Court post to be a family affair

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

It appears that the District Three Magistrate's seat will remain in the family with Thursday's appointment of the wife of the magistrate that resigned.

Governor Brereton Jones has appointed Marietta Adams, wife of Tommy Neil Adams, to fill her husband's post on the Floyd Fiscal Court.

Mrs. Adams said Thursday, though, that she won't run for the seat in November.

"You know Tommy is in bad health and I want to take it over and try to do the best I can until they have time to elect someone else," Mrs. Adams said.

When asked if she would seek the office in the November election, Mrs.

Adams replied, "I have no intention whatsoever to do that."

Mrs. Adams, a hairdresser, is not sure if she will be able to perform the necessary duties to take her place as magistrate at today's (Friday) fiscal court meeting. She said Thursday morning that she had not been notified by the governor's office that she was appointed to the post.

Tommy Adams resigned his seat effective Monday citing health reasons. He said he would continue to be active in county government as a private citizen.

Because Adams resigned his seat with less than 134 days before the May primary election, the executive committees of the Democratic and Republican parties will choose candidates to run for the seat in the November general election.

There are approximately four years remaining in Adams' term.

Infant's death to be probed by police

Kentucky State Police are investigating the death of an 8-month-old McDowell infant Wednesday.

Andrew B. Johnson, son of Margarita Dye, fell into a 24-quart cooker containing mop water, police reports indicate. The mother took the baby to McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital's emergency room around 6:10 p.m., the report shows.

The infant was listed in critical condition and flown to the University of Kentucky Medical Center in Lexington around 7:10 p.m. The baby died at 8:45 Thursday morning.

An autopsy performed by the Fayette County Coroner's office listed the official cause of death as "asphyxia due to drowning," a spokesperson for the coroner's office said Thursday afternoon.

An investigation into the death by state police trooper Les Stapleton and detective Leslie Gannon is continuing.

Fiscal court to dial up 911 issue at meet

Floyd County's fiscal court meets today (Friday) and the hot topic of discussion is expected to be the status of the E-911 service.

Representatives from South Central Bell, the Big Sandy Area Development District, the Floyd County Sheriff's Department, the Kentucky State Police and the county government are expected to offer information about the emergency service system.

Almost $800,000 has been collected for the service since a monthly surcharge was added to the bills of telephone customers in 1990. An eighty-nine cents per month charge is being collected for E-911.

There are differing opinions from all sides concerning the delays in getting the system implemented in the county. Officials have been working on getting the system in place for about five years.

Today's court meeting is expected to answer questions raised about the issue, such as when will it be operational; what agency will provide dispatching services; what will be the monthly operating costs for the system; and when will an oversight board will be appointed.

Floyd Countians apparently are becoming impatient with the delay in getting the system operational in the county. Citizens have questioned the fiscal court about the issue for the past several months.

The meeting will begin at 10 a.m. and will be held in the conference room of the courthouse annex.

Lawsuit likely to challenge nepotism ban

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

It looks like Floyd County will once again be in the spotlight concerning education reform with a Prestonsburg attorney taking on the fight for parents' rights to serve on school councils.

Attorney Larry Brown will represent council members Clarence Risner and Ira Joe Tussey, who have been deemed ineligible because their wives are employed in the school district.

Risner was elected to the Prestonsburg High School council and Tussey serves on the Adams Middle School council. Both men's wives are employed at Prestonsburg Elementary.

Brown said Thursday that he is in the process of preparing a petition to file in Floyd Circuit Court which claims that the law prohibiting Tussey and Risner from serving on the councils is unconstitutional. In 1994, state legislators amended a portion of the education reform act to make parent representatives on council ineligible if they have a relative employed in the school district.

Before the 1994 amendment, parent representatives were ineligible if they had a relative employed at the school where they were seeking to serve on a council.

Brown feels the law discriminates against parents.

"Why single out parent representatives?" Brown asked. "Parents do not have anybody's interests in hand besides the students. The potential for conflict doesn't even exist."

Brown decided to get involved in the case after Risner, who attends church with the attorney, began discussing the issue, Brown said.

"I told Clarence that I'd look into it," Brown said. "I'm getting my ducks in a row and I should have it ready to file by the first of next week."

There are distinct differences between the parents' predicament and a recent court decision relating to nepotism issues concerning school board members, Brown said.

On that issue, the state Supreme Court upheld a state law that prohibited board members from serving if they had a relative employed in the district, Brown said, because the judges felt state lawmakers had broad authority to prevent nepotism in school systems.

Two judges dissented from that opinion, Brown said, which could be an indication that they may take a look at this issue if it comes before them.

"The state might listen to (the issue) again," Brown said.

Education Commissioner Thomas Boyesen has recommended to the Floyd Board of Education that the two men be ousted from their positions.

At the January 16 meeting, board members tabled the issue until board attorney Phil Damron could address some of the issues raised at Risner's and Tussey's ouster hearing.

Tussey's wife was hired after he was elected to the council and Risner was not informed of the amendment to the law when he sought his position on the council.

Cutting edge of health care

Prestonsburg Community College's student health clinic is a role model for other community colleges. Dr. Emery Wilson, Dean of College Medicine at the University of Kentucky, said during a ceremony Thursday to mark the clinic's opening.

"It started with a walking track and built to a wellness center," Wilson said.

U.K.'s president, Dr. Charles Wethington Jr., said the clinic would open doors for other community colleges and open doors to other health projects.

The health clinic will be staffed by a physician's assistant, Brent Davis, who will receive support from area physicians, Dr. Roger Jurich, Dr. Steve Roberts, Dr. Larry Leslie, Dr. E.J. Horn and Dr. Rodney Handsoe.

Physicians at the University of Kentucky can also "interact directly with patients" at the clinic through a telemedicine link-up, Dr. Charles

Good things come in free packages

For the past four months the Wheelwright Fire Department has been the recipient of trailer-truckloads of goods that range from clothes and samples of make-up to building supplies and office furniture.

The latest truckload arrived Thursday morning, said David Boyd, instructor at the fire department who helped unload books and other items off the truck. "We give away all that we can. First come, first serve."

The items are donations from Christian Appalachian Project's program Operation Sharing (OS), based at Hager Hill in Johnson County. The goods come "from different places," said Operation Sharing manager Robert Duncan. "Through the Mormon Church, yard-sale leftovers" and other sources that are local as well as out-of-state.

Operation Sharing shares this donated bounty with other agencies and organizations, such as churches, family resource centers and fire departments. The non-profit groups then distribute the items in their communities. Most agencies and organizations pick up items from the OS warehouse, Duncan said, but "we take the Consortium 'blueprint' may lead to improved test scores

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

A blueprint for teaching math and science, being formulated by a science consortium, could add up to improved test scores for students in Floyd County classrooms.

Dr. Wimberly Royster, coordinator of the Appalachian Rural Systemic Initiative Consortium (ARSI), told area educators Wednesday during a meeting of the Science and Math Coalition that Floyd County is among the 66 Appalachian counties that should benefit from the consortium's future efforts to improve science, math and technology education.

The efforts will focus on student achievement, Royster said. Right now, though, Royster and his group don't know how they will achieve that goal. ARSI is gathering input from educators to prepare a proposal to the National Science Foundation (NSF) by March 31.

If the NSF approves the proposal, the consortium will be awarded a grant for approximately $2 million to implement the plan in grades K thru 14 in the 66 counties.

