Out with the old, in with the new

The campaign was waged as a referendum on the current fiscal court, but the ultimate test of that observation won't be taken for another 18 months.

Floyd County voters decided overwhelmingly Tuesday that they prefer a change in county government from the current magisterial form to the commission form, by a vote of 6,962 for the change and 4,467 against. The change does not become effective until the county-wide primary in 1998.

The turnout of voters Tuesday paralleled growing interest in the issue. Approximately 50 percent of the county's 30,665 registered voters cast ballots on the question and the turnout was so high in some precincts that election officials were required to install extra polling machines.

Early exit polls conducted by proponents of the change hinted that a landslide vote supporting that change was possible.

A poll-by-poll tally indicated the question was approved by voters in 30 of the county's 42 precincts.

The results Tuesday were completely opposite to a similar vote taken in November 1985, when a proposal to change to the commission form was defeated by a vote of 3,438 to 2,532.

A citizens group called United We're Strong petitioned in February to have the issue put on the ballot. The issue was also considered by six other counties — Leslie, Martin, Rowan, Harlan, Pike and Knott.

"And someone had to come along to break the bondage of government," Johnson said Tuesday night. "We want better representation for the people in Floyd County."

He said despite internal strife in the organization, the members banded together to get the issue past voters.

"They were still supportive and they banded together and that's the reason we're where we're at," he said. "We're going to get water and sewer for these people."

He said voters are telling the current magistrates "enough is enough."

The next step in the process will be the redistricting of the county. County Judge-Executive Ben Hale will divide the county into three districts.

Candidates from those districts will run in the May primary in 1998, with a nominee chosen from both the Democratic and Republican parties in that election. Only voters who live in the district will vote for the candidates in the primary.

The party winners will meet in a November 1998 match-up in which all registered voters in the county are eligible to vote for candidates from all three districts.

The commissioners will take office in January 1999.

COMING FRIDAY

Precinct-by-precinct vote totals

Final totals on the issue in those counties were not available at press time.

According to Elmer Lee Johnson, founder of United We're Strong, the vote in Floyd shows that voters are ready for a change.

Incumbents top balloting in city races

The "Slate of Eight" will be leading Prestonsburg into the 21st century.

Six incumbents and two other candidates who were running with them handily defeated four other candidates in the race Tuesday.

Receiving the most votes in the 12-man field was Robert K. Allen II, with 800.

Other members of the council will be incumbents Estill Lee Carter with 767; Billy Ray Collins with 765; Otis Hansel Cooley with 740; Ralph B. Davis Jr. with 739; Danny H. Hamilton with 672; and newcomers Trent Naim with 623; and Gormon Collins Jr. with 606.

Vote totals for the other candidates were: Roy L. Compton, 471; Richard G. Price, 421; Michael W. Meade, 410; Chris "Buck" Gulick, 167.

In a hot race in the Martin mayor's race, incumbent mayor Alan R. Whicker narrowly escaped a defeat from former council member Sherry

Whicker earned 190 of the Martin residents' votes to Ratliff's 127.

Four of five incumbents running in the Martin City Council race retained their seats. Coming back for another four years will be Hazel D. Robinson, with 162 votes; Eugene Rodney Hutchinson, with 160 votes; Stephen R. Farthing, with 138; votes; and Everett Akers Jr., with 132 votes.

Joining them will be newcomers "Ranger" Rick Caudill, who secured the largest number of votes in the race with 182, and Thomasine Robinson, who garnered 132 votes.

Incumbent Earit M. Hayes was defeated with 109 votes.

Also defeated were: Jeff R. Jones, with 119 votes; Jeffrey M. Rayburn, with 41 votes; E.P. Grigsby Sr., with 101 votes; Mike Robinson, with 103 votes; Steve F. Martin, with 71 votes; and Danny Ray Yates, with 95 votes.

In Wayland, three of four incumbents were re-elected to the Wayland City Commission. Joining Mary F. Stephens, Tommy Robinson and Tommy Murphy is Lisa Gray.

Robinson got 87 votes in the race. He was followed by Murphy with 82; Stephens with 71; and Gray with 69.

There will be two new faces on the Wheelwright City Commission. Incumbents James N. "Jimmy" Little and David "Dabo" Boyd will be joined by Luther Johnson Jr. and Andy Wayne Akers.

Boyd garnered the most votes in the race with 180. He was followed by Akers with 166; Little with 143; and Johnson with 126.

Incumbent Allen Taylor received 112. Also defeated in the race was Joe T. Yates with 124 votes; Paul R. Preston with 92 votes; and Bruce Alan Johnson with 118 votes.

In the Allen City Commission race, Larry Castle received 37 votes and Michelle L. Blair earned 36. They will be joined by two write-in candidates who received 38 and 26 votes respectively. The names of those individuals were not available Tuesday night.

Additional arrest brings total in drug investigation to seven

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

The Floyd County Sheriff Department's month-long investigation, which resulted in the arrests of six Floyd County residents last month, is still bringing in alleged drug traffickers.

Charles McCauley, 31, of Melvin, was charged last week with trafficking in a controlled substance, first degree.

According to court records,

Floyd detective Jim Rederick said McCauley sold a half gram of cocaine to a confidential informant on October 17.

During his arraignment Friday in Floyd District Court, Judge James R. Allen entered a not-guilty plea to McCauley's felony charge.

McCauley was placed under a $4,000 cash bond, and a preliminary hearing was scheduled for November 6.

Last month's raid, conducted by Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson and detective Rederick, was assisted by chief deputy Linzie Hunt, Lieutenant Ricky Thornsbury, and deputies Charlie Thompson, Steve Little, Matt Johnson and Greg Clark.

The raid has led to seven arrests so far and to the confiscation of more than a half pound of marijuana; a quantity of cocaine; several firearms, including an assault pistol; and various other drug paraphernalia.

Grandmother charged with endangerment

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

A West Prestonsburg grandmother was cited with three counts of endangering the welfare of a minor after the Prestonsburg Police Department found two of her grandchildren wandering the streets Tuesday morning.

The grandmother, Janice Setser, was issued a citation and is scheduled to appear in Floyd District Court on December 11 concerning the charges.

Patrolman William Petry, of the Prestonsburg Police Department, said he received a call at 8:52 a.m. that two small children were outside the bakery at West Prestonsburg.

He said he found a four-year-old male, and a two-year-old female.

"The children couldn't tell us who they were staying with," Petry said Tuesday.

Petry said the police department could not determine whose children they were, so the officers started knocking on doors in the area.

He said when the police woke up Setser at her residence after 10 a.m., the storm door was open and a seven-year-old child was still in the house.

"They had stayed at the grandmother's house and two of the kids apparently wandered out," Petry said.

Petry said social services officials were contacted and the children were released to their parents' custody.

Bailey wins battle of the state senators; McConnell gets new term over Beshear

A race that pitted one popular incumbent against another through legislative redistricting ended as expected Tuesday.

Democrat Senator Benny Ray Bailey, of Hindman, benefitted from the 29th Senatorial District's heavily Democratic registration to outdistance GOP opponent John David Preston, of Paintsville, by an unofficial count of 18,768 to 11,917.

Preston, gerrymandered into the 29th District from the 25th by the state's general assembly, won by a sizable margin in Johnson County, but lost in Floyd, Knott and Breathitt counties.

Bailey took Floyd County 8,514 to Preston's 4,909, and won Knott and Breathitt counties by considerable margins.

On the statewide ballot, incumbent Mitch McConnell won a third term in the U.S. Senate, joining the late John Sherman Cooper as the only Republicans ever to win three statewide races in Kentucky.

McConnell's route to a landslide victory over Democrat challenger Steve Beshear was not without a bump or two, though.

In Floyd County, Beshear drew 64 percent of the total vote, getting 8,646 to McConnell's 4,532.

It also appeared late Tuesday that Republicans would hold onto a majority in the state's delegation in the U.S. House of Representatives, and there was some indication that the GOP might even gain a seat.

In Kentucky's 3rd Congressional District, Republican Anne Northup threatened to oust incumbent Mike Ward, but that race was too close to call at presstime.

The GOP did retain its seats in the 1st, 2nd, 4th and 5th districts, where Ed Whitfield, Ron Lewis, Jim Bunning and Hal Rogers were re-elected. Rogers was unopposed in the 5th.

In the 6th Congressional District, Democrat Scotty Baesler was re-elected. In the presidential race, Bill Clinton was declared a winner despite a close tally in popular votes. Clinton won Floyd County handily, drawing 9,655 votes to Bob Dole's 3,139 total. Ross Perot got 1,518 Floyd County votes.

In another race of local impact, incumbent state representative Herbie Deskins was unopposed in the 94th District.

Incumbent Supreme Court Justice Janet Stumbo was also re-elected without opposition.

Complete precinct-by-precinct vote totals in Floyd County will be published in the Friday, November 8 edition of The Floyd County Times.

Mullins, Newsome, Patton get board seats

Incumbent Eddie Patton will retain his seat on the Floyd County School Board. Patton will be joined by newcomers B.J. Newsome and Jody Mullins.

Newsome and Mullins replace Phyllis Honshell and Dr. Brent Clark, who announced in August they wouldn't be seeking re-election.

Honshell has served since early 1994 when she was appointed to fill the unexpired term of Hattie Owens. Owens resigned from the school board to keep a job with the Floyd County Fiscal Court.

Clark was elected in 1992 and ran on the platform of cleaning up bathrooms and getting rid of trailers in school parking lots.

Patton defeated Glenda Hall in the District 4 race by more than 700 votes. He earned 1,680 to Hall's 966 for 63 percent of the vote.

In the District 3 match-up, Newsome earned 62 percent of the vote to Doyle Meade's 26 percent and Darrell R. Preston's 12 percent.

Newsome received 1,551 votes while Meade got 642 and Preston garnered 310.

In the District 5 race, Jody Mullins defeated Wayland Mayor Eugene Mullins by 33 votes, earning 39 percent of the ballots that were cast in the three-candidate race.

Jody Mullins had 973 votes to Eugene Mullins' 940. Also in the race was Teresa Hall, who got 593 votes, for 24 percent.

The new board members will take office at the first board meeting in January.

Among the new board's first duties will be the selection of a new superintendent, the seventh in as many years. Superintendent Dr. John Balentine died in October and was replaced by interim Louie Martin.

Martin will serve until his replacement is selected through a state-mandated screening process.

Layne Brothers Ford, Lincoln, Mercury and Honda Inc. donated a 1996 Ford Ranger XLT to the Mountain Arts Center last week to help raise funds for the center.

MAC receives new truck to raise funds

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

Aside from the entertainment Eastern Kentuckians get at the Mountain Arts Center (MAC), one lucky person will get a bonus and win a 1996 Ford Ranger XLT.

Layne Brothers Ford, Lincoln, Mercury and Honda Inc. donated the truck last week to help raise funds for the center.

Malcolm Layne, president and CEO of Layne Brothers, said the truck was donated because he wanted to give something back to the county and area.

Layne said he was a band student of Billie Jean Osborne, organizer of the Kentucky Opry and who talked the City of Prestonsburg into endorsing the project that provides residents a place to perform and expose their talents.

"The Mountain Arts Center will do a lot of good for the area," Layne said, "and I want to help the center progress."

Robert Meyer, executive director of MAC, said the center would be selling 3,000 chances for the truck, and the drawing will be on February 1 at the center before a Kentucky Opry performance. The chances cost $10 each.

"The donation of the truck was certainly a generous gesture of Layne Brothers," Meyer said Monday. "It's indicative of the support we have received from the community."

Meyer said this kind of support is what will make the center a success.

The truck is located in front of the center and chances can be purchased there.

PCC to offer ACT preparation class

The Office of Continuing Education at Prestonsburg Community College is planning a second preparation class for students who wish to take the ACT College Entrance examination. The next date for the ACT test is Saturday, December 14.

The preparation classes through PCC will be offered on two consecutive Saturdays, November 16 and 23. These classes help students prepare for the ACT test by reviewing the four major areas covered by the test.

National studies have shown that students who take a preparation course prior to taking the ACT test do better on the test than students who do not take such a course.

The ACT Preparation course will be offered on both the Prestonsburg and Pikeville campuses through the use of the Distance Learning classroom. The classes will be using the interactive technology available to PCC.

The first class will cover Reading and English review. The second class will review Math and Science Reasoning. The classes will meet from 10:00 a.m.-3:00 p.m. with an hour's break for lunch.

Anyone who wishes to register for the ACT Preparation class or to request more information, may call the Office of Continuing Education and Community Services at Prestonsburg Community College at 886-3863, ext. 240. The office is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

Liberty of thought is the life of the soul—Voltaire

A long-term investment

by Scott Perry

We had a story last week detailing how three public agencies from three different counties are uniting in an effort to create new opportunities in our region.

Hooray for them.

The project under consideration involves the extension of water lines to service a federal prison, to be built near the Johnson, Martin and Floyd County lines on Route 3; and the construction of a new sewage treatment plant near Auxier to serve that same area and others.

The partners in the project include Martin County's water company, and utility agencies in Prestonsburg and Paintsville.

Certainly all the bugs haven't been worked out of the deal and the financing isn't nailed down, but the cooperative attitude taken by these agencies makes the first step toward bringing the prison and its jobs to our neck of the woods quite a long one.

As we have noted before, this prison project could be a dream come true for our job-starved area.

It will offer an estimated 350 openings, at good pay, that are basically recession-proof.

Beyond that, development of the facility opens the entire Route 3 corridor to future use, and that could mean more jobs and more opportunity.

We know there are other areas of the region that have been waiting a long time for water and sewer services and we will always support utility expansions to those underserved places.

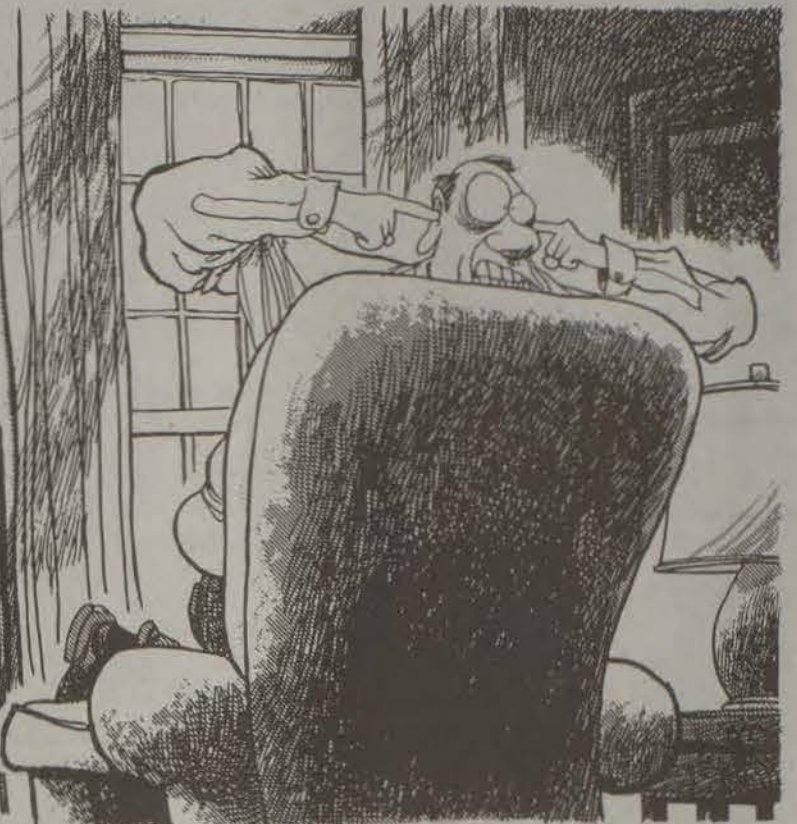

This project, though, deserves to be a priority because it not only brings jobs, but could generate enough returns to pay for expansions in areas now considered out of reach because they aren't feasible, financially.

When it comes down to finding the money to pay for the prison utility project, we urge all the partners to devote all the resources available, even if it isn't politically expedient to do so.

Over the long haul, the dividends will be shared by every-

DVA recognizes disabilities

Editor:

The Department of Veterans' Affairs has recently released an updated list of conditions that are considered service-connected disabilities as the result of exposure to Agent Orange while serving in Vietnam. The following is an extract from the "Agent Orange Review":

The VA has finally added prostate cancer and peripheral neuropathy (acute or subacute) to the list of Agent Orange or other dioxin-induced conditions affecting Vietnam Veterans that can be claimed as service-connected disabilities. Chloracne, non-Hodgkin's lymphoma, soft tissue sarcoma, Hodgkin's disease, porphyria cutanea tarda (PCT), multiple myeloma, and respiratory cancers were previously recognized. Insufficient data have been examined to determine Agent Orange association with the following conditions: hepatobiliary cancers, nasal/nasopharyngeal cancer, bone cancer, female reproductive cancers (cervical, uterine, ovarian), breast cancer, renal cancer, testicular cancer, leukemia, spontaneous abortion, birth defects (other than spina bifida which is recognized, but VA doesn't have authority to pay disabilities to offspring of Veterans), and a host of other conditions including diabetes.

I will be glad to share additional information with Vietnam Veterans or anyone inquiring on their behalf. Please feel free to call me at 886-3582.

Thanks for support

Editor:

The Board of Directors of The Floyd County Youth Soccer Association, on behalf of the association, its players, coaches, referees, parents, and all other related participants, would like to formally take this opportunity to acknowledge the following organizations and individuals for their support of the third season of soccer in the Big Sandy region of Eastern Kentucky.

It is the board's intent to graciously give them thanks for their financial contributions, fields upon which to play, and equipment; but more importantly to assure them that their actions in support of the association has facilitated the growth and expansion of the association's membership and activities, including the preparation and planning for the next season this coming spring.

The fourth season will increase the popularity of the sport of soccer and will further expand the opportunities for our region's children to reap the many benefits of participation in such a program.

The following is a formal list of those sponsors who have been so crucial to the third season of soccer, and a heartfelt thank-you from the association is extended to each.

Alice Lloyd College, American Electric Power, Archer Clinic Pharmacy, Dr. Charles Arnett, Consolidated Health Services, Cooley Medical, Dairy Queen of Prestonsburg, East Kentucky Cardiology, First Commonwealth Bank, First United Methodist Church, Hindman Settlement School, Kinzer Drilling, McDowell ARH, John Earl Hunt, The City of Pikeville, Pike County YMCA, Pillersdorf, Derosssett and Barrett, Pizza Hut, Porter Industries, Prestonsburg Community College, St. James Episcopal Church, WQHY.

Coffee Break

by Scott Perry

What do you get when you take about a dozen over-forty types, give them a football and mix them up for about thirty minutes on a graciously reduced-sized field?

A Ben-Gay® commercial.

For some ungodly reason...either pure ignorance or, more likely, brain fever...we agreed Sunday to participate in a flag football league that pitted one team of, um, mature players against another.

Mature is probably the wrong choice of words, but it's a bit more user-friendly than other applicable adjectives, which we aren't allowed to use in a family newspaper.

At any rate, our team of geezers beat the other team of geezers, most of whom were a little more, uh, mature, than us.

Their seniority gave them first dibs on cheating, which they did with professional relish, but it wasn't enough to overcome our team's abundance of talent which, when translated, spells bribery.

Ha ha. Just kidding. We won fair and square, and we've got a receipt from the ref to prove it.

Come to think of it, if we could resolve the world's differences by requiring world leaders to square off in flag football, bet there would be a whole lot more diplomacy.

