Fiscal Court ignores objections, gives first reading to ordinance

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Unless a judicial decision intervenes, Floyd Countians are one step closer to having an E-911 emergency service after five years of relative inactivity.

In a special meeting Wednesday, the fiscal court held first reading of an ordinance which establishes the 911 service and authorizes an 89-cent per month surcharge for telephone subscribers. Language in the ordinance calls for the court's action to be retroactive to February 1990, when the court initially voted to levy the special tax for the service.

At the April 21 court meeting, Magistrate Jackie Edford Owens and County Attorney Jim Hammond objected to language in the ordinance dealing with the structure of a 911 board and the authority of the court to implement the system.

On Wednesday, Judge-Executive Bob Meyer read the proposed ordinance, which included adding four more members to the 911 board and spelling out that the court would be the deciding body on all decisions for the system.

Hammond continued his objection to the court's action, saying he felt the court could not make the document retroactive to 1990.

Earlier this month, Hammond filed suit against the court seeking a court ruling on whether the court could adopt an ordinance and make it retroactive.

That case is pending in Floyd Circuit Court.

The ordinance calls for an 11-member board of directors for the 911 system, which adds the mayors of each city within the county and/or their designee.

Also in the ordinance is a provision which allows for a cut in the monthly surcharge to telephone customers if the county's "annual audit illustrates that cumulative revenues . . . exceed anticipated system costs for the next successive two-year period, including an additional 25 percent of the average annual cost set aside as an emergency reserve. . ."

If an audit shows there are excess revenues, those fees will be credited to the monthly subscriber charges, at the fiscal court's discretion, but at no time will the month-

Audit says policemen owed nearly $20,000

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

An audit by agents with the state's labor cabinet contends that almost $20,000 is owed to Martin City policemen for overtime pay accumulated over the past five years.

At Wednesday's city council meeting, clerk Johnnie B. Stephens explained the result of the special audit to council and recommended that all overtime worked by officers be preapproved to prevent future problems.

Mayor Raymond Griffith suggested that council postpone payment to the officers until they receive an accounting of the money owed from labor officials "on a piece of state paper."

Councilman Alan Whicker said that a letter from the labor cabinet was self-explanatory and he felt that council had received official notification and suggested the debt be paid.

On July 5 last year, Thacker was driving a vehicle northbound on U.S. 23 near Prestonsburg when it crossed into the southbound lane and struck four vehicles.

Wanton endangerment and assault charges were filed by Prestonsburg policeman Mack Stewart for injuries suffered by Marshall L. Edwards, 44, of

The board of education met in special session April 21 to award a bid for site preparation on the project, which went to Ooten Coal Company of Pikeville.

Superintendent Steve Towler said at that meeting that the board should meet Saturday to award construction bids on the school project.

The board will meet at Martin Elementary following the ceremony at the site, at Stephens Branch near Martin. The agenda for Saturday's meeting has not been released.

Also at the April 21 meeting, the board decided to float a $500,000 bond issue to pay for repairs to the heating and cooling system at Allen Central High School.

Truck driver reportedly lost control before fatal collision

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Rescuers say that a child safety seat saved the life of a four-year-old girl who was involved in a car accident Tuesday on U.S. 23 near Prestonsburg that killed her grandfather and seriously injured her grandmother.

Samantha Hamilton was not injured Tuesday when the driver of a coal truck lost control of his vehicle and crashed into a car driven by 60-year-old Wilburn Hamilton Jr. of Lorain, Ohio.

Hamilton was pronounced dead at the scene by deputy coroner Glenn Frazier, and his wife, Shelby Hamilton, was taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center and later flown by helicopter to Cabell-Huntington Hospital in West Virginia. Shelby Hamilton is listed in fair condition.

The truck driver, Larry Castle, was treated and released from Highlands Regional.

Police say that Castle lost control of the loaded coal truck he was driving south on U.S. 23 near the mouth of Town Branch and the truck turned on its side and slid into the northbound lane. The truck first hit a vehicle driven by 17-year-old Benjamin Crum of Martin and then hit Hamilton's vehicle.

Crum and his passenger, Vanessa Shepherd, 15, of Hueysville, were treated and released from Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Guest speaker

Marie Parsons of Prestonsburg Community College was the guest speaker at the weekly meeting of the Prestonsburg Rotary Club on Thursday, April 20, at Holiday Inn. ly surcharge drop below 35 cents per customer.

Owens seemed satisfied with the revisions to the ordinance and suggested that it be added that no board members be compensated for their service.

Membership on the board is voluntary, under the ordinance, and terms of service, other than elected officials, are for four years.

Hammond told magistrates that his position remained the same on the issue and commented that he had not "authored" the document.

Meyer told the court that he had been advised, not by Hammond, to proceed with adopting the ordinance and took exception with a comment by Hammond that the county attorney had no input concerning the content of the ordinance.

"I did get a copy over to you Monday," Meyer told Hammond. "I left a message Monday evening to call on Tuesday to discuss it, but that did not happen. It was a short time frame, but there was an opportunity to discuss the ordinance." Hammond said that he was in Fayette County on Tuesday and did not have time to discuss the document with the judge-executive.

Meyer said that a special meeting of the court may be called soon to hold second reading on the ordinance because the ordinance calls for the 911 board of directors to develop a plan by June 16 for the implementation of the system.

Recktenwald, Tucker appointed to environmental committee

Ray Tucker of Kentuckians for the Commonwealth and Roger Recktenwald, executive director of the Big Sandy Area Development District, both of Prestonsburg, have been appointed by Gov. Brereton Jones as a members of committees of Kentucky's Comparative Risk Project. Tucker has been named to the Steering Committee and Recktenwald to the Public Advisory Committee. Kentuckians for the Commonwealth is also represented on the Public Advisory Committee.

Three committees appointed to work on the project have been attempting to identify environmental issues in the state and to research data on them.

The project's Steering Committee provides overall guidance for the project and aids in setting goals and defining objectives. It also defines overall ground rules for the project and will participate in a final ranking of issues.

The Public Advisory Committee serves as the primary liaison between government participants, the general public, and major interest groups. This committee assists the Steering Committee in communication between the committees and the public about risks and public values.

Also injured in the crash were Paul B. Collins, a passenger in Thacker's vehicle, Keith Caudill, 37, of Stambaugh and Mildred McGuire, 64, a passenger in Stumbo's vehicle.

Edwards, Thacker and Collins had to be extricated from their vehicles by the Prestonsburg Fire Department using the Jaws of Life.

Thacker was also taken to Highlands Regional Medical Center and treated and released.

Bond was set at $40,000 or 10 percent cash and a preliminary hearing has been set for Wednesday, May 3 at 2:30 p.m. in Floyd District Court.

police department before, suggested that the funds be paid from the police department budget and, when that budget is depleted, officers be laid off until the new fiscal year.

"We'll ask the county and state police to help us out," Akers said.

Councilman Denzil "Hoss" Halbert suggested that council dip into a certificate of deposit in order to avoid laying off the police force.

Akers disagreed, saying, "It ain't right."

Policeman Jim Slone commented that council had used money in the bank for financial assistance for the water and sewer departments.

"You fill your own time sheets out and it's not right," Akers told Slone. "If we have to pay it, we'll pay it, but it will be at your expense, not ours."

"The expense is not theirs, it's to the people of Martin," Halbert responded. "If the city was destitute it would be another question. There's $100,000 in general fund."

"Robbery is robbery, even if it is the police department," Akers said.

Officer Slone responded that the mayor and city clerk had instructed the officers on how to fill out their time sheets and that's how they had done it for the past five years.

The clerk took exception with Slone's remarks.

Council decided to seek advice from the city attorney, and deferred the issue until the May 10 meeting.

Also Wednesday, a Martin resident challenged council to provide him with free sewer service because a private school was not being billed for the service.

Joe Simpson told council that he felt it was not right that Mountain Christian Academy was not paying for sewer service while Martin residents were expected to do so.

"I don't know why in the world you don't make that bunch at the school pay," Simpson said. "You charge us but let them go free. If we pay they should pay. If you don't give me mine free, I'll file a discrimination charge. I'd say a good lawyer can damn sure take care of it."

Council declined to act on Simpson's request and the city clerk commented that the utility department should begin billing the school next month.

In other business Wednesday: • Red White & Blue committee chairman Walter Clyde Dings reported that the group hopes to be self-sufficient financially and that employees of East Kentucky Broadcasting are planning to organize a concert to boost the October event;

• council agreed to hire Reba Harvey as a part-time utility clerk;

• council declined to pay an invoice from Acme Supply for $161 for 72 light bulbs; and

• council approved donating $150 to the city's Ladies Flower Committee to purchase flowers and additional flower barrels for downtown.

Attorneys go to school on Law Day

Monday, May 1, is Law Day and members of the Floyd County Bar Association will be taking law into area schools instead of the courtrooms.

The attorneys will make presentations in various county schools to educate students about how the justice system works.

Law Day was conceived in 1957 by Charles S. Rhyne, a Washington, D.C. lawyer who was then president of the American Bar Association, a national voluntary organization of the legal profession.

President Dwight D. Eisenhower established Law Day by the presidential proclamation in 1958. In 1961, May 1 was set aside by joint resolution of Congress as a "special day of celebration by the American people in appreciation of their liberties and...for rededication to the ideals of equality and justice under law."

Gerald DeRossett is the president of the local bar association.

Floyd students rocket into future at annual technology showcase

by Geoff Belcher
Floyd County Schools

Floyd County students proved they were ready for the next century and beyond at the Third Annual Floyd County Schools Student Technology Showcase, Monday, at the Wilkinson/Stumbo Convention Center.

Designed and orchestrated by Floyd County Schools Technology Director Harold Burchell, the Student Technology Showcase offered parents, community leaders and approximately thirty-five Kentucky Department of Education officials a hands-on demonstration of the advanced technological resources

Lexington in February.

Among the exhibits designed and demonstrated by the students themselves were a life-size model of a NASA anti-gravity chamber; sophisticated movie-making and special effects computer programs; desk-top publishing displays such as computer-generated posters, bumper stickers and newspapers; computer-generated and electronic musical instruments; and award-winning computer art displays such as those by Prestonsburg Elementary 4th-graders Lowell Brock and Adam Dixon, who placed first and second, respectively, in the elementary art division at the Kentucky Technology Showcase in Kentucky Department of Education officials on hand for the event included Commissioner of Technology Don Coffman and Director of Support Services David Couch, Frankfort KDE officials Sharon Hutchinson and Lydia Sledge, Murray KDE official Brenda Nix and Elizabethtown KDE official C.J. Shepherd.

Couch said that he was particularly excited to be a part of the proceedings Monday because he had been to all three of Floyd County's Student Technology Showcases and each one seemed to be even more impressive than the last.

"It's really exciting to see this because...high technology is kind of exploding everywhere right now," Couch said. "I think Floyd County is doing a great job of getting parents involved. I think what's really amazing is the variety of the projects on display here. They're many ranges of technology (represented)—it's the video, it's the voice, it's the data. They have the whole spectrum...."

