Prank turns deadly for PHS student

Chad Goodman

by Randell Reno
Staff Writer

A grisly game of chance proved fatal when a Floyd County teen accidentally shot himself Tuesday night.

Chad Goodman, 17, and another teen, 15, were apparently trying to scare a 14-year-old boy when the accident occurred, said Trooper Mike Goble of the Kentucky State Police.

Floyd County Sheriff John K. Blackburn said the boys had apparently fixed a pizza and were watching movies, when they got a gun out of a drawer and started to play with it.

Reports have said the two boys were playing "Russian Roulette," which involves spinning the barrel of a gun, then holding it to your head and pulling the trigger.

But according to Blackburn and Floyd County Coroner Roger Nelson, the two were cheating. The boys were looking into the gun and manipulating the bullet so that the gun would not fire, said Nelson.

The teens put a bullet in the .38 special and turned it a few times, trying to place the bullet where it would not fire, said Blackburn.

Nelson said the boys were trying to scare the younger boy. While the 15-year-old boy denied playing with the gun while a bullet was in it, he did admit he had put it to his head and dry-fired it, said the coroner.

Apparently the two boys placed one bullet in the gun, pulled the trigger a couple of times and then added a second bullet.

The two teens were effectively scaring their younger counterpart, but failed to realize the danger they had placed themselves in. The 14-year-old was screaming at the older teens and covering his head with a pillow, said Nelson.

After the second bullet was added, once more the barrel was placed in a position which the teens thought would prevent the gun from firing, said the sheriff. After two more clicks, Goodman put the gun to his head and pulled the trigger.

The third try, the weapon fired.

Goodman and the 15-year-old were visiting the home of attorney David Neeley. The Neeleys had apparently left to go to Prestonsburg, said Blackburn. The three boys were just horseplaying with the gun, said Goble.

"They manipulated it to a point where they accidentally got it in the wrong position," Goble explained.

The boys knew nothing about guns. "It was a bad scene," said the sheriff, who lives a mile from the Neeleys.

Because the shooting was accidental, no charges will be brought in the case.

"He basically did it to himself," Goble said "But we are not going to rule out anything."

All three of the teens involved in the incident attended Prestonsburg High School, where Goodman was a senior.

Funeral services for Goodman will be held today at 1 p.m. at the Floyd Funeral Home Chapel. Burial will follow at the Richmond Cemetery in Prestonsburg.

Deputy Shawn Roop assisted at the scene.

EPO served on W'wright official

by Randell Reno
Staff Writer

A local city government official has been served an emergency protective order.

The former wife of Wheelwright City Commissioner Donald G. "Booty" Hall has petitioned Floyd Family Court for protection.

Shannon Cordial filed a petition in Judge Julie Paxton's courtroom that said Hall had allegedly threatened to whip her and take their children. Cordial said in her statement she was afraid of Hall, that he may harm her.

An EPO against Hall would disallow him the use or possession of any type of firearm for the entire time the order is in effect. The Kentucky Domestic Violence Statutes and federal laws prohibit hunting and crossing state lines with firearms.

Much to the chagrin of Hall, Paxton granted the EPO after listening to testimony and a review.

"If I am going to err, I want to err on the side of caution," Paxton said.

With the EPO in effect, Hall was ordered to stay away from his ex-wife and her family, and to have no contact with them.

An EPO has no limitations and can be extended by the judge at any time. Hall's is for one year.

Sheriff arrests suspect in Indiana

by Randell Reno
Staff Writer

Floyd County Sheriff John K. Blackburn went the extra mile — actually several hundred of them — to make an arrest this week.

Blackburn returned home Tuesday evening after traveling 431 miles one way to retrieve an alleged deadbeat dad.

Acting on a tip, the sheriff discovered William T. Flannery working as a janitor in Warsaw, Indiana. Blackburn had an arrest warrant sworn out for Flannery and faxed it to the Kosciusko County sheriff.

The Indiana sheriff cooperated with Blackburn's request, placing Flannery in custody and holding him for extradition.

Flannery signed an agreement to waive his rights of extradition and Sheriff Blackburn headed home with the fugitive from justice.

Flannery had been wanted after being indicted on charges stemming from flagrant non-support. The payments due to his child have allegedly accumulated to $30,000 since 1994.

Group plans benefits for leukemia patient

by Willie Elliott
Staff Writer

We eastern Kentuckians can be just as competitive and cantankerous as any group of people in the nation. But when the chips are down and one of our neighbors needs help, we usually come through.

This spirit is being exhibited by a group of citizens, pulled together by Susanne Gullett, who are trying to make life for a leukemia patient a little better.

Gullett saw this endeavor to help as a way of reaching out to her good friend, Linda Hughes, the mother of Brian Hughes, a native of Price.

Brian Hughes was scheduled to have a bone marrow transplant on February 3, but now must wait until the doctors can bring his illness into remission. He is presently in the hospital at Hazard.

These concerned citizens are hosting a series of events to raise money on behalf of Hughes to help the family curb medical expenses.

The group will be holding a gospel singing on Saturday at the Allen Fire Department, which will feature such acts as Don Stanley and the Middle Creek Boys, Joanna Coleman, Gun Creek Singers, Billy Joe Mullins and Family, Oakley

City files suit over MAC sign

by Randell Reno
Staff Writer

An ongoing dispute over the Mountain Arts Center's marquee has led the city of Prestonsburg to file suit in Floyd Circuit Court against a local company.

Prestonsburg City Council members recently voted to file suit against Unisign for what the council considers poor business.

Unisign installed the marquee in front of the MAC. That sign has never worked properly, council member Estill Carter said during the council meeting.

The suit says that the city paid $105,514 for a sign that has worked sporadically since construction was completed. The city claims it has made repeated requests to Unisign asking for the sign be repaired and that Unisign has made several attempts to do so.

Additional funds were used by the city to hire outside firms to repair the sign, but the complaint alleges it still remains inadequate for the MAC.

The city is requesting from the court full restitution of its costs for the sign, its "out of pocket expenses" for repairs and court costs.

The marquee at the Mountain Arts Center has been a source of dispute since the center's opening, with managers saying it has never worked properly. The disagreement is now headed for court. (photo by Randell Reno)

Man charged in burglary, theft

A court summons was issued Wednesday for a Betsy Layne man on charges of burglary and theft.

James Dean Sellards has been summoned to appear in Floyd District Court February 2 for charges brought against him by Charles Parsons.

Sellards is alleged to have entered the home of Parsons by using an axe to beat holes into the door.

He is also accused of stealing about 80 Tylenol 3 pills and over 60 Valium tablets.

Until the case can be heard, Sellards has been directed to have no contact with Parsons or his family physically, verbally, by phone or in writing.

Matewan sold to BB&T

The national merger trend in business is hitting home once again, as one local bank has announced it is being taken over.

Matewan Bank has announced through a letter to its customers that it will merge with Branch Banking and Trust Company (BB&T) this spring.

According to BB&T's website (<http://bbandt.com>), Matewan BancShares was purchased by BB&T in the third quarter of 1999.

In a January 12 release, BB&T reported record earnings for 1999. Including nonrecurring charges, net income for the corporation in 1999 totaled $612.8 million. That was an increase of 12.8 percent over the previous year.

"Among our primary strategic objectives for 1999 was an enhanced focus on profitability, with a target of performing in the top five percent of our industry," said BB&T chairman and chief executive officer John A. Allison.

"We received recognition from three independent studies of banks during the year, each of which ranked BB&T among the

WIC nutrition program has satisfied customers

FRANKFORT. - WIC, the nation's public health nutrition program, has a high customer satisfaction rate comparable to commercial ventures like L.L. Bean and Mercedes, according to a recent survey using the American Customer Satisfaction Index. The index is used by 200 private companies in the U.S. to measure the quality of goods and services.

Vice President Al Gore and Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman made the announcement about the survey results in mid-December. WIC received an overall customer satisfaction rating of 83 — 10 points higher than the national average. WIC got 87 for the eligibility process, 85 for timeliness and adequacy of food benefits, and 83 for usefulness of information. Any score over 80 is considered high.

"WIC state, local agency and clinic staff deserve the credit for delivering our families top-notch nutrition services," said Douglas A. Greenaway, executive director of the National Association of WIC Directors.

WIC (the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children) is a national program that helps low-income families meet nutritional needs. The first WIC program in the United States began in Pineville, Bell County, in January 1974.

WIC provides supplemental foods, health care referrals and nutrition education at no cost to low-income pregnant women and new mothers, infants and children up to 5 years of age who are found to be at nutritional risk. More information about the program is available by contacting a local health department.

WIC foods include iron-fortified infant formula and cereal, iron-fortified "adult cereal," vitamin C-rich fruit juice, eggs, milk, cheese and peanut butter or dried beans and peas. These food items are high in one or more of the following: Protein, calcium, iron and vitamins A and C — the nutrients frequently lacking in the diets of the program's low-income target population. Special infant formulas may be provided when prescribed by a physician or health professional for a specified medical condition.

"The positive benefits of WIC include lower anemia rates, improved growth patterns and pregnancy outcomes," said Emma Walters, a dietitian consultant with the Kentucky WIC program. "It's had a great impact on improving the overall health of children."

WIC participation has been shown to produce healthier children and reduce medical costs. Expectant mothers who enroll in WIC have more successful pregnancies. There are fewer premature births, miscarriages and infant deaths. WIC mothers seek prenatal care earlier in pregnancy and consume more key nutrients like iron, protein and vitamin C.

Low-income 4- and 5-year-olds whose mothers participated in WIC during pregnancy have better vocabulary test scores than children whose mothers did not. Children enrolled in WIC have a lower prevalence of anemia. It has been estimated that every WIC dollar spent on pregnant women produces $1.92 to $4.21 in Medicaid savings.

Who is eligible for WIC?

Pregnant, breast-feeding or postpartum women; infants; and children up to age 5 are eligible for WIC. They must meet income guidelines, a state residency requirement, and be individually determined to be at nutritional risk by a health professional. To be eligible on the basis of income, applicants' family income must fall below 185 percent of the U.S. Poverty Income Guidelines (for example: $14,893 per year for one person, $20,073 for two, $25,253 for three, $30,433 for four, etc.).

People who receive Medicaid or food stamp benefits automatically meet the WIC income requirements.

WIC is federally funded and is administered in cooperation with the states by the Food and Nutrition Service of U.S. Department of Agriculture. The Kentucky Department for Public Health administers the program through the Division of Adult and Child Health's Nutrition Services Branch. WIC programs are operated by health departments in all 120 Kentucky counties and by two independent health agencies.

Two tax credit programs for employers extended

FRANKFORT - Two federal tax credit programs for employers who hire welfare recipients and people from other certain groups have been extended through Dec. 31, 2001.

The Work Opportunity Tax Credit (WOTC) and the Welfare-to-Work Tax Credit (W2W Tax Credit) programs offer employers an annual tax savings for each eligible hire.

Margaret Whittet, commissioner of the Department for Employment Services, which administers the programs, said the programs are designed to help individuals who have historically had the most difficulty obtaining employment. The department is an agency of the Cabinet for Workforce Development.

"The programs are beneficial to employers because they provide a significant financial incentive when employers hire welfare recipients and others who have had special problems getting and keeping a job," Whittet said. "The programs can give some people the break they need to get work."

Both programs have played a significant role in welfare reform."

The WOTC program gives employers a federal income tax credit of up to $2,400 for each eligible person hired. Among those potentially eligible for the WOTC are certain welfare recipients, food stamp and Supplemental Security Income recipients, young people living in federal empowerment zones and enterprise communities, veterans, people with disabilities and ex-felons.

The W2W Tax Credit program provides up to $8,500 federal income tax credit for each eligible hire.

Those eligible for the W2W Tax Credit program are generally persons who have been long-term welfare recipients.

The actual amounts of the tax credits for both programs are based upon wages paid and length of time the worker is employed.

Kentucky employers who want more information on how to take advantage of the program may contact Barbara Gilley, state WOTC coordinator, at (502) 564-7456. Information also is available at Department for Employment Services local offices throughout Kentucky.

Office Ergonomics: Give your eyes a break

Monitors should be chosen for features and for how well they protect the eyes.

(NAPSA)-According to current statistics, roughly 50 percent of American workers are at a computer/video display terminal (VDT) all day. As a result of their constant positioning in front of the keyboard, these workers are at risk for a technology-based condition called "computer vision syndrome."

This condition most often occurs when the viewing demand of the task exceeds the visual abilities of the VDT user. The American Optometric Association defines computer vision syndrome (CVS) as that "complex of eye and vision problems related to near work which are experienced during or related to computer use."

Symptoms of CVS can vary but mostly include eyestrain, headaches, blurred vision (distance and/or near), dry and irritated eyes, slow refocusing, neck and/or backache, light sensitivity, double vision and color distortion.

Aside from individual visual problems, the main cause of CVS can be attributed to ergonomics: poor workplace conditions and improper work habits. Fortunately, both of these factors can be easily remedied.

First off, when working at a computer, it is important to position yourself properly. Not only can this cut down on vision problems, but may also reduce the possibility of other difficulties, such as carpal tunnel syndrome or backaches. You should sit far enough away from the computer so that your outstretched fingers can barely touch the face of the monitor. The monitor should also be positioned at eye level to avoid neck strain.

Lighting should be soft and even so there is minimal glare. If your screen is regularly splashed with sunlight or another visually disturbing light source, a glare screen may help.

Another option may be installing a monitor that is designed to help reduce eye strain. Contrary to popular belief, monitors do not have to be purchased as part of a computer system "bundle," so both consumers and employers should opt for monitors that promote optimal visual health like the new flat screen VDTs.

Some of the newest and best computer monitors come from Mitsubishi, which has developed free monitor testing and eye testing software to help users protect their vision.

Mayo Moments...

by Linda Lyon

In the last year, I have sat in a lot of doctor's offices and hospital waiting rooms in Pike, Floyd and Johnson counties, waiting for family members to see doctors. There has not been a single office that I have visited that has not had at least one, and most times more, employees who received their education and training at Mayo.

Over and over, I have been touched, uplifted, encouraged and helped by medical and clerical staff trained on our campuses in Paintsville and Pikeville. These are people who are doing a great job and love what they are doing.

Here at Mayo we offer a variety of professions in the medical field.

There will be no admission to the event, but everyone who can afford it will be asked to make a love offering toward Hughes' medical expenses.

The group will be holding a bake sale and old-time auction during the meeting at the Allen Fire Department. The group is asking anyone who can donate items for this worthy cause to contact Susanne Gullett at 874-8963 for more information donating items for the benefit.

Next Saturday (January 29), a blood drive will be conducted at Dickie Tackett's dental office. Gullett reminds area residents that this is an opportunity for people to give the "gift of life."

One of Hughes' teachers and his neighbor remember the time he had two ducks for pets. When asked what their names were, Hughes said, "Quack Quack" and "Yak Yak."

The first person you probably will see upon entering a doctor's or hospital office is a medical secretary. That person has basic office skills, computer operation skills, secretarial skills, medical terminology and insurance coding skills.

