Patton: 'This was a good day'

by Willie Elliott

On what will be the sixth hole of a new golf course, local, state and federal officials gathered Wednesday for groundbreaking ceremonies for the Prestonsburg Recreational and Economic Development Project.

"This was one step in defining our future. This was a good day. More good days will come," said Gov. Paul Patton, one of the many dignitaries who joined in moving a shovelful of dirt.

The facility will be built on reclaimed land from a surface mining site. In addition to a recreational complex, the site will have an industrial park and residences.

Other than the golf course, the design of the recreational facility will include high school football, soccer, track and field, and baseball areas.

It will also have six tennis courts, men's and women's softball fields, outdoor basketball courts, youth baseball fields, practice fields, sand volleyball courts, roller blade/skateboard area, chil-

Floyd BOE works on 'material' matters

by Willie Elliott
Staff Writer

Dealing with the many items on the agenda at Tuesday night's meeting, Floyd County Board of Education members literally found it difficult to be on the same page. The board books assembled by the central office contain information on items to be discussed at the meeting. Some of the books had missing material while some had material misplaced. Board member Johnnie Ross asked how many books were prepared. When Supt. Mike King told him about 21, Ross responded, "Wouldn't it be better to do 10 correctly than 20 with mistakes?" King said the books would be in better order in the future. Several handouts were given out during the meeting. Board member Carol Stumbo said that she wanted the materials prior to the meeting so "I can make the best decision I can." King said, in some instances, it is not possible to have the material in advance, but he would do the best he could to provide all handouts in advance. Since an earlier board meeting to set tax rates was canceled, the board set the rate at this meeting. King gave a handout that listed the options and how much money each would bring in. He explained the needs of the

Preparing for the vote
Floyd County Clerk Carla Boyd led the inspection of the voting machines Tuesday afternoon at the courthouse. The 56-pound voting units are self-contained, holding everything from the legs on which the machine stands to a computer to record the vote. Not everyone was happy with the inspection, though. City 911 is on; county on the way

by Pam Shingler
Editor

The 911 emergency system for the City of Prestonsburg is up and operating, as of Wednesday. Please note: This is only if you live in the city. The county-wide 911 system is close to being operational and should be available within the next two weeks, but as of today it is not on. If you live in Prestonsburg, however, and have a life-threatening emergency, then dialing the three numbers will get you straight into the dispatcher's office and help will be on the way within minutes.

Murder, rape among indictments

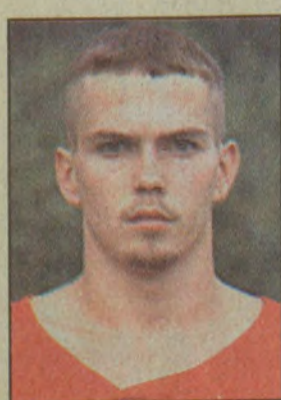

Wayne Douglas Hayes, 46, of Betsy Layne was indicted by a Floyd County Grand Jury this week on a charge of murder in the shooting death of his son, Christopher D. Hayes on August 9. Hayes was among 25 persons indicted, including a Louisa man, F.B. Kidd, 55, who was cited with 17 counts of sex-related charges that are alleged to have taken place in Floyd County in the 1960s and '70s. Kidd was indicted on five counts of rape of a child under 12 that allegedly occurred between 1969 and 1974. He was also indicted on one count of rape of a female over 12 in 1974; one count of second-degree rape in 1975; one count of second-degree sodomy in 1975; one count of second-degree sexual abuse in 1975; and eight counts of indecent or immoral practices with another, all allegedly involving a child less than 15 and occurring between 1967 and 1974. Christopher R. Lawson, 21, of Arkansas Creek, Martin, was also indicted on a count of first-degree rape in an incident that allegedly occurred on August 2. An indictment alleging first-degree sexual abuse involving a child less than 12 years old around August 12 was also made against Steve R. Carroll, 32, of Martin. Sexual related charges were levied against Jason Wallen, 21, of Prestonsburg. He is accused of two counts of first-degree sodomy on a child less than 12 years old and one count of first-degree sexual abuse, also involving a child less than 12. Pamela Compton's photo was inadvertently omitted from the display of Jenny Wiley Pioneer Pageant winners published in Wednesday's edition of the Floyd County Times.

Compton was the Beauty and interview winner in the 13 to 15-year-old age group.

board that would warrant a four percent increase. Those needs include six new buses, technology needs, textbooks and instructional materials, and maintenance and physical plant needs. A four percent increase in the tax rate would bring in an additional $200,000 for the school system, he said.

Stumbo said she could not vote on a tax increase until the board "shows the community they can more effectively handle the money they now get. So far this board has not shown they can do this."

The rate was set at .56 for real estate, .579 for personal property and .554 for motor vehicles.

The financial report could not be given because there was a $4,000 difference between bank and board numbers. Finance officer Andy Lyons said this occurred because some bills had not been posted correctly. He said a up-to-date report would be sent to board members as soon as the mistakes were corrected.

Construction superintendent Henry Risner, Sammy Martin, and Joe Johnson reported on the Prestonsburg High School project. "While the work is of fine quality and ahead of schedule," Martin said, "there are some problems at the school."

Leakage from pipes has caused discoloration on some of the tiles, which is caused by thermostats being set at widely varying settings, he said. This causes water to condense from the pipes.

Martin said the solution was to have someone "to manage the plant." He compared the situation to "a plane on auto pilot."

King said administrative changes at the school, plus educating the staff and faculty, would go a long way to solve the problem. He also said one employee would be assigned to the school three hours a day to monitor and learn the system.

Coy Samons, principal at PHS, had a report ready for the board concerning decisions about what the school wants on the plaque that comes with the construction job.

Martin told Samons and the board that the plaque and its content have already been decided: It will contain the names of the board members in office at the time the bid was awarded.

The board learned that playground equipment formerly located at Melvin Elementary, which is no longer open, had been moved to the Wayland Fire Department. The equipment has since been taken to Allen.

Stumbo said she wanted the equipment moved back to Osborne since the students who were at Melvin now go to that school.

King said Osborne could have any equipment that the school needed and the rest would be declared surplus and sold to the highest bidder.

In transportation, Jody Sword said he and his staff have eased the problem of overcrowding on buses. On the last days of school before the fall intercession, no students were standing and overloaded buses were reduced anywhere from three to 20 students per bus, he said.

dren's playground, picnic shelters, and a 400-meter track around the football field.

Last month, US Rep. Hal Rogers announced that the project would receive $1,032,450 from the federal government for the infrastructure at the 40-acre industrial park which will have the potential to house up to 10 light industries.

About 120 units will be in the residential section, according to Paul Hughes, chairman of the Prestonsburg Property Advisory Committee. About 100 of these units will go to families who owned land at the site. The 20 remaining will be developed by the city and will have full city services.

Representative Rogers, who was instrumental in getting a bill passed in Congress to help fund the project, praised the vision of State Rep. Greg Stumbo who suggested the idea of building a golf course on the mountain top.

At the time Stumbo was criticized for his proposal, Rogers said. He recounted the first tour of the site with Stumbo. Rogers said the state lawmaker told him, "We're going to strip the coal and make a golf course." Even Rogers was skeptical at that time.

"This is the most significant development for our area that I have seen in my 18 years of public service," Stumbo said.

The project is important, he said, because it will show private businesses that this can be done. Stumbo said the time will come "when we look down the mountain, not up."

Stumbo said he would like to see retirement homes built on land such as this. He said that many people who left the area in the 1950s and 1960s are now ready to come home. Stumbo said he wants them to come home and bring other families with them.

All told, Patton said the state will contribute $10 million to the project. "We're glad to be part of this project. We have two choices: Create additional opportunities for our people or move our people out."

Patton also stressed the importance of coal. He said coal would "still be here when we are gone." He added that more use needs to be made of stripped land.

To stress his idea of using reclaimed land, Patton told the crowd that his airplane had landed in Martin County at an airport built on reclaimed land.

Rogers said the area needs more people with visions. He mentioned Billie Jean Osborne, founder of the Kentucky Opry, as another example.

Rogers also stressed how important it is for the various agencies in the region to work together. He said that this project shows what can happen when different groups cooperate.

Rogers said the mountain top project will attract people from afar and provide good paying jobs so people can stay home and find work. He said, "This shows what we can do when we work together."

Prestonsburg Mayor Jerry Fannin said he is excited to see the project moving ahead. "This is one of the biggest projects in Eastern Kentucky linked to economic development," he said. He called it "one more tool to get companies to put in factories or other jobs."

'Facilities' a go for federal pen

Times staff report

Inmates and staff at the new Big Sandy Federal Penitentiary won't have to resort to portable pots, outdoor toilets or a giant septic system, thanks to a grant from the Appalachian Regional Commission.

US Rep. Hal Rogers announced Wednesday that ARC has awarded a $400,000 grant to the City of Paintsville to construct a water treatment project at the prison which is being built in Martin County near the Floyd and Johnson county lines.

The project consists of building a million gallon per-day wastewater treatment plant and more than nine miles of sewers to serve the prison.

In addition to the wastewater system, the project will accommodate the future growth of the Honey Branch Industrial Site, designed to serve the region.

The project will also allow for the expansion of service to the American Standard plant and Porter Elementary School in Johnson County and provide for future extensions to communities in the three counties, Rogers said.

The prison is a $130 million, 1,000-bed, high security facility, he said, adding that, when complete, it is expected to have an annual operating budget of $25 million and employ 400 persons.

Martin woman dies in wreck

by Janice Shepherd
Managing Editor

A Martin woman died Tuesday at the University of Kentucky Medical Center from injuries she received in an accident in Johnson County last week.

Billie Joan McCallister, 59, was injured in a two-vehicle collision near Paintsville on October 15. Details of the accident were not available at the Kentucky State Police Post at Pikeville at presstime Thursday.

The accident occurred around 7:30 a.m. on U.S. 23 at Hager Hill, according to reports from Dennis B. Penn, a coroner with the Lexington-Fayette County Coroner's office.

McCallister was a back-seat passenger in one of the vehicles, the coroner's office indicated. She was wearing a seatbelt.

The injured woman was transported to the University of Kentucky Medical Center where she died five days later. Official cause of death was listed as "blunt force trauma to the head and chest."

She died at 6:19 p.m. in the hospital's Trauma Intensive Care Unit.

The accident was investigated by Kentucky State Police Trooper Dwayne Price.

McCallister's funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. Friday, October 23 at the Nelson-Frazier Funeral Home.

She is survived by her parents, Willie Ray and Lucille Daniels Eden of Martin; one son, James Ernest McCallister Jr. of Prestonsburg; four daughters, Pamela Shepherd of Prestonsburg, Sylvia Meadows of Buckhannon, West Virginia, Betty Borders of Lexington, and Mary Lucille Bailey of Grand Forks, North Dakota; one brother, William Ray Eden of St. Augustine, Florida; three sisters, Sylvia Rigor of Grayson, Patsy Wiggins of St.