The funding cannot be used for the purchase of equipment in schools, Royster said.

The consortium is thinking about developing "clusters," which would provide personnel to work with developing curriculum, instruction, and assist with technological services, Royster said.

The consortium could also aid schools in gaining access to the information highway," Royster suggested.

He also discussed professional development of teachers and cooperative learning efforts. He commented that area educators would have a constant resource through these programs.

A teacher from Prestonsburg High School expressed enthusiasm about the availability of resources and having access to computers. She commented that, even though the school does have a computer lab, she did not have access to computers because they are in use by students.

Before the meeting concluded, Gary Frazier, deputy superintendent of instruction for Floyd County Schools, told Royster that he didn't want him "to leave with the wrong impression" that Floyd County schools are not equipped with computers.

"They are," Frazier said. "Each school has a common area teachers can use for their classes...Every math classroom does have computers. We're pushing science, but we're certainly not where we want to be."

Royster leaned back in his chair and quietly commented, "The scores certainly showed that."

When asked if a cluster would be formed in Floyd County, Royster would not make a commitment, but did indicate the consortium was "thinking about it." The group must first "set up criteria so that everything's fair," he explained.

Trooper says transfer was against rules

A Kentucky State Police trooper from Floyd County filed suit Thursday in Floyd Circuit Court, alleging his transfer from the Pikeville post to Bowling Green was improper.

In his complaint, trooper David Watkins names Kentucky's Department of State Police, Justice Cabinet as defendant. Watkins accused the department of contradicting KSP personnel policies when he was transferred November 28 to Bowling Green.

Watkins claims the transfer was "done as a disciplinary measure" that was inconsistent with state laws and administrative regulations.

The suit does not specify the causes for the alleged disciplinary action.

The civil action seeks an injunction preventing the transfer pending the outcome of the case; compensatory and punitive damages and a jury trial.

No hearing date has been set.

A civil suit complaint lists only the plaintiff's cause of action.

State Rep.-elect Donnie Newsome, D-Dema, listened to a presentation during a three-day orientation program for incoming legislators last week. Newsome was recently elected to the 92nd House District, which includes Floyd, Knott, Letcher and Perry counties. The General Assembly will convene its 1995 Organizational Session January 3.

Record road fund diversion jeopardizes economic opportunity

If you don't think the state's highways are being widened or otherwise improved as fast as they should be, you may be right.

One of the primary reasons is the Jones administration's use of Road Fund revenues for what are traditionally General Fund programs, according to Kentuckians for Better Transportation. The group has asked the Governor to use the special session to restore diverted funds.

In a letter this week to Governor Jones, KBT President Jack Fish noted that during the four years of the Jones administration "more than $150 million will have been diverted from the Road Fund to the General Fund—a record level of diversion that exceeds any previous administration." Some $92 million of the total is for the current biennium.

"Because transportation is such a critical factor in economic development we think it is clearly in the best interest of a majority of Kentuckians and the future economy of the state to restore road funds before new programs are funded or tax cuts are considered," said Fish.

AAA offers tips for driving in fog

Motorists should use the same caution when driving in fog as they do when driving in snow, AAA advises.

"Fog curtails visibility and often alters the perception of speed and distance," said AAA's Kathy Gross. She added that motorists should remember that fog density varies greatly from place to place. "Oncoming motorists or those beside and behind you may be unable to see your vehicle clearly," Gross added. For this reason, it's important to follow many of the same tips that apply when driving in snow. These include:

- * Slow down and allow a minimum of four seconds' clear distance ahead of your vehicle.
- * Avoid sudden stops. Use brakes when possible to signal that your car is slowing down.
- * Turn on windshield wipers and the defroster. These may help clear moisture from the windshield.
- * Use your low beam headlights to minimize reflected glare and help other drivers see you.
- * Don't pass other vehicles or change lanes unnecessarily.
- * Use the right edge of the road as a guide, not the center line.
- * If visibility is poor, exit the roadway if possible. Otherwise, signal your intention to leave the road, then slowly and carefully pull off the road as far as possible.

Most fog-related accidents occur during morning rush hours (6-9 a.m.) and involve motorists who are familiar with the road but drive too fast for conditions.

goods in tractor-trailers where there is room large enough to store items."

That's where the Wheelwright Fire Department comes in. Since October, the fire department has received a truckload a month. "It varies from load to load," Boyd said of the items received. "One load was interior doors and particle board."

Other loads have contained books, cookies, clothes, household items, Christmas paper, and office furniture—"chairs, desks, file cabinets," said Boyd. "Some of the furniture needs some work. Most are in good shape."

A November load consisted of 1,400 fifty-pound bags of seed corn, which was quickly snapped up by the public. Another load contained 300 gallons of paint, most of which the department distributed to two churches. The books, cookies, and some office furniture were given to Otter Creek Correctional Center. "The prison helps us out by bringing workers out," Boyd said. "The inmates help unload the trucks."

"We assist the fire department with heavy lifting and delivery of goods to warehouses whenever they call," said Michael Cooper, deputy warden at the correctional center.

In recent months, center inmates have also renovated the fire station. "They have painted the building, added restrooms, and built upstairs training quarters and just general upkeep," Cooper said. "We have a good working relationship with the fire department..."

One item that hasn't moved quite so well is the department's stock of Avon makeup. "We have 300 to 400 boxes of Avon samples in boxes," Boyd said. "The boxes contain lipstick, powder, rouge and nail polish."

The department hasn't had to advertise its giveaways. "Most people learn about it by word of mouth," the instructor said. "Most times we get people here at city hall waiting to get things when we unload the truck. When people see the truck sitting here, they phone and say, 'What have you got?'"

"It's all free," he added. "Anybody can come up here and get stuff..."

Boyd suggested that those interested in picking up items "stop by. Don't tie the phone lines up."

Wethington said.

The clinic will also be staffed by Elizabeth Griffith, RN, and Betty Hunt, a medical assistant.

Full-time students at Prestonsburg Community College pay a health fee of $82.50 per semester. The fee covers unlimited visits to the clinic; physical exams needed to complete required forms; some medications, such as over-the-counter decongestants; and laboratory and X-ray services ordered by the clinic staff.

The opening of the student health clinic at Prestonsburg Community College is just one more step in the college's journey toward a regional center for health education and wellness, Dr. Deborah Floyd, PCC president, said during the ceremonies.

Floyd said the college will also house a dental hygiene program. Renovations on the Johnson Building to accommodate the program will begin in February. Class work in the dental program will begin this fall.

GEICO suggests caution behind the wheel during Winter

Many people dread winter driving. The prospect of taking their cars out on snow-covered streets fills them with terror.

To be sure, winter driving can be more dangerous than driving at other times of the year, but you don't have to hole up indoors just because a few flakes have fallen.

"Preparation and caution are essential," said Paul Cheek, vice president of the claim department for Government Employees Insurance Company (GEICO), "but if you're careful, a little snow doesn't have to be cause for alarm."

Cheek suggested the following tips to make winter driving safer.

- * Clear the ice and snow from all car windows and lights. Good visibility is essential for a safe ride.
- * If you think road conditions may be bad, allow extra time for your trip. If you're not in a rush, you can concentrate on getting there safely.
- * Reduce your speed well in advance of an anticipated stop, especially in bad weather. If your car has anti-lock brakes, apply steady pressure. If it has conventional brakes, pump them gently; slamming on these brakes will lock up your wheels and cause you to skid.
- * If your car starts to slide, resist the urge to stomp on the brake. Take your foot off the accelerator and steer in the direction of the skid to regain control.