Just being able to type is not good enough in an office today. She or he also may have been trained in CPR and first aid. In addition to that, there will have been on the job training specific to the job being done. This is done while a student.

We call it cooperative training. It is done under our supervision in their job setting. Many co-op jobs become permanent jobs for our students.

You may also see a clerk or receptionist. This person could have trained alongside the medical secretary for part of his/her course. He/she will have office basic skills with specific on the job training geared to the job being performed.

A patient will also see a nurse. A high percentage of the offices in this area are staffed by Mayo graduates. The nurse you see will have successfully completed a program of study at Mayo and then passed a state administered board exam for certification. Mayo trains and graduates the best. Would you expect anything less?

You may be referred to a respiratory therapist for a breathing treatment or tests of some kind. This person also was possibly trained at Mayo. Our respiratory care program is top notch. These students receive much of the same basic medical training as the nursing student with specialization in the respiratory system and the techniques and procedures for respiratory care intervention.

The new revolution in registration

(NUI) - The biggest news in the Internet industry isn't about who's suing whom in the latest antitrust law suit.

For once, there's some good news coming out of Silicon Valley that can benefit everyone from the 21-year-old Internet entrepreneur to the 60-year-old corporate executive.

Internet Domain Registrars (IDR) recently announced that you can now register Internet domain names with up to 67 characters in length. Previously, Internet domain names could not exceed 26 characters.

This is a major breakthrough for Internet companies and entrepreneurs who are finding it difficult to come up with short domain names for their businesses, or just need to add to their existing names.

Based out of San Francisco, IDR is the first domain registration service to accept longer domain names. So whether your Web site address ends with a .com, .net or .org, you can be a part of the new revolution.

Experts say this will dramatically increase Internet domain registration, especially by companies rushing to secure domain names. But they need to secure them before Internet "squatters" register and own the rights to domain names. Squatters buy up domain names they think will be in great demand and later sell them to companies for a huge profit.

Until recently, all domain registration services were provided by a government-sanctioned monopoly called Network Solutions, based in Herndon, Virginia. Then in 1998, the government decided to transition the domain name system to the private sector, making competition possible for the first time. In 1999, the Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) accredited IDR as one of the official top-level domain registrars.

IDR was instrumental in helping the government draft new policy about domain naming and bringing it into the private sector. And now that the industry is no longer government-regulated, there are very few restrictions placed on domain registration.

With more than 30,000 generic domain names being registered each day, up from 4,000 a day in 1996, you need to hurry and register your company's domain names as soon as possible before anyone else does.

To learn more about registering a domain name with up to 67 characters, contact IDR at 1-800-850-8282 or visit www.registrars.com.

Stumbo not yet satisfied, despite progress of board

The following is the second in a series of five profiles of Floyd County school board members as part of National School Boards Recognition Month.

by Willie Elliott
Staff Writer

McDowell native Carol Stumbo, a veteran teacher and director of Region 8 Service Center, has represented Floyd County School District 4 the past two years.

Stumbo said she has not always been successful but has always focused on improving the quality of the education that students are receiving in Floyd County.

"I try to bring that concern to every discussion and decision that we make as a board," Stumbo said.

Stumbo said she believes the board exists to serve students and provide them with the best education that the board is capable of, which, she said, has not always been the case in the past.

Stumbo said with help from state personnel and the leadership of the board chairman, the board has been able to correct the crisis that was confronting Floyd County.

Stumbo said the average person has no way of knowing just how bad things had gotten in the system. She said numerous lawsuits were pending against the district, teachers had been hired and assigned to schools where no jobs existed, schools couldn't order supplies or materials they needed and creditors were clamoring to be paid. Stumbo mentioned the contract with Cogenex, an energy management company, to which the present board is indebted to the tune of over $400,000 because previous boards failed to respond to a request for an arbitration hearing.

"I often left those board meetings thinking it would take us forever to get on a sound financial basis. Floyd County is now operating in the black," Stumbo said.

She then asked the rhetorical question, "Should we be proud of this?"

"I am not. While I, in no way, want to diminish what I consider to be the major accomplishment as a board or the hard work of the board members, I am too aware of how much money has been wasted and how little children have benefited from the actions of adults. We need to never let this happen again," Stumbo said.

Stumbo said the board is still divided. She acknowledged the progress the board has made the last couple of weeks, but said board members do not work together as well as they could. She said there is still the tendency for board members to think primarily of their own educational districts, rather than thinking of the county as a whole. She said sometimes "votes are traded" in order to win support for issues affecting the individual districts.

"We allow ourselves to feel pressured into voting a certain way, knowing in our hearts that it is not the best way to go," Stumbo said.

Stumbo said the board does not plan enough, which results in voting for important items that should come from recommendations from committees, such as the budget committee.

Stumbo said the board has not spent enough of its time on instructional issues and how the board can help school personnel make schools better places for students.

Stumbo said her two goals, the same goals she has had since she became a board member, are to focus on improving instruction for students and to increase the amount of parent and community involvement in schools.

To accomplish parent involvement, Stumbo encouraged parents and community members to become involved in the school system. She asks that parents and community members come to board meetings and let board members know what they think about issues.

Stumbo said her discussions with parents have led her to believe the accepted idea that parents simply don't care was not so. She said some parents have become so angry and frustrated they have given up trying.

"I believe with my whole heart that people in Floyd County want a good school system," Stumbo said.

Stumbo said in order for local schools to become excellent, the system needs the community support that has been so lacking in the past.

Does your teddy bear have the sniffles?

"There's no cure for the common cold." That old saying is hardly reassuring when your children get sick during cold and flu season.

Providing relief for your children's coughing, runny nose, sore throat and other cold symptoms is important. So is making sure a persistent cold is not something more serious like bronchitis, pneumonia or the flu. Finding the right health care may help your children - and you - breathe a little easier this winter.

Dr. Saifullah, board certified pediatrician at the Mud Creek Clinic, can help. His services are available to everyone. If you do not have insurance, Medicare or a Kentucky medical card, you may have to pay as little as 20% of the total.

So with a pediatrician like Dr. Saifullah—and a clinic like Mud Creek just down the road, there is every reason to get the health care needed by your children.

And their teddy bears, too.

Caught in the act

Notice: If you dump your trash over a hillside or along a creek in eastern Kentucky, you could be caught in the act by a hidden video camera. And your illegal deed may be broadcast throughout the world via the internet.

If so, don't look to us for sympathy. We applaud the Kentucky Cabinet for Natural Resources and Environmental Protection for displaying action shots of illegal dumping on its website.

It is just the latest effort in the cabinet's aggressive pursuit and prosecution of those who illegally trash our landscape.

That effort began soon after Gov. Paul Patton appointed James Bickford as cabinet secretary in 1995. Prior to that, enforcement of state dumping and littering laws had been primarily a local matter with limited success, often because some district judges did not treat illegal dumping as a serious offense and gave violators minimal punishment.

However, when the cabinet cites individuals for illegal dumping, the cases are handled in Frankfort and the punishment is stiffer and more consistent than often occurs in district court. Typically, those found guilty of illegal dumping by the cabinet are fined $1,000, ordered to pick up at least four tons of trash and directed to prepay for at least two years of home garbage pickup.

No wonder the cabinet has yet to cite a repeat offender. Not only is $1,000 a stiff fine, but the home garbage pickup service eliminates the need for violators to illegally dispose of their waste.

To date, the motion-activated video cameras hidden at popular dumping spots have identified 92 violators. Others have also been captured on camera, but have not been identified. The cabinet hopes posting their photographs on the internet will help identify them.

Bickford has joined U.S. Rep. Hal Rogers in the creation of PRIDE (Personal Responsibility In a Desired Environment), an aggressive campaign to clean up eastern Kentucky and, in so doing, change the image of this region as a place where residents exhibit little pride.

While state and local efforts have been successful in ridding this region of hundreds of dumps, the cabinet estimates that more than 3,200 remain throughout the state. We suspect that figure is low.

However, the 2000 General Assembly can take a giant step toward eliminating the creation of new dumps by adopting a law requiring every residence and business in the state to have their trash picked up by an approved hauler. Without that, the problem of illegal dumping will persist.

A legislative perspective

by Rep. Gregory D. Stumbo Majority floor leader

(FRANKFORT) Thus far in the 2000 session, 365 bills have been introduced in the House and 91 bills in the Senate. The rules of each chamber have been adopted by the respective chambers and the lumbering process of passing legislation has begun.

House Bill 115, was approved by Local Government Committee members. It would require schools, local governments and other bleacher owners to reduce the space between footboards and seats to no more than 4 inches by July 1, 2003. The bill would allow the installation of safety nets to avoid rebuilding the bleachers. House Bill 115 would also require the installation of railing around the bleachers. I am watching this bill closely to see that it does not place undue hardships on my local fair board and other local groups that may utilize bleacher seating.

While most bills are still receiving committee scrutiny, some bills are beginning to reach the floor of the House for a vote.

We passed legislation, House Bill 96, creating the Kentucky Tobacco Settlement Trust Corporation. This corporation will implement the national tobacco grower settlement trust agreement. The corporation is to be directed by a board of directors composed of the governor, as chair, the commissioner of agriculture as vice chair, the attorney-general as secretary, one member of the Senate appointed by the president of the Senate and one member of the House appointed by the speaker of the House, to serve as ex officio, nonvoting members. The board of directors will have seated for four years, six citizen members who are tobacco growers or tobacco quota owners and two members appointed by the governor for a term of four years from a list submitted by the state's congressional delegation.

The corporation will be expected to determine the amount of compensation that the individual farmer will receive based on their quotas.

This issue will continue to be of paramount importance throughout the 2000 session and beyond due to the extraordinary impact the distribution of the money will make to Kentuckians.

Another bill, House Bill 495, which would provide financial relief for truckers and trucking companies given excessive fines for overweight truck violations under a 1998 law, has received committee approval. House Bill 8, which I co-sponsored, passed out of the House Transportation Committee last week, would eliminate excessive fines on overweight trucks by reinstating the maximum fine of $500 for overweight truck violations that was removed in 1998. The bill would also provide refunds for any trucker or trucking firm fined under current law.

There are a variety of ways to express your opinion to a legislator or ask a question regarding these issues. To leave a message for a legislator, dial (800) 372-7181. To fax a legislator dial, (502) 564-6543. Or if an individual simply wants to obtain the status of a bill, dial (888) 701-1488. Or you can call me at home at 886-9953.

Kentucky faces an important decision

by Brereton Jones

We all know that the quality of our lives is directly impacted by the decisions we make. This is true for each of us as individuals, and it is true for us as a state. Right now as we start the new millennium, the Commonwealth of Kentucky has a golden opportunity. We must decide what to do with Kentucky's portion of the Phase I money from the tobacco litigation settlement. Our portion of this money is supposed to be nearly $3.5 billion (that's billion, not million) spread out over 25 years.

There have been few decisions in the history of this Commonwealth that have been more important than to determine how we will handle such a large amount of money. Obviously there is no shortage of ideas.

I can assure you from past experience that there are 138 legislators who will understandably feel the need to spend as much of this money as possible in a way that will directly help the people of their districts.

The first law of human nature is self preservation. It always has been and always will be. We cannot expect this to change. What we can and must expect is for all of us to get the big picture and recognize the need to invest this money in a way that will guarantee help for every person in every county of this Commonwealth for generations to come. Therefore, I propose the following:

- 1) Do not spend a single dollar of this money!
- 2) Deposit this money, as we receive it, in two interest-bearing trust funds that will yield annual dividends. Six percent interest on $3.45 billion is $207 million per year forever.

3) Designate that one of these trust funds go to health care — treatment, insurance, research and education.

4) Designate the other trust fund to go to help agriculture make the transition from tobacco to other crops, to use this as a source of funds to preserve farm land for future generations and to create good jobs for farmers in rural Kentucky.

5) Establish a health care board and an agriculture board that will be as non-political as is humanly possible. Use the Economic Development Partnership Board that was created in 1992 as a possible model approach. These boards will make the recommendations to the governor and the General Assembly as to how this money should be appropriated in each biennial budget.

6) With the establishment of these enormous trust funds, Kentucky banks should have the ability to make additional loans to Kentucky people to start Kentucky businesses, to provide jobs and income to Kentucky families. By not spending the principal, this great opportunity will last in perpetuity.

We all know the tremendous problem we have had with the skyrocketing cost of health insurance. This has caused extensive misery and suffering for many Kentuckians. At the present time, we have over 400,000 Kentuckians who have no health insurance.

Without insurance, most of these people and many others who have limited insurance get no preventive health care of any kind. When they can't pay for medical treatment, we are guaranteeing that, when they

Missing out on the fun

Seeing the snow this week caused me to reminisce on my younger years. Searching into the recesses of my mind, it was not so hard to recall playing in the snow all day long.

Judge John David Caudill and I spoke briefly together on the subject and both he and I could remember playing out in the snow until we were soaking wet. My siblings and I would play until our legs would be so cold and red we could barely move.

I walked around a few blocks in town on Tuesday and could not find a single kid outside playing. I couldn't find a single child building a snow man, making a snow angel or having a snow ball fight.

It surprised me that there were no kids out in the snow. In my teen years and much younger, we brought out the sleds with a half-inch of snow, hoping we would get to slide down even the smallest hill. And if we could, we would use the roadway.

After entering high school, the obsession of playing tackle football in the snow would make returning to school torturous. I can remember playing football with friends for so long I could barely walk up the school staircase. Times have changed indeed.

A snow like Monday's would have resulted in all-day, outside activities. We would have built a snow fort and had a snow ball war that would have lasted long after Mom's hot chocolate had cooled in our half-frozen bodies. Those were the days.

And snow is just the start of it. I know preteen children that have become such couch potatoes that they weigh more now than I did when I was 20.

I remember at age 10 that on each and every spring and summer day, I rode my bike through the streets of Middlesboro until it was dark.

In my teen years I played more basketball, softball and football than most pro players will play their entire careers. Computers and video games may have indeed made our children intelligent. But they have created a new breed of couch potato that looks very mashed.

When the glorious snow covered our yards and hills this week, the kid in me wanted to grab an inner tube or sled and speed down a steep hill.

Just last year, I had the opportunity to visit my parents just after a snow. I found a full bed air mattress, parked my two kids on it, and together we slid down a hill. Over and over we traveled the same path until it solidified into a speedy ride.

They were fearful and nervous of getting hurt. They complained about climbing back up the hill. But they admitted it was fun and they will always remember it.

I see too many people worrying about whether their grass will grow back if they allow kids to slide on it. But I remember mowing that same grassy hill my children and I rode down the following spring.

I remember skating on the highway, which effectively iced it over to trouble would-be drivers. All those times falling and bursting my bottom were fun and happy times.

I have to wonder how we will get our kids to break away from television and Nintendo. How can we get the kids to want to have this kind of fun?

Metropolitan College recruits in area

Next week, Metropolitan College and UPS will be visiting Ashland, Prestonsburg and Hazard looking for a few good men and women. This massive recruiting blitz will take place from January 25-27.