"These are the tools that will make Eastern Kentucky competitive with anybody else in the country," Couch continued. "It's exciting to see. It's exciting for these kids to be a part of this...I saw a 7th-grader produce a document on the computer with graphics and text. I've never seen a 7th-grader do that before. Good learning is entertaining as well as informative and this is certainly representative of both."

"It's a fun place to come," Sledge said. "It's just amazing the amount of work the teachers and students have put into this as well as the technology coordinator. There are not many other districts that have their own technology showcases. This is special in that respect."

"I was pleased with the insightfulness of the students," he added. "It was obvious they had worked at planning and designing projects, not just the teachers."

"I was impressed because even the smaller children had very involved projects. These were five and six-year old children who were working with very sophisticated equipment."

Towler told the board that it could cost over $400,000 to replace the system but, unless it was paid for from bond proceeds, the district had only enough funds available to do part of the project.

Board members decided to replace the entire system and to pay for the project with a bond issue.

Elliott Contracting of Pikeville was awarded the Allen Central project.

Nature's finest

Frank Fitzpatrick, a member of the Kentucky Heritage Land Conservation Fund, accepted a license plate from Libby Jones, who represented her husband, Gov. Brereton Jones, at a press conference in Frankfort on March 31 announcing the sale of the plates.

Sale of nature license plate will benefit Kentucky communities

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

A warbler resting on a limb of Kentucky's state tree, the tulip poplar tree, could help Kentuckians preserve the beauty of the state, according to Frank Fitzpatrick of Prestonsburg.

Through the sale of a Kentucky license plate depicting the Kentucky warbler and tulip tree, the conservation board can purchase land for nature preserves, wildlife management areas, state parks, recreation and environmental education areas.

The land can be wetlands, wooded green space, or large tracts of old-growth forests, Fitzpatrick said.

Fitzpatrick serves on the Kentucky Heritage Land Conservation Fund Board, an agency created in 1990 by the Kentucky General Assembly to acquire land, receive and approve grant applications for the acquisition, and management of the funds. No funding mechanism was created, though, to enable the board to purchase properties.

In 1994, the General Assembly passed a bill to provide funding through the receipt of a portion of the unmined minerals tax, environmental fines and penalties and the sale of the license plate.

The license plates are on sale at all county court clerk's offices and $25 of the cost goes to Heritage Land Conservation Fund, Fitzpatrick said.

"That $25 is tax deductible," he added.

Individuals converting from a regular plate should turn their old plates in to the county clerk to receive credit for the months remaining on their decals. The $35 cost, above the regular registration fee, is good for two years.

By purchasing the license plate, Kentuckians will help "protect the plants and trees that are so vitally important to the biodiversity of life," Fitzpatrick said.

He praised state representative Greg Stumbo for his help with the endeavor.

"Without the strong support of Representative Greg Stumbo, the legislation would have not been possible. He was very instrumental in its passage," he said.

Fitzpatrick was selected to sit on the Heritage Land Conservation Fund Board by his fellow members of the Nature Conservancy Board. He was appointed to the Nature Conservancy Board by Gov. Brereton Jones. The mission of the conservancy board is similar to that of the Heritage Land board.

The conservancy's goal is to preserve plants, animals and natural communities that represent the diversity of life on Earth by protecting lands and waters they need to survive, Fitzpatrick said.

Regional training: moving to meet needs of Kentucky circuit and deputy clerks

Deputy Clerks Doris M. Anderson, Sherry Branham, Johnnie Calhoun, Jean Compton, Fred Cottrell, Jr., Dovie Damron, Vicki

Howell, Anita Hunter, Sandra Johnson, Barb Lykens, Denise Ousley, Priscilla Sammons, Angela Spurlock, Teresa Wallace, and Linda Yates, representing Floyd County, attended the 1995 Circuit and Deputy Clerks' Regional Training held at the Holiday Inn in Prestonsburg on April 6.

Topics addressed during the day long session included safety in the workplace; personnel benefits and responsibilities; dynamics of domestic violence; procedures governing reporting of circuit court sentencing; and a review of SUSTAIN, the computerized case processing system. In addition, attendees were informed about the new federal IRS reporting requirements for circuit clerks regarding cash bail bonds received in excess of $10,000.00.

The 1995 regional training was sponsored by the Kentucky Court of Justice and conducted by the Administrative Office of the Courts' Education Services Division.

Clarification

David Cooley, an employee of Rumpke, a company hired by the county to collect the county's solid waste, said that he meant to tell members of the solid waste board at its Monday night meeting that Rumpke's transfer station would be up and running in two months, not two weeks as the Times reported.

Cooley also said he had stated Rumpke employee Tom Henke was in Pikeville Monday night to review the bidding for trash collection there. The bid was awarded to PSG, not to Rumpke, Cooley said.

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

Competent enough . . .

by Scott Perry

It has taken ten years and untold amounts of taxpayer dollars to determine that Clawvern Jacobs is competent to stand trial for the 1985 murder of an Alice Lloyd College student.

Jacobs was convicted and sentenced to death once for the crime, but the state Supreme Court decided he was tried in the wrong place, and the courts were directed to do it all over again.

While we are a firm believer in equal protection under the law and rights for those accused of crimes, we have a hard time understanding why competence to stand trial is such an issue for concern.

All this legal mumbo jumbo about mental capacity or understanding the difference between right and wrong seems awfully irrelevant to the issue of whether a crime was committed and who did it.

Perhaps the how and why of crime is important to establish motive, but is it more important than deciding if a person is innocent or guilty?

Isn't the actual commission of a crime more relevant than the reason for committing it?

Certainly there are mitigating factors in many cases, but we don't see mental competency among them.

Violent behavior cannot be excused or ignored because an individual was responding to some inner voice or to a life of abuse.

As a society, perhaps we should sympathize with those who suffer from troubled minds and mental illnesses, but our courts are here to exact justice.

Put simply, a person competent enough to commit a crime is competent enough to be tried for it on the evidence, and competent enough to be punished.

Just as ignorance of the law is no excuse, neither are insanity, incompetence nor instability.

Do the crime, do the time and leave the rest to a higher authority.

Recognize educators for stellar services

Editor:
Improvement in Kentucky's public education system through massive reform initiatives poses tremendous opportunities for growth, enhancement and creativity in the classroom. The effort of the past five years carries an equal if not greater number of challenges to those charged with bringing reform to its fullest fruits.

Many of the most significant challenges of reform fall to the front-line troops of our educational system—our teachers. Under education reform, teachers have been called upon to undertake previously unheard of re-direction in the preparation for and delivery of instruction to students.

This redirection is being accomplished in large part through the individual dedication of Kentucky's teachers. The challenges of reform, including the additional planning and preparedness time required, have increased the stressful nature of the life of professional educators.

During the observances of National Teacher Day, May 9, and National Teacher Appreciation Week, May 7 - 13, it is appropriate that the successes and dedication of teachers in local school districts be recognized for their outstanding efforts to implement education reform and improve our schools.

On behalf of the members of the Kentucky School Boards Association, both locally and around our state, I want to express our appreciation to the teachers of this community's schools for their personal and professional commitment to the success of education reform and to their continued dedication to the improvement in the learning opportunities afforded to this community's most important asset—its children and future leaders.

"Let there be light" regulation disregarded

Editor:
On March 3 of this year, Ruth Patterson, a teacher at Prestonsburg

High School, who teaches a special education course for students with functional disorders, requested that the lighting be checked in her classroom because she has a student who is visually impaired and needs good lighting to enable this student to complete daily classwork.

State regulation requires an average of 80 candle power in each classroom; however, when checked last year, the candle power in Mrs. Patterson's classroom registered only 50.

Mrs. Patterson was told to make her request in writing and she did so. I co-signed her request as parent representative of the Prestonsburg High School site-based decision making council and handed the request to an employee of the Floyd County School Board. He said the lighting would be checked.

Well, Mrs. Patterson is still waiting. Perhaps that employee would like to come to the PHS SBDM council meeting on Monday, May 1, at 7 p.m. and explain why this problem has not been corrected.

Kentucky Power Company co-sponsors experimental teacher design workshop

Twenty-four teachers from various elementary and middle schools across Eastern Kentucky participated in an Experimental Design Workshop to assist science teachers in coaching their students to build better science projects and become scientifically literate by developing and applying the basic concepts of experimental design.

The workshop was part of the CEDAR Coal Fair held at Pikeville College and was co-sponsored by CEDAR (Coal Education Development and Resource Council), Kentucky Power and Appalachian Power. CEDAR is a non-profit organization formed to help improve the image of coal by accomplishing its goal of integrating the study of coal and energy-related subjects into classroom curriculum.

Sarah Whipkey, educational services assistant for Appalachian Power and a former science teacher, was invited by CEDAR to teach the Workshop. In addition to coordinating the school partnerships program for Appalachian Power, Whipkey travels throughout West Virginia and Virginia teaching workshops on a number of energy-related topics.

The following Pike and Floyd County teachers participated: Donna Collins, Prestonsburg Elementary; Suzanne Stumbo, Betsy Layne High School; Jametta Meade, Mullins Elementary; Marquetta Bently, Shelby Valley High; Judy F. Bevins, Elkhorn City Elementary; Emma Lea Akers, Robinson Creek Elementary; Linda Adkins, Grapevine Elementary; Debbie DeRossett, Prestonsburg Elementary; Bernadine Isaac, Allen Elementary; Clydine Branham, Feds Creek Elementary; Annis Yvonne Keen, Phelps High School; Cheryl Slater, Varney Elementary; Tom Gray, Mann, W. Va.; and Linda Lanehart, Logan, W. Va. Also assisting with the coordination of the Workshop was Chuck Ferguson, speakers bureau coordinator for Kentucky Power.

According to Tom Owen, Kentucky Power's public affairs information manager, "It is critical that today's students, who will be tomorrow's decision makers, be taught the importance of thorough research that follows appropriate experimental design and accuracy in scientific studies." Owen added that public opinion is often influenced by conclusions based on inaccurate information or someone's personal opinion rather than sound, scientific evidence. Not only can this cause the general public to be misinformed, but in some cases, it can cause unnecessary alarm.

One of Kentucky Power's corporate goals is to be involved in education in the communities it serves through collaborative efforts and partnership initiatives that meet the needs of the students, teachers, parents and employers. The company offers speaker services and educational materials on energy-related, safety and environmental subjects.

Kentucky craft marketing program recruiting professional craftspeople

As "cultural tourism" becomes the new buzz word in state government, the Kentucky Craft Marketing Program is actively recruiting professional craftspeople to accommodate the anticipated market growth. The Cabinets of Economic Development, Education, Arts and Humanities; and Tourism have been collaborating through the Kentucky Strategic Plan for Economic Development as part of Strategy 5.5 to "promote and develop Kentucky's cultural and historical assets as an economic tool."

