"If you have to pick up garbage, you won't dump it again," he told board members, who praised his work.

"We live in the prettiest place in the world, if only we could see it," Darrell Patton, a member of the waste board said.

May asked for four volunteer deputy ecology officers to help him in his clean-up efforts. Board members told May to put together a description of tasks the volunteers would be assigned and bring it to the next meeting for their approval.

He also asked the board to purchase a truck that he could use to haul away the trash. He reported that the vehicle provided by the solid waste office cannot travel the roads in the rugged areas of the county. No action was taken on his request.

May also asked the waste commission to provide him with a uniform which he could wear when he gives lectures to students. Board members told him to bring back an estimate on the uniforms and they would make a decision at the next meeting.

At the meeting, board members also listened to a progress report from Rumpke.

Ron Henke, representing Rumpke, told the board that the company had been using information from the 911 system and post office to cross reference and account for residential and commercial customers.

He estimated that about 2,500 customers were not on his list. In one instance, someone had told Rumpke that a customer was deceased. He was taken from the active list of Rumpke customers, but his name remained on file in the computer.

When the man's name was reentered into the computer as a new customer, the computer identified the man's debts to the waste company.

He also reported that 3,282 of the 12,015 residential customers on Rumpke's list have not paid their bills. In his written report, Henke said he planned to turn the delinquent accounts over to the Floyd County

DeZarn announces cuts at armory

Kentucky's Adjutant General Robert DeZarn was at the Prestonsburg National Guard armory Wednesday to announce a reduction of forces for the Prestonsburg unit. The Big Sandy region, particularly Floyd County, was dealt a blow in the area of emergency assistance Wednesday when the Kentucky's Adjutant General Robert DeZarn announced a down-sizing of the Prestonsburg National Guard unit.

As part of an overall reorganization of the guard, Prestonsburg's unit will be cut 100 positions in the 206th Engineering Battalion, but units in northern and central Kentucky will increase in size.

DeZarn said that some of the guardsmen in the Prestonsburg unit will be reassigned to Jackson and other soldiers will have the option to transfer to other units in the state.

Lack of commitment and attendance at monthly guard drills was one of the deciding factors in the reduction of force, David Altom, public information officer for military affairs, said Wednesday afternoon.

If the Prestonsburg unit could increase the number of soldiers and raise participation percentages, it could be possible to put the unit back at full force, Altom said.

At a press conference at the Prestonsburg armory Wednesday, area officials voiced concern about the cutback.

Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin told DeZarn that the guard's presence in the area was crucial because of their assistance and response time when an emergency situation arises in the area.

Fannin also asked why areas with guard units 10-15 miles apart were not cut rather than the Prestonsburg unit which serves the easternmost part of the state.

DeZarn answered that the 25 committee members who worked for over a year on the reduction plan decided which units would be reduced.

Officials from Johnson and Martin counties told DeZarn that the guard unit helped the area out tremendously during last year's severe winter weather.

Guardsmen were recently activated in Floyd, Pike and Knott counties to battle forest fires. Guardsmen also provided water for the residents of Martin when that city's water supply was contaminated.

DeZarn made a pledge to officials that Eastern Kentucky would not suffer because of the cutbacks and guardsmen from other areas of the Head Start dispute could prove costly

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A dispute over the location of a new Head Start center in the Left Beaver area could result in the Floyd County school system losing a state grant to build that facility.

At Monday's school board meeting, board member Eddie Patton asked that the board consider alternate sites for a new Drift Head Start center.

A $230,000 Community Development Block Grant calls for the center to be built on the campus of McDowell Elementary. Locating the new center on the school campus would provide cafeteria services, physical education facilities and occupational therapy for students.

The center at Drift has been flooded numerous times and does not have a cafeteria.

Anne Chaney, with the Big Sandy Area Development District, explained to board members Monday that the official grant award has not been made because certain matters have to be addressed.

One issue, Chaney said, is the site for the center.

Patton commented that residents in Drift wanted the center to remain in the area and urged the board to authorize looking at other sites.

Chaney explained that the grant award was based on several factors, including: a new center at McDowell would allow for 22 children on a waiting list to be enrolled in the program; a center at McDowell would improve services to the children; and relocating the center would result in lower transportation and food service expenses. She added that the McDowell location would allow students to take greater advantage of services offered by the Family Resource Center, which is located on the school campus.

Local bank offers challenge :

Adopt-A-Child effort needs help

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

Businesses and individuals have the opportunity to make Christmas brighter for Head Start children through the Floyd County Head Start Program's annual Adopt-A-Child for Christmas campaign now underway.

The goal of Adopt-A-Child is to provide each of the 460 children in the Floyd County Head Start program with Christmas gifts through the sponsorship of local businesses and individuals. The program has 18 centers that serve 20 children each. Centers are located at Allen, Betsy Layne, Clark, Drift, Duff, Martin, Melvin, Osborne, Prestonsburg and Stumbo elementaries.

"This program is so good because otherwise, some children won't get toys, they won't get anything (for Christmas)," said Glenda Newsome, a family service worker for the Head Start program. "When we deliver the presents to the children's houses, we take Santa Claus with us. You should see the children's eyes light up. They get excited over a pair of socks."

For six years Adopt-A-Child has helped underprivileged preschool children in the county have a merry Christmas. But this year, sponsorship of children has been slow. "This year we are having it a little rougher," Newsome said. "A lot of children have not been adopted...We have four or five centers that need adopted."

One Prestonsburg institution has gotten into the act. The Bank Josephine, whose employees have "adopted" 15 children, is challenging other financial institutions to get into the spirit of the Christmas season by adopting one or more children.

Don Wise, president of the bank, which has 54 full-time employees, said Tuesday, "We thought 15 was a respectable number to adopt for our size. Then we found out from Glenda that a substantial number of children who are not going to be adopted. We decided to challenge other financial institutions to get into the spirit to adopt."

The bank's initiative was spearheaded by Sandy Boggs, a loan processor who became aware of Adopt-A-Child through a letter sent to the project and it should be quite a change from the way things were done before.

At Monday's school board meeting, chairman Ray Brackett made a motion that the superintendent and operations chief solicit proposals for construction management services for the Martin/Maytown project. Brackett asked that proposals be presented to the board at the December meeting.

In the past, the board rarely solicited proposals from construction management firms before hiring a company to oversee school building projects.

Under guidelines developed by the state Department of Education, the board must select a minimum of three construction management firms to be evaluated through the request for proposal process.

Also, the board must negotiate a CM contract using the department's request for proposal form and amendments; the contract must set out fee guidelines or a lump sum price and the projected number of months for construction; and include an additional fee scale for additional construction costs and months for con-

After nearly a half-century in business :

Wrights calling it quits

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

Wright Brothers Jewelers has been a fixture on Court Street in downtown Prestonsburg since 1948. But after nearly five decades in the jewelry store business, owner and watchmaker Clifford Wright has decided to hang up his loupe.

Wright and his wife Barbara plan to retire by March and move to Richmond to be near two of their daughters and grandchildren.

"This will be my last Christmas here," Wright said during an interview Tuesday at the store. "We have lots of loyal customers and good friends that we will miss the most. We are thankful for the loyal patronage throughout the years. We will be sad to be leaving. But I told my wife, I walked in here with no hat and a tie on and I'm going to walk out the same way."

"I'm tired," said Barbara, who keeps the books for the business. "I'm happy about retiring, but I'll miss it..."

Wright's health was also a factor in the couple's decision. Wright had triple bypass heart surgery two years ago. He said he is also in constant pain from a leg amputation in 1982. The Wrights have a prospective buyer for the business.