Instead of sending young men and women out to fight our battles, let the old guys suit up in Ace® bandages and go out for a few long ones.

No, it wouldn't be a pretty sight, but the casualty lists would be a lot shorter.

And so would the wars.

When the smoke clears from this election, one truth will be self-evident...

The leaders of this country will have been chosen by a minority of American voters.

That is, of course, easy math. The only way we could accomplish true majority rule is if 100 percent of our eligible voters actually voted.

That will never happen, but it doesn't stop us from wondering what sort of government we might have if voting was a requirement instead a right.

We might even propose a constitutional amendment to that effect were it not for the probability that someone would argue that in a democracy, we all have a fundamental right to ignore our responsibilities for ensuring that democracy does not, as Mr. Lincoln said, perish from the earth.

Besides, if everyone had to vote, how could anyone afford to buy an election?

Don't know about you guys, but we made a statement with our votes on election day.

Didn't vote for one single person whose campaign signs or posters were left over from the last election.

Granted, not many of those folks were even on the ballot this time, but we wanted to make sure not to support anyone who doesn't clean up their own messes.

We've seen stickers and signs around our countryside and on utility poles that have outlived the candidates they propose, and it's a dirty rotten shame they've been left out to blight the landscape.

Next election, we're going to vote against anyone who has a sticker on a road sign, guardrail or other publicly funded structure.

It's not that we're against advertising. Hey, that's our business.

We're just against eye pollution.

If you candidates will collect your campaign materials after the voting is done, we'd appreciate it.

So would those utility workers, who have to dodge staples and nails when they climb those poles; and state highway crews, who have to scrape off those stickers.

By the way, when a sign is damaged beyond repair by a political sticker, who do you suppose pays for a new one?

scheduled for 2:30 p.m. November 13 to determine if there is probable cause to refer the cases to the grand jury.

Two Prestonsburg men were arraigned Monday for allegedly breaking into a Bonanza residence October 30 and stealing property from the house.

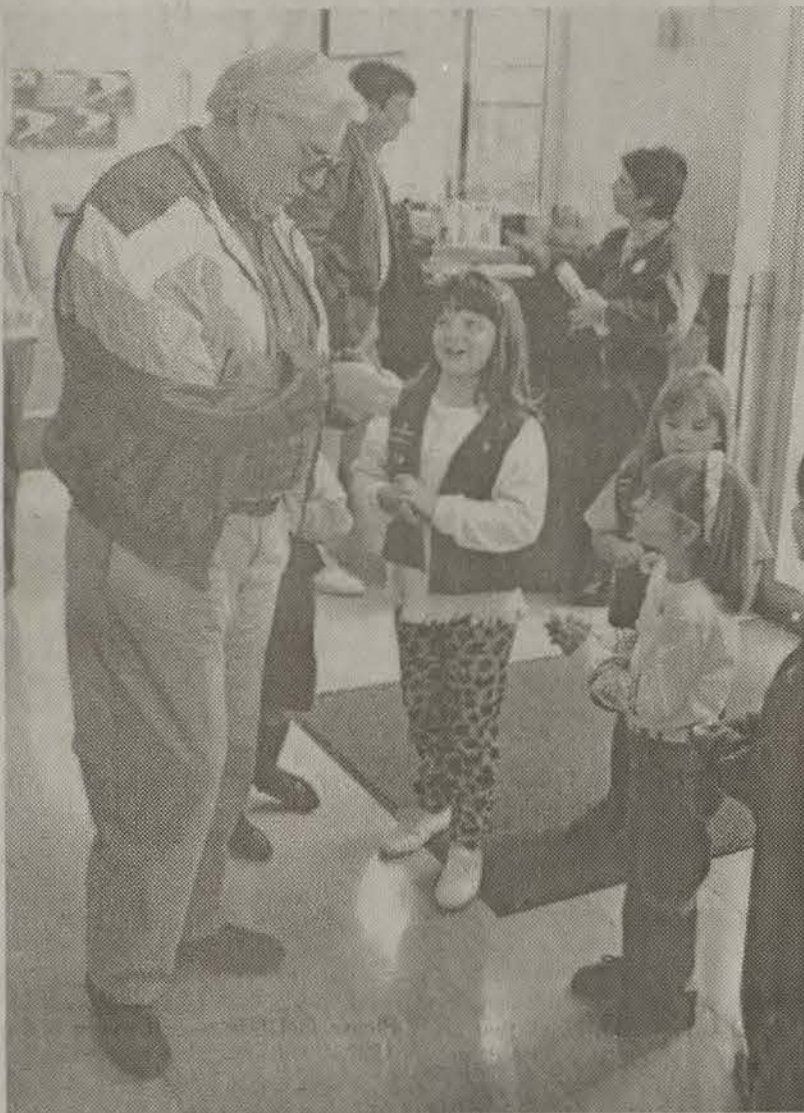

Bill David Collins II, 24, and Ronald Jackson Padgett II, 18, were arrested Friday, November 1, and charged with second-degree burglary, theft by unlawful taking, and criminal mischief, third degree.

According to an arrest warrant by Kentucky State Police trooper Mike Thorpe, Collins and Padgett broke into the home of Mary Prater and took property valued at more than $300.

They were charged with third-degree criminal mischief because they allegedly caused damage to the residence while trying to gain entry, the warrant says.

Floyd District Judge James R. Allen entered not-guilty pleas to Collins' and Padgett's felony charges Monday during arraignments. Both were placed under $10,000 cash bonds and are still lodged in the Floyd County Adult Detention Center.

Three Martin County men arrested following high speed chase that ended in Pike County

by Chris McDavid
Staff Writer

A high-speed chase that ended in a creek bed in Pike County Monday landed three Martin County men in jail with 30 charges lodged against them.

Prestonsburg Police sergeant Greg Clark notified Prestonsburg dispatcher Michelle Parker at 9:21 a.m. that he had pulled a 1980 Ford LTD over at Lancer and that the vehicle took off when he approached it.

Clark said Tuesday that he attempted to stop the vehicle to check the tags and added that the tags were for a different vehicle.

According to a media release from Clark, the vehicle was traveling South on Route 1428 and then turned up Cow Creek on Route 194.

Clark said the highest speed reached during the pursuit was 70 miles per hour on Route 1428, and approximately 40 to 60 miles per hour on Cow Creek.

"(The vehicle) went into Pike County, then towards Martin County, ... went up a dirt road, then into a creek bed," the release says.

Rally to be held on PCC campus

A group of Prestonsburg Community College students say it's time for citizens to stand up and make their voices heard in Frankfort about welfare reform.

Members of S.A.S.S.Y., Phi Theta Kappa, the student government, and the Floyd County Chapter of KFTC will sponsor a rally, weather permitting, on November 7, beginning at 10 a.m. on the PCC campus.

The sponsors plan to record the voices of area residents expressing their opinion about the issue of welfare reform. The recording will be sent to Governor Paul Patton and Viola Miller, secretary of the Cabinet for Families and Children.

Clark said that the pursuit lasted for more than a half hour and covered approximately 25 miles.

He said the vehicle came to a stop in the creek bed and the three subjects fled on foot. He said he was assisted in placing the three in custody by Kentucky State Police trooper Mike Thorpe and detective Bobby Johnson. Prestonsburg patrolman William Petry also assisted Clark during the pursuit.

The driver, Tackett Newsome, 49, was arrested and charged with 18 traffic violations, the release says. Newsome was also charged with three counts of first-degree criminal mischief and five counts of wanton endangerment.

Clark said the criminal mischief charges resulted from damages done to two KSP cruisers and Clark's cruiser, and the wanton endangerment charges were placed because Newsome endangered the lives of two passengers in the vehicle and the three police officials.

The two passengers, Virgil Jude, 50, and Ernest Scott, 32, were also arrested when the pursuit ended. Jude and Scott were charged with alcohol intoxication and resisting arrest.

The three are lodged in the Floyd County Adult Detention Center awaiting arraignment in Floyd District Court.

The best teacher I ever had

by Ralph Davis
The Paintsville Herald

Sarah Stephens Archer has been on my mind a lot lately.

It all started a couple of weeks ago when my old college roommate paid me a visit. It was the first time he had been to this area, and we drove the highways and byways of Johnson and Floyd counties for several hours as I bored him with tales from my high school days.

As we turned onto Arnold Avenue in Prestonsburg, I grew quiet for a moment as I looked at the white, two-story house once occupied by my freshman English teacher.

"That is the house where the best teacher I ever knew once lived," I said as we passed by.

All incoming freshman at Prestonsburg High School were forewarned about Ms. Archer before they ever darkened the schoolhouse door. She was the type of teacher who inspired dread in those who were "unlucky" enough to draw her on the first day of school.

I remember sitting in the gymnasium, holding my freshman year class schedule. Several friends peered at my classes over my shoulder.

"Oooh...you've got Ms. Archer," they would invariably say. "You've had it."

As I look back at my school days, I know now that such warn-

Choral festival for seniors at MSU

Morehead State University's Department of Music will host the 37th annual Choral Festival for High School Singers on November 18-19, in Baird Music Hall on the campus.

On Monday, November 18, at 8 p.m., the University's Concert Choir and Chamber Singers, under the direction of James Ross Beane, MSU associate professor of music and festival director, will share the stage in Duncan Recital Hall.

The Chamber Singers will perform two madrigals by Edwards and Pilkington, as well as selections by Byra, Debussy, Schuman and Carl Zytowski.

The concert choir's program will include a performance of Brahms' Motet, op. 29, No. 2, along with works by Rossini, Schubert and di Lasso.

The choir also will sing folk hymns and spirituals arranged by Alice Parker and Eugene Simpson.

On Tuesday, November 19, at 7 p.m., a 250-voice chorus composed of high school students from Kentucky and Ohio will be heard in concert.

Their program will include compositions by Sandberg, Leavitt, Haydn, Faure, Stevens and Claussen.

The guest conductor will be Noel Weaver, choral director at Ballard High School in Louisville with Jay Flippin, MSU associate professor of music accompanying.

Both concerts are free and open to the public.

MSU students from Floyd County participating in the Concert Choir and/or Chamber Singers are Chris Lafferty of Martin, a senior, son of Fred and LaVonne Lafferty; son of Prestonsburg, Scott Bradley, senior, son of S. F. Butch Bradley, sings with both ensembles; also of Prestonsburg, Michael Halfhill, freshman, son of Michael and Peggy Halfhill.

ings are the mark of a good teacher. Any teacher who made students work and learn in class and at home was the target of countless horror stories, which always ended with "...you're going to fail if you get her."

Ms. Archer, despite the tales of doom told to freshman, was not a monster. She expected order in her classroom and she insisted that you learn the lessons she taught, which may be as close to a monster as most high school students want to get.

As that first year of high school wore on, I came to find that Ms. Archer was a truly decent person, with a warm heart and keen wit outside of the stern teacher stereotype placed upon her by students.

When you walked into her classroom, you knew that you were in there for one reason and one reason only—to learn.

She tolerated no outbursts from class clowns like me and took every conceivable measure to instill her lessons into her students.

You could expect each day to contain several class exercises and lots of homework as you left. Class was work for students taking English under Ms. Archer. She taught the class so thoroughly that at times I believed I was talking a foreign language.

At this point, I should back up a moment and mention that, before taking Ms. Archer's class, I was never any good in English. I remember when I was in eighth grade I could make neither heads nor tails of it.

Thanks to "Schoolhouse Rock" on ABC Saturday mornings, I could identify a noun. Verbs and adjectives came a little slower, but I did pretty well, I suppose.

Adverbs, prepositions and pronouns, on the other hand, might just as well have been abstract concepts from quantum mechanics.

My tenuous grasp of my native language was no preparation for Ms. Archer's class. Declensions, conjugations, diagramming sentences...she ran the gamut on her students. Her class may just have well been named "Darwinian Evolution," because her students came to truly realize the meaning of the term "survival of the fittest."

Thankfully, I was forewarned about Ms. Archer. If I hadn't been, I may have wandered into her class in my usual lackadaisical mode of operation.

Instead, I attended Ms. Archer's class fully alert and ready to learn. I buckled down.

High schools kids may not have liked the thought of taking Ms. Archer's class, but those who did were undeniably blessed to have done so. As proof, I offer myself as an example.

I entered that freshman year a scared young boy who knew almost nothing about his native tongue. I left with a complete understanding of the structure and style of the English language.

In junior high I held on in English class by the seat of my pants. After having Ms. Archer, I never again had to study for English for my remaining three years of high school because she taught me so well.

I may be nothing close to another William Shakespeare, Mark Twain, John Steinbeck or Kurt Vonnegut, but at least I learned enough to eke out a living through my writing.

A few years ago, while I was living in another part of the state, I read Ms. Archer's obituary in the Lexington Herald-Leader. That day stands out as one of the blackest in my memory.

I could not and cannot imagine a freshman class not benefitting from her vast knowledge. It seems impossible to think there will never again be a group of students approaching her class with fear, and leaving with enriched minds.

Freshman English seems like it happened a million years ago, and undoubtedly many of Ms. Archer's lessons have been erased from my mind by the hands of time.

Although it may seem cliché, I truly believe that a part of Ms. Archer still lives, inside of me and the other students who were lucky enough to have her.

Mayo Tech Talk

Crider is changing lives at Mayo

by Linda Lyon
Mayo Marketing Director

The second quarter began at KY TECH Mayo, October 24. Registration was held October 18. If you want to enroll in Mayo, you need to take the entrance exam as soon as possible. You can take the TABE (entrance exam) any Monday or Tuesday in the Assessment Center. You need to be here before 7:50 to begin the exam. You may call 789-5321 for more information.

Governor Paul Patton visited our campus last month as his "Patton to the People" tour came our way. We were pleased to host this meeting and to have each of you who visited our campus. Please feel free to come back for an individual tour of our technology center.

I had the pleasure of visiting with Jason Bussey on WSIP's "Talk of the Town" program last month. We are always happy to spend a little time with Jason from time to time, talking about Mayo and the training opportunities we offer here. Jason and his station manager, Glenna Adkins, are real supporters of Mayo and technical education in Eastern Kentucky.

The staff at KY TECH-Mayo Regional Technology Center have many talents. While it is true that each one is gifted with skills which he/she passes on to the students in the classroom, other abilities help to make these people the special individuals that make up our staff. One such person is Dwight Crider.

Dwight Crider is not a loud man, nor will you find him seeking the public eye. However he is undeniably one of the busiest people in Eastern Kentucky. Crider has been an electricity/electronics teacher at Mayo since 1978. He says, "Mayo School is the best and most important asset to Eastern Kentucky and has changed the lives of thousands of people who otherwise may have never had the chance to see their ambitions become a reality." Although he has worked at R.V. Mayo Company and Welding Supply in Prestonsburg, as a line-man and/or repair technician, he says he likes working with students best. He says that this is the way that he can "give back" some of the skills and knowledge he was given by his teachers.

Crider came to Mayo as a student in 1971. His instructors, Jim Bentley, Eugene Cline, Homer Wells, and Russell Rucker left a lasting impression on the young man who was to later join their ranks as an instructor. They instilled in him a work ethic and the sense of caring stewardship that comes from being in a class with teachers who care about the students. Crider is also that kind of teacher.

But that is not all that Dwight Crider does. He has served for years on the Floyd County Rescue Squad and as a deputy sheriff. Many mornings he has come to work directly from working an emergency for most or all of the night, without rest or sleep. He has given 150 percent of himself to the people of Eastern Kentucky as long as I have known him.

However, there is still more. Recently we discovered another side of Crider. This one has kept very quiet around here. He is quite a dancer. It was reported to us that when "mild mannered Dwight" left the Mayo Campus he became "Super Line Dancer Dwight." If you know our staff, then you know what that meant. You guessed it! Crider now teaches line dancing to our staff two nights per week. I hear that they are learning a real mean boot scoot, or something along that line. But seriously, Crider and his wife, Karen, dance all year long around Kentucky. It has been a hobby they have enjoyed for some time. They have two daughters who keep them young. Melissa Dawn is 19 and Elizabeth Ann is 12. Now I ask you, is that a busy man or what? You can talk to Crider or any of his fellow staff members about the programs offered here at Mayo. Just pick up the phone and call 789-5321 for more information.

"SIS"

Billie Ferrell Parrigin

You are not forgotten, sis, nor will you ever be. As long as life and memory last, we will remember thee.

We miss you now, our hearts are sore; as time goes by we miss you more. Your loving smile, your gentle face, no one can fill your vacant place.

Sadly missed;

Dad, Mom, Zack, Scott, brothers and sisters, and friends at the Highlands Hospital.

Five Floyd Countians are resident advisers

Five Floyd County students are among 84 resident advisers for the 1996-97 school year at Morehead State University.

Don A. Burke, son of Lois E. Burke of Weeksbury, is a senior pre-law and government major. He is a member of Student Government Association, Student Activities Council, Alpha Omega, Residence Hall Association and Hall Council.

Tim Frasure, son of Randell and Judy Frasure of McDowell, is a senior industrial technology major. He is treasurer of Society of Manufacturing Engineers, National Association of Industrial Technology and Sigma Tau Epsilon fraternity.

Kimberly A. Little, daughter of Gary and Patsy Little of Hi Hat, is a senior, majoring in learning and behavior disorders with an emphasis on K-12 grades.

She is a member of Phi Kappa Phi honor society, Gamma Beta Phi honor society, Kappa Delta Pi educational honor society and Student Council for Exceptional Children.

Cathy Weathers, daughter of Eugene and Linda Weathers of Prestonsburg, is a senior psychology major.

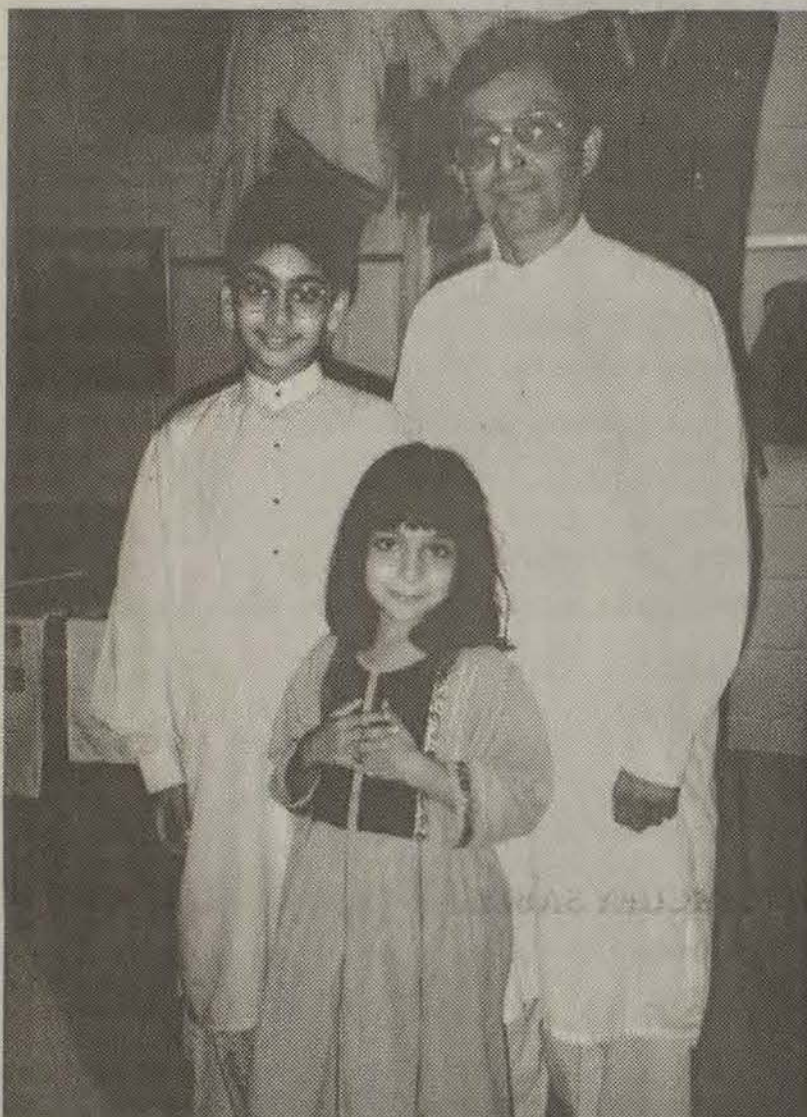

She is a member of Phi Sigma Pi, Residence Hall Association, Student Government Association, Cosmopolitan Club and Student Activities Council. Weathers is president of West Mignon Hall Council.

