Newt hops to Inez

Keeping up its reputation as a host for important national politicians, Inez will be the scene of an appearance by US House Speaker Newt Gingrich on Monday, Oct. 12. The speaker, who is stumping for Senate candidate Jim Bunning, will visit the office of the Christian Appalachian Project at 6 p.m. and attend a reception at 6:30 at the home of Jim and Linda Booth.

Happy birthday, Christopher

Banks and federal offices, including post offices, will be closed Monday, Oct. 12, in celebration of Columbus Day. State and local offices will apparently remain open, but it wouldn't hurt to check before you go somewhere. Though Native Americans who met him when he landed take issue with having been "discovered," Christopher Columbus is still widely credited with leading the way for white settlement of the western hemisphere. God or bad, depending on your perspective.

Light up

The Jenny Wiley Pioneer Festival will light up the skies Saturday night with a fireworks display by the Prestonsburg Fire Department.

Firefighters will shoot the fireworks from the hill at Combs Bridge.

The pyrotechnics display can be seen from as far away as Jerry's Restaurant, Prestonsburg Community College, Comfort Suites, Wal-Mart and Giovanni's, city officials say.

The light show begins around 8:30 p.m.

Miss Jenny Wiley

Reigning as Miss Jenny Wiley for this week's Jenny Wiley Festival in Prestonsburg is Kristin Crace, a senior at Paintsville High School, where she is a varsity cheerleader. She is the daughter of Eulas and Vicki Crace of Paintsville. Since the pageant last Sunday, Crace has appeared at events throughout the week in her royal capacity. Today's activities include a gospel program at noon downtown and in the evening at the Mountain Arts Center, bluegrass show from 3 p.m. on in town, Master-Blaster contest, rides and concessions in town, and football at Prestonsburg High School. Tomorrow, don't miss the car show, bike race, turtle trot, Pioneer Prancers, sky diving, Dance Cats, line dancing and Gone Country. Look for Miss Jenny Wiley and other pageant royalty in the festival parade at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Jury verdict is county's largest

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

A Floyd County Jury returned one of the largest monetary verdicts in the history of the Floyd County court system last week, according to Floyd County Attorney Keith Bartley.

The jury awarded $9.5 million to Cheyenne Resources Inc. and PC&H Construction Inc., a subsidiary of Cheyenne, in a verdict against the Elk Horn Coal Corporation. Cheyenne, is owned by Wheelwright native Ross Harris.

In a civil lawsuit filed in Floyd Circuit Court January 1997 by Cheyenne's attorneys, Bartley and Bruce Crider, the company alleged that Elk Horn Coal Corporation had committed fraud in its business dealings with Cheyenne and that Elk Horn Coal had wrongfully terminated a contract.

Cheyenne Resources entered a coal lease agreement with Elk Horn Coal in 1990. Cheyenne mined a coal lease adjacent to the site it had leased until 1995 when Cheyenne moved to the Elk Horn property. Excavation work on the site revealed that multiple mining operations had already been conducted on the property, Bartley said.

Brutality suit costly to ex-chief

By Pam Shingler
Editor

John D. Pratt, a former Wheelwright resident, has worn a metal plate in his head for more than a year, and now the city of Wheelwright and its former police chief are having to pay for it.

Pratt, who now lives at Pine Top in Knott County, sued the City of Wheelwright and ex-Police Chief Tommy Engle last January for violation of civil rights after Pratt accused Engle of brutality that caused permanent injuries to his face.

Last Friday, Pratt accepted a settlement in federal court in Pikeville to end part of the suit.

The city was included in the suit because Pratt alleged the city commissioners knew of the police chief's alleged penchant for violence when they hired him.

Pratt's attorney Ned Pillersdorf of Prestonsburg would not say how much the financial settlement amounted to, but he called it "significant."

The original suit, filed in federal district court in Pikeville, also named Floyd County Deputy Sheriff Tommy Gearheart. However, that portion of the suit will go on to trial. It is on the court docket for next May, Pillersdorf

School board members go back to school

by Willie Elliott
Staff Writer

The Floyd County Board of Education, which has been criticized for its inadequate board policy manual, went back to school Tuesday night to learn how to do the manual correctly.

The five Floyd County board members, Interim Supt. Michael King, and board attorney Mike

Schmitt were joined by representatives Dara Bass and Rhonda Eversole from the Kentucky School Board Association (KSBA) to formulate a plan for producing and maintaining an effective manual for the Floyd County School System.

Bass gave a quick overview of the chapters that make up the manual and mentioned some concerns she had with the Floyd County

State school board hears good news about local system

by Lisa Carnahan
KPA News Bureau

For the first time in a long time, the State School Board heard good news about the Floyd County School System.

The system is reporting a budget surplus of $1.2 million and according to district officials, school personnel are gaining confidence in the central office which enables them to focus on instruction.

"They're not fighting over trying to get their fair share anymore," said state manager of the system, Woodrow Carter.

Carter, who was assigned to the system when it was taken over by the state Department of Education in February, presented an update to the state board Wednesday. He said previous inequitable spending eroded teachers' and principals' confidence in the system. He and other leaders responded by forming a committee that allowed instructors to participate in the budget process.

"When you go into the classrooms now, teachers are more on target with the core content areas and more focused," he said.

Instruction has also been improved by an increase in professional development for teachers and principals.

Carter told the state board that with the resignation this week of a payroll clerk, there had been a "clean sweep" in the district's financial office. He assured them that the replacement for this employee would be a college graduate, as the other new financial office staff have been.

He also noted that the financial officer's position had been filled, after a year's vacancy. Andy Lyon is a former CPA and auditor who's conducted school district audits. The hirings will allow the KDE staff providing financial assistance to the district to transition out over the next two to three months.

Enrollment was discussed, and although 253 fewer students are enrolled in the Floyd system this year than the 1997-98 school year, it wasn't an unexpected loss. Carter

Board member Johnny Ross objected to using someone not hired by the board. For the present, King will be the designated contact person.

Bass said KSBA needed the minutes of board meetings on a timely basis. "We need them monthly, not once every two years," she said. She stressed a point that Schmitt had made in an earlier board meeting: Have board policies checked for legality before passing them.

When Bass finished her presentation, the group had a question and answer session on parts that board members did not understand. Board member Jody Mullins said it was hard to know everything in the manual.

Bass encouraged him to call KSBA and the staff there could find the answer very quickly or check on the legality of a situation, if appropriate.

State

said 200 families had relocated out of Floyd County over the past two years due to the economy.

"We're in a death spiral and will be until we get better job opportunities," he said.

The system's attendance percentage, however, is increasing and if retained for the remainder of the year will result in nearly $500,000 in new state funds.

The most negative news Carter brought to the board is a problem state officials say is not isolated to Floyd County — a serious shortage in bus drivers.

"We're in dire straits," said Carter. "Our average attendance for drivers is 88 percent, so on any given day 9 of 10 drivers show up for work. Where they miss, we have to double-back and kids are not getting home until 5:30 and 6 p.m."

Carter said the district receives numerous complaints from parents because of the delays and many have reverted to transporting their children themselves. He said the shortfall had also caused an increase in salaries due to overtime.

"It's all over the state," said Randy Kimbrough, deputy commissioner for the Education Department. "It requires the same training as long distance truck drivers so what happens is the school district trains them and then they go to work for a trucking company making better money."

She also predicted the problem would worsen with changes set to go into effect for state workers' health insurance. She said many bus drivers who take the job in order to provide health insurance for their families may no longer be able to afford family health care plan premiums.

Carter told the board the weekly "Open Door" meetings he holds on Thursday nights that are used as a "ventilation system" have been successful and continue to draw from six to 12 people. But he's worried community involvement is starting to wane.

"Right after the takeover, there was deep community involvement. But now I'm sensing some lethargy and complacency. The involvement is starting to drop off."

He praised the Floyd County Times for starting a campaign that rewards students for good attendance.

"They have been a champion of change in their own right," said Carter.

State board member Keith Travis agreed. "When you have a newspaper that supportive, it's the best possible motivator for the community," he said.

Carter, a Floyd County native, in turn received praise of his own.

"I thought after about three months of being down there, his enthusiasm would start to burn out," said Kimbrough. "But every time I talk to him, he's still as enthusiastic and every time I see him, he's still as committed to improving the quality of education in Floyd County as the first day I talked to him."

Carter said after the meeting his level of commitment does remain high.

"I'm sick and tired of measuring success in how far we're behind. I truly believe it's a God-given birthright that every child be exposed to a good, quality education," he said.

"Floyd County has been given plenty of resources, both regionally and from the Kentucky Department of Education...and we certainly have enough money," he added. "But we've got to carefully and steadily stamp out the forms of institutional abuse of the educational system."

The three main inhibitors for the system have been, according to Carter:

- bad management;
- lack of focus; and
- inattention to details.

State board member Craig True reminded Carter that when he last reported to the state he described the Floyd County School System as "broke and broken."

"Now it sounds like you're not broke anymore and you're getting things fixed," said True.

Letcher man killed at B&B company mine

A coal miner was killed Monday evening at an open pit mine near Dorton that is owned by a Floyd County company.

Drill operator William Neil Hall, 34, of Deane (Letcher County) was crushed to death by a falling rock while working at Branham and Baker's Petty Fork Mine #1 in Pike County.

According to a report from the Mine Safety and Health Administration, Hall was operating a rock drill when a rock fell from a high wall. The rock plummeted about 20 feet, hit a safety bench and split. A piece of the rock then fell onto the machine, crushing the operator.

He was pronounced dead at the scene by Pike County Coroner Charles Morris.

Hall was an experienced miner, the MSHA report indicates. He had 14 years experience in mining, 11 of those as a drill operator and three months at the Petty Fork operation.

The accident occurred about 7 p.m. It is the eighth mine fatality of the year in Kentucky.

No one from Branham and Baker would comment on the accident since it is still under investigation by MSHA and the Kentucky Department of Mines and Minerals.

Floyd County Solid Waste office is having financial difficulties

by Willie Elliott
Staff Writer

In a special called meeting last Thursday, the board of Floyd County Solid Waste Corp. said it would have difficulty meeting monthly expenses because of a projected $63,000 budget deficit.

The board voted to alert the Floyd County Fiscal Court by sending a resolution requesting that the county's 1998-99 budget be amended to reflect the anticipated budget subsidy from Floyd County.

The county's solid waste agency receives enough money to pay for current expenses, but large prior bills take most of the money that comes to the corporation from franchise fees paid by USA Waste, said Mike Vance, director.