Wright said he has spent "the last 45 years at the bench repairing watches and jewelry." He admitted that his work as a watchmaker and repairer at times "has been aggravating," especially since mechanical watches have become passé.

"About every watch now is quartz or battery-run," he said. "There's not much to repair. I've enjoyed fixing everything I can repair. But mechanical watches are a thing of the past now."

When he is not working his trade, the 68-year-old jeweler can be found sitting at his desk in a partitioned cubby at the back of the store. An ardent University of Kentucky basketball fan, Wright has four framed prints of UK basketball artwork on the walls and a blue metal sign with white lettering declaring that the area

Hearing delayed on solicitation charge

Arraignment for a Johnson County attorney charged with trying to solicit sex from juveniles was postponed Wednesday until December 13.

Roger Toyray Adams, 30, of Paintsville, was arrested Tuesday and charged with criminal attempt to promote a sexual performance from a minor.

Adams, who posted a $500 cash bond Tuesday night and was released from jail, was to have been arraigned on the charge Wednesday in Floyd District Court.

Trial commissioner Jack Hyden said the proceeding had been continued on the request of Adams' attorney.

Grand jury to meet

The Floyd County Grand Jury will meet in session beginning November 29. Those individuals who wish to appear before the grand jury are asked to register on November 29.

is "Big Blue Boulevard."

A glass surround allows for two-way viewing—so Wright can see the show floor and customers can see him and pop in his "office" for friendly chats. Socializing with customers is one aspect of the business that Wright, known for his witty sayings and humorous anecdotes, will miss. "I love to talk with people and be with people," he said. "I've enjoyed every year I've been here."

Wright became a watchmaker 46 years ago out of necessity. "I had two brothers," he said. "When we got out of high school, Dad didn't have enough money for us to go to college. He said that he had enough to teach us a trade."

In 1945, Wright and his identical twin brother Chesley attended the Southern College of Watchmaking. His older brother Homer worked in a jewelry store in Huntington to learn how to be a buyer. The three went into partnership in Louisa, setting up the first Wright Brothers Jewelers store in 1946.

After Homer's death, Chesley moved to Paintsville where he opened another Wright Brothers store in 1971. Chesley and Wright were partners until Chesley's death in 1979. Wright then sold the Paintsville business to his nephew. The Louisa store closed in 1971.

In 1948, Wright opened the first of two Wright Brothers Jewelers in Floyd County. That year he bought out Leete Jewelry located on Court Street in Prestonsburg and opened the present store.

Martin was the location of his second store, which he operated from 1955 to the mid-70s. Wright said that he drove every day from his home in Louisa to stores in Martin and Prestonsburg until he settled in Floyd County.

Wright closed the Martin store when his merchandise was destroyed by repeated flooding. "There was high water—19 times—and I got run out," he said.

Ironically, his business on Court Street was not immune to major flooding, either. "The high water was in the building here, four and a half feet, once," he recalled. "We didn't save nothing. A watchmaker who worked for us came and set watches for repair on top of a safe. All else was destroyed."

He recalled only two break-ins at the Prestonsburg store. "I had a window broken one time at Christmastime. They took what I had out of the window. Then last year I had a window broken and several diamond rings were stolen."

In both cases, only a few of the stolen items were recovered.

Wright said that the best-selling jewelry item over the years has been wedding bands. And he recalled an amusing, and exasperating, incident regarding a wedding band he made for a new customer.

"I had this preacher in here one time and he wanted a wedding band a size nine. We made a size nine. He tried it on and asked, 'Is it a nine? It don't feel like a nine.'"

The normally easy-going Wright answered, "Look, you told me to make it a nine, not 9 and one quarter."

The man kept insisting the band didn't feel like a size nine and finally a frustrated Wright gave the customer his money back. "I told him, 'Go find someone who can tell you what a nine feels like.' I told him I didn't want him to come back because I couldn't afford him as a customer. I haven't seen the man since."

A displeased customer was a rarity, Wright said, adding with a smile, "I've had good customers over the years."

In fact, many of his present customers are second generation.

"Remember when I gave one little girl a little ring. I told her mother that when she got married I'd give her a wedding band."

"Years later she came in for a wedding ring and I gave her a band. Now she has children. I've served two generations of customers," he said with a smile.

state would be sent to the area in emergency situations.

After Wednesday's announcement, DeZarn said that the Department of the Army decided to reduce the number of engineering battalions and Prestonsburg's unit was affected because of that. He added that guardsmen in that particular field would have to be retrained and it "wouldn't be cheap" to do so.

Once the reduction plan was completed, Governor Brereton Jones had to approve it before it is implemented. Reductions in force will begin next month and continue in February and September 1995.

Several guardsmen in the Prestonsburg unit will be reassigned to the Jackson and Hazard engineering battalions.

DeZarn cautioned that the numbers reflected in the reorganization were not "set in stone" and he would continue to lobby for the Prestonsburg unit.

"We'll look at what happens down the road in September," DeZarn said. "You won't see a drastic change in Eastern Kentucky. We can always go get some help (for the area). Frankfort is not that far away."

The Prestonsburg unit is the only unit east of Interstate 75 and south of I-64 to be cut.

Units in Benton, Louisville, Marion, Murray, Russellville,

Walton, Carlisle, Lexington, Morehead and Richmond will be increased in size.

The Hazard unit will remain at 165 guardsmen and Jackson's will be down sized from 165 to 100 men.

Altom said Wednesday that there are 1,000 guardsmen slots open in the state. If those slots can be filled, Altom said, Kentucky's National Guard would be at full strength.

AAA offers advice for children flying solo

The first time a child flies alone can generate excitement for the youngster but anxious moments for mom or dad—unless everyone knows how to prepare and what to expect, says AAA.

A colorful new brochure, "Flying Alone: Handy advice for kids traveling solo," contains some reassuring advice for parents of the young traveler in addition to helpful hints for preparing the youngster for his journey.

"The brochure takes a light-hearted look at an important topic—helping parents prepare children for that first solo plane trip," said AAA's Kathy Gross. "Flying Alone" offers suggestions on making reservations, packing, dressing and other items of interest."

for the grant on behalf of the school system and would have to purchase the center site from the board of education. Chaney explained that the county could buy the site and the board could lease it back from the county for the same amount.

Patton countered that a letter from Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo to state officials said that a new center would be built at Drift.

Chaney said that she drafted the letter and the reference that the center would be built at Drift was an error. She added that the grant application made it clear that the center would be built on the McDowell campus.

If the school board, the fiscal court and the Big Sandy Community Action Program, which administers the Head Start program, could not come to terms on the location, the grant could be lost, Chaney said.

Chaney declined to offer an exact time frame for deciding on a location because an official grant notification letter had not been received. Chaney said Tuesday that she expects the issue to be resolved "in the very near future."

The board is expected to discuss alternate sites for the center at the December board meeting.

Jenny Wiley Theatre recognized for advertising excellence

At the October 25th Kentucky Tourism Council Fall Conference on Tourism, Jenny Wiley Theatre won first place in two advertising divisions, including Best of Show for their 1994 summer season brochure.

Winning the Best of Show award brings recognition to Jenny Wiley Theatre's promotional campaign literature as the best of the best among all tourism-oriented advertising, a fact that is indicative of all operations undertaken by the theatre.

"Doing a first class brochure reflects what the tourist gets at Jenny Wiley Theatre," commented Jenny

Wiley Theatre executive producer Tedi Vaughan. "It really reflects the first class productions that are available here, something that we feel we proved this summer."

Jenny Wiley Theatre's award-winning product marks the first time that an entry from an attraction east of Lexington had won the overall Best in Show honors.