Chad Lee White of Ivel, son of the late Jesse Luke White and Vonda Lee White, is a senior accounting major.

He is a member of ROTC and the National Guard and serves as president of the Accounting Club.

Resident advisers assist the hall staff in making residence halls a better place to live, according to Dennis McKay, area coordinator of the RA Program.

They present educational programming, serve as community builders on their floor and keep students informed about campus activities and responsibilities.

A taste of culture

International Club of Appalachia member Arif Azeem attended the display with his children dressed in clothing from his native country of Pakistan.

Cultural Diversity Week held at PCC

The International Club of Appalachia recently participated in Cultural Diversity Week at Prestonsburg Community College by hosting a multicultural display in the art gallery at the college.

Over 100 people, made up of students, college faculty and members of the community, visited the display during the afternoon and evening hours on October 17.

The display, filling the entire room in a colorful array, featured items from around the world, including Syria, the Czech Republic, Tunisia, the Philippines, Ethiopia, Pakistan, Kuwait, India, Saudi Arabia, Palestine, Lebanon, Poland, Portugal, Bulgaria and Scotland among others.

Items on show included traditional clothing from the various countries, books, art work, dolls, children's toys, jewelry and home decorating items.

In addition, a refreshment table greeted guests and featured homemade international foods contributed by members of the club. Guests enjoyed bread from Ethiopia, Baba ghanouj, an eggplant dip, and nammoura, a dessert from Lebanon, a vegetable dip with bread from Iran and other treats.

Terrie Wells with the Paintsville Independent School system for displayed items from Saudi Arabia and Rebecca Estep displayed her collection of 20 dolls in traditional dress from all over the world. Wal-Mart, Winn-Dixie and Foodland contributed to the refreshment table.

The International Club of Appalachia is a newly-formed organization designed to bring together people from other nations for social, educational and professional interaction.

Club members have attended a reception at a member's home, enjoyed a picnic at Paintsville Lake and hosted the display at the college.

The club is planning to host another social event before the Christmas holiday. Anyone interested in joining the club may call Dr. John Shiber at 789-1017 or Toufic Saad at 789-1679 for more information.

Transition training at local college

Prestonsburg Community College's Office of Continuing Education is offering the second in a series of EMT Transition Training classes.

These classes are being offered to help current EMTs receive the upgrade training required by state law. All of this transition training must be completed before July 1, 1999, in order for EMTs trained under the previous system to retain their licenses.

The PCC instructor who offers these transition classes is one of the few instructors certified to provide this upgrade training. Students complete four weeks of this updated training and test out at the end of the four weeks of classroom instruction. Upon successful completion of the recertification test, the EMT is recognized as being up-to-date with current training needs.

This transition class will begin Tuesday, November 19, and continue for four weeks. The final test will be given on the Saturday following the final classroom meeting.

For further information, or to register for the class, call 886-3863, ext. 240 or come to the Johnson Building, Room 105 on the PCC campus.

The McDonald's of Martin recently conducted a three-week grand-opening celebration. During the event, Cindi Wiley, restaurant manager, delivered free nutritional videos to Martin Elementary and Mountain Christian Academy. The four students accepting the video on behalf of Martin Elementary were Matracia Collins, Kelli Allen, Ryan Collins and Belinda Boyd. The McDonald's restaurant in Martin is one of nine restaurants throughout Eastern Kentucky owned and operated by Bob and Tom Hutchison.

Volunteers needed to staff tax help sites

The Internal Revenue Service may be looking for you!

The IRS needs volunteers who have an aptitude for doing taxes. They should be willing to give some time during the 1997 tax filing season (January-April) to offer free tax help to low-income, elderly, and handicapped persons.

Volunteers will receive training in tax preparation, then will staff help sites in their local communities.

Last year about 53,000 people were helped by 700 volunteers through the Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) and Tax Counseling for the Elderly (TCE) Programs in Kentucky.

Many VITA and TCE volunteers return each year to help, and some have volunteered nearly every year since the programs began in 1969. They all enjoy making the tax filing season less taxing for people in their local area.

Volunteers come from all walks of life—retirees, college students, accountants, attorneys, and others. Those who prepare tax returns as a volunteer must pass a special test after training, but volunteers are also needed for jobs other than tax return preparation.

To volunteer or to offer a site location, call the IRS toll-free at 1-800-829-1040, or you may call the number or write to the address below: Eastern Kentucky—call 423-545-4535 in Knoxville, Tennessee.

Or write to: IRS Taxpayer Education Office, P.O. Box 1107, MDP 46, Nashville, TN 37202, phone 615-736-2280.

Creation of Air Force to be honored, marking attack on Pearl Harbor

The creation of the United States Air Force will be honored in Lexington December 7 at ceremonies marking the 55th anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Air Force Brig. Gen. David Herrelko, commander of the Joint Logistics Center System at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio, will be the featured speaker.

The all-day observance will be held at the Continental Inn in Lexington, sponsored by the Pearl Harbor Commemorative Association.

The Lexington-based association has members in several countries, and is dedicated to preserving memories of the 1941 Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor and to honoring the sacrifices of American servicemen and women.

The association sponsors a Pearl Harbor Day observance annually, with each event following a particular theme. This year's activities focus on the founding of the air force.

Originally, America's military air arm was a part of the U.S. Army. Through the end of World War II it was known officially as the Army Air Corps.

Congress passed the National Security Act in 1947, officially designating the U.S. Air Force as a separate branch of the military.

The act became effective in September 1947, although the Air Force's separation from the Army was not completed until 1949.

But the advent of nuclear weapons, long-range jet aircraft and guided missiles quickly made the new Air Force a critical part of the nation's defense—a role it retains to this day.

The observance on December 7 will get under way at 9 a.m., but the major portion of the activities will begin at 12:55 p.m.—the hour when bombs began falling on Pearl Harbor. There will be a moment of silence, a traditional Navy Three-Bell Ceremony and a 20-minute documentary film about the attack.

Guests will include veterans of World War II, retired Air Force officers and others.

Col. Larry Arnett of the Kentucky Veterans Center will be the emcee.

Others participating will include the Bryan Station High School Junior Air Force ROTC color guard, plus color guard and drill units from the University of Kentucky and the Millersburg Military Institute.

The Oleika Shrine Temple Band, the Lexington Pipe Band, and students from the Cynthiana Middle School will present patriotic music.

Gen. Herrelko will speak at an evening banquet which completes the day's activities. The banquet begins at 7 p.m. and will be preceded by a 6:30 p.m. reception.

Herrelko, a native of Washington State, entered the Air Force in 1970 after graduating from MIT, where received a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering and was a member of the ROTC program. He also holds a master's degree from Syracuse University.

Admission to all of the activities is free, with the exception of the banquet. Tickets for the banquet are $20. For tickets or information, call Orrin Brown at 606-277-0733. Or you may write Orrin Brown, Committee Chairman PHCA, P.O. Box 12315, Lexington, Ky., 40582-2315.

Despite drastic '96 season, Coach Reeves brought respect to Rebel football

HAPPY BIRTHDAY WISH...

To Allen Central's Levi Wells, who will turn 18 today (Wednesday). Wells has been a four-year starter for the Rebels' football team and a member of the track and field team at Allen Central. Happy birthday, Levi!

To put it simple, it wasn't a good year for the Allen Central Rebels' football program. All the disappointments and frustrations of the season led coach Glenn Reeves to decide to give up the head coaching job at the Right Beaver school.

As of this writing, which is Monday afternoon, an official statement of resignation had not been received in the principal's office, but it was expected to be submitted.

Coach Reeves came to Allen Central when the program was in disarray. He worked the players hard and finally, last year the Rebels were a state playoff team, and he achieved that with a group of junior football players.

Expectations of their senior year soared as a return trip to the playoffs was a sure thing. The Rebels found that nothing is a sure thing, especially a successful football season. Coach Reeves' ballclub dropped their final eight games this season to finish a dismal 2-8 on the season.

Parents began to complain about the coaching at Allen Central and the way the program was being run. Little by little, players began to drop off the team, leaving the program with many, many question marks.

I got to know Coach Reeves, as I try to get acquainted with all of our county coaches firsthand, and I found him to be a hard worker and dedicated to the task of building a strong football program at Allen Central.

Unlike the "true" football schools, the task of building a program was not to be an easy one. I have seen him take his summers and spend them at the football field, where he has worked to keep the grass green and the stadium a nice arena for his team.

I have heard him speak of his players and his concern for them. I have heard him speak words of kindness for each one. He was an individual who really cared.

But sometimes there are circumstances that seem to change individuals, even if they don't want to be different. A person can handle only so much vocal dissent. Sooner or later, no matter how dedicated, it is time to

Hardee repeats as regional champ in C-C meet in Somerset

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Prestonsburg's Ryan Hardee posted a time of 18:58.00 in winning the regional cross-country championship this past Saturday in Somerset. It was a repeat performance for Hardee, who was also last year's regional champ.

Hardee will advance to state competition this coming Saturday,

November 9, at the Horse Park in Lexington.

Hardee nosed out Whitesburg's Ryan Sexton, who placed second overall at 19:21.00.

Allen Central's John Goble placed seventh overall and qualified for the state event as well. Goble had a time of 21:12.00.

Jay Harvey and Israel Shepherd went ten and 11, respectively, for Allen Central.

Prestonsburg did not have enough runners to qualify as a team. "There is just not that interest in cross-country anymore at our school," Prestonsburg coach Harold Tackett said. Prestonsburg, a school that used to have one of the stronger women's team in the region, did not field a girls' team this season.

Eric Joseph ran for Prestonsburg and placed 23rd overall with a time of 24:40.

Chris Damron, Jackie Owens, Nathan Goble and Brian Jones all finished for Allen Central.

Overall, Whitesburg placed first with 35 points with Allen Central placing second with 50 points. Corbin and Middlesboro were the other two participating schools.

Corbin was the top finisher in the women's division, followed by Whitesburg and Middlesboro.

Allen Central did not have enough to field a team in the girls' division.

However, Crystal Martin placed 14th overall with Dreamia Isaac placing 21, followed by Vylinda Turner and Brooke Mullins.

The state meet is set to begin with the girls running at 9:30 a.m. and the boys an hour later, at 10:30 a.m. The top four teams and top seven individuals will advance to the state meet.

Rebels' season ends with 42-6 setback to Whitesburg

Coach Reeves resigns as head of Rebel program

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

In a season which has had Allen Central scratching its head wondering what went wrong, the Rebels fell for the eighth straight game in a loss to Whitesburg 42-6. The defeat turned out to be coach Glenn Reeves' final game as head coach of the Rebels' program.

The scoreboard was not operational when the game started, and the Allen Central coach said, with a note of irony, that his coaching stint at Allen Central ended much the way it began.

"The first game I coached the scoreboard did not work," he said. "And now the final game I coach, it doesn't work either." It was a disappointing season for Allen Central, coaches and fans. High expectations loomed for the team when the season kicked off back in August. With two games in the win column, the Rebels were hit hard by injuries to key players and had to find someone to step up.

Allen Central looked like the "old Rebels" defensively when the season began, sacking Whitesburg quarterback Shane Barker eight times for minus 67 yards. But it was mistakes that cost the Rebels early. Case in point was when Gordon Reeves fumbled the opening kick off and Whitesburg recovered the football at the Allen Central 23. With the aid of a penalty, it took the Yellowjackets only five plays to score on a 7-yard run by Jason Brown. Chris Collins added the extra point for a 7-0 game.

Allen Central's defense was giving the Yellowjackets problems until a breakdown in the Rebels' secondary allowed Barker to hit Scott Reed with a 75-yard touchdown completion. Collins' extra point made it a 14-0 affair at the end of the first period.

The Rebels came back and on a nice drive of their own in the second period made it a 14-6 game. The Rebels took over the football at the Whitesburg 18-yard line on a horrible punt attempt by Collins. Sophomore quarterback Jesse Hall hit Shane Blackburn with a 14-yard completion, putting the football at the 1-yard line where Josh Reeves powered his way into the end zone.

Allen Central's third mistake allowed the Yellowjackets to go up 21-6 at the half. The Rebels had excellent field position in looking to either tie the game or take the lead. Craig Crase had intercepted a Barker pass and returned it 32 yards to the Whitesburg 38-yard line. Crase went up between two defenders and pulled down a pass for a 31-yard completion, placing the football at the Yellowjackets' 7-yard line. On a third and goal play, Hall had a pass picked off and returned 97 yards by Thomas Gibson with the extra point making it 21-6.

Whitesburg struck first in the third period on their first possession and led 28-6 on a 45-yard touchdown run by Brown. Later they led 35-6 and finally 42-6.

The Rebels missed a scoring opportunity in the fourth quarter when Gordon Reeves blocked a Whitesburg punt, taking over the ball on the Yellowjackets' 10-yard line. Hall hit Crase with a completion on a swing pass, but he was spilled way behind the line of scrimmage for a loss of 18 yards. Cook then picked off a Hall pass to end the threat.

Hall was intercepted six times, but he completed seven of 16 pass attempts for 75 yards. Gordon Reeves had 25 yards rushing on eight carries with Crase carrying the football for 15 yards. Allen Central had 51 yards total on the ground and 126 yards total offense.

Shane Blackburn caught four passes for 53 yards. Crase had two catches for 13 yards and Gordon Reeves had one for nine yards.

Allen Central had six flags for 50 yards in penalties. Their six turnovers came on interceptions.

Whitesburg's Barker was sacked six times on the blitz by Allen Central. Phillip Robinson led the Allen Central defense with 17 tackles and was in on three sacks. Levi Wells had eight first hits, two assists and was in on two sacks. Brady Scott had two sacks. Crase had the lone interception for the Rebels.

Whitesburg was penalized for 65 yards on eight flags. They fumbled the football away once and were intercepted once.

REBEL NOTE:

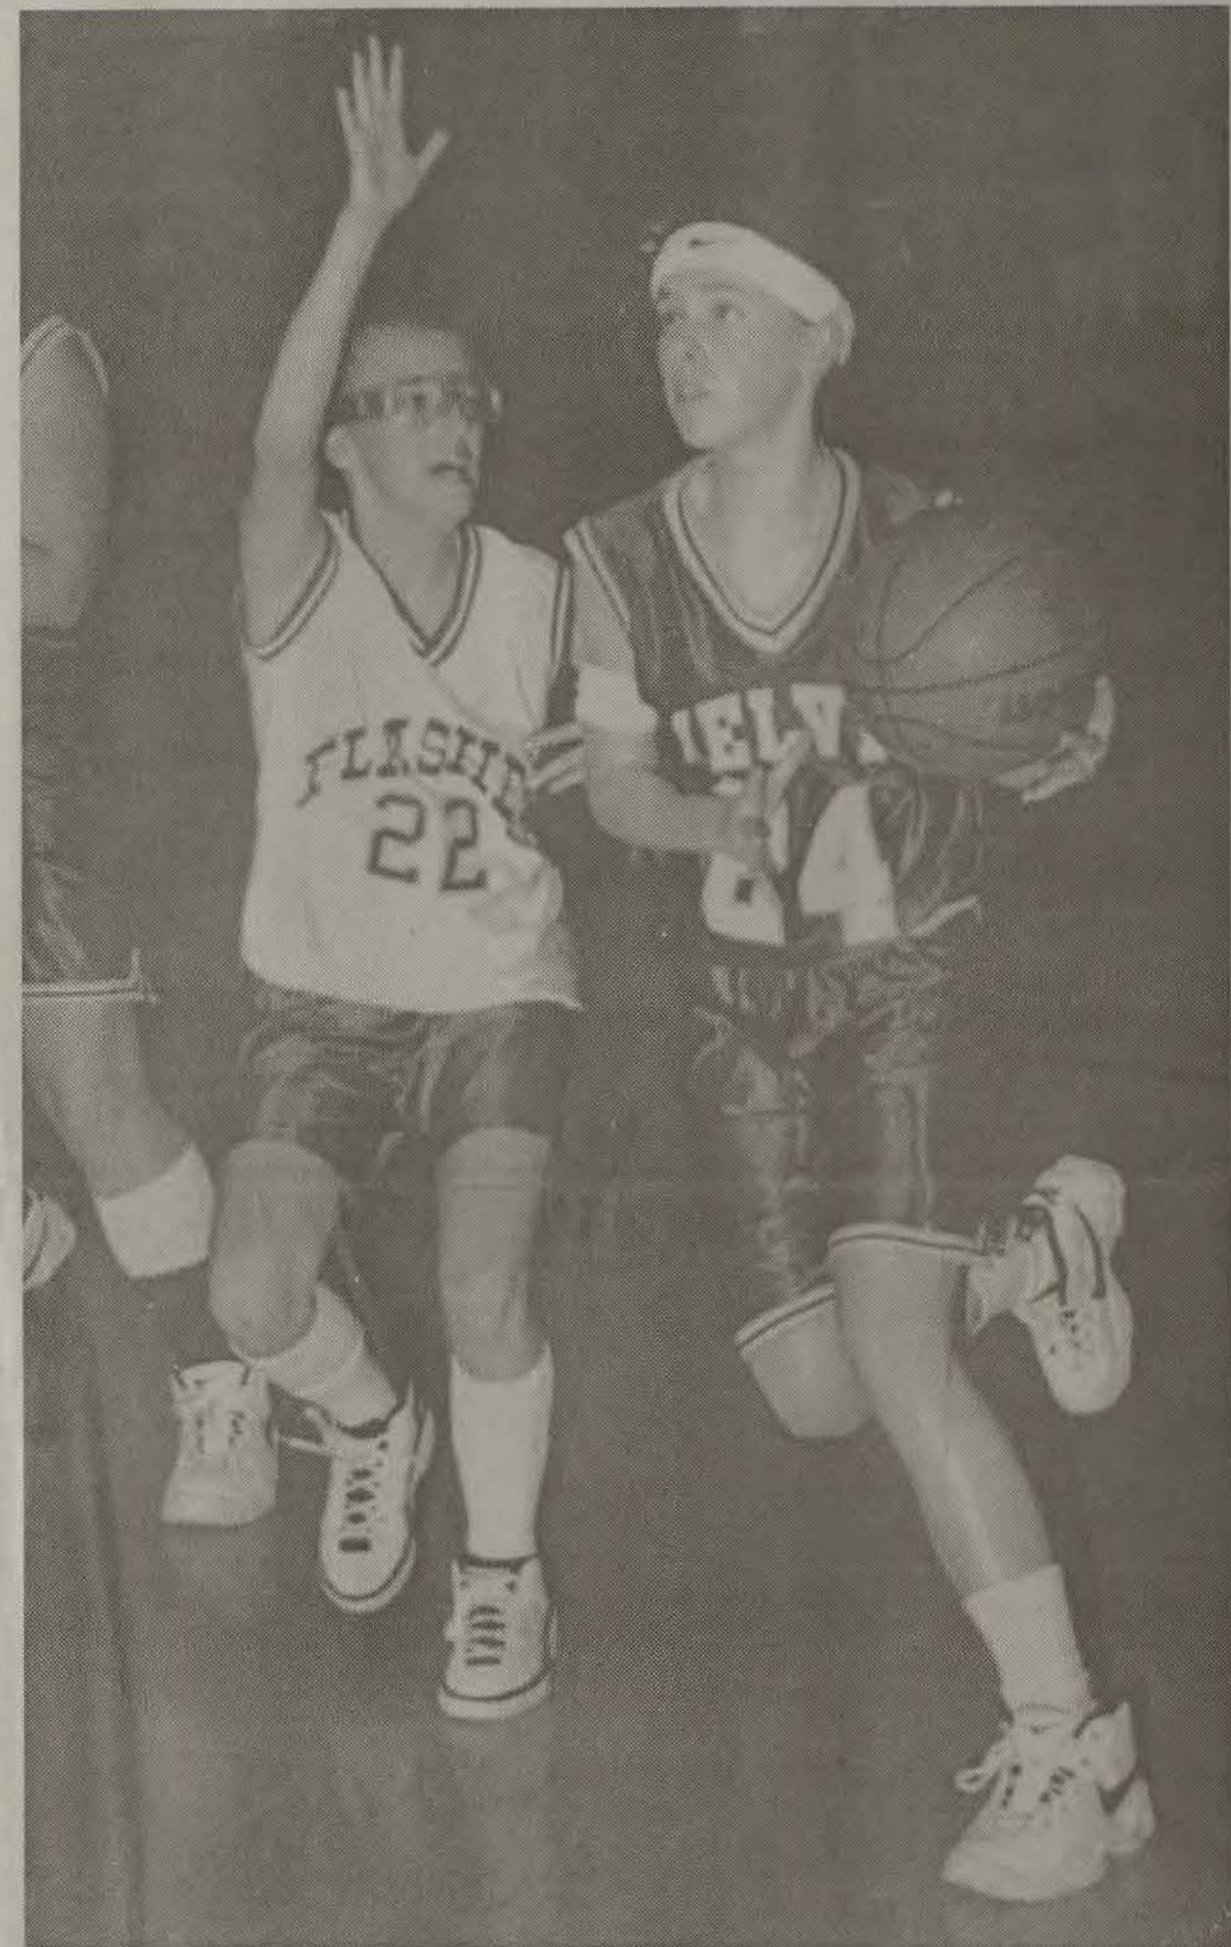

• Coach Reeves indicated he would tender his resignation Monday, November 4, but according to school principal Loretta Hall, the signed document had not arrived in her office.

"I haven't received anything from him yet," said Mrs. Hall on Monday morning. "He indicated to me verbally he was going to resign and I told him I had to have that in writing. But as of yet, I haven't received anything officially."

• The Allen Central coach was considering an offer to become an assistant at Prestonsburg next season, but that could be a foregone conclusion.

"I'm going to make the move," he said Friday night. "We're going. But it will depend on if they have an opening there next year."

Either way, Coach Reeves will not be back with the Allen Central program. With Coach Reeves will go his son, junior Gordon Reeves, the Rebels' leading rusher. Allen Central had 23 seniors this season, leaving a scant team returning next year. The Allen Central feeder program (Li'l Rebels) was thin in its ranks, as well.

Prestonsburg stunned at Lawrence County, 39-0

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

It was no way to get ready for the second football season. The Prestonsburg Blackcats could do nothing right in dropping a 39-0 decision to Chuke Williams' Lawrence County Bulldogs this past Friday night at Louisa.

It was only the second loss of the season for the Blackcats who finished the season 7-2 with the playoffs next. Lawrence finished 8-2 on the year.

Both losses this season for the Blackcats were shellackings as they fell hard at Breathitt County 40-6 earlier.

Lawrence County totaled an amazing 420 yards rushing against a defense that had limited their opponents to only 83 yards per game through the first eight contests.

Tailback Mike Copley led the Bulldogs ground game with 152 yards rushing. He also scored two touchdowns. It was the balanced offensive attack of the Bulldogs that kept the Prestonsburg defense guessing. Quarterback Jason Michael threw for 110 yards and he carried the football for 93 yards rushing. Nick Meadows rushed for 104 yards for the Bulldogs and scored one touchdown.

Copley and Meadows hooked up in the first quarter to give Lawrence County a 14-0 lead. Copley scored

Breathitt County extends streak with win over Betsy Layne Bobcats, 61-0

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The Breathitt County Bobcats were one of six undefeated 2A schools and they extended their winning streak to 25 consecutive games going into this week's state playoffs. The Bobcats of Breathitt roughed up the Bobcats of Betsy Layne to the tune of 61-0. In doing so, Breathitt County joined Bowling Green, who also has won 25 straight games.

Breathitt County is the state's 2A defending champions and went undefeated last season. The Bobcats finished 10-0 on the season while Betsy Layne fell to 3-7 under first-year coach Randal Hager.

Breathitt County led 41-0 after the first half as they ran at will against the Bobcats' front line. Bryan Morris ran the ball into the end zone from 1-yard out to stake the Bobcats to a 7-0 lead after the PAT. From that point, Betsy Layne was never in the game, trailing 21-0 after the first period.

Breathitt County recovered two Betsy Layne fumbles and returned both for touchdowns. Morris scored three times for Breathitt County, who will host Lloyd Memorial in first round playoff action this Friday night.

Auxier shocks Adams in sectional matchup

Powers scores 27 as Hornets sting Blackcats

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Never, never has the Auxier Hornets' boys' basketball team handed the Adams Middle School Blackcats a home loss until Monday night when they did so in real fashion.

Ricky Powers hit 13 consecutive free throws in the fourth quarter in scoring 27 points to lead the Hornets to a surprising 52-47 win over Adams. The game was an all-important sectional game early in the season.

Powers, who had four points at the half, scored 10 in the third quarter. Ralph Mullett tossed in 14 points for the Hornets.

"We played very well," said Auxier coach Bobby Hackworth. "We had two players out, one on suspension. But the kids pulled together."

Josh Slone scored 21 points to lead Adams in scoring. He hit three three-point baskets. Matt Clay added seven points and Brooke Stinnett finished with six points.

Adams held a 10-8 first quarter lead on three point baskets by Clay and Ryan Martin. Powers and Mullett each scored four points for Auxier.

Adams held a 23-15 half-time lead going to the locker room. Slone hit his two treys in the period, scoring seven points.

Powers started warming up in the third period, putting in 10 points as Jody Harris hit a three-point basket that put the Hornets in front. The score was tied 33-33 after three quarters.

Coach Hackworth wanted to keep the ball in Powers' hand in the fourth quarter. The move paid off as Adams sent him to the free throw line where he connected on 13 straight.

"I'm happy for them," said Hackworth. "This is the first time an Auxier team has beaten Adams on their home floor. Our defense was very good. That is something I have been stressing this year. Against Adams, we played good defense and got on the boards."

Martin Middle School advances in Right Beaver Classic, 71-40

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

This was to be the season for the Melvin Cougars. Coach Tony Isaac's ballclub is considered to be one of the favorites to make a run at a county championship this year. But it was bad news for the Cougars in the opening round of the Right Beaver Classic played at Martin Monday night.

Martin and Melvin squared off in the third game of the evening and it wasn't a pretty sight. Tempers were unleashed and the county deputies were called in to calm things down.

Larry Mullins scored 18 points to lead Martin to their 71-40 win over Melvin in a game that saw the Purple Flash attempt 43 free throws to Melvin's 12.

"I thought the game was a little one-sided," said Melvin coach Tony Isaac. "I thought we played well."

P.J. Cox and Matt Tackett each finished with nine points for Melvin, who lost their starting center, Brandon Kholer, to fouls midway in the second quarter.

Martin held a 10-7 first quarter lead as Melvin stayed close on Rusty Tackett's three-point basket. But a 20-10 run by Martin in the second quarter netted the Purple Flash a 30-17 half-time lead. Martin shot 17 free throws in the second quarter in a foul-plagued game, hitting 11. Melvin went to the free throw line once in the second period, drawing criticism not only from the Melvin bench but the fans in the stands as well.

The officials were getting their ears full from both sides and whistled Coach Isaac for a technical. Later a technical was called on a Kholer. It didn't take long until a Melvin fan was assessed a technical foul for coming out on the floor.

Melvin, with a strong outside shooting team, hit seven three-pointers in the game. Cox and Rusty Tackett had two each. Matt Tackett, Kevin McKinney and Jeremy Tackett had one apiece.

Coach Isaac took his starters out of the game for fear of their being hurt and inserted his "B" team. He liked the way his team handled themselves and feels they performed well after being a last-day entrant into the tournament.

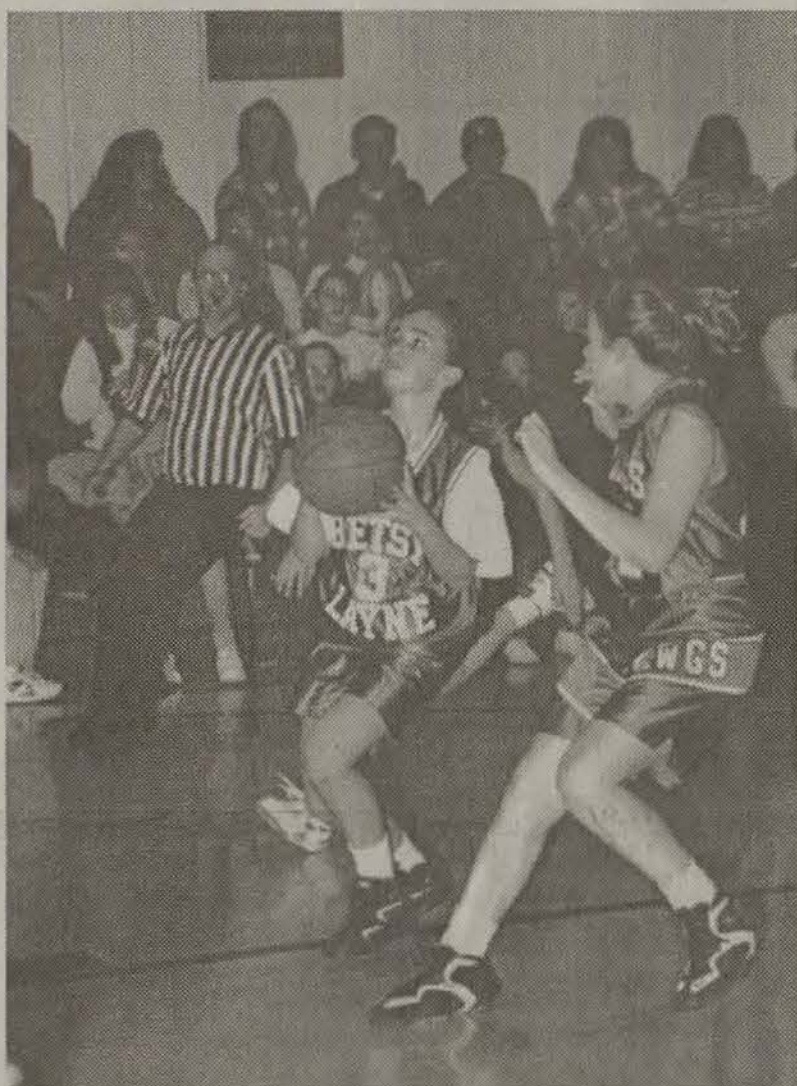

"We didn't get invited until today (Monday)," said Isaac. "I thought the kids played well. I have no complaints about the players' play. A couple did take one or two bad shots, but overall we played well."

"P.J. is really improving. He is rebounding well and is more aggressive on the floor. Matt is handling the basketball much better. Brandon, who didn't play last year, is back and is going to help us a lot."

Martin hit 23 of their 43 free throws in putting the game away despite all the confusion and distractions. Jeremy Hayes added 11 points with Dwight McKinney scoring eight. Timmy Davis and Chris Owens added seven each for the Purple Flash.

Rusty Tackett and Jeremy Tackett scored seven points each for Melvin.

Mullins hit a three pointer and connected on five of eight free throws for Martin. Chris Owens step back and take a look at things and see if a person's motives and priorities are in order.

I never tried to suggest to a coach how to coach the game. I am certainly not knowledgeable enough to make such comments. But I like to observe people and see how they perform under pressure. Coach Reeves handled himself well.

At practice a coach is a different person compared to game time. The pressure of a coach having to win to hold his job adds even more pressure. Everyone expects a coach to be a "miracle worker," and yet, instead of helping with the problem, some want to become the problem.

Step back and put yourself in the shoes of a football coach in Eastern Kentucky. Outside of Prestonsburg, the game is still rather new to some of our schools.

I feel for coaches who have to take the verbal abuse they do. I don't think any human being should have to be subjected to it. I don't like to hear the abuse — but I do.

At the same time, I can understand the feelings of parents as they think their child should be playing more or should not be playing out of position. I understand that and I am in sympathy with them. If I had a child playing, I probably would feel the same way. I know I would.

Still, I think the problem with all athletics today is the parents. Sad to say, but true. All are better coaches than the coach. All have a better game plan. All seem to know just the right play to call. But it is a different game when it comes to supporting a program that is fading.

I hope that with the loss of Coach Reeves, that the Allen Central football program is not history. I also hope that the powers that be will not settle just for anyone as the next head coach, but will chose a person who will know the game. One who will know how to coach, know how to respect their players and who, most of all, wants to be a positive influence on these young men's lives.

New players will move into the program next year and some of the older ones will return (?). But it doesn't matter who the new head coach may be, parents need to stand behind the team, and especially the coach, even when the wins are slow in coming.

If the Allen Central football program continues, it will not be an easy road. In the '97 season, they will have their fifth coach in the school's 20-year football history.

Winning season eludes South Floyd in 28-8 setback at Elkhorn City

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Despite all playoff hopes dashed, the South Floyd Raiders were enjoying their first-ever winning season when they visited Elkhorn City this past Friday night.

The Raiders took a 5-4 record to Pike County, hoping for a win that would have given them the finishing touch on a disappointing season in which they were expected to return to the playoffs.

But it was the Cougars squashing any chance for a winning year as they posted a 28-8 win over the Raiders. The win improved Elkhorn to 4-6 on the season and 2-5 in district play.

South Floyd was unable to run the ball around or through the Cougars' defense, inspiring coach Donnie Daniels to try the airwaves with his much heralded junior quarterback Nick Compton. Compton worked out of the shot-gun in the second half, but could only complete six of 13 passes for 93 yards passing.

Turnovers hurt the Raiders as well as they fumbled the football three times. They were hit hard with penalties, being penalized 90 yards. They rushed for 138 yards and had a total of 191 yards on offense.

Tailback Ketrin Mays scored the lone touchdown for the Raiders. He scored in the third period on a 1-yard run and then ran the two-point conversion as Elkhorn led 22-8.

Both teams played to a scoreless tie in the first period, but Jason Hawkins put the Cougars on the scoreboard in the second quarter on a 24-yard run with 2:21 to play. Chad Cure ran the conversion for an 8-0 game. With time running out in the first half, Chad Cure scored with 41 seconds remaining and he added the two-point run as Elkhorn led 16-0 at the half.

Elkhorn got a touchdown from Hawkins in the third period and again in the fourth to win 28-8.

Elkhorn rushed for 329 yards on 53 attempts. They had one pass completion for 10 yards. The Cougars fumbled the football twice, losing it once.

Coach Donnie Daniels was disappointed in the effort his Raiders put forth.

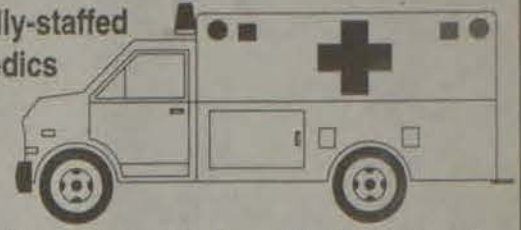

"I thought they would have been more mature than that," he said. "We did things we hadn't done all season. Some did things we hadn't done in the four years here. We played like a team finishing out the season."

Mays rushed for 101 yards on 16 carries. Jonathan Paige finished with 50 yards on five attempts. Compton hit Scotty Johnson six times for 63 yards receiving. Justin Holbrook had two catches for 15 yards. Mark Smallwood had one for 10 yards.

BETSY LAYNE POINT GUARD TO MISS FIRST SEMESTER

The Betsy Layne Lady Cats will have to look to someone else to guide the team in the first half of the basketball season as senior point guard Penny Tackett has been declared academically ineligible for the first semester of the school year.

Coach Bill Newsome was looking to Tackett and off-guard Jessica Johnson to team with returning senior Ashley Tackett to guide the Lady Cats this season.

WILD AND WOOLEY TIME AT MARTIN

The first round play of the Right Beaver Classic, a grade school tournament that kicks off the grade school basketball season, was hot and heavy this past Monday night.

The little Martin gym was filled as basketball hungry fans crowded into standing room (and not much of that) only conditions. But the real heat didn't come until the final game between Martin and Melvin boys.

In what appeared to be a one-sided game, and not just on the basketball floor, the Cougars fell to Martin by 31 points — but that was not the story of this game.

Three technical fouls, the ejection of a Melvin fan from the gym, and the heated exchanges between coaches and referees were a bad scene, resulting in county deputies being summoned to the gym.

What was all the to-do about at Martin? Melvin fans and coaching staff thought the game was a little too one-sided. A look at the scorebook reveals that Martin shot 17 free throws in the second period alone while Melvin went to the line once. The totals for the game were astonishing. Martin attempted 43 free throws to Melvin's 12 in a game that took an eternity to play.

Technical fouls were called on Melvin coach Tony Isaac, a Melvin fan, and a Melvin player. What the officials perhaps forgot in the "heat of the night" is that Coach Isaac should have been suspended. It pays to know the rules.

The situation could have been described as chaotic.

This should send a message to the folks in charge of athletics in the county: Mr. Pete Grigsby Jr., get a local officials' association organized, get folks who are interested in officiating and train them. Do not allow just anyone to put on a striped shirt and officiate basketball games.

BOBCATS COULD POSE SOME CONCERN

Coach Junior Newsome's Betsy Layne Bobcats have stirred up quite a bit of talk in the high school ranks with one of their two foreign exchange students being eligible to play this basketball season.

Betsy Layne will return starters Jason Tackett and Rocky Newsome and should be deep off the bench.

COLLINS RESUMES PLAY FOR PAINTSVILLE

Paintsville's Heather Collins has been given permission to resume practicing and playing basketball for the Paintsville Lady Tigers. The on again—off again case has been in and out of hearings for the past two years.

A court injunction against the KHSAA permits Collins to continue playing until the Kentucky State Board of Education hears the case sometime in December, according FOOTBALL NEWS... SMOKE...

Shelby Valley head football coach Tom Searcy didn't think he was being allowed to run the Wildcat football program the way he needed to and he tendered his resignation this past Friday night.

Searcy will stay on and coach baseball this spring and he hopes to assist the new head football coach next year.

SMOKE...

