Johnson theft case could go to jury

by Ralph Davis Paintsville Herald

Anyone working in the Johnson County Sheriff's office could have stolen tax collections, argued the defense attorney for a Prestonsburg woman accused of embezzlement.

Testimony concluded in Johnson County Wednesday afternoon in the embezzlement trial of Michelle "Mickey" Woods. The jury is expected to hear closing arguments today, Friday, and decide the case against Woods, a former Johnson County Sheriff's office tax clerk, before adjourning for the weekend.

Woods is accused of stealing more than $16,000 from the Johnson County Sheriff's office. She is charged with 27 counts of felony theft by failure to make required disposition of property.

Woods' indictment, which was handed down in May 1995, charges her with pocketing money collected from taxpayers and discarding copies of tax bills known as "green slips" used for accounting purposes.

The trial against Woods began Monday with jury selection. Commonwealth Attorney Anna Melvin began her case by calling current and former employees of the sheriff's department to the stand to testify about office operations and Woods' role in collecting and accounting for tax receipts.

Witnesses testified that Woods was solely responsible for tallying tax collections each day and log-

When Arlene Nickell, 36, of New York began sifting through the puzzle of her life, she discovered some important pieces were gone - her father, four sisters and two brothers.

This week, she began putting the puzzle back together. She came to Floyd County to meet with a sister and a brother who did not even know that she existed until last year

"I was the next best kept secret next to the atom bomb," she said.

Rita Fay Hamilton, 35, of Banner found out about her sister, Arlene, last August by reading Arlene's letter to the edi-

In the letter, Arlene said she was searching for her half-sister Margaret McDonley, whose parents were Betty and William Robert McDonley, former residents of Floyd County. She also indicated Margaret might have a sister named Rita.

Rita's friend, Mary Ann McKinney of McDowell, read the Times, called Rita on the phone, saying she thought Rita was the person mentioned in the letter. Rita immediately "ran to the nearest store and got a newspaper." She became excited as she read the letter. Then, with the newspaper in her hands, she dashed around the community, going from house to house, telling her family and friends she had "a new sis-

Elva Case, a former Floyd County resident, assists more than 800 people a year from his outreach center in Campton.

Ask any of them and they'll tell you the war on poverty in Eastern Kentucky is far from over.

But another battle is being fought this week after two tractortrailers full of food arrived at the Christian Appalachian Project's Hager Hill facility Wednesday morning. The food came to the center through the Feed The Children program in Oklahoma and was supposed to be accompanied by country music singer Loretta Lynn.

While Lynn's husband became ill a few days before the event and she didn't make the trip, about 20 food pantry directors did. They didn't seem to mind that the Johnson County native wasn't available to hand out the food. They were just thankful that they would be able to help a few more people.

'It's real bad out there," Case said. "I just can't express how much this is going to help.

way to contact her. It could take a called the paper.

In response, the Times called phone lines up between New York and Kentucky," according to Arlene.

A few months earlier, Arlene found her brother, Robert McDonley, 31, in Houston, Texas. Robert also did not know about his older half-sister, and he had met Rita only once when he was a small child.

Arlene has yet to meet her halfsisters Margaret, Vickie and Violet; and her half-brother Billy, but she hopes that will be remedied by next year.

Arlene's hunt for her family has been a complicated, mind-boggling process. When she began her search last February, she sought the father she had never known. She didn't discover she had halfbrothers and sisters until she tracked down her father's brother in Columbus, Ohio.

Arlene was born in Columbus, Ohio, so she began her journey searching for McDonley through stacks of paper work. She found out through a cousin that her father's brother lived Columbus, Ohio. A library in New York gave her a computer printout of McDonleys. One the printouts listed 679 McDonleys. She methodically went down the list

"I thought there has got to be a and, eventually, located her uncle.

"He was shocked. No one knew month by writing a letter, so I I existed. I was a big surprise for everyone," Arlene said.

Her uncle told her that her dad Arlene, and the two sisters "burnt had moved to Arizona. She intensified her search and hired a private investigator.

When she was unable to contact her dad at the address she had uncovered, she contacted real estate agents in the area and tracked down her dad's former landlord, who told Arlene that her father had died in 1992

"I went through a mourning period," Arlene said. "Dad only saw me once when I was two. It was accidental. We passed each other on the street."

Arlene also discovered she had a family she never knew existed. First, she found out she had a brother named Billy. Ironically, his name was near the bottom of her listing of McDonleys.

"Then through various people, I found out about the others," Arlene said.

When she learned that she had a brother named Robert, she searched her list and found his name. She sent a letter to Robert and a letter to his ex-wife. Robert had moved and did not receive his letter from Arlene, but his ex-wife received hers and passed it on to Robert.

"I was surprised and shocked," Robert said in an interview Monday. At first he hesitated to contact his older sister. "I wasn't times to bring her emotions under close to my full brothers and sisters. This is a new chance to start

Arlene and Robert began talking on the phone and writing let-

"Her letters were like a book," Robert said.

"After I talked to Robert the first time, I loved him," Arlene said. "He's a real gentleman."

Then Arlene began her search for Rita and Margaret. Her uncle had told her that the grandmother of the two lived in Floyd County. She published her letter and then things "just snowballed."

The three got together Monday at Rita's Banner home. Robert had driven 20 hours, a 1,200-mile trip, stopping only "for a bathroom break" or to fuel up his car.

"If we had to wait three hours longer (to see him), they would have had to pull us off the ceiling," Rita said. "I woke up early and turned off the alarm so Arlene could sleep longer, but she was saying 'Robert, Robert,' Robert,' over and over in her sleep."

Camaraderie and strong emotional feelings were evident between the three siblings during the interview. They talked and laughed - and wept.

"It feels like the world's going to end or I'm going to die. Kinda like you're getting your last wish," Rita said. During the interview, Rita had to leave the room several (Continued from front page) control. "It's really emotional finding a family that didn't even know you existed. It's a hard thing to tell a stranger 'Hi, I'm your sister.'"

"We've had rough childhoods, but we've come through them. We share that, too," Arlene said.

"In many ways I'm closer to Rita than the siblings I grew up with at home," Arlene said, smiling at her half-sister. "We're making up for our whole lives. We tease each other. It comes out naturally. It's a brother-sister thing.'

Arlene, whom her new family calls "the leader of the pack," encourages people searching for a brother or sister "to just do it."

"It may not always work out the way you want it. I found out a lot of negative stuff, but it didn't stop me," she said. "Everything I went through has been worth it.

She advises those individuals to start their search by talking to family members.

"If the family will talk, ask a lot of questions," she said. "Get copies of birth certificates. They contain a lot of information on much that the Little Mud Creek natives had to move into a separate building. He said he has handed out more than $300,000 in clothing over the last three months.

"There is a lot of need for these trucks of food," Don Richardson, vice president of Feed The Children, said. "Regardless of why the family is running out of money before the end of the month, it is the children who are being affected the most.

Richardson said proposed changes in the welfare system could cause even more problems for some families, increasing the need for organizations like CAP and the smaller food pantries in the

"But Christ instructed the church to feed and clothe the poor, not the government," he said. "And that's what we're trying to do. The Christian Appalachian Project will be a very important part of the community when those cuts are made

The food delivered Wednesday included cereal and pasta, baby food and beans, apple juice and Gatorade. Most was donated by large corporations, like Lipton, Gerber, Kellogg's, and Musselman.

Bragg said the donations are important, especially to small churches that have no support from a larger organization.

'We see the need and the people are in need," he said. "We usually shop at God's Food Pantry and last month, we spent $200. That adds up real fast when there's no support, other than the congregation's donations.'

At the Feed My Sheep Ministry, Nelson said the food is an added bonus. "Usually we deal only with clothing and furniture and stuff," Nelson said. "This food helps us meet many needs."

The food from Feed The Children was given to the food pantries at no charge, but if it hadn't been, Bragg said he and congregation members "would take it out depend on anything."

of our own pockets. There are no big I's or little U's in this," he said. "All of it is for the glory of God."

