Retirement offer opens door for recalls

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

A retirement incentive plan for school personnel has accomplished just what Superintendent Dr. John Balentine hoped it would.

Enough older, more experienced teachers and administrators took advantage of the plan to get all laid off teachers back on the Floyd School System's payroll.

The board stopped short, however, of approving an amendment to the plan that would have allowed employees who are 60 years old and eligible to retire but have less than 27 years of teaching experience to participate in the annuity.

Balentine told board members at the August 13 meeting that at least two people had asked if they too could be considered for the plan.

"I personally have a problem with it," board chairman Eddie Patton said. "There has to be a stopping point."

"You're exactly right," Balentine said.

The issue died for lack of a motion.

Balentine presented the approved retirement plan at a July 22 special meeting of the board. He suggested the system buy $25,000 annuities that would pay teachers $236 a month in addition to the retirement funds they will receive from the state.

If every certified person eligible to retire had done so and participated in the plan, the net savings to the board for the 1997 fiscal year would be more than $76,000. Forty-nine teachers and administrators were eligible to retire and take advantage of the plan. Twenty-eight eligible employees did not take advantage of the plan.

With the additional retirement of 24 employees through August 13, 37 teachers and administrators have retired from the system this year, which made room for re-hiring first-year teachers who were laid off in the spring.

The school board will pay about $160,000 in annuity premiums for the plan that gives the personnel an extra monthly payment, in addition to state retirement funds, and payment of 30 percent of their accumulated sick leave. The employees who retired last week will receive about $100,000 in sick leave payments.

Those totals do not include personnel who retired before the plan was approved, but the school system budgeted enough funds to pay benefits for any employee who was eligible to do so and retired between February 1 and December 31. Any teacher or administrator who earns enough hours to retire before the end of the year can also take advantage of the plan.

The school board expects to save about $216,000 in salaries from those who retired this month alone, with total savings from all 37 topping out at more than $300,000.

Curfews and speed limits are discussed

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

During a special meeting Wednesday of the Wheelwright City Commission, Police Chief Thomas Engle was authorized to lower the speed limit on city streets and to contact the state highway department about reducing the speed limit on state roads in the city.

Mayor David Marlee Sammons said the city had an ordinance that allowed it to lower the speed limits on side streets, but said someone would have to contact the state highway department before lowering the speed limit on state roads.

"The main issue is public safety," Engle said. "The speed limit we have at this time is not effective due to the public's driving habits."

Engle said he is more concerned since school opened and the higher number of students who will be on the road — walking or driving — before and after school activities.

Other action taken at the special meeting:

• The Wheelwright Fire Department agreed to keep a fire truck on Main Street to keep the road clean while red dog is being removed.

Sammons said the fire truck will hose off the debris that gets on the road while red dog is being removed.

• Two new utility commissioners were appointed to the board during the special meeting. Rose Osborne and Gloria Harlow will fill the two openings on the commission.

Sammons said one of the positions is open because Bruce John-

Case against alleged assailant waived to Floyd grand jury

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

A Floyd County man's felony charge of assaulting a deputy earlier this month was handed over to a grand jury after District Judge James R. Allen heard testimony during a preliminary hearing Wednesday.

Timothy Lovely, 29, of Gunlock, was charged with third-degree assault for allegedly hitting a police officer in the jaw; providing false information; carrying a concealed weapon; driving under the influence, second-offense; terroristic threatening; and resisting arrest.

Floyd County deputy Randy K. Davis testified that when he questioned a subject at a one-car accident on Route 404, the subject would not cooperate.

"When I questioned Lovely, he said 'what's it to ya?'" Davis said.

Davis said the caller who reported the accident stopped to offer assistance to the subject, but Lovely "told him more or less to get out of there."

Davis said he found several .22 caliber shells in Lovely's right pocket. When Davis asked where the gun was, the subject became angry, Davis said.

"When I put a cuff on him, he turned around and hit me in the jaw," Davis testified. "When he did that, he knocked my mace out of its holder — so I came back with my flashlight and hit him in the head."

Davis said he and Lovely went to Highlands Regional Medical Center to be checked out by a doctor.

Davis said the doctor took x-rays of his jaw and neck, and prescribed medication for pain.

Davis said Lovely was charged with DUI because he refused to take a breathalyzer and he had a strong smell of alcohol on his breath.

"Lovely was charged with terroristic threatening because he told me I didn't know who I was messing with and he would kill me when he got out of this," Davis said. "The subject (Lovely) said if he could get to his car he would shoot me with his gun."

Police are quiet on status of bank robbery investigation

Investigation into the robbery of the Garrett branch of Bank Josephine is still underway, according to Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) agent Steve Stacy.

"We are still following up on leads," Kentucky State Police Sergeant Lowell Ward said Thursday. Neither Ward nor Stacy would make any additional comments about the investigation.

"There is no comment to make at this time," Stacy said Wednesday.

On July 23, two suspects reportedly entered the bank about 11 a.m. armed with handguns and demanded money.

The two left the scene on all-terrain vehicles (ATVs) with an undetermined amount of money. They were seen traveling up Stone Coal Road, headed toward McDowell shortly after the robbery.

The first suspect is described as a white male, five foot ten inches tall, 220 pounds. He was wearing light blue jeans and a black jacket.

The second subject was also a white male, five foot nine inches tall, 165 to 185 pounds. He was wearing light colored blue jeans and a black jacket with a wide

What's in a name? Plenty, board learns

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

A school by any other name is still a school, but some parents say that just isn't so.

A contingent of parents, dressed in purple and gold, appeared at the Floyd County Board of Education meeting Tuesday asking that Martin Elementary retain its name when the new school opens on Stephens Branch.

Another group of parents asked that the new school be called Stephens Branch Elementary.

And yet another asked for it to be named May Valley Elementary, the recommendation of a committee formed to name the new school and rename Martin Elementary which will house only middle school students after the two are combined.

But members of the school board said they didn't have enough information to name the schools yet and asked that additional community input be gathered.

"There needs to be more input to the board from each community," board member Phyllis Honsell said. "If after this time, that doesn't come, we need to go ahead and make a decision, but right now, I'm not satisfied there has been enough input from residents."

She said she didn't think committee meetings had been advertised adequately to gather community responses and "that not enough people had been heard to get a feeling of what the pleasure of the community is."

Board chairman Eddie Patton made motions to name the Stephens Branch school "May Valley Central Elementary" and to name Martin Elementary "Central Middle School." The schools would both use the mascot "Lil' Rebs" and the colors would be gray, red, and blue. His motions reflected the recommendations of the committee formed to name the schools.

Both of the motions died for a lack of a second.

Board member Ray Brackett

then made a motion to name Martin Elementary "Martin Middle School." Brackett did not recommend a mascot. "I'm not worried about a mascot. I'm worried about teaching," he said. That proposal also died for a lack of a second.

Some area parents weren't impressed with any of the names.

"We want to keep the name. We want to keep the colors. We want to keep the mascot," Thomasine Robinson, a representative of the Board okays six-week grading period

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

Parents of primary students in Floyd County will know sooner than in the past if their child is failing.

The Floyd County School Board approved a six-week grading system for primary students at its meeting August 13.

Several weeks ago board member Phyllis Honsell asked about the grading periods when several principals sought to change the length of time between reporting for grades four through eight. "Though the primary grading period wasn't an issue, Honsell said she was concerned about the time span between notices to parents."

"This is the first time since I've been in Floyd County that we've discussed something that impacts the instruction and education of the children in this system," superintendent Dr. John Balentine said at the earlier meeting.

While nine of 14 elementary schools in the county send home some kind of progress report at six weeks, board member Phyllis Honsell said waiting until the 12 weeks is up doesn't give parents a chance to help their child improve

Services held for former Times owner

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

A former co-owner of the Floyd County Times died Tuesday.

Alka Dingus Allen, 88, of Prestonsburg, died August 13 at Highlands Regional Medical Center.

She was a wife and mother who helped her family make the Floyd County Times one of the state's most respected newspapers. Her involvement in the newspaper business began when she married Norman Allen, a reporter for the Big Sandy News in Louisa in 1927.

Soon thereafter, the couple took a major step that impacted the future of Floyd County. They established the Floyd County Times in 1927. They later bought out a rival newspaper, the Prestonsburg Post, in 1928. Their commitment to putting the news in the hands of the people lasted for about 60 years until a car accident in March of 1986 eventually resulted in Norman Allen's death and severely limited Alka Allen's ability to work. Alka and Norman's daughter, Barbara, took over the reins of the publishing business, but when Barbara also be-

Grand jury to hear attempted theft case

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

Charges against two Floyd County men, who allegedly damaged nearly $1,000 worth of mining cable during an attempted theft at Reynolds Branch Coal, were ordered to be held over to a grand jury Wednesday by Floyd District Judge James R. Allen.

Randol Shepherd, 22, of Stanville, and Timothy Wallen, 26, of Blue River, were charged with third-degree criminal trespass; criminal mischief, third-degree; first-degree criminal mischief; and theft by unlawful taking.

A 15-year-old juvenile male was also arrested during the alleged attempted theft.

During a preliminary hearing Wednesday, Floyd County Sheriff's Department Lieutenant Ricky Thornsby testified that when he arrived on the scene, the three subjects were locked inside a fence at the coal company.

Thornsby said when he questioned the subjects, he got two different stories.

"Shepherd and the juvenile said they were there at the request of someone who asked them to get axles off of a trailer," Thornsby said. "Wallen said he went to cut grass at Dan Jack Combs' residence and was offered to make money if he would drive."

Wallen said he drove because he was the only one who could legally drive, Thornsby said.

The lieutenant said a hammer and a cutting device similar to a mattock was used in the attempted theft.

A warrant filed by Tom Isaac alleged that the three subjects had unlawfully entered the property of Reynolds Branch Coal and intentionally caused damage.

Thornsby said Isaac and his son saw the subjects with the mining cable.

Shepherd and Wallen were charged with criminal mischief, third degree, for damaging the fence; criminal trespass because the gate had a sign that read "No Trespassing," and the gates were locked; first-degree criminal mischief for damaging the mining cable; and theft by unlawful taking because after they damaged the cable, it could no longer be used by the coal company.

"Once it's cut up into two or three foot pieces, we can't use it (mining cable)," Morris Isaac, Reynold Branch Coal president, testified. He also said about $250 worth of damages were done to the fence when the subjects entered the premises.

Shepherd and Wallen were both released on bond, and Allen ordered that the two could remain on the same bond.

white vertical stripe down the back. He was wearing glasses and a bearded stubble. The two were also wearing motorcycle helmets with dark visors.

The ATVs used during the heist at the bank were located by detectives from the Kentucky State Police and FBI.

The four-wheelers were found after an anonymous tip came into the post, KSP Trooper Mike Goble said earlier this month.

Found were a blue and gray 1993 Yamaha Warrior, which was reported stolen to the Hazard post on July 18, almost a week before the robbery, and a red Honda four-wheeler. The Honda was painted green sometime before the bank robbery.

Anyone with information about the identity of the robbers should call KSP Post 9 at 606-433-7711 or the FBI at 606-432-1226.

Rescued driver arrested

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

The Floyd County Emergency and Rescue squad extricated a Columbus Branch resident from his truck after it flipped over a nearly 100-foot embankment Wednesday night on Calf Creek.

Carl David Collins, 53, of Columbus, alleged the accident was a result of a steering default, according to Kentucky State Police trooper Charles Mills.

Collins said the steering became very loose and the truck jerked to the right, Mills said. When Collins tried to pull the vehicle to the left, it was too late, the right tire was already over the hill, Mills said.

Collins was charged with driving under the influence, Mills said. Collins' blood work has been sent to the Kentucky State Police lab for testing.

Floyd County Emergency and Rescue workers had the only vehicle on the scene that was capable of getting to Collins' location.

"One of the problems with last night's rescue was that we could not get any of the big trucks down to the scene, so we had to take the Suburban," Equipment Sergeant James Allen said.

Allen said rescue workers had to move a generator, two spotlights, the jaws of life, and a stokes basket from one of the big trucks and place the equipment into the Suburban.

"We stabilized the truck to keep it from rolling, cut off the top, and assisted Respond Ambulance in removing the patient from the scene," Allen said.

Floyd County Emergency and Rescue captain Harry Adams said Collins was complaining that his shoulder and possibly his leg were hurt during the accident.

"When we arrived on the scene, the victim was conscious," Adams said. "But, he was unconscious when we got him out of the truck."

Adams said the rescue was a success with mutual aid from the Prestonsburg Special Operations Team and Respond Ambulance Service.

Collins was transported to Highlands Regional Medical Center where he was treated and released.

came ill, the business was sold in 1988 to Floyd County Newspapers, Inc.

During the years the Allens owned the Times, Alka Allen worked wherever the need arose. She read proofs, updated subscriptions, and even mailed out papers. She also organized. When she realized that the employees needed a place to hang their coats, she made a coat rack from a piece of plywood. She patiently scraped the edges of the board with a knife until she produced rounded curves and a quality product. The coat rack is still in use by employees.

Alka's family came before business. "Her story is the story of a great mother, the most honorable profession of all," her son, Paul Neil Allen, said Wednesday. "She babied us children to death."

Her children became an important part of the business operation. Paul Neil Allen was a writer and photographer for the newspaper. Her son, David Allen, was advertising manager. Her children Quentin and Sharon also worked at the Times before moving on to other careers.

son is running for a city commission seat, and a city ordinance states that someone cannot hold a utility commission seat and run for a city office.

The other seat on the utility commission came open when Jerry Tackett resigned due to medical complications.

During the police report to the city commission, Engle said a curfew needed to be set within the city to keep juveniles off the streets all hours of the night.

"The police department has received numerous complaints about juveniles during the summer vacation," Engle said.

Sammons agreed and said a lot of property has been damaged in town. "We're going to have to set a curfew," he said.

If the curfew is established, parents would be responsible for their children and liable for any damages, Sammons said.

The city commission informed Engle no action could be taken on the agenda could be addressed during the special meeting, but it would address the issue at the next meeting to adopt an ordinance.

Members present at the special meeting were Sammons, David Boyd, Allen Taylor, and Luther Johnson Jr. In absentia was David Hall.

"How do parents know what their children are doing?" she asked principals Linda Gearheart and Gwen Harmon.

Harmon said her school sends home a "basic, check list" report at six weeks. Gearheart said she does not, but parents are called if a student's progress begins to slow.

The board agreed that some report, probably one similar to Harmon's, should be used and asked Balentine to make sure that happens.

The report will not be as in-depth as the one that goes home at 12 weeks. Administrators said teachers would not have time to complete the same report at six-week intervals.

In other action, the board:

- Recognized students who had perfect attendance. Honored were Christy Bryant, Heather Dawn Conley, Sabrenia Martin, Josh Meade, and Jessica Gwynne Mullins. Bryant, Conley, and Martin had perfect attendance from the ninth through 12th grades. Meade and Mullins had perfect attendance from kindergarten through eighth grades.

- Received accolades from Floyd County Education Association president Jerry Lafferty for recent improvements in the system's finances.

- Heard from two parents, Barbara Sword and Charlotte King, about the closing of a handicapped unit at Betsy Layne. Balentine told the parents he would meet with them privately in his office to discuss the closure of that unit and other similar units in the county.

- Agreed to escrow state technology funds in the amount of $146,076 until the system can match those monies.

Davis said Lovely was charged with carrying a concealed weapon because officer Steve Little advised Davis that a gun was found in the vehicle and it was concealed.

Lovely's attorney, Amy Kratz, asked Davis if he read Lovely's rights to him before he admitted he was in his car and he was the driver. Davis said he had not read Lovely his rights.