What is all that smoke coming out of the Prestonsburg football locker room? Word has it that eight players have quit the team and three of them are in the middle of the Blackcats' front line. Hey, it's play-off time!

TWO CHAMPIONS NAMED

This Sunday, a nation full of NASCAR Winston Cup race fans will play witness to the most anticipated race of the season. Atlanta Motor Speedway's NAPA 500 will bring the 1996 31-race schedule to a close, and with it, a new champion will be crowned. The question is, who will that champion be?

Sitting in the driver's seat is "The Iceman" Terry Labonte. It's his championship to lose. For Jeff Gordon and Dale Jarrett, it's fourth and ten with just seconds remaining on the clock, and they can't punt. They must pin their ears back and go for it. All Labonte has to do is make the right defensive call and a second career Winston Cup championship is his. And remember, they don't call him "The Iceman" for nothing.

It's hard to believe that the 1996 season is ending. It seems like only yesterday we watched Dale Jarrett speed to victory in the season-opening Daytona 500. As the sun sets on another Winston Cup season, we can look back at it as one of the most competitive seasons to date.

The NASCAR Busch Series, Grand National Division concluded its season in Sunday's Jiffy Lube Miami 300 at the Metro-Dade Homestead Motorsports Complex near Miami, Florida. Kevin LaPage got his first series win, while Randy LaJoie was crowned series champion.

For LaJoie, it was a dramatic day as his involvement in an early-race accident sent him to the rear of the field, one lap down. LaJoie battled with a valiant effort, regained his lap and finished 10th to claim the championship.

Although this was LaJoie's first series title, it was the second consecutive championship for the BACE Motorsports team, who won last year's title with the efforts of Johnny Benson.

Also crowning a new champion on Sunday was the NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series. The new Las Vegas track was the site for the trucks' final circuits of 1996. Driving the Dale and Teresa Earnhardt owned Chevrolet, Ron Hornaday clinched the title in the series' sophomore season.

A big congratulations goes out to both Randy LaJoie and Ron Hornaday for their respective championships.

Finally, let me advise all you hard-chargers out there that this is the final week of balloting for my column's contest. I have gotten a great response from all you loyal readers out there, with votes in excess of 100 received.

I have put together a nice little package of racing collectibles for one lucky voter to receive. In case you still want to cast your ballot, we are voting for the following categories.

- 1) Driver of the Year
- 2) Surprise Driver of the Year
- 3) Race of the Year
- 4) Biggest NASCAR News Story of the Year

Jot down your picks and send them to: Ben Trout, P.O. Box 504, Belfry, KY 41514. Results and the winner of the NASCAR goodie package will be named in two weeks.

Folks, enjoy the race on Sunday as we'll have to suffer two long months without the fresh smell of Unocal and rubber.

Attention, Deer Hunters!

Hunting Season is open, and we hope your hunts are successful! We mount deer heads as low as $100.00 per mount. Panels are extra.

RANDY LAJOIE BUSCH NATIONAL CHAMPION

The battle for the Busch Driving Championship went down to the last lap of the last race of the season, the Jiffy Lube 300, but at the final checkered flag it was Randy LaJoie over David Green by 29 points.

Kevin LaPage was the winner of the 200-lap race, but the points battle between LaJoie and Green was what attracted the most attention.

Early in the race, LaJoie was hit by another car, and sustained damage to the right-front of his Bace Motorsports Monte Carlo. On a routine pit stop his crew failed to top off his fuel tank, and there was fear he might run out of gas on the last one or two laps. The concern was so great, that crew chief Steve Bird asked Jimmy Spencer to help them draft in order to conserve fuel.

With 20-laps remaining, LaJoie was in fifth spot, 33-points ahead of Green. On the advice of Bird, he slowed in order to conserve fuel. This cost him five positions, but he was able to finish the race under his own power.

"The car was perfect," said LaJoie. "The crew did a perfect job. It was a great day."

This is the second consecutive year, Bill Baumgartner's Bace Motorsports team has won the Grand National Championship. Last year they did it with Johnny Benson behind the wheel.

BREEDLOVE HITS UNOFFICIAL 675 MPH

Ever since Gaston Chasseleoup-Laubat of France set the first speed record at an awesome 39 mph in 1898, speed-racers have been attempting to establish new records.

Craig Breedlove, at age 59, has owned five land speed records. He failed on his try for a sixth, October 28, because wind gusts caused him to lose control of his jet-powered Spirit of America, after reaching an unofficial 675 mph in the Black Rock Desert of Northern Nevada.

In order to establish a new record, the average of two runs, in opposite directions must be conducted within one hour of each other.

The current record of 633.468 mph is held by Richard Noble of England, set it in the same desert in 1983.

Breedlove's first record of 407.447 mph was established in 1963 using a US surplus jet-engine he purchased for $500. Since then, he has set four other records. His latest venture began in 1986 after he was forced to abandon an experimental rocket car due to restrictions placed on rocket engines by the Department of Defense.

A successful real estate agent in southern California, Breedlove has put in nearly $1 million of his own money, plus money from sponsors, in an effort to regain the record from Noble and possibly break the 765 mph sound barrier.

The crash, which resulted from a 15-20 mph crosswind, did not damage the car extensively, but attempts to reclaim the record this year appear slim.

"Obviously, it's not where we wanted to go," said Breedlove after the accident. "We'll be busy this winter. We'll assess the problem. But it was a good run, it just got away from me. The wind was a factor. I think it picked the car up and tilted it. But, we'll be back."

Since 1963, Breedlove has been the first man to travel faster than 400, 500, and 600 mph while establishing five land speed records. If he succeeds in establishing a new land speed record, and even breaks the sound barrier on land, Craig says he would not retire from speed racing, but would move on towards setting a new speed record on the water.

Sports in Kentucky

Key to UK season is blend; Sherman Lewis would be good choice

Ron Mercer is a flyer, Derek Anderson is a shake 'n baker, Allan Edwards is meat 'n potatoes, Jared Prickett, a veteran, is still a question-mark, and Anthony Epps is a dealer.

These will be Rick Pitino's starters as UK preps for its November 15 opener against Clemson. Even though a day later Pitino said Wayne Turner had moved ahead of Epps at point guard, it is in interesting combination. Stir those ingredients with the likes of Jeff Sheppard, Oliver Simmons, Scott Padgett and rookie Jamaal Magloire, and the Kentucky Wildcats might not leave fans much time to lament the passage of McCarty, Pope, Delk and Walker.

Pitino expects Magloire to push Prickett to power forward by Christmas, but what a nice problem to have. A seasoned veteran like Prickett vying with a rookie like Magloire for playing time in the post.

The key to Kentucky's success is the same as it always is with a Pitino team, blend.

Mercer has been adamant he is interested in team goals and not personal numbers or NBA Draft order. Anderson is much the same and his cheerful nature gives the usually no-smile, no-nonsense Kentucky team a human glow.

Epps, touted as one of America's premier point guards, is in his usual position of seeing a slash at his position. As in Epps/Turner or Turner/Epps. Last season, especially at crunch time in tournament play, tells us Marion County native Epps thrives on this latest hint of 'not enough respect' from Da Coach.

All things considered, as UK lines up to defend its national title, the chances look promising and will pivot on a single factor. How the team blends.

Last time a UK team won an NCAA title (1978), its record was 30-2 and four starters moved on to professional basketball. The following season's team finished 19-12.

This season's Wildcats, with four regulars gone, could play as many as 40 games. We predict it will become the first Kentucky team in history to post back-to-back 30-win seasons.

SHERMAN LEWIS INTERESTED

University of Kentucky football doesn't only need a change, it needs a dramatic facelift and Sherman Lewis, Green Bay assistant coach, could be the right man at the right time to move into Bill Curry's soon-to-be vacated office.

The more we think about it, the better Lewis looks. And he has spoken with UK officials about the head football coach vacancy and expressed interest in the job.

A Louisville native, Lewis should be able to recruit effectively in Jefferson County, as well as Indiana and Ohio and into northern population centers. And he could have a dramatic effect on recruiting in the south as well.

At UK, a school that geographically has no business being in the Southeastern Conference anyway, Lewis could be perfect as the league's first African-American head coach.

Hiring Lewis, if it is C.M. Newton's call, would reaffirm the UK AD's courage and vision and be a final jewel in his crown. I expect one day, Newton's name will be affixed to a banner hanging in the rafters of an on-campus arena.

JEFF VAN NOTE & DERRICK RAMSEY

C.M. Newton has said he is consulting many acquaintances in the business as he searches for a new head football coach. The hope here is one of the consultants is Jeff Van Note. And one of the assistant coaches on the new football staff will be Derrick Ramsey.

A UK All-American and Oakland Raiders' tight end, Ramsey is currently on the UK delayed telecast team, but word is he would like to be part of UK's coaching staff.

A New Jersey native, Ramsey could put some recruiting pop in UK's recruiting pitch in the northeast.

READERS (RIGHT) WRITE

What about Louisville football and basketball?

Brent Coffman of Eliza-beth-town wants to see more about University of Louisville football and basketball. "I bet we'll get it after the NCAA report (on UoFL rules violations). By the way, who is the best college quarterback in the state? (And) wouldn't 'Cats fans love to have Ron Cooper?"

Coffman's preseason college Top 5, plus one, are:

1. Wake Forest - Experience, size and ACC. 2. Kansas - Defense and coach. 3. Kentucky - (but) tough to repeat (because of lack of size. 4. North Carolina. 5. Cincinnati - size and strength, (but) coaching is ???.

15. Louisville - Barring injury to DeJuan Wheat, New Year's even could be UK's least favorite holiday ... again.

COMMENT: Re: Best college quarterback in Kentucky? Maybe Willie Taggart at Western Kentucky when he's healthy. And, UK fans 'would love to have Ron Cooper?' For what?

What a K-Men member in Mt. Sterling telephoned with a view on what should follow Bill Curry's dismissal.

"I'm thinking about writing Billy Reed a letter and telling him, 'Now that you've gotten rid of Bill Curry, maybe you can get started on getting rid of Ralph Hacker.'"

Worried about UK basketball team's interior defense.

David Downey, Wash. D.C. (E-Mail): "Not until the Wake (Forest) game (in the NCAAs) did I realize we played such monster defense inside. I doubt we can duplicate that feat and this is where we will be noticeably weaker. Your thoughts?"

COMMENT: Good observation. But UK's interior defense against UMass in the season opener was poor. By tournament time however, it was excellent. Expect the progression to be likewise this season.

RALPH HACKER

The voice of UK football and basketball is a gentleman, but some arrangement should be made to allow Ralph Hacker to work radio play-by-play for Wildcats basketball only.

Hacker is competent doing UK basketball games, but his work on football games is not even marginal. Says here while University of Kentucky administrators are cleaning house in the coaching offices, they should activate their contract right on approval of the broadcast team, and ask for a change before the 1997 season.

Footnote: If Curry and staff had returned in 1997, the guess here is Jeff Van Note would not be invited back as color commentator. Because Van Note has (rightly) been critical of not only the team's performance, but its fundamentals, and also questioned play calls.

In fact, Van Note has been one of barely a handful of high points this UK football season.

JOE JAGGERS

In a high school head coaching career that spans 31 years, North Hardin High's Joe Kelly Jagers has sunned himself at every football plateau there is in the Bluegrass State.

Except one. Jagers masterminded five state championships (two at Trigg County, three at Fort Knox), has coached an impressive array of outstanding players who have gone on to be scholarship student-athletes — most recently Raymond McLaurin at UK and Joey Stockton at Western Kentucky. And, the coach has already been inducted into the KHSAA Hall of Fame.

Now Jagers is closing in on arguably the most lasting honor of all, Kentucky's winningest football coach of all time.

Jagers has 278 coaching victories (at five schools) heading into this Friday's play. The leader is Walter Brugh at Paintsville with 280.

Jagers record is all the more impressive when tabulated out to show in 31 seasons his teams have won almost three of every four games they played, 74.6 percent.

If North Hardin manages to add three wins to its column this season, Jagers will have arrived at another pinnacle of his profession. This one perhaps will be a fitting tribute to his mother Ellouise Jagers of Princeton. She died October 13.

KENTUCKY NAMES...

Sports in Kentucky at the high school level retains much of its allure through the magic and sometimes quaint names of its schools. (Too) many are gone now — Cuba, Hughes-Kirk, Camp Dick Robinson, Flaget, Carr Creek, Pleasant View, Kingdom Come, Inez, and the list goes on and on.

But isn't it wonderful we still have a handful of holdouts: Raceland, Dawson Springs, Fairview, Lone Oak, Deming, Elkhorn City, Silver Grove, Cloverport, Phelps, Lynn Camp, Providence and Red Bird?

If you have a favorite 'name school' for which you have fond memories, I would like to hear about them.

DIS 'N DATA

UK athletics fell in line with other colleges recently, selling its soul to Nike Corp. The school that ranks in the top five nationally in products sold bearing its logo, UK now becomes a tattoo-bearer for Swoosh. Too bad.

From the Clemson game November 15 to Georgia Tech on December 21, the Kentucky Wildcats will play on ESPN seven times.

Ron Mercer is on the nominee list for Naismith College Player of the Year Award, but it will be an upset if anyone other than Tim Duncan of Wake Forest wins.

Let me get this straight: Shaquille O'Neal is rated among the NBA's 50 best players of all time? What a joke.

PARTING SHOT

With NFL, NBA and Major League Baseball free agents demanding and getting mega-money contracts, it was gratifying to see a Kentuckian get in on the action last week. Robert 'Donnie' Mayton, 43, of Calhoun in McLean County had the winning ticket to share half the $56.6 million Powerball.

Mayton's winnings comes to $28.3M. But his hometown newspaper, the McLean County News, put the amount in terms we can understand.

$1,415,000 per year, every year for 20.

$117,917 per month, every month for 20 years.

$27,211 per week, every week for 20 years.

$3,877 per day, 365 days per year for 20.

$162 per hour, 24 hours per day, for 20 years.

And so it goes.

LAKE FORK FISHING BEGINS TO PICK UP THIS MONTH

Richard McCarty has been a bass guide on Lake Fork in east Texas for 12 years, and for each of those years he has specifically looked forward to the autumn and early winter fishing.

That's really not too surprising, since some of his biggest bass ever—including one over 13 pounds—have come this time of year.

"Autumn is a transitional time for Lake Fork," explains McCarty, a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff, as well as a successful professional tournament competitor; "and, although the fish may be relocating, it's really a nice time to be on the water. It isn't as crowded, and it seems like the really big bass become a little less wary."

McCarty plans to spend this autumn concentrating on the grassbeds in the 27,000 acre impoundment. Because the summer was extremely hot, the vegetation has grown considerably in both the creeks as well as in the main lake.

"I suggest anyone coming to Lake Fork in hopes of catching one of the lake's really big bass, fish the main lake vegetation with a heavy jig," advises McCarty. "A lot of anglers will spend their time in one of the tributary creeks, but after a dozen years of guiding here, I'm convinced there are a lot of 'super bass' in Lake Fork that spend their entire lives in the main lake."

"I know autumn is a time when bass on most lakes move into the tributaries to feed on shad, but on Lake Fork the vegetation seems to hold a lot of fish out closer to deeper water."

Lake Fork, impounded in 1980 and fully filled in 1985, has gained a reputation as one of the top trophy bass lakes in the world. The largest bass caught in Lake Fork thus far, an 18-pounder, is one of nearly a dozen bass over 16 pounds the impoundment has produced.

"When I'm fishing the vegetation for really big fish, I'll actually get my boat back in the grass if I can and then work a jig through it," explains the Evinrude pro. "It isn't easy fishing, because you generally have to cover a lot of water between strikes, but the strikes you do get are usually from big bass."

Surprisingly, perhaps, McCarty believes Lake Fork is producing better bass fishing now than ever before.

Shannon Sizemore tossed in 14 points and Angie Green added 12 to lead the Martin Lady Flashes to a 64-26 win over Melvin in the first round of the girls' Right Beaver Classic at Martin Monday night.

Martin placed 12 players in the scoring column en route to their first win of the season. Jennifer Risner added eight points, as did Jaclyn Martin. Sarah Adkins finished with seven points.

Tiffany Williams led all scorers with 17 points for Melvin. Williams had two three-point baskets.

Sizemore slashed the middle for Martin and scored 10 first quarter points to give Martin a 17-7 lead after the first period. Barb Prater, who only scored three points, had a try in the first period. Martin led 25-12 at the half as coach Jimmy Hopkins played his bench in the second quarter.

Green did all her scoring in the third period, pumping in 12 points to lead a 27-5 run by Martin.

Carla Hall scored three points for Melvin with Amanda Bryant, Toni Little, and Amie Tackett scoring two apiece.

released immediately," explains the Alba, TX angler, "and I think this slot limit is what allows the lake to keep producing such big bass. It gives the fish at least two years of protection."

"Today when my clients catch a 21-inch bass, it will probably weigh nearly seven pounds, and for many fishermen that's the largest bass they've ever caught. They're stunned when I tell them the next fish they catch could very well weigh twice as much."

"It happens often on Lake Fork," says McCarty, "especially this time of year."

FOR MID-DAY BASS, FISH CLOSE TO COVER

Middle of the day bass seldom come easy, but for professional tournament anglers whose competition days extend from dawn to late afternoon, fishing at high noon is simply part of this business.

"Ideally, you hope you can catch all your fish early in the morning so you can spend the rest of the day looking instead of casting," laughs former world champion Ken Cook, "but things rarely work out this way."

"Instead, you have to work even harder, not only to catch fish, but also just to keep your concentration. When it's hot and the fishing is slow, that can be tough."

Cook, a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff and trained in fisheries biology, usually spends his mid-day hours fishing shaded water and heavy cover.

"Bass are naturally cover-oriented," says Cook, "so shaded areas become especially important during the mid-day hours when the sun is brightest. Bass feed primarily by ambushing their prey, and one of his best ways to do this is from a darker, shadier spot where they are not as obvious."

"At the same time, as the day gets hotter bass become less active, just like other types of wildlife. To get them to hit a lure, you have to put that lure right where they're hiding, because they normally won't chase it very far."

The Evinrude pro suggests anglers concentrate on fishing lay-down logs, especially along shaded shorelines; vegetation; boat houses; and any other type of cover that provides shade and shadows.

"When I'm fishing these types of places, I'll use some type of weedless lure like a spinnerbait, plastic worm, or a jig," continues Cook, "and really try to make my first presentation the best one."

"Multiple presentations will often be necessary, so this is also a good time to practice erratic retrieves, too. I'll shake my rod tip so my spinnerbait dances and flutters, and I'll usually hop a plastic worm or jig more than normal."

By fishing this way, Cook admits he's trying to get reaction strikes rather than actually trying to imitate a food source the bass would feed on naturally. This is one of the techniques he used to win the world championship on the Chesapeake Bay in 1991.

"There the bass were using isolated clumps of thick grass to hide in," remembers Cook, "so I would cast my spinnerbait beyond the grass, retrieve to it, then let the lure fall right beside it."

"I was trying to make the lure imitate a dying or injured baitfish that presented an easy meal, and fortunately, the bass cooperated."

"Overall," Cook concludes, "fishing during the middle of the day usually means having to make very exacting lure presentation into thick cover. This one reason the technique of flipping works very well, but other lures can certainly be used."

"The action may slow down, but the bass can be enticed into biting."

Angela Howell led Adams with her 14 points and she also hit two three-point baskets.