Both Nelson and Bragg said area residents can get items from their centers "with no strings attached."

'We do it with love," Bragg said.

"It's an opportunity for us to talk to people about God," Nelson

Bragg admitted that the majority of those he serves do not attend his church, or any church, but the donations help families meet basic needs so they can think about other spiritual - needs.

"I ask people how they make it without God in their lives," Nelson said. "They tell me they do just fine, yet they aren't able to put clothes on their kids' backs or food on the table. But once they get grounded, they don't have the same kinds of problems they had before.'

Helping people get grounded and solving those problems is what Father Ralph Beiting, founder of Christian Appalachian Project, has been doing for 50 years. CAP is headquartered in Lancaster.

Beiting told the group assembled to pick up the food that he knew what it is like to be poor.

"I was born January 1, 1924, the oldest of 11 children," Beiting said. "My father was on WPA welfare - and sold Watkins products door to door.'

He said that's what prompted him to come to Eastern Kentucky in 1946. "I fell in love that summer with Eastern Kentucky," the Northern Kentucky native added. "And it's befitting that I am back to where I started.

Beiting said he had a dream when he began his ministry in the coal fields. "I wanted to do more than to give things," he said. "I wanted to give the people opportunities. I wanted to give them the freedom to know they didn't That's when he started the Christian Appalachian Project, which accepts donations of surplus items from various corporations and moves them into the communities where they are needed.

"I don't believe there's a nonprofit agency in the area that hasn't outfitted its office with furniture from CAP," Michael Sanders, president of the Christian Appalachian Project, said.

But despite CAP's impact on the communities it serves, Sanders called for economic development in the area to help ease the plight of those caught in the poverty

Three witnesses - Armatha McFaddin, who currently works in the sheriff's office as general fund secretary and is the wife of the sheriff, and former sheriff's office employees Imogene Prater and Karen Witten Sowards — testified that they had at times offered to help Woods reconcile the money and prepare it for deposit, but that she refused their assistance.

Defense attorney Jerry Patton, however, attempted to show jurors that the missing money could have been taken by anyone working in the sheriff's department.

Patton's biggest coup of the trial came Tuesday when he was able to get the lead investigator in the case to admit other workers could have had an opportunity to steal the

'We need to help people with more jobs," Sanders said. "But until then, we can help them hang on until those things happen. It's amazing to see what people go through.

But with the help of the people from organizations like Feed The Children, Christian Appalachian Project, and the outreach centers that distribute their goods, Beiting said those involved can make a difference, one person at a time.

On cross-examination, however, Patton was able to get Pittman to say another worker could have taken the money and green slips before Woods balanced the books at the end of the day, but only if no one else was around

Earlier in the day, Sowards testified one person was often left behind to watch the office during lunch hour. Several witnesses also testified that both money and green slips were easily accessible during

Traum enters innocent plea to charges

by Chris McDavid Staff Writer

A local hospital administrator entered a not-guilty plea on three counts of second-degree wanton endangerment, harassment, and terroristic threatening charges in Floyd District Court Wednesday.

Highlands Regional Medical Center administrator Clarence Traum, of Prestonsburg, is charged with three counts of second-degree wanton endangerment for allegedly "chasing down" three women - Elizabeth Joseph, her mother, and her niece - with his car on April 17 and reportedly endangering their lives.

According to court records, Traum also threatened to kill Joseph. The records indicate Traum was charged with harassment for allegedly "engaging in conduct which seriously annoyed and alarmed [Joseph] by using obscene gestures. . . and offensive language.

A warrant was taken out by Joseph the day after the incident for Traum's arrest. He was released on a $500 cash bond at the time of the arrest.

In an interview with Joseph a few days after the incident, she said the event occurred a little after 6 p.m. when she decided to take her mother and niece out for a drive. She said she was traveling north on North Arnold Avenue when the glare from the sun prevented her from seeing a stop sign.

"I ran the stop sign," she said. "I admit that, but I really didn't see Joseph said Traum had been backing out of his driveway and his car was about half a car length into the street when Joseph's vehicle almost hit him.

"I stopped and tried to apologize," Joseph said. "But then he chased me all through town."

At his arraignment, Traum was represented by two attorneys, C. V. Reynolds and Larry Brown. Traum pleaded not-guilty to the charges and Judge James R. Allen ordered that he remain on the same $500 cash bond.

Assistant County Attorney Lance Daniels had no objection to Traum remaining on the same bond on the condition that he and his family have no contact with either of the plaintiffs or their fam-

A pre-trial conference is scheduled for 2 p.m. July 9.

An attempt was made to contact Traum for comments on Joseph's allegations, but a secretary in his office said he was out of town Thursday morning.

Man points gun at ex-wife's husband

by Chris McDavid Staff Writer

The case between a Floyd County man and his ex-wife's husband was referred to the grand jury Wednesday by Floyd District Judge James R. Allen.

Ronnie Nelson was charged with first-degree wanton endangerment after he allegedly pointed an automatic pistol at his ex-wife's husband, William Hamilton, of Henderson.

Hamilton testified in a preliminary hearing Wednesday that he, his wife, and her children -Nelson's children - came to visit his mother-in-law in McDowell on

"He (Nelson) found out that my wife and I were here visiting, Hamilton said. "He called and wanted to come over."

Hamilton said he told Nelson that they did not want him to come and visit him, but he (Nelson) said "I'm coming anyway." About 45 minutes later, Nelson pulled into the driveway, Hamilton said.

"He said 'Oh you're bad aren't you," Hamilton testified. "No I'm good,' I said."

Hamilton said that's when Nelson "whipped out his gun, cocked it, and pointed it at me."

"He said, 'How good are you?,' and I said, 'Good enough,'" Hamilton testified. Nelson's attorney, Kristi Gray, asked Hamilton if he was scared. "I'd say so - yes," Hamilton answered. Gray also asked Hamilton if the gun was loaded and he stated that he did not know. Hamilton told the court that he was acquainted with Nelson because

Nelson would sometimes go to Henderson to visit his children. Gray made a motion to have the charges against her client dismissed because no evidence was shown that Hamilton was in danger. Allen overruled her motion and said, "the fact that he pointed a gun at the witness is probable cause to refer this case to the grand jury."

Arnold responds to editorial

Editor:

I write in response to your May editorial titled "Length of Service or Strength of Service". You raise an age-old issue of the value of seniority and tenure versus the energy, education and excitement of youth. I appreciate your acknowledgment that, in fact, "teachers deserve protection from the political beast that always lurks in the shadows of our educational system" and I must explain, that is all "tenure" really is; in spite of its much maligned reputation, it is only a fair dismissal provision.

In Kentucky, teachers serve a four-year probationary period during which they can be non-renewed for the next year without due process. If they begin their duties for the fifth year in the same school district, then, before they can be terminated they are entitled to a hearing in which the administration must provide documentation establishing that the teacher is insubordinate, immoral, physically or mentally disabled, inefficient, incompetent or has neglected his/her duty.

What other reason would you think would be a legitimate reason for terminating a teacher? Due process requires at that point that the teacher be able to offer conflicting evidence, but the administration only has to establish its charges with a preponderance of evidence, the easiest of all legal burdens to establish. KEA does see to it that its members are provided adequate due process.

That is all "tenure" is. Anything short of the provision of due process results in exactly what you acknowledge does not work political beasts basing decisions on their subjective, personal agendas.

Additionally, Congress has declared that, despite the fervor of youth, which may appeal to employers, age cannot be a factor in employment decisions. Surely one part of their considerations was the fact that experience brings with it as much value, if not more than youthful exuberance. Stability is extremely valuable to a school dis-

Kentucky teachers are heading into their seventh year with the reform act. They have invested untold hours retooling themselves and implementing reform measures, many times with every step a battle in an environment not conducive to change. Such battles sap much of the enthusiasm many senior teachers brought to reform.