Kratz made a motion to amend Lovely's third-degree assault charge because Davis stated that he was struck in the jaw with a fist — "no deadly weapon."

Prosecuting attorney John Mann argued against Kratz's motion, and Judge Allen overruled it.

She asked the board to "make the right decision and let us keep our school."

Another group, Bessie Woods, Deanna Mullins, Glenna Woods, and Cindy Mullins, asked that the new school be named after Samuel Stephens, the first man to settle in the area.

"It's been Stephens Branch for close to 100 years," Bessie Woods said.

Maurena Hale said the land on which the new school is being built had been in her family for six generations. "They loved their neighbors and they especially loved children," she said of the Mays. "The time has come for this community to join together and move forward. The future belongs to our children and may we give it to them in peace."

Relay For Life set for August 23 at Prestonsburg College walking Track

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

When Kathleen Clark White was diagnosed with an inoperable brain tumor in February 1994, her family members were stunned.

No one could believe the 27-year-old had less than a year to live. She and her husband had just celebrated their second anniversary. They were building a new home. Their future looked endless.

But almost nine months later — after days of chemotherapy, radiation, and steroid treatments; loss of long, blonde hair; and frequent trips to the hospital — that future came to a screeching halt when she died two weeks after her birthday.

To most people, White is just another cancer statistic. She didn't survive the disease that struck when no one was looking. Her story is one people with cancer don't like to hear.

There are success stories in the cancer fight as well. Every day, area residents get the news they have reached that all-important milestone in the cancer battle — the five-year mark of being cancer free.

To celebrate those stories, to honor the people who didn't win the battle, and to raise money to find a cure for cancer, the Floyd County chapter of the American Cancer Society is holding a Relay For Life, a walk against cancer. The walk begins at 7 p.m. August 23 and runs through 7 a.m. August 24 at the Prestonsburg Community College walking track.

The event, which is sponsored by Highlands Regional Medical Center, the Floyd County Chamber of Commerce, WQHY-FM, and the Floyd County Times, is to be the first in Floyd County to provide support to the American Cancer Society. It won't be the last.

"We're already looking at plans for next year's event," Norm Marcum, event chairman, said.

The Relay for Life began in Tacoma, Washington in 1988 and has been held across the United States since. All contributions go to the American Cancer Society for research, awareness, and patient services.

"We're hoping the event here will become as successful as it has in other places across the nation," Marcum said. "Great strides have already been made in cancer research and we want to help further those steps."

Most cities hold 24-hour events to raise funds. Floyd's first attempt will be 12 hours "as a start."

"This is a starting point in Floyd County's commitment to keep this battle going," Marcum said. "We're going to keep going because the threat of cancer is ongoing."

The event begins with cancer survivors making the first lap around the PCC track. All local cancer survivors are invited to participate in the first lap walk even if they are not participating in the relay.

"We want to honor their courage and also show that there is hope for cancer victims, that a diagnosis of cancer does not mean it's over," Marcum said.

cancer society," Marcum said.

Each team will set up a camp site at the track and various activities are also planned for the evening.

At 10 p.m., one walker from each team will continue around the track while a luminary ceremony is held. "Candles will be lit in memory of cancer victims and in honor of those who have won the battle," Marcum added. "But most of all, we want this to be a celebration of life."

Luminaria may be picked up at Cooley Medical on South Lake Drive or at any Bank Josephine branch, at a minimum donation of $5. All luminary donations will go directly to the Floyd County chapter for use on a local level.

"Our goal is to line the entire length of the track with luminaries," Marcum added.

The candle-lighting ceremony is sponsored by Highlands Wellness and the Breast Center of Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Volunteers and corporate sponsors are still needed for the event. Marcum said scout troops or other civic groups will be used to run the event itself and he is looking for business support to provide other items, such as bottled water and breakfast for the team members.

For more information or to get involved in the fight, call Marcum at 886-8409 or Carla Coburn, executive director Floyd County Chamber of Commerce, at 886-1341.

The event is expected to draw a crowd.

"We're expecting 150 to 200 people at the site at one time," Marcum said. "You have to start somewhere."

Alka Allen was the daughter of the late Elmon and Emma Clark Dingus and was born at Martin. She lived at Dinwood and was raised by her stepmother, Lula Frasure Dingus. She attended Prestonsburg and Martin schools. She met her husband Norman when she attended Martin High School and cheered for the Purple Flash at a ball game. Norman cheered for Garrett, the opposing team.

Alka graduated from Berea College, enduring train rides back and forth from home to Berea during her years at the school.

Graveside services for Allen will be held Saturday, August 17, at 11 a.m. at the D.M. Allen Family Cemetery on Route 7 at Hueysville. Mourners may meet at the Hall Funeral Home at 10:15 and join the funeral procession to the grave site.

Visitation for Allen will be held Friday, August 16, from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m. at the Hall Funeral Home.

Memorial donations may be made to the Christian Appalachian Children's Project, 6378, KY Route 80, Martin, Kentucky, 41649.

Bids on Samuel May House okayed

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

Work on the restoration of the historic Samuel May House should begin in a few weeks. The City of Prestonsburg approved the bids for restoration of the historic home during a special meeting Thursday morning.

Three companies bid on the restoring the building thought to be the first brick structure in Eastern Kentucky, but all three came in over the $400,000 available through grant money, Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin said. Negotiations with two of the companies brought one down to $392,700. Olentangy Restoration of Marion, Ohio will be completing the work on the project. "We don't know how long it will take," Fannin said. "There's no telling what they'll run into when they get in there." He said it was important to get the project started before cold weather makes an appearance in Eastern Kentucky.

Also bidding on the project were Patriot Construction Company from Lick Creek, Kentucky and Nairn Construction Company of Prestonsburg. Patriot's original bid was $451,000 with a renegotiated bid of $408,000. Nairn did not rebid the project.

Four assault charges sent to grand jury

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

A grand jury will determine if a Floyd County man should be tried on four counts of second-degree assault for allegedly shooting four people during an altercation August 2 in Allen.

Thompson said Kentucky State Police Detective Leslie Gannon is investigating the shooting incident. According to eye witnesses, a domestic dispute between Dana Waddles and his wife, Rebecca Waddles, escalated to a residential-area brawl and the shooting.

"We'd like to get a roof on the building as soon as possible before winter hits," Fannin said. Eliminated from the original project was the removal of trees, stumps and shrubs at a cost of $5,000. Old bricks won't be reused and the roof on one portion of the building will be rebuilt instead of trying to use old materials, at a cost savings of $10,500. Concrete blocks will be used for inner walls instead of brick as was originally bid. That change will save about $9,000 with additional miscellaneous changes to cut another $15,900 off the cost of the project. "We wished it had been less than it was," Fannin said. "Then, we could have used the extra money for other projects. But this

The city also discussed moving the gazebo at the corner of Court Street and South Lake Drive so that it does not distract from a mural to be painted on the wall behind the vacant lot. A star fountain may also be added to the lot and benches are to be installed as well. The gazebo will be moved to another lot.

The case of Danny Lee Waddles, 21, of Allen, was ordered to be held over to a grand jury Wednesday by Floyd District Judge James R. Allen after testimony was presented during a preliminary hearing.

The victims in the shooting were Lisa Faye Newsome, 20, of Prestonsburg; and Allen residents Rebecca Waddles, 22, who is eight-and-a-half months pregnant; Tammy Woods, 25, and Patton.

Wheelwright Police chief begins hunt for marijuana

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

Floyd County Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson testified that witnesses stated that Danny Lee Waddles was the shooter.

According to eye witness J. Carol Burchett, Rebecca Waddles was hit with buckshot in the arm and hip; Newsome was shot in the arm; Woods was struck in the elbow; and Patton was hit in the legs.

Squirrel hunting season officially opens on Saturday, but Wheelwright Police Chief Thomas Engle has already begun his hunt for marijuana and drugs within city limits.

lost." "But, I'm going to start doubling my efforts to intercept the drugs in the field," Engle said.

Thompson said he did not know for sure if the shooting was in self-defense, but Waddles' brother, Dana Waddles, had a serious head injury. "He (Dana Waddles) appeared to have been hit at the base of the skull," Thompson said.

Thompson said between 75-100 buckshot pellets had hit Patton. A KSP Post 9 media release states that two additional arrests were made at the scene.

Marijuana is matured and ready for harvest, and Engle hopes to locate the pot in the fields before it gets out on the streets.

Road checks are going to begin again in the city, Engle said.

The sheriff said when he arrived at the scene, it appeared that Cory Patton, 18, had been shot at and the buckshot scattered and hit three others.

Howard Waddles, 61, was charged with terroristic threatening and obstructing a governmental operation.

He said the average plant ranges from 10 to 12 feet this time of year, and could be worth about $1,000 each. Despite the height of the marijuana, Engle said most growers will wait for the plant to "bud out" before cultivating to get the full potential of the plant's worth.

Many residents complain when the police department holds a road check, but a road check is the best way to intercept the drugs on the street before an accident occurs and users kill themselves or someone else, Engle said.

Thompson said Waddles' brother was sent to Our Lady of the Way hospital and the other victims were sent to Highlands Regional Medical Center.

Dana Waddles, 25, was charged with alcohol intoxication. Danny Waddles was also charged with cultivating marijuana when the Floyd County Sheriff's Department located several marijuana plants near his residence.

"One out of every three arrest, I find pot residue, drug paraphernalia, or marijuana itself," Engle said. "For a small town such as Wheelwright — that's really a high percentage."

Last month, Engle had six situations where he stopped juveniles in cars and found drug paraphernalia. "The kids are just stoned out of their minds," Engle said.

Senior Citizens' Day set for September 20

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

The City of Wheelwright will host the third annual Senior Citizens' Day on Friday September 20.

Sammons said he invited local businesses or hospitals to set up booths at the event to educate the public about available services.

Engle said he has already been locating water jugs and Miracle Glow that some people have been using to cultivate the marijuana.

Engle is offering a $50 reward for the location of marijuana crops within the city's jurisdiction. "Upon retrieval of the marijuana, the reward will be made to the source who provided the location," Engle said.

"In the past, senior citizens never had anything done for them, so we began celebrating Senior Citizens' Day," Wheelwright Mayor David Marlee Sammons said Wednesday.

Senior citizens from throughout the county will participate from 10 a.m. — 4 p.m. in games such as basketball, hog calling, spin casting, yard games, a softball toss, and many more, Sammons said.

Engle said marijuana is not the only drug problem in Wheelwright. He said he suspects that there are ten to 12 dealers in the city who sell LSD, marijuana, cocaine, prescription medication, and crack.

He added that all information given and the informant's name would be kept confidential.

Normally, the event is held in July, Sammons said, but this year July was very hot, so it is scheduled for September.

Sammons urges local businesses, individuals, or hospitals to contact the City of Wheelwright if interested in making a donation or setting up a booth during Senior Citizens' Day.

Engle said the government-initiated war on drugs is over — "We

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

Let them choose

by Scott Perry

We don't have a dog (or a Rebel or a Purple Flash, for that matter) in this fight over what to name Floyd County's new school on Stephens Branch or the old school at Martin, but we do have a suggestion.

Let the kids do it.

They are their schools, and we can't think of a better way for them to really get into the school spirit than by allowing them to put their personal touch on naming the facilities.

We grownups have love affairs with our pasts, and there's nothing wrong with that, but our children ought to have a say in their futures. This is a unique opportunity to give them that say and to let them start their own traditions and create their own identities.

Let them use their own imaginations to pick names, colors and mascots and give them a lesson in the fundamentals of democracy at the same time.

For most of us, our fondest memories are from our early school days. We'll always have those memories to cherish.

But as much as we'd like for our kids to feel what we felt and to experience what we experienced, we should realize that this is their time, not ours, and they'll be looking back some day on their own experiences, not ours.

So, we say let them choose.

They'll form instant bonds with one another and with their new schools if we do.

Vipers say, "thanks"

Editor:
The Housing Authority of Martin Vipers softball team would like to take this opportunity to thank the following for allowing them to attend and participate in the Blue Grass State Games 18 and under division.

It would not have been possible for us if it was not for the caring people in our community and the overwhelming support from area businesses; the following to be commended highly.

1. Housing authority staff and board of directors
2. Jan's Florist (Thomasine Robinson)
3. Hall Funeral Home
4. Messer's Department Store
5. The community for you support at car washes and bake sales.

A great big thank-you goes out to the coaches (Chad, Chris and Rita) for their time and effort even when we looked like there was no hope, these people believed in us and taught us to never give up. Most of all we were taught the value of sportsmanship and the value of a team as one or none.

Once again, we thank you for the opportunity and the great learning experience. It was a great honor to participate in the Blue Grass State games.

The Political Party

by Dave Porter

I feel a need to point out some very disagreeable developments which have recently surfaced regarding the ongoing effort to compose the first Eastern Kentucky Legislative Candidate Forum of 1996.

This forum will provide an opportunity for the people of the Fifth Congressional district (eastern Kentucky) to personally hear and compare the ideas and views of their candidates for the Kentucky General Assembly.

There has never been an event in our region which A) offers under-funded candidates a fair chance to widely distribute their message, B) disregards the continuous struggle to discredit a politician because of his party affiliation, and C) symbolically eliminates all county lines and political kingdoms contained within those county lines.

The forum will be Saturday, October 12. On October 12, the only information to surface (during the actual event) will be candidates' personal opinions about important issues and ideas for the future of Kentucky and our region. Attempts to promote a particular political party (during the hours of the event) are not welcome, and will be intercepted and subdued.

Unlike national politics, genuine ideological differences do not exist between Kentucky's two state political parties. Therefore, typical political maneuvers will not be allowed to tarnish or overshadow the good which will come from this forum. If there must be party promotion, it can occur before or after the actual event. Personally, I do not encourage that to transpire, but I realize it cannot be prevented.

There are 42 candidates or unopposed incumbents inside of the Fifth Congressional District. Last week, an invitation was sent to each and every one of them. Along with the invitation was a questionnaire which was used to determine the most convenient date for the forum to take place, accommodating as many candidates as possible.

The questionnaire also asked for input on how the event should be formatted and topics to be discussed. To date, approximately half of them have returned the questionnaire, none of which declaring that they do not plan to attend. In fact, many of the respondents showed great interest in the event, and some included various praiseworthy comments.

However, rather than return the questionnaire, some contacted their respective party leadership organizations in Frankfort. The purpose of these organizations is to cultivate the domination of their party. They do this by working to elect candidates who are members of their party, even if it means sacrificing integrity, injuring the democratic process, and electing inferior candidates. The two-party system is a good system. The perpetual competition increases the performance of the legislators. However, painstaking discretion must be employed to ensure it does not get in the way of honesty and hinder the involvement of the people.

Currently, there are 63 Democrats and 36 Republicans in the state House of Representatives. In the Senate, there are 21 Democrats and 16 Republicans (there are also two vacant seats, one in the Senate and one in the House).

The House Democrats have a safe majority, but the Senate Democrats are in danger of losing control to the Republicans. We have some very competitive races in our region, and they could mean the difference in control of the Senate. Because of this, party leaders and other "big boys" from across the state are going to be working very hard in our region, to elect their candidates.

We will ignore these outsiders and pick our delegates based upon what they have to offer. If it is left up to the state party leaders, all we will see is bumper stickers, billboards, commercials attacking the opponent, and all the other campaign garbage that money can buy.

Deciding where to hold the forum was a major problem. With the convenience of their constituents in mind, most candidates suggested having the event in their own district. After much discussion, the location has been determined, and the necessary paperwork (regarding facility rental, building of the stage, etc.) is being routed. Until the paperwork has cleared, it would not be prudent to reveal the location. However, I can say that the event will be integrated into a large festival, inside of a district which promises a very interesting Senatorial race.