Out with the new, remember the old

by Scott Perry

Governor Brereton Jones used most of his time for delivering his State of the Commonwealth Address this week to deliver a pep talk on proposals to build three costly and questionable projects in Kentucky's Golden Triangle.

It may have been no coincidence that the governor gave just a few minutes of his time to ideas for tax cuts, considering some major legislative players...including our own Greg Stumbo...aren't sold on the tax cut deal.

Normally, we wouldn't hesitate to jump on the tax-cut bandwagon. But the critics of this plan are right when they say the deal is ill-conceived and, gasp, politically motivated.

Kentucky's tax structure needs a total overhaul, not a tune-up.

And, as we noted before, the tax cuts on the table now aren't likely to make much of an impact on the average Kentuckian's pocketbook.

They could, however, pose big problems for future funding of education reform and standard state services.

At the risk of being labeled a hypocrite, we'll suggest, too, that financing convention centers in Louisville and Northern Kentucky with taxpayer dollars is just as ill-conceived as the proposed tax cuts.

Sure, our area got some big bucks last time around to renovate our state parks, but we couldn't have done it without the state's help.

Louisville and Northern Kentucky, two corners in the state's Golden Triangle, are affluent and prospering.

Let their local taxpayers finance those projects.

Use the money earmarked for them to fully fund education and fully fund the return of coal severance revenues to coal counties.

Those were promises, you know, that the state has yet to live up to.

Our leaders shouldn't make new promises until the old ones are kept.

Reader wants solutions

Editor:
Voters of Kentucky of all ages — senior citizens, mothers, fathers, grandparents, anyone who wants to form a group to work out solutions to problems in Floyd County — can meet with me Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday at Wal-Mart or at Big Lots, Wednesday.

We can rent a place to meet and meet about twice a month in Prestonsburg concerning all our problems. We can get together and work on people who are violating our rights and causing our problems. We can help clean up Kentucky and make it like it used to be.

We'll have proof of our complaints and things that can be done about the solutions. Now, I know that most everyone has a problem. One of my friends, she is dear to me, said she was not interested in other people's problems. So, I just hung up my telephone.

I've got grandchildren and great-grandchildren I'm interested in.

Collects winter coats for needy children

Editor:
The Kentucky Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranch, located in Gilbertsville, has spent the past twenty years helping needy children by providing a free summer camp experience for thousands of children throughout the state.

Now that the cold weather has arrived, I want to continue our program of helping needy children and adults. I have started a coat drive for the needy. If you have any winter coats you would like to donate to the Ranch for distribution to the needy, please bring them to the Kentucky Sheriffs' Boys and Girls Ranch at Gilbertsville or mail them to us at P.O. Box 57, Gilbertsville, KY. 42044. We are in the office from 7:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. We have set up a "shop" in our new gym for distribution of the coats to the needy.

Many of the children we take care of during the summer arrive at camp without proper clothing and other personal items to see them through the week. When this occurs, we provide the necessary items whether it's shoes, socks, underwear, play clothes, bathing suits, etc. Will you help us to continue to provide for the needs of children and adults by donating your coats to us? I will do my best to see that they are distributed to anyone needing a winter coat.

Thank you for your help with this project. Many deserving people will appreciate your efforts.

Expresses concern over BaP air pollution

Editor:
I am concerned about the air pollution and levels of BaP (benzo(a)pyrene), a very potent carcinogen (cancer causing agent) that may be increasingly endangering us all in the surrounding communities.

I notice that a lot of residents around the county and nearby, burn refuse in the open, thereby polluting the air we breathe.

BaP is a very powerful carcinogen, it can cause cancer. It results from such things as (1) forest fires—which we seem to have enough of; (2) refuse burning—which we have too much of; (3) coal burning—which is still widely used; (4) motorcycle emissions and (5) residential fireplaces.

We also get some BaP from (6) car emissions that use gas or diesel fuel; (7) oil-fired residential furnaces; and (8) coal-fired electric power plants.

It behooves us all to take more responsibility in maintaining a clean environment in which we can survive. Our world is getting so crowded and overpopulated and what we do affects our neighbors a lot, and we should not trash the air, water, land in which we all live, or we will all pay for it, and pay dearly with our health and our lives, as well as that of future generations.

Handshake no deal in verbal agreement

Editor:
On January 14 of this year, my husband and I took our family to Martin, a place called Arkansas Creek to look at a house and trailer that were for rent.

The people seemed nice and told us we could rent both places. We then shook hands and had the verbal agreement sealed. We thought!

Now, I have always thought a handshake was a done deal down south, not so! We came home and a couple of hours later I called, what I thought were our new landlords, back to find out where to change the electric, etc. She told me and we hung up.

What others are saying

The following articles are excerpts of editorials taken from Kentucky newspapers

Block that cut

Joe Clarke and Greg Stumbo don't often agree, but they both believe that the special tax-cutting session of the Kentucky General Assembly is a risky business.

And they're right.

Rep. Clarke, the former House speaker, grumbles that the session was "conceived out of panic." Rep. Stumbo, the power behind the current speaker, worries that cutting taxes now will make it more difficult to enact comprehensive tax reform farther down the road.

Real tax reform—aimed both at fairness and at economic development—probably would require cutting some taxes while raising others. Ideally, it would be "revenue neutral," meaning that the state would raise the same amount of revenue, even if the tax burden were shifted somewhat among various groups and taxpayers.

Real reform certainly wouldn't completely exempt a large and growing segment of the economy, pension income, as Gov. Jones' plan does.

By contrast, the Governor's other tax proposal—phasing out Kentucky's inheritance tax—has a lot of merit. The current tax is the highest in the country, and it is especially burdensome on relatively small estates. Under Gov. Jones' proposal, state taxes would be levied only on a few large estates—500 to 600 a year, compared with 28,000 now.

But even this element of the Governor's plan should be deferred. It belongs in a larger package of tax changes, where it could provide needed political balance to other steps that are just as needed but might not be as popular.

Tax reform, after all, is a political exercise. It's politics in the highest sense: the use of the power of government (in this case, the power to tax) to advance public goals and to meet public needs.

The political motivation behind the special session is narrow and short-term. It's a reaction to the nationwide Republican victory in last November's election. Cutting taxes has come to be seen as necessary for political survival. It has little or nothing to do with what's best for Kentucky in the long run.

We believe the General Assembly should go ahead and approve the bond issues Gov. Jones has proposed for convention center projects in Louisville and Northern Kentucky and for a history center in Frankfort. These are good projects, and should have been approved last year.

But the tax cuts should wait. —The Courier-Journal

Better, not perfect

The good news from last fall's legislative elections is that a new ethics law has reduced the role of political action committees in financing campaigns. The bad news is that loopholes in the law keep it from being more effective.

Passed in 1993, the ethics law says legislative candidates cannot accept more than $5,000 or 35 percent of their total money contributed to their campaign—whichever is greater—from PACs in any given election. New campaign finance rules also reduced the limit for individual campaign contributions to $500.

Together, the two changes caused a significant reduction in the amount of PAC money going to candidates in 1994. But the law's effect could have been greater were it not for a few loopholes.

For instance, if candidates exceed the 35 percent limit, they are allowed to put their own money into the campaign after the election to make the percentages meet the requirements of the law.