Adams scored only six points in the first half, trailing 17-6 at the half. Martin led 10-4 after the initial quarter with Shannon Sizemore scoring four of her six points in the first period. Howell had the four Adams' points in the opening stanza with Brittany Hites

The Panthers won the third seed over Lloyd Memorial with a 19-8 win over West Carter. Fleming County and Lloyd Memorial were tied for the third seed, but a loss at Russell and a forfeit loss for Memorial to Fleming County gave the third seed to the Panthers.

PCC College/Career Day

attracts hundreds of students

Approximately 100 professionals and representatives of 30 colleges and universities visited Prestonsburg Community College on Wednesday, October 30, from 8:30 to 11 a.m., for the college's third annual College/Career Day. These visitors explained various career paths and educational opportunities for the hundreds of high school seniors and PCC students who participated in the program.

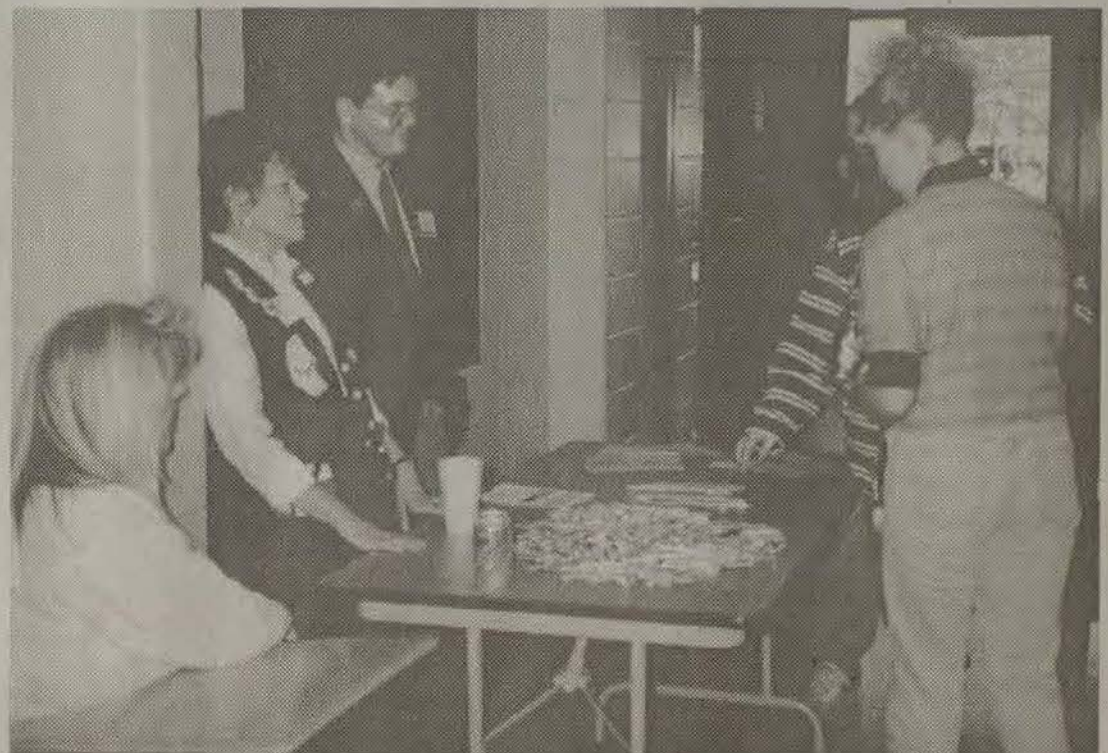

In addition to PCC students, students from eight other area schools were transported to PCC to explore a variety of educational and career opportunities. Morning classes at PCC were suspended to allow all interested students to participate.

Although PCC has hosted a College Day for many years, Career Day was added in the fall of 1994 to stimulate students' interest in selecting a career much earlier and to give them a forum to learn more about the career possibilities, salary potential, and the advantages/disadvantages of various vocational paths. After visiting the career professionals, the students are encouraged to seek college information by talking with the educational representatives.

Coordinators of this program are: Gira R. Hall, director of admissions/registrar; Mazola L. Salmons, assistant to the president for special projects; and Kathy L. Smallwood, professor of economics/business.

Members of the PCC chapter of Phi Beta Lambda, the national post-secondary business education honorary, as well as approximately 50 student volunteers served in various capacities to make this year's program a success.

Schools sending students to PCC for the program this year included: Allen Central High School, Betsy Layne High School, Floyd County Technical High School, Prestonsburg High School, South Floyd High School, the David School, the Piarist School, and Opportunities Unlimited.

Jane Bond and Gary Coleman of the Floyd County Health Department distributed materials to students visiting their table during College/Career Day at Prestonsburg Community College.

My address has changed; I'm now living in the past

Regular readers of this column have no doubt already figured out, I enjoy recalling the days of my childhood.

Not that Muddy Branch was really any better suited than any other Eastern Kentucky community for a kid to grow up in the 1940s, but it is the only place in the world where I was born and raised. So, once I get started on a memory, I seem to be able to recall even minute details of events that happened 45 or 50 years ago almost as if they occurred only this morning.

I can still see the faces of my classmates in the first grade; I can still see the chubby minnows nibbling at the straight pin on which I'd wadded a ball of light bread, as I stretched on my belly and fished through the crossies on the railroad bridge at the mouth of Silk Stocking Row; I can still feel the excitement of actually snagging one and mulling it up and bragging, "Hey, Oh, this 'ns a beauty," and, I can still remember the smell of burning soup beans that permeated the neighborhood nearly every summer afternoon as one, or more, of the local women would forget about her supper as she gossiped over the backyard fence.

The problem is, now I can't even remember what I had for breakfast this morning.

Scientists say this is normal for people my age; that short-term memory is one of the first things to go. But really, it's reaching the point of not being funny anymore. And I know Wilma's sick and tired of having to repeat things over and over.

So, what I think I'll do is just move back into the past and forget the present. Next time she asks what I did with this week's TV Guide, I think I'll say, "I don't know, but did you know that Billy Rowland threw a baseball funny because he had one of his fingers cut off?"

When she asks me why I parked in the Wal-Mart parking lot when I'd intended to go to K-Mart, or vice-versa, I'll just say, "Never mind that, did you know that if you let the air out of a parked coal gon, I'll roll on it's own?"

When she asks me why I bought milk when she sent me after a loaf of bread, I'll just say, "Do you realize that when we'd play basketball in the school house bottom, we'd line off the court with lime?"

And the next time she asks me why I didn't tell her that Minnie called, I'll just say, "The singing teachers used to come to school every Thursday afternoon and tell us Bible stories."

This will, of course, probably further convince her that for the past 33 years she really has been living with a nut, but who knows, she may even benefit from the bits of trivia from my distant past.

I mean, who in the world wouldn't be just thrilled to know that Booten Puckert could try on your warts and they'd go away.

Troubled Times

I don't know how to put this
It is hard to explain
We were sent to Viet Nam as boys
And our lives have never been the same.

Through the blood and guts and tears
Our lives were ever changed
God have mercy on our souls
For now we are ashamed.

We did what we were told
Whether it was good or bad
And now it eats at our hearts
Because it makes us sad.

We will never recover from
The hard times we had
So God have mercy on us
And please don't be mad.

We did the best that we could
For what we thought was our Government stand
Now we stand for nothing
We are the forgotten men.

Dust mites cause allergy problems

Ragweed gets the blame for allergic reactions ranging from asthmatic wheezing to stuffy noses and watery eyes in the fall. But the real culprit might be microscopic pests that inhabit household dust throughout the year.

"Dust and dust mites are the most common allergens in indoor environments," said Mike Potter, urban entomologist with the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. "More people have allergic reactions to dust and dust mites than to mold and pollen. Dust-related allergies are a year-round problem, whereas mold and pollen are seasonal."

Potter said sanitation and hygiene are a key solution to dust mite problems. Another part of the solution can be Acarosan, the only miticide registered for dust mite treatment.

"Dust mites don't sting or bite people or pets," he said. "They feed primarily on skin flakes and particles people and pets shed and inhabit household dust, thus, a big part of the solution is sanitation of places where shed skin and dust particles accumulate, especially where humans and pets spend a lot of time."

"Make the indoor environment as mite unfriendly as possible. Regularly vacuum anything that will trap and hold dust — mattresses, upholstered sofas and chairs, drapes, carpet and even your children's stuffed animals." It is important to use the right type of vacuum cleaner.

"Use one with a HEPA (High Efficiency Particulate Arrestor) filter," Potter said. "A HEPA filter will trap over 99 percent of particles less than one micron in size; otherwise, you shoot dust and mite particles out the back of the vacuum cleaner, allowing them to become airborne and increasing the chance of allergic reactions."

"Dust mites also like humidity. The higher the humidity, the more attractive an indoor environment is to them; so reduce humidity to less than 60 percent."

People can do several other things to reduce dust mite problems, according to Potter. Wash bed linens weekly in hot water to kill mites and mite eggs. Install a high-efficiency filter in the heating-air conditioning system.

"Using the miticide Acarosan kills mites and absorbs and traps allergens so you can remove them from carpet," he said. "It's easy to use; simply sprinkle the moist powder on carpet, brush it in; wait several hours and vacuum it up."

Potter said commercial kits are available to confirm if dust mites are a problem.

He offered further solutions for situations where a family member is extremely sensitive to dust or dust mites.

- Use a low-pile carpet, or better yet, eliminate as much carpet as possible by using hardwood, linoleum or tile floors.

- Encase mattresses and box springs in a plastic cover.
- Don't allow children to sleep with stuffed animals.

• Use a portable air filtration system to further purify air in an area where the person spends a lot of time, like a bedroom.

- Install a HEPA-type filter in the air circulation system.

• Avoid products that trap dust mites and increase humidity, like thick pile carpets, heavy drapes and thick woolen blankets.

Kentucky Craft market enters sixteenth-year

Scheduled for January 24-26, 1997, The Market will be held in the West Hall of the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center in

Scholarships

Four area students win scholarships

Jeremy D. Keyes, a 1996 graduate of Hazard High School, Andrew R. Usery, a 1996 graduate of St. Camillus Academy, Christopher T. Hall, a 1993 graduate of Knott County Central High School, and Darian K. Ratliff, a 1991 graduate of Knott County Central High School were selected to receive $500 scholarships from the Bluegrass Chapter of the International Society of Explosives Engineers.

Keyes, from Hazard, intends to enter the University of Kentucky next fall and study civil engineering. Usery, who resides in London, will be a freshman at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and also plans to major in civil engineering. Hall, from Mousie, is currently attending the University of Kentucky and studying pharmacy. Ratliff, from Leburn, will be a second-year medical student at the University of Kentucky College of Medicine.

These awards were based upon these individuals' outstanding academic records and their connection to the blasting and mining industry. This scholarship program was open to all persons employed in the explosives and blasting industry in Eastern and Central Kentucky and their immediate family. These scholarship awards were presented at the summer quarterly meeting of the Bluegrass Chapter of the Society of Explosives Engineers held at Jenny Wiley State Park on June 20.

The goal of the society is to advance the science of explosive engineering as applied to the mining and construction fields, with an emphasis on improved safety and efficiency.

A place called Andersonville

The life of prisoners was brutal on both sides during the Civil War but Andersonville, Georgia, had to be one of the worst.

An interview with Yankee prisoner Herbert Taylor of New London, New Hampshire, following the war was especially enlightening.

"We found about eighteen thousand prisoners at Andersonville," Taylor stated. "The camp was new and we had the wood that was left inside after the building of the stockade. A small stream ran through the center of the camp, and the water from it was very good, until the time the rebel guards began to encamp on the stream above the camp. After that it was very filthy.

"Our rations were issued raw at first and consisted of a pint of cornmeal, and twelve pounds of meat and bone to a hundred men; sometimes we had rice instead of meat, or peas, which were very buggy. When they were cooked the bugs would rise on the top of the water, and rather than to waste any of it, we ate them all, as the nutriment of the meat was also on the top of the water."

Taylor said there was no shelter when he first arrived at Andersonville.

"The banks of the stream in the camp were used for sinks by the prisoners and a heavy rain would wash all the filth into the stream," Taylor recalled. "And we had to drink the water in it. After the camp began to fill up with prisoners, many of them had to encamp in or near this swamp, for want of room elsewhere.

"When we first arrived there the deaths averaged about ten or fifteen a day; but in the middle of July the number of deaths reached as high as one hundred and thirty-seven in one day. The men grew weaker and weaker day by day, and were very much emaciated. The only large part of their legs was at the knee joint. Their thighs were nothing but the bare bone and skin; no flesh or muscle. They were weakened in mind in nearly the same proportion as they were in body. Men of strong minds and good education would in the course of six months forget the number of their regiment and where they were quartered."

Taylor said there was a dead-line about twenty feet from the inside of the stockade and guards would not allow anyone to come near or touch the boundary.

"They shot those that did," Taylor said. "Many poor fellows, knowing they were going to die, would crawl up to this dead-line on purpose to be shot. Wirz, who commanded the prison, could invent more ways to torment men than any man I ever saw. For instance, at roll-call, if a man was sick and unable to stand up, he would kick him, or threaten to shoot him if he did not stand up. Some of the other prisoners would then hold the man up while the roll was being called to prevent his being shot. For the least offense he would take a man out and put him in the chain gang, and keep him there for a fortnight perhaps, until he was almost dead.

"There were four to twelve men put in each gang. Each man had a 32 or 64-pounder chained to his feet and when there were ten or twelve in the gang, there would be a collar and chain from the neck of one to the neck of another, to keep them together.

"If any prisoners were lucky enough to escape, there were thousands that were started on their trail and were sure to bring them back. They were then put into the chain gang or into stocks for a day or two, generally in the stocks first and then in the chain gang. The stocks were composed of a large wooden frame, with a collar to fit around a man's neck, so that he could not sit down; his arms were then extended in a horizontal position and his feet spread as far apart as they could be without causing him to choke to death. In this position he was kept two hours, and then released for two hours, and again confined through the day every other two hours. This often lasted two days.

"There was one particular instance where a prisoner who had escaped tried to resist the dogs before the keepers came up, and he was torn nearly to pieces. He was then brought back to camp."

Taylor said he was absent, outside the camp getting wood to build barracks, when six of the Union prisoners were hanged by fellow Union prisoners.

"Every day the dead men were piled into wagons like logs—twenty bodies to a wagon," he explained. "Occasionally our rations were hauled on the same wagon in which the dead were carried out. Many of the dead prisoners were dirty and lousy—vermin crawling all over them."

Editor's note: There will be more from Civil War prisoner Herbert Taylor next week in Jason's From the Mountains in the Floyd County Times.

Sunshine Lines

by Beverly Carroll

Senior citizens, Sunshine Lines last week was a continuation of a booklet review titled, "Your Guide to Understanding—An Important Message From Medicare." Please keep in mind, as you read today's article, that there are three types of noncoverage. As a means of review, those Notices of Noncoverage are: Preadmission Notice of Noncoverage; Admission Notice of Noncoverage, and Continued Stay Notice of Noncoverage. If you sign one or more of them without a full understanding of what you are signing, you could be responsible for a significant portion, or perhaps all of your hospital bill.

In an effort to better familiarize you with the changes that are taking place in Medicare, I will quote directly from the booklet and share with you what it says about "Your Right Of Reconsideration." If you are presented one or more notice(s) of noncoverage you have some rights. This does not mean that you will be "off the hook" or that you will not be responsible for paying your bills, but it does mean that you do have the right to have your notice(s) reconsidered. Remember, there are time limits on requesting reconsideration(s). You don't want to miss the deadlines.

This is what the booklet says about "Your Right Of Reconsideration."

"The Notices of Noncoverage discussed in the previous section (of the booklet, "Your Guide to Understanding—An Important Message From Medicare") are not official Medicare determinations. These are hospital-issued notices explaining why they believed Medicare may not pay your claim."

"You have the right to request a reconsideration for any and all decisions regarding Medicare services and claim payments. Health Care Excel's decisions mainly regard inpatient hospital care, ambulatory surgical center care, and care given by some HMOs. The PRO decides whether the care provided to you is medically necessary, provided in the most appropriate setting, and is of good quality. If you disagree with the provider's decision or PRO's decision, you can request a reconsideration. When you file a formal reconsideration with the PRO, they will supply you with detailed information about the reconsideration process.

• Ask your provider to get an official Medicare determination.

• To get an official Medicare determination, the provider must file a claim to Medicare on your behalf.

• You will then receive an Explanation of Benefits from Medicare. This notice is an official Medicare determination.

If you still disagree, you can request a reconsideration by following the instructions on the Explanation of Benefits."

This is what the booklet says about Reconsideration of the PRO Decision:

"If you disagree with a determination made by Health Care Excel, the following procedure will help you request a reconsideration:

• Write to your PRO and request a reconsideration. This must be done within 60 days of receipt of the determination.

• If you received a preadmission denial, you may ask for an expedited reconsideration (this must be done within three days of the initial determination). Telephone or write to your PRO.

• You will receive a letter from your PRO advising you of the reconsideration determination.

• There are different requirements for further appeal, all based upon the issues in question. The reconsideration determination from your PRO will explain your rights to further appeal. In some cases you can eventually appeal to a federal court."

This is what the booklet says about Reconsideration of a Hospital issued Notice of Noncoverage.

"If you requested an immediate review but did not follow this up by requesting an expedited reconsideration, you may still request a reconsideration within sixty (60) calendar days of receipt of the notice.

"You may also request a reconsideration with sixty (60) days after your record has been reviewed by the PRO retrospectively and you have received a letter stating the hospital was correct in issuing the Notice of Noncoverage."

This is what the booklet says about your Rights of Appeal Regarding other Decisions: Intermediaries, Health Maintenance Organizations and Carriers.

"Appeals of decisions on most other services (skilled nursing facility care, home health care, hospice services, and other inpatient hospital matters not handled by Health Care Excel) are handled by Medicare intermediaries. Please refer to the 1996 Medicare handbook issued by the Health Care Financing Administration for details."

Today, senior citizens, I am going to close this segment of the review by quoting what the booklet states in its first sentence under the subheading: "The importance of Requesting a Reconsideration." That sentence states: "Your opinion is vitally important in the reconsideration process."

Keep that thought in mind when next week we explore further into the changes that are taking place in Medicare. In part six of this series, we will discuss the importance of requesting a reconsideration in more detail. Next week's article will also highlight information that was covered in the first five parts of this series. This information is so vitally important to everyone on Medicare that our senior citizens must be informed of these changes before you or a loved one is presented a "notice of noncoverage."

Sunshine Lines is an outreach effort of the Kentucky Benefits Counseling Program for Senior Citizens in the Big Sandy area. It is sponsored by the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of KY Inc., (Legal Services) offices serving Eastern Kentucky.

Cecil and Baldrige move up in Food City

Promotions for John Cecil of Pikeville and Luther Baldrige of Prestonsburg were among the organizational changes in the corporate structure of Food City.

John Cecil, a former district manager of the Food City stores, was promoted to executive vice president of the Tri-Cities division.

Luther Baldrige, formerly store manager of Food City in Prestonsburg, was promoted to district manager of district one in Kentucky.

Cecil is originally from Pearisburg, Virginia. He joined the company in 1980 and serves on the board of directors of the Kentucky Grocers Association. He is also an active member of the Big Sandy Foundation of the Prestonsburg Community College. He and his wife, Jane, are residents of Pikeville.

Baldrige, a native of Prestonsburg, joined the company in 1978. He is a long-time member of the Kiwanis Club and the Prestonsburg Chamber of Commerce. His son, Joshua, and daughter, Luka, are also residents of Prestonsburg.