Each and every man, woman and child who shares the beauty of our mountains, has been raised learning our superior Eastern Kentuckian values, has enjoyed a slow, peaceful walk down one of our simple county roads is invited... to speak, to listen, and to learn. Eastern Kentucky Legislative Candidate Forum 1996.

WILL THERE REALLY BE CHANGES IN WELFARE?

We mountaineers of Eastern Kentucky make up the most generous, big-hearted and openhanded society in the world. We would give away our last dollar to help a hungry child. But why should we give that dollar to the government, to take its cut before giving it to that child? This responsibility must lie in the hands of private individuals and private institutions, such as our churches and food drives. Otherwise, we lose that generosity and close our hands.

This is the year of welfare reform. Since Congress called for these changes, everyone has predicted doom for Eastern Kentucky.

Time and time again they say "Eastern Kentucky kids will suffer the worst and turn to crime" and "there are no jobs in Eastern Kentucky." Do they think kids on welfare are not already suffering? or that welfare has helped bring jobs to Eastern Kentucky? How can they support such a destructive and corrupt system?

In our region, we do have a disproportionate number of families with children who receive money from the state. We must remember, however, these kids are growing up without seeing the relationship between work and rewards. Inevitably, they will become adults and be severely disadvantaged in this increasingly competitive world which we live in. Some believe this attitude toward welfare is harsh, but this is reality. To think welfare is a solution to the poverty problem in our region is a dream.

When the welfare program began back in the late thirties, A.B. "Happy" Chandler was finishing his first term as Governor, Eastern Kentucky was the poorest region in the country, and rich coal barons owned most of our beautiful land.

Today, 14 Governors later, rich coal barons own most of our desecrated land and we are still the poorest region in the country.

Either welfare has been used to avoid the high cost of finding real solutions to Eastern Kentucky's problems, or we have been electing the stupidest bunch of decision-makers ever assembled.

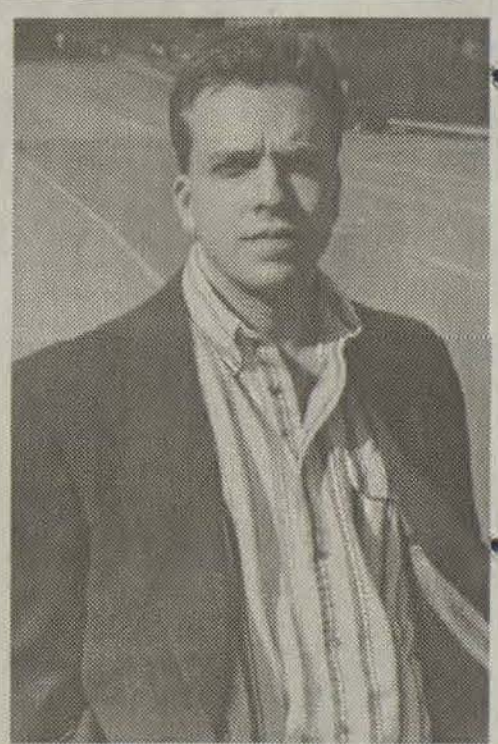

Personally, I do not believe it is possible that those legislators needed fifty years to find out that welfare is a temporary solution to a permanent problem. It is time to start sharing Kentucky's wealth, benefiting from our tremendous coal revenue, and taking back control of our tax money.

I am reminded of the old adage "Give a man a fish, feed him for a day...teach him to fish, feed him for a lifetime." Handing out food stamps can put breakfast on the table, but, as humans, we are hungry again by dinner time. So, instead of spending tax money on food stamps, spend it on economic development and job training.

Unfortunately, the food stamps are cheaper, but the savings only benefit the rest of the state. Here, in Eastern Kentucky, we have given up our right to decide how this money is spent, by detaching ourselves from politics and government.

This is why Toyota plants don't come to Eastern Kentucky. By contrast, regions of the state (and the country, for that matter) which get involved in their governments, ask questions of their legislators, and form various citizen interest groups within their community, will always get a more than equitable return on their tax investments—and they are not dependent on welfare programs.

Kentucky's lawmakers are now faced with the problem they have managed to

by Dave Porter

dodge for the last fifty years—developing our region's economy, Congress' bipartisan decision to reform welfare showed compassion and courage.

We must ensure our state legislators have the same courage needed to bring industry into Eastern Kentucky, now that they may no longer pacify us with welfare checks.

This means they must say "NO" to lobbyists and special interest groups, and stand up to their fellow legislators in the General Assembly who represent the wealthier areas of the state.

In doing so, they will make enemies and lose large amounts of campaign contributions both from those interest groups and the all-powerful Democrat and Republican State Central Committees. Like the less fortunate welfare recipients in our region, they have become unhealthily dependent upon these inappropriate sources of income.

If your legislator demonstrates the gallantry to sever these destructive dependencies, vote for him...he is a good man.

Registered nurses

All 21 of the 1996 graduates of the Pikeville College Nursing Program pass the NCLEX-RN exam to become registered nurses.

Pike College nursing students attain 100 percent pass rate

Gayle Sunday, Pikeville College Nursing Division chairperson, announces that all twenty-one 1996 Nursing graduates have successfully passed the National Council Licensure Exam (NCLEX-RN) to become registered nurses.

Three of the graduates are Floyd Countians.

"This is such a tremendous achievement for these men and women," said Sunday. "I'm just so delighted. Our students have worked very hard to reach this goal. What a wonderful way to mark the completion of my first year at Pikeville College."

The NCLEX-RN exam is designed to test competency in nursing, and every graduate of the RN program is required to take the exam. Students interested in becoming a registered nurse must complete four semesters of the nursing program. In addition to the academic portion of the nursing curriculum which students complete on campus, clinical practice is acquired in hospitals, nursing homes, and in doctors' offices in Pikeville and surrounding communities.

The following are second-year nursing students who passed the NCLEX-RN exam: Jana Blackburn of Regina; Rebecca Bradford of Prestonsburg; Harry Breece of Huntington, West Virginia; Doris Hall of Pikeville; John Justice of Betsy Layne; Lawanna McGuire of Phelps; Pat May of Sidney; Lynn Ann Minor of Pikeville; Angie Mullins of Kimper; Tena Pauley of Hellier; Anita Pittman of Grundy, Virginia; Jimmi Lou Rainey of Wheelwright; Teresa Reynolds of Phyllis; Melissa Smith of Elkhorn City; Patty Stanaker of Pikeville; Eloise Stiltner of Phyllis; Tina Sturgill of Raccoon; Kelly Thacker of Shelbyana; Mabel Ward of Whitesburg; and Bridgette Wright of Myra.

According to Sunday, many of these graduates will be working in the area "helping to maintain the high quality of medical care. They will be an asset to any employer," said Sunday.

Students interested in the nursing program can call the Office of Admissions at 606/432-9322.

PCC to offer literature course via television

A late addition has been made to the list of courses Prestonsburg Community College will offer via television during the 1996 Fall semester.

An introductory literature course, designed to help students understand and enjoy literature, will be offered via Kentucky Educational Television (WKPI-TV). The program, "Literary Vision," will air on WKPI at 2 p.m. Fridays, beginning September 6 and ending November 29.

For information on registering to earn college credit for this course, contact the PCC Admissions Office at 886-3863 before August 20.

Specific questions concerning the content of the course may be directed to Monette Sturgill at 886-3863.

In June, Otter Creek Correctional Center's Vocational Business Department had three students to receive diplomas in the Financial Assistant Program. To graduate from the program, the students must complete the required business classes and pass the Kentucky Tech KVAT test. Two programs are available at OCC, Financial Assistant and Management Assistant. All three of the June graduates have now completed both programs. Since the start of the program, there has been a total of eleven diplomas earned. Pictured in the front row are Paul Mullen, student; Diana Anderson, teacher; and Greg Pickett, student. Pictured in the back row are Michael Cooper, Warden; Linda Wilson, teacher; and Michael Haney, student. Graduated in May, but not pictured were Bruce Drumm, financial assistant and Anthony Duarte, management assistant.

St. Jude's Bike-A-Thon at Wayland

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital announced this week that Sandy Stapleton has agreed to be the coordinator of the St. Jude Children's Research Hospital's Bike-A-Thon in Wayland on September 14.

St. Jude Children's Research Hospital was founded by entertainer Danny Thomas. The institution opened its doors to the public in 1962 to combat catastrophic diseases that afflict our children. St. Jude Hospital is non-secretarian, non-discriminatory, and covers all costs of care beyond those reimbursed by insurance.

At St. Jude, scientists and physicians are working side-by-side seeking not only a better means of treatment, but also the causes, cures, and prevention of these terrible killers. All findings and information gained at the hospital are shared freely with doctors and hospitals all over the world. Thanks to St. Jude Hospital, children who have leukemia, Hodgkin's disease, sickle-cell anemia, and other child-killing diseases now have a better chance to live.

The Bike-A-Thon program this year is dedicated to ten-year-old Amy Lyon, who represents one of more than 14,000 patients who have been treated at this world-renowned pediatric research and treatment facility. Unfortunately, after treatment for fluid build-up, several hospital visits, tests, and numerous calls to doctors, Amy's problem had not been diagnosed. Finally, Amy's last doctor referred her to St. Jude Hospital in August 1994 after diagnosing her with a form of brain cancer. There she underwent surgery and a series of chemotherapy and radiation treatments that ended in December 1994.

Unfortunately, the treatments have not succeeded in curing Amy's cancer; however, the tumors are not growing, and according to Sue, Amy's mother, "this is good news, because Amy's tumors have been very aggressive." Amy is only one example of the hope that is provided by our successful research, patient care, and educational programs made possible by the Bike-A-Thon campaign at this internationally recognized hospital.

In Kentucky, 404 children and their families have gone to St. Jude Hospital and received total medical care for a catastrophic illness. Thousands of others have benefitted from the research findings that have developed better and more successful treatment methods.

Tentative schedule set for JW festival

The Jenny Wiley Pioneer Festival compiled a tentative schedule of events for the October festival at a committee meeting Monday night at Prestonsburg City Hall.

The new festival incorporated some of the events of the old Jenny Wiley Festival into its schedule, but it will also feature several new competitions.

On Saturday, October 13, rollerblade races will usher in a look to sidewalk racing. Paula Goble will spearhead the contest that begins at 1 p.m.

Wade Allen, Fred Goble, and Jim Sparks will oversee an archery and pioneer competition that will take stamina and ability to win the prize.

Several activities will be open for the youth of the area. A bubble gum blowing contest will be held Wednesday evening at 8 p.m. A youth gospel sing will be held at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

Also on Thursday, festival attendees can throw a pie at their favorite Floyd County personality at the pie throwing booth at 6:30 p.m.

The Daywind Talent Show will also be held Thursday. The talent search begins at 7:30 and will be spearheaded by Helene Branham.

Other events at the festival include a pie social at the Prestonsburg Senior Citizens Center on Tuesday; a dinner sponsored by the Mountain Manor Nursing Home on Monday; a tennis tournament sponsored by the Floyd County Bar Association on Monday; a carnival in the Sallye Gate Parking Lot, beginning Wednesday; It's a Dog's Life, Saturday; costume contest on Saturday; line dancing by the Pioneer Prancers on Saturday; Highland Folk Festival, Friday and Saturday; and a parade in downtown Prestonsburg on Saturday.

A gospel sing, originally planned for October 12 in the Mountain Arts Center will, instead, be held in the municipal parking lot due to a delay in the center's opening.

MARVIN LEE GEORGE
(8/17/64 - 4/15/93)

SON,
Even though we can't be with you on your birthday, I said a prayer for you today.

And I know GOD must of heard, I felt the answer in my heart Although he spoke not a word. I didn't ask for Wealth or fame. I asked him to send treasures Of a far more lasting kind. I asked that he be near you, At the start of each new day, To Grant you health and blessing And friends to share your way, I asked for happiness for you In all things great and small, But it was for his loving care I prayed the most of all. He picked you to be with him, even though I didn't want you to go. So take good care of the rest of our loved ones Until I can be there, too. For you took my heart with you the day he called you home.

Baby, we love and miss you Your Mother, Sisters, Brothers, Nieces, Nephews, Dee-Dee, Shay-Shaw, and everyone else who loves you.

Chamber publication to promote Floyd County

The Floyd County Chamber of Commerce has good news for the business community.

The Chamber is in the process of compiling information for a "Quality of Life Publication" that should be completed this fall.

This directory features Floyd County as an attractive and progressive area in which to live, work and do business.

The Chamber will distribute this two-year publication, with a center fold out county map, to tourists, new residents, Chamber Members, and businesses.

It will also be displayed throughout our county's communities in strategic locations.

The publishing company for this project, Mosher-Adams Inc. currently has a representative in this area to offer advertising space to interested Floyd County businesses.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce will receive priority location, in addition to discounts on all advertisements placed in the publication.

However, this project is in conjunction with a Chamber Membership Drive which means that those businesses who are interested in joining the Chamber are in luck. They, too, will receive reduced advertisements rates offered to members if they decide to join the Chamber at this time.

This publication is an opportunity for all businesses to display their contributions to the Quality of Life in Floyd County. The publishing company collects no money in advance, and satisfaction is guaranteed.

The publishing representative, Sandy Semerad, will be in the area for approximately two more weeks, so all interested businesses are urged to take immediate. To place an ad, contact the Chamber of Commerce Executive Director, Carla S. Coburn, or Sandy Semerad at (606) 886-1341.

Guidelines set for lunch program

The Kentucky Department of Education, August 2, released 1996-97 income criteria for school lunch program eligibility. The new schedule replaces the 1995-96 criteria.

The Floyd County School Districts offers free and reduced-price meals to students from eligible families. Families should apply at the school to participate.

Studies show that children who eat breakfast or lunch at school have good attendance rates, longer attention spans and improved academic performance.

Each year the state revises guidelines for districts to follow when implementing free and reduced-price meal programs. The revision is based in part on the cost of living index, and children from families whose income is at or below specific levels are eligible for free or reduced-price meals.

School districts participating in the National School Lunch or School Breakfast program will send application forms to students' homes for parents or guardians to fill out and return. School officials review applications and determine eligibility. Additional forms are available at the principal's office in each school and may be submitted at any time during the year. Parents may call the superintendent's office in their district for more information and application forms.

The 1995-96 family size and income criteria for determining eligibility are:

- Free meals: A family of one who earns up to $10,062; a family of two earning up to $13,468; a family of three earning up to $16,874; a family of four earning up to $20,280; a family of five earning up to $23,686; a family of six earning up to $27,092; a family of seven earning up to $30,498; and a family of eight earning up to $33,904.

- Reduced meals: A family of one earning between $10,063 to $14,319; a family of two earning from $13,469 to $19,166; a family of three earning from $16,875 to $24,013; a family of four earning from $20,281 to $28,860; a family of five earning between $23,687 and $33,707; a family of six earning between $27,093 and $38,554; a family of seven earning between $30,499 and $43,401; and a family of eight earning between $33,905 and $48,248.

For each additional family member, add $3,406 per year to the income level for free meals and $4,847 to the income level for reduced-price meals.

Information needed to determine eligibility includes child's name; food stamp or Aid for Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) case number; amount of family income and number of members of the household if not receiving food stamps or AFDC; and the signature of an adult household member verifying information.

The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility and verifying data.

Details are available from Paul McElwain, Division of School and Community Nutrition, 1024 Capital Center Drive, Frankfort, KY 40601; phone (502) 573-4390.