Augustine, and Phyllis Hunter of Martin; and 11 grandchildren.

Burial will be made in Davidson Memorial Gardens at Ivel.

McCallister was a member of the Behold the Lamb Church in Prestonsburg.

Med school wins funding

Pikeville College's School of Osteopathic Medicine was included in the federal government's end-of-year-funding bill to the tune of $1.5 million, according to a press release from US Rep. Hal Rogers' office. The money is to complete funding for the school's telemedicine learning and resource center.

The school, Rogers said, "will literally become the nucleus of a larger network of health facilities that will share medical expertise and resources."

Bears, bats focus of park program

Adults, as well as children, are invited to Mammalogy Day at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, Saturday, October 31.

Sessions on bears, bats and small mammals in the wild are scheduled. The program is free and open to the public.

The bears lead off the program with concurrent sessions at 1:30 p.m. "The Bear Facts for Kids" will look at what bears eat, how they can sleep so long, and how not to meet one. Youngsters will also make bear tracks.

At the same time, adults will study the black bear in Kentucky. Kentucky Wildlife Biologist Jayson Plaxico will lead the program, offering information on the bears' range, ecology and conservation efforts.

Bats take the spotlight at 3 p.m. "Bats Are Terrific" is the title of the children's program. They will play bat games, hear bat tales, make a bat and find out what's true and what is not about bats.

At 7 p.m., Dr. Les Meade, a biology professor, will lead a discussion on small mammals of Kentucky, including voles, moles, shrews, bats and more. Skin mounts and skulls will be shared with participants.

Following the lesson on small mammals, participants will "Go Looking for Critters." Dr. Meade and park naturalist Ron Vanover will lead an exploration of the park in two vans.

For more information, call Vanover at 886-2711 or 1-800-325-0142.

Editorial

I didn't learn to write well when I was in school.

I remembered this when some teachers told me recently that they dislike Kentucky's writing program. They want, in fact, to weaken the program and kill the writing portfolio. Thank goodness others, like the Kentucky Council of Teachers of English/Language Arts, disagree.

The fact that I didn't learn to write well was true although the schools I attended in the 1950's claimed they were the best in Kentucky. Even worse, I didn't know how weak a writer I was until I got to college; my scores on standardized tests misled me.

On the Scholastic Aptitude Test I wasn't required to write a single word, much less sentences or paragraphs. Still my "aptitude" for what was tested, vocabulary and reading comprehension, compared well to the other high school students in a sample group—well enough, in fact, to be admitted to one of the most selective colleges in the country.

When the first professor in that college assigned me an entire paper (as every professor thereafter did) and there were no more multiple choice questions to answer, my bubble popped. What teachers hadn't asked me to do before was to really write—construct paragraphs, plan out and communicate whole concepts, think about audience and images, put words on paper and have someone read it. I had to learn to write in college.

I thought about my experience learning to write in Kentucky schools as I read an article by Stephen Covey, author of The Seven Habits of Highly Effective People and other best-selling books.

CHANGES IN OUR SCHOOLS

A Commentary

Learning to write in Kentucky

By Robert F. Sexton

Writing was hard for Covey, who remembers the days "when writing instruction amounted to spelling lessons."

One of the most successful writers in America, he's passionate about the importance of teaching students to write well. "It's essential," Covey says. "You might as well ask how important is thinking."

Covey is happy about new approaches to teaching writing like those in Kentucky.

"There was a day when good writing meant correct spelling, proper punctuation, and perfectly shaped letters," he wrote. "Today's students must spend time clarifying their position and audience...They should be graded on precision and passion, as well as on neatness and mechanical correctness."

That's what students do with writing in Kentucky if writing is taught well, and the portfolio is used properly

REP. STUMBO RESPONDS TO HERALD-LEADER EDITORIAL

Editor:

The Lexington Herald-Leader editorial, "Degree Distress" of September 27, 1998, criticized my contention that students obtaining degrees from what was formerly the community college system are entitled to degrees given in the name of the University of Kentucky. However, the Lexington Herald-Leader ignored several relevant facts.

A most important fact that the Lexington Herald-Leader failed to acknowledge is that these students are entitled by law to degrees in the name of the University of Kentucky; second, that the General Assembly and the governor gave their words that these students would receive degrees in the name of UK; and, third, these students want and deserve degrees given in the name of UK.

I went back and personally reviewed all of the newspaper accounts of the events surrounding the special session on education reform called in May 1997. I wanted to be sure of the facts before I expressed an opinion. Let us begin by noting the statute in question. KRS 164.580 (4) states in part as follows: "Degrees shall be conferred upon community college students and their diplomas awarded by the University of Kentucky Board of Trustees."

This language was inserted to grant a specific right to the student. The statute is clear, no board or even a governor can take that right away; it is the law. Having established that fact, let us now review the legislative history associated with this particular part of the statute.

On the night of May 20, 1997, with the House vote scheduled for the next day, a compromise was reached between the Governor's office, UK and legislative leaders, the primary point of which was to ensure that students in the community college system would continue to have their degrees "conferred" and "awarded" by UK.

The Lexington Herald-Leader article of May 21, 1997 reported my amendment offered on the House floor, which gave rise to the above referred to language. The Lexington Herald-Leader said, "Majority Floor Leader, Gregory Stumbo, who opposed Patton's initial proposal, added an amendment to require the new community and technical college board to address any threats to the accreditation to any community college degrees with the University of Kentucky name—even if it meant returning the colleges to the University of Kentucky." With that amendment, many members were then able to support the bill and as a result, it passed the House 76-24.

The Senate adopted an amendment to the bill sponsored by Senator Ernesto Scorsone to place the governance of the community college system back under UK. Reporters Chad Carlton and Angie Muhs reported in their story of May 30, 1997 concerning the House's rejection on the preceding day of Senator Scorsone's amendment by a 62-37 vote about my plea to colleagues to stick with the compromise and "be good to your word."

In the free conference committee meeting between the House and the Senate to iron out the differences in the bill, the issue was again raised. At this point, the language was refined to put a timetable on the mandate to the board to protect the student right.

I raised the issue directly as follows—"Mr. Speaker, on the issue of—we inserted language on Page 155 to take corrective action in the event that the accrediting agency, which would be SACS, were to deem that the degrees could not be conferred by the University of Kentucky. I think we all agree that we want those degrees to be conferred to community colleges by the University of Kentucky."

The committee made up of both Democrats and Republicans from both the House and Senate agreed and so the language was refined to read in the final draft as follows: "If the regional accrediting agency for the community colleges in the process of completing its substantive change process review determines that the organizational structure of the Kentucky community and technical college system and its board of regents does not meet their requirements for accrediting individual community colleges and for granting degrees by the University of Kentucky then the Kentucky community and technical college board of regents and the board of trustees shall initiate corrective actions within thirty days of notification from the accrediting agency, or within the timetables specified by the accrediting agency to alleviate the problem (emphasis added)."

The statute makes it quite clear that the two boards must act to protect the right of the community college student to have his or her degree "conferred" and "awarded" by UK. There is absolutely no mystery to the legislative intent or the clear and exact wording of the law. I am absolutely astonished that anyone could read or infer otherwise.

What the Lexington Herald-Leader has interpreted as "politics" on my part, therefore, really turns out to be a question of (1) whether the KCTCS board will follow the legislative intent and the law, and (2) whether the governor will "keep his word."

I stand by my previous statement that a degree "conferred" and "awarded" UK has more status and value to the student.

For years members of the General Assembly, myself and most citizens of the Commonwealth voiced support for the need to improve the quality of education in Kentucky. It seems ironic, however, that in his particular editorial the Lexington Herald-Leader, took the position that "employers don't read the fine print on diplomas."

If that is the case, then why are we trying so hard to make our flagship university a nationally recognized institution of higher learning. If employers don't care from where a student graduates perhaps

My cousin Fred died this week. It was one of those surprising, incongruous things that come upon you, like when you have a cup of hot coffee poised at your lips and someone touches you on the shoulder. It's so unexpected, you come undone.

Fred and I were from one of those old mountain families where you grow up realizing little difference between cousins and siblings. You're so close you share parents and houses and material goods and memories. If Fred and I had had the same mother, instead of mothers who were sisters, we would not have been any closer. We all just mingled like fish clustered in a school.

It should not have happened. Of course, that's what we all think when someone we love dies. But this really shouldn't have.

He had a very routine surgery a week-and-a-half ago, a type that thousands of people have every day. You're uncomfortable for a few weeks and then you're all right.

Apparently, however, infection set in. Defining the word stubborn, he wouldn't go back to the doctor, believing that the bad cells would consume themselves. Instead, they consumed him. When he was admitted to the hospital emergency room last Sunday, the bad cells had already taken over and, despite the efforts of desperate hospital personnel, he gave up on Tuesday night.

Over the years, Fred and I have been at odds more times than I can count. It goes all the way back to when he was in high school and his brother and I were in first or second grade. Typical teenager that he was, he resented having to walk us home for lunch, so he walked as fast as he could without running. Randall and I had to run to keep up, and we had to risk his anger if we complained.

As grown-ups, Fred and I have both suffered from terminal rightness. We each have had a hard time ceding the smallest point in an argument, and we each have believed passionately in our individual credos.

His other siblings tended to step back when tempers flared, but Fred and I had a hard time turning off the heat of a good difference, and we differed on everything from politics to religion.

The important thing is that we never stayed mad. We'd let the wounds fester for a while and then we'd call a truce.

I shall always see him with his arms outstretched, saying, "I need a hug." What could I do? I just had to give him one and take the one he offered. With his arms enveloping me, he'd reassure, "I hope you know I love you."

All the hurts and misunderstandings over all the years simply fell away. How can you stay mad at someone who hopes you know he loves you?

About a month ago, Fred and I had one of our recurring spats. We had not spoken since. I kind of knew that by some time in November, after a proper time, we would come together again. We would have sloughed off our previous misgivings and would have started fresh, just like before.

That chance is gone, and I am reminded of the admonition not to let the sun go down on your wrath.

How very foolish we can be. I hope he knew I loved him.

we should notify our sister state of North Carolina so that they can tear down the heralded "research triangle" and build a motor speedway or amusement park to attract tourists rather than young and inspiring students in search of an academic degree.