In announcing changes in the organizational structure at Food City, Steven C. Smith, president and chief operating officer of the parent company, K-VA-T Food Stores, Inc., said, "A peek into the future is exhilarating for those in the rapidly changing retail food industry. This current restructuring of key positions will not only solidify Food City's presence in Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee, it will greatly enhance our entry into the upcoming 21st Century."

Other changes in the lineup include the promotion of Tom Hembree, formerly executive vice president of the Tri-Cities division. Hembree is now senior vice president and will also head marketing. Bob R. Southerland, former vice president of marketing/public affairs, was promoted to vice president of community and governmental affairs.

Don Smith, former director of grocery merchandising, was promoted to the office of vice president and assistant of store planning and development. Danny Helton, former retail promotion coordinator, was moved up to director of grocery merchandising.

"These changes are in place and firmly reflect the company's planned growth formula," Steven C. Smith said. "We have gone through significant transitions in the past, and, fortunately, our decisions have served us well in the growth pattern we have adopted. Careful consideration has been given to these current changes and we believe all parties concerned will enjoy the mutual satisfaction of a positive step in the right direction."

K-VA-T Food Stores is a 65-unit chain of stores. The company is listed in Forbes magazine as number 309 of the nation's privately owned companies.

KY Finance employees volunteer for local charities

As part of a company-wide effort to be a good corporate neighbor, employees at the Kentucky Finance Company, Inc. in Prestonsburg, are rolling up their sleeves and volunteering for the local God's Pantry.

"This is our way of giving something back to the community and providing help to people who are less fortunate and often forgotten during the busy holiday season," Earl D. Hayes, branch manager, said.

Local employees will accept donations of non-perishable food items in their office from November 4 to December 16.

In addition to the more than $3 million the company and its employees donated this year to United Ways across the United States, employees participate in a variety of volunteer opportunities with United Way agencies.

Kentucky Finance Company, Inc., is a subsidiary of Associates First Capital Corporation (NYSE:AFS), which is a leading diversified finance company providing consumer and commercial finance, leasing and related services through 2,036 offices in the United States and internationally. Babies Need Dietary Guidelines, Too (NAPS)—Adults aren't the only ones who should follow dietary guidelines. Researchers at Beech-Nut Nutrition Corporation have developed the following Dietary Guidelines for Babies, based on recommendations from the American Academy of Pediatrics and the U.S. Surgeon General.

1. Breast-feed your baby, or feed iron-fortified formula if you are not exclusively breast feeding.

Breast milk and infant formula are complete and balanced foods that supply all the nutrition your baby needs. Breast milk and infant formula should be the foundation of your baby's diet for the whole first year, even after your baby starts eating solid foods.

2. Do not use water or juice as substitutes for breast milk or infant formula.

Use water to prepare concentrated liquid infant formula or powdered infant formula, according to the mixing instructions on the infant formula can. Breast milk and properly diluted infant formula provide enough water if your baby is not yet eating solid foods.

Ask your baby's health care advisor before giving any extra water. Do not give water if your baby has diarrhea or vomiting.

Once your baby starts eating solid foods, you can use water to prepare infant cereal or to dilute juice for initial feedings.

Fruit juice provides calories, vitamin C and a few essential minerals, but no protein, no fat and not enough of other essential nutrients. Limit juice to one or two servings a day.

3. Start solids between ages 3 to 6 months.

Learning to eat solid foods is a major milestone in your baby's development. Starting too early, before your baby is old enough to be able to swallow pureed foods, can frustrate both you and your baby. Starting too late can make it more difficult to teach your baby to eat solids. Ask your baby's health care provider about the proper starting time for your baby.

4. Introduce your baby gradually to a wide variety of grains (cereals), vegetables, fruits and protein-rich foods such as meats. Read the ingredient list on food labels. Choose foods with no added sugars, salt or modified starch fillers.

Baby foods are designed to help you teach your baby the tastes, textures and colors of the wide variety of foods your family eats. Start with single-ingredient foods and juices to detect allergies. Rice cereal is usually the first solid food fed.

Teach your baby to enjoy the true taste of vegetables, fruits, grains (cereals) and meats by choosing "whole" foods that have no added sugar or other sweeteners and no added salt, and are not thickened with starchy fillers such as modified tapioca starch.

5. Make sure your baby eats enough to grow at a normal rate. Avoid foods low in fat or high in fiber.

Your baby needs to get enough food energy to grow properly. Check the growth chart your baby's health care provider uses to record your baby's length and weight at each visit. This is the best way to be sure that your baby is growing normally.

Babies need fat for normal growth, so avoid "low-fat" foods like skim milk, low-fat milk or low-fat yogurt. Babies have small stomachs, so avoid high fiber foods, like foods rich in bran, that can fill your baby up but do not provide needed calories.

6. Do not add sugar to your baby's food, and choose baby foods with no added sugar or other refined sweeteners. Always read the ingredients list on food labels.

Sugar supplies "empty calories." Empty calories provide none of the protein, vitamins, minerals and other essential nutrients which "whole foods" can provide.

Also, the extra sweetness of added sugars can encourage your baby to develop a taste for sweetened foods and to eat more of them than he or she really needs, and to be less willing to eat "natural" foods like vegetables and fruits that aren't overly sweet. Avoid foods with added sugar—it is an unnecessary additive.

7. Do not add salt to your baby's food, and choose baby foods with no added salt. Again, check the ingredients list on food labels.

Breast milk, infant formula and the other foods you feed your baby contain all the natural sodium your baby needs. There is no need to add more sodium or any salt to your baby's diet. Whether you purchase commercial baby foods or prepare foods for your baby at home yourself, avoid added salt.

If you have any questions about using these guidelines to choose the right foods for your baby, call the Beech-Nut Helpline at 1-800-523-6633, Monday to Friday, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Eastern Time. You also can visit the Beech-Nut Home Page on the Internet's World Wide Web at <http://www.beech-nut.com>.

Here's How To Get Better Gas Mileage

(NAPS)—Who's got money to burn? Six simple steps can help you get the most out of your gasoline dollar, say the pros at the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE), a non-profit group that certifies the competence of automotive technicians.

Among the tips from ASE: Lighten up. Remove unnecessary items from the vehicle. Less weight means better mileage.

Drive sensibly. Don't speed and avoid sudden accelerations and hard braking. Use cruise control on highways. Anticipate traffic patterns ahead and adjust your speed gradually. In addition to better gas mileage, your engine and brakes should last longer.

Maintain the engine.

Follow the service schedules listed in the owner's manual. A well-maintained engine burns less fuel than a neglected one. Replace fluids and filters as recommended; have engine performance problems (rough idling, poor acceleration, etc.) corrected at a repair facility. Given today's high-tech engines, it's wise to have engine performance work done by an auto technician who has earned ASE certification, a national measure of competence.

Check tire pressure. Under inflated or poorly aligned tires waste fuel, since the engine must work harder to move the vehicle. Consult the owner's manual or tire sidewalls for recommended pressure. An alignment may be warranted if the tread is wearing unevenly or if the vehicle "pulls" while being driven on a flat road.

Stop idling around. Shut off the engine while waiting for friends and family. And since today's vehicles are designed to "warm up" fast, forget those ten-minute warm ups in the morning.

Consolidate daily errands and short trips. Some trips may be unnecessary. Also, travel when traffic is light to avoid stop-and-go conditions.

By changing your driving habits and practicing routine car care, you will get better gasoline mileage, help the environment, and extend the life of your vehicle.

Health Matters

A SLIP DOES NOT MEAN YOU HAVE FAILED

Dropping any bad habit (smoking, overeating, etc.) is good for your health. Many good intentions have crumbled because we thought just one time more will not hurt us. Then we feel like a failure and return to the habit that has a negative impact on our health. Setbacks should not condemn you to a return to your old habits. Researchers believe that an analysis of what triggers your relapse can stiffen your resolve.

Sometimes, a slip can make us feel like a failure. But a slip should be viewed as an opportunity from which you can learn and then try to do better the next time.

One very important coping strategy involves anticipating difficulties and forestalling them. Research shows that three primary high risk situations account for 75 percent of all relapses: negative emotional states, interpersonal conflict, and social pressure.

Plan ahead to cope with such situations and to structure your resistance. These tips may help:

- Develop a positive addiction. Rather than rewarding yourself with food, become addicted to a healthful habit such as exercise.

- Stay away from temptations. If you always eat in front of the television, start reading a book.

- Learn to wait out the urge. If you wait long enough the urge will go away.

- Learn stress management techniques such as relaxation to get you through difficult moments which might lead to a relapse.

Breaking a habit is never easy. Motivation and a good plan will help you achieve your goal.

Tip of the Week: Celery is very low in calories because it has a high water content, but not so low that chewing it will burn more calories than it contains.

The Floyd County Times—Wednesday, November 6, 1996

Flora and Fauna

MARIJUANA

Recently, in October, Floyd County observed Red Ribbon Week in an effort to combat drug use. Drugs effect the body in different ways. Many drugs can change the users' perceptions of reality through their effects on the mind.

Marijuana is an illegal drug that contains more than 400 chemicals and, when it's smoked, it produces more than 2,000 chemicals. These chemicals enter the body through the lungs and have immediate effects that last for three to five hours.

The effects vary. Often, users report they experience a feeling of panic and dread. The drug causes psychological and physical effects.

Marijuana, also called grass, pot, and weed, has also been linked to long-term effects, such as bronchitis, coughing, and chest pains. Also, individuals using the drug for long periods of time have reportedly lost interest in social activities and in themselves.

Marijuana, also spelled marihuana, was once used as a medicine. The United States banned its use since the early 1900s but, during the '60s and '70s, its use was prevalent among young adults. As people became more aware in the 1980s of its harmful effects, the use of marijuana declined. In recent years, a move has been underway to make it legal for medicinal use.

In 1980, the Food and Drug Administration approved limited use of marijuana cigarettes to a few cancer and glaucoma patients.

Marijuana is made from the dried leaves and flowering tops of the hemp plant.

MEASURING WORM

Measuring worms, also named inchworms, are actually a moth caterpillars. The movement makes them appear to measure as they crawl along the ground.

They pull the back part of their bodies toward the front and look as if they have humps in their middles as they loop their bodies forward. The measuring worm reaches its six legs forward and then straightens its body. It has only a few leg structures on its body.

In order to escape its enemies, measuring worms can stand upright and motionless so that it resembles a twig.

They form loose cocoons to enter the pupa stage and later appear as medium-sized moths with road wings that have delicate patterns.

FRONT VIEW OF CADILLAC ELDORADO, 1954

The Cadillac: Dreams of a lost era

By the editors of Dorling Kindersley

When I was learning to drive, Cadillacs stood for everything good that America had to offer. On newsreels, in the newspapers, it was ALWAYS a Cadillac that swept the star to the premiere. And usually an Eldorado.

This jet-finned auto was the most written about, psychoanalyzed car of all time. Rock-and-rollers serenaded it, filmmakers demanded it when they wanted an evocation of an opulent, optimistic, carefree era. Marketeers loved it too because the Eldorado—more than any other car—fitted perfectly into their view of our deepest desires. But at 17, I just wanted to sit behind the wheel. Of course, we now live in a leaner, greener, more enlightened world, and nobody wants to be seen behind the wheel of such an ostentatious gas guz-

zler...or do they?—Peter Kindersley

FRONT VIEW OF CADILLAC ELDORADO, 1954: Cars reached a peak of ostentation with the American models of the 1950s, like the Cadillac Eldorado. Such cars often had large amounts of chrome-plated metalwork and extravagantly upholstered interiors; some even had gold-plated "bright-work" (polished metalwork). Although seats originally used horsehair and individually pocketed springs, they are now usually made with foam filling, which can be molded to the required shape. Many luxury cars still use hand-stitched leather hides for their upholstery and matched wood veneers to trim their dashboards and door cappings.

Why doesn't the Sun go out?

The Sun eventually will burn out. But this will not happen for another 10 billion years. The Sun is a huge ball of gas, mostly hydrogen, and it produces heat by converting this hydrogen into helium. On Earth, we produce the same kind of energy in the devastating explosion of a hydrogen bomb. As the Sun uses up its hydrogen, it will begin to swell and turn into a red giant. In old age, it will collapse into a small, heavy form of star called a white dwarf. Eventually this will stop shining and it will become a black dwarf.

What is a red giant?
When certain stars run out of fuel they begin to cool down and start to collapse, causing increased nuclear reactions in the center of the star. The outer gases of the star expand, and the energy from the center starts new nuclear reactions in these gases, too. The star continues to expand and when viewed through a telescope looks redder than other stars. Red giants can have diameters as much as 100 times that of the Sun.

What is a white dwarf?
Many red giants become white dwarfs. As the stars cool further the gas cloud is blown away, leaving a white-hot ember at the core. At this stage, they are called white dwarfs. As they cool down, they many become black dwarfs.

What are sunspots?
Sunspots are dark areas on the Sun's surface created by a buildup of magnetic forces. These areas look darker because they are cooler than the rest of the surface.

What is the black hole?
Black holes form when certain types of stars reach the end of their lives. A star collapses and becomes enormously dense. The gravity of such a star would be so great that if an astronaut was being sucked into it and was trying to send a message by light we would not see it. This is because even light cannot escape!

SHORT

The Hills Behind My House

T O R I E S

by Billy Ray Newsome II

CHAPTER ONE

In which I tell of the time before winter. Now it is November the seventh. We first came to the hills on April the third. During that time my cousin, Dorvin, and I have built a small, but adequate two room cabin. Each room had a clay fireplace about three feet high. The cabin also had a loft, where Dorvin and I slept. Our beds were of leaves and were covered with deerskin blankets. My bed was on the left side of the loft and Dorvin's was on the right.

While we were living in the hills we also managed to burn out the inside of a tree so that we would have some place in which to store things like nuts, berries, fish, etc. Also, behind the cabin a garden was planted. In it we grew potatoes, pumpkins, corn, green beans, cucumbers, watermelons, tomatoes, celery, strawberries, green peppers, cantaloupe, peas, onions, and squash. All of which were delicious.

Chop, chop, chop. The sharp blade of my ax cut through the rough and moldy bark of the ancient tree like it was just a piece of thin cloth. I looked down at my watch that I had received as a gift for my twelfth birthday. The short hand was on the four and the long hand was halfway between the five and the six. That meant that it was almost four-thirty and was time for supper. I put down the heavy ax and walked over to the stream that ran through the clearing in which we built our cabin. The stream was always full of fish and the water tasted like it was drawn from a well in the Garden of Eden. It was that good.

I stooped down beside the stream and drank. The cool water felt good and refreshing as it slid down the hot mass of tissue that I called my throat. Somewhere overhead, in the thick mass of tangled branches, a bird started to sing. It was singing of the sweet, sweet fall and of the coming of old man, Mr. Winter. I stopped drinking from the stream to listen to the angelic song of the bird. The bird's song made me feel as though I was truly at peace with myself and the world surrounding me. It made me feel like there were no guns and no violence and that everyone on Earth lived in harmony with their selves, their fellow man, and Mother Nature.

I was soon called away from this feeling when another feeling came over me. This new feeling was no stranger to me. It was one that I knew well. It was the feeling of hunger. Since it was not a starving hunger I stayed for one last moment to listen to the heavenly song of the bird. Finally, the hunger engulfed all of my senses and flushed all the thoughts of the bird from my mind.

I walked into the cabin and saw Dorvin sitting at the table. In one hand he clutched a book and in the other he held a glass of water. The book's title was "The Hobbit." It was one that I had read many times and had let my cousin borrow it. When I entered the room he looked up from the book.

"How do you like it so far?" I asked as I walked out of the hot sunlight and over to a place that was shaded.

"Oh, it's great," he said without ever looking up. "But it could use some more blood and maybe a few more monsters."

"Don't worry," I said reassuringly. "Once you get into the book you won't be able to put it down." I walked over to the corner to get my bow and my quiver. I picked them both up and walked into the second room that served us as a bathroom.

In the bathroom we had constructed a sort of plumbing system. The way it worked was this; when you had done your business in a sort of toilet that I had made you would pull a lever that moved a piece of wood which covered a pipe. Then the contents of the toilet would slide down the pipe and into a bucket which was outside the cabin. When it needed emptying either Dorvin or I would take it down stream and dispose of it.

Also, in the bathroom we had designed a large wooden tub in which to bathe. Up above the bathtub there was a barrel which was full of water. Whenever we wanted to take a bath, then we would turn a knob which let the water drain from the barrel into the tub. After we had taken a bath we would refill the barrel for next time.

On the left as you enter the bathroom there is a table on which sits a basin. In the basin there is water to wash your hands and face. We designed the basin with a system similar to that of our toilet.

I dipped my hands into the cool water of the basin and washed them. After that was done I went back into the living room, where I saw that Dorvin was still reading the book contentedly. I then informed him of my plan of going hunting and cooking supper.

I walked out the door with my bow in my left hand and my quiver slung over my back. Almost as soon as I stepped out of the clearing I saw a rather large squirrel sitting only a few feet away on a branch of an Oak tree. I quietly pulled an arrow out of the quiver and prepared to shoot. I pulled back the string and let the arrow fly. The arrow struck the squirrel in the right shoulder. It died as soon as it hit the ground.

You know, killing an animal will change you. It gives you a sense of adulthood and maturity. It also makes you feel sorry that you killed the poor defenseless animal. Dorvin and I found this out the hard way.

I got back to the cabin at four forty-five. By the time I had cleaned the animal, skinned the animal with my knife, and cooked it, the time was six o'clock. After we had eaten dinner we did the dishes in a large wooden tub. When they were put away we played three games of chess. Dorvin won two and I won one. Since it was only eight thirty we played cards until eleven. It was then that we both went to bed.

I fell asleep as soon as my head hit the leaves. It was then that I fell into a deep and dreamless sleep from which nothing could awaken me.

The next few weeks we did our chores as usual and three days before Thanksgiving we realized something. It was only three days until Thanksgiving and we still had yet to find a turkey. So, the next morning I went out hunting. That night when I returned to the cabin I was not empty handed. I had two rabbits and a squirrel. But no turkey. The time was creeping closer. Soon it would be only one day until Thanksgiving.

As I lay in bed that night I began to think. I tried to think of every way possible that I could get a turkey. After lots of thought I could still find no answer.

The next day I went out again and it was purely by lunch that I found a turkey. What happened was this; I saw a deer run into some bushes, I quickly pulled out an arrow, and shot it into the bushes. You won't believe what happened next. A turkey stumbled out of the bushes and fell over—dead. The arrow had hit it in the chest.

For dinner on Thanksgiving we ate turkey, mashed potatoes, green beans, squash, some good tender corn, pumpkin pie, and a nice hot cup of clover tea. It was truly and honestly the best meal I had ever eaten. Dorvin thought so too.

The next day I started making Dorvin a Christmas present.

I was making him a new bow and a spear with a rock that I had sharpened tied at the end. I finished the spear in about five days but the bow took a week and a half.

CHAPTER TWO

In which winter arrives and we are taken by surprise by the first snow.

Oh, I must say that Christmas was a very happy occasion. We had a marvelous feast that was fit for a king. We ate corn, turkey, rabbit, deer, squash, green beans, peas, baked potatoes, and a steaming cup of clover tea.