The bond payment that was due in September, Vance said, was $71,220, and the board is paying a monthly payment to Pike County of $1797.10. This debt was incurred when Floyd County Solid Waste shipped garbage to Pike County and failed to pay any bills for several months because of a dispute over fees.

Lon May of Personal Responsibility in a Desirable Environment (PRIDE) suggested the fall clean-up be scheduled to coincide with the PRIDE clean-up which will run November 7-14. He explained that the Job Corps, Otter Creek Correctional Center, and Floyd County jail would likely take part in these activities.

May explained that few private individuals become involved in this clean-up but added that the board would like to see citizen participation.

County Judge-Executive Ben Hale suggested that the garbage truck drivers would help with the clean-up, but dumpsters would not be placed out in the county. Hale said out-of-county residents brought their garbage to Floyd County dumpsters last year, and one dumpster was set afire last year at Wheelwright. Hale recommended that large items be brought to the curb on clean-up day or free dumping would be permitted at Garth.

The board voted to turn over an alleged debt of $47,577.58 by Kenvirons, a civil and environmental engineering and laboratory service in Frankfort, to the county attorney. This contested debt consists entirely of interest and dates back to services rendered in 1992.

During public comments, Hubert Puckett said, "We have worked hard for a recycling program and someone has let us down." He added that he would keep asking US Rep. Hall Rogers to provide money for recycling projects.

Floyd County Solid Waste will move to the old courthouse in the near future, Vance said. The next meeting will be Thursday, October 29, at 5 p.m. on the second floor of the old courthouse in the fiscal court room.

Local girl meets 'the man of her dreams'

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

Twelve-year-old Ashley Adams of Pikeville met the man of dreams on September 18 in Bardstown.

Adams went backstage to see county music star Trace Adkins courtesy of the Dream Factory, a national organization with a local chapter that grants wishes to critically ill children.

Ashley was involved in a car accident when she was 18 months old that impaired her abilities, her mom, Donita Adams, said. When Donita learned about the Dream Factory, she contacted them about something that brings a smile to her daughter's face and a light in her eyes — Trace Adkins.

The Dream Factory arranged a trip for Ashley and her family to meet the country music star during his concert in Bardstown during the Bourbon Festival.

The Dream Factory rented a van from Deskins Motor Company in Pikeville. Holiday Inn gave the organization employee rates, and local businesses sent the youngster off in style.

Employees of Shoe Show pooled their money and donated cowboy boots; Collie Marina donated a hat; and, by the time Ashley and her family were ready to start their trip, she had a complete ensemble.

The Dream Factory also sent the family to the Louisville Zoo after the zoo donated tickets.

Deeds are transferred 18 years later

The Floyd County Fiscal Court has returned the deeds of two local schools to the Floyd County Board of Education.

The county has apparently held the deeds to Garth Area Vocational Education Center and Clark Elementary School more than 16 years longer than it was supposed to.

A recent title search revealed that the county has failed to release the deeds to the schools, even though the school bonds were retired in 1982.

At a September 18 meeting of the fiscal court, several magistrates suggested the court should use the property to bargain for an exchange of land at Auxier and Garrett owned by the school system.

According to the an original agreement between the county and the school system, the Garth and Clark Elementary properties were to be returned to the school system when the bonds were retired.

The deeds to the two school properties were transferred to the school system on September 18, according to records at the courthouse.

Laugh, if thou art wise.

JONES SUPPORTER CRITICIZES PATTON

Editor:
When former Governor Brereton Jones asked for assistance from Governor Patton to help out state and public school employees who are being victimized by the present health insurance problem, Governor Jones was speaking for many people who do not have a voice in government. This group of people includes many small-wage earners. For these individuals, affordable health insurance is very important.

It is easy for Patton to pass off Jones' comments as purely political; however, Jones does make a valid point. Something has to be done about our existing health care insurance. In talking with state and school employees, I know that each year the problem gets worse—fewer options, higher premiums, fewer benefits, and less take-home pay. It's discouraging; it destroys morale; and it's just not fair.

As a person who has worked closely with Brereton Jones, I know he is a man of honor and integrity. Brereton Jones really cares about the people of Kentucky. As a Democrat, I am more concerned about the effects on the Democratic Party from the indictment of Governor Patton's Chief of Staff and his labor liaison than I am about Governor Jones pointing out something which is a real problem to many people in Kentucky. In addition, Patton has, from day one, meddled in Democratic primaries—an act that is very divisive, and shows that Patton is the one who really doesn't care about the Democratic Party. You would never see Jones dividing the Democratic Party.

While helping out a low-wage earner who has a family to support by paying more of his or her insurance premium may not be as politically savvy as passing out pork projects in different parts of the state, and while there may be fewer ribbons for Governor Patton to cut, Governor Patton, by addressing this problem, could demonstrate that he cares about people—which is something Jones has consistently done.

USE SURPLUS FOR HEALTH CARE, JONES URGES

Editor's note: This letter was sent to the Governor's office and faxed to The Times.

Dear Governor:

In order for any business or any government to be successful, they must have competent, motivated employees. Without such employees the products of the operation will consistently be inferior.

Your administration is apparently in the process of making a giant mistake by forcing state employees, school teachers and retirees to accept reduced health benefits and at the same time charge them more.

As you know, your administration started with a surplus of over $300 million—the greatest in Kentucky history. You helped develop this surplus, so there is enough credit for everybody. The national economy has been strong, so the surpluses have increased. Now is the time to reward our school teachers, our state employees and our retirees. It is not time to punish them.

It is also time to set up a state trust fund for health care. If we would put 25 percent of any surplus in this fund, in every year that we have a surplus, and never spend the principal, we would be amazed at how fast such a fund would grow. Each year we would get closer to providing quality, affordable health care for all Kentuckians. We could then stop the cost shifting and reduce the spiraling increase in health insurance rates for all of us.

We can learn a great lesson from the Shriners. They have used such a concept for many years, and now provide free medical care for crippled children around the world. We, in Kentucky, must use the same common sense as the Shriners. If we continue to spend our surplus and not save it for health care or education, we will be like the farmer who ate all of his seed corn and didn't have any to plant the next spring.

Brereton C. Jones

URGES MCCONNELL SUPPORT OF WELLSTONE AMENDMENT

Editor:

I recently heard Senator McConnell explain why he doesn't support the Wellstone Amendment to the Higher Education Act. He says that the proposal, which allows welfare recipients to count college or vocational training as work, comes at the expense of those in basic education. That doesn't ring true.

I agree with the senator when he stresses the importance of remedial education and GED courses for welfare recipients who need them. I went on welfare after only a year and a half of high school and needed classes myself. But he is wrong in his claim that opening up opportunities for low-income college students is discrimination against students in basic education. A lack of means for educational advancement by any group of people or at any level of our educational system is a clear indication that opportunities need to be expanded.

Senator McConnell would best serve the state by supporting the Wellstone Amendment and by drafting legislation in the future that builds on the value of education Kentuckians believe in. The federal welfare law now holds single mothers on welfare one hundred percent responsible for the financial support of their children. We should encourage their ability to fulfill this obligation by allowing access to the most effective means to do so—post-secondary education!

Call Senator Mitch McConnell and urge him to join other Kentucky Congressmen in support of the Wellstone Amendment. This provision will ensure that Kentucky's children will benefit from the second chance promised to everyone by welfare reform.

Here we are again in the middle of the Jenny Wiley Festival during which we pay homage not just to Jenny, but also to all of our ancestors who probably never had as much fun living their lives as we have recreating them.

For a few days some of us dress like our predecessors and carry out some of the activities we imagine they might have, and the rest of us watch, wishing we had the nerve to join the fray.

The talk is invariably of the old days when life was simpler and people were happier and more content.

I'm not convinced that was true.

Look at our Jenny, to whom thousands of us claim kin. Sure, she's had books, plays and songs written about her. But would you really want to have walked in her shoes. That's quite a hike from southwest Virginia, over brier-covered hills, across creeks and rivers, all the while mourning her lost family.

We can admire her hardiness in managing to stay alive amid such turmoil, but we can also question the sanity of her and her husband in coming back to this area to settle just a few years after her abduction.

When you think about it, all of us whose ancestors came into these hills in those days probably carry a crazy gene. You'd almost have to be somewhat wild and reckless to want to settle in the wilderness under threat of death or maiming by the Cherokees and Shawnees, not to mention bears, rattlesnakes, panthers, rock slides, and other wild and reckless people.

Of course, it's picturesque to think about cooking over an open fire, sleeping on a feather or, more likely, a shuck bed, washing your clothes in a stream, killing and skinning your own food, riding a horse or mule or, better yet, shank's mare to go anywhere, reading — if you could get your hands on a book — by candlelight. Day in, day out, not just a few days at Cave Run.

OK, so washing your clothes in the stream might be simpler and cheaper than operating a washing machine, but it takes a whole lot longer and it's a whole lot harder.

I also cannot imagine that people were any happier or more content. Sure, they didn't have the same complex concerns to worry about that we have, like nuclear war, neo-Nazism and Bill Clinton's sex life.

But I'm not sure it was more relaxing to know that you may be attacked by renegades at any time, that a stray ember could destroy your cabin and everything you owned within a few minutes in the dead of winter, or that you could very well go for months without seeing another soul besides your family. (Now, that last item is really scary.)

There are likely no more than a handful of us these days who could live like Jenny Wiley and her ilk. Still, you know, it's fun to "play like," to pretend we're the heroes of the old survival stories. It's fun to imagine ourselves the hardy souls from whom we descended.

To pay them homage is a good thing to do.

Go, Jenny!

said. The case stems from an incident that occurred on May 10, 1997, when Pratt was a passenger in a car that was pursued for a traffic violation and rammed by Engle's vehicle. Pratt apparently sustained his first head injury when the cars collided. The sheriff's department and Kentucky State Police had responded to Engle's call for aid when the driver of the car, Pratt's brother Aaron, did not stop.

Pratt claimed, in his suit, that Engle and Gearheart, after arresting him for alcohol intoxication and handcuffing him, "slammed him to the pavement" and then hit him with a flashlight, causing him "massive and permanent cranial injury."

In deposition, Engle claimed he thought one of the brothers was pointing a gun at him while he was pursuing the vehicle in which the plaintiff was riding. Guns were apparently found in the car, but the Pratts denied pointing them at Engle.

The former policeman denied hitting John Pratt.

A video camera in the state police cruiser, parked behind the other cars, recorded part of the incident, including Pratt's being thrown to the ground. The next 35 seconds of the KSP tape, however, were erased and a football game taped over them.