Metropolitan students from Floyd, Carter, Greenup and Pike counties will accompany the recruiters and talk with interested students about their experiences in the program.

Brinely Connor of Prestonsburg, Josh Wells of Grayson, Daniel Newsome and Brad Tackett of Pikeville, and Syerra Roberts of Ashland will talk about living in Louisville, working the night shift at UPS and attending classes through Metropolitan College.

"We want students out in the state to know there is a place for them at Metropolitan College. It's not just for kids from Louisville," said the college's executive director, Dr. Dan Ash.

"We hope that interested students will take the time to talk with us and with our student representatives and learn more about this unique program," Ash said.

Recruiters will be holding information/open house sessions in Ashland at Russell High School on January 25, in Prestonsburg at the Mountain Arts Center on January 26, and in Hazard at Perry County Central High School on January 27.

These sessions are open from 5 to 8 p.m. to interested students and parents who want to learn more about the program and begin the application process.

Interviews will be scheduled the following day at each location.

need care, it will be given to them through the emergency room of their nearest hospital, which is the most expensive way to treat them.

All too frequently, by the time they get to the emergency room, their illness has advanced to the point that it cannot be cured or it costs a great deal more to treat, or both. Since they won't be able to pay this bill, it will be shifted to those people who use the emergency rooms who can pay. This drives the cost of everyone's insurance higher and higher. Such a practice also ignores the logical need for preventive health care. If we don't invest in prevention, we waste even more money and this drives our costs up even more.

Now is the time for us to commit to a long-term plan to get health insurance for every Kentuckian. It is time to stop the cost shifting. It is time to stop playing games. If we don't commit now with the potential of $3.45 billion in Phase I money, we are in essence saying we are not serious about solving this problem.

In Kentucky we have another problem. More than any other state, we depend on tobacco to maintain our economy. According to a USDA report, 17 of the 20 most tobacco dependent U.S. counties are in Kentucky. Between 1990 and 1996, tobacco farms brought in an average of $20 million a year to Fayette County alone. In counties like Bracken and Owen, the value of leaf production accounts for over 11 percent of total personal income. Tobacco is grown in 119 of our state's 120 counties. It contributes $40,000 per acre in tax revenues (federal, state and local), 6 percent of our total employment and a local value that generally exceeds $1 million a year for over 100 counties.

The family farm that has used tobacco money as its major source of income has been an extremely important part of Kentucky's economy and culture for many decades. We must invest a significant portion of this Phase I settlement money so that we can be guaranteed of the necessary funds to pay for a very difficult transition. This is necessary not only for the farm families themselves, but for the economy of the entire state and most particularly of the rural communities.

I know there is great temptation for the folks in Frankfort to spend any money that comes their way. That is human nature. Now, however, is the time to change our attitude. Now is the time to think ahead. Let's keep the money instead of spending it. Invest it for the benefit of future generations. Then we will annually get closer to universal health insurance. We will annually help more and more farmers and their communities, and we will prove that we have the vision and judgment to properly handle this great opportunity that has come our way.

I wonder how many of you played basketball like I did in snowy weather. I would play so hard, there would be icicles in my hair. I did it and would do it again if I could go back.

Maybe the responsibility lies in example, rather than talking about it. Maybe, if they could see we were having fun, they would want to be a part of it. But I'm afraid the boob tube has got a hold on most of us, too.

Will there be snow angels in the future? There should be and we should take it upon ourselves to go outside with our kids and have fun teaching them about the good times we had.

Enjoy the snow. It is truly one more thing God has created to allow us to enjoy life.

Here are the millennium's top ten religion stories

In the past few months - as we ended a year, a decade, a century and a millennium - you probably read all the "Top 10" and "Top 100" lists you ever wanted to see.

To show you how shallow I really am, I'll admit that my favorite of those wasn't some lofty poll ranking the 100 most brilliant thinkers of the ages.

It was VH1's list of the 100 best rock 'n' roll songs.

Several of my friends and I spent an hour alternately reminiscing, howling, applauding and arguing about VH1's choices. ("What?! Nothing by Bob Seger?! Are these people idiots?!")

Now, just when you thought it was safe to go back into the newspaper, the Religion Writers Association - a group to which I once belonged - has released its list of the Top 10 religion stories of Christianity's second millennium.

The RNA is made up of religion writers and editors who work for secular publications.

Here is its Top-10 list, as reported in the Western Recorder, along with a few of my own comments:

The Protestant Reformation. This one's a no-brainer. The Reformation began in 1517 when a Roman Catholic priest, Martin Luther, nailed his 95 theses to the door of a German church.

Luther's criticisms of abuses within Catholicism helped motivate thousands of other protesters (hence the word "Protestants") to leave the Catholic faith, sparked the Counter Reformation within Catholicism and eventually led to the founding of the Church of England.

Christianity has never been the same.

Once those protesters split from Rome they kept on splitting from each other, too. And splitting. And splitting.

The widespread circulation of the Bible. John Wycliffe's 1380 translation of the Scripture into English, Gutenberg's invention of the printing press in the next century and the publication of the King James Bible in 1611 together made the Holy Writ available to the laity.

By implication it also made them priests in their own minds, able to read and interpret the Bible apart from their pastors' guidance. Preachers are still wringing their hands.

The Great Schism of 1054. This was the first major split in Christendom - long before the Reformation - when the Eastern and Western churches parted ways.

The Holocaust and the subsequent founding of Israel. The RNA's voters also picked this as the most important religion story of the 20th century. It is important, but I would beg to differ with its 20th century ranking. See event No. 10, below.

The Crusades. In 1095, Pope Urban II sent warriors to take back the Holy Land from the Muslims. He touched off a series of bloody campaigns that have tarnished Christianity's reputation for 1,000 years.

- Islam's expansion. Founded in the 600s, Islam has grown into Christianity's main rival among world religions.
- Vatican II. The Second Vatican Council in the 1960s liberalized Roman Catholics' views of themselves and other Christians. Vatican II changed Catholic liturgy from Latin to the native languages of worshippers. It gave lay people prominent church duties.
- The settling of New England. When the Pilgrims founded Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1620 and Roger Williams established Rhode Island in 1636, they imbued America with the then-radical ideals of religious freedom and the separation of church and state.
- The publication of ideas hostile to faith. The writings of Charles Darwin, Karl Marx, Sigmund Freud and others called into question traditional views of God, creation and the Bible's literal truth.

The 1906 Azusa street revival. This spiritual eruption restored to Christianity the nearly vanished "gifts" of the Holy Spirit, such as prophecy and divine healing. It sparked the Pentecostal-Charismatic renewal, to which 500 million Christians worldwide now belong.

Some respected scholars say that Pentecostalism's rise is the second-most important event in church history, behind the Reformation. I agree.

And there you have it, religion's own Top-10 list. Feel free to contemplate, clap or grind your teeth at will.

Card of Thanks

We would like to thank each and every one for everything you have done to help us during this tragic time. James and Beverly Jean were dearly loved and will be greatly missed by all who knew them. How something like this could ever happen is beyond reason. Again, thanks for all the food, flowers, kind words, memories shared, and for everything you have done to help and to comfort us in our time of sorrow. Special thanks to Jones-Preston Funeral Home; Floyd County Sheriff John K. Blackburn and his deputies; Johnson County Sheriff and his deputies; Johnson County Coroner's Office; Johnson County Constable; Thelka Vol. Fire Dept.; K.S.P. and investigators; and may justice prevail.

Sincerely,

The Family of James Randall and Beverly Jean Vanhooose

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

JERUSALEM: ANCIENT FORTRESS WHICH STOOD UNCONQUERED IN THE HEART OF ISRAEL SINCE THE DAYS OF JOSHUA, WAS FINALLY TAKEN 500 YEARS LATER BY THE NEWLY ANOINTED KING DAVID (CIRCA 1000 B.C.)...

...THE JEBUSITES, WHO LIVED IN THIS STRONGHOLD HIGH ON MT. ZION, WERE SO CONFIDENT THEIR FORTRESS COULD NOT BE SUCCESSFULLY ASSAULTED THAT THEY INSULTED DAVID'S ARMY BY ONLY MANNING THE WALLS AND BATTLEMENTS WITH MEN WHO WERE BLIND AND PITIFULLY LAME!

BUT DAVID'S MEN FOUND A TUNNEL, LEADING FROM AN OUTSIDE WATER-SUPPLY SPRING, DIRECTLY INTO THE MIDDLE OF THE CITY! IN THE DARK OF NIGHT, DAVID LED HIS TROOPS THROUGH THE TUNNEL, TOOK THE JEBUSITES UNAWARES, AND CAPTURED THE FORTRESS WHICH WAS TO BECOME HIS CAPITAL—THE 'CITY OF DAVID!' AND SINCE THAT DAY, JERUSALEM HAS BEEN CONTINUALLY FOUGHT OVER—RIGHT UP INTO MODERN TIMES!

NEXT WEEK: CAN A MAN BE CALLED WISE WHO HAS A THOUSAND WIVES?!!

More companies rely on deaf employees

(NUI) - Dell Tool of Rochester, New York, typifies the American company of the 90s — a small business scrambling to meet intense competition with too few hands.

Paul and Gary Jordan, cousins who run the 18-year-old family business, had tried everything to attract workers — even posting signs by the side of the road — but had no takers.

One of more than 300 machining companies in the Rochester area, Dell makes steel and plastic parts for business machines and woodworking equipment.

"Our biggest problem was getting people with machine skills who could read blueprints and inspect their work," Gary said.

But then Gary stumbled upon a solution right in his own backyard. He heard that the National Technical Institute for the Deaf (NTID), a college of the Rochester Institute of Technology (RIT), offered a computer-based machining program. Its graduates represented an untapped source of workers and a partial solution for resolving the chronic labor shortage that plagues the industry.

The Jordans say they've benefited from this valuable source of skilled workers. "I feel it gives us an edge over the person down the street that's in the same situation," Gary Jordan said.

Soon after hiring their first NTID graduate, the Jordans hired someone to teach sign language to supervisors and other workers. About eight hearing employees now know some sign language.

NTID is the world's first and largest technological college for deaf students. It represents the first concerted effort to educate large numbers of deaf students within a university of hearing students.

"Deaf people are definitely an untapped source," said Mark Seeger, Sprint customer relations manager, whose 150-member department includes 20 managers who are deaf or hard of hearing.

Seeger says NTID grads Angie Officer and Andrew Brenneman, along with the numerous other NTID/RIT graduates on his team, are "some of the top employees we have; they may not hear, but they listen extremely well."

Seeger said Sprint has found that deaf people bring to the job a different kind of training and preparedness. "They are extremely conscientious, and tend to have a survivor's instinct because throughout their lives, nothing has been handed to them. They approach their jobs with the positive attitude of 'I'm going to work this out.'"

Transportation Cabinet gets new van

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Kentucky Transportation Cabinet Secretary James Codell accepted

keys to a Chevy Venture Mobile Car Seat Check Up minivan from General Motors and the National SAFE KIDS Campaign (NSKC) on behalf of Drive Smart Kentucky and the Kentucky SAFE KIDS Campaign in Washington, D.C., recently.

The van was given to 51 SAFE KIDS Coalitions throughout the nation and in the District of Columbia and is valued at $23,450.

Codell believes this is a great opportunity for Kentucky's parents and children. "Safety is the cabinet's number one priority, especially for Kentucky's youngest citizens. The Chevy Venture Mobile Van makes it convenient for our Child Passenger Safety Team to educate parents throughout the state on the proper installation and usage of car seats."

The van will be utilized beginning the week of February 13-19 which is National Child Passenger Safety Week.

According to NSKC, about 30 percent of children ride unrestrained and 85 percent of car seats continue to be used incorrectly. Unintentional childhood injury is the number one killer of children ages 14 and under.

Kentucky Tech students, teachers showcase high-tech equipment

One hundred fifty-one high school students were the focus of the Department for Technical Education's "$6 Million Showcase" in Frankfort on January 11.

Students demonstrated and explained high-tech equipment and hands-on training techniques at the showcase, which was attended by Gov. Paul Patton, Lt. Gov. Steve Henry and members of the 2000 General Assembly.

In the last legislative session, $6 million was appropriated for state-of-the-art equipment purchases for the technical schools. The department is an agency of the Cabinet for Workforce Development.

In opening the showcase, the governor congratulated students for recognizing the value of technical education.

"If you follow through, you've assured yourself of a very good lifestyle," the governor said. "You've recognized what is really in demand — people who have intellectual ability to make our highly sophisticated society work."

Recalling his career as an engineer, Patton said, "I enjoyed the work I had to do with my hands — I enjoy being creative. You're doing intellectual work, but you use your hands to execute it. That's a very honorable lifestyle."

The governor also gave credit to the legislature for appropriating the $6 million for technical education equipment.

Technical school students are also preparing for the jobs of the future. According to the "Kentucky Occupational Outlook to 2006" report from the state Department for Employment Services, 65 percent of new jobs in Kentucky through 2006 will require a high school diploma and some or extensive postsecondary training.

Cabinet for Workforce Development Secretary Allen D. Rose said that Kentucky Tech students will be uniquely prepared for these new jobs.

"Kentucky Tech schools are aligning their curricula with the demands of business and industry and with postsecondary training offered by Kentucky's technical colleges, community colleges and universities," he said. "High school students with a technical education are prepared to be successful in on-going education and in the workforce."

Students and teachers in construction technology and machine tool at Floyd County Area Technology Center attended the meeting.

Bobcats lose close one at the buzzer

by: Karen Joseph

Brock Keathley (23) goes in for a basket in the game against the Lawrence County Bulldogs. Keathley led the Bobcats in scoring with 14, but the Bobcats lost to the Bulldogs on a three point basket with one second remaining. (photo by Karen Joseph)

The Betsy Layne Bobcats were coming off a big tournament championship game. They won the Hoops Classic on Saturday night and were in hopes of continuing their winning streak. On Tuesday night they took on the Lawrence County Bulldogs. The Bulldogs came into the game with a 5-7 record. The Bobcats were 8-5 going into the game.

It was the last second of the game before anyone would know which team would improve their record and which would drop.

The Bulldogs lead most of the first quarter, but the Bobcats came back and outscored the Bulldogs the three other quarters. But Lawrence County's Gerard Parker hit a shot from just past mid-court to put the Bulldogs up by one with one second remaining in the game. Therefore the Bulldogs improved their record to 6-7 and the Bobcats fell to 8-6.

This was a very fast-paced game. The Bulldogs are a very quick passing team. They can move the ball up and down the floor, without the ball ever hitting the floor. But so could the Bobcats. The Bulldogs were just the last ones to have the ball and were able to score to capture the win.

The Betsy Layne Cheerleaders were back on the floor and did a very good job cheering their Bobcats on. And Betsy Layne's very own Clayton Case did a wonderful job singing the Star Spangle Banner.

Gerard Parker lead both teams in scoring. Parker finished the game with 30 points. Betsy Layne placed three players in double figures. Brock Keathley led the Bobcats with 14, followed by Brad Daugherty, who came off the bench and scored 13. Bradley Brooks finished with 10 points for the Bobcats.