"The time has come," says Craft Marketing Program Manager, Fran Redmon, "to identify and recruit additional craft resources for the larger market that this economic initiative will create."

Recruitment, advertising, direct-mail campaigns, and pre-jury workshops prior to the annual jury session are all part of a combined effort to fulfill the economic development potential of Kentucky crafts. An informal orientation and introduction to the jury process by the Craft Marketing Program will be held June 2, 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., at the Woman's Club Building, 200 Washington Street, Frankfort. All interested Kentucky craftspeople are invited to attend.

A series of one-day workshops entitled, "Starting a Craft Business," are scheduled for Wednesday, June 7, at Natural Bridge State Park; Thursday, June 8, at Greenbo Lake State Park; and Friday, June 9, at Carter Caves State Park. The workshops will begin at 9:30 a.m. with a morning session on business structures and regulations by Patti Kirk, program manager of the Business Information Clearinghouse in the Economic Development Cabinet. In the afternoon, Craft Marketing Program juried craftspeople will lead a "business planning" panel discussion based on their experience in the profession. The third session will orient craftspeople to the organizational resources available to Kentuckians. Presenters include representatives from the Kentucky Craft Marketing Program, the Kentucky Art and Craft Foundation, and the Kentucky Guild for Artists and Craftsmen.

The 1995 jury session to determine eligibility for participation in the Craft Marketing Program will be held in Frankfort on July 12. Jury applications will be available in mid-May. The panel of jurors is comprised of three out-of-state craft professionals; a practicing craftsman, a craft marketing professional, and an educator or administrator in a craft-related field. Applicants must be residents of Kentucky and registered as a business within Kentucky.

For more information contact: Kentucky Craft Marketing Program, 39 Fountain Place, Frankfort, KY 40601. Telephone (502) 564-8076. The Kentucky Craft Marketing Program is a division of the Kentucky Arts Council, a state agency, in the Education, Arts and Humanities Cabinet.

Allen Central High on KET Star Channels

Allen Central High School received special recognition on Monday, April 24 when it was featured as "School of the Day" during a KET Star Channels satellite course. KET Star Channels satellite courses are advanced high school courses delivered live every day by satellite to schools across Kentucky and 15 other states.

Discrete Math instructor Tom Graviss wore a gray and red Rebel sweatshirt on the set throughout the class period. He showed individual pictures of the Allen Central High School students enrolled in his course as he introduced them.

"One valuable benefit of the Star Channels courses is the interaction it allows between students of different regions," said Graviss. "School of the Day allows us to know each other better and to appreciate different geographical places."

The Allen Central High School students enrolled in the KET Star Channels Discrete Math course are Adam Coleman, Joshua Flanery, Jamie Fultz, Pamela Goble, Jeremy Hall, Becky Hayes, Denise Hughes, Drema Kilgore, Veronica McKinney, Amanda Wallen, and Donnie Whalen. The classroom facilitator is Pam Frasure.

The KET Star Channels course program was developed in 1989 to deliver advanced high school courses to schools where the courses had not been offered previously. The program was nationally recognized as a 1991 winner of the Innovations in State and Local Government Award administered by the Ford Foundation and Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government. In 1993, Vice President Al Gore visited the KET Star Channels studios and took part in a Distance Learning class.

KET is currently offering satellite courses in German I, German II, Probability and Statistics, Discrete Mathematics, Physics, Precalculus, Latin I, and Latin II.

No April Fool's Day for women in Floyd County

On Saturday, April 1, 41 women throughout the county took advantage of the special Women's Health Day Clinic at the Floyd County Health Department.

The women received a pap smear, clinical breast exams, cholesterol screening and were referred for Mammograms. They were up-dated in their immunizations, T.B. skin tests and had a Health Risk Appraisal completed.

Delores Carpenter, the cancer in-reach/out-reach worker for the health department, coordinated the activities for the Women's Health Fair. The ladies each chose a gift from under the Easter Egg Tree. These gifts were donated by the local CAP office. Each lady also received a pink carnation that was donated by Jenny Wiley Florist.

Entertainment was provided by "Munroe" from the Kentucky Opry. "Munroe" gave out autographed pictures, sang and told hilarious jokes and stories to entertain the patients. The refreshments were provided by Bob Carpenter, Louise Rolph, and Virginia Sayle.

Becky Kuss donated helium for the balloons. At the end of the day, a drawing was held for the door prize, which was a basket filled with goodies donated by Trends and Traditions.

The positive response from the women who attended was overwhelming. Because the day was such a success, steps were taken to schedule another health day for women.

The Floyd County Health Department and McDowell Hospital co-sponsored a Women's Health Day at the McDowell Hospital on Saturday, April 22.

All of these services are available at the health department Monday through Friday from 8:00-2:45. All women of childbearing age and especially women age 45 and older should have a pap smear yearly. The average cost of the screening does not exceed $10.

Haunting scene

Hoyt Spence's photography will be on display in Lexington until May 14.

Pikeville photographer exhibits in Lexington show

The Lexington Central Library is featuring the photography and environmental vision of Pikeville photographer Hoyt Spence.

The exhibit runs through May 14 with a reception on Friday at the gallery, from 6-8.

The show features large scale Cibachrome prints offering intimate glimpses of a pristine Appalachia. The exhibit recently set attendance records in Asheville, N.C., and has received numerous merits and awards.

Entitled "I Wish I Had Spoken To Her," it evokes a story Spence was told by a woman who said she had once seen a ghost of a beautiful lady beside her bed. Initially afraid, the woman was entranced by the apparition's beauty and spirit. After the ghost disappeared, the woman told Spence, she had only one regret: "I wish I'd spoken to her."

"Nature is such a spirit that most of us admire but never try to understand," Spence said. "And, in view of the current plight of the environment, the natural world is disappearing without our ever having known it."

"I would like to thank everyone who has helped me make this exhibition possible and to invite everyone to come and enjoy the show." Gallery hours are 9-9 p.m.

For more information, contact gallery director Peggy McCallister.

School-based decision making raising issues in education reform

As a pioneer in education reform, Kentucky also will take the lead in addressing issues relating to school-based decision making, according to a University of Kentucky education professor.

Several key issues are cropping up as Kentucky's efforts to reform its educational system progress, such as:

- How will the state force schools that haven't formed school councils to comply with the law?
- Why aren't students represented on the councils?
- Who will win the tug-of-war between school boards and school councils?

Emerging issues center on several points: the relationship between school boards and the councils, the authority and composition of councils, and school compliance, according to Charles Russo, associate professor in the UK College of Education.

The Kentucky Education Reform Act required the creation of school-based decision making councils in virtually every school in the state. The councils are designed to direct the daily management and operations of local schools and are typically composed of three teachers, two parents and a school administrator.

A primary issue relates to an apparent tug-of-war between school boards and school councils, said Russo, who reviewed the issues in the latest Kentucky Law Journal.

"Some school boards see councils as a threat, especially in personnel selection," he said.

Councils are designed as policy-type bodies with responsibilities that overlap with boards, and local boards fear an erosion of power, Russo said.

A recent case, Bushee vs. Board of Education, was decided in favor of the councils, a sign of judicial leaning toward an interpretation of KERA in favor of councils, Russo said.

Russo also is concerned with the makeup of the councils. He views the design of school councils as tipped in favor of educators, and thinks, for better balance, students also should be represented on councils.

Currently they can serve only in unofficial roles as observers. "At least at the high school level, it's worth giving them some kind of say. That 18-year-old senior will be voting," Russo said.

With the July 1, 1996, state-mandated compliance deadline drawing closer, another issue looms on the horizon: What about schools that have not formed councils by the deadline? So far, about 60 percent of schools have established councils.

"No one is sure what is going to happen if schools do not comply," Russo said. "The issue is definitely coming down the road. Schools will have had six years to meet the requirement, so if they haven't, will the state be willing to put some teeth into the mandate?"

One possibility is to change the required vote of a faculty before school-based decision making can be implemented from two-thirds to a bare majority, Russo said.

Schools meeting their thresholds of accountability are not required to have councils, which may lead to councils disbanding.

However, if they drop below that threshold, they would have to start another council. That could lead to what Russo termed a "Chinese fire drill" effect that could be detrimental in the long term.

Another unresolved question involves accountability issues based on the authority of councils to develop policies concerning curriculum and instructional practices.

A troubling aspect of KERA is the authority of the Kentucky Department of Education to recommend the dismissal of certified staff. Technically, the sanction may be invoked after only six months, which he said is too brief considering the seriousness of the sanction.

Further clarification from the Kentucky Department of Education and/or the General Assembly is needed to address what could be a future source of litigation.

Time is crucial in KERA, Russo stressed, because the reform effort can transform the entire educational organization only if it is allowed to permeate the state's entire system of common schools.

Boo Birds out at Riverfront; Jackson a Wildcat?

Over 50,000 fans jammed Riverfront Stadium to welcome major league baseball back to the Queen City.

Those who vowed to stay away this baseball season soon forgot what had happened over the last eight months.

Baseball is back and so are the Boo Birds. They were out in full force when the Reds played, uh, stumbled against the Chicago Cubs on opening day (Chris Potter surely was happy).

But it is early in the season and the Reds will get better and the fans will once again forgive and embrace them.

A bright spot in the season's beginning was hearing the familiar voice of Marty and Joe over the airwaves. There's not a better duo.

Pitching is going to be the problem for this year's Reds team. Jose Rijo is not a big-time winner. John Smiley is very inconsistent, but who else is there?

General Manager Jim Bowden will be looking to make some trades shortly, with the abundance of everyday players he has.

They talk of the depth of Cincinnati's bullpen, but most of those got hit hard during spring training. We'll have to wait and see.

You can catch all the Reds games over WMDJ-FM. I've been asked who will carry the games this year. Now you know.

JACKSON TO UK?

While Kentucky coach Rick Pitino hollered that the recruiting period was over for UK -- 1,000 percent -- yet the Cats are still in the hunt for mega-prospect Randall Jackson, a 6-11, 200 pound center.

Question is, where to put him? Is there a scholarship available? The Cats have their limit of 13 (14 counting Rhodes if he returns). But you can bet that if Jackson opts to join the roster at UK, Coach Pitino will find a way to make room.

Could he be encouraged a couple of other recruits to transfer. Scott Padgett is one of them. I would hate to see Alan Edwards leave UK. I think he is going to be a good one once given the chance. But I look for the guard to follow big brother's advice and leave UK.

If Padgett and Edwards decide to leave UK, that would leave room for Jackson, even if Rhodes chooses to return next season.

TRACK UPDATE...

The Ridgerunner's Track and Field Club is still working hard to reach the $6,000 needed to receive matching funds from the board of education to purchase equipment for the new facility at Allen Central.

According to club president Ina Robinson, they have received $2,406.40 thus far.

There will be loads of fun, food, funny characters, food, magic, food, games, and more food. Just a good time will be in store for all those in attendance.

Your favorite WMDJ personalities will be on hand at the park fountain to welcome all participants.