Forest management assistance is available

As a public service to the landowners of Floyd County, the Kentucky Division of Forestry offers free management assistance. At no charge or obligation to you, a professional forester can examine your woodland and recommend multiple-use forest management techniques applicable to your personal goals and objectives, whether those objectives include timber production, wildlife habitat improvement, soil and water conservation, forest recreation, or a combination of these. The forester will then prepare a written management plan for your property to guide you in making future management decisions.

The Division of Forestry also administers several incentive programs that reimburse the landowner up to 65 percent of their total costs for any management work completed. This money is available for forest improvements, wildlife habitat enhancement, tree planting and soil and water protection.

Any landowner who is interested in this program or who would like more information can contact the Kentucky Division of Forestry's Eastern District office in Betsy Layne at 1-800-866-0048, Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Morris hurt but not serious; new addition

Prestonsburg running back John Morris has suffered a bruised shoulder and has been limited in hitting or being hit in the Blackcats training camp.

Morris, who rushed for close to 1,000 yards last year, is expected to be the feature back for coach John Derossett's ballclub.

Morris will help shoulder the drive for Prestonsburg as the squad looks to return to its glory years and go further in this year's playoffs.

The Blackcats got a shot in the arm (as if they needed it), but their booster was an unfortunate loss for Betsy Layne when Jarrod Newsome transferred from the Bobcats to Prestonsburg this school year.

Newsome was the leading defensive player for Betsy Layne last year and a solid ball carrier. According to Newsome, he had not been cleared to play for the Blackcats as of Wednesday.

Newsome makes the second Bobcat to come to Prestonsburg this year. Kris Lawson, another defensive standout, also, made the move to Prestonsburg.

These in-county transfers bother me. I know that isn't going to cause anyone to shed any tears, but what has happened to loyalty to our high schools.

I feel the Floyd County Board of Education members — they are the only ones who can do it — should adopt a rule that would prohibit in-county transfers, except for academic reasons. After students/athletes transfer (I don't care who they are), they should not be allowed to participate in sports for that school year.

The way it is now, you can play football at one school, transfer just before basketball season and play, but be allowed to return for the baseball season or transfer yet to another school.

Sounds silly? It can happen. Last year Thomas Jenkins, who could play basketball for any school in the state of Kentucky and beyond, told me, "if we don't win a game at Allen Central, I'm staying there." I like that!

Now that he is in the Prestonsburg camp, I hope Jarrod will be permitted to play for the Blackcats. The camp is still awaiting the final word from the KHSAA.

NEW ADDITION

South Floyd head football coach Donnie Daniels and wife Sandy have a new addition. Well, the new addition came into the world back on July 20, but I just found out about it.

Brett Aaron Daniels weighed 7-pounds and was 20-inches long when he made his debut. We congratulate Coach Daniels and Sandy. They are just outstanding folks and we appreciate them.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Once again, the Floyd County Board of Education, Tuesday night, failed to act on naming the new school being built on Stephens Branch or the old schools at Martin and Maytown.

The faithful Purple Flashes want Martin to remain just that. But the new school, a middle school, will be the new home of Maytown students as well.

Several motions were made at the board meeting for naming the new school, but all died for lack of a second. Central Middle School, Martin Middle School, Mays Valley Elementary were the suggested names. Mascot names, such as the Lil' Rebs and the Bears, were rejected as well.

It's funny, the board of education had no problem naming the other county schools. As I recall, it wasn't a problem coming up with the name for Adams Middle School. Neither was Duff

Car show and cruisin' expected to draw many

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Cars show buffs will get a little something extra this year when the Trans Financial Red, White and Blue Car Show takes off on Saturday, October 19 at the bank's Martin parking lot.

That little extra will be a flashback to the late '50s and early '60s when a routine called "cruisin'" will be revived. All car buffs are encouraged to be part of the event on Friday, October 18 when all the cars are line up and begin a cruise of the county.

Drivers in the cruise must be owners of an antique car or a later model convertible.

The cruise includes a journey to the lake, a drive through Prestonsburg and possibly Betsy Layne before the drivers return to the bank where they will sit around and talk about the car owners' pride and joy — their cars.

Restaurants may have booths set up in the parking lot to feed the hungry car owners.

The car show will begin with registration at 8 a.m. at the Martin parking lot. The show will use out-of-town judges with plaques going to the top 50 winners.

Last year's show drew more than 90 entries, in spite of the rain. The show has become one of the largest car shows in Eastern Kentucky and draws cars from all around the tri-state area.

The Best of Show will receive a $1,000 savings bond. Other prizes such as cases of oil, front end alignments, dash plaques and others will be presented as well.

Registration fee for the show is only $10.

For more information, call 285-6332.

Last year memories, incentive for Blackcats to work hard

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Last season the Prestonsburg Blackcats suffered their first losing season since 1989 when the Cats finished 5-6 under Bill Letton in his second year at Prestonsburg. The Cats posted a disappointing 4-7 mark last year but, according to senior quarterback Mike Castle (6'2", 180), the Blackcats should roar loud this year.

"We were very disappointed in our record last year," said Castle. "That is why we worked so hard in the weight room this summer. We did well at the weight meets and we nearly killed ourselves this summer in conditioning, working hard to get in better shape."

Castle said the hard work has helped the Blackcats forget last year and look forward to this season.

"Our attitudes have changed a lot from last year and earlier this summer," he said. "We don't want to lose this year and I think we will be a pretty good football team."

Castle became Prestonsburg's regular quarterback after the third game last season, replacing Keith Marsillett. While he was an inexperienced signal caller as far as varsity experience went, he showed he was capable of taking the reins. He said last year was a learning season for him and he hopes to avoid some of the pitfalls of last season. He feels he has matured as a quarterback.

"I want to make fewer mistakes than I did last year," said Castle. "I want to cut down on the mental mistakes and keep the team together better. Leading the team is a big priority for me this year. No fumbles — and I want to try and throw less interceptions. I just want to make the big plays at the right time."

Castle said his team showed they could play when they took on Belfry last Friday in a scrimmage game. Although the Cats were sluggish at first, he feels they were right there later.

"We started slow against Belfry," he said. "Then we started moving the football real well. Hopefully, if our defense plays like they did, our offense will fall in place."

Castle feels it is unfair for fans to compare this year's Prestonsburg team with the famed '93 team that went to the state 2A finals. He said there is a very noticeable difference in that team and this year's squad.

"I don't think we're as good as the '93 team," said Castle. "They were a lot faster and had much better speed than we do. They seem to come together a lot better than we do."

Prestonsburg lost one receiver from last year, but Castle says the returning players should make for a very interesting season.

"We have just about everyone back from last year," he said. "We lost one receiver (Jonathan Estep) but we have most everyone else back and we should be able to move the ball better this year. I'm looking forward to it."

Prestonsburg will be playing in one of the tougher 2A districts around the state that includes state champion Breathitt County. Although the Bobcats were hit hard by graduation last year, Castle thinks they will be the team to beat this year.

"Breathitt County will come back with a good team," he said. "They lost a lot from last season but they are going to put out a good team every year. They have a good coach in Mike Holcum. I understand they have a few big linemen coming back." Whitesburg, another team hit hard at graduation, will retain the sting they have had for the past several years, according to Castle.

"Whitesburg will be a good team. They always are. They lost a lot from last year, as did Breathitt County, but they are tough every year."

County rival Allen Central brings a ton of seniors in this year, and Castle feels the Rebels could be in the thick of the district race.

"Allen Central should be pretty good this year. They have a lot of seniors back. They lost their quarterback and a few other key players from last year, but they still be a tough team.

"Betsy Layne should be decent this year. I don't know how they will fare after they lost so much from last year. Morgan County and Powell County struggled last year, but I think Powell County may be able to turn it up a notch this year."

"It's going to be a tough district. There will be a lot of hard hitting, and everyone will be ready and wanting to get after you this year."

Castle's top three teams in the district: Breathitt County, Whitesburg and Allen Central.

Castle passed for 403 yards last season (unofficially).

Allen Central, South Floyd in tonight's grid

The South Floyd Gridorama will allow county football fans to get a preview of four area teams before the season begins August 30 tonight at Brackett Field in Wheelwright.

The first game will pit coach Glenn Reeves Allen Central Rebels against Shelby Valley in a 6 p.m. start. Coach Tom Searcy's Wildcats finished 1-9 last year in Class 3A. That win came against the Pike Central Hawks, who went winless last season.

Allen Central finished 5-5 last year and 3-3 in district play. Coach Reeves team will be warming up for its August 30 opener at home against Elkhorn City.

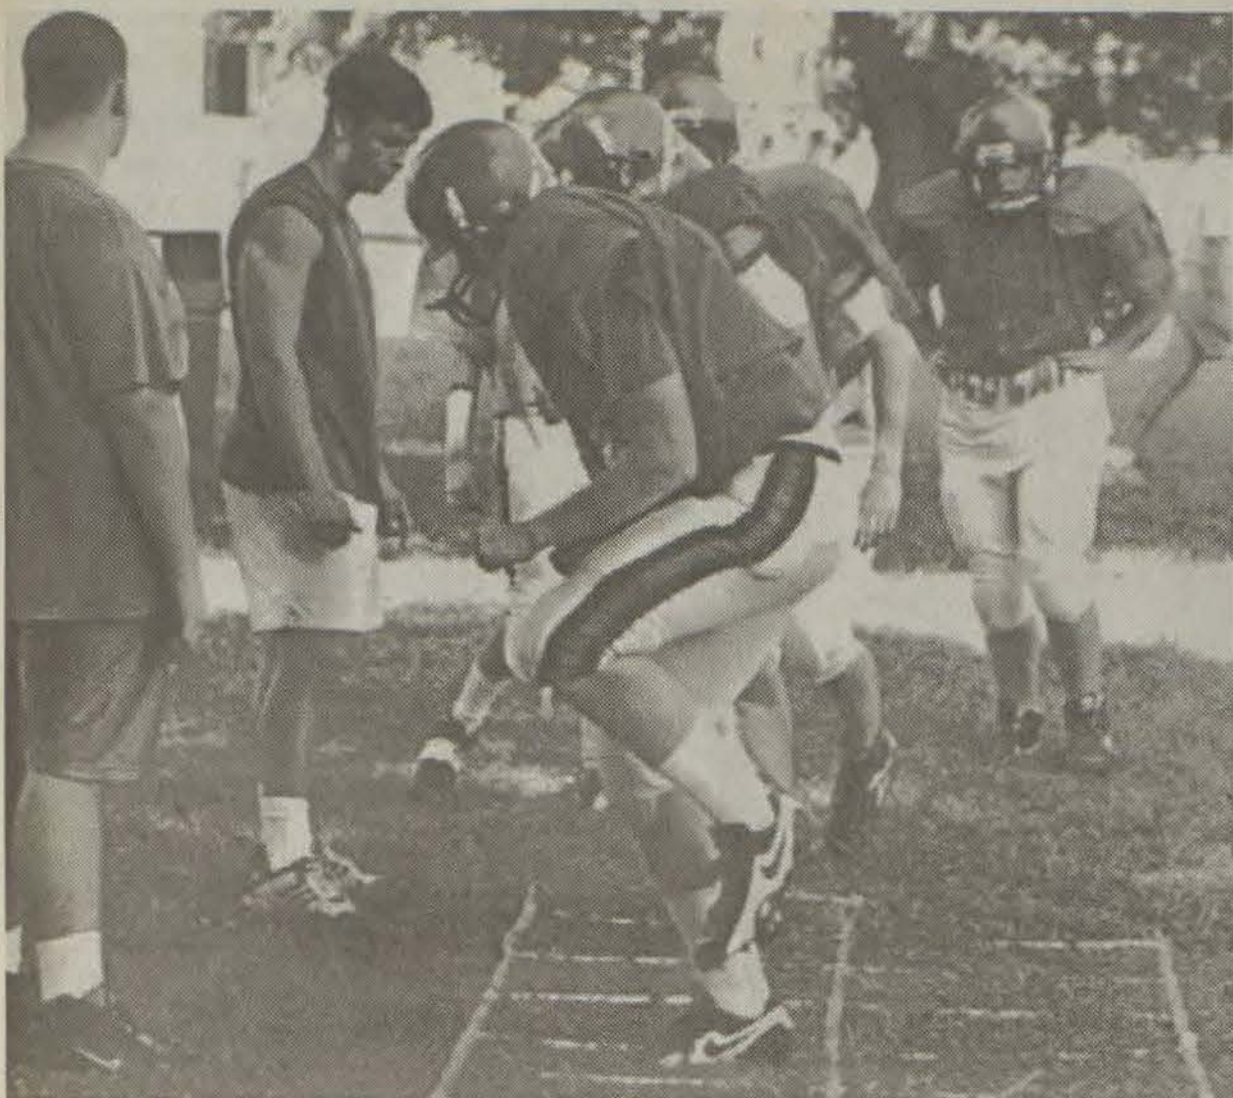

South Floyd will host Magoffin County in the second game set to start around 8 p.m. The Raiders will rely on the arm of junior Nick Compton to carry the offense this season. But South Floyd will not be without a threat out of the backfield.

Magoffin County's accomplishments last season is a matter of record. The Hornets finished 7-3 last year and made their first play-off appearance. Gone is a boat load of talent, mainly in Mike Caba, Jason Wages, and Grayson Smith. Coach Mitch Caba's Hornets will return some solid young players, and it should be a good preseason battle between the two schools.