If there are those who are not performing as the law requires, the law provides the only fair vehicle for removing them from the classroom-a fair dismissal hearing. Please do not perpetuate the public perception that a person who has served a probationary period of four successful years in one system cannot be removed. If that person's supervisor properly documents one or more of the reasons stated above, that administrator will prevail in removing that teacher. It happens to teachers every year.

Perry, on target

Scott Perry's piece, "Up the ladder to the roof," couldn't have come at a better time. I also think he was right on target when he referred to those who denounced the consultant's report even before it was written. We're entrusting our young people to teachers like these?

Dr. Floyd is finding that leadership can be a tough and lonely task. Strong leaders don't please everyone. But if one measure of a strong leader is recognized improvement of circumstances first encountered, then only a very narrow minded person would deny the progressive steps made in the 1990's at PCC by an obviously strong, rather than universally popular, leader.

Thank goodness she wasn't hired to win a popularity contest.

Soccer Association thanks benefactors

On behalf of the Floyd County Youth Soccer Association's Planning Committee, coaches, players, parents and other participants, I would like to formally take this opportunity to acknowledge the following organizations for their support of the second season of soccer in Floyd County.

Some of these benefactors are faithful from last summer when soccer first arrived in Floyd County, others are rookies in this spring's second season, and to both, all those who benefit from their association with soccer in Floyd County, owe a debt of thanks for their provision of the capital from which to do the nuts and bolts of building a soccer program in Floyd County.

It is hoped that the endeavors of the association will bring these organizations pride in the knowledge that their assistance has facilitated an opportunity for our county's children to reap the many benefits of participation is such a pro-

The following is a formal list of those sponsors who have been so crucial to this second season of soccer, and a heartfelt thank-you is extended to each.

Team sponsors: Cooley Medical Equipment (two teams), East Kentucky Cardiology, First Commonwealth Bank (two teams), First United Methodist Church of Prestonsburg, Pillersdorf, DeRossett and Barrett, and WOHY.

Benefactors: Consolidated Health Care Systems, John Earl Hunt, and McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital.

Goals: Porter Industries. Fields: Prestonsburg Community College.

College should solve their own problems

The current debate over the leadership ability of the current president of Prestonsburg Community College should stay within the realms of the college itself.

It would seem that with all of its outstanding instructors and administrators, that the college should easily be able to overcome such a small obstacle.

Fishtrap dam is more than fishing, boating

In light of recent area flooding, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers at Fishtrap Lake would like to take this opportunity to share with you, our public, how you are benefiting from Fishtrap Dam.

Fishtrap Dam is something which everyone should be proud of due to its substantial benefits. When most of us think of Fishtrap we envision boating, fishing, camping and other recreational activities.

However, when a flood occurs, its true capacity is easily seen. The dam is able to prevent devastation from occurring to its downstream communities, including the city of Pikeville.

In 1995 alone, Fishtrap Dam prevented nearly $1.3 million in flood damages. During its lifetime it has saved nearly $280 million. This is the highest cost savings in the Big Sandy area with almost a 2:1 margin over second highest John W. Flannagan.

But monetary damage is not the only truly important thing which is saved. Think of the countless lives, families and homes which have been and will continue to be saved by Fishtrap Dam, your dam, and take pride in that.

Dedicated faculty

People are getting sick and tired of the same old whiners at Prestonsburg Community College, whiners who appear more interested in themselves than in their students. This college has many fine and dedicated faculty members. It's a shame that a few are trying to disrupt the progress being made there.

PCC at crossroads, English Prof says

Editor:

Prestonsburg Community College is at a crossroads, and the decisions which are made this summer will determine the future of the institution. I write today because I am convinced that the decisions made so far have been the wrong decisions, and I feel a moral and ethical obligation to say so. The faculty of PCC have faced several criticisms recently, criticisms I would like to address before proceeding. First, I continue to hear, "It's just a small clique opposing Deborah Floyd." When asked whether this faculty did or did not have confidence in Deborah Floyd's administration, 47 of 74 voting faculty acknowledged they had no confidence in Deborah Floyd or in her administration. This represents 63 percent of the votes cast, which under no circumstances amounts to "a small clique." Had staff members also been allowed to vote, the percentage of those voting no confidence, I suspect, would have been much higher. If, indeed, it is the same few detractors of Deborah Floyd who keep getting quoted in the press, I ask you, "How many different Floyd supporters have you seen quoted in the PCC's faculty, in addition, has been accused of having no specific charges to make against Deborah Floyd. The fact is, UK is well aware of the specific charges and has been given the documentation to support these charges. And interestingly enough, although no faculty or staff member knew of the specific charges made against Deborah Floyd in her Texas position until the June 2, 1996, issue of the Lexington Herald was published, the charges made against her by the faculty and staff of PCC coincide with many, even with most, of the categories of charges listed against Floyd by Collin County Community College officials. Coincidence? Perhaps, but perhaps there is a pattern here.

A third criticism aimed at PCC faculty involves our response to the consultant's report, a report which recommends the establishment of an advisory committee to reestablish order and civility at this campus. Semester after semester, faculty have served on advisory committees at this college. Semester after semester we have worked hard,

The Political Party

WHO AFFECTS YOUR LIFE MOST: BILL CLINTON OR PAUL PATTON?

When was the last election your state legislative candidates let the voters know their stance on abortion or prayer in school? Contrary to popular belief, these are state issues. Abortion principles were set, on a federal level, by Roe v Wade in 1973. After the first three months of pregnancy, states may regulate or even prohibit abortion.

Since Roe v Wade, even the right to have an abortion within the first three months has been regulated by some states. Simply put, states have the power to stop or greatly impede the right for a woman to have an abortion. For example, when President Clinton took office, he allowed Medicaid to pay for abortions involving incest or rape (all federal funding for abortion had been banned since the Reagan administration), but Kentucky and five other states refused to comply with this new policy. States have also written expensive health regulations, required counseling before the abortion, and redefined the age of viability (when a fetus can sustain life outside of the womb). All of these actions have been taken to curb, or stop abortions.

The Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution guarantees "[no state shall] deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." With due process of law, you can be deprived of life, liberty and property. This means that the states can make laws which, some believe, are contradictory to our constitutional

With Engel v Vitale in 1962, the Supreme Court decided that requiring prayer in school violated the First Amendment, which says "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of reli-

Since then, Congress has unsuccessfully attempted to amend the constitution permitting prayer in school, but states have repeatedly made laws which have allowed, or prohibited, school prayer. Staying within loose federal guidelines, the states have decided the issue. Kentucky is no exception.

HB 10 in Kentucky's 1996 Legislative Session did not pass. It would have permitted "voluntary, student-initiated prayers during noninstructional times." HB 28, however, did pass. This bill will "permit observation of a moment of silence or reflection for one minute at the commencement of the first class of each day." It is evident that our state legislators do not want this issue decided in Federal Courtstudents can't pray, but they can have a moment of silence or reflection. In spite of the wording, the end result is still the same.

As many as seven different bills proposed by Kentucky's General Assembly were about abortion. If all of these bills had passed, physicians performing abortions would have been required by law to orally inform a woman of the nature and complications of the abortion procedure, age of the fetus, and the link between abortion and risk of breast cancer 24 hours before she had the abortion; abortion facilities would be required to post signs warning of the risks; the state would begin providing literature about the alternatives to abortion, and would pay for food, lodging, transportation and other costs incurred by counseling prior to the abortion; definitions such as "medical emergency," and the "age" of the fetus would be redefined. The list continues. However, I think it is clear that the state does decided the issue of abor-

The General Election is approaching fast. Our legislative candidates should be forced to discuss these, and other important issues, before we elect them. using our expertise to provide Deborah Floyd with the best advise we are capable of giving. Semester after semester, Deborah Floyd has ignored the advice given her by these committees and has done (we presume) what she felt was best.