Pratt said he went to McDowell Appalachian Regional Hospital in the afternoon of May 11, after he was released from jail following the incident of the previous night.

He was then sent to the University of Kentucky Medical Center where he was diagnosed as having sustained a fractured cheekbone and a fracture of the eye socket.

Dr. Robert Marciani, professor and chief of the division of oral and maxillofacial surgery at UK, testified he installed two metal plates in Pratt's face to correct damage to the head.

Pratt, a disabled truck driver, said in testimony in May that he still suffers from severe headaches and that it "feels like there's something in my eye all the time."

Citing another federal civil rights violation suit that Engle had lost, as well as accusations of sexual harassment, the suit claimed the city of Wheelwright was "deliberately indifferent" to Engle's "well-known violent nature."

The previous suit involved Gary Thornsberry who was awarded $9,000 by a federal jury in March 1989. Thornsberry accused Engle of using excessive force against him while Engle was a police officer for the city of Martin.

In a sworn statement, Wheelwright City Commissioner Luther Johnson testified that the commissioners were aware of the incident in Martin and of alleged sexual harassment complaints against Engle when he worked at Otter Creek Correctional Center.

"You're living in an area that ain't a mile long and you've got 500 gossiping people, how could you keep from knowing?" Johnson is quoted as saying.

Pillersdorf said he regrets that "we were only seeking money damages. If two private citizens had assaulted someone and it was caught on videotape, they would be going to the penitentiary."

Russell Davis of Pikeville, the attorney for Engle and the city, could not be reached for comment yesterday. City Commissioner David Boyd was the only municipal official who could be reached. He stated he was unaware that a settlement had been reached.

Verdict

Cheyenne officials discovered that the seam had five million tons less coal than Elk Horn Coal Company's information provided, he added.

"The information (they gave) was erroneous," the attorney said. "Elk Horn had maps ... They said it was a mistake. (The jury) said it was fraud ... We discovered they had maps in their possession for years. They just didn't tell us."

Bartley said the company discovered the various mining operations through the state Department of Mines and Minerals. Mining work on the site included both deep and surface mining, he added.

When Cheyenne officials began asking Elk Horn for the maps and for information about previous mining operations, that company terminated Cheyenne's lease agreement, according to Bartley.

Cheyenne Resources had already invested about $4 million in the site in preparing for the mining, in addition to the $1,428,000 it had paid in royalties — and those amounts didn't include the expected revenue that was suddenly lost, their attorney said.

"The lost profit was (estimated at) $16 million if all the coal reserves had been as they told us it was," Bartley said. "Elk Horn's experts said it was zero. It looks like the jury split the difference."

A bifurcated (two-part) trial was conducted.

"The first phase was to determine liability ... The second determined the amount of damages," the attorney explained.

The first part of the trial lasted nine days. When it was finished, the jury ruled that defendants Elk Horn Coal had committed fraud and breach of contract and that Cheyenne and its subsidiary were entitled to recover damages.

The jury then took a week off and the last phase of the trial took three days, after which the jury awarded $4.5 million to Cheyenne on the fraud ruling and $5 million for loss of profits on the breached contract decision.

Elk Horn Coal plans to file an appeal, Bartley said. The appeal process takes about two years. In the meantime, a 12 percent interest will be assessed on the $9.5 million. That means Cheyenne will receive an additional $2.4 million if the appeals court supports the judgment.

"That's a big incentive for Elk Horn to think about going ahead and settling," Bartley said.

He added that his client is "tickled with the verdict," but that he was unhappy with the way Elkhorn had treated him and his partner.

"After the jury made their verdict last week, their attorney said, 'it was a mistake and you shouldn't punish us for it,'" Bartley said. "And, that basically, me and my clients were trying to hit the lottery. Hopefully, this will show you can't treat people this way and get away with it."

Richard Fitzpatrick, an attorney for Elk Horn, was out of town Thursday and was not available for comment on the verdict.

Police briefs

Kentucky State Police investigated two robberies Tuesday in Johnson County. Nicky Dean Ferguson, 19, of Staffordsville was arrested for allegedly robbing the Happy Mart at Staffordsville at gun and knife point at about 5 a.m. Other arrests were pending in connection with the incident. Later the same day, two males took an undetermined amount of cash from the Gas-And-Go Store #41 at Hager Hill. The getaway vehicle, weapons and money were recovered by Paintsville police officers, but no arrests had been made yesterday.

Pike County resident Rhonda Thacker, a senior at Shelby Valley High School, represented students from the Appalachian Media Institute (AMI) at the White House. AMI is a project of Appalshop. Students filmed documentaries about various aspects of Appalachian life.

Pike County teenager attends ceremony at the White House

The Appalachian Media Institute (AMI), an Appalshop project that teaches media production to Eastern Kentucky high school students, has received a prestigious national award from the President's Committee on the Arts and Humanities.

AMI's youth and adult representatives attended an October 7 ceremony at the White House, where they received a "Coming Up Taller Award" from First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. The award honors Appalshop and nine other arts and humanities programs across the United States that provide opportunities for young people in underserved communities.

Appalshop is a media arts and cultural center dedicated to exploring Appalachian culture and social concerns. Aside from its youth training program, it includes Roadside Theater, a community radio station (WMMT-88.7 FM), documentary television production, and a variety of performing arts activities such as its annual festival, Seedtime on the Cumberland.

AMI, which Appalshop founded in 1988, trains mountain high school students in leadership development, media literacy, and media production, and then helps them teach these skills to other students. Participants examine stereotypes about the Appalachian region and learn to create their own media productions that reflect their communities' culture and social concerns.

"The goal of the program is to help students get excited about their education, to open their eyes to their surrounding communities, and find ways to get involved," said Dee Davis, executive producer of Appalshop Film and Video.

"Before I participated in AMI, I didn't appreciate my Appalachian heritage," said Rhonda Thacker, a senior at Pike County's Shelby Valley High School who represented AMI students at the White House ceremony. "As a culture we are really unique, and I never would have realized that. I've been forever changed by AMI."

The experience of making a documentary about domestic violence led Ms. Thacker to volunteer with local prevention programs. "My level of community participation has about tripled since AMI," she said. "I'm doing things with domestic violence programs to promote awareness of this problem, especially during the month of October, which is domestic violence awareness month."

Seth Ferguson, who attended AMI while a student at Johnson Central High School, and who is now a trainer for the program, also attended the White House ceremony. Ferguson is a sophomore at the University of Kentucky.

Other AMI student projects have included documentations such as "A Dying Tradition," which explores mountain rituals and traditions associated with death, "Fat Man," an animated mountain folk tale, and "Skate at Your Own Risk," a profile of a student who is at-risk of dropping out of school. Some of the students' programs have aired statewide on Kentucky educational television and have won national student media competitions.

Appalshop created the Appalachian Media Institute to help fight Eastern Kentucky's high drop-out rates. Since 1988, 106 students have attended the summer AMI program and have passed on their new skills to approximately 30 students each during the academic year. More than 90 percent of the AMI summer interns who are now college age have continued their education after high school.

Many AMI alumni are interested in media, education, and service to the community. One is David Sturgill, who attended the first AMI summer session and went on to be a trainer for the program and eventually its director. Sturgill is currently the school-to-career coordinator for the Greater Lexington Chamber of Commerce.

Sturgill said the program helped him set a career path and see beyond media stereotypes of people who appeared to be different from the mainstream.

"Before I went through AMI, I relied heavily on what media told you about people who are different from you," he said. "Now I realize that much of what was played up about different groups of people was based on stereotypes. At the same time I realized that a lot of what I had learned about my own culture was based on media stereotypes."

Poet's Corner

Watermelon Madness

I ran to the door and turned the latch,
I was headed for my melon patch,
Between two corn rows there did lay
A swiftly growing "Charleston Grey."
I don't want to yarn—don't mean to brag.
But that melon's bigger than an old nail keg.
I admired its beauty through the morning fog,
Looks like a picture in a seed catalogue.

God gives us things to make life sweet
A home-grown watermelon's hard to beat.
I'll pat my foot with a big wide grin
As watermelon juice runs down my chin.
You can steal my car, you can have my home
But leave my "home grown" melons alone.
"It won't be long," I told my wife,
"Till you can get out the salt and the kitchen knife."
It's enough to make your lips smack-smack.
I can just hear that watermelon crack.

If you can't eat watermelon fresh from the vine,
You're a really sick man and short on time.
Some dream about fortune, some dream about fame,
Some dream about riding around the world on a train.
If I could dream about watermelons sweet and ripe,
I'd like to go to bed and dream all night.

I'll get up in the morning when the rooster starts crowing
To see if that watermelon in the gardens' still growing.
A few more days if nothing goes wrong,
I'll harvest a watermelon three feet long.
I hope I don't drop it in my mad rush
On the blacktop—talk about mush!

I hope I have good luck bringing it in,
So I can eat watermelon once again.
There's just one thing that would make me scream
If I cut that watermelon and it'd be green!
"Watermelon! Watermelon! Watermelon!"

The Gospel According to Me

As you've probably noticed by now if you're a regular reader of this column, I'm endlessly fascinated by how the spiritual principles we learn in church can be applied across the spectrum of life.

It reminds me that God's truths are just that — truths.

One principle I've learned about is the law of perseverance. Perseverance means to keep on keeping on, for as long as it takes to reach your goal.

Jesus, talking about our eternal destinies, made it clear that being faithful toward God and His church wouldn't always be easy.

But God doesn't reward fair-weather followers — here or in the hereafter. He just plain doesn't like quitters.

"It is he who endures to the end who will be saved," Jesus warned.

If we think for a moment, we can see that perseverance not only determines success in spiritual matters, but in any kind of endeavor. It's one of God's cosmic laws.

For instance, when I first began trying to learn to write, I took a long series of English courses at University of Kentucky, over a period of several years.

Among the more demoralizing discoveries I made was that in every class, there seemed to be a half-dozen students who could write way better than I could.

I'd hand in my essays or short stories, only to have instructors return them bloody with red ink, as if someone had popped an artery across the pages.

Meanwhile, the teachers would read my more talented classmates' papers aloud to us and brag on a technical writing department at IBM and then at a newspaper.

Finally, almost 10 years after I'd begun, I got a full-time job writing for the Lexington Herald-Leader. I stayed there nine years as a reporter and columnist.

By the time I left, I'd also published two books. Writing books always had been my real dream.

Today I'm working on a third book, for which I've already landed a publishing contract. And I write this column, of course, which appears in several papers.

I'm neither rich nor famous. I'm not the world's greatest scribe, by a long shot.