Also, on Christmas we sang carols like Oh, We Three Kings of Orient Are, Away In A Manger, and of course no Christmas would be complete without the traditional singing of Silent Night. At about ten-thirty we exchanged gifts. First I handed Dorvin his spear which I had wrapped in an old blanket of mine. He unwrapped it and told me thanks. He then handed me a pair of snowshoes with pieces of rope at the top with which to tie them to my

Each state has a certain number of electoral college votes. The candidate who receives the most electoral college votes wins the election in November.

Most people think that when they go to the polls on election day, their votes are the ones that actually put a new president in the White House. That's right, sort of.

But what really happens is voters determine for whom their state's electoral college representatives will cast their votes. The United States has what's called an indirect election when it comes to presidential races. France, under the Fifth Republic, uses a similar process for choosing its senators.

The effects of the electoral college on past presidential races is apparent.

With the presence of serious third- and fourth-party challengers, such candidates as Abraham Lincoln in 1860, Woodrow Wilson in 1912, Harry Truman in 1948, and Bill Clinton in 1992, have been elected president by less than a majority of the popular vote through the electoral college. Because of the operation of the electoral college, Rutherford B. Hayes in 1876 and Benjamin Harrison in 1888 were elected president even though they received fewer popular votes than their leading challengers.

The Carter election in 1976 illustrates a possible consequence of the electoral college. Carter's vote plurality over Ford was about 1.7 million, with Carter receiving 50.1 percent of the total popular vote to Ford's 48.0 percent. His electoral-vote margin over Ford was much more substantial: 297 to 240, with one faithless Republican elector voting for Ronald Reagan — an example of the tendency of the electoral college to inflate the margin of the victor. Carter, however, came close to winning a respectable popular-vote margin while losing the electoral college and hence the presidency itself. Had Ford received approximately 12,000 more votes in Ohio and 8,000 more in Hawaii, the electoral votes of those states would have given him the presidency, assuming that the Reagan elector had remained loyal.

In 1880, with Chester Alan Arthur as his running mate, James A. Garfield faced a difficult race against Winfield Scott Hancock, the Democratic nominee.

The narrow victory that Garfield achieved testified to the stalemated condition of politics in the Gilded Age. His majority in the electoral college was 214 to 155, but his plurality in the popular vote was under 7,500. The Republicans won because of superior organization, a new emphasis on the tariff issue, and Democratic errors. Garfield's deft speeches at his home in Mentor, Ohio, foreshadowed the "front porch" campaigns of Benjamin Harrison and William McKinley.

That's one reason why the person running for president must formulate a strategy that will win a majority of the electoral votes. These are supplied by a geographical combination of states, such as Carter's combination of states in the South and Northeast in 1976. Because presidential elections tend to be close, the candidate's strategic choices as to the states in which to make the greatest efforts can be crucial to victory or defeat.

This method of electing our leaders goes back to the early 1800s when the winner of the election became the president and the runner-up was named vice president and political parties meant leadership in the White House was strained after a president from one party and a vice president from another was chosen.

The establishment of the presidency in 1789, by the framers of the Constitution, was an act of prudence. The president had no real counterpart in the British monarchy.

The framers aimed to have a chief executive, and to this end they created a system of a single incumbent who would be elected by a source outside the executive branch — and thus could go to Congress. The president's term of office and reelection indefinitely. (The 22nd Amendment, and the 25th Amendment, have since been affected by the 22nd Amendment, and the 25th Amendment.)

A president of the United States is elected by those of the British king, except that the king's power was limited to that of a ceremonial figurehead.

On Voting

Electoral college actually determines president elective, was created. Chosen by the electoral college, the president was to be a powerful national leader, effective in running the government.

The framers, with their concern for stability, felt that the popular majority would be elected to the federal legislature. At the same time, they must not give over all legislative power to a majority.

Section 1 of Article II of the Constitution provided for the electoral college system. Paragraph 3 was superseded by the 12th Amendment.

The 12th Amendment (1804) provides for the electoral college to elect the president and vice president.

Under the terms of Article II, the electors were to meet on a single ballot with two candidates on their ballot, one to be president and which as vice-president. The candidate with the highest number of electoral votes would be president, and the runner-up would be vice president.

In 1796, the unforeseen fact that the runner-up would be vice president, however, resulted in the election of a president and vice president from the same party.

Electoral votes state by state tain number of electoral votes depending upon the population of the state. After the general election, the winner of the presidential election is chosen by the electoral representatives from his or her state. The number of electoral votes is not officially determined until January after the general election. It takes 270 votes to be elected.

of the United States political creativity. The president is chosen through historical experience. The office was made to be a strong, but responsible, position whose power would not be abused. The president would be elected by the legislature — the electoral college — without being indebted to any group. The strength of the office was originally eligible for a four-year term. The original tenure of office has been changed by the 22nd Amendment, the 22nd Amendment.) The president has powers much like those of a monarch. The office would be the old procedure.

Four years later, party-plugged electors were chosen. The casting of two ballots for the same ticket resulted in a tie between presidential candidate Thomas Jefferson and his own running mate, Aaron Burr. The House of Representatives eventually voted for Jefferson after a protracted deadlock. This event triggered the demand for the 12th Amendment.

According to the amendment, each state has as many presidential electors as the state has members of Congress. Three is the smallest number of electors a state may have, since every state has two senators and at least one member of the House of Representatives. The Constitution gives the legislature of each state the authority to decide how that state's presidential electors are chosen, and every state has provided that the electors shall be directly elected by the voters.

After the electors have been chosen, they meet in their respective state capitals to cast their ballots. The only constitutional restriction is that an elector may vote for only one candidate who is a resident of the same state as that of the elector; this reflects the original assumption that the electors would exercise a choice.

To be elected president or vice-president, a candidate must receive a majority of all the electoral votes cast. If no candidate receives a majority, the House of Representatives chooses the president from among the three candidates receiving the highest number of electoral votes. For this purpose each state has one vote; for the House to make a choice, a majority of states must agree on one candidate. When no candidate for vice-president receives a majority, the Senate chooses the vice-president from the two highest candidates. Each senator has one vote; to win, a candidate must receive a majority of the votes cast in the Senate.

In practice the presidential electors are chosen through the political parties. Each party in each state nominates a slate of presidential electors for that state. This means that the voters choose one party's slate over another's. The result is that one party wins all or none of a state's electoral votes. (The electors are expected to vote for their own party's presidential and vice-presidential candidates, although occasionally an elector has voted for someone else.) The choosing of electors by slates makes it difficult for a third party to challenge the major parties unless it has strength in a number of states.

Proposals have been made to change the method of electing presidents and vice-presidents. One proposal is to replace the electoral college with a direct popular vote. A second is to give each party the same proportion of a state's electoral vote that it receives of the state's popular vote. A third is to elect individual presidential electors in each congressional district and two electors at-large in each state.

The present all-or-none method of electing presidential electors gives an advantage to groups that are concentrated in large cities in states with large numbers of electoral votes, such as California and New York. This is one reason the electoral college has not been modified or abolished.

THE THIRD and FOURTH AMENDMENTS

THE THIRD AMENDMENT

HOUSING OF SOLDIERS—No soldier shall, in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the owner, nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law. This amendment grew directly out of an old complaint against the British, who had forced people to take soldiers into their homes.

THE FOURTH AMENDMENT

Constitutional amendment guaranteeing the right of persons to be secure in their homes and property from unreasonable searches and seizures and consisting of the following elements: (1) the issuance of a warrant upon oath or affirmation; (2) upon probable cause, as determined by a neutral and detached magistrate; and (3) particularly describing the place to be searched and the items or persons to be seized. The Fourth Amendment is most frequently encountered in cases involving the use of illegally seized evidence, or fruits of the poisonous tree, and is applied through the exclusionary rule. It was initially incorporated in the Bill of Rights to counter the abuses from searches conducted without warrants, with general warrants, or with writs of assistance and designed to safeguard the public's legitimate or reasonable expectation of privacy.

Be Drug Free

Smoking is the most preventable cause of death in our society. However, each year, smoking contributes to the deaths of more than 430,000 in the United States.

Cigarette smoke contains more than 4,000 different chemical compounds, including at least 43 proven carcinogens (cancer causing agents). The three major components of cigarette smoke are:

1. Nicotine

- a poison so powerful that it has been outlawed as an insecticide
- causes a rise in blood pressure and heart rate
- is physiologically and psychologically addictive
- narrows the blood vessels, making your heart work harder and lowering the temperature in your toes and fingers

2. Carbon Monoxide

- the compound in car exhaust that kills
- reduces the amount of oxygen the blood can carry
- causes shortness of breath

3. Tar

- sticky brown residue that stains the fingers and teeth
- contains benzopyrene, one of the deadliest carcinogens known

You Can with Beakman and Jax

YOU CAN by Jax Church

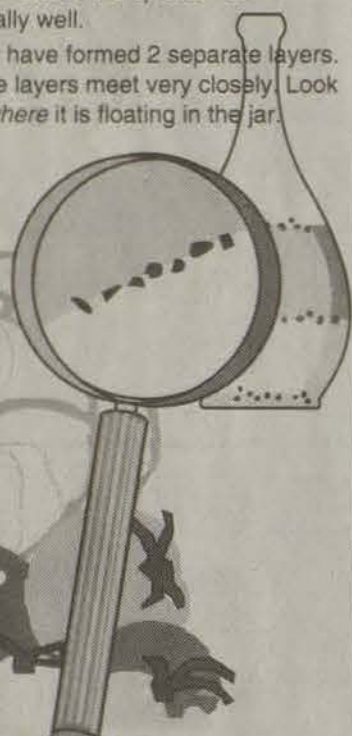

Dear Jax,
What is in helium that makes it float?
Maryama Tagoe
Alexandria, Virginia

Beakman or Jax
P.O. Box 30177
Kansas City, MO 64112

Dear Maryama,
There's nothing in helium that makes it float. There is just helium in helium. Helium is a pure element. That means it's made out of helium alone, and is not a bunch of other stuff mixed together. The reason helium balloons float is that helium weighs less than the air we live in. We say that helium is less dense than the air. You Can look at density with a quick look around your kitchen.

WHAT YOU NEED: Cooking oil - vinegar - black pepper - as many spices as you like or can think of, like basil leaf or rosemary - jar with lid
WHAT TO DO: Mix equal amounts of the oil and vinegar in the jar. Dump in a lot of pepper and pinch in bits of the spices. Put on the lid and shake it up really well. Wait until the oil and vinegar have formed 2 separate layers. Examine the place where the layers meet very closely. Look at what is floating. Look at where it is floating in the jar.

so what:
Some of the spices sank to the bottom of the bottle. Some floated on the top. And some floated right in the middle on top of the vinegar and on the bottom of the oil. That stuff in the middle is worth thinking about here. It is less dense than the vinegar. These chunks weigh less than a same-sized chunk of vinegar would weigh. The vinegar pushes them up to the top. But they are heavier - more dense - than oil, so they cannot float in oil. A helium balloon floats in air. It weighs less than a equal-sized chunk of air and the air pushes the balloon up like a cork floating in water. But that same helium balloon would not float if you held it up in, say, hydrogen gas instead of air. That's because helium is heavier than hydrogen and it would sink.

Card Smarts

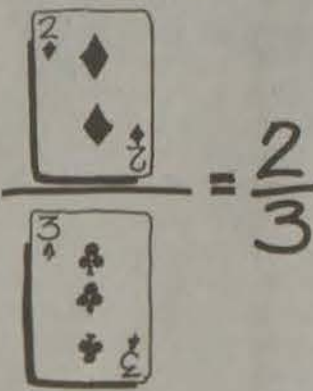

Have your children sharpen their math skills even more.

What to do

- How many numbers can we make? Give each player a piece of paper and a pencil. Using the cards from 1 (ace)-9, deal 4 cards out with the numbers showing. Using all four cards and a choice of any combination of addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division, have each player see how many different answers a person can get in 5 minutes. Players get one point for each answer. For example, suppose the cards drawn are 4, 8, 9, and 2. What numbers can be made?
 $4+9+8+2=23$ $4+9-(8+2)=3$ $(8-4)\times(9-2)=28$ $(9-8)\times(4-2)=2$
- Make the most of it. This game is played with cards from 1 (ace) to 9. Each player alternates drawing one card at a time, trying to create the largest 5-digit number possible. As the cards are drawn, each player puts the cards down in their "place" (ten thousands, thousands, hundreds, tens, ones) with the numbers showing. One round goes until each player has 6 cards. At that point, each player chooses one card to throw out to make the largest 5-digit number possible.
- Fraction fun. This game is played with cards 1 (ace) - 10, and 2 players. Each player receives one-half of the cards. Players turn over 2 cards each at the same time. Each player tries to make the largest fraction by putting the 2 cards together. The players compare their fractions to see whose is larger. For example, if you are given a 3 and a 5, the fraction $3/5$ would be made; if the other person is given a 2 and an 8, the fraction is $2/8$. Which is larger? The larger fraction takes all cards and play continues until one player has all the cards.

What you'll need
Deck of cards
Paper
Pencil

MAKE THE MOST OF IT!

Players can develop strategies for using their cards, and this is where the math skills come in.

Short Story

feet. I said 'thank you' and tried them on. They were a little heavy at first but they fit perfectly.

That night after Dorvin had gone to sleep I quietly climbed down out of the loft and placed the bow that I had made him on the table. Beside it I placed a card that read:

To: Dorvin
From: Santa Claus
After I had completed that task I climbed back up the ladder and after a few minutes fell into a deep, deep sleep from which I did not return until the next morning.

When I awoke the next morning, I found lying on the table, instead of the bow that had been placed there the night before, a pair of socks. I picked them up and felt something inside them. I put my hand down into one of the socks and pulled out a piece of paper. The paper had writing on it. What was written was this:

To: Billy
From: The Easter Bunny

I went outside, where I found Dorvin chopping firewood. It was already so cold that at night the stream would freeze into ice.

"Did you hear any strange noises last night?" I asked Dorvin as I sat down on an old stool.

"No, I didn't. Why?" He asked as he put down the ax and wiped the sweat off his forehead.

"Well, I thought I heard someone open the door to the cabin and come in. It looked like they were hopping. I looked down out of the loft and saw an enormous rabbit. You know what. That rabbit left me a pair of socks."

"Okay. So I did leave you the pair of socks. But it was only fair because you left me a bow and a note that said it was from Santa Claus. Everyone knows Santa isn't real." He said in an exhausted tone.

After we had rested for a while we got up and did our daily chores which included chopping wood, fishing, hunting, gathering nuts and berries, and washing our dirty clothes. We usually started these chores about nine o'clock and didn't get finished until about three-thirty. While we worked, we made up lots of songs to make the work go faster. Here is a song I like to sing when I'm chopping wood:

When I'm chop chop chopping wood

I do everything that a woodsman should.

Chop chop chop goes my ax.

I pile the wood in neat little stacks.

I'd chop all day and chop all night.

But I'd much rather fly a kite.

One cold winter's night, Dorvin and I were playing a game of chess. He was winning. As usual. Suddenly I just happened to look out the window. I saw the most beautiful sight I had ever seen. What I saw was millions of tiny white flakes dancing, (each in it's own special way) down from the sky above.

"Look," I cried in amazement and pointed to the window.

Dorvin looked and cried, "That's the most beautiful thing I've ever seen."

The next morning I awoke to find it still snowing. I put on my moccasins and then my snowshoes. Then I trudged out of our nice warm cabin and into the thick mass of freezing snow. I made my way to the storage tree and cleared all the snow away from the door. Next, I opened the door and took out a bucket that was filled one third of the way with raspberries and the rest of the way with strawberries. I then pulled out half of a squirrel and a whole rabbit.

When that task was done I shut the door and went back to the cabin.

After that was done I warmed my frozen body in front of the fireplace and then trudged back out the door into the frigid snow. I ran over to the chopping block and picked up the ax. I then went to the stream which was frozen solid. I held my ax high in the air and brought it crashing down onto the ice. It shattered the ice and revealed that the water beneath was not frozen. I scooped some of the icy water into an old rusty pail and took it back to the cabin. I still yet, went outside another time. This time I hurried over to the wood pile. I grabbed as much as I could carry and ran back inside the cabin, half frozen.

I took off my moccasins, snowshoes, and coat and put some wood on the fire, which badly needed it. I then started to cook breakfast. The smell of it is what awoke my dear friend, Dorvin. When the marvelous breakfast was fully cooked, the sweet, sweet aroma of cooked squirrel and rabbit filled the cabin. They smelled heavenly.

CHAPTER THREE

In which spring arrives and we celebrate our anniversary.

We were overjoyed when spring first showed her rosy fingers through the endless depths of winter. On April the 3rd we had an anniversary party. We had been living in the hills for one full year and we were still alive.

In honor of our anniversary we had a great feast. All of the food that was eaten that day was not from the storage tree. It was either freshly picked or freshly killed. I do believe that each of us gained at least five pounds. Oh, it was a marvelous feast.

One cool evening, just about sunset, I sat down on the porch of the cabin and started to read. A cool breeze started to blow. Suddenly, a bird started to sing. I would know that bird anywhere. That was the bird that I had heard last Autumn. I listened as he sang another one of his sweet songs. All of this; the soft trickle of water, the cool breeze, the sweet sounds of nature, they all made me glad that I lived in the hills behind my house.

Dorvin and I continued living in the hills until we were eighteen. It was then that we moved to the Catskills in New York. We have established another home there, but we will never forget our cabin that we spent all those wonderful years in.

So, if you are ever back in the hills walking and you come across a cabin and a stream whose water tastes as though it came from the Garden of Eden, then you will know that that is our cabin that lies nestled in the snug and sunny hills behind my house.

Safe Kids are no accident

Each year, more than one million children are treated for burn injuries. Children suffer the greatest number of burns and have the highest percentage of fire and burn deaths. Scald burns are the most common burn injury, followed by contact, chemical and electrical burns. But, burns are preventable.

Anyone responsible for a child's safety—including parents, grandparents, baby-sitters and older siblings—should have a basic understanding of the risk of burns in the home. It doesn't take much to burn through the delicate skin of a young child.

Here are some suggestions to protect your family from burns:

All Areas of Your Home

- Have a working smoke detector on each level of your home and outside each sleeping area. Check the batteries regularly and change them at least once a year. Keep smoke detectors clean - dust and cobwebs can impair the sensitivity. (A working smoke detector cuts in half your chances of dying in a fire.)
- Plan a family fire escape plan and practice it regularly. Agree on a designated meeting place outside your home for all family members to gather after escaping. In case of fire, get out immediately. Don't stop for anything and never go back into a burning home.
- Teach children to stop, drop and roll to smother flames should their clothing catch on fire.
- Keep lighters and matches away from children at all times. Children should be taught that matches and lighters are tools, not toys.
- Throughout your home, place no shock, childproof safety covers in unused electrical outlets. Don't overload electrical outlets or

- extension cords.
- Keep electric and kerosene space heaters out of children's play areas. Never leave a child unattended in a room with a space heater or a fire burning in a fireplace.
- Keep paint, gasoline, solvents, fertilizers, pesticides, pool chemicals and household cleaners stored out of children's reach and, if possible, locked up. Do not store near a heat source or open flame.

In The Kitchen

- Teach children not to touch the stove. Whenever possible, use rear burners and turn pot handles toward the back. Never leave cooking unattended.
- Keep electrical appliances cords away from edges of counters. Disconnect them when not in use. If cords are frayed or broken, replace them or throw them away.
- Never handle containers of hot liquid or cook while holding or carrying a child and never sit a child on the counter while you are cooking.
- Store all detergents, cleaning agents and other chemicals out of the reach of children.
- Do not heat bottles of baby formula or milk in the microwave.