The plain and simple truth is that the Lexington Herald-Leader's critical editorial was wrong in both its factual content and the opinions arrived therefrom, although I must admit there were a few small elements of truth scattered here and there. Before I address those, let me assure you that it was not my intent to somehow "embarrass," the governor. He made a pledge to legislators and community college students across the state of Kentucky that he would see to it that the degrees that they received were "conferred" and "awarded" by UK. I kept my word to him and others to support the compromise bill even after the Senate had stripped out the governance provision for the community colleges, something which I truly believe was in the best interest of the students and parents that I represent. But in the hope that we could improve our overall educational system in the Commonwealth, I and my colleagues took a bold step forward.

This problem will not go away. It must be appropriately addressed and I hope the governor will step forward and honor his commitment. The question must be raised of what will happen to the students and their degrees in the event of a legal challenge on the issue. My hope in asking for an Attorney General's opinion was that others would recognize the problem which can only be alleviated under the current language of the statute by reversing the process and placing whatever oversight the accrediting agency deems necessary back with UK.

Another alternative would, of course, be change the law. Yes, it might open up an old fight. But for those of us who supported the bill as we intended, isn't it only fair that a public debate now take place on this very important issue? The consequences of this act are far-reaching. It is a huge public policy decision that affects the lives of a great many Kentuckians. As for the other few smidgens of truth to be found in the Lexington Herald Leader editorial, it's true Kentuckians love UK basketball (football should have been added as well) and I am, as charged, a "U.K. partisan." But more than that, I had the opportunity to go to the Prestonsburg Community College campus prior to voting on this bill to meet and speak with students. I learned firsthand how much the association with UK and its name on their diplomas meant to them.

It was overwhelming to hear nearly every young person repeat, not only in Prestonsburg but all across the state, what amounted to an emotional plea to their governor and the members of the General Assembly to assure that the diplomas which they sought carry the respect and prestige of UK. It was after this experience that I realized the real value they placed upon the name and I vowed to fight as long and as hard as I could to keep that right for them. I gave them my word and I intend to keep it.

by teachers. This more skillful kind of writing favored by Stephen Covey and others is stressed in Kentucky schools through writing portfolios and the tests that measure real student writing. Kentucky students actually write; they don't just fill in bubbles with a No. 2 pencil. It's a common sense approach.

That's why the Kentucky Council of Teachers of English/Language Arts so strongly endorses Kentucky's writing portfolio. They report that "educators from all over the world have praised Kentucky's writing program."

Of course, what happened to me as a student still happens. Too many parents and teachers aren't yet convinced of the importance of clear writing. A professor at Harvard law school told me she is appalled that her students' writing is so bad. Her students are all college graduates, mind you, tops in the nation. Her law school offers six remedial courses that teach future lawyers to write.

Most people in paying jobs or volunteer work learn quickly and often painfully how important good writing is. There's nothing that so focuses a writer's concentration as knowing that other people, such as a boss or some stranger, will actually read what he or she writes.

In the real world, people write for results: to explain, persuade, convince, stir the emotions, make something happen. In the real world, writing has a purpose, although it can be fun, too. How well you write can tell people a lot about what else you can do.

Employers know this well. Unfortunately, many students never know they're poor writers. If they use poor writing when applying for a job, their application or letter is probably thrown away, and they never know why.

That's why Stephen Covey, first-rate law schools and colleges, and Kentucky schools are so serious about writing. It is fundamental. It separates people with a good education from those with a poor one. It is an extension of a person's thinking.

The lack of writing skills holds people back from full participation in their society and economy. That's why writing is pushed so hard and why the portfolios are so important. You learn to write by writing. Doing that in school would have saved me and lots of others educated in Kentucky schools a lot of grief years later.

News of the Weird

by Chuck Shepherd

— Clinton-Gingrich Position Rejected: In August, a Virginia Circuit Court, ruling in the divorce case of Glaze v. Glaze, said that "sexual intercourse" was not a legal requirement for having "sexual relations." However, the court did rule that sexual intercourse was necessary for the ground of "adultery," and since Mrs. Glaze was alleged only to have had sexual relations with a woman, Mr. Glaze had to sue for something other than "adultery."

— Latest Jesus Sightings: Hundreds of people began arriving in the town of Bras D'Or, Nova Scotia, in September, when residents spotted a likeness of Jesus Christ on an outside wall of the Tim Horton's donut shop. The clearest image is said to be under the floodlights of a nearby chicken restaurant, called the Lick-a-Chick. And in Rio de Janeiro, designer Patrizia D'Angello and boutique owner David Azulay made plans to introduce men's swim trunks, modestly cut by Rio's beach standards, that feature a picture of Jesus on the seat.

— In September, Customs officials at Port Hueneme, Calif., went into a tizzy when a fully operational (except for the warhead), 20-ton, 186-mile-range Scud missile was off-loaded from a British vessel, destined for a local address. Said a Customs agent, "All you needed to do was strap on a garbage can full of C-4 (explosive), and you had a weapon. After an investigation, customs officials said the buyer was not a terrorist but just a collector and that the British seller had merely failed to disable the missile as required by U.S. law.

Obsessions

— In July, the Los Angeles Times profiled Dan Taylor, 58-year-old retired entrepreneur in Hardeeville, S.C., who is close to finishing the $1 million, 40-foot-long submarine he will take next June to Scotland in order to hunt the Loch Ness monster, which he says he first encountered 30 years ago but in a flimsier submarine that couldn't keep up with the critter. According to his wife, almost all of Taylor's waking hours in the last three years have been spent thinking about "Nessie."

— A July profile of paralegal Michael Levin, 57, of Santa Monica, Calif., in Los Angeles's weekly Westside News focuses on his 30-year fixation with clipping and saving, and cataloging and cross-indexing, thousands of newspaper articles that for some reason drew his attention. His clippings fill three 5-foot-high file cabinets. "What strikes me," he said, "is the zany, the quirky, or a magnum opus of a piece in the newspaper, such as a solid overview of Albania."

— Much of the homes of John Livingston of Cleburne, Texas, and Gayle Brennan and Mike Drysdale in Duarte, Calif., have been taken over as shrines to their personal icons: baseball pitcher Nolan Ryan (Livingston) and Garfield the cat (Brennan and Drydale). Livingston's most prized possession among several hundred items is a 1991 chest X-ray of Ryan. Brennan and Drydale have 3,000 Garfield items, including 20 pairs of Garfield bedroom slippers, and plan to move to a bigger house so they can display everything.

— A September New York Times story described some of the hundreds of people who are so taken with the Broadway show "Jekyll and Hyde" that they have seen it dozens of times (in one case, 100), at prices of $20 to $75, and refer to themselves as Jekkees since their obsession resembles that of hard-core "Star Trek" fans. Said one Jekkie, "Instead of going to a therapist, we talk to each other about it, since others truly don't understand."

First Things First

According to a July New York Times report on adventurers needing assistance, a man who had sent an SOS refused to be airlifted out by an Alaska Air National Guard rescue team because the team had too much of a federal government presence. He relented later that day when the team added two state troopers and returned. And at a recent state visit to Australia, China's premier-in-waiting, Zhu Rongji held up a procession by lingering in the rest room. When apprehensive guards broke in, they found that Zhu, an engineer, had disassembled the fancy, two-button, dual-flush toilet and was studying it. Said Zhu, "We must introduce this to China."

Who You Know Isn't Everything

Daniel Sneed, 22, spent a week in Los Angeles County jails in June when prosecutors in the city of La Mirada erred in charging him with having ignored a $100 loitering fine from 1996. After several days, Sneed's bank produced the canceled checks, but even then he was not released until the next day. Apparently useless in overcoming these errors and red tape was Sneed's father, who is a police lieutenant in Compton, Calif.

Still More Rages

Tweety Bird Rage: In Pleasanton, Calif., in July, after two men brawled over which one deserved the last stuffed toy bird prize at the Alameda County Fair, one of them pulled out a handgun and started firing wildly, wounding eight people.

Recurring Themes

When Pigs Fly: In Corbeil, Canada, in August, Lucette St. Louis, 66, suffered a broken leg and other injuries when a 180-pound pig, owned by her son, came flying through the air and hit her broadside. It had been knocked airborne by a passing car.

Recent Fools 4 Love

— Morton, Ill., June: Two days after he thought he had died from the hatchet his wife had slammed into the back of his neck, Thomas Deas, 53, told reporters, "I still love her. I'd have her back in a minute." And St. Louis, April: Andrea Caldwell Murray begged a judge not to jail Bobby Murray for shooting her in the head last year, sending her into a coma and killing her fetus; said Andrea, "I don't want to lose my Bobby." (Between the shooting and the sentencing, Andrea had married Bobby and is now pregnant with their child.)

Least Competent Criminal

Christopher Grant, 21, was arrested in Danville, Ill., in September and charged with a series of burglaries. Officers had stopped Grant's car as resembling one used by a burglar, but their optimism increased when they saw that the inside of the car was littered with gum balls. A gum ball machine had been stolen earlier that day.

The Ever-Dangerous Pulpit

In September, according to police in Trotwood, Ohio, Rev. Andrew Lofton was shot to death just as he was explaining the Book of Revelation to Bible students by a parishioner who had frequently quarreled with Lofton over Biblical interpretations. And in Jacksonville, Fla., nine days later, Rev. Melvyn Nurse, 35, accidentally killed himself by firing a defective round of blank ammunition at his head while demonstrating for parishioners that committing certain sins was the equivalent of playing Russian roulette.

Smile Awhile

BY SARA HOPSON

South Of The Border

Part 1

Never having been to Seattle, I can't dispute Dean Martin's lyrics, but to me the bluest skies I ever saw were in the Grand Cayman Islands. Flying in on a wing and a prayer, we landed in an island paradise that was nothing short of Fantasy Island.

"We're going to have to go through customs, Sara," Cinder said.

"Are they going to frisk me?" I asked.

"Sure," Dan laughed.

"Absolutely not," Cinder said.

"Shoot!" I exclaimed. "What are they going to do?"

"Just give them that pink slip they gave you before you got off the plane."

The next thing I remember, we were driving on the wrong side of the road.

"Dan!" I screamed as we rounded a curve on the left hand side. "You're going to get us killed!"

Dan swerved to the right, then back to the left as an oncoming car approached us.

"Sara, this is a British Colony," Dan stated agitatedly. "If you don't stop hollering, you're the one that's going to get us killed."

"This is the 'Get In' lane, Dan," Cinder said, as she pointed in the right direction. "Dan, you're not getting in."

"Get in lane? Whatever happened to MERGE," I said.

"GIVE WAY, Dan," Cinder stated quickly.

They were making me so nervous I'd have rather GOTTEN OUT, but seeing how I was a guest, I closed my eyes and fastened my seatbelt. When we arrived at the condo, I was mesmerized by the sight of the ocean front view.

"This is great!" I shouted, as I climbed into bed.

"Sara, we are going to get on our swimsuits and head for the beach," Cinder said as she greased herself down in sun tan lotion.

"I thought you said this was a vacation," I said as I pulled the covers up over my head.