"This projects a positive image toward the rest of the state for the theatre and for this area," Vaughan stated.

Garbage

Attorney in January.

Floyd County Attorney Jim Hammond explained to Henke and the board that Rumpke must first submit the delinquent accounts to the waste board. After that, the board members would turn those accounts over to the county.

"There's nothing in the ordinance to allow Rumpke to use the court system to collect garbage bills," Hammond said. "It's a court of last resort."

Rumpke employee David Cooley said the company would exhaust "every means of collection" before turning the accounts over to the board.

Henke also explained that after the ordinance was passed mandating garbage collection, people were beginning to pay their garbage bills. He reported that in the last three days, about 300 people had paid the $60 they owed Rumpke.

Hammond questioned the board members about how they will handle the accounts of individuals who haven't been billed in years past, yet who have had their garbage picked up.

Patton asked for an amnesty program for individuals who were not billed.

"We don't think you're a communist because you're not on the bill," Patton said.

Board members did not agree to an amnesty program, and Hammond advised them to tell people who are not on the Floyd County Solid Waste's billing lists to come in and talk to Vance about working out a mutual agreement on the issue.

"The bottom line is we want to be fair," Patton said. "And let people pay their fair share."

Also at the meeting, board members expressed criticism of the media's coverage of the solid waste ordinance mandating county residents to participate in the garbage collection.

bank from the Head Start program. "I got word to everyone..." she said, "and the departments got together to adopt the children."

Boggs wasn't content to stop there. "We called other banks and challenged them to adopt as many as we did," Boggs said. "This is the first time I've been involved. We just wanted to see all the children adopted. If more people knew (the need), they would participate."

Wise said that the bank became involved in the campaign because "we wanted to be a part of the true meaning of Christmas, to help those who can't help themselves. It's an investment in our future — children are our future."

Businesses or individuals who would like to sponsor a child can call the Floyd County Head Start office at 886-1986. Sponsors will receive an Adopt-A-Child card that will list a child's first name, his or her clothing sizes and a wish list. Sponsors may purchase whatever items on the list they can afford.

December 9 is the deadline for having the wrapped presents in the Head Start office or at Head Start centers. "Call one of the family service workers, and we'll go pick it up," Newsome said.

"We're not trying to put anybody in jail," Patton said. "What I saw in the media, evidently we are not communicating to the citizens of Floyd County."

Mike Vance said he was not bothered by the things reported but by some of the letters to the editor in the newspaper from Floyd County citizens.

Patton said he wasn't referring to the letters but was more concerned about the "so-called professional people, who are totally ignorant about what goes on here."

"They don't attend meetings. They don't know what goes on here," he said.

"They're getting so-called air-time. That's okay. This is America. We're citizens, unpaid. We're here because we want to help. I want to do what's right for Floyd County or pack up and go home," he said.

"I felt like a fool. If these people were right, then what was I doing here?" he asked.

Patton briefly mentioned the problems left behind by the old solid waste board and how the new board was working to resolve those problems. Patton said when he agreed to sit on the board that he listened to the radio and heard citizens complaining about the trash situation in Martin.

"Garbage was running over the streets," he said. "I'm proud of what we've accomplished. We've cleaned the landfill, taken care of fines. We need to tell the people: 'we're you. We're on the same team.'"

Several board members mentioned the positive comments they had received from Floyd County citizens about the ordinance. They also encouraged citizens to attend the meetings and to voice their concerns to the board. (No Floyd County citizens other than the board and Rumpke employees were present during the meeting.)

"The vast majority of the people who have come up to me say they hope you make everyone pay their bills. They think it's the best thing you've done," Hammond said.

"We had to do it. We would have drowned in our own trash and also would have been financially bankrupt as a local government," he said.

In other business at the meeting, the board

- heard complaints from Henke that only three landlords had reported names and address of their renters;
- named Mike Vanderpool as board chairman;

- changed their meeting date and time to the fourth Monday of each month at 6 p.m.;

- canceled December's meeting and set the next meeting for January 23 at 6 p.m.;

- asked solid waste director Mike Vance to come up with a program that will allow the county's collection to have a clean slate;

- authorized Vance to have the office phone system simplified;

- agreed to allow a secretary from the Floyd County Judge-Executive's office work in the solid waste office on a part-time or full-time basis at the county's cost;

Board members attending the meeting were David Layne, Mike Vanderpool, and Darrell Patton. Also attending the meeting were Mike Vance and Floyd County Attorney Jim Hammond. Bob Meyer, who has been named to serve on the board but who has yet to be sworn in, was present at the meeting.

Santa needs you!

by Scott Perry

We have a story in this edition which tugs at the old heart-strings.

It seems that local Head Start organizations are having a tougher time than usual drumming up support for their annual Adopt-A-Child for Christmas efforts.

If you're not familiar with the program, let us fill you in.

The Adopt-A-Child project aims at bringing Christmas to a bunch of little folks who may not have one otherwise.

Businesses or individuals can sponsor a child or a group of children by contacting their nearest Head Start office. They'll send you all the info you need to buy gifts for your "adopted" youngster.

It doesn't cost a lot of money, but it's a sure-fire, guaranteed way to bring a smile to a little face when Santa himself shows up with the presents.

If there is a more worthy cause or a better way to get into the Christmas spirit, we can't think of it. Can you?

Help Santa load his sleigh.

Call the Head Start folks today.

STUDENTS AND CONCERNED PARENTS ON SCIENCE EDUCATION

by John G. Shiber
PCC Professor

I recently surveyed 444 PCC students regarding their opinions and ideas about science education at the elementary and high school levels of instruction. Thirty-six percent of the students are parents as well as students.

The results showed that most students were in agreement with science education reformists on several important issues: that science education at these levels has been and continues to be inadequate; that science education ought to start in the primary grades; and that manipulation, data collecting, organization & interpretation, along with qualified adult involvement, is best for children in getting a good education in science. Further, the students said they preferred hands-on learning in science above most other approaches. They, especially the women, agreed that a positive family atmosphere with parental involvement are important for children to do well. They also said that a child does not have to be exceptional to do well in science, and everything in one's environment can be a subject for scientific investigation, thus promoting a child's resourcefulness and critical thinking.

There were many who said that they had never thought about the issues brought up in the questionnaire. Also, most said that science must be "fun" to be interesting, and that science does not take much time. On the contrary, science takes a lot of time, and it is the hard work, concentration, and discipline one applies that makes it interesting. These skills can be acquired through qualified teacher and parent training. In short, science can be fun, but it doesn't have to be interesting. The students' answers to these two questions indicate that they themselves are not quite sure what science is all about, and should consider learning more about it, especially if they expect to go into educational fields.

Questionnaires and surveys such as this can be very helpful in gaining insight into the educational needs of our youth. Educators who are involved in reform should know what students and their concerned parents believe to be helpful in improving their science (and other) education. Not only should their opinions and ideas be considered, but also their personal habits as they relate to education.

By example, a recent survey I conducted of about 3,000 area students and adults indicates that their personal habits, especially with respect to sleeping, need to be addressed by educators if reform programs are going to be successful in our schools. Performance in school, after all, is very much related to how well-rested and well-fed a child is on arriving at school in the morning. All the curriculum reform in the world is not going to improve the learning of a child who is chronically over-tired, sleepy, and/or poorly-fed (from K-12).

Hence, education reform entails more than just curricula changes. It requires the improvement of teaching, learning conditions, and testing & evaluation procedures, after the students' personal habits/needs are accounted for. The opinions and ideas of concerned parents and their children can also facilitate this improvement. We must tap this valuable source of information. Otherwise, no educational reform program will be completely successful or any longer-lasting than those ephemeral innovations that come and go, as dress fashions do.