Tony the Tiger, Mr. Kool Aid Man, Cates Pickle, The Honey Bear, Keebler Elf, BeBo Bear, M&M Mars characters, and K.C. Penquin will be among the 30 guest characters present. The kids will love meeting these fellows.

The Mayfield Cow (a two-story cow concession stand where the kids can get free ice cream) will be at the park Saturday.

The special day is planned with kids from three and under up to nine years of age.

Eight events will be held and no one will go home without being a winner.

Prizes galore will be given away. How about these give-aways? A Tide pedal car. Three Murray street-style bikes. One Roadmaster USA wagon. A pair of Little Tikes play washer and dryer. Kenworth Sonic Hauler truck. Little Tike race car. A bagful of Tide Matchbox cars and many other gifts.

The big event will be the Big Wheel race, a popular last event year. Those who will be racing in the Big Wheel race are urged to bring their own Big Wheel. If they don't have a Big Wheel, Food City will have Tide cars for kids to use.

With their mouths full of bubble gum, kids will try to blow the biggest bubble. That should be very interesting.

Who can kick a ball the farthest? It may be you. The kickball contest is another of the great events planned. Limbo, limbo. How low can you go? You will definitely want to get in on the Limbo contest. Ranger Rick Caudill will be at his post.

A bean-bag-in-the-bucket contest will take place at the park. Wow! How many can you get in the buckets?

The 50-yard dash will be for the young, young sprinters out.

Everyone loves a three-legged race, as well as the sack race. What a time they had last year!

Snack stops will be scattered throughout the eight events. Besides the Mayfield Cow, Pepsi and All-Sport will be there. Participants can also fill up on Moore's Potato Chips, Nabisco cookies, Keebler cookies, Flowers cupcakes, Farley's Fruit Snacks, Planters Peanuts, Tootsie Rolls Tootie Fruities, M&Ms, Mars, and much more.

Hall tosses five-hit shutout against Sheldon Clark

The South Floyd Raiders won for the second time this season and it took some strong pitching by left-hander Scotty Hall to get it done.

Hall shut out the Sheldon Clark Cardinals on five hits in posting a 5-0 win.

Terrance Mullins blasted a sixth-inning home run as the Raiders collected only six hits.

Hall was in control on the mound as he struck out seven batters and he only issued one walk. Hall kept his pitches down as was evident by the number of ground balls hit to the infield.

The Raiders committed four errors in the game.

The Cardinals threatened to score in the second inning when they put their first three runners on base with singles to load the bags. But Hall fanned Preece and Durham before enticing Maynard to pop out to short and end the inning.

Both teams failed to score through the first four innings with South Floyd putting two on the scoreboard in the fifth inning for a 2-0 game.

Eric Cook singled with one out in the fifth and moved to second on an

Hopkins steps down at South Floyd as girls' basketball coach

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

On Monday, April 10, South Floyd girls basketball coach Jimmy Hopkins walked into the office of school principal Al Osborne and handed him his resignation as coach for next season.

Hopkins said several reasons entered into his decision to resign, but he mainly felt that someone at the school could bring the program around.

"I have done all that I could do, workwise," he said, "I just feel that it is time for a new face."

Hopkins just completed his second season as the girls head coach at the newly consolidated school.

The South Floyd girls basketball program has struggled the past two years, winning three games last year and only one this season.

South Floyd principal Al Osborne said that the vacancy will not be filled immediately.

"We will not announce the vacancy until the end of the school year," said Osborne. "We will then list it with the personnel office and it will be advertised for 20 work days."

Osborne said that he will not be the one to decide who will get the job but that the decision will rest with a specially appointed committee.

"The committee will consist of three members -- maybe five. No less than three. We like to have five when it comes to a major coaching position to be filled," he said.

The school principal said the hiring will be put to the committee members, who will meet with each applicant.

"I want to interview a minimum of three and not over five," he said. "Typically, I don't sit in on the committees but I will sit on one."

Osborne said there are not any "preconceived" candidates but that he does want a person who is in-house.

"I want that person to work here in this building," he said. "This program needs that in the worse kind of way."

Hopkins built a reputation while coaching in the grade school ranks as one of the premier elementary coaches in the region.

His Martin teams were consistently one of the more, if not the most, feared teams in the region.

He gave up the Martin job to join the staff of Johnny Ray Turner at McDowell where he coached freshman and junior varsity basketball as an assistant.

After the resignation of Cassandra Akers, he assumed the head coaching job of the McDowell girls midway of the '92-93 season. He coached his first full year during '93-94 before the school consolidated with Wheelwright.

At Martin, he won two county championships and was runner-up four times. Before coming to Martin he was at Maytown. He won 143 games at Martin while losing 71.

Although he has resigned the position, Hopkins is still interested in coaching again, but it would have to be an ideal situation.

"Yes, I'm interested in coaching again," he said. "If the right girls program came along -- but it would have to be a special situation."

Hopkins said that he would take a boys' coaching job regardless.

"I still feel that I am capable of coaching," he stated. "I accomplished some positive things at McDowell and South Floyd. I wanted to have a positive influence with the girls. I wanted that and to teach them basketball techniques."

Principal Osborne said that he met with next year's returning players and told them what he expects from them.

"I shared with them about how I want them to stay focused and committed," he said. "I just want to see the commitment level of those girls coming back."

Osborne said that if that commitment is not there, then he would recommend that girls' basketball be dropped at the school.

"I just want what's best for the kids," he said. "If there are just four or five committed, then that's not enough."

The players' response?

"They all agreed. We need our seniors to come and show some leadership," he said. "We need to get our girls in camp, on a weight program (to build strength). I don't like losing. I just don't like losing at all."

Osborne said the situation had been analyzed and that it no longer could be ignored.

"I told the kids to give me seven or eight who will make a commitment to the program. I challenged them to show me some leadership."

"These kids are not dumb. They see what's going on," he said.

Osborne said that he has had calls about the vacancy, but there will be no rush to fill the position.

"No, we're not in a hurry to hire anyone," he said. "We expect our kids to be winners."

Although no names have been released as to who might be considered for the job, two names, Barry Hall and Henry Webb, have been mentioned around the community as possible candidates.

Hall is already an in-house teacher who helped coach Jim Rose with the boys' program last season. Webb coached the McDowell boys' elementary team last season.

Coach Hopkins said that he would just wait and see what develops.

"I'm just biding my time," he said. "The girls' program here at Martin will be open next year and I might try that. I'll just keep busy."

Hopkins is thinking of revitalizing the junior pro varsity program again at Martin.

Hopkins said that he had no remorse toward anyone but thinks that being out of coaching will be hard to handle next year.

"I've thought of not being able to coach next year," he said. "I'll miss it. But whomever they hire for the job I wish them well."

If there is a positive out of all this, it would be the pressure that has been lifted, according to Hopkins.

Special events to highlight "Day in the Park"

If a day at the Stumbo Park for the "Day in the Park" is on your schedule for Saturday, April 29, then you may want to bring different shoes with you.

You will need your baseball spikes for Home Run Derby. Your basketball sneakers would be helpful for the Free Throw Shooting event. But you will also need your dance shoes for the Dance Contest (with a live band). The fourth pair of shoes needed will be walking shoes for the Cake Auction/Walk.

All this plus much more will be part of the Harold-Allen-Prater Little League "Day in the Park" activities. A concession stand will be available to ease your hunger.

The fun begins at 1 p.m. and will end around 5 p.m. (unless everyone is having so much fun).

Trophies will be awarded to the successful participants.

All proceeds from "Day in the Park" will go to purchase needed equipment for the upcoming season.

Come and plan to spend the day -- but don't forget your shoes.

Hall to cheer for MSU Lady Eagles next season

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

It is a fact that hard work pays off.

Case in point is Crystal Lynn Hall, the 18-year-old daughter of Larry and Mary Hall of Allen.

Crystal will be joining the Morehead State University girls' varsity cheerleading squad this coming fall after being selected while attending tryouts on April 21-22 at Morehead.

All the hard work came when Hall was a cheerleader for four years at Prestonsburg High School. She was the team captain her senior year. Hall is currently attending Prestonsburg Community College where she was on the Dean's List for the fall semester. She will transfer to Morehead for this fall semester. She plans to major in nursing.

Hall will receive a scholarship the first year at Morehead and one for each year that she is chosen for the squad. That means that she must try out each year.

"We will be going to East Tennessee State for camp in August," she said. "Then we will practice every day getting ready for the Nationals in Florida in January."

Hall not only cheered for the girls and boys varsity basketball teams, but the football team as well. A lot of time is involved. When does one find time to study?

"I don't know," she said.

The selection for the team was based on gymnastics, cheering ability, stunts and interview.

Martin Reds mercy Garrett Pirates 10-0

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Larry Mullins missed a no-hitter for the Martin Reds, but his team did post a 10-0 mercy win over the Garrett Pirates Wednesday evening at the Martin Park.

The Reds remain undefeated through five games.

Mullins struck out 11 batters and allowed just the one hit, a second-inning double by Reed. He fanned 11 of the 13 batters he faced in the four-inning game.

Keith Crum and Henry Napier collected two hits each for the Reds. The Reds scored four times in the first inning against Francis, the losing pitcher for Garrett.