"You can't be sleeping with all this gorgeous weather," Dan sputtered.

"I'm just going to take a short nap."

When I awoke the next morning, Cinder, Dan, and Devon were by the pool, gazing wistfully out at the ocean.

"Your coffee's on," Cinder said as she pushed down her sunglasses and glanced at her watch. "Of course, it's almost dinner."

"What time is it?" I asked.

"Eleven-thirty," Devon answered.

I couldn't believe it. I had been on the island for one night and half a day and all I'd seen was the bedroom! I thought I'd better get to work on my tan before people accused me of not going anywhere. I slathered myself in lotion and ran out onto the beach with Devon. When we returned an hour later, I felt like a beachcomber.

"Didn't you put suntan lotion on?" Cinder asked.

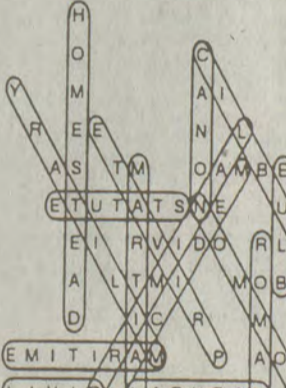

"Sure did. Why?"

(Stay tuned next week when Devon says, "Sara, have you ever heard of sun poisoning?")

Generations of a memorable house

Dan and Kate Harman, who bought what was then known as the Fitzpatrick- Spradlin House, sit in a swing on the original porch in the early part of the century.

Soon the home of the late Chalmer Frazier and his widow, Kathryn, will be gone, captured only in memory and photograph, given up for a parking lot.

Entered into the National Register of Historic Places in 1989, the house is believed to have been built in 1890. When it was being reviewed for inclusion in the registry, it was characterized by a member of the Kentucky Heritage Council as "best representing the formative era in the city's development."

The builder is believed to have been H.H. Fitzpatrick, who sold the house, or at least a share in it, to James Spradlin in 1898. It was purchased by Dan and Kate Harman in 1904 for $1,500, and their heirs have lived in it ever since.

Harman was a teacher and principal at Prestonsburg Grade School and was also a lawyer and judge. Kate Harman was an accomplished seamstress who made the family's apparel.

Their daughter Anna Stumbo, known by most people well into her 90s as "Baby Annie," inherited the house and lived there with her daughter, Kathryn Frazier, whose daughter and granddaughter eventually lived there.

In the early years, Kate Harman rented out rooms to members of grand juries who lived out of town and had to stay over. Anna Stumbo once told a reporter that her mother charged roomers 30 cents for a meal.

Kathryn Frazier once had a gift shop in the rounded room at the side of the house.

The photos shown here of the house at different times over the century were furnished by one of the Frazier daughters, Kay Anne Wilborn of Lexington.

Lena Porter, left, and Anna Harman Stumbo pose in front of the historic house around 1911 in the house's youth.

In the early 1920s, Kathryn Stumbo, front, her mother (in white) and an unknown woman stand in front of the newly bricked porch.

A man believed to be Dan Harman, leans on the porch for this picture which reveals other details of the structure, ca. 1910.

Kay Anne Frazier Wilborn, left, and Elizabeth Frazier are finely decked out in this picture from the 1950s, before the '57 flood which damaged the brick porch and resulted in its replacement by a wooden porch, like the original, but without the upstairs.

Kathryn Stumbo, later Frazier, pushes her baby stroller on Court Street in 1918.

This photo, with a couple whose names were not recorded, shows part of the upper porch which originally ran across the front of the house's second floor.

THE GOSPEL ACCORDING TO ME

God still heals people today

Recently my dad has suffered through a trying illness.

At 68, he's battled diabetes for 35 years, but always has fared surprisingly well.

Then a few months ago his sight started fading fast. Blindness is a common complication of diabetes. His physician sent him for a series of laser treatments. When that didn't help Dad's right eye, a surgeon put it under the knife.

Dad was supposed to recover within days, but a month later he's still struggling.

Weeks after the operation his eye ached constantly, as if a cinder was lodged in it.

In addition, he proved allergic to several of the medications prescribed for him - and his body reacted so severely that one night he thought he was dying.

Worst of all, for his eye to mend properly Dad had to keep his head facing the floor at all times. For weeks he slept face-down. During the days he lay on his stomach or sat humped over. That caused severe muscle spasms.

And he still can't see much better than before.

All this has led me to consider yet again the complex subject of divine healing. My father and I both know that God still cures people miraculously.

In 1976 he was diagnosed with cancer that already had spread through his bone marrow, had formed a tumor in one kidney and a visible lump on his skull. Doctors gave him months to live.

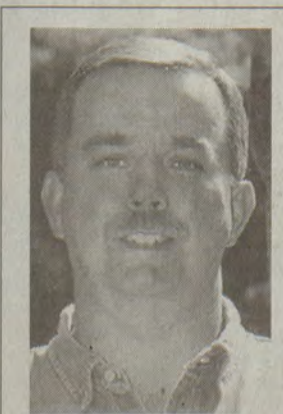

After prayer, he was instantly healed. He's never had a recurrence.

Since then, we've seen many other people similarly healed.

Kenny, a friend of mine, had suffered years from a bad disk in his back. He'd tried everything except surgery. His doctor said that was his last hope.

But Kenny, who had just become a Christian, asked our church to pray for him instead. That was about 10 years ago, and he's never missed another day's work with back problems. And this is a guy who builds houses.

Paul Prather

Yet the plain fact is that most sick people - even devout churchgoers - don't experience such wonders. Those who have been divinely healed in the past, such as my dad, usually don't receive miracles for every illness.

It's difficult to understand. I've been in this thing, this walk of faith, a long time.

I've encountered people who thought they knew all the answers - and they were all wrong. Mainly such "experts" fall into two camps: those who say God won't heal anyone today, and those who say He's duty bound to heal everyone who asks Him.

The truth lies somewhere between. I don't know exactly where.

I will offer one minor observation, for what it's worth.

Enjoying good health - and recovering when illness does strike - is an interrelated process. It requires our effort, and God's. It calls for both medicine and faith.

Every human is made up of three dimensions: a body, a mind and a spirit.

We tend to think of healing as taking place only in the body.

But our minds play a significant role as well.

For instance, a Dr. Herbert Benson of Harvard Medical School noted in a recent Reader's Digest article that 60 to 90 percent of doctor visits are for stress-related illnesses such as high blood pressure, insomnia and heart disease.

Benson said the relaxed state of mind brought on by regular prayer or meditation has been proven to reduce stress hormones, slow the heart and lower blood pressure, without medication.

Thus soothing your mind will heal many ailments.

Then there's the spiritual dimension, which overlaps with the mental but reaches beyond mere positive-thinking.

The same Reader's Digest article cites several scientific reports that have shown people of faith to be, in general, notably healthier than the non-religious.

One, a Dartmouth Medical School study of patients undergoing heart surgery, found that within six months after their operations 21 patients in the study died - "but there were no deaths among the 37 people who said they were 'deeply religious.'"

Those 37 religious folks might have been helped by positive thinking, but I'd wager something else was going on, too. One of those God things.

So, if you want to live a long while you should maintain your body, reprogram your mind - and ask God to add His touch.

In Memory

October 24, 1922 - August 4, 1997

"You Momma"

It was you, Momma, who always seemed to know
The right words to say to me, the right way to show,
That you loved me - loved me so.
When I hurt my finger, when I stumped me toe
No one had to tell me where to go,
I went to you, Momma.
When you kissed the hurt away with love in your eyes,
Even then, I began to realize,
No one can understand, like you did then
Only you Momma, My Mother and My Friend.
I remember when you used to say,
"Now some day, you'll have children of your own.
You'll keep the light, late at night
Waiting for them all to get home."
Mom, you know why, I had to cry
When from us you had to part,
Even though I weep, I always keep
Memories of you in my heart.
I know you grew tired, working so hard,
To make our house a home,
Thoughts of your love, and God above
Will help me carry on.
When my race is run, at set of sun,
And I reach that land so free,
Many are there, but especially one-I'll be so glad to see
You Momma - Look for me.
Written by Br. Gordon Fitch, September 12, 1998

Happy Birthday "Mom"

We love you and miss you so much, Cathy, Yutanna and Dad

In Memory of EFFERT HALL

June 25, 1914 - October 23, 1997

Dear Papaw,

It's hard to believe one year has passed
Since God called out your name.
Heaven gained a saint that day
But our lives are not the same.

As our newest "guardian angel"
If you cannot find your way
Just go back and get my Daddy
He makes the trip most every day.

Now Papaw, would you fly down low
Upon those wings of gold.
And send some comfort here to Mamaw—
Her precious hand to hold.

May your voice be that still whisper
That she hears when things aren't right.
Saying "God has sent a comforter—
I'll see you through the night."

Oceans cannot hold the tears
That Mamaw cries for you.
Even death - it cannot separate
The love she holds so true.

And would you watch over your dear children
And all your grandkids too,
Remind us to keep on smiling -
That's what you'd like for us to do.

And tell us, "children if you want to see
Your Papaw once again -
Place all your faith in Jesus Christ
He'll take away your sins."

Help us remember that a little man
Can have the biggest heart of all.
It isn't really what you have -
It's who you are that makes you tall.
Remind us to love others first
To lend that helping hand.
Perhaps it was your humbleness
That made you the greatest man.

Now Papaw, we all love you
And miss you more than words can say.
It shall be your precious memories
That get us through the roughest days.

We know you'll never really leave us
That you're just a breath away.
You've gone home to claim that mansion
For us all to share some day.

Love,
your granddaughter Sabrina

Sadly missed by Della, Linda, Bill, Lonnie, Sissy, Sheila, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, family and friends.

Official trick-or-treat night in Salyersville set October 30

Mayor Joe Howard has announced that the official trick-or-treat night this Halloween season in Salyersville has been set for Friday, October 30.

Widow to stepdaughter Faye Chamberlin responds

Faye Chamberlin, whose husband Fred Chamberlin was murdered this year, responded to her stepdaughter's accusations that Chamberlin's funeral happened "too fast."

Faye Chamberlin said her stepdaughter was contacted just a few hours after Fred Chamberlin's death. She also made accusations that her stepdaughter had mistreated Chamberlin and had lost contact with him.

Faye Chamberlin added that she "could use all the help" she could get in solving Chamberlin's murder. — The Mountain Citizen

Absentee ballots questioned

Martin County Chief Deputy Pete Fitzpatrick has put in motion an investigation into absentee ballots for the upcoming November 3 general election.

However, the investigation could be quashed by the State Board of Elections if Attorney General Ben Chandler determines it to be a conflict of interest, since

Controversy rises over free sewer tap fees

As construction on a sewer project to serve the Point section of Lawrence County is ready to begin, a controversy over residents who received free tap fees rose during Friday's meeting of the Lawrence County Fiscal Court.