But I've won awards. I've been on national TV and radio. I've been the subject of other journalists' stories in newspapers and magazines from Connecticut to California.

In the beginning, I didn't think I possessed much talent for writing. I still don't know whether I've got any. I'm not even sure anymore what talent is.

But you know what? Of all those other students I used to know, who seemed so much more gifted than I was, only one other guy has made it as a professional writer.

The others all dropped out along the way. They drifted off into other jobs. Maybe they lost faith in themselves. I don't know exactly.

I just know they didn't endure, and I'm still here, clack-clack-clacking on my keyboard.

Unfortunately, there are many other arenas in which I haven't remained faithful.

My son and I once started taking karate classes. I liked karate. We kept at plugging along for more than a year and earned several belts.

But gradually we allowed ourselves to get lazy about practicing. We started dreading to get up early on Saturdays and go to classes. Finally we quit.

Today, I'm a flabby slug. I've forgotten all my martial arts moves. But several of the students with whom my son and I started taking lessons now are black belts.

Look at your own life and you'll see the same law at work. Perseverance is 90 percent of any venture. If you quit, you lose. Endure and you'll succeed.

Perseverance leads to victory

Jenny Wiley Pioneer Festival brings the sounds of bluegrass downtown

The Jenny Wiley Pioneer Festival's Bluegrass Bonanza begins at 3 p.m. today (Friday) in the municipal parking lot. Two of the acts headlining the event include Richard Bennett and Eastbound.

Richard Bennett is climbing the bluegrass charts, according to bluegrass music fans.

Originally from Johnson City, Tennessee, Bennett grew up surrounded by some of the best that bluegrass could offer. Like many of his contemporaries, he was influenced by the music of Flatt & Scruggs, Bill Monroe and the Osborne Brothers, along with the work of guitarists like Clarence White, Norman Blake and Tony Rice. His amazing playing as a youngster (age 11), landed him a position on the Martha White Caravan as guitarist for the Rose Brothers. This association with the Caravan kept him close to some of the great names in the business, most notably Lester Flatt and the Osborne Brothers, and proved to be an important link in his musical education.

By the time Richard was 15 or 16, he was playing rhythm guitar for former Flatt & Scruggs fiddler Benny Simms, working college square dances and Blue Ridge parkway resort areas, and establishing himself as a top-flight guitarist.

He continued developing his craft in a number of different venues during the '70s and '80s until landing a full-time, seasonal spot playing with a bluegrass band at the Dollywood theme park. It was while there that he came to the attention of bluegrass giant J.D. Crowe, who offered Richard a job as guitarist and lead singer in his band, the New South. Bennett accepted, and stayed with J.D. for nearly six years, figuring prominently as both a songwriter and instrumentalist on the Grammy nominated Flashback CD, which held the No. 1 position on the bluegrass charts for most of 1995. After this exposure, a solo effort was the natural next step, and Richard responded with his highly-regarded Walking Down the Line CD.

Eastbound is another name to contend with in the Bluegrass field. Based in Lexington, Eastbound was formed in 1986 as a bluegrass/gospel band. The band evolved over the past years to playing a full schedule of churches, festivals and conventions throughout the east and south. While performing primarily gospel, they also can include instrumentals at their secular appearances.

Band members include Dean Osborne, Ronnie Merrill, Rob Morgan, Diedra Morgan, and Kelly Caldwell-Baker. Osborne plays banjo, sings lead and tenor. Merrill is lead and rhythm guitarist and sings lead and baritone.

Rob Morgan is the mandolinist and sings lead and baritone.

Diedra Morgan sings lead, harmony and plays rhythm guitar.

Kelly Caldwell-Baker plays bass and sings lead and harmony.

Their albums include "I've Got A Mansion Waiting For Me," and "When Time Is Gone."

The group has been featured on many shows, including opening for such legends as The Osborne Brothers, J.D. Crowe, Doyle Lawson, The Lewis Family, and Bill Monroe.

Eastbound is the host band at the Red Mule Bluegrass Festival and the Osborne Brothers Hometown Festival in Hyden.

Car buffs delight at RWB Car Show

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

If you like to take a look back in history and you love the old-time cars, then the Star Bank's 11th Annual Red, White and Blue Car Show is the place for you.

You want to be sure you mark Saturday, October 17, on your calendar for that is when cars from all over the region will be at the Martin branch parking lot.

Cars will be vying for Best of Show and the $500 savings bond that goes to the car owner. Whether you are a '57 Chevy fan (and who isn't?) or you like the old-timers of the '30s, '40s, '50s and '60s, then Martin is where you want to be.

Many prizes and awards will be given away during the course of the day as a car owner could receive a case of motor oil, one of three front-end alignments, or a savings bond.

Savings bonds of $50 and $100 will be given away.

Also, T-shirts and sweatshirts of the show will be worn by some fortunate car owner. The first 100 cars to register will receive a commemorative dash plaque.

Out-of-town judges will be used and car committee members cars will be for display only and not judged.

Categories to be judged include Best of Show, best Ford, best GM, best paint, best graphic, best display, best mini truck, best Mopar, best interior, best engine, best street rod, and best pro street.

Trophies will be presented in each class at the show. A special class for cars 1980 and up will be held with the top five in that category named to the Top 50.

The best paint, best interior and best engine will receive a $100 savings bond.

The Kentucky Open will provide entertainment from 8:30 a.m. until 2 p.m. Registration for the show is from 8:30 to 11 a.m.

Those who would be interested in displaying pictures of war heroes in the bank's lobby may take them to the bank any time. Be sure your name is on the back of each photo. The display is in honor of war veterans. Also, an article will be displayed with each picture if you have the article.

T-shirts and sweatshirts are on sale now at the Martin branch as well as the Prestonsburg branch bank. Adult size sweatshirts are $15 for large through extra large. T-shirts are $10 each for sizes large through extra large. Long sleeve T-shirts are going for $12 and 2X-3X sweatshirts sell for $18.

For more information on the car show or the lobby display, contact Tina Mills at 285-6332.

A LOOK AT SPORTS

Football play-off picture clear as a muddy pond

Four weeks remain in the high school football season and fans are trying to sort out their team's chances of making the big show come week one in November when the second season begins.

To be included in the elite teams who will continue their seasons after most of the high schools have put away their gear for another year is an honor that any school would love to have.

In Floyd County, one team, Prestonsburg, is certain to be among that number while South Floyd is fighting for its life and with its collective back to the wall.

Coach Donnie Daniels' team has two district games remaining, including tonight's game with the Hazard Bulldogs. The Raiders will close out their regular season with the Elkhorn Cougars.

Now, the KHSAA has tried to make it easy for a lot of teams to make the playoffs by taking the four top teams in each district. It is the fourth spot the Raiders are battling for.

Others who are hoping to finish fourth are Elkhorn City, Fleming-Neon, and Jenkins. Jenkins is destined to be the last place team, having not won a game yet. That leaves South Floyd, Fleming-Neon and Elkhorn City battling for the final spot.

The top three teams appear to be Pikeville, Phelps and Hazard. South Floyd, which made the playoffs last year and hosted the first-ever play-off game at Brackett Field, would love a repeat this year but some games have gotten away from them, like at Fleming-Neon when they lost in the final minute.

Let's take a look at the picture.

• Elkhorn City (2-4, 1-1) has four remaining district games with Fleming-Neon, Phelps, Hazard and South Floyd. The Cougars will be hard pressed to win all four of those games and will not carry the favorite's role in any. So we are projecting the Cougars to finish 2-4 in the district.

• Fleming-Neon (4-2, 1-1) has district games

COASTAL/CAROLINA

Ashley Rosen, standout for the Belfry Pirates, has announced that she will sign an NCAA National letter-of-intent with Coastal Carolina University during the early signing period for basketball in November.

Rosen, a 5-10 forward, averaged just over six points per game last season and pulled in seven rebounds per contest.

Rosen has qualified academically with a 3.9 GPA and a composite score of 21 on the ACT. She will become the eighth player under coach Cindy Halbert to receive a full scholarship in five years and the first Belfry player to receive a Division-I scholarship since Sherita Joplin did in 1991 with Morehead State University.

Several local schools, including Alice Lloyd College, Pikeville College and Transylvania University expressed inter-with Elkhorn City, Pikeville, Phelps, and Jenkins. The Pirates should come home with wins over both Elkhorn City and Jenkins. I don't see them beating either Pikeville or Phelps. I look for the Pirates to finish 3-3 on the year and that should be good enough to make the playoffs.

A Look at Sports

• South Floyd (2-4, 1-3) has games remaining with Hazard (tonight) and Elkhorn City. If the Raiders win one of these two games, it's still not going to be good enough for the fourth spot because they would only be 2-4 in the district. But if the Raiders were to win both the Hazard and Elkhorn City games, then a 3-3 record would get them there, right? Well, they would be tied with a 3-3 Fleming-Neon, and don't forget, it was to the Pirates the Raiders lost in the final minute. So a tie with Neon will not work.

So what must happen in order for the Raiders to find some help? Elkhorn City or Jenkins must upset the Pirates. And South Floyd must win against Hazard and Elkhorn City. The latter is imperative.

BLACKCATS ON THEIR WAY

In the Class AA, District 2 race, the top three teams looks like Breathitt County (4-2, 3-0), Prestonsburg (4-2, 3-1), Cawood (5-1, 2-1).

• Breathitt County has three remaining games and all are district contests. The Bobcats will face a tough Cawood team tonight, meet Whitesburg a week later before finishing the season against Betsy Layne. If Breathitt County were to falter against Cawood (and I don't expect them to) then we could very well have a three-way tie for the top spot come Saturday morning. I project the Bobcats will win their final three district games and finish 6-0 in the district.

• Prestonsburg has the worst behind them and should coast the rest of the way in district games. Coach John Derossett's ballclub will face Leslie County and Shelby Valley in their final two district games. The Blackcats, who lost to Breathitt County last week, will finish 5-1 in the district and good for a second place finish and still a home field advantage in the playoffs.

• Cawood knows it needs a win over Breathitt County but the team also knows that it is not dependent on whether it goes to the playoffs or not. The Trojans will be there. They will fall to Breathitt County but win over Shelby Valley and Betsy Layne to take a 4-2 district record.

• Shelby Valley has been a surprise team this season and the Wildcats have three tough games facing them in the district. They will be battling with Whitesburg for the fourth spot and in front of them will be Prestonsburg and Cawood. The Wildcats will meet Whitesburg tonight in a must-win game. I like Shelby Valley in a win over the Yellowjackets and finishing 3-3 in the district.