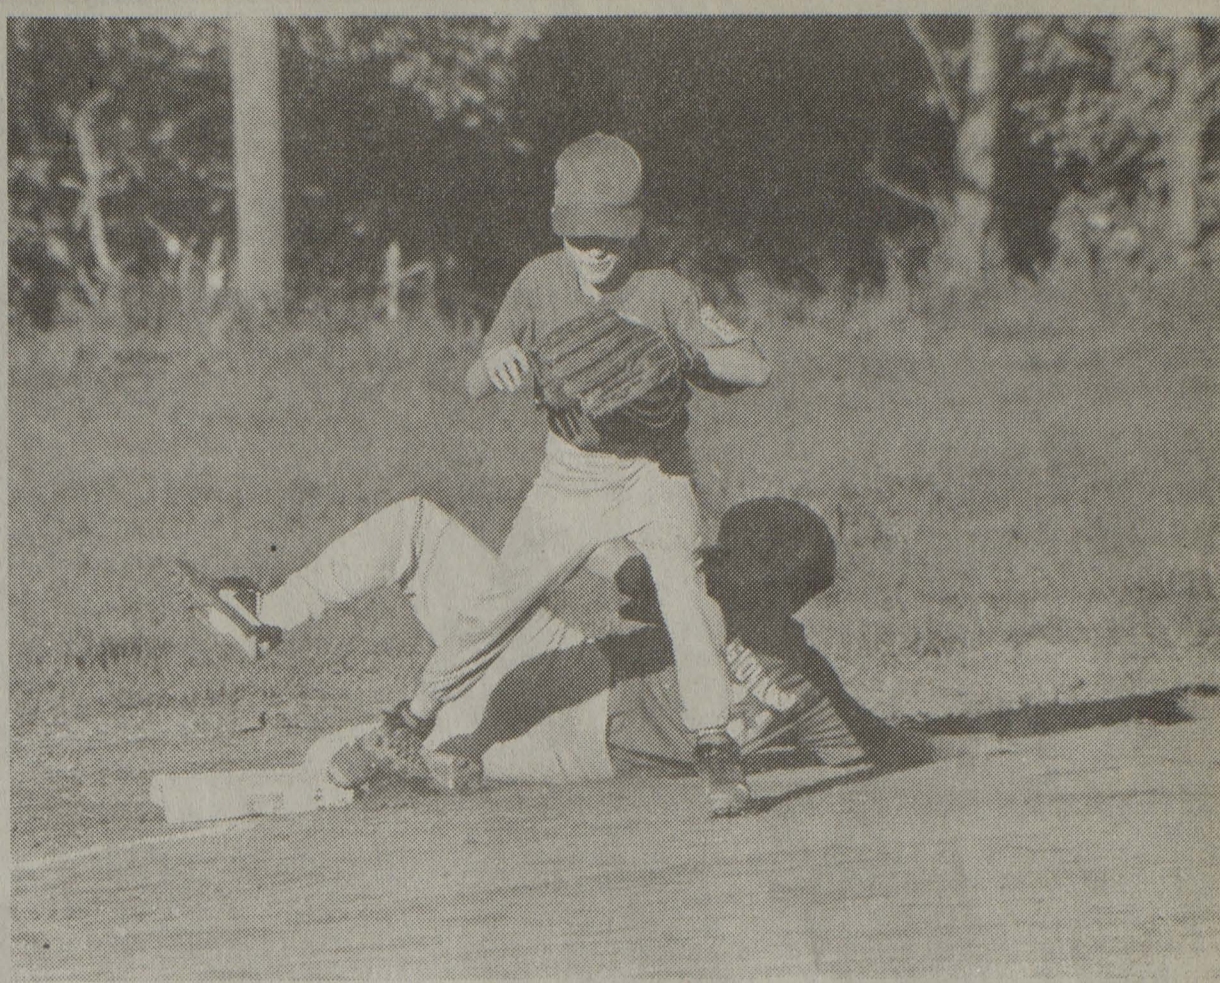

Francis walked Chad Samons and Mullins to start the game with both runners scoring on Patrick Martin's two-run double.

Napier collected a one-out single that scored Martin. With two out, Francis walked three consecutive batters to force home a run.

Three runs scored in the Reds' second inning. Crum drove in two runs with a base hit and Napier singled home a run.

Samons doubled home a run to start the third inning when Martin plated three more runs to take a 10-0 lead. Crum had an RBI triple in the inning.

Mullins fanned the last seven batters he faced.

Safe at third!

A Look At Sports

going good," she said. "We still need the community to help us out."

A business or individual can donate $60 to the program and their name will be engraved on a hurdle as having adopted that hurdle.

Robinson said that the company that was to put the sealer on the track before stripping it needs "four days of hot weather."

"It has to be hot in order to do it," explained Robinson. "Our grass around the track where it was hydro-seeded by Coal-Mac, is starting to come up. The football field looks real good."

Robinson said that several fundraising events will be forthcoming to raise the needed money to match the funds.

As of yet, no other school in Floyd County has offered to help out with raising money.

"Some feel that the facility is just for Allen Central," said Robinson. "But it's not. It's for every school in the county."

High schools at Betsy Layne, Prestonsburg and South Floyd all have track and field teams. Each school should help with raising the money for equipment if that is the only way of getting the funds.

But, I still contend that the board of education should foot the bill for the equipment. Look around the region. No other school district has to get out and raise money. The school system takes care of it.

This $18,000 (for equipment) is a one-time investment, an investment in our kids and future track and field participants.

Anyone who wishes to donate to the program may call Ina Robinson and I'm sure that the gift would be appreciated. All of you politicians, help out with this.

Until Wednesday, good sports everyone and be good sports. Go to church this Sunday. Take the kids and enjoy the day.

Adopts-a-Hurdle!

Floyd County Magistrate Jackie Owens presented Times Sports Editor Ed Taylor with a check for $300 to go toward purchasing hurdles at the new track facility at Allen Central. It was a personal donation from Owens, who made the donation in honor of his family and in memory of Judge John M. Stumbo. (photo by Polly Ward)

Kids' Day

There will be more fun as many, many exciting events are planned for the day. How about a roulette wheel for the kids to spin? Everyone gets a prize.

Harman Medical will provide a first-aid station. Country Boy Farm Supply will provide bales of hay for the Big Wheel race, as well as sacks for the sack race.

It will be fun to watch the parents of these kids cheering on their offsprings. They are more excited than the ones taking part.

Mom and Dad, you will want to be sure that your youngster is part of all the festivities of the day.

Trophies will be awarded after the games are all completed. First place awards will be given in every event to every age group. Second and third place finishes receive ribbons. Each child who takes part in the games will receive an award of some kind. No one goes home empty-handed.

Following the awards ceremony, a magic show will delight the kids as well as the adults. Parents are encouraged to bring blankets or lawn chairs for the magic show.

Jenkins edges Allen Central boys to capture track meet

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

It came down to the last race of the evening to determine who would take home first place at last Tuesday's Pikeville track and field meet.

When it was time to go home, Jenkins had edged the Rebels 106-104 for first place.

Allen Central held a slim two-point lead over Jenkins before the gun sounded for the start of the men's 1600-meter relay. Ridgerunner coach Dewey Jamerson knew that his team had to finish strong to win the meet.

"I told them the main thing was to stay close to Jenkins and place second," he said. The Ridgerunners placed third in the event dropping them to second place.

"We had two of our regular runners out," Jamerson explained. "Todd Samons was home sick. He runs the 400-meter race for us and that would have been points for us."

The way it ended up, Allen Central had no entrant in the 400-meter run and gained no points.

The foursome of John Goble, James Seward, Estill Stumbo and Curtis Webb had a time of 4:09.0 for third place.

Chris Bailey and Levi Wells took first and second place in the discus throw. Bailey had a toss of 126 feet, 5 inches for the top finish. Wells was measured at 112 feet. Shawn Robinson, Central's top thrower last year, has struggled this season and had a fourth place finish at 109 feet, 9 inches.

Wells took second place in the men's shotput. Wells was measured with a toss of 42 feet, 7 inches. Roger Collins and Ryan Owens took part but did not place.

David Poff and Gary Webb did not place in the long jump. Collins, Poff and Webb could score no points in the men's high jump.

Webb did manage to place fourth in the triple jump event. He had a leap of 35 feet, 1 inch.

Estill Stumbo scored 10 points by winning first place in the 110 hurdles. Stumbo had a time of 17.17. Curtis Webb finished fourth at 19.53.

He completed a sweep of the hurdles by running a 43.45 for first place in the men's 300-meter hurdles. Curtis Webb placed fourth with a

Bailey places second in discus at Boyd County Invitational

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The throw of Allen Central's Chris Bailey was measured at 130 feet, 11 inches as he took second place in the discus event at the prestigious Boyd County Invitational Track and Field Meet.

Bailey has shown vast improvement this season as the top thrower for the Rebel program. Teammate Levi Wells placed sixth in the event that draws some of the state's top throwers.

Estill Stumbo was impressive in his finish in the men's 110 hurdles. Stumbo placed third. He also took second place in the preliminary run of the 300 hurdles, but finished fourth overall.

Wells, along with Roger Collins, took part in the shotput but did not place.

David Poff was a long jump participant with a leap of 15 feet, 1 inch. He did not place.

In the men's 100-meters, Todd Samons and Matt Varney ran with no placing.

Samons ran the 400-meter as well and did not place. He had a time of 58.43. John Goble also took part in the event.

Jackie Owens had a time of 5:51.54 in the men's mile run. He failed to place. Matt Varney ran a 27.42 in the 200 meters.

The highest finish for the girls was a fifth place spot held by Jenny Wells in the women's shotput. Wells had a throw of 28 feet, 11 inches. Andrea Bailey was measured at 19 feet

Wells and Jennifer Patton were participants in the discus but neither placed.

Heather Conley had cleared the high jump bar at 4 feet, 2 inches. In the long jump, Beth Puckett was measured at 12 feet, 4 inches.

The 3200-meter relay team failed to place. The foursome of Natalie Cooley, Angie Green, Dreama Isaac and Crystal Martin posted a time of 12:09.5.

Pam Goble and Amy Reynolds ran the 100-meter hurdles. In the 400 meters, Natalie Cooley and Jessica Martin took part.

The lack of participants hurt the Allen Central teams. As a result, they were not able to run in some events.

MSU veterinary technology program accreditation extended

Morehead State University's Veterinary Technology Program's full accreditation status has been extended through December 31, 1997.

The certification was granted by the Committee on Veterinary Technician Education and Activities (CVTEA) following review of MSU's program.

"Once again this accreditation is due to the tremendous support and dedication from students, faculty, and MSU's administration," said Dr. Lee Tyner, coordinator of the program. "It shows that our program meets or exceeds the high standards set for it by the CVTEA," he added.

The Vet Tech program began as an associate degree offering at MSU in 1977 and has retained full accreditation status since that time. It is administered through the Department of Agricultural Science in the College of Science and Technology.

Workers challenge Pikeville tax

by Lucy Holman
Appalachian News-Express
Staff Writer

Federal employees who spend only a portion of their work day in the Pikeville city limits have taken issue with the amount of occupational taxes they are required to pay.

Mark Bartley, an employee of the Mine Safety and Health Administration at Ratcliffs Creek, appeared before Pikeville city commissioners Monday night on behalf of some "dissatisfied city customers."

Bartley noted, however, that he wasn't speaking on behalf of all MSHA employees, and personally had no problem with paying his taxes.

He requested that the city establish a formal grievance process for occupational tax payers, similar to the appeals process of other taxing bodies such as the state Revenue Cabinet.

The federal government is not required to withhold local government taxes so employees are required to file occupational tax returns with the city April 15.

MSHA's time sheets, which have codes for specific job functions, historically have been used to determine how much time an employee works in the city limits or out in the field.

Bartley said the codes do not always fit every work situation, and "do not directly reflect how much time we spend in the city of Pikeville."

"Nobody really knows except for the individual. They don't keep track of you."

"Employees are caught in the middle," he said, and need some "written guidelines."

"We don't really want to be dealing with the city attorney," he said. "We want an appeals process we could live by."

Mayor Steve Combs said the commission couldn't redraft the occupational tax ordinance overnight, but said it could be reviewed and any recommended changes could be made during the next regular meeting.

Bartley also claimed that the city "pressures" the MSHA office to turn over information on employee time cards, information he maintains is "confidential" and "not available to anyone under the Freedom of Information Act."

City occupational tax officials are currently auditing returns filed by MSHA employees.

City Attorney Rusty Davis said employees opposed to producing time cards were "vague" as to the reason why they don't want to produce time cards to verify deductions.

Although the time cards are protected by the Freedom of Information Act, Davis said employees have a right to release the information.

"If that's a big problem, they can file at 100 percent," he said.