FCYSA holds late registration at PCC field

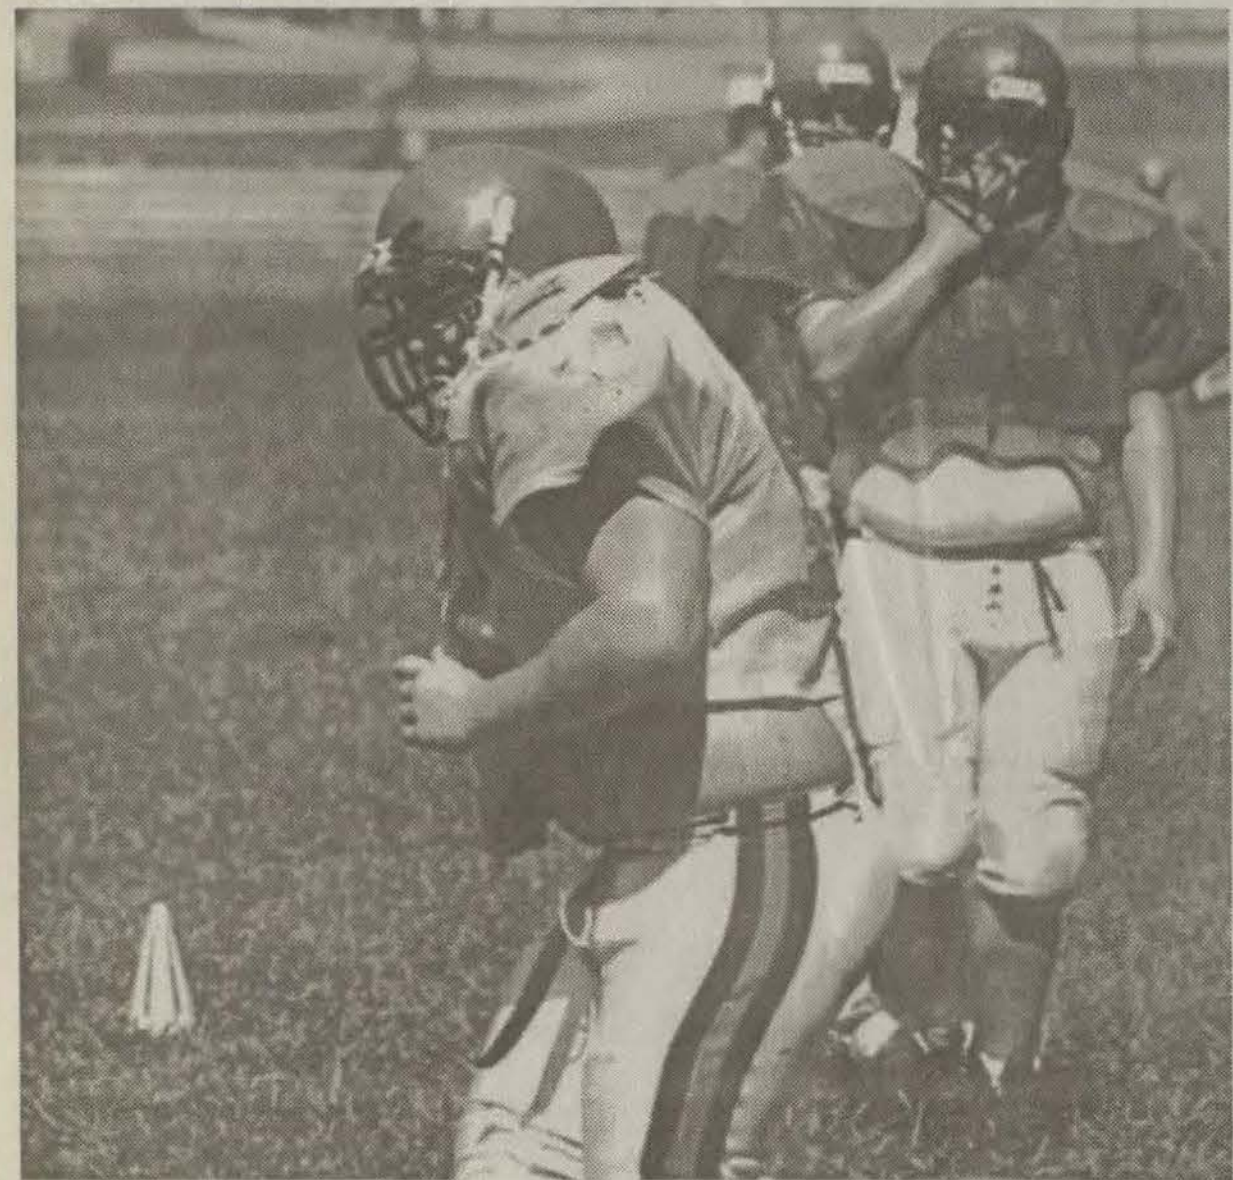

Late registration of players for the third season of Floyd County Youth Soccer will be held the evenings of Tuesday, August 20, and Thursday, August 22, at the Prestonsburg Community College fields from 6-7 p.m.

Registration forms and information may also be obtained through any coach or board member. The registration fee per player is $20 with practices during the weekday evenings. Games will be played on Saturdays, and the season is set to start on September 7 and run through October 26.

ACTION-PACKED ANGLING IN AUTUMN

Although it may be difficult to imagine, fall is just around the corner. When the temperatures begin sliding down the thermometer and nature begins blazing with color, Kentucky's fishing gets even better.

As water temperatures begin dropping, almost all species of fish become more active. They seem to sense the impending cold weather and feed heavily in preparation on the lean weeks ahead. Lower temperatures allow fish to find their preferred comfort zone in shallow water, making fall fishing more productive than daytime, summertime angling.

Beginning in September and continuing well into November, black bass may be taken in the jumps with surface lures and crank baits. A surer and more productive technique may be casting shoreline cover areas, such as submerged stump-beds, stickups and fallen tree-laps.

Black bass aren't the only fish to be caught in the fall — crappie and white bass can be caught in abundance. During the day, schools of hungry crappie can be found in timbered coves and other submerged cover areas. At the same time, white bass can be found in jumps, on flats, submerged islands and the upper sections of embankments.

Those dedicated to seeking and catching muskie enter a highly productive period in the fall. These monster fish can be taken in certain rivers, and also Cave Run, Buckhorn and Green River lakes. These bodies of water have become some of the most outstanding muskie lakes in the entire country.

Sauger can be found below the locks and dams on the Ohio and Kentucky rivers. In western Kentucky, sauger will be abundant below the dam at Kentucky Lake. The tailwaters on Lake Cumberland is also a hot spot for sauger in the fall.

So hang in there, because as this hot and humid weather begins letting up, the good fishing will start kicking in!

KENTUCKY HUNTING, FISHING AND OUTDOOR EXPO

The Kentucky Hunting, Fishing and Outdoor Expo, Northern Kentucky's only true hunting and fishing show, returns to the Pendleton County Fairgrounds in Falmouth, August 23-25.

The Expo is the place outdoor enthusiasts can go to view the latest fishing boats and equipment, firearms, archery equipment and accessories. Last year's expo was the first event and drew over 5,000 spectators.

The schedule of events has a large variety that offers fun for the entire family. Some of the attractions include professional and sport fishing demonstrations, kids' casting contest, bow hunting seminars, fur trapping, taxidermy displays, native American arts and crafts, woodcrafts and pioneer crafts, live music, canoeing, kayaking and rafting demonstrations, animal exhibits, hunting dog parade, food booths and much more.

In addition, representatives from the League of Kentucky Sportsmen, the Kentucky Taxidermy Association, the Kentucky Division of Water and the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources will be on hand.

The event runs Friday, 4-10 p.m., Saturday, 9 a.m.-10 p.m. and Sunday, 9 a.m.-6 p.m. Admission is $3 per person, and children five and under are admitted free. The Expo is sponsored by the Pendleton County Chamber of Commerce.

Elementary a difficult name for the board to accept. Of course, Adams and Duff were named after former board members and the folks at Martin and Maytown don't want that.

As far as mascot names go, if I remember correctly, the students picked the name Bulldogs when Wayland and Garrett joined together.

Today? I suppose when they answer the phones at Martin or Maytown, they still say "Martin" or "Maytown" elementaries.

SCHEDULES...

We need schedules for grade school, freshmen, and junior varsity football games.

Speaking of the grade school football season, the grade school grid will be held at South Floyd this year. The shoot-out will be played Saturday, August 24, beginning that morning. Game matchups were not available at press time.

Until Wednesday, good sports everyone and be good sports! Take the kids to Sunday School and church this Sunday.

MSU's Upward Bound program to celebrate 30th anniversary

Morehead State University's Upward Bound program will celebrate its 30th anniversary with a reunion on Saturday, September 21.

All those who were participants in the program and would like to participate in the reunion are encouraged to contact the Upward Bound office at 1-800-5UPWARD (587-9273), according to Jennifer Cady, coordinator of Upward Bound.

Upward Bound, administered through MSU's Academic Services Center, is a part of the federally funded TRIO program. An academic program for high school students, it is designed to increase the student's motivation and academic skills needed for post secondary education.

Local site to offer Kentucky motorcycle rider education course

Courses in the Kentucky Motorcycle Rider Education Program will be offered late this summer and fall at Hazard Community College.

The program, which was established in 1994 by Eastern Kentucky University's Traffic Safety Institute to meet safety and educational needs statewide, includes courses for new riders wishing to learn the fundamentals of motorcycle operation and for licensed motorcycle riders who would like to refresh and polish their skills.

The basis course, offered on weekends, consists of classroom and on-cycle exercises that prepare a new rider for the street. Successful completion can result in a waiver of the license skill test and, in some cases, a break on insurance costs. Motorcycles and helmets are provided.

The advanced course is an eight-hour program of classroom and on-cycle exercises. Participants use their own street-legal motorcycle to practice basic skills and street-riding maneuvers. Completion can result in an insurance discount.

For more information, including program dates, about the local course, call Judy Mitchell at 606-439-5856.

Landmark verdict issued by Martin Co. jury

by Mark Grayson
The Martin County Sun

By a vote of 11-1 a Martin County jury, made up of nine women and three men, found in favor of Kentucky Farm Bureau Insurance Company and local agent Bill Bo Davis, Tuesday, August 13, when they decided that Roger and Kimberly Mann intentionally set fire to their $160,000 home to collect the insurance. The home was located on Kentucky Rt. 2031 at Big Elk Creek where the Manns currently reside in a mobile home on the same site where the burned out house once stood.

Roger Mann, 49, and his wife Kim, 30, were married in October of 1989 and the fire started in the early morning hours of December 26 of that same year.

Kentucky State Police Detective Paul Estep testified Monday that he "had not found probable cause that the couple had intentionally burned the home." He said no charges were ever lodged against the Manns.

But the jury agreed with attorneys Leo Marcum, of Inez and E. Patrick Moores, of Lexington, who delivered the argument for Ky. Farm Bureau, and awarded the Manns no money in the case.

Davis commented during jury deliberations, which lasted only twenty-five minutes, that his company had decided to take a stand against the alleged fraud with this case which had been in the court system for seven years.

"We hope by winning this case that others who may think about committing insurance fraud will think again," Davis said.

Farm Bureau had paid Matewan National Bank, the holder of a mortgage on the Mann's home, $93,600 on a policy with $160,000 in coverage due to their claim that the Manns intentionally set the fire to collect the insurance money.

The Manns hired Inez lawyer Leonard Stayton to plead their case in order to recover the remainder of the policy money for them.

Stayton argued that coal had exploded in the home's fireplace and had projected embers onto the floor causing the fire to start. The Manns had left the home temporarily because the heating system had broken down Stayton said.

But the jury didn't buy it.

For the first time in county history, people who were not even charged with arson by police, were "found guilty" of just that by a sitting jury.

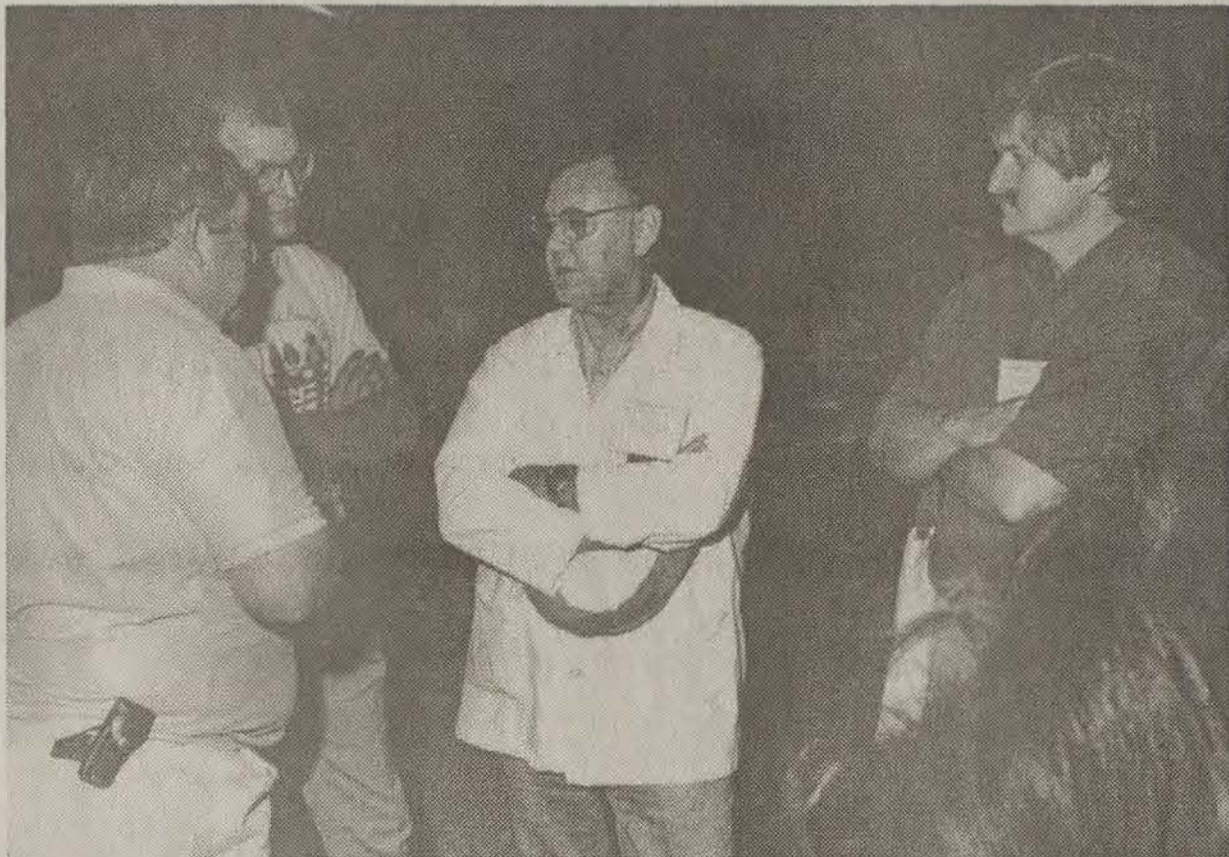

Marcum explained to the jury that the burden of proof is not the same for criminal proceedings as it is for civil cases. He said that in criminal cases all twelve jurors must agree that proof beyond a reasonable doubt had been presented but in a civil case only nine of twelve need to agree that a preponderance of evidence presented is believable.

Circuit Judge James A. Knight presided over the case which began Monday. Knight said the case was "unusual in that some criminal questions had to be answered in a civil trial."

"Martin County has long been known as a problem area for insurance companies. Everyone has to pay when people burn buildings or set up wrecks, this is a case that may have a great bearing on the future of our county," Davis said.

Kimberly Mann was shocked at the verdict. "I wish everybody in the county could have heard Bill Bo (Davis) testify that Farm Bureau, by policy, cancels all men who are awarded the marital home in divorce cases because they become bad risks," Mann said.

MSU hosts veterinarians

Nearly 200 people were on hand for Morehead State University Veterinary Technology Program's Morehead Clinic Day. Veterinarians, technicians and veterinary medical staff from across the country came to learn the latest in technology from a number of national and international guest speakers including Dr. John Thurman, second from right, veterinarian at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign and diplomat at the American College of Veterinary Anesthesiologists. The program, an annual continuing education conference held at MSU's facilities, was sponsored by the Buffalo Trace Veterinary Medical Association of (BVMA) and Kentucky Veterinary Medical Association (KVMA). Among those attending the two-day event were, from left, Dr. Teddy Cundiss of Beattyville, Dr. Robert Godman of Glasgow and Dr. Rudolph Ousley of Prestonsburg who had an opportunity to talk with Dr. Thomas during a break. Two Pike County men going to U.S. Transplant Games

Twenty-three Kentuckians, including two Pike Countians, who have received life-saving organ transplants of heart, lung, kidney, or pancreas will travel to Salt Lake City, Utah, August 21-26, as "Team Kentucky" to participate in the U.S. Transplant Games. Eugene Sisco, formerly of Martin County, but who lives in Pikeville, and Mike Titus, also of Pikeville, will be among approximately 1,500 transplant athletes to compete in five days of Olympic-style sporting events.

The games, held every two years, demonstrate that organ transplantation works and that transplant recipients can go on to lead normal, healthy, active lives. The games are also a tribute to the donors and their families who have made it possible for the athletes to have healthy lives.

Prosecutors seek stiffer penalty against Gallie Isaac

by Jerry Pennington
The Big Sandy News

Following two days of jury selection, the second trial of Lawrence County Pastor Gallie Isaac Sr., was postponed Thursday, August 8, after the sodomy charge he was facing was amended by the prosecutors shortly before the trial was set to begin.