• Whitesburg has to win over Shelby Valley and Breathitt and I don't think they can. They will finish the season against Betsy Layne and Leslie County which will give them 2-4 mark in the district.

Barring any upsets, and there probably will be some, that's the way I see the next four weeks.

I am pulling for South Floyd to make the playoffs. I hope that someone gives them some help, but they need to pull out a big win tonight against Hazard. We'll wait and see.

FOOTBALL NOTES

• Prestonsburg's John Ortega continues to be one of the top 10 scorers in the state with an average of 17.2 points per game.

• Pikeville's Jeremiah Akers leads the state as the top receiver with 36 catches for 651 yards.

• Billy Peck of Phelps is the state's leading scorer with 27.6 points per game. He is third in rushing yardage with 909 on the season.

Until Wednesday, good sports everyone and be good sports! Take the kids to Sunday School and church this Sunday.

WEEK 7

High school football preview

County teams remain home in week seven

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

be able to return to carrying the football after having to play more on defense than offense.

The Bobcats will host a team that also has struggled this season in Leslie County.

I look for the Bobcats to explode in their running game with the likes of Chad Bryant, Josh Kidd and Anthony Tackett. But we all know that the front line has to open the holes and that has been a problem this season for the Cats.

But I like Betsy Layne in this one and the Cats by three points.

HAZARD AT SOUTH FLOYD

Looking for a big, big break will be the South Floyd Raiders as they host an always-tough Hazard Bulldog team. While the Bulldogs do not have the bite they had last year, still they are going to be tough to handle.

South Floyd is fighting for its playoff life and this game is a must, must win. Even with a victory over Hazard, South Floyd will need some help from other teams in knocking down Fleming-Neon and possibly Elkhorn City. Hazard has to play Elkhorn City and the Phelps Hornets.

After Hazard, Elkhorn City remains the only district game on the Raiders schedule. They have non-district matchups with Allen Central and Beth Haven before meeting the Cougars.

South Floyd is 2-4 on the season but 1-3 in district play. The lone win in the district came against Jenkins last Friday night. The best the Raiders could do in the district would be 3-3 and that makes tonight's game a must.

This is going to be a tough one and too tough to call.

BETHLEHEM AT ALLEN CENTRAL

Looking for a winning season are the Allen Central Rebels as they are just enjoying the season — a season where they were not supposed to do much.

But the Rebels are 3-3 on the year and have only three games remaining including tonight's match up with Louisville Bethlehem.

After a long layoff, over a week, the Rebels fell to Elkhorn City last Thursday night but return home for homecoming.

The one phase of their game that got them to three wins — defense — failed to slow the Cougars last week. The Rebels will have to get back in the trenches and look to people like Ryan Owens, Eric Combs and others on the defensive side of the football.

Mark Dunfee had a good game at Elkhorn but his second half effort did not match what he did in the first half.

Quarterback Jesse Hall could not find the dependable hands of Gary Hunter and Brian Jones he had found in previous games.

But the loss could cause the Rebels to refocus and realize that a winning season is still a big, big possibility but it has to restart with tonight's game.

South Floyd and Casey County remain on the Rebs schedule after tonight's matchup.

MORGAN COUNTY AT PRESTONSBURG

The Prestonsburg Blackcats lost a big one at Breathitt County last Friday night, and it may not be a good time for Morgan County to come to town with the Cats licking wounds over a game that, no doubt, decided the District 2 championship.

Prestonsburg could not grind out any yardage against the tough Breathitt County front line, but that won't be the story against a rebuilding Morgan County team. The Cougars, once part of District 2, are not competing for a district title this year.

When you think of the Morgan County program, you have to remember its great teams and the rivalry that existed between the two schools.

You wonder if Coach John Derossett will have his Cats going to the air more in future games after the dismal rushing game against Breathitt County.

Grant Castle, John Ortega, and Hank Mullins will get the yardage tonight against the Cougars. Prestonsburg by a big margin in this one.

LESLIE COUNTY AT BETSY LAYNE

The Betsy Layne Bobcats is the team looking for a new start. The Bobcats had an open date last Friday night, and coach Ted George welcomed the break so some of his troops could heal up from injuries.

Coach George and the Cats should welcome back Nick West, who has to run a play this season. Bradley Brooks should Twenty-six karts took part in go-kart racing at the new Buffalo Creek Kartway track last Sunday, despite the poor weather conditions.

Six classes ran at the local track with the following results: Josh Stumbo captured the Briggs Jr. purple plate in his No. 28 kart. Justin Cool placed second.

In the stock medium, Benji Huff took the checker flag for first place. Steve Caudill place second and Damon Runyon third.

Daniel Jarrell went from the green flag to the checker in winning the stock lite class. Zack Hilton drove his No. 28 kart to a second place finish.

Dustin Addis took the checker in winning the Briggs Jr. Second place went to Daniel Jarrell with Brian Chaffins placing third.

Bill Justice of Prestonsburg placed first in the road hog division with Anthony Huff, in Kart No. 1, taking second place.

Racing continues this Sunday at the Kartway with the gates opening at 11 a.m. and racing scheduled for 2 p.m. Drivers will receive a 100 percent pay-back in all classes.

MUSIC MAY MISS OPENING OF SEASON

Ramanda Music, much-heralded eighth grade standout last year at Allen Central, may miss the first part of the basketball season it was learned Thursday. Coach Cindy Halbert, Belfry, reported that Music cracked a bone in her right hand in a non-basketball related incident. Music is expected to play later in the season. Music enrolled at Belfry High School at the start of the school year.