N.B. This article is excerpted from a paper entitled "Success in science education: public views and ideas" which was presented at the Kentucky Science Teachers Association (KSTA) Annual Meeting, September 29th - October 1, 1994. Copies of the paper are on the "Reserve Shelf" at PCC's Magoffin Learning Center Library for anyone wishing to read it.

Fire department lauds HRMA staff response

Editor's Note: This letter was sent to HRMC by the Prestonsburg Fire Department and is printed by request.

Dear Mr. Traum:

On November 11, 1994, the Prestonsburg Fire Department responded to our worst nightmare, a structure fire on the third floor of your hospital. After arriving on the scene we found the fire had been extinguished and the patients had been evacuated to other floors.

Because of the quick response of your staff and management this potentially life threatening incident was avoided.

Hats off to the staff and management of Highlands Regional Medical Center for a job well done.

Michael K. Wells
Asst. fire chief

Woodworking class part of South Floyd curriculum

by Earl Spencer

For five periods a day, Dan Collins, a social studies teacher at South Floyd High School, teaches his students about the history and accomplishments of such civilizations as the Sumerians, the Romans, and the Greeks.

Through writings, class presentations, and readings, he hopes to show the connection between those civilizations and our own. Then for one period each day, Collins takes on a different task: teaching a class of seven boys the art of woodworking.

I had an opportunity to interview Collins about this class. He said, "This class of students works hard and class is interesting and enjoyable." He believes the hands-on experience with a variety of tools will help the students later on in life. He went on to say, "Individuals are given the opportunity to improve their self-esteem through hands-on experiences in which they design and construct their assigned woodworking projects. Each student is taught wood working concepts which will be used at home and real-life situations."

The class is meant to be enjoyable, but it does have requirements. Student must do a project(s), know how to use each tool and piece of equipment, and learn how to read and use a ruler. Students must also learn how to measure lumber in board feet.

Collins said he likes the block scheduling (a two-hour frame of time) on the days it includes woodworking class, because it gives the students more time to work on their projects. So far it has been no problem coming up with enough work for the students to complete in the two-hour block.

The class consists of the following students: Earl Spencer, Adam Wright, Doug Jones, John Paul Sexton, Ricky McGuire, Jason Johnson, and Chad McIntyre.

I like the class because I can build the things that I need at home and at same time learn skills that will help me later in life. It is one of my favorite classes. I have learned several skills this year.

Band on parade

McDowell Elementary Band has had an exciting month. Band members in their very first parade at the Jenny Wiley Festival received a third-place trophy and a cash award. Johnnie Mosley and Avelene Gayheart donated their time and materials to make the band a banner. The banner was used in the Jenny Wiley Festival Parade and at the school for open house. The McDowell band also played for Governor Brereton Jones on Friday, October 28, at the Minnie Park. Governor Jones brought a check in the amount of $230,000 to build a Head Start facility. The tentative schedule of performance for home basketball games is December 13, Melvin; December 20, Allen and January 6, Betsy Layne.

Mark McClintock, ventriloquist, comes to Betsy Layne school

Mark McClintock and his puppet, Sidney, came to Betsy Layne Elementary to entertain the students and faculty. His program was to teach elementary students to say, "O.K.—No Drugs!" and to make wise "choices."

McClintock has been putting words in mouths and laughter in hearts for more than 20 years. He has performed for conventions, conferences, corporate banquets, churches, schools, colleges, military bases, retirement homes, hospitals, Scout troops, youth and senior adult rallies, summer camps, and many other gatherings around the nation. He has appeared on television and radio in various cities. In 1992, he won the first prize for his performance at the International Ventriloquists' Convention.

He received the Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Texas at Austin, earning his Master of Divinity in Christian Education at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville.

The ventriloquist stayed at the school after his performance to talk with the students.

The program was arranged by Teresa C. Frazier, guidance counselor, and was paid for by the school and the Family Resource Center.

McDowell Academic Team

McDowell Academic Team begins new season with two victories

The McDowell Academic Team began a new season with two victories against Melvin and Adams.

The first meet was held on October 20, at Duff Elementary. The team fought a strong Melvin team to a 20-17 victory. Their next opponent was one of the toughest teams in the Jenny Wiley Academic Association, but the team kept pace with Adams Middle School to a 16-16 tie. The victory came in overtime with a 5-2 score.

The next meet was on October 22, at Allen Elementary when the team was almost defeated by an incredibly strong Allen team. The score was 13-13 which took the competition into overtime where they won 5-1.

McDowell also played a tough game against Maytown and won a 12-9 victory. Brandon Gearheart also received a first-place score on the Social Studies written assessment test.

The following people attended a certification meeting held at Duff on October 10: Shearry Ord, Don Sparkman, Liz Sparkman and Judy Brown. Don Sparkman was scorekeeper; Janie Tackett was timekeeper; Judy Brown was the spotter and Liz Sparkman kept stats for the team.

Chapter 1 Newsletter

by Reba Sue Hammond Hamilton

Fall is here and school has started again, and I'm very excited about this new school year and the Chapter 1 program here at B.L.H.S. Myra Barnett, who did a great job the past two years, turned it over to me and I'm looking forward to working full-time with the students this year.

We have gotten off to a wonderful start already this year. We have been studying about Jack London, that famous Wildlife author. We have done White Fang and The Call of the Wild. The students did an excellent job and did great on the test of these two stories.

We have begun to work on short stories, also, and they really enjoyed Cat-about-Town and The Monkey's Paw. They have also been working on SRA's in Sports, Entertainers, and Folk Tales. They have done great on their "Open-End Questions" and their answers.

They are just finishing their book reports on a book that each has chosen to read "just for enjoyment." I'm looking forward to reading their reports. As always, they do very interesting and good work for me. It is my pleasure to read about what they have learned from their books.

Reba Sue Hammond Hamilton

We are looking forward to getting new computer lab equipment and programs this year. Susan Compton has ordered our computer lab equipment for us and I have ordered our new programs.

On Monday, November 7, Betsy Layne High School held an open house. Many parents of my Chapter 1 students attended this event.

During that nine-week grading period, About one-third of my students had perfect attendance.

Just like it says, this is a newsletter, and I've given you just some of our news. I've got to run (and I mean run) because I've got lots more news to do and make with my students. Making news with my students, even as I write this,

Little wins photogenic award

Heather Louise Little, 13, was presented the Junior Miss Photogenic Award at the Red, White, and Blue Pageant that was held at the McDowell School Gymnasium on October 6. She was the representative from Osborne Elementary where she is an eighth grade student in Sheila Vance's classroom. Her escort was Steven Hamilton, the son of Leroy and Ruth Ann Hamilton, of McDowell. Also, she rode in the parade at Martin on October 15.

She is the daughter of Kenny and Kimberly Howell Little of Wheelwright. She is the granddaughter of the late Johnny Howell and Mary Mosley, and T.J. and Billie Little.

struction. The number of months projected for the project cannot be altered unless there is a change in the scope of the project and the board, the architect and CM agree to a revision in the construction schedule.

Also, the firm hired must provide a 100 percent performance and payment bond prior to execution of the contract and must provide professional liability insurance.

A contract between the board and a CM firm must be approved by the Department of Education.

Last year, board members decided that members of the district's Local Planning Committee would evaluate architects and construction management firms seeking contracts for school construction projects and the LPC would make recommendations to the board.

Board members did not discuss the LPC's role or if they would seek the committee's services on the Martin/Maytown project.

In other action Monday, it was announced that the district's Director of Transportation, Earl D. Oulsey, would retire at the end of the school year.