In addition, candidates who face opposition in the primary but not in the general election can exceed the 35 percent limit in the primary race and make up the difference with money raised for their unopposed fall campaign.

Finally, candidates who have no opposition can stockpile PAC money for future races and not have it count against the 35 percent limit when someone does oppose them.

Each of these loopholes was used during the '94 elections. Each of them undermines the spirit of the law.

The intent of this law was to reduce the disparity in fund raising between incumbents who are favored by PACs and their challengers who have more difficulty raising campaign money. The law isn't going to level the playing field because PACs still can contribute to campaigns and they still will give most of their money to incumbents.

But the law is working to bring a little more fairness to legislative races. It could work even better if the loopholes were plugged. —The Lexington Herald-Leader

Shouldn't officials pay their share?

What's all this fuss about Johnson County requiring officials, employees and candidates for office to pay their fair share and set an example for others? Apparently, some people have a big problem with it and want it thrown out of the ethics ordinance.

We'll be the first to welcome a lively debate on any issue. That's why we were glad to see Johnson County Commissioners Mike Castle and Doug Branham express their views last Thursday on the county ethics code's provision regarding county debts. It was obvious they have a problem with it, and it's about time that fiscal court members start speaking out and stop rubber stamping everything.

We are puzzled, however, at their stand on the debt issue. If their concerns were with the legality of the provision, we would be inclined to agree with them. Even County Attorney Scott Preston has said that part of the ordinance is probably illegal and unenforceable.

The problem we're afraid, is not with requiring these people to pay their property taxes and water bills; it's with making them pay their garbage bills. Yes, somehow the controversial issue of solid waste has crept into the county's ethics code. If "solid waste bills" had been deleted from the ordinance, we probably wouldn't be discussing the issue right now.

Some people have interpreted this to mean that the county is trying to collect Apple Valley Sanitation's outstanding bills. That's far from the case. It is simply telling people that garbage collection is mandatory in this county, and anybody who is in office or wants to be elected to office must follow the laws of the county.

What amazes us most about this whole issue, however, is that some commissioners have received phone calls from people opposed to requiring county officials, employees and candidates to pay their fair share. We always thought that was the way it should be. It's the ethical and moral thing to do.

Maybe that's the problem: Some people don't have a clue as to what an ethics code is all about—doing what is ethically and morally right. —The Paintsville Herald

Did the Vikings find North America first?

Nova considers the evidence on KET

Around the year 1000, Vikings set sail from Greenland, at the edge of European civilization, in search of a rumored land of plentiful game and timber.

What they found was North America, yet their attempts to settle this new world did not succeed, and even their thriving communities in Greenland eventually withered and died.

Nova's "Vikings in America," airing at 8 p.m. on KET Tuesday, January 24, investigates the myth and reality of the first known Europeans to reach North America.

The program retraces the route of the Vikings—shipbuilders, sailors, and fighters—as they coursed along coastal Canada and visits their only confirmed settlement in the New World. According to Norse sagas, around the year 1000, Leif Eriksson's voyage described landmarks that can be identified as the east coast of Baffin Island, the wooded coast of central Labrador, and Vinland, a "wineland" where wild grapes grew and where the Vikings settled.

In 1960, archaeologists identified a small village, L'Anse aux Meadows, in northern Newfoundland, as Vinland and uncovered the foundations of a tiny community built in the Norse style. At first the Vikings traded with the native people but were eventually driven out and by the time Columbus sailed, the Vikings in America survived only in legend.

Nova is produced by WGBH/Boston with grants from Merck and Lockheed and is closed-captioned for the hearing-impaired. "Vikings in America" was coproduced by WGBH and Spofford Films.

provision, and he was joined last Thursday by Castle in again opposing the measure. Castle, who reluctantly voted in favor of the ordinance in December, said the court didn't have the right to require candidates to pay their bills and that the county shouldn't be helping Apple Valley Sanitation and Paintsville Utilities collect their bills.

In the first round of voting on the code Thursday, the ordinance deadlocked with Branham and Castle voting no and Meade and Commissioner Nancy Cantrell voting yes.

Meade and Preston warned the court that if a code was not adopted during the meeting, there was no way to approve another one before January 23, which is the final day counties and cities have to get their ordinances to state officials for approval.

Incidentally, none of the commissioners objected to changes ordered by the state Department of Local Government, which refused to accept the county's original ethics code because it omitted several items. Among the changes was a requirement for all officials and candidates for office to file annual financial disclosure statements identifying all sources of income over $5,000. —The Paintsville Herald

About five minutes later the man called back and said, "We decided you can't have the rentals as we have decided to go to Florida.

So, I had my friend call and inquire about the house. The lady told her she could see the property the next day at 4 p.m. But, they were really looking for renters on H.U.D.

Now, could this be the problem? My husband works, my son-in-law-to-be works and both make very good money. We don't drink and do not party.

Are we being shown prejudice because we work or what's the deal? We have excellent references and need to move in that direction because of my husband's work.

Now, if this is southern hospitality, count me out. But, if there is a good southern person out there who has two trailers or a house for rent in that vicinity or near, please give us a call.

Citizens recognized for town improvements

Editor:

I would like to recognize some special people for improvements in our town.

In 1990, Allen council member Anna Bentley made the motion that the town be decorated for Christmas. She was furnished with wreaths, ribbons and bows. With the help of her children and grandchildren, the town was decorated.

Luttrall Bentley, a resident of Floyd County for 74 years, stated that he had never seen the town decorated for any occasion, he said it was nice to see.

In 1992, at a town meeting, a motion was made that the town also have Christmas lights at Christmas. With the help of Allen water commissioner and town clerk Bill Parsons, the town was beautifully decorated on every telephone pole in the city limits.

In 1994, Mayor Chris Waugh agreed that motion made for welcome to city signs, kids at play signs, and a flag waving over the town meeting building was needed.

We now also have a town flower box, that anyone in town is welcome to put flowers in if they choose, plus park benches.

Thank to these people I think our town is nicer to look at. To some, this may not sound exciting or important, but for myself, it is deeply appreciated.

Johnson County government could shut down

A virtual shutdown of county government is possible unless state officials ease up and let the county use 1993 property assessments for 1994 tax bills, Johnson County Judge-Executive Hobert Meade said.

Meade said a state-approved plan to hire local appraisers to help PVA Custer Picklesimer assess property has fizzled, with price quotes coming in considerably higher than estimates.

"We're back to square one again," Meade said. "We've got to go to Frankfort again and sit down with (Deputy Revenue Secretary) Rene True and try to get them to accept the '93 rolls. If we don't, I don't see anywhere in the near future of getting our taxes out."

No tax bills mean no revenue, and that means no money to operate the county, Meade said.

"Soon—and I do mean very soon—this county will be shut down," Meade said. "Literally everything to do with general funds, everybody receiving general fund payroll, except the treasurer and me, will all be laid off. And I'll probably be shutting my office down and turning the electricity off if they don't agree to accept the '93 rolls." —The Paintsville Herald

Court reluctantly OKs new ethics ordinance

Johnson County came close to losing all of its state funding last Thursday when the fiscal court deadlocked on, then changed its mind and finally approved a revised ethics code.

The unexpected turn of events includes two commissioners changing the vote they cast on the county's initial ethics code in December and vowing to change the ordinance itself in the near future.

During the court's regular meeting last Thursday, Commissioners Mike Castle and Doug Branham at first voted not to adopt the amended code, saying they were not pleased with a provision concerning county debts. The provision requires elected officials, county employees and candidates for county office to keep current their property tax, water and garbage bills.