MERCER PLANS TO INK WITH PIKEVILLE

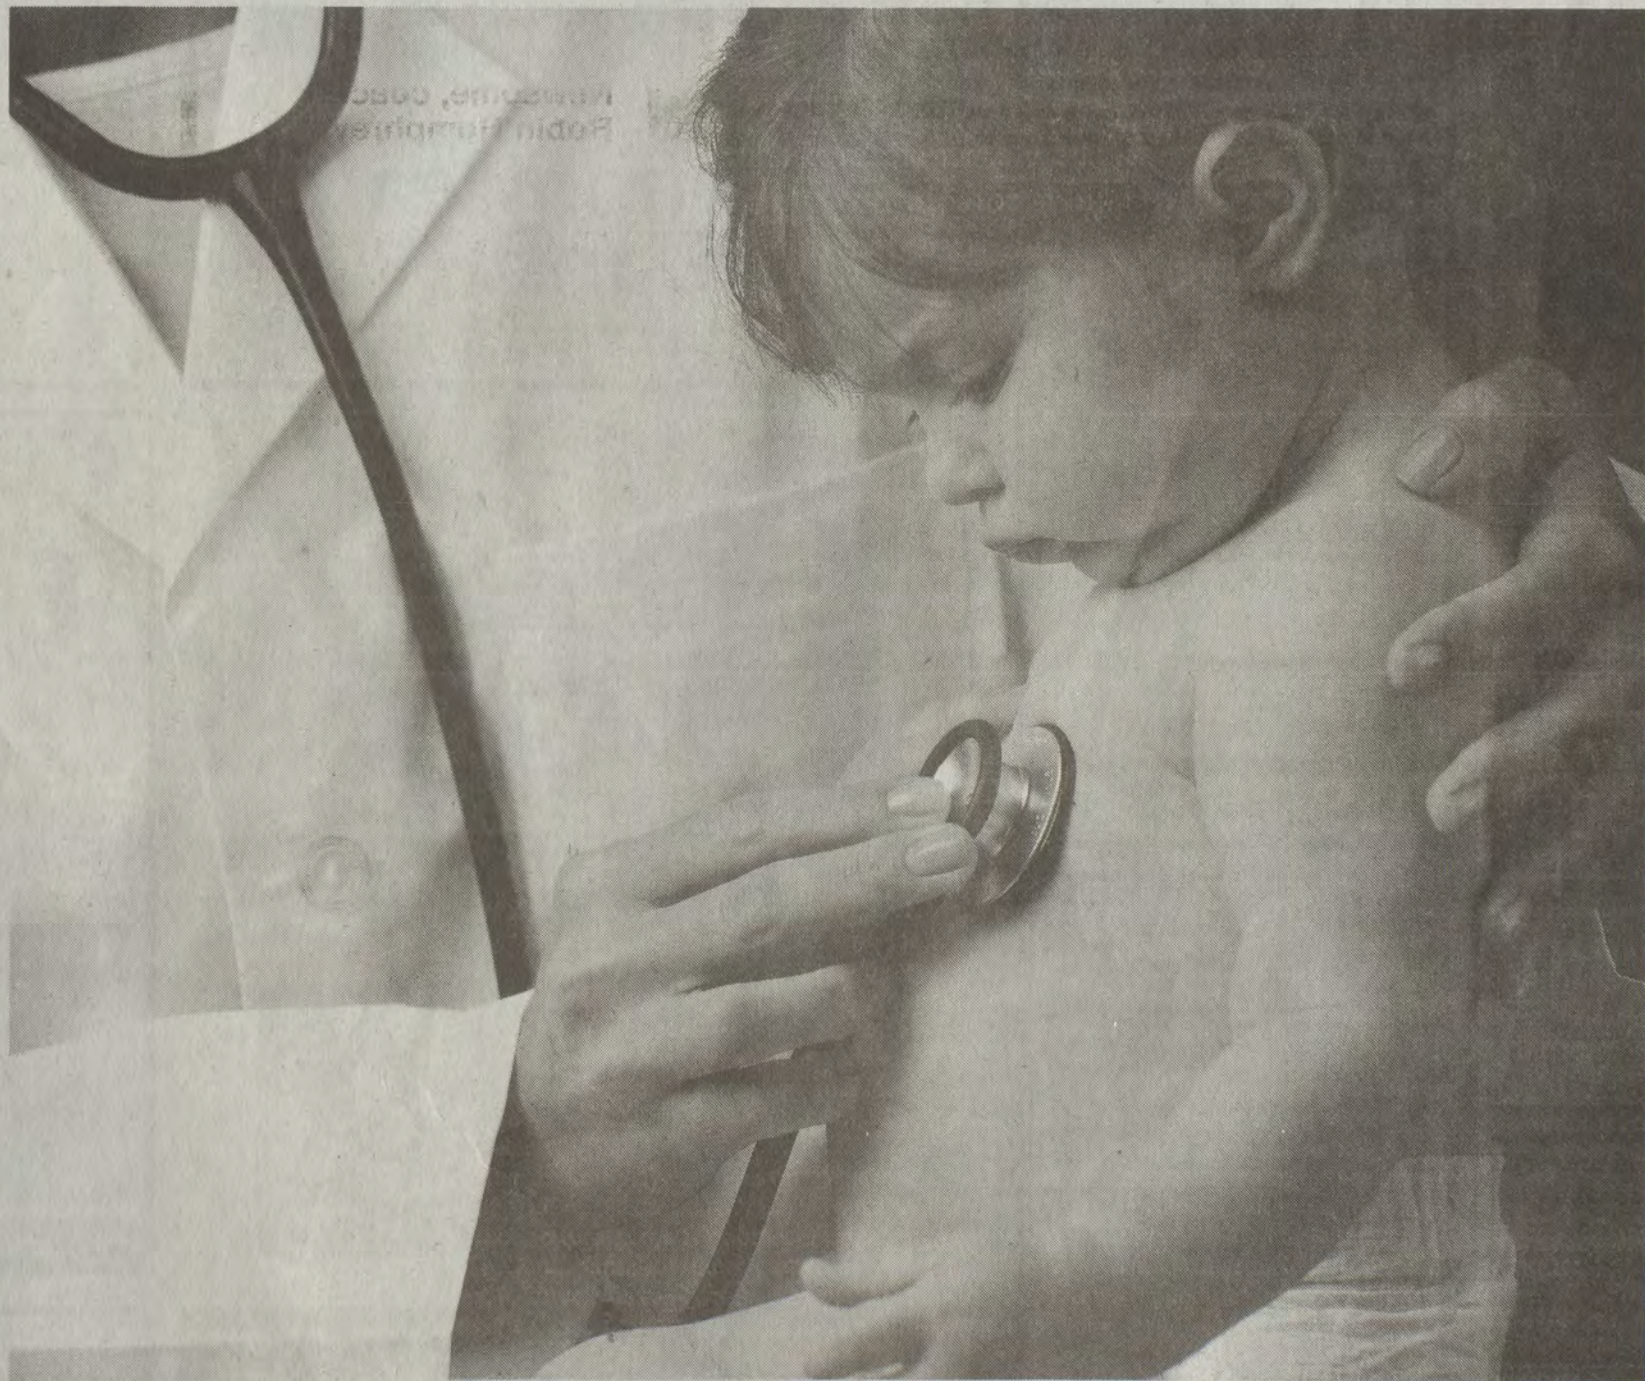

Continuing a family tradition, Phelps High School standout Courtney Mercer has announced that she will sign with Pikeville College in continuing her basketball career.

Mercer was expected to sign a letter-of-intent at noon Wednesday. Her brother, Matt, is a junior on the men's basketball team at Pikeville College. Her father, James, was an assistant coach with the men's basketball program last season.

"I've always wanted to play college basketball so this is a dream come true," said Mercer. "I've been around Pikeville College a lot the past few years, and I really feel at home there."

Mercer, a 4.0 student, averaged 15 points, seven rebounds, four steals and three assists per game last season for the Lady Hornets, who finished with a fine 17-8 record. She has already scored over 1,000 points in her career.

We will see you along courtside! Stay tuned.

out gave South Floyd a ray of hope as Kayla McGuire scored four straight points to make it a 13-6 game. But Hamilton collected points 14 and 15 for the game match.

In the second match, Betsy Layne got good play from Akers, Hamilton and Tabitha Cox in winning the second game 15-10.

Hamilton gave Betsy Layne a 3-0 lead on the first serve of the second match.

But McKinney scored seven points on seven serves to send South Floyd in front 7-3. Betsy Layne tied the game at 7-7 on Akers' serves as the lead bounced back and forth.

South Floyd led 8-7 but Betsy Layne went in front 9-8 before a serve by Morgan tied the game again at 9-9. South Floyd's final lead came at 10-9 on a Cindy Hanover serve. Betsy Layne scored the next six points to win the match by five.

With the season winding down it has been a successful first effort for the four high school teams. The county tournament will be held at Allen Central (could change) next week with all four teams in competition.

An all-county team will be named after the tournament

Bryant, Tackett team to lead South Floyd over Jenkins 56-18

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Coach Donnie Daniels and his South Floyd Raiders got back on the winning trail last Friday night with the Jenkins Cavalier's providing the homecoming game opposition.

B.J. Bryant and Matt Tackett took control early by scoring all seven touchdowns for the Raiders. Darren Newsome must have been the designated extra point person for South Floyd, scoring four two-point conversions.

"Darren played a great game for us," said Coach Daniels. "He has been running the football real good. He played a good game."

Bryant scored four touchdowns for South Floyd. The sophomore running back also had 169 yards rushing on 17 carries. Tackett wasn't far behind, running into the end zone for three touchdowns. He rushed for 40 yards on six tries. Newsome had 34 yards rushing on seven attempts.

"The last three or four games,

Matt has been playing real good for us," said the South Floyd coach. "What can you say about B.J.? He is just having an outstanding year."

The reputation of Bryant had made its way to Jenkins as the scouting report must have read, Watch Bryant. But while the Cavs were looking for Bryant, they forgot about Tackett.

"They put double coverage on B.J.," said Coach Daniels, "and Matt just took the football and scored two touchdowns in the first half."

Jenkins had taken the first lead at 6-0, much to the surprise of the South Floyd coach and fans.

"They took the opening drive and went about 70 yards for the touchdown," said Daniels. "After a discussion at the sidelines, we went back out and played well."

Before the first quarter had ended, the Tackett-led attack showed South Floyd leading 28-6 and the rout was on.

"They really had good coverage on B.J. and Kyle (Tackett)," said Daniels. "We threw the ball well but we only threw it 13 times and that is down for us."

Senior quarterback, Charlie Williams, completed eight of 13 passes for 112 yards, tossing for two touchdowns and one conversion. Tackett had three catches for 50 yards. Newsome hauled in three passes for 33 yards and Kyle Tackett had 26 yards on two catches.

South Floyd added two touchdowns in the second period and went to the locker room with a commanding 40-6 half-time lead. The two teams played even the second half.

Andy Moore and Matt Tackett each had five tackles to lead the South Floyd defense. Ryan Hall had a fumble recovery and Brandon Kohler had four fist hits and two assists. Josh Ward had four tackles and a blocked punt attempt. Jeremy Tackett and Jeremy Hall had five tackles.

South Floyd will host Hazard in a very important district game tonight at Brackett Field.

WINSTON CUP SERIES

Mark Martin won for the seventh time this season, dominating a crash-marred UAW-GM Quality 500 at Charlotte Motor Speedway and shaving 25 points off Jeff Gordon's Winston Cup point lead. Gordon finished fifth and kept a 174-point edge with five races remaining.

his flickering hopes for the championship with a victory in the All Pro Bumper-to-Bumper 300 at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Unfortunately for McLaughlin, the two drivers who finished just behind him — Matt Kenseth and Dale Earnhardt Jr. — are the ones who are ahead of him in the standings.

Earnhardt leads Kenseth by 97 points and McLaughlin by 253.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

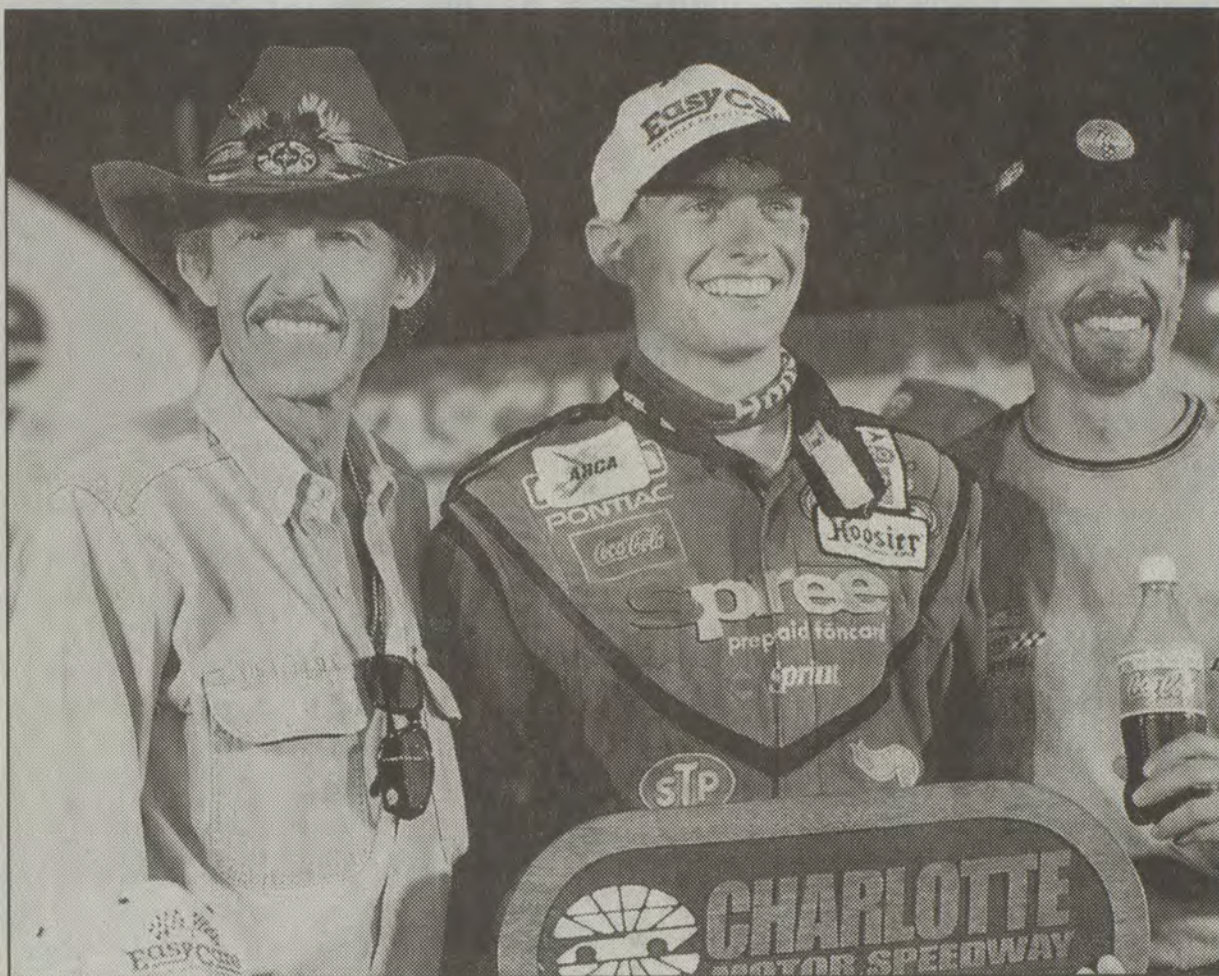

Ernie Irvan vs. Dick Trickle

Trickle, not in contention, slipped up the banking in turn two on lap 272, inadvertently putting Irvan, running sixth at the time, into the wall. Said Irvan, "It's pretty senseless that a lapped car tries to run with the leaders."
"I really hate it," replied Trickle, "but for some reason my car wouldn't slow down, it wouldn't turn, and I got into Ernie and started the whole wreck."