Point resident Colleen Stone presented a list of 107 people who qualified for free taps, and argued that several of them should not have met the income guidelines.

The residents were also concerned that they will be billed for sewer fees before their hook-ups are in place.

The fiscal court later passed an ordinance making the sewer rates effective November 1. No sewer fees will be charged until the Point section residents have a sewer in place. — The Big Sandy News

Fiscal court votes to buy vehicles

The Morgan Fiscal Court at its monthly meeting last week accepted the bid of Harper's Excavating of Wrigley to clear a large, destructive logjam from the river channel in front of the MSU-Extended Campus Center in West Liberty.

Six bids were received for the project, which will be financed with a $200,000 PRIDE Program grant awarded the Morgan Fiscal Court. The work will include the removal of the drift as well as other obstructions and debris that clog the river from Old Mill Park to Elk Fork. — Licking Valley Courier

River cleanup set, but long range task will be daunting, study shows

The Licking River from its headwaters to Cave Run Lake is in trouble — clogged with logjams, drifts, fallen trees, sediment, trash and debris. At normal summer water levels it is virtually impassable even to johnboats for most of that distance.

The Commonwealth recommended a sentence of 10 years imprisonment. Judge John Robert Morgan has set the final sentencing in this case for November 2 at 10 a.m. — Troublesome Creek Times

Letcher woman indicted in daughter's death

A Roxana woman has been indicted on murder charges by a Letcher County grand jury in connection with the death of her infant daughter in July. Police said Delania Fields, 37, of Roxana, allegedly placed the newborn in a garbage bag and put it in a closet. Authorities learned of the baby's birth after Fields went to a hospital for treatment. An autopsy revealed the Fitzpatrick approached County Clerk Carol Sue Mills Monday afternoon and informed her office that he was conducting an investigation into absentee ballots and requested to see the absentee supplemental precinct roster sheets.

As of Monday, a total of 238 absentee ballot applications had been registered and Fitzpatrick was allowed the view the lists.

The clerk's office, which was caught unaware and wanted to ensure the legality of Fitzpatrick's request, contacted Sarah Ball of the State Board of Elections late Monday afternoon to get a ruling. — The Mountain Citizen

Trouble at homecoming

Grant will help preserve records

The Lawrence County Court Clerk's office received the first installment of a grant last week to help restore some of the county's older records.

Lawrence County Clerk Gallie Isaac Jr., said in the first phase of the project, the county received $9,000, and will receive an additional $1,095 in December.

Also, the last installment for $10,640 will come in May 1999.

The purpose the grant money is to rebind and preserve some of the old records such as marriage license. A process to de-acidify the records will be done so they are not as brittle, and they will then be placed in protective sleeves. — The Big Sandy News

Two Knott schools score low

Two groups of Knott County students, one third grade and one ninth grade, are ranked in the bottom ten schools in the state in those categories for scoring on the Comprehensive Test of Basic Skills, according to figures released this month.

The results of the national multiple choice test taken last spring put Beaver Creek Elementary third grade at eighth from the bottom at that grade level.

Cordia High School's ninth grade was listed third from last in the state in the same category. — Troublesome Creek Times

State board to act in local district's stead

The Kentucky Board of Education is now, for all intents and purposes, the Pike County Board of Education.

The local board, still at least one member shy, had to skip its regularly scheduled meeting Tuesday, which means any pressing business must now be addressed by the state board as early as next week. — Appalachian News-Express

School board named in two injury suits

The Pike County Board of Education has been targeted in two wrongful-injury lawsuits, although one of them should have named the Pikeville Independent Board of Education as a defendant.

Both suits stem from separate September 1997 incidents in which two elementary school students were injured while playing during recess.

In a suit filed last week, Dena Harmon of Kimper claims her son was injured while playing unsupervised at the Kimper Elementary playground.

The other suit, filed on behalf of Robin Slone and her son, says the incident occurred at Pikeville Elementary, a Pikeville Independent district school, but erroneously names the Pike County Board of Education as the defendant.

Both suits were filed by Prestonsburg attorney Jerry Patton. — Appalachian News-Express

Grand jury set to meet

The federal grand jury probing the circumstances surrounding the creation of the Kentucky Youth Academy was set to reconvene Wednesday with an entirely new panel.

Jury delivers manslaughter verdict after two-day trial

A Johnson County man was convicted of second degree manslaughter last week in the May shooting death of a Swamp Branch man.

A Johnson Circuit Court jury deliberated a little over an hour before returning the verdict against Jerry Michael Scott, 44, of Greenrock. The panel ruled that Scott acted wantonly when he shot William Taylor, 37, on May 30 of this year. — The Paintsville Herald

Fraleley's appeal rejected

The Kentucky Court of Appeals has rejected an appeal from a former Paintsville funeral director who was convicted in April 1997 of theft by failure to make required disposition of funds.

Johnson Circuit Judge Stephen "Nick" Frazier has ordered that Bryan Fraley, a former funeral home owner who also served a stint as Johnson County Coroner, report November 5 for imposition of a one-year sentence on the charge.

Fraleley was accused and convicted in a jury trial of accepting money from John George Reffett as prepayment for Reffett's funeral expenses and then keeping that money for his personal use. Fraley said he had returned the money to Reffett in 1992. — The Paintsville Herald

Lawsuits focus scrutiny on local surgeon

On April 17, 1995, Salyersville resident Jackie L. Risner injured his abdomen and ruptured his spleen. He underwent exploratory surgery at a Paintsville hospital. He died one year later.

On June 24, 1997, Kenneth R. Salyer of Paintsville went to the same hospital for what was diagnosed as perforated appendicitis. Salyer died seven months later.

Both men's deaths are the subject of lawsuits filed by their widows, who put the blame for their husband's "untimely deaths" at the hands of one man — Paintsville surgeon Kenneth L. Jones.

Jones' malpractice insurance carrier has sued Jones, attempting to be excused from paying any claims against the doctor. The company contends Jones lied when he applied for malpractice coverage.

The lawsuit filed by the insurance carrier is the 11th to be filed against Jones since he moved his medical practice from Baltimore to Paintsville in 1995.

Jones' medical license was suspended last July, pending a hearing in December by the Kentucky Board of Medical Licensure. — The Paintsville Herald

Even if you're not sure where you are or you're too panicked to remember, that's all right. As soon as the call is made, a computer at the emergency center in City Hall will inform the dispatcher of your location, under the enhanced city-wide program.

Although the target date for 911 to be operational was announced at the October 12 City Council meeting, officials were hesitant to promise a start date until they were sure all potential problems were resolved, according to Prestonsburg 911 coordinator Gary Dotson. They also feared prank calls on opening day that might tie up the system.

One emergency call was recorded on Wednesday, said emergency dispatcher Missy Peppi. It was called in at 2:20 p.m. by employees at the Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurant on North Lake Drive.

The callers were reporting an accident at a nearby car wash where a worker was apparently injured by a falling roof truss. Prestonsburg emergency workers were poised to respond, but neighbors, unaware that 911 was in service, had already called Respond Ambulance Service which handled the situation.

Unfortunately, the dispatchers received two calls that were unwanted. One was a hang up and the other turned out to be the result of a child playing with the phone, Peppi said.

Dotson advised that whenever anyone dials 911 for a prank or a non-emergency, that person ties up the line and slows down the response time for a true emergency. He said the Prestonsburg Police number, 886-1010, should be used for incidents that are not life-threatening.

The city coordinator and his counterpart Bill Dotson, Floyd County 911 coordinator, plan to concentrate on educating the public about the uses of 911 over the next several months.

Over the past year or so, the Prestonsburg dispatch office has been revamping for the 911 switchover. State-of-the-art equipment is in place, including a recorder that automatically records all the city's communication lines.

All of the dispatchers have been through training for the new system, and two have been trained as emergency medical dispatchers making them prepared to give limited guidance over the phone to persons involved in an emergency.

A critical part of making sure the 911 system is effective depends on having correct addresses for everyone in the city.

Although Coordinator Dotson said he has sent letters to city residents to notify them of their 911 address, he knows that not everyone is aware, particularly those who have moved recently.

Anyone who is not sure of his or her address should call Dotson at 886-0442 for verification. "As time permits," he said, "I will go door-to-door to check numbers and to see if they're posted."

If the number is incorrect, he said he will leave a notice.

Dotson said it is important for residents to post their street numbers on their houses, so that emergency personnel can readily identify them. He suggests three-inch, black and white reflective numbers which are big enough and bright enough to be seen from the street.

For those who prefer to have a decorative house number made of brass or another fashionable material, Dotson said they should also put up the reflective numbers on a mailbox or fence post.

Smith claims 18th annual DTWC title

—Fans fill ThunderRidge; title race could return—

by Randy Matheny
Contributing Writer

Freddy Smith of Knoxville, Tenn., led an impressive field of 30 late model drivers in the 100 lap Dirt Track World Championship at Prestonsburg's Thunder Ridge last Sunday afternoon and captured the world title in winning the 18th annual Dirt Track Championship.

Smith, who qualified with the fastest time of 16.72 on the 3/8-mile oval track on Saturday, was guaranteed the pole position with the second fastest time going to Jeff Smith for the outside pole position.

Jeff Smith had set the fast time in earlier qualifying, but Freddy Smith came back to blister that time and set a new track record along with the honor of starting on the pole.

In front of a packed grandstand and a hillside full of people, the 30-car starting field came to the front stretch for the 100-lap battle to the finish and laid their claim to the most prestigious and fans enjoyed a starting line-up of Skip Arr and Scott Bloomquist in the second row with Ronnie Johnson, Billy Moyer, Paul Harris, Eddie Carrier Sr., Dan Schlieper and Chub Frank in rows two through five.

Following these spectacular drivers in rows six through 15 were the equally exciting drivers of Brandon Kinzer, Mike Boland, Tony Izzo Jr., Marshall Green, Eddie Carrier Jr., Wendell Wallace, David Dixon, Jackie Boggs, Jim Curry, David Powell, Steve Barnett, Dennis Erb, Eddie Rickman, Frank Hackenast, Delmas Conley, Dale McDowell, Al Atkinson, Denny Chamberlain,

Week nine in High School Football

Prestonsburg travels to Shelby Valley; South Floyd visits Louisville Beth Haven; Betsy Layne meets Whitesburg at Yellowjackets' nest

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

With just two weeks remaining in the high school football season, it will be a rather insignificant Friday night for the four Floyd County teams. Of course, all games are significant to the players and coaches, but as far as any district race goes, that is a settled fact.

Prestonsburg has all but wrapped up second place in the district as they visit Shelby Valley in the final district game this year. Allen Central, not competing for a district title, takes the weekend off, while Betsy Layne meets Whitesburg on the road.