The problem is, on several occasions at any rate, what Deborah Floyd presumably thought was best has cost PCC dearly, because Deborah Floyd thought like Caesar: that is, wrongly. One case in point: the computer and technology committee recommendations which Eileen Lewandowski spoke so eloquently of at the May 31, 1996, PCC Advisory Board meeting.

Consequently, we ask you to forgive our lack of enthusiasm over forming yet another advisory committee, the advice of which Deborah Floyd (history suggests) will only ignore. The faculty at this institution is quite frustrated and fatigued from exerting so much of its energy and achieving nothing but, metaphorically speaking, a spinning of wheels and a splattering of mud. Deborah Floyd and her allies insist this faculty is resisting change. It is not change we are resisting; it is the continued vast expenditures of time and energy to serve on committees and task forces only to have the advice we generate ignored by this administration. Educators have more than enough work to do; they do not require "busy work."

Finally, the motives of PCC faculty have been repeatedly called into question. Admittedly, I cannot speak with absolute authority for the motives of others. I can, however, speak of my own motives, and I impulses which spur my peers' can tell you that I honestly believe the motives of my peers who also oppose Deborah Floyd to be the same

I have a Ph.D. from Louisiana State University and I am trained in critical reading and evaluation. I was hired at PCC in 1991, the same year Deborah Floyd was hired. The difference between the institution I interviewed with in 1991 and the institution I work for today is to me heartbreaking. The institution I interviewed with was efficient, well-run, staffed by competent, happy employees who put in their work day, then stayed many additional hours at work because of their dedication to teaching. The institution was well-respected in the community.

The college's nursing program was PCC's crowning star, bringing in many students who, because of the competitive nature of the nursing program, fought for admission to the program.

Although PCC continues to employ many competent, efficient personnel, those personnel are often being expected to do more and more work. Whole departments (particularly Financial Aid and Records and Registration) are woefully understaffed, thus forcing workers to perform at a speed which guarantees the inefficiency of even the most competent employee. PCC's employees are not only overworked, they are also miserable, made so by the abusive behavior they repeated-

Many fine faculty and staff have left this institution; many who remain suffer from stress-related illnesses. Repeated indignities take their toll.

Recently, an armed guard was stationed on campus to interrogate faculty and staff about their knowledge of the spray-painting incident that occurred on campus. Locked mail boxes have been purchased and are kept under surveillance by video camera. When faculty are called for an interview with the president, most take a tape recorder and a witness to the interview. Their own words have been twisted and used against them too often in the past. Deborah Floyd now sports a personal bodyguard.

this, but resources to provide our students an excellent education continue to dwindle. Faculty members who once worked from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. (or later if they had a night class now come in to teach their classes and to keep their office hours, then leave for the welcome sanctum of their homes. Staff members, who are paid by the hour, aren't so lucky.

Faculty morale is at an all-time low; furthermore, the faculty's low morale has begun to spill over into faculty members' performance in the classroom.

Community members are clearly disturbed by the furor on campus.

And judging by the scarcity of nursing graduates in the Spring 1996 graduating class, students are, it would seem, now fighting as hard to get out of the nursing program as they once fought to get into it.

I readily admit Deborah Floyd has done some good for PCC, but has also done much harm to this institution.

My motive in speaking out is simple: I am convinced Deborah Floyd's leadership is destroying this institution, and I cannot live with myself if I allow PCC's destruction to take place without trying to save

I have spent five years at PCC. I have made many good friends in Eastern Kentucky and have touched many students' lives. I am speaking out because I feel morally obligated to try to save that which I am convinced is in imminent danger of destruction and which I believe to be worth saving. Finally, I sincerely believe these are the same honorable opposition to Deborah Floyd.

For whatever reason, far too many of the parties involved in this dispute seem to have underestimated the dedication and resolve of the faculty who love this college and who, consequently, feel a moral and ethical obligation to oppose Deborah Floyd. This faculty believes itself engaged in a holy crusade; we can follow no course other than the one we have chosen. Each semester we walk into our classrooms and tell our students they must decide for themselves what is right and what is wrong, and having made this determination, they must choose that which they believe to be right, even if in so choosing they must suffer personal misfortune. Have we a right, then, to ask our students to expect any less from us? Is there some other lesson you prefer us to be teaching your children?

Deborah Floyd has called these problems "a bump in the road." I call them "a fully functional land mine." And I only hope and pray that someone in authority will take the necessary initiative to defuse this land mine before it blows up.

The situation that exists at PCC is extremely volatile. Continued refusal to accept faculty/staff warnings are only compounding the anger and frustrations which threaten to boil over at any time. We cannot stand idly by while mismanagement threatens the very existence of this institution.

PCC is at a crossroads and to ensure its safe passage, we call upon Deborah Floyd to resign, and we call upon the community to understand our situation and to help us restore this college to its former dig-

In my English classes, I help student understand complex and sometimes confusing new ideas by employing the Socratic method. Named for the ancient Greek philosopher, Socrates, who practiced this teaching method, the Socratic method employs a series of pertinent questions whose purpose is to direct the inquirer toward a self-discovery of the truth. Accordingly, I invite readers to seek answers to the following questions:

1. How does the overall turnover rate (all faculty and staff) at PCC There is time and money for all compare to that of the other community colleges in the system? 2. How does the turnover rate of those working closely with Deborah Floyd (deans, directors, secretaries, public relations officers, development officers) compare to the turnover rates of such employees at the other community colleges?

3. How do Deborah Floyd's travel expenses compare with the travel budgets of the other 13 community college presidents in the UK system? Is Deborah Floyd's travel budget more than the $50 per year allowed to each faculty member so that the faculty member can attend a seminar in order to keep up-to-date in his/her discipline?

4. How many community colleges in the UK system have found it necessary to hire a bodyguard to protect its president?

5. How many PCC faculty/staff are being treated by their physicians for stress-related illnesses? Generally speaking, are community college jobs considered high-stress employment?

6. How many community colleges in the UK system have found it necessary to call special union meetings and to seek the assistance from state and national union representatives to address problems at that college's campus?

7. What could have prompted the excessive and admittedly bizarre behavior now practiced by most of the PCC faculty of taking a witness and a tape recorder to any interview with Deborah Floyd? Is such behavior characteristic of how community college faculty normally talk with their president?

8. How many community colleges in the UK system have locked poxes for faculty mail! How many PCC faculty members believe we are getting locked boxes to avoid the unauthorized removal of mail from said boxes? How many PCC faculty members believe the locked boxes represent a clumsy attempt to censor mail being placed into faculty mail-

9. How many PCC faculty believe that their offices have been searched? Is the searching of faculty offices standard operating procedure at most colleges?

10. How does the attrition rate of PCC students compare to the rate at other community colleges in the

11. How does the attrition rate in PCC's Nursing Program compare with that of other community colleges in the system which offer a nursing degree?

12. How does the $84.75 per semester student health fee compare to student health fees at other community colleges in the system?

13. How many PCC faculty/staff/students actually supported the establishment of PCC's Student Health Clinic? How many feel the limited services that the health center provides are duplicated elsewhere in the community and that the establishment of a day care center for students' children would have represented a more practical application of funding?

14. Is there a cause/effect relationship between PCC's recent dramatic enrollment decline and the institution of its Student Health Clinic fee?

15. What are the moral and legal ramifications of a college's student health clinic picking and choosing those to whom it will or will not provide emergency medical care?

16. How does the technology available at PCC for student use compare to the technology available in the areas' high schools? Seek the answers to these questions, not just from Deborah Floyd, but from a variety of sources. Once you have these answers, you will be in a better position to determine more accurately the reality of the situation Prestonsburg at Community College

In Memory of CONNIE HALL

I'll never forget the times I heard you pray For God to come and take you away.

I'll never forget the moment you died,

The pain I felt, and could not hide.

I'll never forget the look on your face, When Jesus took you to your resting place.