NASCAR This Week writer Monte Dutton gives his opinion: "Irvan was in contention late in the race, and for him, getting in a wreck that wasn't his fault was a bitter pill to swallow."

Adam Petty

By Monte Dutton

NASCAR This Week
Adam Petty is well on his way to becoming the fourth generation of a family to make it big in stock car racing.

Adam's great-grandfather Lee Petty won 55 races and three championships. His grandfather Richard Petty won a record 200 races and seven titles, and his father, Kyle Petty, remains active on the Winston Cup Series with eight career victories.

Like Kyle, Adam won the first Automobile Racing Club of America race in which he ever competed. Last week he won the EasyCare 100 on Pole Night at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

In 1979, Kyle Petty won the ARCA 200 at Daytona. This year Adam has been competing regularly in the Midwest on the American Speed Association circuit, where he had one victory and two poles.

HOMETOWN: High Point, N.C.

AGE: 18
MARITAL STATUS: Single
DID YOUR FATHER REMINISCE WITH YOU ABOUT HIS FIRST ARCA VICTORY? "He told me when he won his, he was out of control. Was he 18? Same age as me. He was an 18-year-old kid, and they turned him loose going 200 miles an hour. What else is an 18-year-old kid gonna do? He's gonna mat it (push the accelerator to the floor) and go."

WHAT IS IT LIKE BEING RICHARD PETTY'S GRANDSON AND KYLE

PETTY'S SON? "My dad and I are really close. My grandfather Richard came from the old school, the school of hard knocks, where you let a kid learn on his own. I think my dad saw that and wanted to do things a little different, which I'm fortunate enough it was me. I can't say enough about my dad. He's had hard things in his racing life, but he's always been there for me."

WHAT DID RICHARD TELL YOU WHEN YOU WON AT CHARLOTTE? "He gave me a hug in victory lane. That was the first time I've ever got a hug from him. He said I did a good job, but we're gonna talk about how much I scared him over there on the back straight."

TRIVIA

- Who had the longest streak of at least one victory per season?
- Who won the first NASCAR race in what is now Winston Cup?
- Who was the last to drive a Buick to the Winston Cup title?

- ANSWERS
1. Richard Petty, 18 (1960-77)
2. Jim Roper
3. Bobby Allison

AROUND THE GARAGE

Television coverage has come a long way for Winston Cup

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week
CONCORD, N.C. — Have you any idea how far this sport has come? Well, let me give you one example.

Twenty years ago, NASCAR could not even get television to broadcast all of one event, much less televise the entire schedule.

The first live, flag-to-flag coverage of a modern Winston Cup event was the 1979 Daytona 500.

Now they televise "happy hour," for gosh sakes. Happy hour is the final Winston Cup practice session, typically held on Saturday afternoon following the Busch Grand-National race.

On Saturday, WTBS stayed on the air for happy hour, with its reporters breathlessly reporting from the garage area on every turn of a wrench as teams honed their efforts for Sunday.

Let's put this in perspective. What of the National Football League was covered in this manner? Can you imagine Don Criqui and Matt Millen describing the final practice?

"Coach Chan Gailey is calling for the punt return team. What's that like?"

"Well, basically, Don, this is just a drill where the coach makes sure everybody who is supposed to be on the field actually goes out there."

"And sure enough, wouldn't you know it ... there are only 10 on the field! Let's go down to Lesley Visser and see what the problem is."

"Well, Don and Matt, it seems that Leon Lett is supposed to be on the field, but when Coach Gailey made the call, Lett was playing dominoes with several of the water boys."

"Thanks, Lesley. Now here's Jim Gray with Chan Gailey, coach of the Cowboys."

"Chan, what's this say about your team's level of preparation, that one of your players apparently doesn't know he's on the punt return team?"

"Well, Jim, I'm concerned." "Concerned about whether you'll be able to win tomorrow's game with Denver?"

"Heck no, I'm concerned that our water boys make minimum wage, and it's not fair for a millionaire defensive tackle to be robbing them of every square dime."

"As usual, the Cowboys are torn by dissension. Back to you, Don and Matt."

Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,
Several weeks ago you ran an article about David Pearson and Darlington Raceway.

Being an avid David Pearson fan, I would like more information about what to do to ride around the Darlington track with him and have some photos taken with me and the Silver Fox.

Noel Rose
Mount Olive, N.C.

Dear Noel,
Call Darlington Raceway at 843-395-8499.

Dear NASCAR This Week,
I am from a small town. I read NASCAR This Week every week. All I ever read is people who are against Jeff Gordon. I think the problem is that other NASCAR fans are really just jealous of Jeff Gordon. He is a young guy and already has won two Winston Cup championships, and in my opinion, he will have the third. P.S. NASCAR fans, get used to it.

Racing Electronics is touting its new RE2000 Alpha as the "first purpose-built scanner for the motor-sports fan." FROM THE ARCHIVES:

The rich history of NASCAR Legend has it that James Hylton found himself some superior tires and didn't pay a dime for them. At Talladega in the summer of 1972, Hylton discovered that the tires from the previous year were faster than the new ones Goodyear brought to the race track. Using the old rubber, Hylton won the only super-speedway event of his career, driving a Mercury with his trademark No. 48 to victory lane.

PRACTICE PRACTICE PRACTICE PRACTICE PRACTICE PRACTICE PRACTICE PRACTICE PRACTICE

Want to be on a team that reduces your risk of injury - and has you most ready for game day on Saturday - by playing it smart in practice? That team is Kentucky.

Coach Hal Mumme follows the National Football League model of being ready for game day by limiting contact work in practice. This is how UK's practices are scheduled:

Hitting in practice is limited to work on technique; there is no tackling to the ground.

There are only four full-contact scrimmages during spring practice, including the spring game.

Obviously, many football injuries come when joints are twisted during tackling or in pile-ups at the end of plays. These practice plans greatly reduce the number of these injuries.

How did the plan work during Mumme's first season at UK? Let the numbers speak for themselves:

	1996	1997	%fewer injuries
Number of players who missed at least on game because of injury	18	4	-77.8%
Number of practice days or game days missed because of injury	72	56	22.2%
Number of joint injuries (shoulder, knee, ankle/foot)	32	22	-31.3%
Number of ligament sprains	33	14	-57.6%
Number of heat-related illnesses	10	0	-100%
Total number of new (non-recurrent) injuries	63	47	-25.4%

*1996 featured a traditional practice schedule with heavy hitting during the spring practices and during the season

+1997 featured Hal Mumme's practice schedule of no tackling to the ground during the season and only four full-contact scrimmages during the spring

GAME REVIEW

Arkansas Comeback Leaves Cats "Blue" 27-20

The Razorbacks rallied in the second half from a 20-7 deficit to remain undefeated at 4-0 with a home win. The Cats seem to give the game away more than the Hogs winning it, but it was another tough road loss for UK.

Cat Nips:

Arkansas defensive line dominated the Cats veteran offensive line in second half.

Recruiting News

Cats get a verbal commitment from Lorenzen.

As written about on page #4 of The Cats Page - "Who's gonna fill their shoes" the football Wildcats received a verbal commitment from stand-out quarterback Jared Lorenzen. The 6-4 240 pound left hander from Ft. Thomas High in Northern Kentucky becomes the first and maybe only QB that the Cats will sign.

"Kentucky showing so much interest in me is one of the main reasons I have committed to them." said Lorenzen.

Note: Look for Lorenzen's teammate at Ft. Thomas - Derek Smith the 6-6 230 pound tight-end/defensive end to also commit to the Cats in the near future. The Mr. Football candidate is also in the running for Mr. Basketball honors and could possibly play both sports at Kentucky.

Entertainment Extra Q & A's

by Evelyn Ludvigson

Q. All the attention given to the new "Avengers" movie makes me wonder, whatever happened to the actress who came on the show when Diana Rigg left the role of Mrs. Peel? Marianna K.

A. Canadian-born theater actor Linda Thorson played Tara King on "The Avengers" after Rigg left. She was never really accepted by the audience, and went back to the theater, but did considerable television in England and Canada. In the United States, she co-starred in a series with Paxton Whitehead, her co-star from the theater production, "Noises Off," which she did in both London and New York. She also had a contract role on "One Life to Live."

Thorson married and was later divorced from television celebrity, Bill Boggs, with whom she had a son. Currently, she's co-starring on the Canadian series, "Emily of New Moon," and will play Diane Keaton's sister in the upcoming film, "The Other Sister."

Q. My whole family loves Tom Hanks. What's next for him? Edith L.

A. Tom's newest film is "You've Got Mail," which is a remake of the 1940 Jimmy Stewart movie, "The Shop Around the Corner." In the old flick, two people who work together in a shop don't know they are each other's secret pen pal. The new film moves the theme into the E-mail era. (P.S. The 1940 American film, which was based on an earlier version made in Europe, was later made into a musical entitled "She Loves Me." TV star Scott Bakula starred in its most recent Broadway run.)

Q. I read that Callista Flockhart (star of "Ally McBeal") has a weight problem. I've never seen her looking overweight. What's the story here? Suzanne P.

A. There have been reports that Flockhart's problem is that she's too thin and that people close to her are concerned about it. However, her representatives insist this just isn't so, and Callista is in fine health as well as fine form.

From my point of view, Callista looks a lot like Audrey Hepburn.

Q. Is it true Cher and Mary Bono, Sonny Bono's widow, don't talk to each other? William I.

A. It's true there's no love lost between the two women. Mary, who now holds Sonny's congressional seat, has told friends she resents Cher's attempt to exploit her (Cher's) relationship with her former husband for commercial reasons when for years, Cher and Sonny hardly spoke except in matters relating to their daughter, Chastity.

Cher's friends say while it's true they were estranged, Cher never stopped loving the man who molded her for stardom.

Smile Awhile

We Eastern Kentuckians always knew that there was nothing better than good old, down home, country cooking. Now the rest of the world is going to find out how delicious our mountain fare is since the Seelbach Hotel in Louisville has decided to add hillbilly vittles to its gourmet menu.