Branham voted against the county's initials ethics code adopted in December because of the Humane Society meeting denied

Paintsville City Council members have said no to a request by the Paintsville Humane Society for a closed door session of the two groups.

Sue Sherman, president of the local Humane Society, contacted City Clerk Virgie Castle Monday to arrange a meeting with council for Tuesday night at 7 p.m., apparently to discuss finances at the Paintsville-Johnson County Animal Shelter. The proposed meeting fell through, however, when a majority of council members rejected Sherman's request that the session be closed to the public.

State law requires that most meetings of government bodies such as the city council be open to the public. Such groups can meet in closed session only to discuss personnel, litigation and property acquisition. —The Paintsville Herald

Sheriff filed late, too

If the state proceeds with lawsuits to remove Martin County Judge-Executive Kelly Callahan for incorrectly filing his performance bond, the judge just might have some good company. Martin County Sheriff Darriel Young also filed his performance bond late—more than a year past the January 3, 1994 deadline.

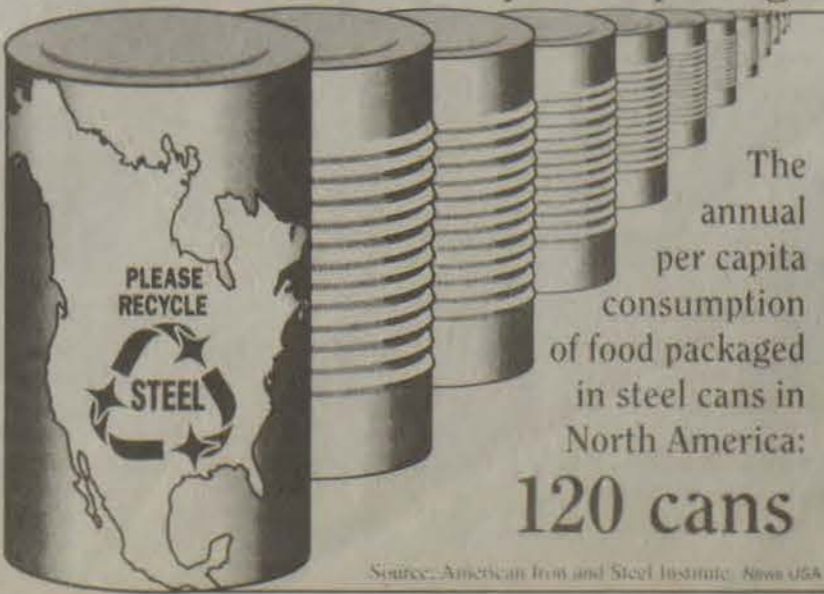

Callahan said Tuesday that the county court clerk's and the county jailer's bonds were approved at the January 3, 1994 meeting of Martin County Fiscal Court, but the sheriff's performance bond was not.

More than half of the state's judge-executives either filed performance bonds (which insures a public official will legally discharge the duties of his/her office) after the deadline or filed them in the wrong office. County judges must post the bonds in the circuit court clerk's office while the sheriff and other county officers must file with the county court clerk (after their bonds are approved by the judge-executive).

Commonwealth's Attorney Anna Melvin has requested from Callahan all information regarding where and when he filed his bond. She said last week, though she will follow the law, she will "wait and see" whether or not the state legislature or the U.S. Supreme Court will settle the controversy.

In the meantime, Sheriff Young said he will continue to do his job and not worry about the technicality. —Mountain Citizen

Words of life

Rev. Raymond E. Snider Jr.
Pastor at Community United Methodist Church

One of our church's youth recently asked me this question: "What are the differences between the various denominations? Why all the different churches?" I started to give him the answers you might expect, preparing to recount the various pet doctrines and practices we each hold to keep our denominational walls intact. I thought of the different views regarding baptism and communion I could share with him. I mused the possibility of telling him about our varied thoughts on the subjects of salvation, backsliding, and predestination. I considered enlightening his young mind on the widely divergent styles of music and worship practiced in our many churches in the county. I thought of telling him about the different types of church government ranging from congregational to episcopal. I started to give the young man only a litany of our many differences, which of course was, at least on the surface, the substance of his question.

Then something (actually I believe it was the Holy Spirit) urged me to begin my answer to his question about our differences in the churches by pointing him to all the beliefs we hold in common as Christians. We all believe in God—Father, Son and Holy Spirit. We all believe in the Bible—God's Holy Word. We all believe God loves us. And in spite of and because of our sin He sent His Son to die for us on the cross. We all believe that Jesus rose from the dead conquering death, sin, hell and the grave for all who will trust Him as personal Lord and Savior. We all believe in being born again, leaving our sinful selves behind to live as new creations of God's life and love. We all believe in the Holy Spirit—God with us now to help us do God's work. We all believe in the Church, not just a building, but God's people seeking to do God's will. We all believe in love for God which teaches us to love one another.

I am glad the Lord's Spirit urged me to begin my answer to this young man's questions by remembering some of the beliefs we have in common. We need to be thankful for those beliefs and practices which make our churches unique and usable to reach a variety of people in our community. But we must not stress our differences to the point that we teach our children to feel that we are on opposing teams. We must not emphasize our variations so much that we cannot work together for the common goals of glorifying God, reaching the lost and redeeming our society. Our churches are different enough to reach the many people who are out there in the darkness of satan's rule. Our churches are enough alike that we can appreciate each other's strengths, pray for one another's success, and look together for the day of our Lord's coming.

I am committed to ecumenical cooperation—working across denominational and doctrinal lines to do God's work in our community. I am glad we have the Floyd County Ministerial Association where our different churches can have the pastors of the county working together to help the needy, to promote brotherly and sisterly love, and to plan community worship experiences to the glory of our God. We must remember that our Lord Jesus Christ, as recorded in John 17:21, prayed "That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou hast sent me."

We have our differences in our various churches and denominations. But let us not celebrate the differences. Instead, let us serve together our same Lord—Jesus Christ—that His kingdom may come among us. Keep these thoughts in mind as we celebrate Ecumenical Sunday on January 22.

HIPPITY HOPS, DUCKS AND GRANDLUCY

Regardless of what size they come in, what they wear, and where they live, grandmothers are like rare gems—priceless. At least that's the way my sisters and I feel about our GrandLucy.

GrandLucy lives in a nursing home, but the memories of her living with us are what we remember most and best. Our grandmother lived in our home with us, so her presence was always near and dear to us as were her thoughts, beliefs and mannerisms. She slept with us, cooked for us, bought us things, and fought for us whenever she deemed it necessary. However, being of sound mind and frail of body, GrandLucy embodies a spirit that cannot be forgotten, easily or otherwise. For this we are grateful to her because there is a little bit of our grandmother in all of us.

Our memories of GrandLucy came together this past weekend when my sisters came to visit GrandLucy after her recent hospitalization.

"Do you remember Grandmother riding that Hippity Hop down the hallway and falling and cracking her head on the floor?" Amanda laughed.

"Yeah," Melinda added. "And do you remember her chasing Amanda's duck all over the yard? And the amazing thing is that she caught it. What'd she weigh then, two-fifty?"

"Boy, did she ever do some crazy things," our mother, GrandLucy's daughter said.

"You should have been with her when she plowed through the wall and into the dining room at Chick's drive-in," Jenny intoned. "She never batted an eye. Just rolled down the window and said, 'I'd like a tuna on toast with pickles. What do you want, Jen-eye?'"