Superintendent Steve Towler asked for authority to advertise the position so that Oulsey's replacement could be hired by January in order to be trained by the beginning of the 1995-96 school year.

The board approved Towler's request.

In other action Monday:

The board received the results of the 1993-94 audit of the district's finances. Auditor Don Wallen reported that the district ended the year just over $1 million in the black, but that the system needed to have at least $2 million in a contingency fund. Wallen added that although there were several problems with school activity accounts, the accounting process for schools had improved dramatically over last year.

The board approved creating a finance clerk position at $8.50 per hour.

The board received a report on attendance which indicated the district lost about 120 students since the start of the school year.

Phil Paige reported that students had improved greatly in the areas of reading and writing in recent test results. Paige explained that the system administrators state tests to all students in order to assess the district's progress.

Board member Eddie Patton proposed that the board ban all Sunday activities in school owned facilities. Patton said the facilities should be closed so that families could spend more time together. The issue was not approved. Board members Eersal Wilcox and Phylliss Honshell voted against the proposal and board members Brackett and Brent Clark passed. Clark later changed his "pass" and abstained from voting.

Local VFW member appointed to national committee

Eddie Akers, a member of VFW Post 5839, in Prestonsburg has been appointed to serve as a member of the organization's National Voice of Democracy Committee, by the Commander-In-Chief of the veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, Allen F. Kent. Akers is a resident of Harold.

In announcing the appointment, Commander-In-Chief Kent stated that Comrade Akers' record of service and achievement to both the nation and the VFW were the key considerations in making the selection.

Lexington Clinic announces student scholarship program

Lexington Clinic is announcing its Health Scholars Program for the 1995-96 academic year. This is the third year the medical group in Lexington has offered scholarships to students pursuing healthcare careers. In order to be eligible for a scholarship, students must be residents of Central or Eastern Kentucky, be enrolled in a healthcare career training program or course of study in an accredited college or university and plan to work in Central or Eastern Kentucky after completion of the program. Recipient selection is based upon the student's professional and academic potential, financial need and commitment to the chosen field.

In 1995, Lexington Clinic will celebrate 75 years serving the healthcare needs of Kentuckians. With over 100 board certified physicians providing a wide spectrum of services, Lexington Clinic continues to enhance medical services throughout the region. The goal of the Health Scholars Program is to encourage and assist students of Central and Eastern Kentucky to pursue healthcare careers and to provide their services in or near their home communities.

For complete information about the Health Scholars Program, send a written request for an application packet to: Scholarship Committee, Lexington Clinic, 1221 South Broadway, Lexington, KY 40504. The request should include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. The application deadline is March 15, 1995.

Visitor Alert

Thousands of visitors are in the Prestonsburg community and Floyd County every day, estimates Fred James, Prestonsburg tourism director.

He classifies these visitors as tourists, business-related and local folks. Tourists occupy motels and resort parks in the area. These are people on vacation or traveling through the area on their way to another vacation spot.

Another group is identified as visitors who are staying in the area because of business. James said it may be someone who must work in several counties throughout the week and wants a central location as his base.

A group of visitors which he categorizes as local folks could live within 100 miles or could be former residents who are visiting relatives. This group includes individuals and families who come into the county or Prestonsburg for ballgames, concerts or other events.

James is initiating a tourism program that will aid tourists in locating activities in the county in upcoming months.

He calls it VIP (Visitors in Prestonsburg) and hands out visitor alert information to restaurants, motels and other businesses. If businesses will supply the racks, James will keep the racks, or counter space, filled with promotional brochures noting upcoming events so tourists will return to the county.

He also plans to place announcements in the media. In the Floyd County Times, a column will be published once each month listing activities, as space permits, within a 30-day period.

Activities in December include a parade in downtown Prestonsburg at 4 p.m. on December 1 to kickoff the Christmas season; a concert by the Kentucky Opry at 7 p.m. in the Prestonsburg Fieldhouse; and Christmas in the Park on December 15 at Archer Park from 6-8 p.m.

James is also putting together welcome packages for tourists. He has asked area businesses to contribute souvenirs such as magnets or pencils. Businesses can also have discount coupons in the welcome bags.

Another aspect of the VIP program is education. James is encouraging local businesses to be courteous to visitors. Kentuckians are known for their hospitality, James said, and local businesses should encourage their employees to be hospitable to visitors. He has a hospitality manual at the tourism office which is available to any business in the area. He will also come into businesses and talk with employees.

Local doctor retains AAFP membership

Dr. Rondal Earl Goble of Lexington, formerly of Prestonsburg, has completed continuing medical education requirements to retain Active membership in the American Academy of Family Physicians (AAFP), the national association of family doctors.

AAFP members are required to complete a minimum of 150 hours of accredited continuing medical study every three years. The AAFP, which has more than 75,000 members, is one of the largest medical specialty organizations in the country. It was the first national medical group to require members to keep up with medical advancements through regular continuing medical education.

Dr. Goble has been an active AAFP member since 1990. As a family physician, Dr. Goble is qualified to work in all major areas of health care and trained to treat patients of all ages for the vast majority of health problems.

The AAFP, which is headquartered in Kansas City, Missouri, provides educational, legal, insurance and lobbying services to its members and publishes American Family Physician, a 150,000-circulation clinical journal.

Dr. Goble is married to the former Laura Katherine Hereford of Prestonsburg, and now practices at Tates Creek Family Practice.

Lock in a great interest rate on a CD. Then raise it.

24-Month Certificate of Deposit	36-Month Certificate of Deposit
6.59% Annual Percentage Yield (APY)	6.86% Annual Percentage Yield (APY)
6.38% Interest Rate	6.64% Interest Rate

It works like this. You invest in one of our certificates of deposit. If the market interest rate goes up, you have one chance to increase the interest rate of your CD along with it. You can even add more money into your CD at the same time to take advantage of the higher interest rate. And best of all, your maturity date doesn't change. How's that for a generous offer?

PCC faculty and staff donate to fund-raising campaign

Prestonsburg Community College faculty and staff members showed their support for quality higher education in Eastern Kentucky by donating $24,491 to help finance PCC's expansion and development plans. Ninety percent of PCC's full-time faculty and staff participated in the internal fund-drive.

"We are extremely thankful for the generous donations our faculty and staff made to this worthwhile campaign," said Dr. Deborah L. Floyd, president of Prestonsburg Community College. "We feel the ninety percent participation rate indicates the faculty's and staff's strong faith in our improvement efforts and we appreciate the trust they have placed in us."

The fund-raising efforts were the first step in a well-planned campaign scheduled to expand throughout the community. The campaign, entitled "Partners In Progress," has targeted four projects identified by community leaders and the college as necessary to address future workforce training needs and overall health conditions in the region.

These projects include the construction of two buildings, the Regional Center for Health Education and Wellness at the Prestonsburg Campus and the Regional Classroom and Technology Center at the Pike County Campus; installation of Technology, Telecommunications and Equipment; and creation of College Endowments.

The Regional Center for Health Education and Wellness will serve as a national model for rural health, wellness, and prevention. The center will be designed to house health and allied health education programs, rural health programs, wellness center and programs, a health clinic, instructional classrooms and laboratories, and a child development center.

The Regional Classroom and Technology Center will be located on PCC's Pike County Campus to better serve the enormous demand in that area for community college education and job training. PCC will concentrate on business, computer and technological occupations in this facility.

The installation of Technology,

Telecommunications and Equipment will enable Prestonsburg Community College to link Appalachia to global information. This initiative will open new avenues of information and learning to the most economically disadvantaged and geographically isolated areas of Kentucky by providing distance learning and job training programs, interactive teleconferencing with persons from around the world, and telemedicine capabilities for use in diagnosis, prevention, instruction and research.