"Surie!" my friend, Jean, exclaimed as she opened the newspaper. "They're serving shuck beans at the Seelbach."

"Ah, shucks, Jean," I laughed. "I'm serious," Jean stated. "The article says that they want people to be proud of their regional dishes. You know, we all used to eat what we grew, and it says that our hills could only grow certain foods. So we adapted them and fixed our own specialties."

"What else are they going to serve?" I asked.

"Poke Salad." "I've never eaten Poke Salad and I've lived here all my life."

"I agree it's not your usual country fare, but lots of people still eat poke, Sara."

"Do they mention any desserts?"

"Paw Paws Foster!" she blurted out.

"Never heard of it." I replied.

"It's like Bananas Foster except you fix it with paw paws."

"Jean, I don't mean to sound uppity, but have you ever heard of any of these dishes? I mean, I don't eat poke or paw paws. And I don't like shuck beans."

"Maybe they'd let you prepare your own meal. Sort of like B.Y.O.B." Jean offered.

"What's that?"

"Bring your own Beaver," she chuckled. "Why, you could even find a nice entree on your way to the Bluegrass by shoveling up a fine road kill squirrel."

"My Granny Wheeler used to take chocolate drops and smash them on top of Ritz crackers. Then she'd bake them and serve them as hors d'oeuvres. Country people knew how to improvise."

"Well, I heard somewhere once that everything was better when it sits on a Ritz." Jean giggled.

"I wonder if they're going to have mountain oysters or lamb fries?"

"Yeah, boy," Jean gagged. "If we're lucky they'll probably have souse paté as an appetizer."

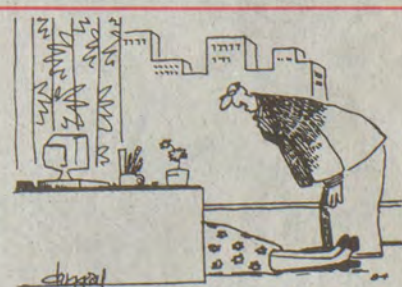

"My heavens! Now I know why we leave town to get something good to eat."

"Sara, we have great food in the mountains," Jean protested.

"I know. Look at me," I blubbered.

"Really. We have super fixins. Chicken and dumplings, soup beans, cornbread, fried potatoes, fried green tomatoes, fried chicken, kilt lettuce, fried apple pies, fried pork chops, fried corn. We have foreign fare ~ French Fries!"

Just like Carl Hurley once said, "We didn't have cholesterol when I was growing up. But if we had, we'd fried it." Hurrah for country cooking.

"You collapsed from exhaustion? Keep up the good work."

Country Chatter

For country music, the first half of the 1990s has been one wild ride. Unprecedented growth and the resulting influx of new artists and influences have left the Nashville powers-that-be scratching their heads trying to figure out just what is and what is not "country."

Then there's Alan Jackson. Like a calm at the center of a raging storm, the long, tall Georgian has displayed an uncanny ability to quietly mosey his way through the confusion directly to the top of the charts with songs that are – and there's no debate here – as country as country gets. His rise to super-stardom has paralleled the country boom, and his heartfelt honky-tonk music and phenomenal success have served as a consistent reality check for a format in transition.

"Recently, I've been looking back at the production part of my show, and realized that it's been getting bigger every year – more video, more staging. I started wondering where all this was going, so now I've started going backwards a little.

"I don't dance, and I don't swing from ropes; all I do is stand there," Jackson says with an easy laugh. "I think in a way it's harder to entertain by just singing and trying to get my songs across."

Anybody who's seen him in concert lately will testify to Jackson's leaner-and-meaner, no-nonsense live shows, but that instinctive knack for whittling things down to their essence becomes crystal clear in his songs. Whether he's writing about his own roots ("Chattahoochee"), celebrating his deep love for honky-tonk tradition ("Don't Rock The Jukebox," "Chasin' That Neon Rainbow"), or paying homage to his heroes ("Midnight In Montgomery"), Jackson's songs are at once highly personal and totally universal.

Fans, don't forget to pick up Alan's FANTASTIC new C.D. titled "High Mileage" (Arista Nashville) which is number one nationwide.

SIMON BIRCH: Be forewarned — take a healthy amount of tissues with you to this flick. It's a real gut-wrencher.

As the film begins, we see Jim Carrey (who does this cameo uncredited, such was his belief in this work) standing over the graves of his mother and his friend, Simon Birch. The narration tell us, "What faith I have, I owe to Simon Birch." However, in that same window of time, we find out that it was Simon who killed the mother. Thus, you'd think you're in for a psycho-drama. Rest assured, you're not.

We flash to the early 1960s and meet 12-year-old Joe Wentworth (Joseph Mazzello). Joe's mother, Rebecca (Ashley Judd), is the favorite subject of town gossip. Apparently, she had Joe out of wedlock and refuses to say who the father was.

Joe's best friend is Simon Birch (Ian Michael Smith). Simon is the same age as Joe, but is nowhere near his size since Simon is a dwarf. Simon's own parents are rather cold to him, but that doesn't matter. Rebecca treats Simon as if he were her own.

Simon is a lovable scamp. He takes good potshots at those in authority, particularly the local preacher (David Strathairn) and the ditzzy Sunday school teacher (Jan Hooks). He's unbothered by his lack of stature and proves his brain is bigger than his body. He chafes at religious dictates, but still feels somehow that his size was pre-ordained in order for him to achieve something unique in his life.

Both boys have a quest. For Simon, it is to find what it is God has intended for him to do to "make me a hero." For Joe, it's to find his unknown father. The journey is an emotional one to say the least.

I give this PG rated movie three stars. Don't miss it.

Horse killed, rider hurt when struck by vehicle

A Magoffin County man was seriously injured and the horse he was riding was killed Saturday night when they both were struck by an automobile on Burning Fork Road in Magoffin County.

Charles Bailey and two companions, whose names were not available, were riding horses along the roadside at approximately 8 p.m.

Reportedly, the horse and rider were attempting to cross the road just as Darrel Keith Hackworth approached the riders.

Hackworth's vehicle struck Bailey and the horse in the right side.

The horse reportedly was killed instantly. Bailey reportedly suffered severe injuries to his right knee and leg, including a broken tibia and fibula, a crushed kneecap, a severed artery, and lacerated muscle tissue.

The driver of the vehicle was not injured. — The Salyersville Independent

Missing woman found

One of two Magoffin County persons reported as missing in recent weeks has been found, while a reward has been offered for information leading to the whereabouts of the second.

Delilah Poe, after being reported as missing since August 28, was located almost one month later on September 21, in Salyersville.

Poe was not only being sought as a missing person in an investigation which was opened at the request of family members nearly two weeks before she was located, but she also was wanted on a bench warrant issued by the Magoffin County District Court.

The woman had been staying with local friends and had just been in contact with family members. — The Salyersville Independent

Barnett awarded medals he earned during WW II

Over a half-century after he came home from service as an apparent unrecognized hero in the trenches of World War II, Arlie Barnett has finally received the many medals that he had earned decades before.

A month ago, witnessed by a gathering of a large number of relatives and friends, Congressman Hal Rogers decorated the Salyersville resident with all the medals that were due him 53 years ago.

During the occasion, Barnett was presented with a Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Good Conduct Medal, European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign Medal with three Bronze Service Stars, the World War II Victory Medal, Army of Occupation Medal with a German Clasp, Combat Infantry Badge and Honorable Service Lapel Button from World War II. — The Salyersville Independent

State probes district's transportation system

The Kentucky Department of Education has raised some questions about the Pike County School System's transportation department, including the district's $600,000-per month contract driver payroll.

The KDE Division of Pupil Transportation audited the school system's transportation department late last month, reviewing 55 bus driver records and the department's day-to-day operations.

The Training and Safety Branch was unable to substantiate any more than three drivers of the 55 checked that were properly trained, DPT director Mike Roscoe said in a memo to Superintendent Frank Welch on October 2. — Appalachian News-Express

Armed robber hits store at South Williamson

The manager of a South Williamson video store said an armed robbery at her place of business was abruptly negated after a quick-thinking clerk managed to turn the tables on the would-be-thief.

Christie Dotson, manager of Super Star Video in the Appalachian Plaza, said the robbery attempt took place Sunday around 11 a.m. when a man wielding a knife walked into the establishment and demanded money from one of her male cashiers.

The clerk decided to give the man what he asked for. Unfortunately for the robber, it just didn't turn out to be the amount of money he hoped to get, nor was it delivered in the manner he was expecting.

"This guy walked in and pointed a knife at one of the clerks and said he wanted all the money in the cash register," Dotson said. "That's when the clerk picked up a small change box that's kept under the counter and threw it at him."

That's when the robber decided to run away, Dotson said. — Appalachian News-Express

A Johnson County preacher pleaded not guilty Wednesday to a charge of assaulting a deputy sheriff in June.

Rice, 52, is accused of hitting deputy James McCarty in the Johnson County Sheriff's Office on June 18. McCarty said in court papers that Rice went into the office to protest paying property taxes and became violent when McCarty tried to escort him out of the building. McCarty said

County sues to stop increase in cable rates

The Lawrence County Fiscal Court has filed a lawsuit in an attempt to stop Lawrence County Cable from increasing their rates.

In a lawsuit filed October 2 in Lawrence Circuit Court, the fiscal court not only asks that the increase be set aside, but subscribers be reimbursed for any increase they may have paid.

At the September 18 meeting, the fiscal court voted to deny a $2,580 a month increase in cable rates because they said it did not fall under the cable provider's franchise agreement. — The Big Sandy News

Problems facing mobile home board same as in the past

Members of the Louisa's Mobile Home Board said the current "mess" involving a pair of mobile homes that were ordered to be moved is the same type of situation that caused three former members to quit in 1995.

The board is involved in a debate over two mobile homes moved in on Hayes Street by residents Dale Presley and his daughter Jamie King. Quick response by Hindman fire department averts disaster

When Charlie Dials pulled into the gas pumps at MiDee Mart in Hindman Friday afternoon, his Ford Bronco was "missing."

He had no idea it was on fire.

Dials discovered this quickly when he turned off the engine; he ran into MiDee Mart to find a fire extinguisher. After calling 911, owner John Wright, manager Tom Asbury, and Dials ran with extinguishers and a water hose to the vehicle.

In a matter of minutes, a fire truck arrived from the Hindman Volunteer Fire Department. The fire was extinguished and no one was injured. — Troublesome Creek Times