City officials recently learned what the codes on the time cards meant; however, Davis wouldn't speculate as to whether that knowledge created the problem.

A similar audit in 1988 resulted in some MSHA employees "voluntarily" paying an additional $50,000 in taxes, over what was originally claimed, according to Davis.

"Some employees in past years were not truthful and honest about it," Davis said, and "substantially abused that deduction."

Bartley said the department plans to start using electronic time sheets, and asked city officials to determine what documentation employees would need to produce.

"If it's not what you turned into the federal government, it won't be satisfactory to me," Davis said. "I've already seen what you turned in before."

Funds up for med school in Paintsville

by Tony Fyffe
Paintsville Herald Editor

Fundraising is picking up for a planned medical school in Paintsville, but organizers are far from the $1 million needed before a July 1 deadline.

The Southern College of Osteopathic Medicine has raised $276,311 in contributions and pledges, according to the latest tally from school officials. Nearly half the donations have come from Johnson County.

Paintsville attorney Chad Perry, secretary of the school's board of trustees, said Tuesday that he felt "pretty good" about the fundraising efforts so far.

"They could be better," he said, "but I'm not downhearted."

Three weeks ago, Perry said Paintsville was in jeopardy of losing the school to Pikeville or Hazard if more Johnson Countians did not support the project. Since then, contributions from the county have begun to trickle in.

Donations from Paintsville include $10,000 from Mitchell and Eula Preston, who have also pledged $10,000 for the next two years; Citizens National Bank, which has pledged a total of $25,000, to be paid in five annual installments of $5,000 each; and First National Bank, which has pledged $10,000 in five annual

Pikeville to stay in garbage business

Pikeville city businesses that use dumpsters for trash collection may see a rate increase soon.

Pikeville City Commissioners discussed the need for the increase during a regular meeting Monday night, and later heard the first reading of an amendment to the current solid waste ordinance. A second reading of the amendment is set for the next regular meeting May 22.

The city currently charges its 173 customers $2.50 per cubic yard to use dumpsters.

The rate will increase to $3.75 per cubic yard, a fee city officials said was still below rates of $4 to $6 other companies or municipalities charge for the same service regionally.

"I hate to pass any kind of increase in services, but the commercial services are so far below the norm," said Mayor Steve Combs.

"We have to be realistic. We can't go on charging that low, providing this type of service."

The rate increase is the result of the city's decision on whether it would stay in the garbage business or contract the service out.

Garbage pickup is currently contracted through PSG, which uses the city's equipment, but supplies the man-power.

Following a $65,000 deficit in the solid waste department last year, City Manager John Johnson began researching alternatives to reduce costs, including advertising for bids to allow a private company to take over garbage collection.

Two companies, Rumpke and LeRon Industries, bid on all collection services, with estimates coming in higher than the current rates for residential pickup, small and large businesses and dumpsters.

The city also circulated resident surveys, asking customers if they were satisfied with the current service or if they would like other options.

Results of the resident surveys showed the majority of customers were happy with the service they were getting.

City residents currently pay $10 per month for biweekly trash removal.

To stay in the garbage business, Johnson said the dumpster rate had to be increased.

The rate increase will help the city purchase $167,000 in new solid waste equipment.

Tom Bacon, Public Works project manager for PSG, said the equipment currently in use needs constant repair, and workers have welded until there's nothing left to weld.

On Monday, the commission approved the purchase of a high-capacity truck at a cost of $67,000, a rebuilt packer at $12,500 and approved $2,000 to recondition an existing truck.

It may be several months before the new truck is delivered. At that time, Johnson recommended the city eliminate its transfer station at Island Creek. The move would save money since garbage could be taken straight to the county's landfill at Ford Mountain.

Pikeville residents last saw a rate increase three or four years ago, then the first in 10 years.

The rate increase was determined then by costs associated with utilizing the county's new landfill.

The estimated fee of $15 per ton to dump at the landfill never materialized, according to Johnson, and instead the city has always paid $22.50 per ton.

Magoffin targeted in task force raid

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Four Magoffin County residents were arrested on drug charges last week after an investigation by the Mountain Area Drug Task Force and the Magoffin County Sheriff's Department.

Wilma Combs, 39, of Elk Creek Road in Salyersville and Clark Adkins, 33, of Harper, were both arrested Friday and are facing nine charges, including trafficking in cocaine.

Combs and Adkins are also charged with trafficking in a controlled substance, amphetamines; trafficking in a controlled substance, Somax; trafficking in a controlled substance, Valium; trafficking in marijuana; possession of drug paraphernalia; prescription drugs not in proper container; and criminal conspiracy to commit trafficking in controlled substances.

Also arrested was Larry Fletcher, age and address unknown, who is charged with trafficking in cocaine, criminal conspiracy to trafficking in controlled substances and cultivating marijuana.

Jeff Perkins, age and address unknown, is charged with trafficking in cocaine.

The arrests were the result of a month-long investigation by the drug task force, task force director Frank Fryman said this week.

Task force agents and Magoffin Sheriff's deputies executed search warrants at the homes of the four people arrested and found various quantities of cocaine, amphetamines, prescription drugs, drug paraphernalia and marijuana. Fryman also said that over $3,000 in cash was confiscated.

Magoffin County Sheriff Chalmer Wireman and deputies conducted the drug raid Friday afternoon with the assistance of task force agents.

The Mountain Area Drug Task Force is a joint effort between six county sheriff's departments and two city police departments to target street level drug dealers.

The task force was formed in July 1993 and consists of officers from the Floyd, Pike, Perry, Letcher, Knott and Magoffin County sheriff departments and the Hazard and Prestonsburg city police departments.

Since its formation, task force officers have made over 250 drug-related arrests.

Isaac trial set for July 20

The trial for Lawrence County preacher Gallie Isaac Sr., will begin on July 20, Judge Stephen "Nick" Frazier ruled Friday.

Isaac, 78, is under indictment on charges of sexually abusing and sodomizing young boys who attended the Isaac Park Free Baptist Church where he is pastor. He faces 18 felony counts of sodomy, one count of criminal attempt to commit sodomy, two felony counts of sexual abuse and eight misdemeanor counts of sexual abuse.

A motion to hold separate trials was filed by Isaac's attorney, Eldred E. "Bud" Adams. No decision on the motion has been issued.

Adams argued that if all the charges were tried in one trial, it would unfairly make Isaac appear to be a bad person because of the number of counts against him.

Prosecuting attorney Luke Morgan said if separate trials were given for each alleged victim, then it would come down to Isaac's word against the alleged victim's.

"There's strength in numbers," Morgan said.

Morgan told the judge that the jury needed to hear the scope of the crimes Isaac is charged with.

Earlier this month, Frazier denied a motion by Morgan to move the trial to another county, but said he would leave the door open if more evidence was presented.

Police nab fugitive in Lawrence

A West Virginia fugitive was captured at his aunt's home near Clifford Tuesday evening.

James Roy Arthur, 23, was wanted in Charleston, West Virginia, on six counts of sexual assault on a juvenile and felony failure to appear charges.

He was taken to the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center where he is being held on a $25,000 cash bond.

Prestonsburg model turns TV interviewer for star-studded affair

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

In early May, a resident of Floyd County will have a starring role in the television coverage of a gala that puts the spotlight on soap opera stars.

Susan Branham of Prestonsburg traveled to New York City in April where she covered the Soap Opera Fan Fair Premier Party for American Skyline, a program on the Nashville Network. The premier party was held on Tuesday, April 11 at the Mackinaw Bar and Grill located in downtown Manhattan. The gala publicized the Soap Opera Fan Fair, which will be held June 1-4 at the Lake Michigan resort town of Mackinaw, Michigan.

While in New York, the 31-year-old model had the opportunity to hobnob with soap opera stars who attended the party. Among them were Phillip Brown, who plays Buck Huston on ABC's Loving; Robin Mattson, who plays the role of Janet Green on All My Children; Kassie Wesley, who is Blair on One Life To Live; and James Kiberd, better known as Trevor Dillion on All My Children.

Last Thursday, April 19, Branham was in Detroit where she joined daytime stars in a media blitz publicizing the American Skyline coverage of the premier party, as well as the upcoming fan fair.

The Soap Opera Fan Fair, which is sponsored by Soap Opera Weekly and Kewadin Casino, is a soap opera fan's dream. Forty of the hottest soap opera stars will gather under a 34,000 square foot tent to meet their fans. Branham will also be on hand, bringing coverage of the four-day event for American Skyline. Branham is married to Michael Branham of Pres-tonsburg and they have a son, Michael. Her parents are John Ed and Georgia Shepherd of Prestonsburg.

American Skyline airs nightly at 7 p.m. Look for Branham's coverage the first week of May. For ticket information about the fan fair, call 1-800-690-SOAP.

A starring role

Local district making a "splash" with water conservation

by Polly Ward
Times Feature Writer

"The Living Waters" is the theme of this year's Soil and Water Stewardship Observance Week, April 30 through May 7. As such, it was fitting that the annual Soil and Water Stewardship breakfast was held Thursday morning at May Lodge, which overlooks Dewey Lake.

Jim Carter, chairman of the Floyd County Conservation District, and Jim Rospopo, district conservationist with the National Resources and Conservation Service, spoke to the small group of pastors and representatives of local organizations who attended the breakfast about the importance of conserving natural water resources.

"The purpose of Soil and Water Conservation Week is to make people more aware of their natural resources," Rospopo said. "This year's theme focuses on water and on how we can improve our water quality."

The conservation district also provided literature based on this year's theme for distribution. The material includes a church leader's guide, worship resources, adult and youth guides, bookmarks, place mats, and a children's cartoon book.

"The sooner you start to educate children about the importance of our water resources, the more they become aware of it," Carter told the group as they looked at the cartoon book.

Only two pastors, Reverend Ray Snider of Community Methodist Church in Prestonsburg, and Reverend Stephen Whitaker of Fitzpatrick First Baptist at Middle Creek, and a representative of Christian Appalachian Project were at the breakfast; but the district planned to distribute literature to about 20 churches who expressed interest in receiving the material.

Liz Miller, a case worker for Christian Appalachian Project, who was at the breakfast, said CAP publicizes Stewardship Week by giving out the literature during home visits. "We give out the materials to clients, to the families we serve when we go to their homes."

Rospopo said he has extra literature that "in the future we will distribute to the schools."

Thelma Merritt, district conservation office clerk, also attended the breakfast.

For more information about Soil and Water Conservation Week, call the district office at 886-3128.

News of the Weird by Chuck Shepherd

Three men in recent months have been ordered by judges to continue child support payments even though none is the father of the child he's been involuntarily supporting. Blood tests exonerated men in Ramsey County, Minn., and Talbot County, Md., and a Baltimore mother admitted that she committed perjury in identifying a man as her child's father. In each case, however, appeals courts (in Maryland in October and Minnesota in March) ruled that state law requires that the men continue to make the payments.