"Well, you should have been with us when she took out the side of every car parked on Euclid Avenue," Amanda said, laughing. "I said, 'Grandmother, you hit those cars.' She replied, 'No, I didn't, but don't mention it to your mother and dad.'"

"That's nothing," Melinda said. "You should have been with Sara and me when she took us to Ashland on a buying trip and took us to see Mayme Van Doren in the movie, 'Three Nuts in Search of A Bolt.' I was 14 and Sara was 12. And she let me drive home!"

"Does anyone remember her riding on the back of the bicycle with that man your father was in business with?" Mother asked.

"Yes! It was hilarious," Amanda said. "The back wheels were almost flat after she got on, but that man kept the bike moving. It was funny watching a 60 year-old man and a 70 year-old woman on a bicycle even if the tires hadn't deflated."

"Do you all remember her stopping the car in the middle of the street and going into the bank? She'd just tell the cars behind her that she'd be finished in a second. And people let her do it!"

When you think about it, GrandLucy wouldn't be able to do some of the things she did then now. Insurance rates would be too high for one thing. And now there's so much traffic she wouldn't be able to drive like she owned the streets.

"Do you remember the Moms Mabley records she bought and played for us?" I asked Melinda.

"Yeah. And do you remember how she'd take us up to our bedroom and lock the door and play the records so Mother couldn't get in and stop her?" Melinda cackled. "And do you remember all the trips to

Gaiety, comedy and romance take the stage at Jenny Wiley

After over 30 years of successfully serving Eastern Kentucky as a voice for advancement of the performing arts, Jenny Wiley Theatre now has set its sights on the next thirty years with the announcement of the shows for the 1995 season.

My Fair Lady will be the summer's feature production. One of the century's greatest musicals, this Lerner and Lowe's musical comedy provides romance and merriment through a delightful plot and such memorable numbers as "On the Street Where You Live" and "The Rain in Spain."

My Fair Lady begins June 23. The Fantasticks begins June 29 and will be performed only in the Wilkinson-Stumbo Convention Center. This musical comedy is a delightful, romantic fantasy about a boy and girl and their yearning for love.

While the youngsters believe that their fathers disapprove, they contrive to meet and fall in love. Meanwhile the two fathers have staged their disapproval in order to achieve a marriage between the disobedient children.

The world's most famous orphan will be gracing the Jenny Wiley stage this summer in the musical that is now becoming a time-honored favorite, the story of Annie, which begins July 7.

Annie is everyone's favorite orphan. She escapes to an easier life outside the Great Depression where "Tomorrow" is always brighter because of hope. As a recipient of seven Tony Awards, this musical has a rare kind of appeal. It offers uplifting moments along with high-spirited humor.

Audiences at Jenny Wiley Theatre will be treated to a bittersweet story that celebrates the idea of friendship in the season's final production, Steel Magnolias, the play that was adapted into the hit film that starred Dolly Parton and Sally Fields.

Warm and witty, Steel Magnolias is a tribute to the power of love. The story revolves around six women who meet at the local hair salon to exchange gossip and secret ambitions.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

INEXPLICABLE

-- In August, Aaron Miller, 17, an Amish man, tried to outrun sheriff's deputies for four miles in his buggy near Leon, N.Y. The officers followed patiently in their cruiser and ultimately charged Miller with traffic violations.

-- Dallas County (Missouri) prosecutor Wayne Rieschel told reporters in May that, after consulting with the state attorney general's office, he could find no law of any kind violated by the owner of a tanning salon who secretly videotaped his female customers nude. Among the 83 victims were Rieschel's wife and daughter.

-- In April, prosecutors in Gastonia, N.C., charged Rev. William Darryl Lippard, 40, who was already in jail awaiting retrial on a sexual assault charge, with manufacturing wine in his cell. Jailers confiscated sugar, milk cartons and glass jars, and said Lippard was selling the wine to other inmates.

-- In May, St. Peters, Mo. (population 45,000), became the first city in the country to post traffic signs exclusively in metric measures. (For example, "Speed Limit 35" signs overnight became "Speed Limit 60" signs.) Said the public works director, "We're pretty progressive here in St. Peters." According to an Associated Press reporter, the director may have misunderstood federal regulations on timetables for conversions.

-- In November, five Portuguese-Americans went on hunger strikes protesting the failure of their local cable television system in the Massachusetts cities of Somerville, New Bedford and Fall River to carry a Portuguese channel as part of its "basic cable" service. The system had planned to make the channel part of its more expensive program package.

-- In a review of Diana Gazes' $29-a-ticket psychic spoon-bending seminar in July, the San Francisco Chronicle reported that Gazes told the 100 attendees that their powers of concentration would "cause an alteration in the spin of the atoms" of the spoon. To achieve that, the student should grasp the spoon in both hands with thumbs underneath the smallest part of the handle and "apply some downward strength." (Not surprisingly, the Chronicle reported, spoons handled in that manner bend fairly easily.) As Gazes shouted "Bend! Bend!" the attendees leaped to their feet, one by one, waving spoons, shouting, "I bent!"

-- In June, student and former football player Keary Johns, 23, filed a lawsuit against political science professor Julian Foster of California State University, Fullerton. According to Johns, when he asked Foster's permission to drop his course, which he was failing, Foster gave him the option of an F grade or six lashes on his bare bottom, and Johns, to save his grade average, took the spanking, which he now calls inappropriate and humiliating.

LATEST RELIGIOUS MESSAGES

-- According to a videotape of the May meeting of the Wisconsin Taxpayers Party, guest speaker Rev. Matthew Trehwella told the audience that church congregations should be prepared to fight physically against legalized abortions. Trehwella said he had trained his 16-month-old son to identify which finger is his trigger finger and told parents not to play "pin the tail on the donkey" but rather to substitute the exercise in which a child is blindfolded and learns to take a gun apart and put it back together.

-- In Haddam, Conn., just before a vote on the school budget, about 20 anonymously posted signs appeared around town reading "For Christ's Sake, Vote No." The budget, which had been rejected twice before, passed by 34 votes this time, and supporters attributed the reversal to the signs' offensiveness.

-- Acting on a warning from her priest in Fortaleza, Brazil, in November, unemployed maid Maria Benozza Nascimento, 39, burned a winning $60,000 lottery ticket because she feared going to hell. Nascimento's husband is unemployed, and four of their seven children are seriously ill, but her Assembly of God minister told her not to take "the devil's" money.

-- Recent religion-related tragedies: In November in Los Angeles, a man and his two sons were asphyxiated by exhaust fumes after he started to warm up his van in the garage preparing for Sunday church services; in Brazzaville, Congo, in August, 142 Roman Catholics died in stam-

The debates are on. Will Kentucky's legislature axe taxes?

Will Congress pull the plug on funding for public television and send Barney to the bread line?

Will O.J.'s attorneys settle their differences like men and duke it out in the courthouse parking lot?

Will Newt's book have any pictures?

Who cares?

The big question melting in our mouths (and not in our hands) is what color they're going to make the new M&M's.

Will it be purple?

Will it be blue?

Or will it be some artsy-schmartsy color like mauve or periwinkle?

It's important, you know.

Especially for true lovers of M&M's (plain or peanut).

We're the guys who boycotted the candy when they quit making the red ones because they made your insides a funny color.

Now how many of you have ever seen your insides or cared what color they were?