The PCC College Endowments will provide increased need-based and academic scholarships and workshops, program enhancement and development, and instructional and student support.

Prestonsburg Community College developed the "Partners In Progress" Campaign to counteract dramatic reductions in state funding which have made it increasingly difficult for the college to provide the necessary resources and innovative programs to our communities.

The internal fund-drive was chaired by Laura T. Weddle, a communications professor who has since retired. Vice-Chairs included Dr. George D. Torok, a former assistant professor of history at the Pike County Campus; Martha Perry, PCC Librarian III; Gia Hall, PCC Registrar; Kenneth Fuller, PCC chemistry professor; Clara Garrett, PCC nursing professor; and Dr. Tom Matijasic, PCC history professor.

Sara Hopson

'THE TRIP'
(Part 4)

Since it was our last night before heading home, we thought we'd sit around and reminisce instead of going out. We had already gone to a movie, shopped and taken in the sights. And we had eaten enough food that if we had been bears we could have hibernated the rest of the winter.

"Are the crabs still alive?" I asked Amanda.

"I'm taking good care of them," Amanda said, as she soaked one of the sponges in water and placed it in the cage. "I'm glad I was the one who wanted to get my grandchildren crabs."

"How are we going to get them home?" Mother asked.

"I'm going to carry them," I quickly replied.

"Sure," Melinda said as she rolled her eyes. "How are you going to carry two crabs, a jug of water, apples and a banana all the way back home?"

"I'll manage. You just drive. Which reminds me," I said spitefully, "I don't want to sit behind you on the way back. Your head's so big I missed most of the scenery on the way here."

"While we're all together, I'd like to ask a question," Melinda intoned thoughtfully. "Who, aside from a family member, influenced your life the most?"

"It can't be a relative, heh?" Mother asked.

"Who was the group that sang 'Joy to the World'?" Amanda asked. "Was it Three Dog Night?"

"I thought 'Joy to the World' was a Christmas hymn?" Mother said.

"What's that got to do with anything?" I asked.

"The group influenced my life because I loved that song."

"I love chicken and dumplings, too, but it didn't influence my life," I sputtered.

"Have you looked in a mirror lately?" Amanda asked. "I'd say chicken and dumplings and the rest of the major food groups have had a big impact on your life."

"Amanda, you haven't said a kind word to Sara the entire trip," Jenny stated.

"There's a lot of people who influenced my life," Mother said thoughtfully. "My Sunday school teacher, Doty Bailey. And several teachers."

"Well, for me it's a woman I worked with in Lexington. She was so interesting. She refused to have children because her husband lied to her and said he'd never been married. But not only had he been married several times, he'd sired children, and she refused to have a child that was going to have stepbrothers and sisters. She found out about his previous escapades during her third month of pregnancy. Soon after, she was hanging draperies, so she deliberately fell off a ladder and miscarried."

"Now there's a real role model for you," Melinda crowed.

"It taught me a lot!" I exclaimed. "I made up my mind then and there, pregnant or not, I'd never hang draperies."

"What about you, Jenny?"

"Snookie Meade. She was a wonderful dancer and she had a wealth of knowledge about dance. She taught me a lot."

"And, you, Melinda?"

"Rudelle Preston. She opened up my mind to things that made me realize that life was bigger than Paintsville. We talked about everything from the stars to hell. Not necessarily in that order."

"That's pretty mind expanding," I replied.

"Yah. But more than that, she shamed my ex-husband into getting me a washer and dryer. That influenced my life more than you know. Particularly when you're washing baby diapers."

"Give me another chance!"

THE TIMES' WEEKEND

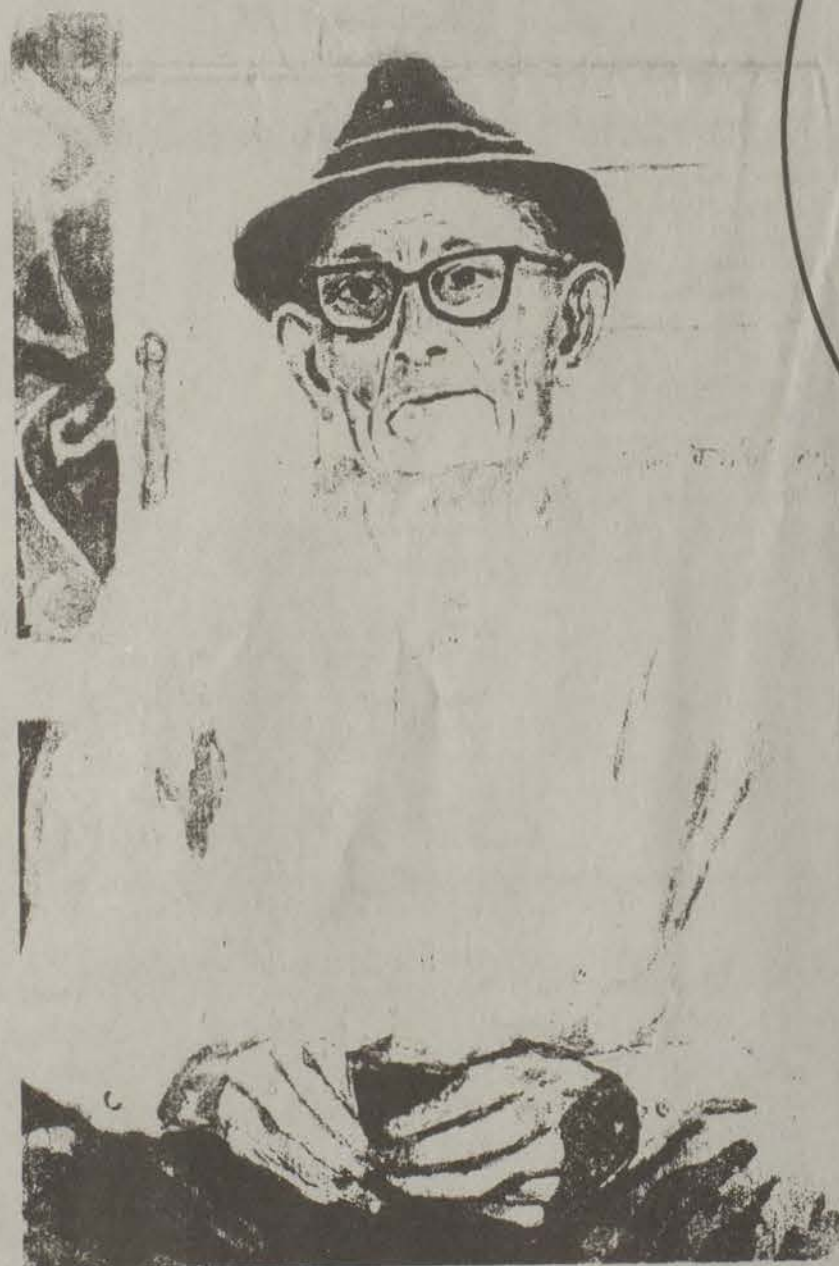

Whitaker's works on display at PCC

An exhibition of art work by local artist Thomas J. Whitaker will be on display at the Prestonsburg Community College art gallery now through December 1.

"I felt I was getting too close to the edge with self and art work last spring and early summer," Whitaker said. "To turn this around, I disciplined self with more conservative work. A series of quilt paintings evolved. The title for the exhibit, 'The Edge and the Middle,' was the perfect title for this exhibit."

Come see the "middle" but don't get too close to the "edge."