There's not a day when tears don't fall from my eyes, What makes it easier is knowing He is by your side.

I'll never forget spending time with you that day, Just a few short hours before He called you away.

The house is now empty but the memories will stay, They say in time the hurt goes away; not for me, it gets harder every day. No one can know the pain I've been through,

But I thank God for the times I had with you. The loving things you said to me were straight from the

I miss them so, now that we're apart.

There are two special angels always watching over me, One's name is "Babe," the other is "Bee."

Sadly missed,

Cancer center to open in Pike

The Leonard Lawson Cancer agement and other support therapies. Care Center at Pikeville Methodist Additional services will be provided Hospital will be opening on June 10 4hrough Pikeville Methodist with a very special celebration.

Everyone is invited to the opening ceremony which will begin at 11 a.m. in front of the Cancer Center. After the opening ceremony, tours of the new facility will be given and refreshments will be served.

The Leonard Lawson Cancer Care Center was built to provide cancer patients with quality cancer care in an environment that caters to the cancer patient's special needs, right here at home. Cancer patients will receive an individualized, aggressive treatment program through radiation Hospital.

Radiation Oncologist Dr. R.S. Modur and Medical Oncologist Dr. V.J. Puram are available to provide radiation therapy and chemotherapy. Both physicians are board certified in their respective fields.

The Radiation Oncology will be administered through a new, state-ofthe-art Siemens Mevatron Linear Accelerator. The new linear accelerator will be used to treat both deepseated and surface cancers with minimal exposure to surrounding tissue.

Chemotherapy, also known as will also be provided in a special chemotherapy room.

"I am very proud of this new facility," Pikeville Methodist Hospital Administrator Martha O'Regan Chill said. "Building a regional cancer care center has been a dream of the hospital's Board of Directors for a long time and now it is a reality.

"The Leonard Lawson Cancer Care Center is not just a building, it is a structure of hope," Board Chairman Walter E. May said. "The Board Members are extremely pleased that Pikeville Methodist Hospital was in the position to be able to provide this region with its therapy, chemotherapy, pain man- drug therapy or medical oncology, first and only cancer care center.

Knott County man charged in altercation with Floyd man

by Chris McDavid Staff Writer

A Knott County man was arraigned Wednesday on charges of assaulting and endangering the life of a Floyd County man.

Kelly Slone, 36, was charged with fourth-degree assault and firstdegree wanton endangerment for allegedly pushing Glen Martin, of Wayland, and pointing a gun at him, court records say.

Floyd District Judge James R.

Allen entered a not-guilty plea to Slone's felony charges, and Assistant County Attorney Lance Daniels recommended a $20,000 or ten percent cash bond.

A preliminary hearing will be held at 2:30 p.m. June 12.

Sunday's rainfall added a realistic touch to the annual re-enactment of the Battle of Middle Creek held at the junction of Rt. 404 and the Mountain Parkway. Re-enactors at the event said that rain fell just before the battle began on January 10, 1862 at the Middle Creek site.

About 50 Confederate and Union re-enactors joined forces to create Sunday's battle scene. Rebel and Yankee cavalry troops crossed swords and traveled the field entertaining the crowd throughout the battle.

Other events during the three-day event included street fighting in Prestonsburg and speeches by Union leader James A. Garfield, portrayed by Eugene Blackburn, and Confederate leader Humphrey Marshall, portrayed by Dan Rowland.

A May House social was held Saturday and was hosted by the Friends of the May House. Re-enactors were given a tour of the building and told about the plans to save the Samuel May House, which was built in 1817 and served as local recruitment headquarters for Confederate troops during the Civil War.

Saturday evening, a pig roast was held on the grounds at Middle Creek. Local author John W. Wells portrayed a Civil War soldier. Jim Taylor and John Lucas of Pikeville provided musical entertainment for the event. Later, the Middle Creek Boys played Bluegrass and songs about the Civil War.

Prizes were given away after the battle Sunday.
Richard Counts of Hazard won the musket. Pistol winners were Adam Burgess of Louisa and Phil Wood of River. Tom Sluss of Johnson County won a book written by Damien Beech, and James Stambaugh of Hager Hill won a new book by John Wells.

Steve King of Lucasville, Ohio and Jane Couch of Hager Hill won haversacks. T-shirt winners were John W. Bryant of Prestonsburg, Jimmie Epling of Catlettsburg, and Tom Blackburn of Prestonsburg.

The search, executed on April approximately $30,000 worth of growing equipment.

The growing house was found on land owned by Risner's mother, Minnie Risner.

No charges have been brought against her, as she was reportedly unaware of the facility's existence.

There could possibly be charges pending for the theft of electricity

Risner reportedly bypassed electrical meters to provide power for the operation of the equipment.

This minimized costs, as well as eliminated a lead to the establishment that could be followed through excessively large electrical — The Salyersville bills.

Bond set at $1 million for two charged in murder of Everett Hall

by Kim Stacy Appalachian News Express

Bond was set at $1 million cash for a Virgie woman and her brother on charges the two murdered and tampered with physical evidence in connection with the murder of Everett Lee Hall last year.

Arlene Hall Rowe, 34, who was the ex-wife of Hall, and Gary Lee Young, 26, were arrested and indicted last week on charges they killed Hall and put his headless body in an abandoned mine.

Rowe entered a plea of not guilty Monday in Pike Circuit Court before Judge Eddy Coleman. Young pleaded not guilty Friday.

A pre-trial hearing was set for August 30 at 1 p.m. for Rowe and

A third man from Titusville, Florida was arrested in April in the case. Robert James Frazure was taken into custody by Florida authorities and charged with murder. He remains in a Florida detention center.

Hall had been missing for a year. His decapitated body was found in an abandoned mine in March.

The remains of Hall, who was 47, were found in an abandoned mine on Hopkins Fork of the Left Fork of Caney, about 1,200 feet from the mine entrance.

Adams cited for hauling wildcat coal out of Keyser Heights in Pike

by Larry E. Martin Appalachian News Express

The developer at the center of a controversy at a Pikeville subdivision has been charged with mining wildcat coal at the site, and the city's mayor said this may spell the end of the line for the project.

Stuart Adams was issued a notice of non-compliance May 31 for illegally removing coal from a housing development project above Keyser Heights, said Jody Curry, a spokeswoman with Kentucky Natural Resources Department for Surface Mining Reclamation and Enforcement in Frankfort.

The order said Adams, who is developing an additional subdivision above the existing one, was mining in Keyser Hollow without a permit. He must cease coal removal immediately and comply with remedial measures outlined on the

Counterfeit $100 bills found in Paintsville

Two counterfeit $100 bills have shown up in Paintsville - one at Wal-Mart and the other in money at First National Bank.

Assistant Police Chief Steve Fitch said the quality of the fake currency was good.

"Unless you were just looking at it, you probably wouldn't notice they weren't real," he said.

So far, there are no leads and Fitch says he's not heard of the bogus bills being passed elsewhere in the area. The local incidents happened last week.

The bills were turned over to the Secret Service, which has jurisdiction over counterfeiting offenses. -The Paintsville Herald

Members of the Johnson County Fiscal Court argued for three-and-a-half hours Tuesday night over a spending plan proposed by Judge-Executive Hobert Meade before finally coming to an agreement.

Fiscal court slashed spending in budget compromise

When all was said and done, the proposed budget was a little lighter on personnel than Meade's original recommendation. Several jobs were cut from the budget, including two secretarial positions in the judge's office, assistant finance officer, one custodian and the building inspector.

Other changes in the budget include cutting the judge's travel allowance from $5,000 to $3,000 and not filling a vacant part-time bus driver position.

Several other changes were proposed, but will be further discussed at the second reading of the budget. These include eliminating the assistant county attorney and not funding a partial deputy sheriff salary.