Isaac, 79, was scheduled to stand trial on a single count of third-degree sodomy, but Lawrence Circuit Judge Stephen N. Frazier granted the prosecution's motion to change the charge to first-degree sodomy, which carries a more serious penalty. If convicted, Isaac could face up to 20 years in prison under the amended charge.

Also on Thursday, Frazier granted a motion filed by Isaac's attorney, Eldred "Bud" Adams Jr., asking for more time to prepare a defense for the new charge.

Prosecutor Luke Morgan, an assistant attorney general, said the indictment was changed to reflect the evidence in the case, but said he couldn't go into specifics because it deals with the facts and evidence regarding the charge. Isaac is charged with performing oral sex on a teenage boy in the fall of 1993.

No new date has been set for the trial, and Morgan said the case would probably not be tried until after the new year since they had almost exhausted the jury pool. A total of 82 jurors were called in to seat a panel of 11 women and two men, which were dismissed following the continuance.

"I think we're probably not going to get another case here this year," Morgan said.

Adams said Judge Frazier did the only thing he could do under the circumstances.

"All the trial preparation and all the information given by the Commonwealth indicated that there would be a trial on the charge of third-degree sodomy," Adams said. "Judge Frazier used the wisdom of Solomon and cut the baby in half to be fair to both sides."

Morgan agreed that Frazier was fair in his decision.

"It was difficult on the families to get ready for this—both the victim's family and the defendant's family," Morgan said. "But, as the judge said, justice required a continuance."

Adams said he plans to file more motions in the case that will raise legal questions the court will have to consider, but wouldn't give specifics on what the motions would contain.

"Just stay tuned to the Lawrence County Circuit Clerk's Office," Adams said.

The charge Isaac was to face in the trial is one of 29 contained in an indictment issued in 1994. Frazier divided the charges into separate trials following a motion by Adams that argued that it would be unfair to try all of them at once because the number alone would make Isaac appear to be a "bad person."

Isaac was convicted on 13 counts of sodomy and sexual abuse charges by a Boyd County jury in November. He was sentenced to 25 years in prison, but remains free on a $150,000 property bond pending an appeal of his case.

The next trial for Isaac is scheduled for November 6, in West Liberty, in which he faces one count of first-degree sexual abuse against a 7-year-old boy. That charge stems from another indictment issued against Isaac in February, bringing the total number of boys making claims of sexual abuse against Isaac to nine.

Morgan said he looks forward to trying the November case.

"We're not going to let go of Gallie Isaac," Morgan said.

Pike Co. tourism continues work on historical cemetery

by Rodney Mullins
Appalachian News-Express

The Pikeville/Pike County Tourism Commission is focusing on the segregation of the Dils Cemetery as a historical attraction, and the project should be completed by September, officials said.

"The previous focus of the cemetery has been the graves of Randolph and Sarah McCoy and their daughter Rosanna since the popularity of the Hatfield and McCoy Feud," said Tourism director Suzanne Rasnick. "Now we're going to focus on more of the cemetery."

The Kentucky Department of African-American Heritage Council last year approved a $7,500 matching grant to be used toward researching the graves of African-Americans buried at the cemetery.

"This will provide a means of interpreting history for both area residents and schoolchildren, in addition to visitors who want to know more about the history of Pike County," said Rasnick. "It reflects a lot of our history here that we have neglected."

While research, led by Peggy Davis and an 18-member staff, continues on the graves, cleanup crews continue to prepare the site for opening. Davis and her crew have been gathering information concerning the names on the grave stones using census data, interviews with the local African-American community and funeral home records.

The Dils Cemetery, located at the mouth of Chloe Creek in Pikeville, is thought to be the first integrated cemetery in Eastern Kentucky. Col. John Dils Jr., the leader in the Union's 39th Kentucky Infantry, bought the property in 1871 and excluded the cemetery from the deed when he sold it years later. More than 500 graves rest on the two-acre site. Records indicate that Col. Dils allowed his freed slaves, as well as their descendants, to be buried at the cemetery.

Last year, steps to the cemetery were constructed through a collective effort by the Pikeville City Commission, Pike County Fiscal Court and the Pikeville/Pike County Tourism Commission. The steps provide easy access to the cemetery.

Planned improvements to the cemetery include a historical marker pointing out the segregation of the cemetery, brochures elaborating on the segregation and materials to be integrated into the county and city school systems' curriculums.

The marker will be black with gold lettering, similar to historical markers already in place around the region. It will contain a poem by Effie Waller-Smith called "A Mountain Graveyard." Waller-Smith is the daughter of Frank Waller, who was educated on the same plantation as Alex Haley's ancestor Kunta Kinte. The marker will also explain the significance of the attraction.

Brochures giving full details of the section of the cemetery, including maps and drawings of the gravesites, will be made available to out-of-town visitors and local residents who wish to see the cemetery. Thelma Crawford, an artist from Hazard, will be doing the drawings for the brochures.

The educational materials could be provided to teachers who wish to take their students on a tour of the cemetery or they can be used solely in the classroom without a tour, according to Rasnick.

Some notable people buried at the cemetery include:

- Lewis Dils, Pikeville's first postmaster.
- Mary Dils, the first female Pike Countian to graduate from college.
- Col. John Dils Jr., the union's 39th Kentucky Infantry leader, and
- Frank Waller, who not only served as Stonewall Jackson's aide during the Civil War, but also served him his last meal. Waller was a black migrant to Pike County who was the father of three children.

Soldiers from the Civil War, the French and Indian War, the Revolutionary War, the Spanish-American War and World War I are buried at the cemetery.

Although work should be completed in September, activities are being planned for a grand-opening ceremony in the spring. Rasnick said it could open as early as February during Black History Month.

Rasnick said the new section will help people feel good about their heritage.

"It will instill pride in our mountain heritage and offer our residents as well as people from out of town an opportunity to learn about history—a history and heritage that we can be proud of."

Inmate runs for Congress

Steve Maynard, of Inez, has spent the last several months as an inmate in the Big Sandy Regional Detention Center in Paintsville. But that fact hasn't deterred him from running for Congress.

Maynard, who is accused of physical abuse of his stepson, goes to trial August 26 on those charges. While he is awaiting his trial, Maynard has made a bid for 5th District U.S. Congressional seat in the November election. The incumbent is Hal Rogers, who is now in his eighth term in Congress.

Maynard, 35, has sought political office in the past. In the 1992 and 94 primaries, he ran for Congress as a Democrat. He also campaigned for governor in 1995.

— Abdala ("El Loco") Bucaram was elected president of Ecuador in July, six years after he briefly fled to Panama to avoid corruption charges. In the campaign, Bucaram sang in his own ads and reminded voters of his tenure as a moralistic police commissioner of the city of Guayaquil in the 1980s, during which he sometimes jumped off his motor scooter to rip the skirt hems loose on women who were showing too much leg. He downplays his Hitler-like mustache, blaming it on his incompetence at shaving.

— In June, radio station WWAX-FM in the Duluth, Minn., suburb of Hermantown began an all-commercials format. Said general manager J. Thomas Lijewski, commercials are an "art form that deserves to be respected." The station will air vintage ads, odd local and national ads, and bloopers, in addition to revenue-producing commercials.

— In July in Dadeville, Ala., Gabel Taylor, 38, who had just prevailed in an informal Bible-quoting contest, was shot to death by the loser.

THE ENTREPRENEURIAL SPIRIT

— Frank Fradella of Boynton Beach, Fla., charges $50 for custom-made, two-page love letters and poetry ("My words ... on your lips"). In February, a Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel reporter found several male customers who praised Fradella's work even though their women had left them.

INEXPLICABLE

— In June, federal inmate Arthur Morrison, who had served 46 months of his 51-month sentence for threatening former girlfriends, finally got his wish to withdraw his guilty plea to those charges, to go to trial, and to be his own lawyer. New York City prosecutors said their evidence (including audio tapes) is still overwhelming and that they would seek a sentence of at least 15 years. Morrison acknowledged that his chances of prevailing at trial were slim.

— Earlier this year, Michael J. Lewis Sr., serving time in Missouri for a gas station robbery, called the county attorney's office just out of curiosity, to find out why he had never been prosecuted for a 1993 bank robbery with which he had been charged. The prosecutor discovered that the file had been misplaced and that only a few months remained to bring Lewis to trial before the statute of limitations would run out. In June, Lewis, already serving 10 years, plea-bargained to another 10.

— Last year, at a reception for the African/African-American Summit Inc. conference in Senegal (a conference attended by Jesse Jackson and the late Ron Brown), the Club Med Senegal resort staged a skit in which two white staff members appeared in blackface, with white lips, garish clothes and white gloves to perform a musical number, and a riot nearly ensued. (In May 1996, offended organizations and individuals filed a $5 million lawsuit against Club Med in New York City.)

— In March in North Adams, Mass., on a public-access cable TV program about papier-mâché masks, Ms. Royce Patton, 28, abruptly changed the subject and accused a former neighbor of allowing two of her kids to have sex. Patton named the family, ran a video of all of the woman's seven children, and used obscenities in describing them. The former neighbor said the dispute with Patton was really over loans of money and a bottle of suntan lotion.

— In April, a 17-year-old boy drowned in the indoor pool at the Henry VIII Hotel in a suburb of St. Louis, Mo. The boy had jumped in with several others, but no one noticed that he had gone under because the pool's water was so murky that visibility was only three to four feet.

Popperri

Being in the newspaper biz, we have a habit of scanning the editorial pages of quite a few publications other than our own to see what the columnists and editorial writers are complaining about elsewhere.

The Whiner of the Week Award this week is a tie between ABC television, which pulled its coverage of the GOP's national convention before the acceptance speech of candidate Bob Dole; and columnist Ellen Goodman, who complains that all the sports metaphors used in describing political campaigns are part of some sort of sexist plot.

Well, now if that ain't a punch below the belt, we don't know what is.

ABC's decision to pack Ted Koppel and his "Nightline" gang off to other arenas (oops, sports metaphor alert) was based on the network's decision that there was "no more news" coming out of the Republican National Convention.

The acceptance speech of the party's presidential candidate isn't news?

Whoa, better call a T-O, baby. (That's another one of those sports metaphors which, when translated, means "how'd you get this job, moron?")

Actually, all the networks are complaining about the GOP convention, arguing that the whole thing is just a staged publicity stunt.

Well, duh.

What did they think it was going to be, a fist fight?

As for columnist Goodman, and her insinuations that all the "jock-talk" used to describe the political scene is evidence that "men still call all the shots," we can only wonder where she's been for the past couple of months...at a tea party?

She obviously has failed to notice that, thanks to the 1996 Summer Olympic Games, her own gender has become the preeminent sex on the sports scene.

The preponderance of sports metaphors may tick Goodman off, but we doubt most other women share her complaint, and for good reason.

They not only know the score, they're making the plays.

Critic's Corner

What do you get when you put an action movie on automatic pilot? The answer is, this latest Laurence Fishburne starrer.

Fishburne portrays prison inmate Piper who is chained at the wrist to fellow inmate Dodge (Stephen Baldwin) on a chain gang in Georgia. Both are being punished for arguing. However, once they're linked together against their wills, the fur really starts to fly. Taking advantage of this distraction, a third inmate grabs a gun and kills the guards, enabling Dodge and Piper to escape.

The local police are ready to go in and recapture the two but are mysteriously told to lay off since the case is being handled by the U.S. marshal. Not liking this explanation, a local detective named Gibson (Will Patton) starts looking into the situation anyway.

The plot centers around Dodge's computer hacking which got him into trouble by hacking into a Cuban mob leader's legit-cover business' mainframe, embezzled millions of dollars and then downloaded (without knowing it) data about the guy's money-laundering operation. Now, everyone wants that floppy disk—the attorney general, the Cuban mob, and all the other people involved in the mob's activities.

Fiery car chases ensue, bullets and fists fly, and the audience yawns through it all. The flick is so entirely predictable, you have to wonder why it wasn't all done by computer instead of using real-life actors who are simply wasted in this waste of film.

Of course, if you're looking for a good nap, by all means, go see this movie. Just bring some ear muffs since it gets really loud when it decides to blow something up.

P'burg native performs in wacky, messy Mega Mess-A-Mania

During the summer months, many young people earn extra cash by flipping burgers, mowing lawns or waiting tables. But for Prestonsburg native Shawn Slone, the idea of a summer job is helping kids get slimed or made into a banana split.

This summer, Slone plays the zany professor in Paramount's Kings Island's production of Mega Mess-A-Mania, the wacky NICKELODEON game show full of pies, GAK, and of course, Green Slime galore!

Becoming an actor was not part of Slone's career choices four years ago when he entered Morehead State University. At that time, he had plans of becoming a lawyer. During his freshman year, however, he attended a theatre department meeting and has been involved in theatre arts ever since.

"I auditioned for my first show and discovered I loved theatre," said Slone. "It's the most wonderful thing I have ever done!"