Coach Donnie Daniels takes his South Floyd Raiders to Louisville in a Saturday afternoon game with Beth Haven.

The lone district setback for the Blackcats came against front runner Breathitt County two weeks ago.

Shelby Valley handled Betsy Layne last weekend easily enough, but this will be a different district foe. Prestonsburg (6-2) will not be looking past the Wildcats as they close their regular season against Class A powerhouse Pikeville in two weeks.

Grant Castle was injured last Friday night and the extent of his usefulness tonight is not known at press time. Adam Hall will continue to quarterback the Cats, while John Ortega will do the many things he does so well.

It looks like Prestonsburg by a

Orange Crush crushes Rowdies, put Knights to sleep at 9-1

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

Casey Duncan was a "one-man-gang" for coach Wayne Taylor's Orange Crush soccer team last Thursday evening when he led a charge that kicked the Crushes past the Rowdies 11-2 in the Floyd County Youth Soccer league.

Duncan, who shouldered the leadership role, scored eight of his team's 11 goals. Coach Taylor said it was a big load to carry.

"With the score tied at 2, Casey had a big breakthrough game for us," he said. "He put the team on his shoulder and carried the load."

Nick McGuire scored two goals for the Crushes with Chase Brown coming up with one goal.

"The goal scorers had great support," said the Crush's coach. "They got great support from Austin May and Alanna Cline."

A LOOK AT SPORTS

Kentucky hosts Georgia; look for Cats to growl

Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

I really don't see Kentucky pulling off another stunner when they host nationally-ranked Georgia Saturday and the Bulldogs could take a bite out of a bowl bid for the Cats.

Many Kentucky football faithful (several years back there was no such thing) still contend the Cats will go bowling. But a win over Georgia would just about guarantee one.

Kentucky's upset of LSU last weekend was a shot in the arm of a program that was on resurrection ground anyway. Now if the Cats dispose of Georgia in fine fashion, the next two games look winnable against Mississippi State and Vanderbilt, both home games.

Tennessee will be tough to handle in Knoxville so the Cats conceivably could end up the regular season 8-3. Wow!

Don't look for Tim Couch to win the Heisman this year. If he doesn't, I think he will return for his senior season and command big bucks when he does go pro. I think he will take a page out of Payton Manning's play book and stay for his final year.

The basketball Cats are in practice and Tubby Smith thinks this year's group is ahead of last year when he came on as the new coach at UK.

I like Tubby Smith because he will discipline his players and more so because he is not ready to reveal his disciplinary measures to the media. That saves embarrassment to the players and I appreciate that.

While awaiting word on punishment for his off-season mischief, Ryan Hogan feels he can contribute this year to the Kentucky offense and even earn a starting spot.

This kid can shoot the basketball but seem relegated to the far end of the bench last year. Remember another player who sat down there for a long time until someone looked that way and wondered if he could play — Cameron Mills.

The Yankees over the Padres in four games. The Yanks were too much!

The last time a team got swept in four games of the Series, was when Cincinnati swept Oakland in 1990.

This year's Series brought in the lowest television ratings.

He threw out the first pitch, walked to his seat at the Series and ended up catching a foul ball. When things go well for Mark McGwire, things really go well!

DEER SEASON OPENS

After months of waiting, hunters may now take to the woods and pursue one of the South's most prized animals, the white-tailed deer.

The archery deer season is open and will run through January 15 of '99. This weekend will feature an early muzzle-

Basketball notes from around the region

• Allen Eagle, Nick Clay (6'3"), had surgery last Monday to reconstruct his left knee. The Eagle center will miss all but the final four weeks of the basketball season. Clay injured the knee early in the football season and had to sit out the last three weeks. Clay is expected to be back in uniform for the Eagles by tournament time.

• New Betsy Layne head girls' basketball coach, Cassandra Akers, has her team going at full speed. The Lady Cats will be a young ballclub with only three seniors. Amanda Hall, Leslie Hopkins and Samantha Maynard return for their senior year. Betsy Layne will be blessed with some very good young players.

• Pike County had a couple of coaching changes with Joe Marson moving from Feds Creek to Millard.

wide margin in this one.

BETSY LAYNE AT WHITESBURG

Coach Ted George can only think of how it would have been had he had a healthy ballclub. But thinking of how it could have been will not put a win on the board for the Bobcats when they visit Whitesburg, which also has had a struggle this season.

Whitesburg's running game may

In an earlier game, the Crushes handled the Knights easily, this time led by Brittany Collins. Collins kicked four goals in a 9-1 win for the Crushes. Nick McGuire had three goals while teammates Tom Brown and Maura Minix had one each.

"Brittany had a great feel for the back of the net," said Coach Taylor. "Her knowledge and passion for the game elevates the performance of the whole team."

In Floyd County for the '98-99 season, all county teams will play boys and girls doubleheaders. Remember, four years ago that was the format. But the teams were allowed to play conference games on separate nights. But now they return to the doubleheader format which will mean less junior varsity games, less playing time for the younger players and a shorter bench.

Basketball panoramas will be plenty this basketball season. Each school is allowed to participate in two and all are scheduled to be part of two. The Perry Central panorama is scheduled to start November 14 and that will be here before we know it.

Adams Middle School will hold its annual panorama on October 31 at the Adams gym. Eight games will take place on this particular Saturday, which will include three girls' games. Teams taking part include Adams, South Floyd, Allen Central, Allen, Stumbo, and Betsy Layne.

The grade school regular season begins November 5.

The Piarist School Knights will be part of the 58th District basketball scene this year as they compete for a district title for the first time. The Knights will face each of the four county schools on a home-and-home basis. Also, the Knights will compete in the Three Rivers Conference and conference tournament as well as playing in the All "A" tournament. So, Floyd County has five high school teams in the conference.

However, the Lady Knights will not compete for a district title but only play in the Three Rivers Conference. They do have South Floyd on their schedule on a home-and-home schedule.

loader season.

IN SOME DEER, DISEASE FOUND

The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources has received reports of unexplained deer deaths in several counties. Those counties include Breckinridge, Bullitt, Green, Hickman, and Metcalfe.

LOCALLY...

Adams Middle School will host their annual basketball panorama on Saturday, October 31 beginning at 10 a.m. The South Floyd and Allen Eagle boys' teams will tip off the event. In game two, Allen girls face South Floyd girls at 11 a.m.

Adams "C" team will meet Stumbo's "B" team at noon in a boys' game.

At 1 p.m. Adams faces Stumbo in a girls' contest, followed by Adams and Stumbo in a boys' varsity game at 2 p.m. In "B" team play, Adams will face Betsy Layne boys. Allen Central meets Betsy Layne in a boys' matchup at 4 p.m., with the final game at 5 p.m. pitting Allen Central girls against a good Betsy Layne team.

Each game will consist of two 10-minute halves.

Until Wednesday, good sports everyone and be good sports! Take the kids to Sunday School and church this Sunday!

be just a bit too much for the Bobcats as they still search for a quarterback. Aaron Swiger was behind center last Friday night for the first time and he gives the Cats a good option quarterback. He can run the football and has been known to complete some passes.

The move to signal caller allowed Jonathan Howell to move back to the backfield where he was much needed to run along side of Chad Bryant and Anthony Tackett.

Nick West has rejoined the team. West was injured before the season began and just made his return, but has been used solely on defense.

Coach George said he didn't want to take a chance of re-injuring the senior. Also back is defensive linebacker Bradley Brooks who had 14 tackles last week.

But it has been a season of disappointment for Betsy Layne, but with the good young players coming back things should pick up next year. But, here, it looks like Whitesburg by 14.

ALLEN CENTRAL OPEN

Coach Kevin Spurlock and the Allen Central Rebels will take the week off, but you can rest assured they will not miss the practice field. The Rebels have but one regular season game remaining. They will be looking toward the playoffs anyway when they take part in the eight-man tournament in November.

Allen Central will close its nine-game schedule on the road at Casey County, which won for the first time last weekend.

SOUTH FLOYD VISITS LOUISVILLE AREA

The South Floyd Raiders will step out of their district this Saturday and face Louisville Beth Haven, a program that has been a surprise this season.

Once an automatic "L" (loss) team, Beth Haven has put together a winning season thus far and a win over the Raiders will assure them of one.

South Floyd, playoff hopes gone, would love to finish the season at .500 but Beth Haven and Elkhorn City remain in the way of the 3-5 Raiders.

Standing on the football field and thinking of the games that got away, South Floyd played well against powers like Pikeville and Fleming-Neon. The Raiders were tied with the Panthers going into the final period but seemed to run out of gas in the fourth.

Against Neon, the Raiders were in front inside the final two minutes, only to see the game drift away. While there is no excuse-making here, the Raiders are young in key positions and look toward next season where they will be one of the top trios in the backfield in B.J. Bryant, Matt Tackett and freshman-to-be, Josh McCrae.

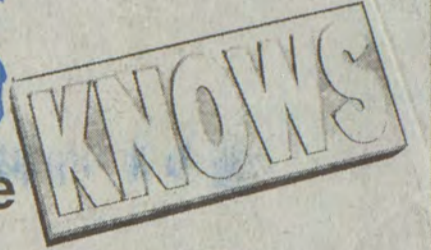

Taking care of the football is a must for the Raiders as they go to Cardinal country. If they don't, then it could be a long trip home. The defense must shine for South Floyd.

This is a close one to call, but we will stay with South Floyd.

Safe trick-or-treat theme of CWA Wrestling at Armory
by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor
Whether you love them or hate them, the CWA Wrestling stars have one common goal this Halloween and that is to see that all kids have a safe trick-or-treat time.
The upcoming wrestlers will hold Scream '98 at the Prestonsburg National Guard Armory, Saturday night. The armory is located one mile south of Prestonsburg on route 321, with three big matches on the wrestling card.

Also, the kid who comes dressed the best will take home a new bicycle from Wal-Mart. Another added incentive will be that all kids who come dressed in costumes will receive a discount at the door.
The wrestling card is sponsored by the First Tabernacle Church and the CWA.
The main event, a first blood cage match for the CWA Heavyweight championship, will feature the Night Stalker, the defending CWA heavyweight champion, against challenger Ryan "Koko Warrior" Shepherd.

Shepherd says he is from anywhere but Floyd County.
In another title bout, 6' 6" 315 pound, Apocalypse will face Johnson County's own Commando. Devastation will be banned from ringside. The bout will be for the United States Heavyweight Championship.
The third championship bout will feature Armageddon against the Thunderbolt Kid.
Advance tickets are $6 and $8 at the door. Advance tickets may be purchased at Skeans Shell Mart.
Doors will open at 6 p.m. to allow time for kids to meet the CWA Wrestling stars and get autographs. First bell time is 8 p.m.