But all of the Bobcats played very good defense, but so did all of the Bulldogs.

Both teams played very good defense the first two minutes of the game. Neither team scored. Betsy Layne threw up two shots but failed to score. Then Gerard Parker hit a three point basket from the left side of the floor to give the Bulldogs the first lead. Bradley Brooks

Paintsville hits 15 treys to eliminate Rebels

Tigers advance to semi-finals in All "A" Classic

by: Karen Joseph
 Sports Writer

In the last five years the Paintsville Tigers have won the All "A" Classic four times. But last year, Allen Central won the tournament. The two teams met this year in the first round of the tournament. Therefore, one would be eliminated.

Considering the weather conditions on the outside, there was a pretty good crowd on hand for the game. And there was a lot of excitement.

The Rebels could never get the right combination going in the game. The Tigers, on the other hand, could hit from anywhere on the floor. They could hit three-pointers from all around the circle. And it was the Tigers coming away victorious and advancing in the tournament.

The Tigers easily defeated the Rebels, 97-59.

Kyle Meade led both teams in scoring. Meade finished with 19 points. Paintsville placed three other players in double figures, while two players placed in double figures for the Rebels.

Mitchell Grim and Ben Trimble each finished with 16 for the Tigers, while Ben Hale hit five three-point baskets to finish with 15 points for the Tigers.

Larry Mullins led the Rebels in scoring, finishing with 15, and Jeremy Sexton had 14 for the Rebels.

The Rebels took their only lead of the game when Rodney Scott hit a three-point basket to get the game

South Floyd holds off comeback in 76-66 win

The South Floyd Raiders are for real! They are a legitimate basketball team, and they proved they are to be taken serious this basketball season. Teams are starting not to look beyond the Raiders when it comes to competition on the basketball court.

On the Pikeville Panthers' home court, in the first game of the boys All "A" Regional Classic, coach Henry Webb's Raiders posted a thrilling 76-66 win over the defending 15th Region champions.

Pikeville had been ranked as high as number one in the region and a favorite to repeat this basketball season. For South Floyd, they were just hungry for a chance to redeem themselves against a powerhouse like Pikeville after the Raiders fell to Johnson Central last Saturday night, according to Coach Webb.

"We got off to a great start tonight," said Coach Webb. "The kids were hungry. We had a tough loss last Saturday night, and we wanted to come back and redeem ourselves."

Just any team would not have sufficed for the Raiders and getting the Panthers on their home court, was an added incentive to play hard.

"Pikeville is the defending regional champions," the South Floyd coach said. "We thought it would be great to get them on their home court."

The Raiders came out "smoking" at the onset of the game as Pikeville looked surprised and confused at what they were seeing from South Floyd.

When the first three-plus minutes had evaporated off the clock, the Raiders were in control 10-0. At the 4:00 mark, it was a 15-2 game as Chase Gibson was able to score the lone basket for the Panthers at the 4:26 mark of the first quarter.

But the Raiders' success in the first half, leading 34-19 at the half, may have affected the way they played at the start of the second half.

Pikeville opened as if they were the defending champions and had a point to prove themselves. Before South Floyd could get under control, it was the Panthers who took their first and only lead of the game in the third period at the 3:19 mark. Matt Branham slipped along the base line and scored easily. That gave the Panthers a 37-36 lead, getting the silent Pikeville crowd back in the game. Coach Webb said he warned his team of letting down.

"At half time we had a little discussion about not coming out and being flat, like we did," said the South Floyd mentor. "Pikeville was very aggressive the first four minutes of the third quarter."

Rusty Tackett said the Raiders were

TOURNAMENTS...

The folks up at Allen Central Middle School are uncertain when the championship games of the Floyd County Grade School Tournament will be held.

The finals were scheduled for this past Wednesday night, a rescheduled date from two weeks ago. According to the school, the date will be announced later.

While the grade school tournament is on hold, the boys All "A" at Pikeville is a go. The semifinals will be played tonight, with the finals scheduled for Saturday night. Of course, this is dependent on good weather.

What a display of intensity the South Floyd Raiders showed Tuesday night against a very good Pikeville team. Coach Henry Webb was dubbed "Little Rick Pitino" by Ancie Casey, 15th Region assigning secretary. I don't know, I think Henry is a little taller than Rick.

We are very fortunate to have a coach the caliber of Coach Webb in our school system. In fact, we are fortunate to have a person of the caliber of Henry Webb, principal and coach.

I know the folks at South Floyd and the area love him and I am afraid that he will be snatched up by some "big school." Any school in Kentucky would love to have him.

When South Floyd and Pikeville walked onto the floor to tip off the game, it matched the state's highest scoring team, South Floyd, against one of the better defensive teams (Pikeville).

Pikeville was only allowing their opponents an average of 53.1 points a game. The Raiders scored 76.

I was amazed at the way Chase Gibson (Pikeville) runs the floor, posts up and shoots the treys. Here is a kid who we (Floyd County) let get away. I enjoy watching him play the game. He has a great future ahead of him.

Have you dialed into our new web site on the World Wide Web? The URL address is simply, floyd-countytimes.com. It is a nice looking site. Take a look!

There are only 33 days left until we tip off the 58th District tournament. It is hard to believe that the season has rolled by so quickly.

The tournament will be held at Allen Central this season as well as the regional tournament.

FOOTBALL FIELDS

Much has been said in the news about the football facilities at both Prestonsburg and South Floyd. It appears that the Prestonsburg facility has changed back to the original blueprint (with track and all the good stuff) but that could change again.

Coach John Derossett is very happy with the change of plans and the renovation of the old facility.

If the board of education goes through with it, the new facility will be a nice place to play football. I hate it that some folks are going have to give up their homes for the new field. Why not put it on the hill?

At South Floyd, I talked with some of the folks up there and they seemed to think their proposed stadium would not be built in their lifetime and this was from some seniors who are leaving after this year. Well, that doesn't look too promising.

Hopefully, both facilities will be in place in the next two years. Who knows?

We are told that construction of the softball field at Betsy Layne will continue after the board of education approved the final phase of it.

Until Sunday, good sports everyone and be good sports! Take the kids to Sunday School and church this Sunday.

started. Allen Central's lead was short-lived.

Ben Meade hit a free throw for the Tigers, then hit a two-point basket to tie the score at three. Jeremy Hall then hit the first three-point basket for the Tigers. After that, things got worse for the Rebels. Paintsville jumped out to an 11-3 lead with 4:35 remaining in the first quarter.

Johnny Martin called a 20-second timeout to try to slow the Tigers down. But the timeout failed to stop the Tigers.

Jeremy Hayes hit a three-point basket after the timeout, but the Tigers would quickly answer and go on another 8-0 run. Jeremy Hall hit another three-point basket for the Tigers.

Larry Mullins hit a three-point basket for the Rebels, but the first quarter ended with the Rebels trailing the Tigers, 23-14.

The second quarter started the same as the first quarter. Larry Mullins hit a three-point basket for the Rebels. Meade hit a two-point basket, then Trimble hit a foul shot.

With a little over five minutes remaining in the first half, Allen Central pulled to within seven points of the Tigers. This is as close as they would get.

The Tigers scored two quick baskets and again Johnny Martin called a timeout to try to change the momentum. But again it failed to work.

Mitchell Grim hit a three-point basket, then Brad Austin hit a three-point basket for the Tigers. Jeremy Sexton hit two baskets for the Rebels and Larry Mullins made a steal and a basket for the Rebels, but then Meade hit three straight two-point baskets for the Tigers to give them the 44-25 lead at the half.

The Tigers came out in the second half and started where they left off. Mitchell Grim hit a three-point basket to get the half started. Jeremy Sexton hit two baskets for the Rebels, then Kyle Meade hit a three-point basket, then Mitchell Grim hit a three point basket, then another.

Paintsville pretty much put the game out of reach in the third quarter as they outscored the Rebels, 31-16, in the quarter.

The Runnin' Rebels never gave up. They played hard basketball, but the Tigers could do no wrong. They hit just about everything they threw up and the Rebels fell to the Tigers, 97-59.

One positive note for Johnny Martin and his Runnin' Rebels — sophomore Shawn Newsome was back for the ACHS. Newsome had been out all season due to a football injury to his knee that required surgery.

The Tigers will take on the Millard Mustangs tonight at 6:30.

The next game for the Rebels will be January 25, when they host the Prestonsburg Blackcats.

never shaken by the burst.

"They just came out hot against us," he said. "But we played hard. Our team is a hard one. Coach Webb told us in the locker room they were going to come out hot.

They had their spurt, but we got back in the game."

The Raiders seemed shaken by the burst of aggressiveness on the part of the Panthers with four consecutive turnovers and some very cold shooting. In fact, the Raiders did not score until the 3:57 mark of the third period, going over four minutes without a basket.

Matt Walls triggered the Panther comeback scoring six of the eight straight points for Pikeville. Branhan then gave the lead to Pikeville as they were consistently getting to the baseline.

Big man Chase Gibson demonstrated that he can do more than just score as he was dishing the ball off with some nice assists. Gibson led all scorers in the game with 27 points.

But the Raiders weathered the onslaught and righted themselves. John Meade was just what the Raiders needed as he came off the bench and led a Raider raid that reclaimed the lead and extended it out to 50-41 after three quarters.

South Floyd seemed to be standing around against the 3-2 zone of the Panthers, but Meade found a hole and scored to give the lead back to the Raiders. The basket allowed the Raiders to get in their pressing game and it was all. The last lead for Pikeville came at 39-38 on a basket by Walls. Michael Hall drained a three-pointer with 2:06 to play in the third for a 41-39 Raider lead.

Pikeville turned the ball over on two possessions and South Floyd went on a 9-2 run for the nine-point lead. Rusty Tackett hit a trey, Meade scored on a drive to the basket and Tackett stole the ball and scored. Byron Hall hit a short jumper just ahead of the buzzer.

Coach Webb said that Meade has been a spark for his club all season. "John has been playing excellent basketball for us," said Webb. "He got into foul trouble against Johnson Central, but he came out tonight and really went to the basket. John picked us up when we needed it."

South Floyd appeared to be rolling as they opened the fourth quarter with five quick points on a three-point basket by Meade and Michael Hall steal. In a 9-2 run the Raiders built a 64-45 lead but Gibson and the Panthers were not ready to surrender. Gibson led the Panthers back to within seven of South Floyd, 71-64 but time was on the side of the Raiders as they posted the 10 point win.

"It was a good win for us," said Coach Webb. "Our kids showed a lot of poise when Pikeville came back. I felt we wore them down and they were fatigued. We got into our pressing game and it worked for us."

Coach Webb played eight players in the game and all made the scoring column. The Raiders were led by freshman Michael Hall's 19 points. Hall buried two three-point baskets.

Senior Ryan Shannon was a floor leader and he came up with 16 points at the point guard slot. He drained three treys.

Sophomore Rusty Tackett finished with 13 points but he picked up four assists. Meade netted nine points, had one three-point basket and dished off four assists.

Kyle Tackett and Byron Hall added four points but both were instrumental in the pressing game of the Raiders. Hall pulled down 13 rebounds for South Floyd.

Jimmy Stumbo, who plays hard on defense, was in foul trouble early and relegated to the bench for most of the game. He scored four points and had seven rebounds and three block shots. Dusty Tackett came off the bench and contributed five points.

Gibson, who is one of the top players in the region and the eastern part of the state, led the Panthers with his 27 points. The big man made it look easy but did not have a good supporting cast. Walls finished with 20 points in a solid outing.

South Floyd held high scoring guard Jeremy Akers to just six points. Nick Lynch finished with seven points while Branham netted six.

South Floyd improved to 13-3 on the season while Pikeville fell to 9-4.

GAME NOTES:

Gibson is a product of Floyd County, having played his elementary basketball at Betsy Layne. He is just a junior and definitely will have the college folks ringing his phone next year. Gibson is averaging just over 18 points per game this season. He is pulling down an average of nearly 12 boards a game.

It was the first win ever for a South Floyd team in the tournament. The last time a Left Beaver school recorded a win in the boys All "A" was when Wheelwright won a first round game. The team they beat? An upset of — that's right — Pikeville.

The win equaled the most for a South Floyd team who won 13 games last year. Another win will establish a new school record for most wins in a season.

The game was a single game in the All "A" which normally has double headers on the first night. With the one game and inclement weather, the Raiders and Panther fans had the gym over half full and both sides were very much into the game.

The win allowed South Floyd to advance to the second round, the first time as a Left Beaver school.

Boys' All "A" to have new champion

by Ed Taylor
Sports Editor

The boys' All "A" regional basketball tournament will crown a new champion this Saturday night (weather permitting) when the final game is played.

The Allen Central Rebels, the defending champions, were eliminated in the first round in a 93-59 loss to the Paintsville Tigers. It was one of the worst defeats an Allen Central team has suffered in several seasons.

So, with the Rebels out of it, the likely choice for a title game match up will include South Floyd and Paintsville. Of course the semifinals are played tonight and barring any unforeseen upsets, the Raiders and Tigers should be in the title game.

The boys' All "A" has caught on in popularity because it allows the smaller schools to compete for a state title. The All "A" involves 135 Kentucky schools that have to have 425 or fewer students in their three lower grades.

Fans will recall that the history of the All "A" was a humble one in it started with only nine teams and has mushroomed into a statewide tournament that will involve 225 boys and girls basketball teams.

One of the things that sets the All "A" apart from the Sweet Sixteen in March is the inspirational side of it and the competition between academic teams. The Classic is organized exclusively for the presentation of charitable, inspirational and educational programs.

The more informal setting of the Class "A" state tournament makes it a more comfortable atmosphere when compared to the Sweet Sixteen held at Rupp Arena. Many of the teams that will compete in the All "A" will also be part of the Sweet Sixteen in March.

The girls All "A" regional finished up last week at Millard with the Pikeville Lady Panthers scheduled to make the trip to Richmond. This year's girls regional marked the first time a Floyd County team did not compete in the championship game.

The Allen Central Lady Rebels have won the classic more than any other regional team. However, last year they were dethroned in the final game by Phelps. This year Allen Central fell to Pikeville in a semifinal game, marking the first time in several years an Allen Central team was not involved in the final game.

The tournament, on a regional basis, has drawn a large following over the years. The state tournament last year saw an estimated crowd of over 48,000.

Attend last year's final rounds, an average of over 5,000.

Interesting to note is that only three teams in the 15th Region have made the trip to Richmond for the final round. Pikeville has won the event three times with Paintsville holding a record four straight trips. Elkhorn City won in '92 and '94. Allen Central was last year's title holder.

The state tournament will tip off on Wednesday, January 26, and conclude on Sunday, January 30 with a 3:30 p.m. tip off time for the boys. The girls' finals will begin at 1 p.m.

Bobcats

hit a two point basket for the Bobcats. On the Bulldogs' next trip down the floor, Parker hit a three point basket from the right side of the floor to increase their lead 6-2.