Meade proposed that the roles of road foreman and road and bridge maintenance supervisor be eliminated and that he take their place. The court decided to hold off on that recommendation until learning whether the move would be legal. - The Paintsville Herald

A Magoffin County woman, Brenda Poe, was chosen from the audience during the taping of the popular game show "The Price Is Right," and appeared on a recent episode.

While on vacation visiting her daughter in Salt Lake City, Utah, Poe, of Dry Bread, and her daughter decided to go to California and wait in line to be a part of the audience.

"We all wore our UK championship t-shirts that day and we had to wait in line from 7 a.m. until they started taping at 1:15 p.m., so we were really tired when we got to go in," Poe said.

But the wait paid off as Poe was one of only nine chosen from an audience of 325 people. She participated in the "Temptation Game" and won a gazebo by guessing the correct price of $1,995, and just missed winning a Ford Thunderbird by one number. The episode was scheduled to air Monday, June 3. - The Salyersville Independent

Duncan named vice-chairman

Mike Duncan, president of Inez Deposit Bank, has been named as vice-chairman of the executive committee for the new Center for Rural Development.

Duncan will help lead the nine-member executive committee that will oversee the center. The committee will also work with the center's board of directors. The board is comprised of a representative from each of the forty counties that the center will serve, including Martin County.

Located in Somerset, the center is a national model for rural economic development. This new $16 million facility will unite 40 counties of Southern and Eastern Kentucky around job creation, training and other economic development activities.

Stolen truck recovered from ten feet of water at Milo Lake

A 1986 Toyota pickup truck belonging to Robert D. Hall, 30, of Little Rockcastle, was removed from ten feet of water at Milo Lake, near Inez, June 1, by the Martin County Sheriff's Department. Hall reported his vehicle stolen Monday, May 27. Hall said he had no theft insurance on it.

Hall said he noticed a strange pickup truck parked across from his home with the license tag removed and then found that his was gone. Apparently thieves had run out of gas in the "strange" truck, which was also stolen, police said, and then took Hall's pickup. The truck was a total loss, including more than $1,000 in tools which were reportedly in the back of the truck when it was taken. The incident is under investigation by the sheriff's office. - The Martin County Sun

Varney school to be demolished

Varney Elementary school will be torn down as soon as a demolition and asbestos plan can be drawn up and approved.

Friday, May 31, the county school board okayed Superintendent Reo Johns' recommendation to tear down the structure. In a statement issued last month, Johnssaid he believed the move necessary because of extensive flood damage.

Voters to decide form of county government in fall

Judge-Executive Donna Damron was expected to issue an order Friday, May 31, that would give voters the chance to decide whether they are represented by magistrates or commissioners.

Nearly 300 signatures were gathered by the Concerned Citizens for Pike County asking the issue be placed on November's ballot. The petition was presented to Damron last month.

Once the signatures were determined to be those of valid registered voters, Damron had no alternative but to put the issue on the ballot, according to state law.

Currently, the county is divided into six magisterial districts, and magistrates are elected within their own district. Citizens spokeswoman Carol Napier said voters should have the opportunity to decide how they are represented, but the group believes the commissioner form of government would save the county at least $11 million. — Appalachian News-Express

Mountain Water set to begin five extension projects

After receiving $130,000 from the Pike County Fiscal Court and a private contributor, the Mountain Water District is set to begin running water line extensions later this month, District Superintendent Will Brown said Friday, May 31.

Brown received authorization Friday at the district's special called meeting to hire engineers to conduct studies that will clear the way for water lines to be run to Powells Creek, the largest of the projects.

Other areas to receive line extensions are Jonancy, Beefhide, Lick Fork of Sookeys Creek and the Left Fork of Sookeys Creek, he said.

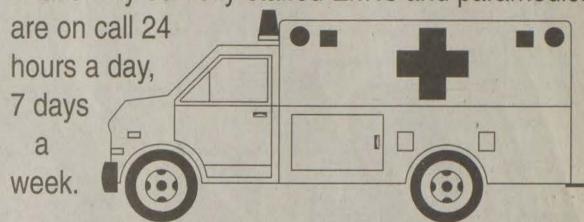

Information released at a recent fiscal court meeting indicated more than 230 customers would benefit from the extensions. Brown said the design studies will delay the Powells Creek project until late July. He said the smaller projects will begin at the end of this month. -Appalachian News-Express

News of the Weird by Chuck Shepherd

- In April the Iowa Supreme Court turned down inmate Kirk Livingood's attempt to sue Phillip Negrete based on the state's domestic abuse law. Negrete is Livingood's cellmate and, according to Livingood, beats

- The New York Times, in a May story on the commercial usefulness of cow parts, reported that not only are the gallstones exported (at $600 an ounce to the Far East, as aphrodisiacs and jewelry), and hearts (27 cents a pound to Russia, for sausage), but so are cow lips (58 cents a pound to Mexico, where they are shredded, spiced and grilled for taco fillings).

In April, Ms. Gabriella Villa was finally discovered, dead of natural causes, in Monza, Italy, approximately seven years after she died at age 47. She had passed away in her home, but neighbors and her estranged husband had assumed that she had simply moved to another town. (Seven years appears to be a new record for an undetected death in the home.)

CAN'T POSSIBLY BE TRUE

- The Italian Justice Ministry admitted in March that she began walking easily, and though doctors told her the a notorious prisoner had escaped: Palestinian terrorist Youssef Magied al-Molqi, 34, who was convicted in 1986 for one of the most heinous crimes of the decade the Achille Lauro hijacking, during which he shot American Leon Klinghoffer and pushed him overboard in his wheelchair. Al-Molqi was free on a 12-day leave for good behavior and failed to return.

- In February in Elizabeth City, N.C., the first hearing was held in former attorney Reginald Frazier's lawsuit against the state bar association for disbarring and imprisoning him. Frazier's choice of attorney to represent him was C.C. "Buddy" Malone of Durham, N.C., whose own license was recently suspended for five years by the state bar.

Reuters news service reported in February that Brazilian farmer Mariano Jose da Silva, of the northern town of Encanto, had caught his wife with her lover in 1983 but that the two trysters had imprisoned him ever since in a back room, feeding him sparingly, until he was freed by inquiring relatives. Da Silva said he would not prosecute the two and has "no hard feelings."

- In March, The Sunday Oklahoman profiled Oklahoma City homemaker Mary Clamser, 44, whose deterioration with multiple sclerosis had been abruptly halted in 1994 when lightning struck her house while she was grasping metal objects with each hand and wearing her metal leg brace brought on by the disease. Suddenly, condition was probably only temporary, she still walks easily today. As if that weren't enough good luck, Clamser, in order to fly to California for a TV interview in April 1995, was forced to cancel a local appointment she had made at the Oklahoma City federal building for 9 a.m. on April 19.

IMPATIENT SPOUSES

- In a Calgary, Alberta, courtroom in April, business executive Earl Joudrie testified that his wife, Dorothy, had shot him six times and then ridiculed his failure to die immediately. After Earl, who was bleeding badly, asked Dorothy to come sit by him, she replied, "Well, how long is it going to take you to die?" and "You haven't changed your will, so I'll get everything." Joudrie said that a few minutes later, Dorothy changed her mind and called an ambulance.

- According to a 911 tape played at his preliminary hearing in Las Vegas in March, Roy Holloway called the emergency number because he was frustrated at his inability to kill his wife. Said he, to the operator, "I've tried to strangle her about four different ways. She won't die." Asked the operator, Why are you trying to kill her? "Because I don't like her," said Holloway on the tape. Why not just divorce her? "Isn't it a lot easier just to kill

'Society's Child'

Throughout a career that is now entering its fourth decade, Janis Ian has faced attempts by press and public to sum her up in a sentence or two...It can't be done. Her life and her work simply have too many facets to allow any stereotype to achieve a comfortable fit.

Her newest album, Revenge, reveals yet another facet. She still writes about going against the odds; yet, she has found new and even more personal insights on love, tenderness, and faith, bringing a new depth of emotion to a well that longtime Ian fans already thought was bottomless. There is a departure musically as well-Revenge has a harder edge than her last album, 1992's Breaking Silence, which was acoustic and musically straightforward.