Gridiron Tradition PART ONE History of University of Kentucky Football

From UK's first All-American, Clyde Johnson, to its most recent, Mike Pfeifer; from Professor A.M. Miller to Hall Mumme; from old Stoll Field to modern Commonwealth Stadium; from the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association to the Southeastern Conference; and with all the ensuing changes, Kentucky football holds a unique and storied tradition that began in 1881.

UK football holds a captivating list of firsts; UK was the first Southeastern Conference team to introduce football, which it did in 1881; UK played in the first and only Great Lakes bowl in 1947, defeating Villanova, 24-14; Kentucky tackle Bob Gain was awarded the 1950 Outland Trophy, making him the first player from the SEC to claim the honor; the Wildcats' Nat Northington was the first African-American player to sign with a southeastern Conference institution and the first to play in a league contest - vs. Ole Miss in 1967. And in 1989, UK became the first SEC school to win the coveted College Football Association Academic Achievement Award for highest graduation rate.

In 197 seasons, Kentucky has participated in 1025 contests and owns 504 wins, 477 losses and 44 ties. The 504 victories rank 41st among Division I-A programs in most wins. UK's overall winning percentage is .513.

Kentucky football has won two Southeastern Conference championships and appeared in eight bowls, claiming the CFA Academic Achievement Award on May 8, 1989. The Wildcats owned a graduation rate of 90 percent after 18 of 20 of their 1983 incoming freshman signees left UK with a diploma.

GAME REVIEW

"Reverse of Fortunes..."

A reverse (end-around) call to Flanker Quentin McCord with 1:05 left in the game was the difference, as the Wildcats defeated #21-ranked LSU 39-36 in Tiger Stadium. After what appeared to be another second half fold, it was "the call" that led to Seth Hanson's 33 yard game winning field goal with no time left on the clock, to go to 5-2 on the season (2-2 SEC).

"Kat" Keys to Victory:

Defense holds Kevin Faulk to 67 yards on 20 carries.

Couch 37 for 50, 391 yards, three touchdowns.

FROM LAST WEEK

WINSTON CUP SERIES

At Daytona Jeff Gordon earned his 11th victory of the season, the 40th of his career and the first ever in either October or November. So much for the notion of Gordon stroking to his third Winston Cup title. By winning, he improved his Winston Cup lead over 16th-place finisher Mark Martin to 358 points with just three races to go.

BUSCH GRAND NATIONAL

Dale Earnhardt Jr. padded his point lead with a victory in Madison, Ill., near St. Louis. Bad luck ended a memorable battle between Earnhardt and Buckshot Jones, who had an oil line come loose on his Pontiac near the end.

CRAFTSMAN TRUCK SERIES

Dennis Setzer drove a Dodge to victory at Mesa Marin (Calif.) Raceway, passing Mike Bliss' Ford with 11 laps to go. Jack Sprague improved his point lead to 28 points over Ron Hornaday with a second-place finish. Stacy Compton was third and Hornaday fourth.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

Mike Skinner vs. Darrell Waltrip

When he got sent from fourth to 11th in the Daytona draft, Skinner radioed his crew that the lapped Pontiac of Waltrip caused him to get out of line: "If he'd have just gotten out of the way, I'd still be up front."

NASCAR This Week writer Monte Dutton gives his opinion: "For what it's worth, I thought Waltrip was out of the way. Skinner had a strong car, and the rest of the leaders were just lying in wait for one wrong move."

FROM THE ARCHIVES:

The rich history of NASCAR
When Bobby Hamilton drove Richard Petty's Pontiac into victory lane at Phoenix two years ago, it marked the first victory for Petty since he won his 200th race at Daytona on July 4, 1984. The race was also a notable achievement for the injured Terry Labonte, who had broken his wrist in a practice crash. He finished fifth en route to the Winston Cup championship.

NASCAR This Week
DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Jimmy Spencer, who won the Pepsi 400 four years ago, and Richard Petty, who counts three wins in this race among his 10 at Daytona International Speedway, offer differing views on the current status of racing on NASCAR's most famous layout.
"A lot of people don't like restrictor plates," noted Spencer, referring to the carburetor attachments that have been used to slow the cars at Daytona and Talladega for the past 11 seasons. "I don't like them, but the thing about the restrictor plates, they make great races, and we need great races. We need the restrictor plates to keep the speeds down and keep the fans happy. You've got to admit, we've had some boring races this year."

Petty, who won 200 races before retiring in 1992, minced no words when asked about the plates.
"I never was a restrictor-plate advocate," he said. "I always thought it was a race. Let's go wide-open. You get 40 people who all of a sudden become good race-car drivers because they got good cars. As far as a person with the talent, I don't

PROFILE

Dave Marcis

By Monte Dutton
NASCAR This Week

Dave Marcis is perhaps the only holdout — and certainly the most notable — in a long tradition of struggling independents. He hasn't won a race since 1982, yet still he keeps coming to the track, doing his best to be competitive.

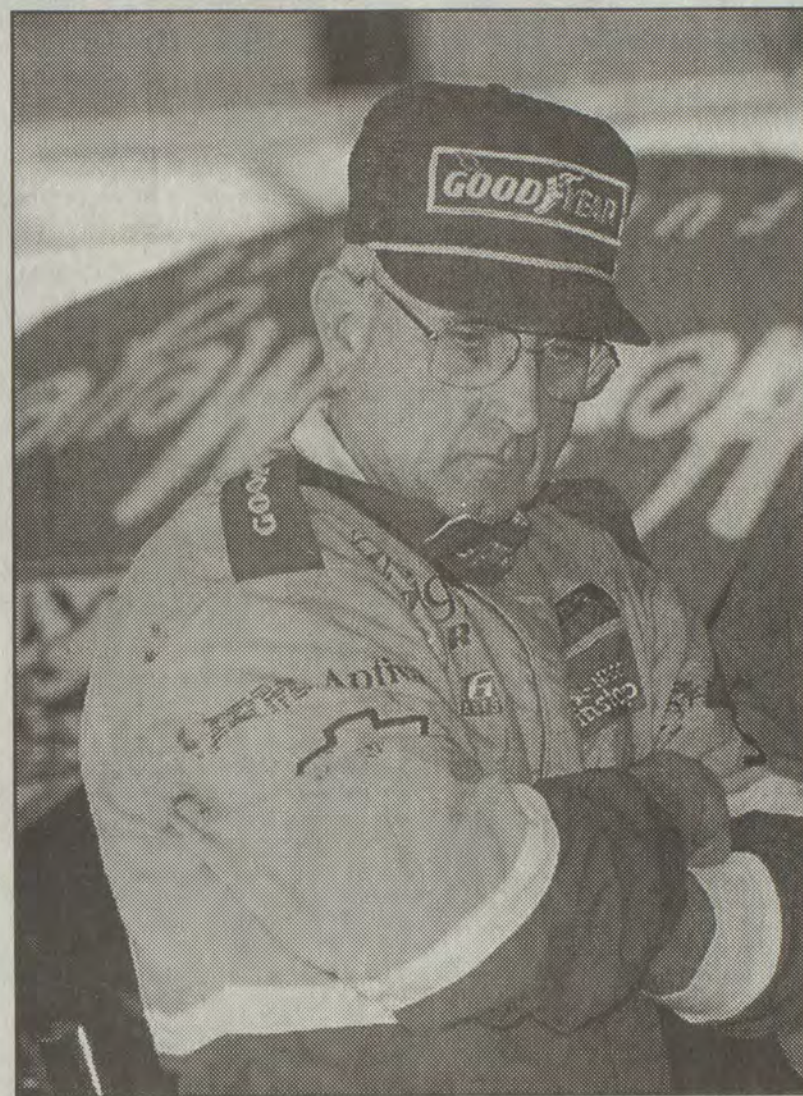

While Marcis rarely runs at the front anymore, he is widely beloved by NASCAR fans who respect his perseverance and determination to succeed against incredible odds.

AGE: 57
WIFE: Helen
CHILDREN: Shawn Marie (28), Richard (26).
HOMETOWN: Born and raised in Wausau, Wis., lives in Avery's Creek, N.C.
CAR: No. 71 Realtree Chevrolet Monte Carlo, which he owns.

CAREER RECORD: 724 starts, 12 poles, 5 wins, 75 top fives, 180 top 10s, nearly $6 million in earnings.
FIRSTS: Start (Feb. 20, 1968, at Daytona), pole (March 7, 1971, at Richmond), win (Sept. 28, 1975, at Martinsville).

HOW DID YOU GET INTO RACING? "Basically, it all began in Wausau, Wis., on just a little short track there. I decided if I wanted to get into racing for a living, needed to come down to NASCAR. Racing was pretty seasonal back in Wisconsin, and there were only about three months per year that we could really race. I've seen so many things change in NASCAR over the years in the growth of it. It's growing so fast, so big, I don't think any of us realized it could get so big."

WHAT'S IN YOUR FUTURE? "My plans are, for 1999, to run in the Winston Cup Series again. I think we'll have an announcement real shortly that Realtree will be with us again. We are a small team, but I really enjoy the sport. It's been my whole life. I'd like to be a team owner one day, but I can't afford to put anyone else in the car right now. My plan right now is to spend another year as a driver. I would like to be in the Daytona 500 in the year 2000. Then I'd make a decision about putting someone else in the car."

WHAT KEEPS YOU GOING? "I don't know. I've been racing since I was 16 years old. I love to drive the race car. There are days when you say, I'm not competitive, I'm tired of this deal, but there are days when you are pretty competitive. I've got five Winston Cup wins and 14 pole positions. I've had a good career. There are a lot of guys with good teams, plenty of money and lots of people, and they don't have any wins. There is a tremendous amount of freedom also in being your own boss. I love it. It's been my life. I'm really proud of being able to hang in there as an independent, one of the little guys. I've never had to lay anyone off. I've been able to pay for things as I go along. I sent both of our children through college. Helen and I are proud of that. I've got a good name in the sport. I've got a good reputation, always kept my nose clean in that respect."

YOUR TURN

Letters From Our Readers

Dear NASCAR This Week,
I am a big fan of Jeff Gordon, and at a race, I saw his gasman wearing a helmet, and I also saw some other gasmen with helmets. Why?
Andrew Ogilvie
Crestview, Fla.

Dear Andrew,
Being a gasman is dangerous because of the possibility of fire. Helmets afford facial protection. Gasmen also wear fire-retardant suits.

Dear NASCAR This Week,
I keep seeing the letters "MBNA" on signs and as sponsors of events, even on car No. 22 belonging to Ward Burton. Would you please tell me what the initials stand for?
A.W. Enfield
Port Charlotte, Fla.

Dear A.W.,
MBNA stands for "Merchants Bank of North America." And the No. 22, driven by Ward Burton, is owned by Bill Davis.