The Bobcats then went on a 8-0 run and took the lead for the first time with 3:14 remaining in the first quarter. Justin Bartley hit a three point basket in the Bobcats run.

But the Bulldogs went on a run of their own. In the last three minutes of the first quarter, the Bulldogs outscored the Bobcats 12-0. Alan Short and Jamie Prince both hit three point baskets for the Bulldogs in their first quarter run. Gerad Parker added four more points and the first quarter ended with the Bulldogs having the 18-10 lead.

The Bobcats' came out in the second quarter and scored the first two points to break their three minute dry spell. But Mike West would soon answer for the Bulldogs. West made a very pretty move to the basket to score for the Bulldogs. Justin Bartley hit a two point basket for the Bobcats then Lawrence County went on nine-two run. With 4:21 remaining in the first half Brent Rose called time out to settle his Bobcats down. When Betsy Layne called the time out the score was 27-16. When the quarter ended the score was 26-31. The Bobcats continued to trail the Bulldogs, but they had gained ground on the Bulldogs by going on a 10-4 run. The first half ended with the score being 31-26 in favor of the Bulldogs.

In the Bobcats run before the half, Adam Collins scored four points. Collins scored the last basket of the half on a beautiful assist by Scott Collins and was also fouled on the play.

In the second half the Bulldogs scored the first five points. Bradley Brooks scored the first points for the Bobcats when he hit two free-throws. Brock Keathley hit a three point basket for the Bobcats then Keathley connected for two free-throws to bring the Bobcats within four points with 4:57 remaining in the third quarter.

The Bobcats did some very good hustling. Adam Collins brought the Bobcats within two points when he put a basket back up that Brock Keathley missed. Lawrence County called a time-out with 3:15 remaining in the third quarter.

But the time-out failed to slow the Bobcats down. Bradley Brooks tied the score with a little over three minutes remaining in the third quarter. Betsy Layne would take the lead with two minutes remaining in the quarter on a two point basket by Brad Daugherty.

But the Bulldogs would soon answer. Justin Muncy put up a three point basket for the Bulldogs and missed, but who other than Gerad Parker came from out of nowhere to get the rebound and put it back in to give the lead back to the Bulldogs.

For the rest of the quarter, both teams played very good defense and traded baskets. But the Bulldogs managed to hold on to a two point lead at the end of the third quarter 43-41.

In the fourth quarter, it was nip-and-tuck all the way. The score was tied four times and the lead changed hands six times. Gerad Parker scored 13 of the 19 points that the Bulldogs scored in the final quarter. With 1:19 minutes remaining in the game, Betsy Layne's Adam Collins went down. The score was 59-58 in favor of the Bulldogs. Scott Collins hit a two point basket to give the Bobcats the 60-59 lead.

The Bulldogs got the ball with 31.4 remaining in the game and they went to who other than Gerad Parker. Parker put up a three point basket, but missed this time and Betsy Layne got the rebound. Brock Keathley drove to the basket and with 5.8 seconds remaining in the game, with Betsy Layne having a one point lead, Keathley was fouled.

Brock Keathley hit the first free throw to give the Bobcats a two point lead and hit the second shot, but the official waved the basket no-good due to a lane violation called on Betsy Layne.

Lawrence County called time out. The Bulldogs put the ball in play and gave it to Gerad Parker. Just as Parker crossed the center line, he shot the ball and it went straight to the basket, hit at the back of the rim and dropped in to give the Bulldogs the one point lead. Betsy Layne called a time-out with one second remaining but failed to get a play off and the Bobcats loss the second game this season in the last seconds of a game. The final score was 62-61, Lawrence County.

The Bobcats, now 8-5, will travel to Belfry on Friday night to take on the Belfry Pirates. The Lawrence County Bulldogs will entertain the Johnson Central Eagles on Friday night.

Lugnut has emotions

ONE minute I'm happy, the next I'm enraged. Back and forth it goes, the pendulum swinging, covering the entire spectrum of my emotions.

Where will it stop? You see, I'm happy that Tony Stewart has re-signed with Joe Gibbs Racing. I'm happy for Gibbs and I'm thrilled to see drivers stay with Pontiac.

I'm enraged, however, at the weasel-like way Stewart used the media and everybody else to make sure everybody in the outside world knew he was complaining about not yet having a new contract. Yeah, yeah, he won three races.

Yeah, yeah, he finished the most incredible rookie season possibly in the history of the greatest sport alive.

Sure, millions of fans jumped on his bandwagon.

Big deal. What Stewart did in the weeks prior to his re-signing with Joe Gibbs Racing was exactly what has given a black eye, bloody nose and a few bruised ribs to Major League Baseball, the National Football League and just about every other sport.

He got greedy. He got big-headed. He walked through a door that in the past was for employees only and opened it to the public.

Joe Gibbs is a fair owner. Look what he's done for Bobby Labonte. Labonte has stuck with Gibbs, and the results – even though they took some time to achieve – culminated in Labonte's second-place finish in the point standings in 1999.

Have we heard Labonte crying about his contract? No. I'm not saying he isn't trying to get a better deal. But he certainly isn't going public.

Everyone calls Jeff Gordon a whiner. I don't recall him crying about wanting a new contract, even after 49 wins, three championships and a second-place points finish. Heck, if there's one person who has all the reason in the world to cry about a contract, it's Dale Earnhardt. He's watched the sport grow exponentially financially. Have we ever heard him complain? No. I just wish Gibbs could have said, "Hey, you want more money? Why don't you finish higher in the point standings?" If Gibbs had stood firm, chances are another owner would gladly slobber all over Stewart and give him even more silver spoons to fit in his mouth.

Tony Stewart has already upset fans and fellow drivers. He has taken for granted the people who helped make him who he is, and I'm sure he'll get a few wake-up calls in 2000.

In other news, at the recent NASCAR Media Tour, I heard that Jerry Nadeau was talking about how neat it would be to drive a race car using virtual-reality technology. First off, I can't imagine people waiting in line for Jerry Nadeau to show up somewhere. I think I'd bring in a larger crowd. Second, virtual reality? Hey, Jerry, I've seen you drive. The only thing virtual reality will do is save some of the money your owner has to spend fixing your cars every week.

Smith's take on the state of NASCAR

By HENRY MILLER

BRUTON Smith is not one to hold back words. Ask him about the new NASCAR television deal and he'll tell you how it will put money into owners' pockets and not so much into drivers' pockets and that's the way it should be.

Question him on last season and he'll say it was pretty much a boring year, with not much side-by-side racing. Bring up the success of NASCAR and the success of his Speedway Motorsports Inc. and he'll tell you without a flinch that he's the one doing things the right way.

"I've been doing this for many, many years, and I think what we have to do is not forget what we're in: a stock car racing business," said Smith, owner of tracks that run Winston Cup events in Bristol (Tenn.), Atlanta, Charlotte (N.C.), Fort Worth (Texas) and Las Vegas. "As far as speedways are concerned, we just need to make them more fan-friendly – those fans pay

"I want to see those guys go down in a turn and do some rubbing – maybe Jeff Gordon beside [Dale] Earnhardt and maybe his right front wheel burns the No. 3 off [Dale's] door. Those things get exciting."

– Bruton Smith on making NASCAR more fun to watch our way and they are demanding it. That's what I've been doing for many, many years: try to make every speedway that we have more fan-friendly.

"And now you have the ladies coming, and when the ladies are coming, you have to shape up. When I built Charlotte, only 10 percent of the fans were women. Now it's approaching 50 percent."

While Smith says tracks should be more fan-friendly, he's also an advocate of making races more competitive, thus making them more exciting.

He says last year was anything but exciting – except, of course, at Bristol.

"NASCAR, they're the ones to do this, need to be sure it [the racing] is exciting in the future, as it has been in the past," Smith said. "Some of the things that have been done maybe have lessened that."

"We have no complaints from Bristol because it is exciting. It's what the people want."

Smith said two tickets to a Bristol race were recently offered for sale on the Internet. He said those two tickets brought in $2,400.

"Does that tell you what the value of real racing is all about?" Smith said. "We can try that at some other speedways and what do you think they'd bring? I don't know, but we'll try and judge and see what happens."

One way, Smith said, to spread out some of the Bristolmania to some other tracks would be to find a way to hold more competitive races. He said it shouldn't matter to anyone – especially fans – whether or not a car's spoiler is an inch higher, especially if it means more side-by-side racing.

"I don't think we had many good races last year. A lot of the races we had were very dull," Smith said. "We need to address that. What's wrong? If they're going to be dull, it's going to make it very difficult to sell tickets."

"I'm in an area I don't belong in, but I'm sure there are some real brains out there who can see how to [make races more exciting]. I want to see those guys go down in a turn and do some rubbing – maybe Jeff Gordon beside [Dale] Earnhardt, and maybe his right front wheel burns the

No. 3 off [Dale's] door. Those things get exciting."

Another thing Smith is concerned with is the cost of making cars today. He suggests getting a committee together – a committee of outsiders – to come up with some ideas on how to lower production costs without lessening the cars' safety.

"It's a runaway freight train," Smith said of car-making costs. "They're just spending too much money. Competition is the driving force behind that, of course, but there's got to be a way to cut that cost."

It certainly helps that some of the new television-rights money that NASCAR receives will go into owners' pockets. Smith said that's exactly where it should go. Drivers, he said, are just fine financially – even though it was just a couple of years ago that many of them were complaining about the money won at certain tracks.

"All the drivers I know are making an awful lot of money," Smith said. "I don't think we need to worry too much about them."

The rules have changed: What drivers think of the 2000 Taurus

By HENRY MILLER

HOW much anticipation is there on the part of Ford drivers to see how their new Taurus is going to perform?

Well, enough to make 18 different drivers – including Buddy Baker, who test-drove for Rusty Wallace – hit the high banks of Talladega Superspeedway for the first testing opportunity of 2000.

And the results? Nobody's really saying anything ... yet.

"It's hard to tell if we're good or if we're not good, because this is something new for everybody, with the new shock and spring rules," said defending Winston Cup champion Dale Jarrett. "But the car drives a lot better, and for us old guys, I guess that's good."

The testing was the first time teams had a chance to test NASCAR's new rules for shocks and springs at restrictor-plate tracks. Many of the drivers spent time early in the session working with last year's setup to compare the 2000 Taurus with last year's model.

"There's not a lot you can do, and you're gonna have to get creative in some new areas now and that's what we tried to do," Jarrett said. "We made some gains, we picked the car up a little bit, but as far as knowing that it's good or bad versus other cars, you can change these cars two- and three-tenths a second by just adding a little bit of tape to them."

None of the drivers were

willing to say whether or not the new Taurus will be better or worse than last year's version. Ricky Rudd, new driver of the No. 28 Texaco-Havoline Ford, said it's just too early to tell.

"To sit here and say this Taurus is better than last year's would be hard to do because everybody is two to three seconds a lap slower than what they're normally used to running here, so the cars feel real good," Rudd said. "Even in race conditions with the new rules, it's gonna be quite a bit different. I don't think there will be anybody here complaining about their car not driving well - Ford, Chevy, whatever - with these new shock rules and spring rules."

Last year, Chevy dominated the restrictor-plate races. Dale Earnhardt won both Talladega events, and Jeff Gordon won the Daytona 500. All four of those races also started with a Chevy on the pole. Jarrett won the midseason Pepsi 400 in Daytona.

"Just by what we can tell, not only by what I could feel out there but, as Todd [Parrott] and I talked about, what they've seen in the wind tunnel, we have a better-balanced car than what we had," Jarrett said. "I think we have a nice car that is gonna be able to compete."

Baker turned in the fastest lap of the second day of testing while substituting for Wallace, who was completing a jet flight training program in Tucson.

"When I did my first day of testing, I felt kind of ragged when I got here, and last night I was taking a shower and I started jumping around in the shower," Baker said. "It's the fountain of youth for a guy that really enjoys driving quality race cars."

In Brief

NASCAR for kids

NASCAR Racers, the NASCARtoon for kids, has found a permanent home on the Fox Kids Network on Saturday mornings. "NASCAR Racers: The Movie" debuted in November and was so successful that Fox has awarded the show a 9:30 a.m. ET slot beginning Feb. 5. The Racers movie will air again on Friday, Feb. 4 at 3:30 p.m. The NASCAR Racers – Mark "Charger" McCutchen, Megan "Spitfire" Fassler, Steve "Flyer" Sharp and Carlos "Stunts" Rey – race for the Fastex Corporation, an ultra high-tech mechanics conglomerate. The team uses 21st-century technology which enables their state-of-the-art race cars to perform stunts and adapt to the unique style of each individual driver.

Millennium. This word brings many different thoughts to mind. It can represent both positive and negative points of view. My particular point of view varies from others' views. In fact, for the twenty-first century, I have a new, elaborated idea of how the world will be.

For instance, everyone will wear more metallic silver jewelry to further express the brightly shining future ahead of them. Millennium outfits will mainly consist of mini skirts, disco pants, and capris because they were newly discovered fashion statements. The new millennium would represent a new beginning in fashion, as well as music, government, and technology.

As for the economy, stocks will soar because of all the new technology being developed. Computers will be far more advanced in the future than they are in the present. C-D roms will be forgotten when the in-home movie theaters become available. These theaters will be three times the size of regular computer screens, and will have every new movie that comes out on the digital movie guide. Having in-home theaters would be free of cost, but rich in entertainment. If desired, a special rating system could be installed in case your kids would also be viewing the movies.

As for the music field of entertainment, C.D.'s will be replaced by inexpensive music videos that can be played on a C.D. T.V. A.C.D. T.V. would be a miniature television that is much smaller than a regular compact disc player. It would give the customers more guaranteed satisfaction with the enjoyment of having their favorite artists' favorite music videos right in front of them. Music styles would change by excluding country and some violent rap music. Instead, the average music type would consist of jazz, soul, and high-tempo background music.

Drugs and violence will be practically non-existent because technology and education will be more important. With all of this peace filling up the earth's communities, there will be no use for foul language, killings, and bombings. (Religions might possibly evolve further due to their ancient millennium predictions as well.)

Schools will become the most dramatic change of all.

Students will not have any homework, and will only have one semester test in every class for one set of nine weeks. Gym and art classes will be optional, allowing music to be put back into schools everywhere. Students will not be forced to wear uniforms because the schools will finally realize that the extra profits could be used to further develop the school in itself. A college education will be required in order for students to get a decent job, and recess will be allowed after every class so that the students can relieve any stress they might build up during the previous class. Another school-related issue would be unity. Every student will be required to help their classmates so that peace will remain the main lesson, besides respect. Homework and other life problem hotlines will be available to all students, allowing an open, carefree environment.

In conclusion, as we begin to enter the new millennium, create your own visual (or just a mental) picture for the days ahead of you. Perhaps you will be correct. Happy new year!

Schools in the new millennium

by Samantha Bailey
Allen Central Middle

Have you ever thought about what the new millennium school years will be, and how different it is from the way it is now? Well, I'm going to tell you how I feel about it! I think that the new millennium school years children could type and capture all their work on these computers instead of using paper and pencil. That's how I think the use of computers will be more than what will they are used for now.