"Revenge is about survival," says Ian. "It's about outlasting the enemy." That, she has done.

The first attempt to simplify Janis came in the mid 1960s when, barely a teenager, she wrote and recorded "Society's Child," about the pressures on a white girl dating a black boy. The song passionately questioned the morals of the era, but it was viewed as a militant protest instead and banned by radio stations across the nation.

It wasn't until conductor/composer Leonard Bernstein heard the song and featured it on a CBS TV special that the doors opened—all of them. The single became a nationwide hit and the album, Janis Ian, was nominated for a special Grammy—the first of her nine nominations; it also opened the doors to those who fought the social upheaval of that

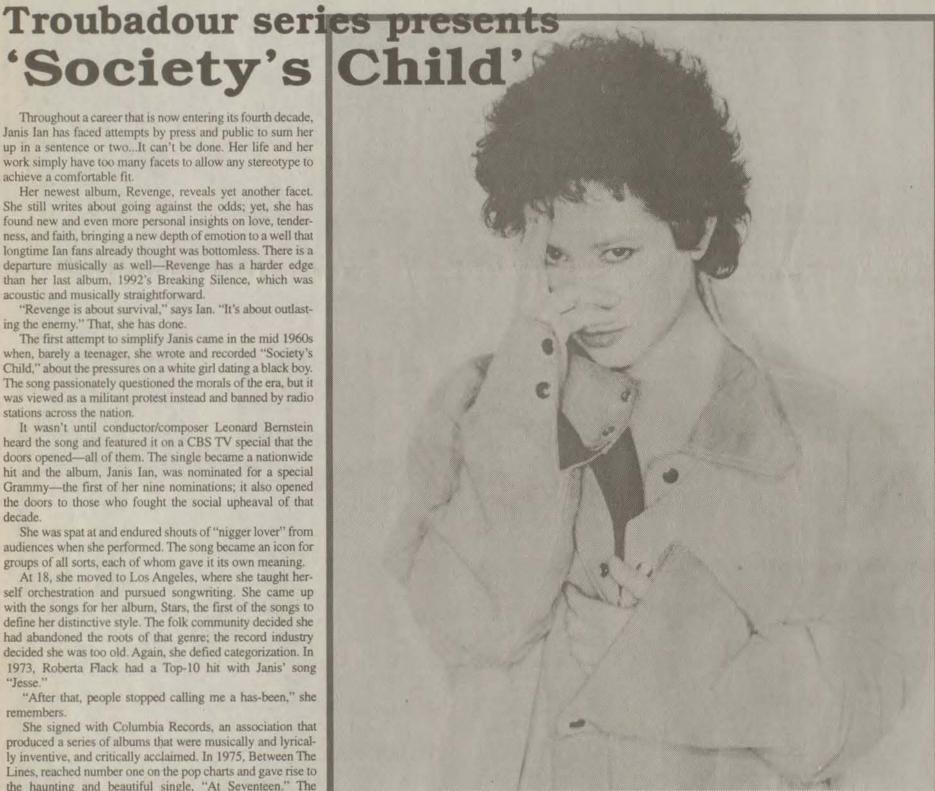

She was spat at and endured shouts of "nigger lover" from audiences when she performed. The song became an icon for groups of all sorts, each of whom gave it its own meaning.

At 18, she moved to Los Angeles, where she taught herself orchestration and pursued songwriting. She came up with the songs for her album, Stars, the first of the songs to define her distinctive style. The folk community decided she had abandoned the roots of that genre; the record industry decided she was too old. Again, she defied categorization. In 1973, Roberta Flack had a Top-10 hit with Janis' song

"After that, people stopped calling me a has-been," she remembers.

She signed with Columbia Records, an association that produced a series of albums that were musically and lyrically inventive, and critically acclaimed. In 1975, Between The Lines, reached number one on the pop charts and gave rise to the haunting and beautiful single, "At Seventeen." The album earned Janis two Grammy awards.

It was during this era that Ian collaborated with a spectrum of performers, writers and musical innovators, from Chick Corea and Giorgio Moroder to Mel Torme, Leonard Cohen, and James Brown. The depth of her songwriting talent was discovered by other artists as well-Janis Ian songs have been recorded by Bette Midler, Amy Grant, John Cougar Mellencamp and Hugh Masekela, among others.

Janis lan

The Troubadour Concert Series and Budweiser presented one of the most delicate, sensitive female songwriters in America, Janis Ian, in concert. She was "Society's Child" in the 60s as a teenage hit maker. She learned the "Truth at Seventeen" in the 70s, and wrote huge hit songs like "Jesse" in the 80s. Janis lan made a special concert performance at the Paramount Arts Center, Thursday, June 6. Tickets are only $16.50 plus tax and a service fee. For information about upcoming concerts, call the Paramount Arts Center box office at (606) 324-3175.

Less is more—maybe?

Scientists are conducting studies that prove people may possibly live to be 150 years old. However, they'll have to do it by giving up some of life's simple pleasures-eating and engaging in sex.

In a newspaper article published this past Saturday, researchers were quoted as saying that "test animals on restricted diets and deprived of reproductive organs live longer. How the animals feel about it is unrecorded.

I thought the article made perfect sense. Particularly when it stated that if you eat less food, your body resets its mechanism to get by with less energy. This in turn slows down the aging process. The sex issue was more vague, but the article stated that removing the reproductive organs of male animals increased longevity in rats. "Have you read this article about food and sex?"

I asked my husband. "Yeah," he replied without looking up from the sports page.

Smile

Awhile

Sara Hopson

"Well, what'd you think?"

"I think I don't want to live to be 150 years old."

"No, seriously," I continued. "I am serious. I didn't finish reading the entire article because, who cares?" "Wouldn't it be great to live to be 150?" "Maybe, if I didn't have to give up everything just to live. That wouldn't be living. Of course, as you well know, Madam Chef, I don't eat much now because there's not much to eat around here.

"How did we get off on this?" I groaned.

"And if I live to be 150 years old, will I know it?

I'd like to keep my mind. As usual, our conversation was going in a direction I didn't want to pursue so I tried to change the subject, but it was too late. "How much food would I have to cut out?"

"When would I have to become abstinent?"

"Thirty percent," I replied.

"It doesn't say."

"Do the studies say that people who abstain from sex live longer?" he asked. "There's no hard evidence to prove it. It just states that animals who have no reproductive organs live longer," I answered. "What about skinny people? Do they live longer?"

'No. In fact it might be detrimental to them in the long run."

"Sara, why are we having this conversation? Do you believe everything you read?"

"I'd like to believe things that are printed in reputable papers are factual.'

"It's a study about animals! We're not animals, we're human beings. Living, breathing things who possess feelings and emotions. The way things are going with these scientific studies, the only things that are going to live longer are the test animals. I can just hear it now, 'One hundred and fifty-yearold test lab rat succumbs in his cage due to old age." Hopefully, there'll be a 150-year-old scientist around to verify it.

Graduation time is here and many a highschooler is preparing to head out into the real world, where they will discover that they'll have to forget everything they learned in high school and then learn it again. Only this time they'll have to pay to learn it because, as we all know, it costs a lot of money to be smart.

Going to college and getting that diploma is an essential ingredient to success these days.

But an awful lot of time is wasted in college, it seems, rehashing old news.

Take history, for example.

That's a required course for many college diplomas but it's also a required course in most high schools.

So what is the point of learning twice that George Washington was our first president or that Abraham Lincoln was our last?

Well, technically, we have had others serve as president since Lincoln, but he was the last one worth talking about.

There are a few good reasons why college is so repetitive, though.

First, college gives young people the time they need to mature, through a process known in our days as "the beer blast." Thus the origin of the phrase "higher education."