CREW OF THE WEEK

■ Jeff Gordon put an October-November jinx behind him, taking advantage of the typically fine work by crew chief Ray Evernham and the Rainbow Warriors with a Pepsi 400 victory. Gordon has won a career-high 11 races this season.

AROUND THE GARAGE

Spencer, Petty have different views on restrictor plates think they can show it. He's got a better chance at 215 (mph, the speed at which racing would take place without the plates) than what he does right now.

"They (NASCAR) did it for safety and all they did is cause more trouble. It's sort of like going out on the interstate and watching 40 cars go by. You get out of line and 15 people pass you, and that's not racing, that's running. I always hated to work and work and pass somebody, and a couple of guys work together and go right back by you."
FUTURE PLANS: Larry McReynolds has committed to one more year with Skinner and Richard Childress Racing. After that, the veteran crew chief is planning to go in business for himself.

"You never say never, but Larry McReynolds' plans are no secret to anybody," said McReynolds. "Larry McReynolds' plans are to give this team every ounce of energy and focus I can give it for four more races this year and 30-plus next year. Larry McReynolds, along with John Dangler, is working very feverishly, with John doing 90 percent of the work right now. This is where his work kicks in."

Us

by: Derika Moore

We're not all that different
We're really just alike
We have the same friends
And we go out at night

We share the same thoughts and feelings
As other kids do
The only difference is the name of our school

We sit with you on the bus
And talk to you on the phone
So we're really not that different
Not that different at all

Can't you see things the way we do
Can you understand why
Can't you make our lives better
Or would you rather not try

We know each others doubts and fears
We stick by each other through all the Happiness and tears

I just wanted you to see
That we're really not as different
As you make us out to be Struggles

by Victor Castro

The struggle of being a full time student and a full time employee is something that I face every day. The obstacles that I face daily sometimes seem overwhelming. It may seem hard to leave school and to be at work at 4:00 p.m. and get off at 11:00 p.m., but for me at times it is almost unworkable. Remember, that I have to get to school on time and stay awake while I am there. I really try because if I sleep, then my teachers get upset with me. There is nothing worse than an upset teacher! if I overcome my struggle with exhaustion, then I do very well, if I have to say so myself.

On the other hand, at work I really hustle to do a good job. I have no problem with staying awake because I know if I am going to eat then I must work. The problem is that I am a jack of all trades and I have to close the whole back of the restaurant. That means I have to clean the kitchen and the dishpit. Depending on how many customers that we have, this can turn into a long night.

I have trouble winding down once I get home. so, it usually takes about two hours for me to get to sleep. That is when the trouble begins for me. After a restless night, I try so hard to get up on time, but never can. Finally, I get to school every day but the teachers always wonder why I am so late. The school now has truant officers who are really good at their jobs. Need I say more!

I know that I am late but I am there, i know the importance of an education and having a job. The real trick is to be able to balance them for a few more months until I graduate.

Learning can be fun

School can be fun and exiting. Yes, you read it correctly—fun and exciting. That is the feeling that students have that are involved with Poetry Alive. Yes, it is a tremendous lot of hard work, but the work pays off in the end. You have to learn to work together and learn to give and take. you find out what kind of person you really are. Believe it or not you will do things that you never thought you were capable of doing. Several claimed they would never get up in front of their peers and perform. Guess what?? They are doing just that—performing and doing a great job.

Quiltin' Time

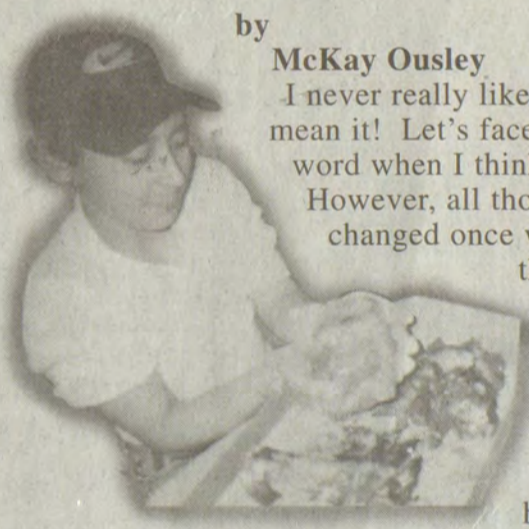

We, the students of Opportunities Unlimited, studied our culture and the history of Appalachia. We thoroughly enjoyed learning about our culture and its importance. However, the best part of the project was when we were allowed to design and stitch our own quilt pieces. After the quilt was completed, we all put our names in a drawing for the quilt. One of our seniors, William Briggs, was the winner. Congratulations, William!!!

Science, like it or not

by McKay Ousley

I never really liked science at all. I mean it! Let's face it—boring is the word when I think of science. However, all those negative feelings changed once we began studying the human heart. I loved it when we dissected pig hearts in our classroom. So cool! Who knows what the future holds—Dr. Ousley???

Sanctuary

In the last couple of weeks our science class has been learning about animal habitats, so to further our understanding we started constructing a bird community. We have researched to find out what birds exactly need to survive, such as food, water, and shelter. So, we came to the conclusion that our bird community would have to consist of a bird bath for water, bird houses for shelter, and a bird feeder for the food; this way our bird community would be a success, for sure!! How it feels to be a new student

by Sabrina Hall

To many students, the thought of going to high school is something they're excited about. To me, it's something that made me nervous. Just thinking about the subject "High School" makes me sick to my stomach.

At the end of the eighth grade, all my friends couldn't wait to be at a bigger school and to meet new people. I was scared to death, because I had always had problems all though my grade school years. I wouldn't bear the thought of going through all of that again.

I really can't stand to be in a crowded place, because it makes me feel like the more people there is the more challenges there will be. That's one of the reasons I enjoy attending Opportunities

Unlimited, few students and more attention.

I think Opportunities Unlimited is great because it is a school that teaches students basically the same things as a regular high school without having to work with a lot of other students. I don't have to worry about what the other students will think of my work.

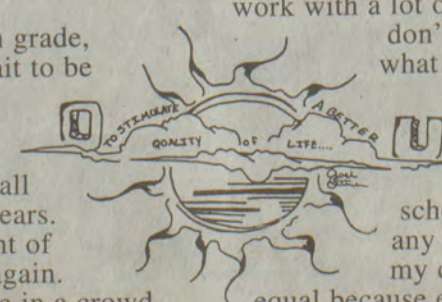

Even though there are only a small number of students at the school, I wouldn't have it any other way. I feel like my classmates and I are equal because each student has had some sort of a problem in their earlier years of school. However, we have made the decision to come together and overcome our fears of high school. I feel as if I have already made true friends that understand me and my problems. I don't feel like an outsider. That is a great feeling!!

We have the nicest staff that anyone could ever want. They will help you out in any way they possibly can. We also have a really great cook that prepares delicious meals for us every day. The staff makes me feel as if I am one of their own children.

I honestly can say that I can't wait to wake up every morning to go to MY school to learn and to see my new friends. It feels like I've been introduced to my second family.

Thanks, Opportunities Unlimited, for giving me hope that I will someday be a high school graduate, and for making me feel that after I graduate maybe there will be unlimited opportunities for me.

"Before I joined the Federal Witness Protection Program, I was a short, fat guy named Frank."

Title

Jack Boggs, Charlie Swartz. Provisional starts in the last three rows went to the highest points drivers who did not make the starting line-up through qualifying and heat races. Those drivers were Delmas Conley (STARS), Dale McDowell (HAV-A—TAMPA), Al Atkinson (UMP), and Denny Chamberlain (MACS). The last two positions went to the two most winning drivers of past DTWC races who also did not make the show through this process, making it a 30-car starting field.

The first lap saw several cars having trouble with handling in turns three and four, as two cautions appeared before a lap was completed. Minor sheet metal damage and flat tires were the only reasons for pit stops and cars rejoined the field on the tail.

As the green was waved again, drivers seemed to have the track figured out as the first lap was claimed by Freddy Smith who continued to lead for the entire 100 lap feature.

Smith did not have pressure from son Jeff for the first nine laps, and then Moyer came into the picture for his attempt at the leader, after a lap nine caution. Moyer passed the younger Smith on the restart as he dove low into turn one and had second place as lap 10 was scored. Denny Chamberlain, Scott Bloomquist and Dan Schlieper followed at this point.

The field continued without incident until a lap 22 caution in turns three and four that took out Eddie Rickman, Dennis Erb and Wendell Wallace from a spinning Ronnie Johnson.

Freddy Smith spread out his lead ahead of Moyer as Jeff Smith, Bloomquist and Schlieper continued to swap for third spot. A lap 31 caution by Skip Arp saw him head for the pit area and out of the race. This allowed Moyer another shot for one of his attempts on the leader as Schlieper was also moving up and scored in third place on the 32nd lap.

Jeff Smith and Bloomquist were trailing as Bloomquist advanced to the fourth position and had his best spot in the top-five, but dropped out after only 92 laps completed.

At the halfway mark, it was still the veteran Smith in the lead with Moyer, Schlieper, Bloomquist and Jeff Smith following for the top five.

Lapped cars separated the top three from the others as the next caution appeared on lap 52 for Jack Boggs. Boggs spun off the track, hit the turn four wall and was out of the race.

Jeff Smith spun on the restart, stopped in the infield and tacked the tail as Tony Izzo Jr. broke into the top five on the next lap scored behind Bloomquist.

The next 15 laps went without incident and saw advancement from the rear of the field as the front runners went without much change in position. Schlieper did make his move from third to second around Moyer on lap 53, as Moyer went high in turn four, and the HAT Rookie of the Year, Schlieper, made his move.

The next caution appeared on lap 77 as Chub Frank spun in turns one and two and the restart saw the top five being Smith, Schlieper, Moyer, Izzo Jr., and Bloomquist.

The final caution in the race was attributed to a right rear flat tire for Bloomquist as he went pitside on lap 92.

Schlieper started in the ninth position and knew this was the only chance he would have as the next eight laps ticked off. Freddy Smith held the lead as Schlieper was right on his tail, trying to make a pass. Smith claimed the checker flag as 100 laps were completed and Schlieper took second.

Following two car lengths behind, Moyer claimed third as Tony Izzo Jr., secured fourth and Marshall Green took fifth. Green broke into the top five after Bloomquist fell from the race on lap 92.

Sixth through 10th went to Dale McDowell, who started 26th, Eddie Carrier Sr., David Powell, started 20th, Mike Boland and Eddie Carrier Jr., who started 15th.

McDowell was honored with the Hard Charger recognition after advancing 20 spots and Charlie Swartz made an impressive advancement of 18 spots after starting on the tail, to finish 12th.

In other racing action for the 18th Annual Dirt Track World Championship, the steel block late model feature was won by Mike Benedum on Friday. He received a $1,500 payoff and a trophy spon-