Even though we use satellite classes already, people could use them more often. In case you don't know what satellite classes are, that is where you may want to take a class from somewhere you wouldn't be able to go. It would be the same as taking a class with a teacher in front of you but actually the teacher will be on big television screen. You would be getting different subjects and information that most likely to be included in our school. The students can ask questions and the teacher and students that are on the television would be able to talk back to you.

Communications between schools would become easier. We would get to know different schools and how they do things. Hopefully we would get to partner up with kids from other schools and do projects over computers. Almost like pen pals but you may know them. After everybody gets their projects done they could meet each other. How? They could visit each two days. One day at one school and the other day at the opposite school. We could also go to different schools each day to find out about different subjects. It would be neat to be able to talk to students in other countries where we are studying a different language. We could talk to them and listen to the language such as Spanish, or German. Well that's my thinking. I also know that we learn different languages. But that's just people who want to. I think it should be another class for everyone to learn. You'll never know if you would ever have the chance to go to a foreign country. Now to get into good colleges you have to have a foreign language.

That's what I think about the new millennium school years and how it will affect me and the schools that I go to!

will bring about the use of more computers, satellite classes, and better communications between schools.

The computers would be used as in digital books. These books could be for schoolbooks or if not that, then more references. Just think, teachers may even be able to scan students' work. Also involved with the use of computers, teachers will be able to put all the grades onto a secure web page where parents could look at their children's work and grades. I also could say that

A Millennium Tale

by Krista Justus
Adams Middle School
6th grade

"Sasami! Get ready for school!" my mother screamed over the visio- phone.

I jumped up. "What?" I looked at the video screen to see my mother's angry face. I smiled, fluttering my eyelashes that framed my large, innocent blue eyes that perfectly matched my hair.

"S'not that late, is it?" I asked innocently, knowing that the VR alarm had gone off at precisely 6:05 a.m.

Only five minutes and seventeen seconds until the hover bus arrives Sasami," she said, voice dripping with anger.

"S'okay! I can ride my hover-board!" I stretched and gathered up my lime green pleated skirt, red puffy-sleeved shirt, two purposefully mismatched socks, and my pink vest.

"You know how I feel about that thing." My mother took on a look of worry.

"Hey! No sweat, Mom. Those things are safer than air bikes," I coaxed as I got dressed.

"You know how I feel about those things," Mother cried as I brushed my hair.

"You worry too much," I said, putting on my shoes and standing up. "I'm gonna use the transportater now. Bye, Mum."

"Sasami, you be careful and watch out for speeding hover craft!"

"I will, Mother." I grabbed the CD that contained my hover-board and walked to the door. I put in my CC (confidential code) and then pushed the PC (public code) of the street on a small number pad.

"GET READY FOR TRANSPORTATION IN FIVE..." A hollow voice that was perpetually calm started the dematerialization countdown. "FOUR." I took a deep breath. Every time the transportater is a different and exciting experience. "THREE." I closed my eyes and grasped my CD. "TWO." I let the breath out. "ONE. PREPARE FOR TRANSPORTATION." A tingly sensation traveled up my legs and down my arms, and when I opened my eyes, I was on Fifty-seventh Street.

"Hover-board activate," I said into the CD in my hand. It stretched out into a flat, broad surface. I stepped on and cried, "Maximum velocity!" The hover-board sped down the street, me leaning to steer it. I passed the big purple hover bus and waved to the people on it.

My pointed, blue pigtails waved behind me as I leaned forward to go even faster. I turned the corner. There was the school. "Hover-board, stop and CD-ize," I said to the thing under my feet. I jumped off as the hover-board turned into the shiny silver CD which I put in my pocket. I walked to the door of the school and pushed in my CC and the PC of my classroom.

The countdown started again and I dematerialized and rematerialized in my seat. "Nice of you to join us, Sasami. Late again, I see." I smiled sheepishly. The teacher continued. "As you know they have built the first school on the moon recently and are holding a contest to see which students out of this whole country should be picked to go. It is my job to give you the test, then you will go to the finals, and then, you will participate in all-country. Only one hundred children from this country may go to the Lunar School for the Gifted. Remember to try your best and don't cheat." She then passed out the test.

Name: Sasami Garcia.
Date: March 13, 2504.

#1: Who was the first female president?

#2: What species native only to China became extinct due to habitat loss in the early 21st century?

These questions were easy. I breezed through the test, checked over it and turned my paper over in around ten minutes. I waited anxiously through the school day and all through the next week. I had made the highest score out of my class and took three more tests until going on to the school test.

This test was considerably harder than the last four, but it turns out that studying pays off and I went on to the finals. In this test, there were a few more than a thousand people in the running. This was the hardest, most intense test I'd ever taken, but it turned out that I was one of the hundred to go to the moon.

The day I left wasn't quite as happy as the day I found out I'd won. My whole family and all my friends were hugging me and crying, calling me their little blue star. The shuttle was huge! Bigger than I'd ever imagined. The Hundred Chosen Ones (fifty girls, fifty boys) were strapped in. This was more exciting than any transportater or hover-board.

We bounced around during takeoff, enjoyed weightlessness in the shuttle, and made new bonds with friends from across the country. When we landed, I looked out the porthole. I gaped at the scene before me. The colossal dome rose high over our head, closing in the Lunar City.

"Welcome to the moon, honored students. Prepare for hatch opening. Please put your helmets on." A voice buzzed over the intercom.

As I put on my helmet, I wondered what it would be like there. Wondered if it would be fun, frightening, or just plain weird. No one knows what the future will bring. Great technology or humankind set back a hundred years. Giant computers that reach the clouds, or the recreation of the computer hardware. Good fortune or bad, all I know is it'll be an adventure. And I can't wait.

My prediction of school in the new millennium

by Carl Everett Little

The Millennium! One of the most talked about events in our lifetime. Will there be many changes for us or will life go on the same as usual? I wonder what will happen with our schools? Here are my predictions.

The desk which we will have will be equipped with a computer screen and a television set. We will have access to the internet and the television will have 38 different channels. When we have finished with our work, we will be able to watch television. It will also have a guess and write feature where if the teacher asks you a question and you get it right, it will automatically write it for you.

Our chairs will be bean bag style. They will have a reclining feature so that we can be comfortable while we are working or watching television. It will have a flip out desk we can use should we need to do any writing on our own.

The teachers will be robots. They will e-mail us our homework. If you are not satisfied with your report card, you can take a test right then and it can change your score.

We will have a jet that is 2 inches tall and 6 inches long so we can go to lunch wherever we want to. The jet will shrink us and fly us where we tell it to. When we get back, both our food and ourselves will be enlarged back to our regular size. Lunch will be eaten at our desk while we watch television.

The school day will last only two hours. Then we will be dismissed to go home and do whatever we want for the rest of the day.

Hurry Up, Millennium!!!

School In The 21st Century

by Sam Chaffin
Prestonsburg Elementary-tie

Beep! Beep!, Beep! "Samuel, it's time to get up." My eyes feel fuzzy, but I roll out of bed and ask mom what I should wear to school. "Oh, Sam, anything you want. Just push the button beside the picture of the outfit that you want to wear before you get on the conveyor belt." I feel like I'm in the Jetson's cartoon, but then I remember this is the first day of school in the new millennium. I finish getting ready and walk outside to catch the monorail to Prestonsburg Elementary School.

I am greeted by Mrs. Stumbo, who tells me to take my seat and put on my computerized headset. She explains that the books are larger, the work will be harder, but thank goodness our breaks will be longer. She also says there will be two hours work each morning, then we will break for recess. She is excited to tell us that we can sign up for the go-kart track, motocross, baseball, basketball, or football. I think to myself this twenty-first century is going to be cool. Of course I choose motocross, and have a real blast. Mrs. Stumbo signals it is now time for us to eat lunch. I select a cheese pizza from Pizza-Hut in the new food court. Tomorrow, I might have something from Burger King, or Long John Silvers, it depends. As we leave the Food Court, I notice the school is so much bigger. We have a big room for band, Mrs. Haywood will love it! Also, each room has a big screen television with a Sega Dreamcast and all the games you could imagine. We play for a while and then it's back to work. After about twenty minutes of strenuous school-work, Mrs. Stumbo says we are going to visit the new school zoo and learn about animals firsthand. I see animals from all over the world.

Before I know it I'm on the Monorail returning home and I think to myself, "School in Y2K is going to be AOK!"

LIFE IN THE NEXT MILLENNIUM

by Kyle Brown
McDowell Elementary
5th grade

In the next millenium I think that they will make robot maids. They will do our daily chores and do our homework. They will wash the car and mow the lawn. They will keep the house clean. Robots will get groceries for us and even take the kids to school.

I think that computers in cars will drive for us. The computer will say where you want to go? You say it, and they will go there. You will be able to cut from the drivers seat. You can see what the kids are doing and not have to wonder about them. Also for the long drives, you can go to sleep at night. And not have to spend money on coffee.

Think of it! A car that flies and not have to worry about the curves and hills. No more getting car sick and no more bouncing around. Also, no more lights in your eyes because the light will not reach up to your eyes. They will point down at the ground. The good part is that you will never ever have to buy tires again!

Roller-coasters that shoot off into space and come back down and hit the tracks. They will do loops without tracks. Also there will be no more long lines to stand in because there will be many roller coasters going at one time.

There will be coasters that take you around theme parks so you don't have to walk.

In the millennium, toys will be able to talk to you. They will play cars with you and also play any card game that you like. They will act human. It would be like having a friend with you all the time. The toy will grow with you. It can swim, talk, walk, play games, watch t.v. and talk to you. The toy will be good and teach us manners.

The phones will be better. They will contain T.V.'s so you can call somebody and look at them at the same time.

They will make calls only by your voice. No fingers will do the walking then! They will be T.V.'s, computers, phones, games, and beepers all rolled into one.

The animal traps will have legs that can walk and

We're Building A New Future Today!

The ideas and technology of the future will come from our children today. That's why it is so important to invest our time, energy, and resources into our kids now. Children learn what they are taught. Their education is our responsibility. They need to know we care and support them. Lets get involved in our kids' education.

The classroom of the new millennium would be like this. Teachers will be ping pong champion robots. There will be an Arcade and lunchroom. We would have uniforms. Fun uniforms, we would wear Pokemon and Rugrats shirts and blue jeans too. Your desk floats as soon as you sit down on it. The classes would be different. In music, you would play instruments like the orbit guitar. In gym, play games like float tag and puppy pool. Pokemon and Rugrats would be new students. Kids would teach class and a kid would be the principal. Paper would be different. We would have computer lab at 10:00 when we start school. We would start at 10:00 and end at 1:00. We would take trips by Western Union Express. We would go to Kings Island and ride every single ride in Hanna-Barbara land. Next, we would hang out with Scooby and the gang in Enchanted Theater in Scooby-Doo and the potterguest. When we would get back to school, it would be time to go home.

I think life in the next millennium will be really cool, because I think every thing will be hi-tech software for example robot dogs, maids, and other animals. Our life will be like the Jetsons. Our natural resources are depleting every day. We will become more dependent on foreign countries. The rain forest will probably be extinct. We may have to rely on other sources of oxygen in order to breath pure air. The population will increase. Traffic will become a problem; people will depend on other sources of travel. We will probably see a first woman president. Global warming will affect the weather greatly. Flooding and hurricanes will probably increase. Hopefully, they will find a cure for aids and cancer. Some things will be better and something will be worse.

find the animal you want. It will holler when it has caught the animal. The traps will be remote controlled. Also they will have a set that attracts the animal to the truck while you set back a watch.

The houses will be portable and you can take your house with you anywhere you go.

If would be like going on vacation and take your house with you. Also, it will have all the things that a home would normally have.

You just fold it up into and small trailer and hitch it to the back of your vehicle.

by Brandon Caudill
McDowell Elementary

Have you ever been sitting in your classroom and fell into the future and wondered what school will be like in the millennium?

I think school will be like...The teachers will be robots and your dish will be one giant computer for your work and it will have a key that sends it to your teacher to see if it is write. I think basketball will be played with a remote control. I think that the school buses will turn into transportation devices that take you place to place. I think the lunchroom food we'll be tiny capsules that you add water to make food. You won't have to sign your name you will have a code to put for your name.

You will not have to walk anywhere because your desk will fly. At the first of the year your principle will pick a student out every room to plug your teacher in and oil her.

The intercome will be connected to a earpiece you have in your ear. You will have a mouth piece to talk back to who needs you. I think the lockers will have a remote controlled lock like you can stand back turn the knob to the location and press the button, and it will open. I think pop machines will be under the ground and your step on a button and a pop comes up in a glass case. You drop in 5 dollars and it opens and you get your pop. Our school books will have a little screen that tells you the story. Our chalkboard will be computers also. The garbage cans will turn into R-2-D-2 and your say open up to throw away trash.

The pencil sharpener will be sensed and when you put your pencil in it puts a perfect point on the end of your pencil. The millennium may be a lot different, as you can see, but I think it will be very exciting.

(See Children's, page six)

The classroom of the new millennium will be different. We will write funny. We will make squiggles on the paper to do our work. At lunch they will eat metal, clothes, and their shoes. When they talk to each other they will talk funny. They will make sounds instead of words. After school they will go home to their boxes.

Life in the new millennium is highly advanced.

Today is July 4, 2098, and they're setting off the laser works. I say laser works, because instead of using the crude cannon and colored gun powder we shoot a ball full of little harmless laser producing guns that when the ball explodes, hover in mid air and makes a spectacular laser light show. Also, the lasers come together to make a hologram depicting the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

If you think that was a change, you should take a look at the schools. Instead of having to go over and over something to learn a new concept, your parents can go to a special doctor when your about one or two years old and get a E.I.T. (Electrical Impulse Transmitter) implanted into your cerebral cortex. The E.I.T. sends electrical impulses to your cerebral cortex that are identical to the ones your body sends to your brain when you do anything. Instead of reading a book you actually plug into the school and down load information, learn it instantly, and remember it forever. You could be a genius in a matter of months!

Another weird thing is how people entertain themselves in the new millennium. Now, when you are watching TV, you plug it into your E.I.T. and you are in the movie. It sure beats the old surround sound of the 20th century! Another entertaining thing about the new millennium is if you lived in a town and made friends, then you or them moved away you could play a virtual game with your

I believe in 2000 or later the schools will be very different. For instance we may not have human teachers, instead of human teachers we may have robot teachers that are programmed to teach. School may also be different because our text books could electronic; like I push a button and it reads me a page or so. Maybe, instead of school buses, we could ride an airplane that comes and picks us up from our houses and takes us to school, and to our homes every day. Another thing school might have is con-vertbelts to take us down the halls; that would prevent us kids from running down the halls. That is how I think schools will be different into the new millennium.

There are many debates about what is going to happen in the year 2000. Some people say that the world may end in the year 2000. They also believe there is going to be power outages that may cause mass confusion. Then there are some that never get excited over anything and say nothing is going to happen. Who knows?