SEEDS OF OUR DESTRUCTION

-- At a book-signing appearance in Tampa, Fla., in July, astronaut Alan Shepard refused the request of John Williams, 55, to sign a photograph, telling the man he would sign only purchased copies of his new book on the space program. The photograph Shepard refused to sign was a 1961 shot of Williams, then a helicopter crewman, pulling Shepard out of the Atlantic Ocean after his Mercury capsule splashed down on America's first manned space mission.

-- Last fall, the resume of the newly appointed Mexican secretary of education, Fausto Alzati, was challenged in the press. Alzati claimed to have a doctorate from Harvard, but his office later conceded that he had only a master's degree in public administration from Harvard. A month later, his office said that actually, he did not have even a bachelor's degree. In January, Alzati resigned, admitting that he was expelled from the second grade for bad behavior.

-- In September, the Air Quality Management District covering Los Angeles and surrounding counties imposed regulations on restaurants that cook fat, contending that they release nine times more soot particles than all the region's buses. Restaurants would have three years to reduce emissions to the equivalent released by cooking about 500 quarter-pound hamburgers per day.

-- Last year, residents of an area near Renton, Wash., grew weary of the state's three-year planning and permitting process for renovating a dangerous highway intersection. Six neighbors, using private equipment and money, built their own turn lane on the highway in December. The state transportation agency was highly critical, listing several laws and regulations that the people violated, but, asked one of the six,

"Why should we wait for their multi-million dollar turn lane that never comes?"

-- In January, Mathew Panak, president of the Warren (Ohio) Board of Trustees, said the regularly scheduled Monday meeting would take place on Jan. 16 even though it was the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday. Said Panak, "None of us is colored. It's not going to affect us." Several days later, Panak changed his mind and postponed the meeting.

-- In March, U.S. astronaut Norman Thagard agreed to follow Russian cosmonaut customs in their joint mission to dock with a Russian space station. Among the customs was one established by the first cosmonaut, Yuri Gagarin, and followed by all subsequent cosmonauts--men and women: to urinate on a tire of the bus that takes them to the launch pad.

-- In September, a Rotterdam businessman announced his company would start local home delivery of up to 30 grams of hashish and marijuana (which are legal in the Netherlands). In July, a political organization in Amsterdam called the Interest Group for Drug Users reported that it had received about $120,000 from the government to support its work, which includes lobbying for liberalization of drug laws and providing counseling for drug abusers.

Meanwhile, back at the ranch...

It's been a while since we've updated you on the livestock situation here at the old homestead.

But it's spring...the birds are chirping, the frogs are burping, the lizards are leaping and the arachnids are creeping.

Yes, we did say arachnid...as in spider...and it's a biggin'.

Our resident zoologist, who at age seven knows more about creepy creatures than most professional pest control experts, has put a little variety in our lives with his latest collector's item...a Zebra Tarantula that, depending on whose doing the describing, is either the size of a silver-dollar pancake or Silver Dollar City.

For those of us who firmly believe that the only good spider is a dead spider, size is no object. It's the number of legs that counts.

Anyway, this particular critter lives in its own glass terrarium which allows the interested observer the opportunity to watch it in its almost natural habitat if you get close enough to peek through the tiny slits left after we secured the lid, sides and bottom with enough duct tape to make the Mummy look like it was wearing just a Band Aid®.

Can't be too careful, you know.

Plus, the spider, terrarium and duct tape are all spending the final weeks of school in our son's second grade classroom, where arachnophobia is less worrisome than recessnophobia...the fear of losing recess time for failing to get classwork done properly and on time.

Seven and eight-year-olds have their priorities, and most would eat a tarantula before losing any break time.

While the spider is the most exotic addition to our household, there is also a pair of rather innocuous salamanders, a warty toad which resides on our staircase and, of course Midge the Ferocious, our Scottish Terror (that's no typo).

Midge is our most prized pet possession because, despite being only about 12 inches tall, she protects our household from birds, cats and the garbage truck when she can take time away from her busy schedule of eating, sleeping and burying toys in the couch cushions.

Sure hope she never considers that spider to be a toy.

Circle of Friends

Back in the 1950s, so I'm told, the conventional wisdom held that pretty girls were generally dumb and smart girls were generally homely. Of course, just to suggest that these days is enough to get one accused of being a sexist pig!

This film, set in the 1950s, is a bit of a takeoff on that old wives' tale. Minnie Driver portrays Benny, a teenage girl living in Ireland who is attending Dublin's Trinity College with her two best friends, Eve and Nan. Nan is the looker of the bunch.

All three girls worship the popular and handsome star of the school rugby team, Jack Foley (Chris O'Donnell). Naturally, it is Nan to whom he is first drawn. As time goes on, however, he finds himself attracted more and more to Benny because of her quick wit and sharp mind. Before she even knows what's happening, Benny and Jack are an item. No one is more surprised than she.

Meanwhile, Eve gets involved with another school chum and Nan, spurned by Jack, goes after Simon, who is from a wealthy British family. Simon (Peter Firth) is somewhat older and worlds more sophisticated than the simple village girl, but it doesn't take long before Nan is plotting and scheming like a real pro.

It is Nan's actions which eventually jeopardize her friendship with Benny and Benny's romance with Jack. In addition to that, a local villager, portrayed by Alan Cumming, is pursuing Benny because he hopes to get his hooks into Benny's family store.

Minnie Driver, as the beleaguered Benny, is positively captivating in her performance. Not to be outdone, Chris O'Donnell ("Scent of a Woman") is excellent, despite the fact that he's an American portraying an Irishman with a brogue and he doesn't really play rugby. The chemistry between the two, not to mention the wonderful story itself, is breathtaking.

You'll find this film to be what I call a "keeper." It's warm and memorable and I recommend it highly.

The Goose is loose in Lexington

Goose Creek Symphony

"I think that in one form or another I have been listening to Goose Creek music all my life. When I was a little guy sitting behind the neck of my uncle Joe's acoustic guitar I got quite a kick out of him singing through his nose and attempting to imitate cuts from the first Goose Creek album. Later in life I was exposed to Goose Creek music through fellow musicians who worshipped the band's material...Those of us at The Times were treated to a really special event...when Charlie Gearheart...performed two Goose Creek Symphony songs (one old and one new) right here in my office...Honestly, I don't think that a personal visit from Elvis could have been more exciting." (Floyd County Times, Tim Preston, 1990)

Goose Creek Symphony will be performing at the historic Lexington Opera House on Saturday, May 13. Doors open at 7 p.m. Music will start at 8 p.m. Reserved seating is available in advance through Ticketmaster.

Also appearing will be the Trailer Park Troubadours and the Lexington Strauss Quartet.

Featuring Goose Creek Hollow, Floyd County native Charlie Gearheart, Goose Creek's music has been described as a "symphonic hoedown" ... a freewheeling, free-spirited, high-energy celebration ... a joyous musical adventure, that touches old and young alike — embracing people of diverse ages, backgrounds and musical tastes.

1995 celebrates the 25th anniversary of Goose Creek Symphony's Capitol Records debut release, their appearance on the Ed Sullivan Show, a headline slot at the Atlanta Pop Festival, (along with Jimi Hendrix and the Allman Brothers)... and the release of their brand new "live" album recorded in October 1994.

The same spirit that drove his band in 1970 is in its full glory on this collection of musical treasures. The double CD spans over two decades of musical history. The new songs demonstrate a writing style constantly evolving—the oldies are as relevant now as when they were lovingly penned by leader/founder Charlie Gearheart.

Gearheart first performed on American Bandstand in 1959 as a teenager under the name of Ritchie Hart and the Heartbeats. This witty young songwriter moved on to form Goose Creek Symphony in the late '60s with his guitarist buddy and fellow Beatles fanatic Paul "the Pearl" Spradlin. With Goose Creek, Gearheart created a unique style of music that was as true to his Appalachian upbringing as it was to his experiences playing jazz, rock and even in the military marching band.

A Goose Creek song is a musical journey, traversing passages and movements as an orchestra would...thus the term "Symphony." This freewheeling, free-spirited party set to music has been described by fans as a "symphonic hoedown" while The Tennessean recently proclaimed it "...folk rock on steroids." Indeed, as an explorer would venture away from camp into uncharted territory to later return with his discov

The end of innocence

Our son brought a package home the other day and threw it down in front of us on the coffee table. It was an ordinary looking rectangular-shaped, plastic-wrapped package, but what it contained was less than ordinary.

"What's that?" my husband asked.

"My cap and gown," our son replied

"Oh, Lord," Jimmie said sourly.

"J. R., we haven't even eaten yet. How could you be so insensitive to bring those things in the house before supper?" I asked.

"You all are crazy!" he yelled. "It's just a cap and gown. Everybody that is graduating got one."

"Sara, get me an aspirin. He said that 'G' word," Jimmie nervously asked.

"I can't get up. My knees are so shaky they won't hold me," I weakly replied. "It can't be happening this fast. It seems like just last week he wanted a Sega Genesis game."

"It was last week," my husband cried. "That's why I can't believe he's going to be gra, gra... I can't say it."

J. R. just stood in the middle of the floor shaking his head at us. He couldn't understand our reaction to his "coming of age ceremony." Yet, he didn't know what parents know or he might not be so nonchalant about leaving high school and going out into that big world on his own. Unluckily for J. R.,

Jimmie and I thought that this would be a good time to remind him of what his future held.

"Son, life is not easy. Even though college life is fun, from here on out you have to start preparing for the real world. And it's hard at best. There are some good times, but there are bad times, too. And sometimes the bad times outweigh the good, so if you're not prepared to handle the worst...it's a jungle."

"That's right, J. R.," I interjected. "It can be all uphill from now on, but it's a long hill to climb if you don't keep your head up and keep plugging."

"J. R., we know that we might sound pessimistic, but we're really just being realistic. You'll look back one day and see that what we've told you is true. Do you understand?" Jimmie asked.

J. R. didn't reply immediately. He just stood there staring at us blankly for several minutes before saying, "You all are just trying to build me up, aren't you? You're trying to make me feel better about leaving home and setting out on my own. Gee, you're all super about this whole thing. I'm sure glad I'll be getting out there in the real world where more bad things happen than good. Yes, sir, I'm really looking forward to that," he said sarcastically.

Jimmie and I looked at each other and hung our heads. Perhaps we had laid it on a bit thick. A high school graduation was an exciting thing for a teenager, a rite of passage. Yet we had unwittingly succeeded in deflating our son's enthusiasm.

"J. R.," Jimmie said apologetically. "We're sorry if we made it sound as if life is going to be rough. It's eries, Charlie, (armed with an arsenal of fiddle players, guitarists, saxophonists, bassist and drummer) boldly departs from his bluegrass "home base" to probe the adventurous boundary waters of improvisation.

The phenomenon of the "Goose Head" is as much a part of Goose Creek's lore as the music. The "live" album, recorded over the course of three sold-out shows at Chattanooga's Market Street Performance Hall, spotlights a magnificent manifestation of the Heads. The group's loyal following—including individuals of all ages, backgrounds and musical tastes—traveled great distances to cheer on their heroes. Often singing louder than the band was playing, or joining in massive chants of "Goose! Goose! Goose!" the enthusiasm of the crowd serves as testament to Charlie's wonderfully wry sense of humor, profound wisdom, and uncanny ability to exchange emotion with an audience.