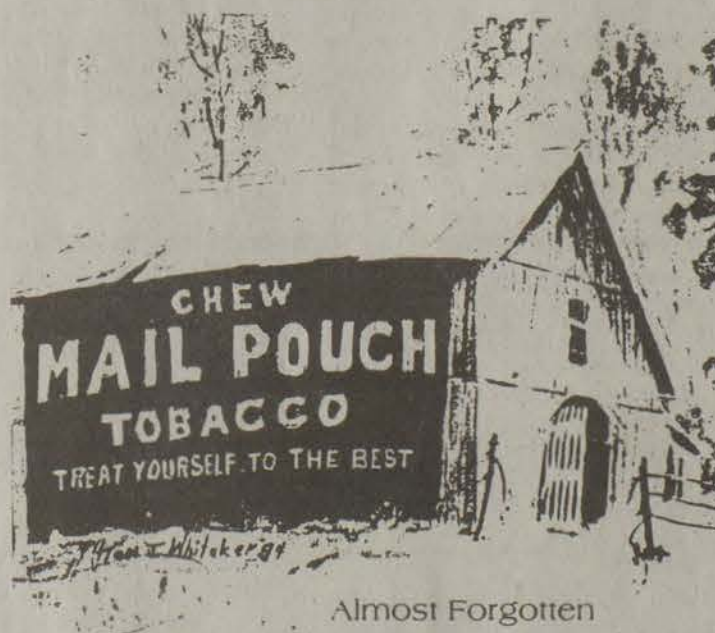

The art gallery is located in the Magoffin Learning Resource Center on the Prestonsburg Campus. Gallery hours are Monday through Thursday 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Friday 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Saturday 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; and Sunday 2 to 6 p.m.

THE LITIGIOUS SOCIETY

— According to Department of Justice figures, 30,000 inmate lawsuits were filed last year (added to heavy backlogs — more than 28,000 in New York alone) against prison officials for "civil rights" violations, the vast majority described by judges and court officials as frivolous.

Among the lawsuits were those by prisoners complaining: that the prison canteen supplied "creamy" peanut butter when a prisoner bought "crunchy"; that guards wouldn't refrigerate his ice cream snack so that he could eat it later ($1 million lawsuit); that his toilet seat was too cold; that, as an inmate-paralegal in the prison law library, he should make the same wage that lawyers make; that prisons should offer salad bars ($129 million); that a limit on the number of Kool-Aid refills is "cruel and unusual punishment"; and that the scrambled eggs were cooked too hard. In New York, 20 percent of the entire budget of the Attorney General's office is spent on prisoner lawsuits.

— Amil Dinsio, 58, filed a $15 million lawsuit in May against the United Carolina Bank in Charlotte, N.C., from his federal prison cell in Loretto, Pa., where he is serving four years for robbing the bank in 1992. Sentencing guidelines call for consideration of the amount of money involved in the robbery, and Dinsio accused the bank of fraudulently inflating the amount, resulting in his spending an extra 16 months in prison.

— Janet S. Robinson filed a lawsuit in Roanoke, Va., in April, asking $100,000 in damages for an ankle injury she suffered when hit by a truck. The truck was a remote controlled toy truck operated by another customer at the Kay-Bee Toys store at Valley View Mall. Robinson called her injury "serious" and the consequences of the accident "pain, humiliation, aggravation and disability."

— Former Durham, N.C., police officer Bernard Bagley filed a lawsuit in July against the police department, asking $3 million. Bagley is serving two life sentences for shooting his wife to death with his service revolver, and now says the department should not have issued him a gun, since he was suffering from anxiety attacks.

— In July, ex-student Jason Wilkins sued the University of Idaho for $940,000 to pay for injuries he suffered when he fell through a third-story dormitory window while mooning students. Wilkins had climbed onto a 3-foot-high heater to reach the window but claimed the university should have posted warnings.

— In August, comedian Jackie Mason told reporters he had filed a $25 million lawsuit against the five theatrical groups responsible for Broadway's Tony awards because they had failed to nominate him in any category. He claimed that the lack of recognition for his one-man show "Jackie Mason: Politically Incorrect," was "an abridgment of my rights as a human being."

— The Missouri Pacific Railroad announced in August that it had paid an undisclosed amount of money to the families of a Mexican couple to settle their wrongful-death lawsuit. The two undocumented immigrants were hit by a train and killed when they stopped on the tracks near McAllen, Texas, to rest. Law enforcement officials said such immigrants often rest on railroad tracks

'Nobody loves me, everybody hates me, I think I'll just get stoned.'

Don't know how that little ditty found its way out of our memory banks, but it's a pretty appropriate summation of our mood lately.

Bet we've all sung that sorrowful song at one time or another.

(Just for the sake of clarity and to keep the narco squads from bashing down our door, 'getting stoned' used to have a totally different meaning than what you would imagine today.)

Anyway, we've about come to the conclusion that hatred has been elevated to an art form in this country.

It's probably closer to being our national pastime than baseball ever was.

People just love to hate other people.

They hate people because of the color of their skin, the religion they prefer, or which side of the tracks they live on.

It's interesting, even kind of scary, how we form our opinions of others.

When was the last time you decided to hate somebody because of the way they looked, dressed or spoke?

Aw, come on. You know you've done it. Everybody has. See, it takes a lot less effort to pass critical judgment on someone for some silly reason than it takes to, say, actually get to know the person you despise.

Let us give you a personal example.

We got a letter a few days ago from a woman who spewed so much venom at us, we thought we might have to undergo snake bite treatment.

It was purely a personal attack, based on completely false information and rumors.

Still, the writer had taken the information she had received to be the unquestioned truth, never questioning the source or giving us any benefit of doubt.

And, though we've never met or spoken with this person, it's apparent we are now considered to be her mortal enemy, despite the fact we are completely innocent of the accusations she makes.

Well, nothing we can do about that.

Guess we'll just get stoned.

PEOPLE WITH TOO MUCH TIME ON THEIR HANDS

—In April, University of Toronto English professor Eleanor Cook was awarded grants totaling around $85,000 (U.S.) to spend the next 2 1/2 years studying "the structure and function" of the riddle. Said Cook, "I want to think about long-term patterns in riddles ... and the long-term decisions in our lives."

—During the third week in June, reporters in Huntington, Ind., and Providence, R.I., coincidentally published features about local collectors of outhouses. Huntington's Hy Goldenberg collects actual privies, and now has 12, but Virginia Williams collects only photographs of them, of which she now has about 100.

—Among current course selections at Oregon State University's Food Science and Technology department is a one-credit class, "The Maraschino Cherry." Among the lecturers were two retired professors who returned especially to talk on the history of the maraschino cherry. Said course professor Ron Wrolstad, "I think the students were just awed to have these professors there."

—The Los Angeles Times reported in July that engineer Walt Netschert has invented a smokers' hat with a facial apparatus that he says completely filters the noxious elements out of cigarette smoke before it is released into the air. A filtering locker, which is about 6 inches square by 3 inches high, cleanses the smoke and is strapped onto the smoker's forehead. A clear plastic shield drops down in front of his face to trap the smoke, which is then drawn up into the filter. Netschert, who has smoked for 40 years because cigarettes calm his nerves and who calls nonsmokers "FAFs" — "Fresh Air Freaks" — hopes to sell the hats for $79.95.

Amanda shouted, "I remember who had the greatest influence on me. Who was the woman that belly danced and won Miss America?"

We all groaned. Stay tuned next week when Melinda says, "There's a sign for a palmist. Which reminds me, I'd like to find a good medium." To which Jenny replies, "I'd just like to find a happy medium."

The Daredevils did something no other has been capable of doing thus far this season—hold Jarrod Johnson under 20 points.