Since everyone is expressing their own opinions, I would like to share mine with you. Of course, there are going to be new inventions and discoveries that will change the way we live. That's nothing new.

Some of those inventions probably should never be invented, like cloning animals or anything else. That is God's job — to create life on Earth. Nobody should try to interfere with human nature.

I definitely feel that the school system will change in different ways. Some people are already taking college courses through the Internet. I say that someday in the future, students will do their work on computers, so there will not be any writing, which will help the environment because all the trees that are being cut down for paper won't have to be cut anymore. So many animals that live in trees won't lose their home. If you're an animal lover, like me, then this probably sounds like a good idea to you.

The environment in school will be changed, too. The heating and cooling and lighting will be tuned on at the touch of a button. I feel it will all be computerized. Instead of having combination locks on the lockers, there will be a certain code you will have to type into a computer that looks like a calculator installed into the front of the locker.

Your transportation to school will be a little different, unless you ride a cheese wagon (school bus). For some reason, I have a feeling those things will be around for years to come. I don't think everyone will be flying around in spaceships, at least not in the year 2000. However, the vehicles will be smaller. They may even run on batteries instead of gasoline. A few months back, I recall hearing about a car that you could actually fold up. Don't ask; that just seems a little too weird to me.

If the power goes out due to the failure of computers, it won't be out long. With the advanced technology we have, I never underestimate the power the industries possess. But just in case something like that does happen, I am sure I won't starve. My family has been stocking up for Y2K since we first heard about the possible aftermath.

You see, I don't believe the world is going to end, but I know it will change in many different ways. It always has changed, but just because the new year is going to end in three zeroes and hasn't done that for 1,000 years doesn't mean we are going to advance 1,000 years ahead of our time.

by Josh Howell
Allen Central High School
12th grade-tie

Schools of the next millennium will definitely take on a new look. Fewer buildings that will serve more students in a more productive manner is almost a certainty. Teaching will be mostly done through the Internet. Social pressure on students will become nonexistent. Students will learn more and advance their knowledge more quickly in the millennium schools, but school prices will definitely rise. Much of the human contact aspect of school will be taken away. Our society could become as indifferent as the computers people work on.

Computers will be a major factor in the lives of preschoolers, students and adults in the millennium. With the awakening of the Internet in the last half of the 20th century, much of life's tasks and chores will be done on-line in the 21st century. Much shopping, banking, communication, socializing, and education will be done through the Internet from home. To become computer literate is a must in today's society. Schools are making the shift to technology as quickly as possible. Computers are helping people learn everything from how to read and write to how to conduct an interview or read a blueprint.

Students will use computers and the Internet to write reports, take tests, research, receive grades, publish school newspapers, keep statistics, and communicate. People will learn by communicating with other teens from across the world. Customs from other lands really come to life, when students are able to communicate with foreign students.

With the emergence of electronic libraries, a trip to the public library will be a thing of the past in the 21st century. Most research will be done on-line. Researching on-line is done rapidly and errorless.

Increasing violence in our schools could be the forerunner to electronic classrooms. Logging into a classroom at a certain time every day will become a safer way to receive an education. Students will be accounted for throughout the day with log-in sheets.

CAI, computer-assisted instruction, is the use of computers to help people learn, practice and improve their skills. CAI permits students to work at their own pace, rather than at the pace of quicker or slower students. A computer has infinite patience, and no matter who the student is, the computer shows no partiality. A computer provides constant and immediate feedback to the student, encourages experimentation, and will repeat a problem indefinitely. Students will have the computer's undivided attention.

An increasing number of educational institutions will be offering electronic courses in which instructors and students may never meet; they communicate solely through the Internet or via modem. Testing will also be done through the Internet. Codes, passwords, and Internet service providers will be used for student verification. Computers will eliminate many teaching positions.

Programs will replace teachers, and home computers may replace classrooms. With the new on-line teaching, extra help will be a click away. A student may spend as much time as required on one assignment. Many will go to a central location to submit and retrieve assignments. The demand for computer programmers, analysts, and repairmen will skyrocket.

Administration costs will be cut in half. Educators will use computers to handle administrative chores, including scheduling, maintenance, attendance records, scoring tests, and calculating grades.

Social events, such as ball games, will be broadcast via Internet. The significance of being a high school athlete will slowly fade away. Dances, proms, and other social events will still exist, but only under closely guarded conditions. Social interaction has suffered. Social etiquette will become less significant in the future.

The classroom of the millennium may scare or excite everybody. Many aspects of the computer will amaze everybody. Knowledge will be plentiful, but the cost will be great.

Welcome to the home of the millennium. This is nearly a maintenance-free home. Everything has been designed and developed to make the lives of residents as comfortable and convenient as possible. Technology has advanced at the speed of light. Homes are now equipped with luxuries that could only have been imagined years ago.

Upon approaching the entry, a DNA-recognizing, hand-shaped pad will serve as a key. Only residents whose DNA and hand print match those programmed into the security system will be allowed to unlock the door. Step onto the pad with two indented footprints. Within two seconds after stepping on the pad, all dirt particles are removed from shoes.

All living quarters have light and heat sensors in them. Lights automatically come on when you enter the room and are turned off when no one can no longer be detected in the room. Room temperatures stay at 70 degrees. An ion stabilizing unit controls the atmosphere by removing and adding ions to the air when needed. Ions change when barometric pressure goes up and down, which can cause breathing problems. Breathing will be much easier in the millennium home.

The kitchen area of the home is equipped with many modern appliances. An electronic menu will appear. Residents select the meal of choice from the menu and it is automatically prepared. After dinner, dishes are automatically washed and put back in place. The kitchen table is cleaned and the automatic vacuum sweeps as soon as the room is empty. The room is now spotless.

In the living room area, a machine is waiting to sift through the mail. All junk mail is marked and easily recognizable. Most important mail will be on the computer, which has automatically turned on and downloaded the mail. Bills are paid through account numbers on the Internet. All shopping is done through the Internet. Safety and convenience are of the utmost importance.

The bathroom area is equipped with two hampers. One is marked family, the other friends. Dirty clothes are deposited in the correct hamper while a very relaxing jet shower is being taken. By the time the shower is over, the clothes will be laundered and ready to be put back on, if desired. No wash clothes are needed. The entire body is then quickly blow dried. After the bath cycle is finished, any residue or water left in the bathroom will be automatically cleaned up by an automatic vacuum when the bathroom is empty.

The bedroom is designed to relax and soothe the occupants. Clean sheets are placed on the bed daily by an electronic bed maker that is built into the bed. It works similar to a convertible top. Sounds can be heard from each wall, if desired. Minute earphones are available in the event that more than one party is occupying the bed and want to hear different sounds. The depth of darkness is adjusted by its occupant. A timer is set to wake

This home, filled with technological luxuries, is truly the home of the millennium. Some of the personal aspect has been programmed out, but technology truly does make life much simpler for its occupants.

by Kimberly Williams

Have you ever wondered about the new millennium? Well, I have. In the present millennium, we have created many inventions, such as the telegraphs, telephones, automobiles, railways, machines for industry and home use, radios, televisions, computers and the Internet, to name a few. In the 21st century, I know we will have better and more modernistic inventions. Some inventions which I believe will be used or invented are hover cars, voice sensitive electronics, and cars that can steer themselves on certain highways.

Hover cars are automobiles that float over the roadway. These cars have already been invented, but not all the kinks have been worked out of them. I feel the kinks will be worked out in the near future. I know that in the 21st century everyone will drive hover cars. It will be easier to get around in traffic jams because hover cars will allow people to float over the traffic jams and continue on their way. No longer will people sit in traffic jams for hours. People will be free to travel to work. Ambulances will be free to transport patients to and from hospitals to receive fast and immediate health care. Children will get to and from school in record time, and people who are out for a good time will have more fun in their hover cars, because the ride will be more pleasurable.

Road memory cars will also be a new invention. These cars will have the memory of different roads locked into their computers. Drivers will type in the name of the road and the speed, and the car will drive them on the road. When the drivers come close to their destinations, they will switch the knob to manual and will steer the vehicle like a normal car. Road memory cars will decrease travel time for thousands of motorists each day.

Voice sensitive electronics are also 21st century inventions. These inventions are very high-tech electronics. To operate them, a person would speak their names, such as "TV," and tell them what to do. This is an example: "TV, turn to channel 29." The television would follow the command. Voice sensitive electronics will free handicapped people to be more independent in their own home. No longer will handicapped people feel they are incapable of performing many tasks that other people take for granted.

Technology is definitely a thing of the future. It will affect our lives tremendously. What will the new millennium hold for us? What do you think?

by Casey Keathley

Hello! And once again it's me, Casey Keathley, from Casey's Discovery Corner, reporting live from one of the classrooms at Adams Middle School. Excuse me! Miss! Miss! Yes. Yeah, you. What's your name? Mrs. Reynolds, and I are teaching this class right now, but can I help you? And once again, I am reporting live from Mrs. Reynolds' class at Adams Middle School. Well, yes, I guess I could say that you could help me because I was wondering if I could ask a few students what they thought was going to happen in the next millennium. Why, yes, I suppose you could, but only if they are through with their work. OK, here it goes.

Casey: Hey, you! Yeah, you! What's your name and what do you think will happen in the millennium?

Interviewee: Angela Whitaker, and I think that the economics will change.

Casey: OK, is that all?

Angela: Yep!

Casey: All righty, then. NEXT!!!

Interviewee: Hi!

Casey: What's your name and what do you think will happen in the millennium?

Interviewee: Nickie Hart, and I think that the world is going to end and the computers are going to crash.

Casey: OK, then, that is a possibility. Next person.

Interviewee: Hello!

Casey: Hello! And what's your name and what do you think will happen in the next millennium?

Interviewee: My name is Echo Ratliff, and I don't think anything is really going to happen, because it's just another year, right? But there is a possibility that some computers will crash, because some of the programs aren't programmed to go on to the year 2000.

Casey: Well, then, that sounds good. OK, who's next?

Interviewee: Me, me! I am.

Casey: What's your name?

Interviewee: Ashanti Risner!

Casey: Well, Ashanti, what do you think is going to happen in the millennium?

Ashanti: I think that the world is going to turn into a world like the Jetsons. With a robot in every home, flying cars, electricity-charged cars, push buttons for huge, home-cooked meals, and even machines where you stick your homework in and it does it for you!

Casey: Well, now, that is very interesting. Now, who's next? Wait, I know that we would all like to hear what Mrs. Reynolds thinks about what is going to happen in the millennium. Mrs. Reynolds, it's your turn to tell us what you think is going to happen in the millennium.

Mrs. Reynolds: I think that the world is going to improve and we will find many more cures for the common cold, AIDS, cancer and many more.

Casey: Well, that would be very nice. Personally, I think that everything will stay just the same, because the official millennium won't really occur until the year 2001. Only because there was never a year 0. Once again, it's your favorite reporter from Casey's Discovery Corner.

I think the millennium classroom will have desks that you can see through. It will be glass. I think there will be a computer that you do your work on, instead of books.

I also think we should have carpet that is red in the classes and library and CD players so we could listen to music in the room. Teachers will record the lessons on tape, so they would not have to come to school. Instead of us reading books, the books read to us. We will have social hour in third grade. There will be new maps that will talk to us.

The teachers will be nice robots. The school will have private rooms for the children. They will have rainbow-colored walls and ceilings and wallpaper in every room.

In the new millennium we should be able to read and work. In the classroom of the new millennium, there will be different things to do. Maybe we will have new buildings and computers. We should clean our parks and places. It will take over 1,000 people that we will not have to do it over and over and we will not have to step on glass and get hurt. The millennium classes will be different. Maybe our desks will be different and pencils will be different and cars, four-wheelers, motorcycles, everything will be different. Even ourselves will be different. Nature will be clean.

This year, 1999, people were shooting at schools. We were lucky at our school there was no shooting. Last year, there was a knife search. A girl in our room had a knife in her book bag. Our millennium school should not be like this year. We should have new paper, movies and pencils and books. One thing we should not do is shoot and stab. It is dangerous. The ball will drop. Hope you have a happy new year.

Life in the Next Thousand Years

by Nicholas W. Smith

As the new millennium approaches, everybody has their own opinion as to what will happen. Many people believe that all the computers and machinery will shut down and we will revert back to life before technology. Many people think that we will continue to progress in technology and ultimately destroy ourselves with computers, or that the computers will take over and enslave us. I have my own views on what will happen.

I am very excited about the new millennium, and cannot wait for the new technologies that come with it. A complete shutdown of our nation's computers, and those across the world, will not happen. We can, and have, prepared ourselves for the "millennium bug" and will continue on unscathed. I do not, however, think computers will ever have a mind of their own. They can only have artificial intelligence, and will not be able to think without the aid of mankind.

I think that as we move into the new year, the new millennium, and a new life

Did you ever wonder what a classroom will look like in the future? Maybe you will have a classroom on Mars. Or you might have a robot for a teacher. The robot will not give any homework! Your desk will have a lap top computer in it. When it is time for lunch all you have to do is push a button and your lunch will appear on your desk. In art class you might have a famous artist come to teach you art. In P.E. maybe somebody like Michael Jordan will teach you how to play basketball. Or you might have a big band play in your music class. That's what I think classrooms will be like in the next millennium.

Think...think...think, what will life be like in 2000.

■ Cars

What kind of cars will we have in the next millennium (2,000)? Well, I imagine that all of the cars will be fancy and have a computer in them. I also imagine the cars will have copiers and a slushy maker in them too. These cars might have green, purple, and blue colors. They might be run by electricity. The body might curve and whirl all around.

What's your opinion?

■ Houses

What will houses look like in the next millennium? I have an image that the houses will be weird colors and have indoor swimming pools. I also think that houses will have magnetic attaching garages. The house colors might be pink, purple, black, brown, and green mixed with yellow. What do you think?

■ Weather and Ozone Layer

Hot or cold? Who knows?

I think that it will be very hot in the year 2,000 because of the Ozone layer getting hotter. This might affect people's lives by not having to have heaters because it would be so hot. We might have to chill water to have cooling and our crops might grow better. What's your idea?

■ Electricity

Will it go on? I visualize that we will have electricity in the year 2000. It would be hard for us to get along with our lives if we had no electricity. The electricity could get to your house by computer chips in the power lines. When you turned something on in your house the person at the computer at the electricity company would have to press send. So then the electricity would go to the computer chips and it would send to your home what's on your mind now?

I know some of the things I've said are weird but it could happen...happen...happen...happen!!!

E-Commerce, anything com. online education, point and click your way to a world of personalized everything. Sort of makes you wonder how the next thousand years could be more advanced, doesn't it? But think about this, a thousand years ago, no one knew our half of the world existed. Things change. With technological advances coming every day, almost every imaginable possibility is opening up.

Every area of daily life is being improved upon. Food production, manufacturing of goods, military warfare, education, and even the machine used to create this document is being improved upon. It's hard to say that there will be one area focused on for improvement in the future. The fact is, there won't be just one area improved. Instead, more and more new areas will be created to improve upon.