Well, we got the red ones back now, didn't we?

Whether you realize it or not, food coloring is a major influence on our lives.

Hey, remember when school cafeteria food was all one basic color?

We still have nightmares about it.

It looked the same going down as it did when it came back up.

We all have different preferences when it comes to our favorite food color.

Small children are less discriminating, though.

They prefer anything that will make their tongues glow in the dark.

There's always the kid-industry standard red Kool Aid® mustache, though, to distinguish this age group from other alien lifeforms.

Adults, on the other hand, prefer their food to be from two basic color groups...

Hold the Onions and Extra Ketchup.

You won't find these shades in your new box of Crayolas®...yet.

In reality, there are only seven "real" colors in our spectrum.

That's the word according to Roy G. Biv, the guy our high school art teacher introduced us to after it became perfectly clear that introducing us to Norman Rockwell was a complete waste of time and energy.

If you could remember Roy G. Biv you could pass art, even if you couldn't draw water from a well.

Anyway, Roy G. Biv is an acronym or something like that derived from the first letters of each color in the spectrum (red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet.)

Every color we see is a shade of one of those.

If you mix them all together, though, you get that familiar lunchroom shade commonly referred to as "oooh, gross."

That's the color we'd like to see the candymakers use for the new M&M's.

Just for nostalgia's sake.

Camden Park? She took us every weekend when we were younger."

GrandLucy sure was fun back then. And she loved us so, I remember her telling me about a woman who said that she loved her child more than she loved her grandchildren. Grandmother was appalled, because she always said she couldn't tell the difference. I think she's changed her tune since her illness. She'd probably tell you that no one's more important to her than her daughter.

As I left her the other day, I watched her sleeping. She had her hands placed angelic-like under her head and her soft, almost greyless, braided hair framed her cherub face. Bending down to kiss her good-bye I whispered, "Nobody thinks you look your age." She whispered back, "Quit telling them and they won't have to think about it."

EASY ACCESS—I keep a small plastic container filled with one-tablespoon slices of margarine.

When a recipe calls for a tablespoon of margarine, I don't have to fuss with cutting or measuring. I simply take as many slices as I need out of the container. It works wonderfully with no mess. Karen G., S. Euclid, Ohio

PICKLED BEETS—I was recently reading a recipe for sweet dills and it reminded me of something I've been doing for years.

Save the juice from sweet pickles. Open a can of sliced beets, drain, and add to the jar of sweet pickle juice. Put them in the refrigerator for about 24 hours.

They taste great and last as long as pickles do. They go well with so many things that need a little zing to wake them up. Rosa N., Papillion, Neb.

I put them in my rag bag and use them for cleaning chores. If they get too dirty, I just throw them away; if not, I wash them and back to the rag bag they go.

NELL

Once in a great while, Hollywood delivers to us the equivalent of an artistic masterpiece on a parallel with Michelangelo's David. This is such a film.

Jodie Foster, continuing in her string of cinematic successes, portrays Nell, a "wild child" discovered to be living in the woods of North Carolina. At the age of 30, she has had no socialization with other humans beings. The exception to that is her recently-deceased mother, who raised and educated her in total isolation.

When the mother's body is discovered, so is Nell. She is such a complete object of curiosity that soon reporters and TV crews are hunting her down in an effort to "cash" in on the phenomenon. Two scientists in particular are interested in her: Liam Neeson who plays a physician named Lovell and Natasha Richardson, who portrays psychologist Paula.

Lovell and Paula disagree on how to handle Nell. He wants her to be able to continue her happy existence. Paula thinks she should be studied, much as a laboratory rat.

Agreeing to disagree, the two set up camp near Nell's cabin in order to both observe her and let her live her life as she pleases.

Nell is a wonder. She speaks her own language—part English, part fantasy and part Biblical quotations. Her sheer delight in living and her appreciation of her environment are incredible. As such, she has much wisdom to impart on the rest of the world. However, she has no desire to become humanity's teacher. She is content being just what she is.

Foster's performance is positively stunning. Through her outstanding acting and the director's (Michael Apted) genius, combined with an inspired cinematographer (Dante Spinotti), this is a movie which is sure to be a classic years and years from now when the actors are just memories in old books.

Make it a special point to catch this movie. You'll find it uplifting and breathtaking.

Davis started his collection as an investment against the return of a 1970s-style oil embargo because the rubber in tires is a source of petroleum.

Hot-shooting Rebels turn back South Floyd; Hall scores 38 points

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Senior Jeremy Hall burned the nets for 38 points Tuesday night as the Allen Central Rebels ran past South Floyd 90-65 in conference basketball play at Allen Central.

It was the second straight night for the Rebels to play and the second consecutive night that Hall has scored over 30 points.

Hall had 31 points against Knott County Central on Monday night. He also dished off 12 assists.

Against South Floyd, the point guard had 10 assists and pulled down (unofficially) nine rebounds.

Sophomore Thomas Jenkins tossed in 17 points and senior Kevin Stumbo totaled 16 points.

T.T. Pack, one of the 15th Region's finest, led the Raiders with 17 points. Pack had nine rebounds in the contest that saw 88 free throws attempted.

It was a physical game that saw players' tempers flare.

At one point, in a reaction to a call, Rose threw the white towel that he is accustomed to holding in his hand onto the middle of the playing floor. The officials reacted with a technical foul.

"Hey, I was just surrendering," said the Raider coach.

Allen Central improved to 11-2 overall and strengthened their hold on first place in the Floyd County Conference with a perfect 3-0 record.

Unlike the last time the two teams met at Raider Arena, the Rebels put the game away early by taking a 20-10 first quarter lead.

The game was tied at 2 and the lead exchanged hands only five times until the Rebels took an 8-7 lead.

South Floyd led only once in the game and that came at 7-6 on Terrance Mullins' long jumper with less than five minutes to play.

Guard Ryan Hamilton had given them their first lead at 5-4 on a three-point.

Hall, who slashed through the Raider defense and then hit the long three's, scored 10 points in the first period and had 27 points at the half.

He went scoreless in the third period in dishing off and setting up his teammates.

Allen Central led 44-25 at the close of the first half.

It was in the second period that tempers started to flare when the game got a little rough around the baskets. Stumbo and Scotty Little exchanged long stares before the officials stepped in.

It was in the second quarter that Rose threw his towel.

Allen Central opened on an 8-2 run to start the second period and take a 28-10 lead. At the 3:58 mark, the Rebels went to the free throw line for 10 consecutive shots, hitting eight. They led 38-19.

A 6-1 South Floyd run cut the margin to 14, but Hall drilled a three-pointer and Jason Baker scored on a layup to give the Rebels the 19-point lead at the half.

Allen Central's biggest lead came in the third period when they went on a 7-0 run that netted them a 61-34 game.

South Floyd remained somewhat respectable by outscoring Allen Central 5-0 to end the third period at 63-42.

Allen Central led by 24 in the final stanza on Hall's fourth three-point basket of the game.