Johnson finished the game with 18 points, but had to go to the free throw line to get them. Johnson converted eight of 19 attempts from the charity stripe.

Also scoring in double digits for McDowell was Darren Newsome with 15 points, Ryan Shannon added 11 with a three-point basket. John Hall had 10 points for the winners.

Duff pulled out to a 28-13 advantage, but Melvin cut the lead back to 10 twice, 28-18 and 32-22, before

Duff took a 35-22 lead to the locker room at the half.

Melvin was only able to get one field goal in the third quarter, a layup by Charlie Williams. Hunter scored 10 of his team's first 12 points to lead a 23-2 run and a 58-21 third-quarter lead.

Greathouse tosses in 27 as Auxier continues to roll

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

You will have to go back a long way to find the last time an Auxier Lady Hornet basketball team opened the season with a perfect 7-0 record.

The Lady Hornets kept their record unblemished after defeating a good Allen Lady Eagle team 72-44 Monday night.

Auxier continues to roll after winning the Right Beaver Classic last week at Maytown.

It is something new for this school to experience this much success in a full season, let alone early in the year.

Greathouse even improved on her free throw shooting by hitting five of six from the stripe.

Tonya Honeycutt added 12 points for Auxier. One of the big reasons for the turnaround of the Auxier program is the play that coaches Ashland Gearheart and Jerome Greathouse have been getting out of the middle, especially from Brandi Wells.

Wells tossed in 12 points, as did Candy Howard and Samantha Cross. They have given the Lady Hornets something they haven't had in seasons past and that is a strong inside game.

Howard scored six points, but was a big factor on the boards. Cross netted seven points. Fifth-grader Mandy Music—remember the name—added five points. Sarah Goble scored two and Chrissy Newsome netted one.

Coach Gearheart has had his team in full-court pressure all season. The quickness of the two guards—Greathouse and Honeycutt—has made things miserable for the opposition. Their speed results in many steals and easy baskets.

Allen felt the blunt of the pressure and they fell behind 23-2 in the first quarter. Honeycutt drilled a three-pointer for five points in the first and Greathouse had nine points. Wells hit four of six from the charity stripe, a remarkable improvement for the whole team.

Auxier led 45-15 at the half. Tiffany Warrix, another upcoming player, led Allen with 12 points. Valerie Stapleton added 11 for the Lady Eagles. Jessica Clark scored seven with Jennifer Baugus tossing in six.

Chrissy Nelson and Leslie Setser had two points each for Allen.

Allen made a game of it in the third period when they outscored Auxier 25-12 to pull to within 17 points. But the Lady Hornets withstood the rally and won easily.

Lady Devils thunder past Osborne, 32-14

Jo Jo Pack scored eight of her game-high 10 points in the first quarter to lead the McDowell Lady Devils to a 32-14 win over the Osborne Lady Eagles Tuesday night at Wheelwright.

Margaret Morgan led Osborne with six points. Olivia Stewart, Jaime Slone, Lindsey Hall and Tiffany Tackett each had two points.

Osborne struggled at the free throw line and hit only three of 17 attempts.

McDowell led 12-3 at the first stop behind Pack. The Lady Daredevils took an 18-4 halftime lead to the locker room. Osborne shot nine free throws in the second quarter and hit but one.

Martha Crawford scored eight for McDowell. Betch Tucker added six with Kava Strathman, Sonya Tackett and Monica Newsome scoring two each. Melissa Thacker added two points.

Lady Mustangs defeat Martin Lady Flashes

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Kristal Newsome, Sheena Akers and Candi Branham scored eight points each to lead the John M. Stumbo Lady Mustangs to a 34-26 win over the Martin Lady Flashes. The two teams met at Martin Monday night.

Both teams had trouble at the free throw line. The Lady Flashes made only four of 17 attempts. Stumbo went to the line for 31 shots but only made 12.

Shanna Howell led all scorers as she tossed in 12 to lead Martin. Jennifer Hopkins scored six points.

Stumbo doubled the score on Martin in the first quarter as they jumped out to a 14-7 first quarter lead. After that the two teams played dead even.

Akers scored all eight of her points in the first period. Amanda Hall scored six of her total seven in the initial period.

Hall had seven points for Stumbo in the game. Heather Hamilton added two points with Samantha Maynard scoring one.

Becky Bryant and Brandy Samons scored three apiece for Martin. Stephanie McKinney added two.

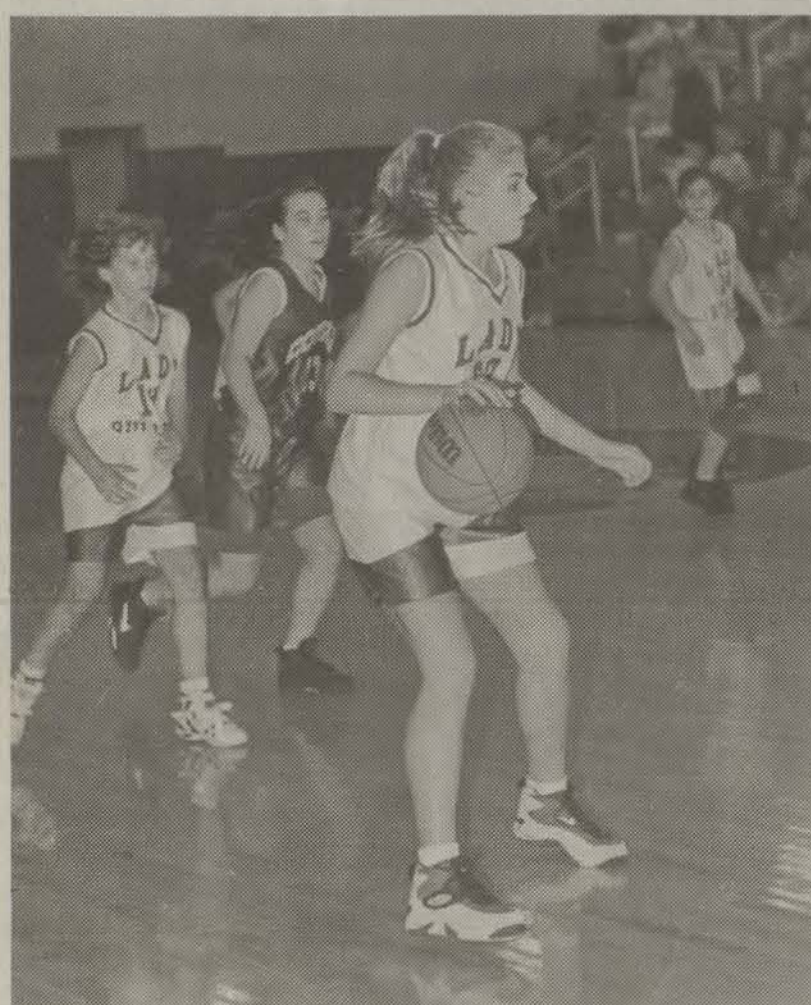

Eagles

Nathan Leslie finished with eight points for the Eagles. Mark Branham and Josh Justice had seven points each. Justice hit a three-pointer in the fourth quarter.

Off the bench, Steven Bobo netted six points. Robbie Holbrook, Jesse Isaac and Seth Crisp scored four each.

Matt Tackett and Brandon Branham scored three apiece. Gabriel Shepherd and Richard Neeley along with Kennis Burchett had two points.

One to watch!

Keep your eye on seventh grader Natlie Cooley of the Duff Lady Bulldogs. Cooley is just one of the many fine young basketball players coming up to the high school ranks. Cooley scored 21 points against Melvin to lead her team to a 27-22 win. (photo by Ed Taylor)