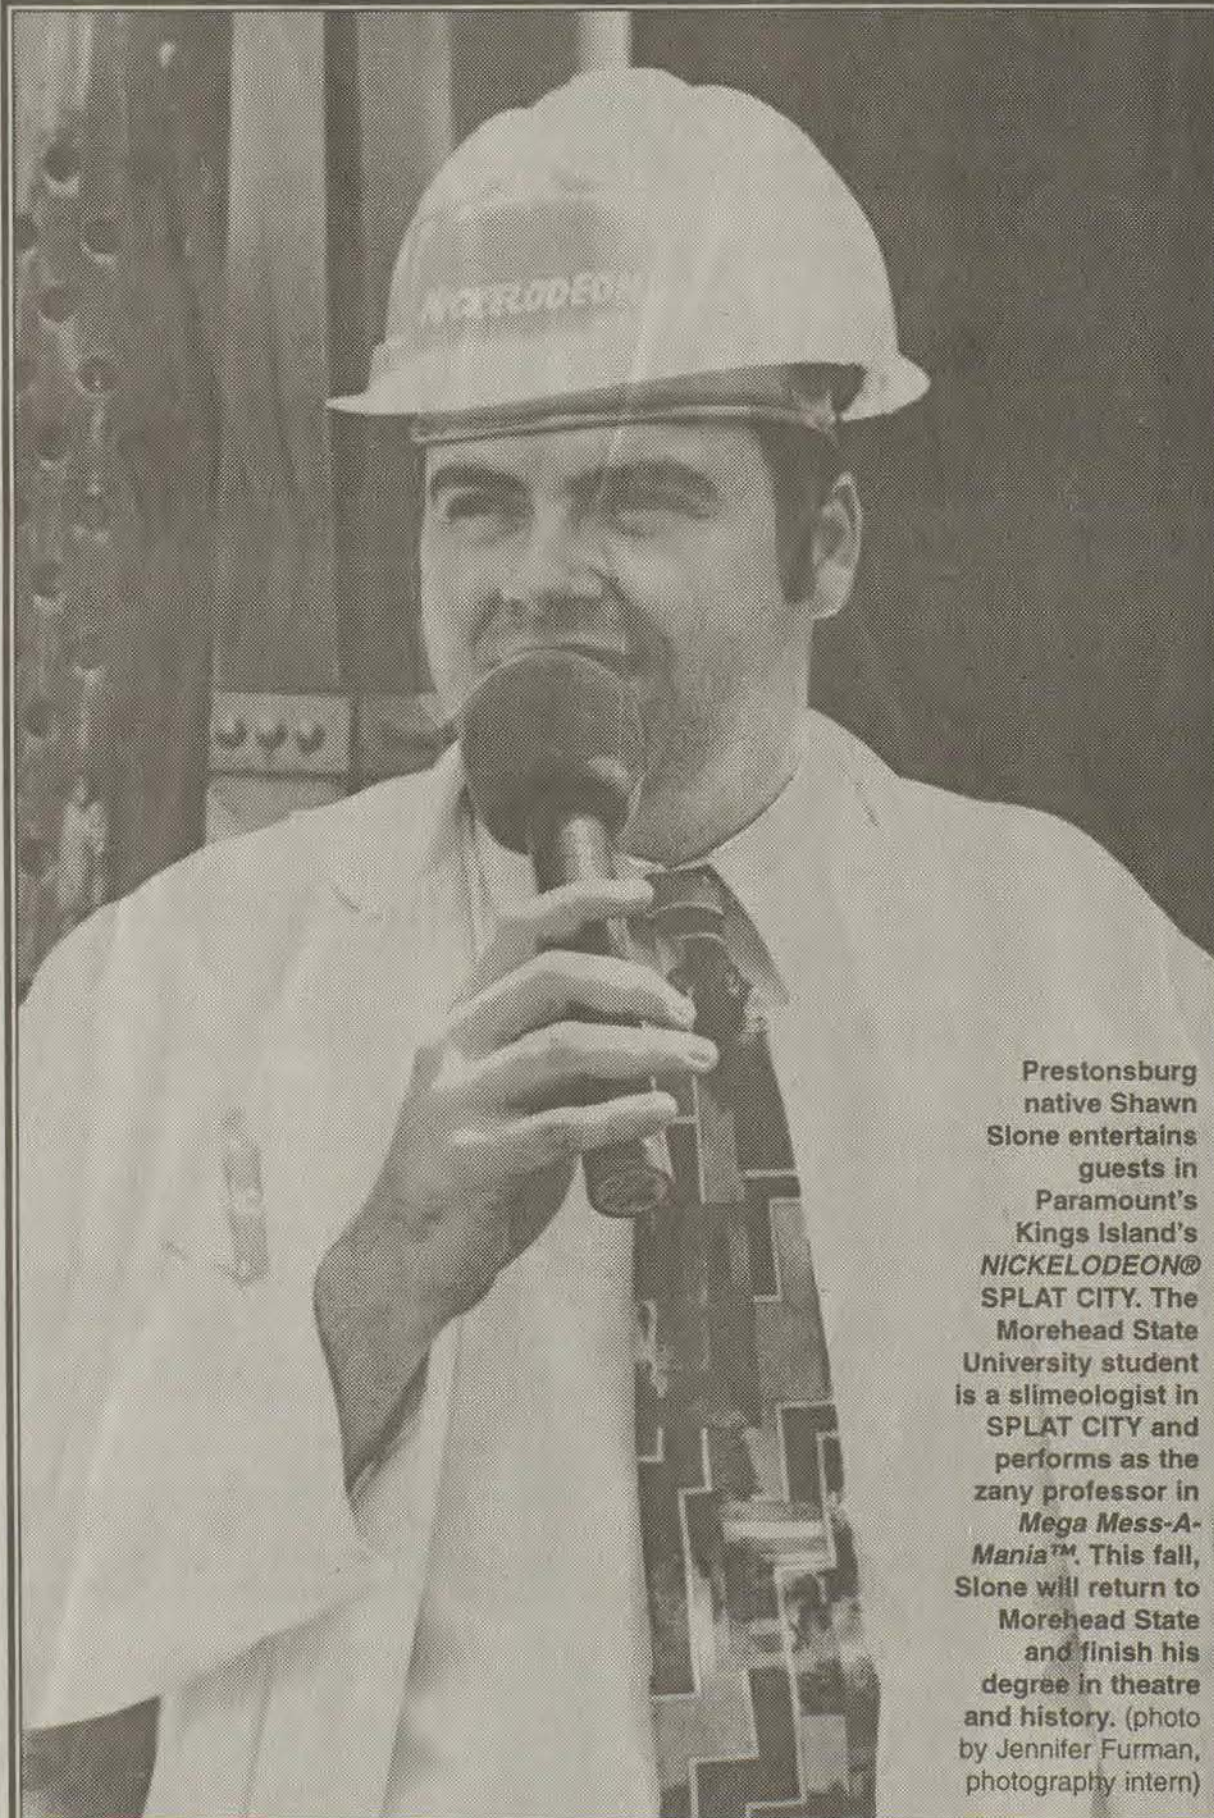

Slone's first theatre role was as the salesman in The Rose Tattoo, a role he said was created for him. He also appeared in St. Joan and won Morehead's best actor of the year award for his performance in All In The Timing.

Now, Slone says he is definitely holding off on attending law school. "I am going to start concentrating on stage theatre," said Slone.

Performing at Paramount's Kings Island is Slone's first professional theatre job. He says Mega Mess-A-Mania is an entertaining show, and the kids who participate make it worthwhile.

Like most college students, Slone watched the NICKELODEON shows Double Dare and You Can't Do That On Television as a kid. According to Slone, You Can't Do That was his favorite show and having been an avid viewer helps when acting in Mega Mess-A-Mania.

Upset on I-64

Several years ago, I wrote about my sister Melinda's friend, who shall forever remain nameless because of the unbelievable indiscretions that he has managed to keep hidden from his wife and other family members over the course of a lifetime. Once again, he has succeeded in outdoing even himself.

The story goes that several weeks ago, "Friend" left out for work early one morning feeling fine. About halfway between home and his destination, his stomach began rumbling accompanied by indescribable pain throughout the lower intestinal tract. Miraculously, there was a rest stop located on the route, and Friend accelerated. With perspiration dripping from his upper lip and brow, Friend bit his lower lip and prayed that the rest stop would soon appear on the horizon. Like an oasis out of the desert, Friend spied the rest stop in the distance and started pumping the brakes. When the car finally made it to a screeching halt, he hurriedly proceeded toward the restrooms.

"I know I resembled the Immodium Man in the commercial," Friend commented, "but I couldn't help it because I was afraid I wasn't going to make it. All I could think of was getting to a stall."

It seems that there were three toilet stalls located in the restroom. Friend, fearing his gastrointestinal rumblings would attract undesirable attention, chose the stall furthestmost and down wind from the door. After about fifteen minutes, still nervous, but relatively certain that much of the stomach distress had abated, Friend reached for the roll of toilet paper and froze in horror.

"There wasn't any! I couldn't believe it! What was I going to do?"

With his pants still around his ankles, Friend proceeded to hobble to the next stall and look for paper, but there was none. The last stall was empty, too. Just as he was about to panic, a man walked into the restroom. Startled, Friend, looking like E.T., held up his index finger and announced, "I can't find any paper." To which the stranger replied, "I was hoping it was something like that."

Embarrassed, Friend turned, and instead of taking his place inside the first stall, he proceeded to hobble back to the last stall where the dirty deed had occurred because, as he said, "The job's not done until you finish the paperwork." As he waited, he thought about how his descent looked to the stranger. Then from out of nowhere, a hand appeared under the stall equipped with a roll of toilet paper. "Thank you, thank you," Friend uttered in relief. "But I'd like to repay you for your kindness."

"Don't mention it," a voice behind the door replied.

"Don't worry," Friend answered. "I don't know what to say."

"How about an apology," the man laughed. "I guess it was strange seeing a man with his pants around his ankles hobbling toward the door," Friend laughed.

"It was more scary than strange," the man replied.

"Well, I'm sorry I caused such a stink," Friend said. "We're sure Friend definitely did that."

SOAP UPDATES

ALL MY CHILDREN: Erica told Maria she had reconciled with Dimitri. But she sensed an uneasiness between Dimitri and Maria. Scott assured Laura he'll never leave her. Bobby saw Laura and Scott in a touching moment. Later, Edmund asked Maria for another chance. Dimitri told Peggy he's agonizing over another woman. When Maria appeared, Peggy made the natural assumption. Trevor was upset at seeing Janet and Amanda (who inadvertently took Janet's keys) together. Wait To See: Jonathan manages another clever maneuver.

ANOTHER WORLD: Maggie again hinted to Nick she might end her "pregnancy." Later, after a talk with Michael, Nick agreed to marry Maggie, but told her it will be a marriage in name only. Gabe was unaware that his sister, Cindy, was being interviewed by Rita for a job. Josie found Blair's old bank statements and she and Gary deduced she was blackmailing someone, but whom? Sofia told Joe and Paulina it was Nick who paid off Joe's $50,000 debt. Wait To See: Rafael confronts Maggie.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Ryder got Adam out of the well, but fell in himself and was caught in the rising water. Zoe was not happy about Mark inviting Ben to live with them. Lily met T. Jones who promised to look into Damian's death. Diego threatened Emily to keep his true identity secret. Barbara watched Sarah and Paul together. After his rescue, Ryder assured Nikki he has eyes only for her. Wait To See: Diego makes an important move. Will Jones respond?

THE BOLD AND THE BEAUTIFUL: Brooke was ecstatic about getting her children back and let herself kiss Grant. After the rapist left, Jessica returned home to shower. She told Maggie what happened. Later, in the E.R., she insisted the police not be called in. Sally, Darla, Macy, and C.J. mourned Saul at his memorial. Brooke was upset when Ridge delayed his return to Los Angeles and she agreed to go dancing with Grant. Later, Ridge boarded his plane and found Taylor was his seat mate. Wait To See: Dylan decides to confront Sly.

THE CITY: Zoey seduced Richard. Later, Sydney and Zoey tiffed, as each jockeyed for position with Richard. Alex listened to Jocelyn's "Happy Now?" message. Danny considered Sydney's job offer. Buck and Tess delivered a baby in the City Bar. After learning Molly was auditioning for a play, Sydney made a special phone call. The masquerade struck another pretty blonde. Wait To See: Is the "Happy Now?" notewriter ready to give up?

DAYS OF OUR LIVES: Stefano was forced to stop the guillotine blade when Marlena rushed forward to save John. But as the execution resumed, John was unexpectedly rescued and freed Marlena from her cage. Meanwhile, Rachel and Kristen were saved from the cave-in by Abe and Lexie. Rachel confronted Stefano, ready to make the ultimate sacrifice to bring him down. As an explosion engulfed them, John rushed an injured Marlena to the hospital where she may have tried to tell him about Kristen. Wait To See: Bo gets upsetting news about Hope and Franco.

GENERAL HOSPITAL: Laura told Alan and Monica the secret of Nikolas' identity. Stefan interrupted a romantic dinner between Luke and Laura. Bobbie sensed a threat from Carly. Jason and Robin grew closer as she prepared to leave for Yale. Alan's plans for an anniversary celebration upset Monica's plans with Dr. Dorman. Brenda's dependence on pain killers grew. Wait To See: Tracy pulls a deal that leaves Jax confused.

GUIDING LIGHT: Bridget's quick thinking saved the day for Hart and Dinah as Roger was carted out of the judge's chambers vowing revenge. Later, Dinah and Bridget tiffed over Hart. Philip told Alan he had to find the person who framed him so he could get his family back together. Vivian was taken for questioning about Griffin's shooting when a rifle was found in the trunk of her car. Vanessa had a seizure, and begged Zachary not to tell Matt. Wait To See: Quint renews his reconciliation talk.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Antonio told Carlo Andy's police connections saved the deal at the docks. A man reading the Sun headed for Llanview on a private jet. Cassie told Andrew she'll consider moving to Chicago with him. Todd walked in to see Blair and Patrick embracing. On Tad's show, "The Cutting Edge," Rachel revealed she knows Nora slept with R.J. Marty started drinking and hallucinating. Cord found Cameron at his computer. Wait To See: Asa pulls off another ploy.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: Chris invited Danny to her wedding, but he declined to go. Doris urged Sharon not to keep her pregnancy a secret any longer. Nikki seemed stunned that Victor would give Chris away since she assumed the two had a special relationship. Paul and Chris were married. At the reception, Paul took a call from a frantic Olivia who said Nathan threatened to take Nate away for good. Silva resisted Jill's attempts at seduction, explaining that as her lawyer, it violated his code. Wait To See: Nina considers a suggestion from Cole.

NATASHA'S STARS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're finding it difficult to resist being extravagant, especially with credit cards so handy. Thus, you could overspend this week in the pursuit of pleasure. Family discussions are favored over the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Work interests are favored early in the week, despite the fact that a co-worker is crabby and out of sorts. Guard against being overly indulgent toward midweek. Otherwise, you'll wear yourself out and won't enjoy your weekend.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a favorable week for new starts. However, when dealing with those in authority, be sure to exercise tact and diplomacy. A private discussion over the weekend leads to new relationship insights.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Some take in a lecture or seminar on a favorite subject early in the week. In general, activities of a group nature are favored. An unusual purchase is tempting, but the price tag could be above your means. Weigh this carefully.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You are at your creative best, but at work, you could let things slide a bit. What's being proposed to you financially requires you to be more careful in your scrutiny. It sounds great, but could be a scam in the long run.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You're not connecting with that special someone, and that could mean it's time now for a heart-to-heart chat. You've been avoiding this, but it's time to be honest. In business, keep your eyes open.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A humanitarian cause has captured your imagination and you go all out for this as is characteristic of you. Others are swept along with your enthusiasm. As a result, you end the week feeling satisfied at the good you've done.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) It's silly for you to overreact so to what you believe is a slight by a close friend. At work, it's best to stick to a behind-the-scenes approach rather than being so overt. You achieve success ultimately through further study.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A friend comes to you with a rather unusual business prospect early in the week. Later, couples are engrossed in fascinating conversations, rekindling the spark in the relationships. Be careful when spending money this weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A friend asks you to join a club that has been intriguing you. While out and about, be careful in your use of credit. Talks on the business front yield some helpful information for the future.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You find yourself brimming with energy and initiative early in the week, but you could overlook important details on the job. Someone close to you is being overly sensitive and needs your understanding this weekend.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Travel done this week will prove to be quite enjoyable, whether for business or pleasure. However, guard against an unfortunate tendency to exaggerate while out socializing. Be sure of your facts before you open your mouth.

TUNING IN

On August 25, TBS airs "Biker Women," described as what "The Road Warrior" would be all about if the bikers were as brainy, beautiful and brave as the women featured in this all-female tribute to the Harley Davidson motorcycle. One of the women, Jamie Elvidge, a journalist, says, "Riding for me is an expression of freedom. It's something I love to do. I'm pleased that more women are finding that it's something that could be right for them as well." Jamie, incidentally, is married to actor Perry King, who is a long-time devotee of the motorcycle experience.

PBS has something to make August pledge week more pleasurable than usual, and also gladden the hearts of Big Band lovers everywhere. Check your local PBS listings for the appearance of Les Brown and his legendary Band of Renown. Les, now 83, still plays over 100 shows a year, sometimes with son, Les, Jr., filling in. Also doing the PBS pledge week gig is Tex Benecke, who took over the Glenn Miller orchestra after the famed musician and band leader was lost while flying to entertain troops in World War II. Give a listen and get "In the Mood" for a trip to "Kalamazoo" aboard the "Chattanooga Choo Choo."

As for returning shows, Daniel Benzali is out of "Murder One." He was released from his contract when viewers reportedly were unhappy with his portrayal of the intense, driven lawyer. Too bad. I thought Benzali had a fresh cliché-free concept of the attorney Teddy Berman. Coming into the show this year is Anthony LaPaglia, who will play a more volatile character.

Is "X-Files" about to be exed from the schedule? No. Don't let those items about unhappiness on the set of the popular FOX series get to you. The stars, Gillian Anderson and David Duchovny are getting a mite restless but I hear they're willing to stay with it at least one more season.