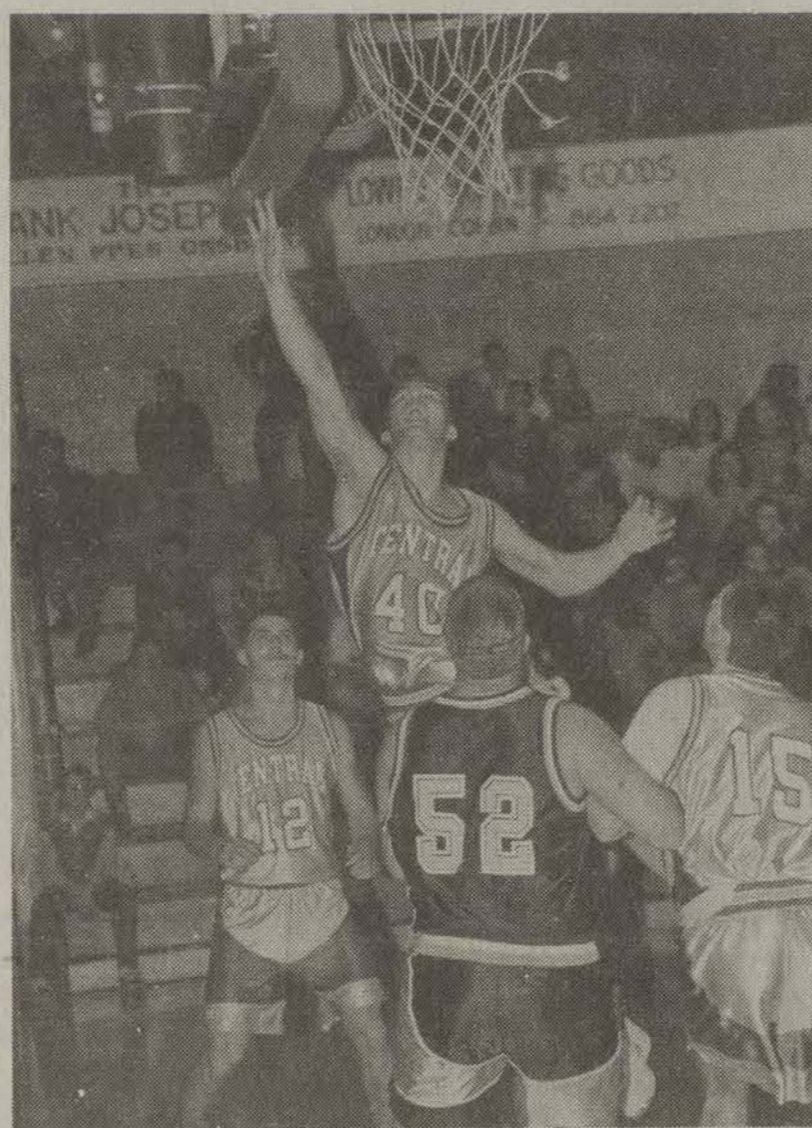

Jason Shannon, who is much underrated in the region, came off the bench and added 11 points. He pulled down six rebounds while in the game.

Bear Stephens and Little finished with nine points each. Little had a team-high 11 rebounds.

Hamilton finished with seven points and he dished off four assists. Mullins scored six, but had nine rebounds for the Raiders.

Freshman Nick Little scored four points, but had six rebounds in the

The Betsy Layne High School softball team will now have new uniforms thanks to a program sponsored by the Women's Sports Foundation and the Commonwealth of Kentucky. The school received a share of $77,000 for entering "Team Dream," one-hundred and fifty-word essays that told what a girls' sports team would do with the money if they won.

All fifty-four schools that entered, including Betsy Layne High School, shared a settlement totaling $77,000. This money is being provided from a $7.2 million fifty-state settlement with the Keds Corporation as the result of a price-fixing lawsuit. Several of the states, including Connecticut, Kentucky, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York, chose the Women's Sports Foundation to receive a share of the settlement. The Foundation then donated the money for state-wide Team Dream grant programs.

The Betsy Layne Ladycats are reigning 52nd District Champions and finished last year with a record of 28-8. The grant money will provide the team with new uniforms which would have been otherwise impossible due to budget constraints.

"As a former baseball and basketball coach, I am pleased that this settlement will help fund high school sports in Kentucky," Attorney General Chris Gorman said. "I hope that this money makes a difference for our schools, our communities, and most of all, in the lives of our student athletes."

Athletics are a documented way to build a girl's self-esteem, confidence, teamwork skills and discipline--characteristics that contribute to stronger academic performance and personal success in life. This is particularly important because girls' self-esteem dramatically drops in high school years. A recent study found that 60 percent of elementary school girls are happy the way they are. By the time they reach high school, only 29 percent approve of themselves--compared with 46 percent of boys.

The Team Dream program comes as a crucial time, as tight budgets are forcing high schools to slash extracurricular activities. Particularly vulnerable are girls' sports programs, which traditionally receive only a fraction of available funds.

Nearly forty percent of high school athletes are female. Yet typically only fifteen percent of high school funds are allocated to girls' sports programs, according to Dr. Marjorie Snyder, associate executive director for the Women's Sports Foundation.

"As a promoter of women's sports, we are painfully aware of the financial situations many high schools face today and the devastating impact across-the-board cuts are having on already underfunded girls' programs," Dr. Snyder said. "Although girls comprise almost four out of every 10 athletes, they receive an estimated $1.50 for every $10 allocated to athletic programs."

Robinson hits seven treys in 86-74 win over Johnson Central

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Prestonsburg's Toby Robinson is uncanny at times.

The senior two guard has been burning up the nets around the region this year and just missed his second 40 or better game against Johnson Central last Tuesday night.

Robinson buried seven three-point baskets and finished with a game-leading 38 points, the second time this season to score that amount. He led the Prestonsburg Blackcats to an 86-74 win over the visiting Golden Eagles.

Robinson, when in a groove such as he has been, can bury a team in a hurry. The hot-shooting guard has hit 62 three-pointers for the season and is averaging just over 27 points per game.

Robinson wasted little time in getting the Blackcats off to a fast start by hitting his first two shots, both three-pointers, that gave Prestonsburg a 6-0 lead.

Johnson Central scored the next three field goals to tie the game, but a 16-3 run by the Blackcats netted them a 22-9 first-quarter lead.

Following a basket by Clint Shutts, Robinson buried back-to-back treys and Shutts hit a third straight to close the first period.

Robinson showed that he was human and completed another three-point play, this time the old-fashioned way. He then hit a short jumper that gave Prestonsburg a 27-9 lead.

Prestonsburg rolled out to a 20-point lead, 37-17, late in the second period and led 38-21 at the half.

Johnson Central came roaring back in the third period and cut the margin to seven, 51-44, on the shooting of Salisbury. Salisbury hit two three's consecutively for 12 points in the quarter.

The Blackcats held a precarious 53-48 lead after three quarters.

A basket by J.P. Skeens to start the final quarter gave Prestonsburg a seven-point cushion, 55-48. But Nathan Salisbury completed a three-point play and Kevin Wheeler's basket cut the lead to two, 55-53.

But Prestonsburg ran off 10 unanswered points to extend the lead back to 12 points, 65-53. Shutts had a three-point basket in the run with Skeens completing a three-point play.

Ten points was as close as the Golden Eagles could come to the Blackcats after that.

Ryan Ortega netted 18 points for Prestonsburg. Thomas Ratliff added 12 and Shutts finished with nine. Skeens scored seven and Brett James tossed in two.

Salisbury led Johnson Central, who fell to 4-8, with 25 points. Mike Jarrell and Wheeler scored 13 each with Jesse McCarty totaling 11 points.

David Turner tossed in eight, and Travis Jones had two, as did Don Robinette.

Prestonsburg improved to 7-8 on the season and will play at Ashland tonight. The game will be broadcast WXXZ-FM, 105.5