College also is sort of like an on-the-job training session in independence, giving young people the opportunity to see what it's like being on their own, away from home, where they either have to clean up after themselves or face eviction by the health department for creating health haz-

Social skill development is also another area where college comes in handy.

For instance, in our college days, when "streaking" was a popular fad, we learned how important it was to judge a person by what they had on the inside, rather than how they looked on the outside, especially since all they had on on the outside was a smile.

So, as you can see, there is much more to college than classwork and, unless you're planning to be a doctor or something, that classwork is probably going to be your least important concern.

There is plenty to learn, though, and our advice is to go learn it. Someday, you'll be able to look back on that experience and say, as we have many times, that if we had to do it all over again, we'd do it all over

Twister

I think we live in a marvelous period in the history of mankind. In this century alone, we began the 1900s basically still dependent on horses for our everyday transportation. Automobiles were a novelty at best. Flash to only a mere 96 years later, and we're not only zipping all over the country in our cars, we've sent men to the moon! Science and medicine have exploded with new discoveries and our life expectancy has almost doubled. However, no matter how advanced we become, Mother Nature always finds a way to humble us and keep us at her mercy. When an earthquake, blizzard or tornado strikes, we can merely ride it out and hope for the best.

This movie drives home that point, revolving around tornadoes gone wild through Oklahoma. "Mad About You's" Helen Hunt is Jo Harding, a scientist who is known as a "storm chaser." Together with her estranged husband, Bill (Bill Paxton), they've invented new equipment which consists of hundreds of tiny transmitters which can be ejected into the tornado directly in order to get a clear picture of the inner workings of the storm and to track its Bill has given up his storm chasing for the safety of doing meteorology (weather) on television. He has a new girlfriend, Melissa (Jami Gertz), whom he intends to marry. However, there's one glitch: Jo has to sign the divorce papers.

Bill catches up with his soon-to-be ex as she's about to go after yet another storm. Bitten by the adventure bug, he decides to go with her (with Melissa in tow in the back of the van). The fly in the ointment to all this, of course, is evil rival scientist Cary Elwes, who intends to take credit for the Hardings' work.

Note that the plot, such as it is, really isn't the star of this flick. It's the absolutely stunning, frightening special effects. When those twisters slam across the screen, you can't help but be pinned to your seat in awe and stark terror! This is a bona fide summer pleaser, entertaining at every turn and full of action. It's no wonder it opened at number one at the box office.

SOAP UPDATI

ALL MY CHILDREN: Dimitri reaffirmed his feelings for Erica, but both agreed to take things slowly. Belinda discovered Derek in Noah and Julia's apartment. A sedated Trevor feared the visiting "Brooke" was actually Janet. Later, Brooke and Pierce agreed to tell Laura the truth about their relationship. Liza agreed to be Adam's date for Noah and Julia's surprise wedding. Kevin found Kelsey, who overheard Maria and Edmund speak of their dislike of her. Toni attacked Christopher and fled toward Wildwind. Wait To See: Jonathan uses his "relationship" with Marian.

ANOTHER WORLD: Sharlene, who avoided serious injury by a hit-and-run driver, told Josie she had slept with Michael. Later, a self-loathing Gary shook Josie by postponing their wedding. Grant went on KBAY to ask for compassion. Nick learned of Rafael's secret cash stash. Later, Joe learned his staggering tax debt was paid. Michael suspected Donna as the hit-and-run driver and of being involved in Blair and Courtney's murders. Maggie vowed to break up Sofia and Nick. Wait To See: Donna and Sharlene each face a new crisis.

AS THE WORLD TURNS: Mike forced Sarah to listen to his ugly memories of their childhood. Casey's disappearance made Tom and Margo realize Adam might be in danger, too. Lucinda tried to stop

BOLD AND THE BEAUTI-FUL: After begging Lauren not to tell the Forresters she had seen him dance at the private party, Dylan was shocked when Lauren suggested he could earn money by being her sex toy. Against Ridge's wishes, Stephanie told the police she wanted Brooke arrested for taking the children. Later, Ridge joined Brooke and the kids at the cabin. After getting Ridge to agree he'd been unfair to Taylor by continually asking for her help regarding Brooke, Grant then told Taylor she's the only woman for him. After Hart accused Roger of drugging Dinah so he could cover up stealing her money, Roger wrested the gun away from Dinah. Wait To See: Explosive situations break out.

ONE LIFE TO LIVE: Marty made Dylan and herself believe she's staying with him out of love, not pity. Later, after begging Patrick to free her, a sobbing Marty fell into Andrew's consoling arms, unaware that Cassie was watching. Antonio saved Andy from two thugs. A provocatively dressed Nora was arrested by the New York police for loitering when she tried to get information on Rachel from various hookers. Later, she was reunited with Hank and Nora. Spurred by Elliot, Viki warned Dorian not to publish her book. Asa wondered if Alex was on to him. Wait To See: Elliot continues to "advise" Viki.

THE YOUNG AND THE RESTLESS: The wedding ceremony for Nikki and Brad began. Neil told Dru that Victor fired Brad, and promoted Jack, and he (Neil) might also move up, but it could mean longer hours at work. Phyllis agreed she missed seeing Dr. Reid, and both then agreed to give their relationship a chance to grow. Mari Jo got into Victor's office and managed to shred the fax Keemo sent warning Victor about her. Mari Jo then left, commenting that only Victor stood between her and Jack. her? But she won't die. [G]od, she keeps breathing.'

THE CONTINUING CRISIS

- In February in Little Rock, Ark., Heather Sherrard threatened to file a criminal complaint against KATV consumer reporter Dewayne Graham for harassing her. After filing a TV report, with Sherrard's help, on how to change the code on garage door openers, Graham allegedly went back twice to Sherrard's house on his own and opened the door using the old code. He then allegedly left a message on Sherrard's answering machine, scolding the woman for not taking his professional consumer advice.

- In December, a Wall Street Journal report described the "Polish Method" for destroying the 48,000 tanks (that weigh up to 34 tons each) left in Eastern Europe that must be turned to scrap under a 1990 treaty.

Answers to Super Crossword

Since it is impractical to blow them up or to melt them, Poland manufactures nine-ton balls, lifts them with hoists containing electromagnets, and drops them onto the tanks, flattening them. Said an American diplomat, after the process was described to him, "Wow, that must be really satisfying.'

- In February, three Army recruiters in Leesburg, Fla., were jailed after they trashed the adjacent Navy recruiting office with a crowbar, injuring two Marines, because a female potential Army recruit had been given a better deal by the

THE WEIRDO-AMERICAN COMMUNITY

In April, the California Senate president revealed that Republican Sen. Don Rogers, facing bankruptcy four years ago, filed a declaration denying that he owed the $150,000 in federal taxes that the government claimed. The reason, he wrote, was that he was not a "citizen" under the 14th amendment to the U.S. Constitution because that provision applies only to former slaves; rather, Rogers said he possessed a "white man's citizenship." This year, Rogers renounced the declaration, claiming he had received bad tax advice.

UPDATE

In May, Minneapolis artist Judy Olausen's hardcover photographic essay, "Mother," finally hit the bookstores. Olausen's project made News of the Weird in June 1993 as a work-in-progress, after she took her initial photos, featuring her mother, then 70, portrayed in a series of a passive, subordinate characters. Included were her mother kneeling on all fours with a pane of glass on her back ("Mother as Coffee Table") and lying alongside a highway ("Mother as Road Kill"). Said Olausen in 1992, "My brothers think I'm torturing my mother," but actually, "I'm immortalizing her."

FOCUS—JARROD EMICK, who last starred in the John Frankenhimer film for TNT, "Andersonville," now stars in the FOX network's new series, "L.A.

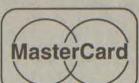

"Until now," Emick said,

The effects are remarkable. The to reality as it's possible to be and and technology. Does this steal the thunder, as it were, from the actors?

compete with actors or put actors into a secondary position," Emick said. "I think, instead, they help actors tell the story.'