Re: the actions by "Friends" stars and two "Undercover Actors" to strike unless they were paid more, I am always in favor of working people—and that includes actors—getting as much as they can for what they do. But I also believe in honoring contracts. If you want a change in the conditions, negotiate. That's what civil (as in civilized) law is all about.

WELL-PUT

A senior aide to Liberian factional leader Charles Taylor, explaining to The New York Times in April why this year's civil war is more civil than earlier ones: "In the past, fighters would rip out people's intestines and use them to string up roadblocks. This time there has been none of that."

UPDATE

When News of the Weird first mentioned Corky Ra's Summum Inc. in 1988, the Salt Lake City company had just begun the business of mummifying dead pets and had only the dream of someday mummifying dead people, which Ra figured he could do for $7,000

($18,000 for a mummified bronzed statue). According to a June 1996 story in the San Jose Mercury News, Ra has so far serviced three dozen dogs, cats and birds, and has a customer list of 137 humans (the oldest of which is 54) who want someday to be mummified. His chief associate supposedly has practiced on more than 2,000 roadkill animals and on 30 cadavers purchased from a medical school. The price for humans now starts at $30,000, and bronzing could run into six figures.

Less Stress, More Relaxation

(NAPS)—Today's families need less stress and more healthy ways to relax.

Some have found a way to achieve both right in their own home. These families are using a device that reduces stress and pain, increases the ability to concentrate and improves sleep. All without a prescription. They have installed a new home spa.

For some time, physicians, chiropractors, and physical therapists have known and used hydrotherapy (water heating) to help patients mend and to reduce pain.

With the help of sophisticated technology and creative engineering, leading spa makers have applied the principles of hydro-therapy to spa design, transforming the old "hot tub" into a powerful and pleasurable home health tool for the entire family.

While older or economy spas offer the basic benefits of warm water relaxation, some better, newer products are already engineered to deliver real hydrotherapy.

Sleek and attractive, the new spas show little sign of the technology within.

Their secret, according to the experts at Sundance Spas, is the combination of water flow, volume and pressure delivered through each jet in the spa and the placement of the jets so that each part of the body is massaged in just the right way.

In the case of Sundance, patent holder on much of the new technology, spa seating is also ergonomically redesigned so all of this takes place while the user is comfortably immersed within easy reach of controls adjustable to personal taste.

Bringing the benefits of hydrotherapy into the home has made the spa even more desirable to many families.

Most spa owners today are married couples in their forties with a few children, but new spas may change that profile. Younger couples, singles and weekend athletes who want to stay fit and reduce stress are also becoming buyers.

Effective hydrotherapy also appeals to those over 50. For them, the spa can mean relaxation and relief from many joint and muscle aches and pains.

Now, for a refreshing change, there appears to be something that is good for you, that's also an absolute pleasure to use. For more information, call 1-800-418-9236.

When To Push And When Not To Push

by Dr. Arnold Rincover (NAPS)—Can high expectations prevent that child from doing well?

That depends on how high those expectations are and how parents go about realizing them. If expectations are too high and parents place too much emphasis on perfection, children's self-confidence will suffer.

To encourage rather than discourage children in broadening their horizons, use less criticism and more affection. Allowing children to participate in activities of their own choice and at their own pace builds confidence and independence. How do parents avoid being pushy?

First, always remember to praise their children no matter how many mistakes they make. A child deserves praise just for trying. If he or she continues to make the same mistake, then the parent should move on to the next task and return to the uncompleted tasks later.

Second, parents should not be afraid to sample new activities, even if they have to gently persuade the child to participate in them. Whether reading, skiing or dancing, children should be encouraged to broaden their interests.

The important thing is to monitor whether or not the child is enjoying the activity. If he or she does not enjoy skiing (no matter how much you like it), then it is a disservice to make them continue.

Thirdly, make all the activities fun. Children will enjoy reading more if it is a game.

While reading a story, stop at an exciting part and ask the child what letter is in a particular word or what sound a word makes. Play "I spy" (I spy something that starts with the letter P). Ask them to name all the words they can think of that begin with the "g" sound.

Having high expectations is fine as long as it is for the child's long-term benefit.

When parental expectations interfere with social opportunities, these experiences become tasks rather than fun. If expectations are constantly communicated in a critical or directive manner, it is harmful rather than beneficial to the child.

Do You Know Your Heartburn Profile?

(NAPS)—A recent nationwide survey conducted by The New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center suggests there is a new, more fundamental approach to understanding and preventing heartburn than the traditional after-the-fact antacid approach to heartburn relief.

More than 60 million Americans suffer heartburn at least once a month. Health experts describe it as a nagging, burning sensation in the chest that is often accompanied by an acid, bitter taste in the mouth. The traditional tactic for relieving heartburn pain has been to treat it after it occurs by taking a non-prescription medication, such as an antacid. Recently, acid reducers have become available to treat and prevent heartburn. Now, there is an alternative approach.

"For the first time, we have national data that links heartburn to life and work activities," says Andrew J. Dannenberg, MD, Associate Professor of Medicine, Cornell University Medical College and lead investigator of the Heartburn Profiles Survey. "This new research identifies specific types of activities or situations that contribute to food- and beverage-induced heartburn. Increased awareness may enable heartburn sufferers to proactively modify their eating habits and prevent heartburn altogether."

Based on these data, Whitehall-Robins Healthcare has developed the axid® AR Complete Heartburn Prevention Program—a comprehensive effort to help individuals nationwide determine their Heartburn Profile(s), assess their risk factors for heartburn, and learn how to prevent symptoms. The study identified eight distinct Profiles of heartburn sufferers: Heartburn Athletes, Heartburn Family Managers, Heartburn Socializers, Heartburn Seniors, Heartburn Leisure Lovers, Heartburn Professionals, Heartburn Sensitives, and Heartburn Hybrids.

Identifying your Heartburn Profile(s) and understanding the lifestyle connection to heartburn could help individuals recognize and avoid situations that trigger this condition. At times, however, medication can complement lifestyle adjustments in preventing an uncomfortable heartburn episode. According to health experts, AXID® AR, the latest addition to the category on non-prescription medicines known as acid reducers, has been proven to prevent meal-induced heartburn completely for many.

To determine your Heartburn Profile(s), and to receive a copy of the Complete Heartburn Prevention Program brochure, coupon, and samples of AXID® AR, call 1-800-757-AXID (2943), or access the Internet at <http://axidar.com>, or write to: AXID® AR Heartburn Management Program, PO Box 2010, Rock Island, IL 61204-2010.

Curriculum is new but name isn't at Martin

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

Some students in Floyd County are learning quickly that the majority doesn't always win.

Despite receiving nearly 30 letters, only one which specifically asked for Martin Elementary to be renamed to Martin Middle School, the board voted 4-1 Monday night to rename the school Martin Middle School.

Residents from the Martin and Johnson judge expects to be indicted today

by Ralph Davis
The Paintsville Herald

Johnson County Judge-Executive Hobert Meade confirmed long-standing suspicions concerning his office Tuesday by announcing that he has learned he expects to face federal charges in the near future.

"It has come to my attention that, in all likelihood, I will be indicted by a federal grand jury," Meade read from a prepared statement. "Though I don't know the details surrounding the accusations, my attorneys are looking into the specifics of the charges and they will advise me of exactly what Maytown communities have been up in arms for several months as the system has discussed possible names for the Martin facility and a new elementary school that is being constructed on Stephens Branch.

Elementary students from Martin Elementary and Maytown Elementary will be consolidated into the new school while all the sixth, seventh, and eighth grade students from the two schools will attend the old Martin school.

Martin residents wanted to retain the Martin name while others wanted to change it to reflect the combination of the two schools. A committee was formed choose the names and had recommended Central Elementary School as the name for the new school and Central Middle School for the Martin school.

Board members also voted to keep the Purple Flash mascot and the purple and gold colors that have been part of the school for more than 30 years.

Only Phyllis Honshell, who had originally asked for additional information, voted against the moves. Honshell made a motion to name the school in Martin "Central Middle School, on the basis of student input." Even though the packet of 29 letters included 13 students who specifically asked for the name, and 15 who indicated no preference, that motion died for a

Public input sought for federal prison project

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

Residents of Floyd, Martin and Johnson counties will get a chance August 27 to add their two cents worth to discussions about the location of a proposed federal prison in the area.

Representatives of the United States Department of Justice, Federal Bureau of Prisons will hold a public scoping meeting next week.

The primary site under consideration is a 500-acre tract on Route 3 across from the Big Sandy Regional Airport in Martin County.

The prison could bring as many as 350 jobs at an average salary of $32,000 to the area. The project is expected to cost about $100 million to construct and will house about 1,100 inmates.

County and city officials from Johnson, Martin and Floyd counties have been looking at ways to supply the prison, and other potential employers in the area with infrastructure — water and sewer treatment facilities.

After the meeting, an environmental impact study will begin on the site. "That should take about a year," David J. Dorworth, chief of the site selection and environmental review branch of the Federal Bureau of Prisons said in July. "After that, we'll make a definitive decision if we are going to build there."

Dorworth said any person who wants to participate in the scoping meeting will have an opportunity to express their views on the prison during the meeting, which is slated for 6 p.m. on August 27. The meet-

Time of miner's death is uncertain

Site of mining fatality had a history of safety violations

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

A Floyd County man was pronounced dead Friday morning after his body was recovered from an underground mine at the #3-1 Mine in Honaker. The mine is owned and operated by M & D Coal Company Incorporated in Dema.

Tracy Bryant, 20, of Honaker, was performing cleanup and rock dusting duties approximately 2,800 feet beneath the surface when he suffered fatal injuries during a roof fall accident, according to a Cabinet for Public Protection and Regulation news release.

The victim was pronounced dead by Floyd County Deputy Coroner Buddy Smith.

John Franklin, Department of Mines and Minerals, said Bryant's body was beyond the last row of roof supports.

Coroner Roger Nelson said the section of the roof that fell on Bryant measured approximately six feet wide by 11 feet long.

Nelson said Bryant's time of death has not yet been established. "The state and federal Department of Mines and Minerals is expected to begin formal interviewing soon," Nelson said.

Nelson's test results from Bryant's autopsy are still pending.

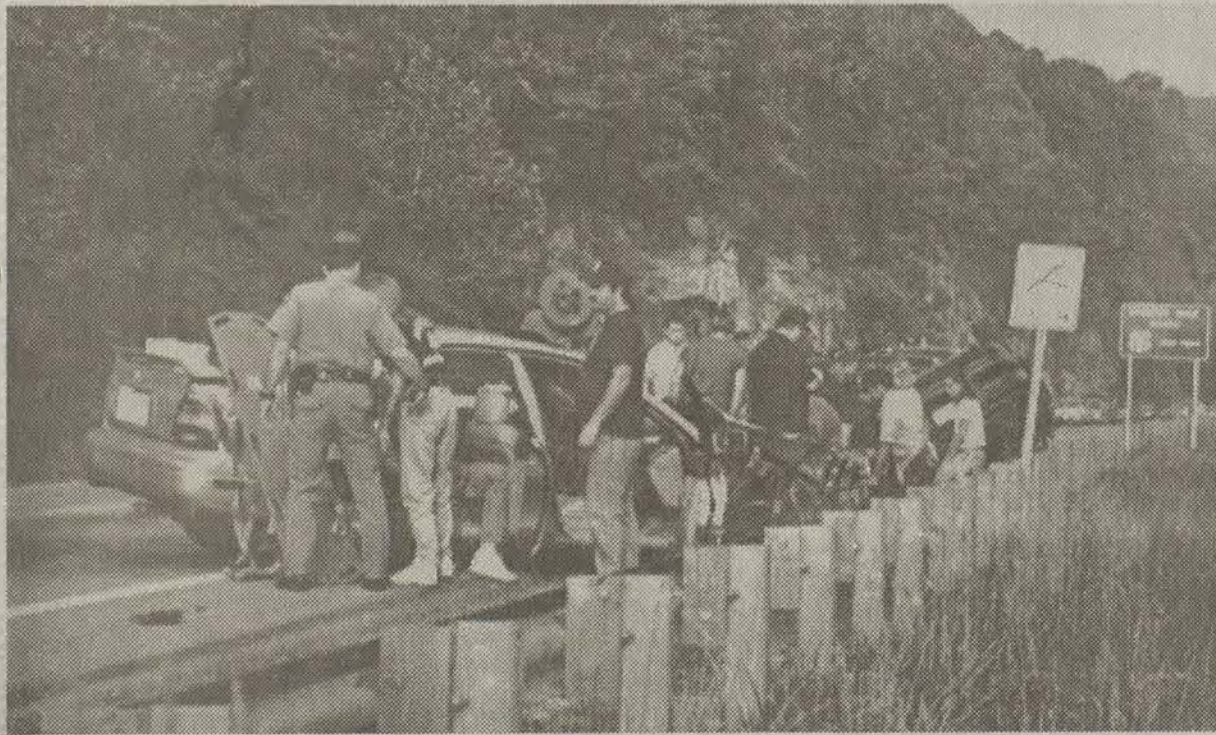

Reportedly, the accident occurred at 8:50 a.m., but Bryant's family and friends believe the accident occurred sometime Thursday. "He went to work Thursday morning, and never came back," Maggie Tackett said.

Bryant began working at the mine on Wednesday, Tackett said.

The number one cause of mining fatalities nationwide has been attributed to roof falls, the release says. Friday's fatality is the second mining fatality this year in Floyd County and the first recorded roof fall fatality in Kentucky since August 30, 1994.

M & D Coal Company Incorporated has received 13 citations and orders by part and subpart concerning alleged safety violations during the fiscal year 1996 — two of which were due to roof supports, according to a citation and order history summary from the U. S. Department of Labor, Coal

Booze issue gets another snub from Hale; will be on September agenda

by Patti M. Clark
Staff Writer

For the fourth time in as many months, Sandy Woods appeared before the Floyd County Fiscal Court Friday morning, asking the court to vote on an ordinance allowing alcohol by the drink in the county.

And for the fourth time, her request was denied by County Judge-Executive Ben Hale. Hale did, however, say he would put the request on the September agenda.

"I want this to be over too," Hale said after Magistrate Jackie Owens asked that it be put on the agenda if all information from the attorney general's office is received in time.

Hale asked County Attorney Keith Bartley to research the issue and to seek an attorney general's opinion on it. Bartley said Monday that he is under the impression that it can be placed on the court's agenda or on the ballot, but that ultimately it needs to go on the agenda and be voted on.

A state law supports that stand. KRS 242.185 states that "the legislative body may enact a comprehensive, regulatory ordinance covering the licensing and operation of hotels, motels, inns or restaurants for the sale of alcoholic beverages by the drink for consumption on the premises."

The law, which applies to any county containing a city of the fourth class in which prohibition is not in effect," also states that the decision to approve the sale of alcohol by the drink can be made based on the economic condition of the county.

If the issue is placed on the ballot, according to Toni Sanderson, assistant director of the distilled spirits division of the Alcoholic Beverage Control board, liquor by the drink can be served at bars as well as restaurants.

She said the county could approve an ordinance without a vote by area residents, but that restaurants with at least 50 percent of the gross profits derived from the sale of food, would be eligible for licenses to serve mixed drinks.

Woods, who is the owner of Cactus Jacks at the Plantation Motel, wants to serve mixed drinks at her restaurant. Cactus Jacks can now serve beer and wine to its customers. Restaurants within the city limits of Prestonsburg already have the right to serve mixed drinks.

Denzil Allen, the alcoholic beverage control officer in Floyd County, denied Woods' request for a liquor license for the restaurant on July 10. She has appealed that decision with the state Alcohol Beverage Control board, but a hearing has not been scheduled, according to Cynthia Newton, ABC board