Charles Gearheart was born and raised in a tiny place in eastern Kentucky called Goose Creek Hollow. As this young hillbilly became more worldly, he quickly gained a global perspective on life. In keeping with this, his musical scope grew to include big band, jazz and rock. Gearheart never lost touch with his roots, or his deep-seated love for mountain music. He certainly never forgot how to fish, and after four years and four major label releases with Goose Creek Symphony (three on Capitol Records, one on Columbia) Gearheart decided to put down his Martin acoustic and pick up his fly rod.

Gearheart and his Symphony re-emerged in 1990. They released a new album, OSO Special, (named after a fishing fly) on the independent folk label June Appal. Capitol Records released a compilation disc, Higher on the Mountain, the same year.

Since that time, things have come full circle. Charlie's creation is more vital than ever, while Paul continues to lend his invaluable contribution as songwriter, co-arranger, harmony singer and guitar slinger. With a talented new line-up of musicians joining the two original "Creekers," the music has achieved new heights. The recently-penned tune "The Goose is Loose" reflects his revitalized energy and spirit, while the song "The Corn Won't Grow So Rock and Roll" demonstrates Charlie's vision even 20-some years ago.

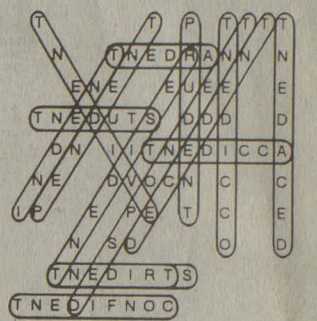

"People are talking about our problems, Some people talk but they don't know What'll they do when there really is a problem

20 years from now when the corn won't grow?" (From Welcome To Goose Creek/ Capitol Records 1971)

Goose Creek Symphony performances are populated by both the band's long standing, devoted fans as well as the rapidly growing masses of new Goose Creek devotees. At a recent gig near the University of Tennessee in Knoxville, Tn., a wildly enthusiastic young new fan expressed to Charlie the powerful and widespread appeal of Goose Creek. "You guys are awesome...more awesome than Metallica, and I've seen them four times!"

It seems quality songwriting and inspired performance can still flourish after 25 years, countless musical trends...and even a fishing trip or two.

"That's right, J. R.," I said. "And if all that happens, you might get a good son like we got. And someday he'll tear your heart apart like you're doing to us now by bringing that package into the house."

J. R. never replied. He just picked up his cap and gown and started toward his room.

"What are you going to do with those things?" Jimmie asked.

"I'm going to hide them before one of you does something stupid and hurts yourself. You're taking this thing way too seriously," J. R. answered.

The following afternoon, J. R. brought some graduation invitations, wrapped in plain brown paper, into the house and quietly laid them on the coffee table. "Let's talk about this," he said maturely.

Music winner

South Floyd students Jamie Hall and Earl Wright won first place with the song, "Black Gold of Kentucky," written by Debbie Derosett, a teacher from Prestonsburg Elementary. Also taking second place honors for South Floyd was Carl Bentley, who composed and performed "Coal Mining Blues."

South Floyd High coal celebration

by Willie Elliott

Coal has played a big part in the lives of the citizens of Left Beaver and will continue to influence our lives one way or another for years to come. With a grant from the CEDAR corporation, the faculty and students at South Floyd High School did a variety of activities to learn about coal, its history in the area, and the economic impact it had on our communities. We wanted to learn all these things about coal, but we also wanted to learn about the culture that came with the various periods of mining.

The various classes began to find out about coal. Lora Bolen and her Kentucky Studies Class took a trip to Kentucky Power Company's generating plant at Louisa. These students learned a great deal about how coal is converted to electricity and sent to our various homes and businesses. The students also learned about the economics of coal and electricity. After returning from the trip, the class used the information for class discussion and writing. They also used some of the material from the trip to decorate classroom doors using coal as a theme.

The music department, under the direction of Dennis Bartley, was given the task of providing "mining" music for our celebration of coal. The students discussed various types of songs that are associated with coal. Carl Bentley and Doug Tackett composed original songs which they played for us. Amanda Compton sang "Coal Miner's Daughter" and Oscar Little and Carl Bentley sang traditional songs that told of the hardships faced by miners.

Billie Jo Stegall and the art department provided many displays about mining. They created a portal complete with a car filled with coal and a safety inspector looking over the miner and his "buggy." To impress viewers that coal is a fossil fuel, they created a giant dinosaur and plant display. Some of the students painted replicas of old familiar mining tipples. Others chose to do pen and ink or charcoal illustrations about coal.

There was competition between the classes for displays. The junior class turned one hallway into a simulated mine. Using garbage bags and a great deal of imagination, the students created a mine that students had to pass through daily. The freshman class decorated the upper floor of the school with drawings, posters, and other displays on many facets of mining.

One group of students under the direction of Bud Reynolds took a look at the surface mining practices and reclamation process in this area. They were able to tour a large-scale operation at Burdine in Letcher County and do some filming. With the help of Steven Blevins, they were able to visit and do some filming at the site reclaimed by Costain Coal at Ivel. These students have begun to realize that surface mining can take place without the destruction of the environment.

Mrs. Doris Osborne and her political science class looked at some of the legal aspects of mining. They brought in various speakers from MSHAA to talk about safety in the mines. They did charts and posters to display their finding.

Some of the students in the American Studies Class did a video in which they traced the history of Wheelwright from a small rural community to a model mining camp and back to its present status. Other members of the class prepared a skit in which they compared mining in the old days to mining in modern times.

All these activities were capped off by a dinner theater. Local miners, young and old, were invited to join in our celebration. The dinner theater was a wonderful success. The students, using some dramatic license, presented skits based on their interviews with the older miners in the

First place

Danielle Tackett won first place with her poem, "Papaw Lee," written in honor of her great-grandfather, a coal miner.

Technology winner

A documentary entitled, "The Birth and Death of a Company Town," won second place at the Cedar Coal Fair. Students involved in the project included Sharlonda Sammons, Sarah Slone, Tiffany Compton and Kyle Akers.

East Ky. Stars 4-H Club off to a shooting start

The club meets once a month at the Floyd County Extension office, usually on the 4th Tuesday of the month.

Elections were held earlier this year, and the officers are Eric Volk, president; Becky Collins, vice president; Nathan Cozort, secretary; and Erin Kiser, project chairperson.

Other members include: Mary Harpole, Rachel Collins, Todd Volk, Seth Collins, Adam Cozort, Aaron Collins, Aaron Cozort, Wes Conrotto, Miranda Lemaster, Jill Conrotto, Leanne Lemaster, Doug Volk, Lindsey Conrotto, Tabitha Nunemaker, Caleb Perkins, Joshua Perkins, and Westley Helton.

KMEA district band

Tiffani Rivera and Jessica Meade, both seventh graders at McDowell Elementary were selected to participate in the 1995 All District Junior High Band. Tiffani plays the clarinet and Jessica plays the Bass Clarinet. Last year, two eighth grade students made the All District Band from McDowell. The KMEA (Kentucky Music Educators Association) District 9 Junior High Band consists of students in grades 7 and 8 from eleven counties in the area. Twenty-four schools were represented last year. The concert for this year will be held at the Carriage House in Paintsville on May 13.

AMS Y Club participates in Kuna conference

On March 2-4, 46 Adams Middle School students attended the Kentucky United Nations Assembly in Louisville.

This delegation represented 3 countries; Sri Lanka, Kuwait, and Fiji. The students wrote a proposal for international law for each country. Two authors presented each proposal to a committee and it passed there again before the appropriate council and then it passed before the General Assembly.

Adams Middle had one proposal that was presented before the International Court. This was a great accomplishment.

During the Festival of Nations delegates dressed in native attire, visited other delegations and shared their knowledge with other delegations.

Greta Hicks received an outstanding delegate award. Out of 725 delegates at the 1995 KUNA Conference, only 10 delegates were chosen.

Science at work

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held for the renovation of a building which will house Mountain Christian Academy's new science laboratory. Pictured are MCA board members Bobby Rowe, Judy Yunker, school dean Parker Tiller, chairman Terry Dotson, Jim Vanover, Teresa Leslie and Randy Polk.

Prevention

Local 4-H agent Chuck Stamper recently made a presentation on HIV/AIDS at Adams Middle School. The lecture was sponsored by the AMS Youth Service Center.

area. With some pre-arrangement, they involved these guests into the skit. The guests—Raymond Bradbury, Burl Scott, Woodrow Dye, Luther Hall, Talt Johnson, James Paige, and others added so much to the program that the reaction was wonderful. Nostalgia filled the room as these guests reminisced about their experiences in the mines and discussed the photographs of old familiar places which the students had used as part of the decor for the evening. Those in attendance, from Dr. Towler, superintendent of Floyd County Schools, to Commissioner of Mines, Burl Scott, seemed to enjoy the experience. The event was topped off with a delicious meal prepared by Gwinetta Mitchell and her catering class. The guests also enjoyed the music prepared by the music department.

Our principal, Mr. Al Osborne, was impressed with the student presentation and had the students present the program to the whole student body at South Floyd. Again the group received an enthusiastic response.

Several faculty members and a large number of students took part in this celebration of coal, but we must give special recognition to Delores Woody who kept the project going and did all the necessary work to make sure the program came off just as it did.

Forensics at AMS

by Kelly Wells

Forensics is a great and wonderful program that many students participate in. If you do not know what forensics is, I'll tell you. Forensics is just another name for speech and drama.

The AMS forensic club is coached by Mrs. Dye, Ms. Newsome, and Mrs. Brewer. There are poetry, prose, solo-acting, duo-acting, improvisational duo, storytelling, interpretation of literature, public speaking, radio broadcasting, demonstration, extemporaneous speaking, and oratorical declamation.

This year the Forensics Team at Adams has accomplished many awards in competitions. At the first county meet, Eddie Gardner received second place in poetry. At the district invitational meet, Kelly Wells received first place in prose, Andrea Fleming, fourth place, and Ty Martin, fifth.

In poetry Sera Sammons finished third, Andrea Fleming, fourth, and Kelly Wells, fifth.

The district meet was hosted by Johnson Central High School.

The regional meet, hosted by Johnson Central High School, was designed to see who qualified to participate in the state meet at Bowling Green. The qualifiers were Andrea Fleming, Kelly Wells, and Ty Martin in Prose. In poetry Sera Sammons, Kelly Wells, and Andrea Fleming qualified. Greta Hicks and Stephanie Hackworth qualified in interpretation of literature.

At the state meet, Greta Hicks advanced to the semi-finals in interpretation of Literature, and Kelly Wells advanced to the semi-finals in Prose.

A county meet will be held at AMS on April 29.