Let's look at something as simple as the everyday product of plastic. "Plastics make it possible." Yeah, we've all seen the commercials. But what was before plastic? Was nothing possible then? What will be next?

I envision a day when there is an even more practical, and useful, polymer. This marvel of science will be able to withstand more stresses than today's wonder solid. How about heat? Plastic melts easily. When it does melt, it puts off toxic fumes. The new product won't be so susceptible to the flame. No more meltdown causing leftovers to ruin that expensive microwave.

Plastic breaks, or at the very least, bends beyond repair. This futuristic material, will be sturdier, and yet more flexible, than today's "Rubbermaid." Forget worrying about hitting the garbage cans in your rush to get to school or work. You can use the lids to your material-of-the-future garbage cans to fill holes in your driveway, if you so desire.

Plastic products can also be expensive to replace if lost, melted, or thrown out because you left extra Thanksgiving dinner in the refrigerator too long. The new material will be easily and inexpensively manufactured. How? New, along with greatly improved, methods for making the synthetic substance, of course. Probably costing around thirty cents each. Available in packs of five or ten at www.wondercontainers.co m. They can even ship your containers in containers made of the stuff. There's a two for one deal.

This material doesn't exist yet. You probably won't see it in a Wal-Mart ad in the next week. No one can even say that it will ever exist. Maybe someone will come up with a time machine to see what will happen and what type of garbage cans will be made in the future. But until the day when all secrets of the future can be revealed with the push of a button, have a great time dreaming.

In the Year 2000-3000 I think school will be somewhat different.

■ Dress Style

I think that all schools will go to uniforms because today's fashion is becoming so outrageous.

■ School Supplies

In the future school supplies will be Laptop Computers with very few books. Everything will be on the computer. Most of the information that we need, we will get from the Internet.

■ Children at School

In the future the children will be nicer to everyone else. Blacks will be appreciated by whites and whites will be appreciated by blacks. No one will be put down. Everyone will appreciate the teachers and substitutes.

■ Consequences at School

Schools will get tougher on children who act up and do not follow the rules. Students will get expelled for 1 semester. It won't just be a little old paddle anymore, it will be the big stuff if you get in trouble.

■ If There Is A Substitute

If there is a substitute and you do not treat him/her with good, complete respect, then you will be sent to the office and you will get paddled by the principal and get suspended for one week.

That's what I think will happen in the year 2000-3000.

The cars in the millennium will be smaller than they are now. They will have a little camera in the mirror and a little screen inside. The camera will tape what is behind you and it will show up on the little screen. Cars in the millennium will be called the beetle. The cars in the millennium can also drive by there self.

Television in the millennium will be 3D. Like when you turn it on it will look like the screen is jumping at you. When you watch a scary movie it will be so scary that you would have to turn the channel.

Homes in the millennium are going to be really different than today's homes. When you spill something on the carpet it will clean up by itself. You won't have to cook you just tell it what you need and it will cook or make it for you.

The schools in the millennium will be like schools now. But we will not have text books, we will have computers. The computers will teach us how to do math problems and teach us to write good stories also to make us write better sentences.

The phones in the millennium are not going to be like they are now. They will be like a little TV and you just dial the number. Then you can see that person that you are talking to. You can take the phone any where you want.

In the millennium at school when we have recess. We go to a kid zone where we can have so much more fun than we have now. The kid zone will have a top for when it rains and a heater for cold days.

I hope when the year 2000 comes that all of that really happens. I also hope that the world does not end. That's what everybody said any way. In the millennium I hope all of that happens because it would be a lot more easier for all the kids.

There will be capsules you can buy at Wal-Mart that are labeled on the back. There are 3 in a pack and the cost $8. The first one is a hover cycle. It hovers on air and can go up to 60 m.p.h. The second is a mini jet. It is 15 long and 10 wide, and can go up to 90 mph. The third one is a mobile home complete with bathroom, 2 bedrooms and a kitchen. All you have to do is throw it on the ground a poof! There is your home, jet or cycle.

The next thing I think the new millennium will bring is a wall machine called the food-a-matic 2000.

You type in what food you want on the keyboard and in 2 minutes it will pop out one by one. It takes 5 minutes if you want Chinese.

The last but not least is the NIP. NIP means Never Ill Pill. When you are born the doctor gives you a shot. That shot can keep you from getting sick for 25 years. After your 25 years are up if you don't go and get another shot that day, you'll immediately get a cold even in the summer.

for all of us, that things will become easier. Everything will run off computers, and we will have to study hard to keep up with the new technologies that will come. The downside to this, however, is that as technology becomes better, and computers are made to do everything in everyday life, that we will become lazy, and forget what it is to really work. The world as a whole will be poorer in health, and as a result, our life spans will be shorter. New diseases will come from the lack of work we will have, and there may not be a cure for these diseases.

Medical technology will also continue to grow, but I do not think that it will be able to counteract the slovenly ways that humans face. The doctors may be able to give us artificial limbs, and some organs, but the diseases I think we will face will have more to do with the brain than any other part of the body. The brain cannot be replaced. No technology will be able to have the human ability to reason, which separates us from animals and computers. This, I believe, will be the downfall of our society.

I am looking forward to the technology that awaits us, but I fear for the future of the world, as pertains to the medical problems we will face. I hope, for my children and grandchildren's sake, that we do not become so lazy that we do not want to work. It looks like that is what is going to happen.

people would be broken into tiny particles as they are transformed from one place to another and then restored to their old selves once they get to their place. There would be no car wrecks or injuries from car wrecks, need for road repairs, and air pollution from exhaust pipes would be eliminated!

John Glenn would be super amazed with these new portholes. For example, he could get to and back from outer space faster than any rocket ship he had never seen while he was an astronaut. He would even have the chance to travel to the furthest planet Pluto. The portholes would be equipped with all the air and materials needed for survival. The portholes would also have special holes so people wouldn't experience motion sickness or feel like they were flipping as they traveled to the location in outer space they wanted to go to. They could also go to any planet they wanted to without having to use special astronaut suits. No person will know that there will be tiny little microchips inside the portholes so that not even a living person could burst. This is because these chips will be so powerful that when something such as a meteoroid or an asteroid hits it they will ricochet off of the force field surrounding the person or group of people that are being transformed through the porthole. All of this will be done in a blink of an eye when the big red button on the outside of the porthole is pushed for ignition.

The portholes of the next millennium will change the way people travel on earth as well as in outer space. Life in the 21st century will surely be exciting! Hopefully, the next generation will be able to use portholes for transportation each day.

The portholes would probably take at least three to four years to install all across the world once the scientists have finished their research. People should not be impatient as it would be better for them in the long run. For example, the

Does your teddy bear have the sniffles?

"There's no cure for the common cold."

That old saying is hardly reassuring when your children get sick during cold and flu season.

Providing relief for your children's coughing, runny nose, sore throat and other cold symptoms is important. So is making sure a persistent cold is not something more serious like bronchitis, pneumonia or the flu. Finding the right health care may help your children – and you – breathe a little easier this winter.

Dr. Saifullah, board certified pediatrician at the Mud Creek Clinic, can help. His services are available to everyone. If you do not have insurance, Medicare or a Kentucky medical card, you may have to pay as little as 20% of the total.

So with a pediatrician like Dr. Saifullah—and a clinic like Mud Creek just down the road, there is every reason to get the health care needed by your children.

And their teddy bears, too.

Trailing Jenny Wiley

by Pam Shingler

If our Jenny were alive today and someone asked her, "What's your sign?" she'd have to say, "Which one?"

After all, our Jenny has gone uptown — at least figuratively. She's got 100 signs now. In fact, you may have noticed a couple right around here.

There's one at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park, on the road below the amphitheater and convention center, and another on US 23 near the KY 3 intersection. Continue on up 23 and you'll see many more.

The signs mark the Jenny Wiley Trail Heritage Byway, a reconfiguring of the old Jenny Wiley Trail, which turned controversial as ATVs and other unauthorized rascallions damaged and littered private lands over which the trail ran.

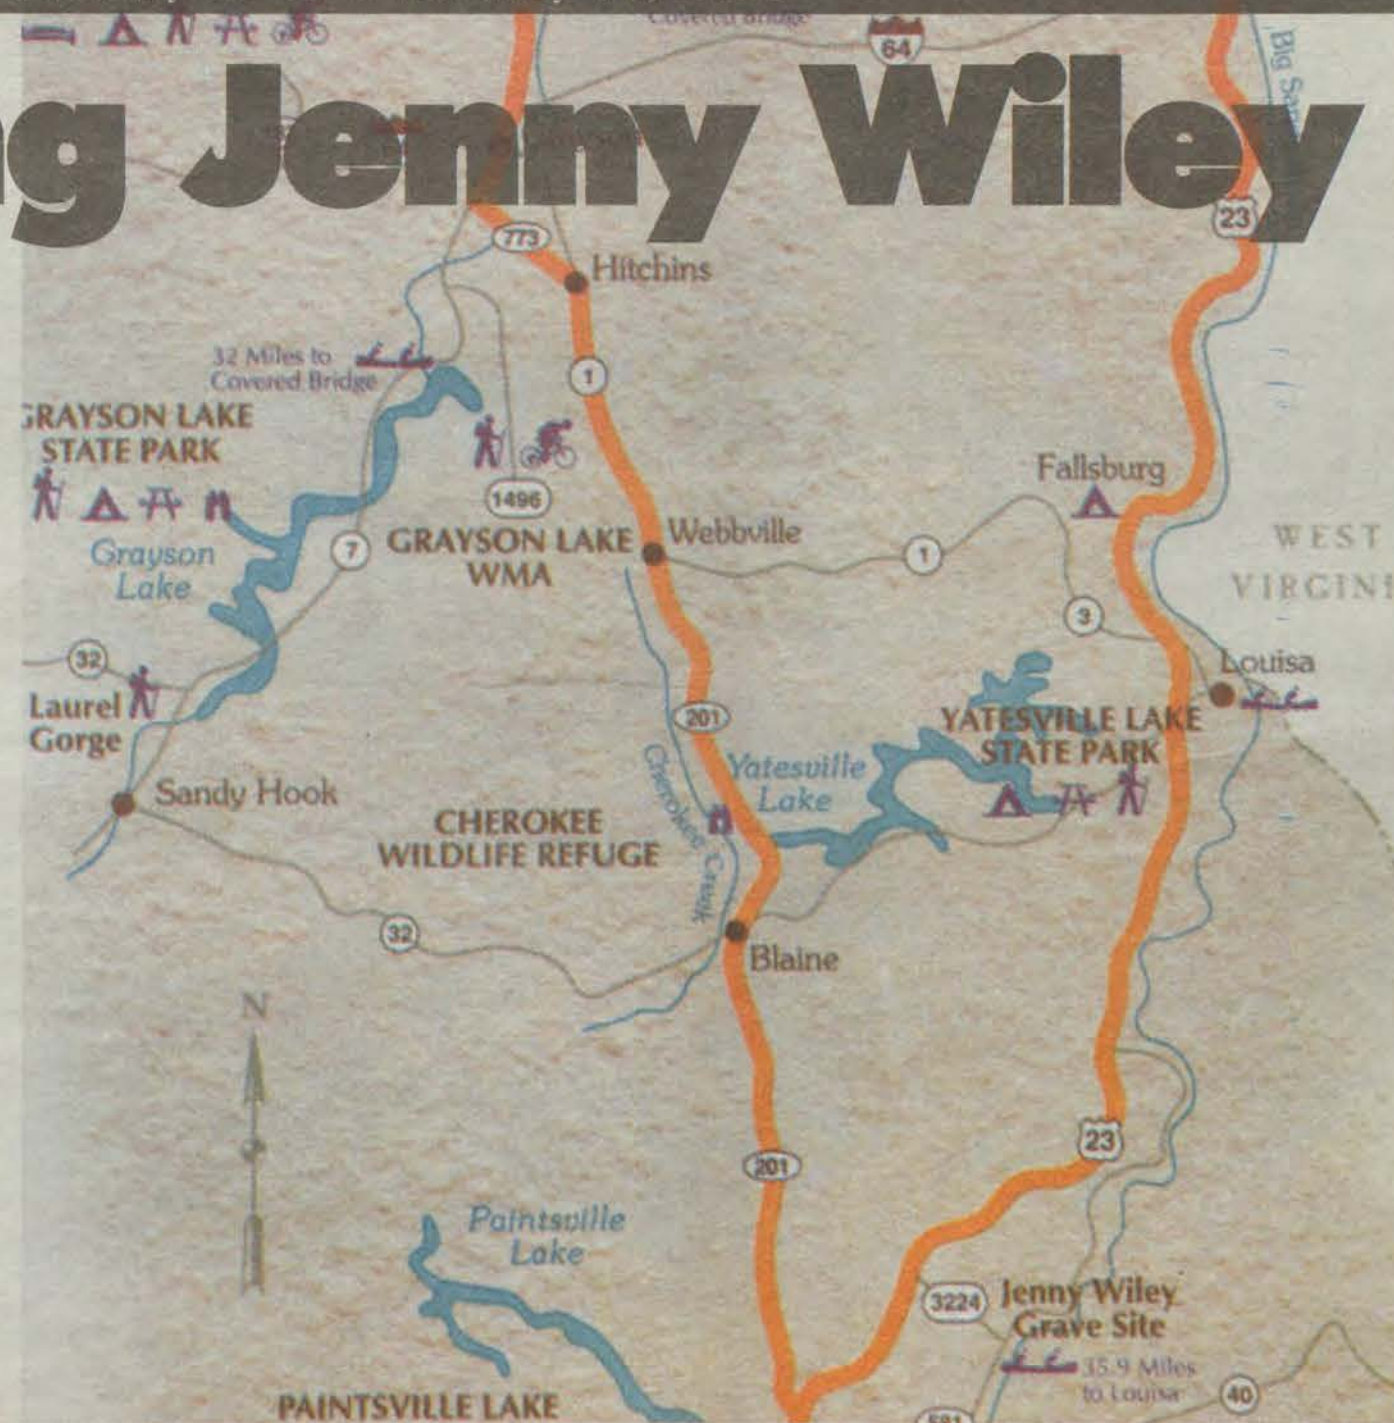

You can drive this trail, although there's ample opportunity to stop and hike, much as Jenny walked with her renegade tour guides.

The "byway" roughly follows the 211-year-old route of the Virginia woman as she hiked with her Native American captors toward the Ohio River and then as she escaped and made her way back to Harman's Station, or Blockhouse Bottom, where the Combs Airport is now, near the juncture of Floyd and Johnson counties.

From here, she went back to her husband, Tom Wiley, in Virginia. Later, the couple settled at River in present-day Johnson County, with her Sellards kin. She is buried at River, and the site is marked on the new map of the trail.

The new byway forms a loop of the state's northeastern sector, meandering for more than 150 miles.

The trail starts at Dewey Lake, here in Floyd

Natasha's STARS

ARIES

(March 21 to April 19)

You often use charm to get people to see things your way - but this week you could run up against a Cancer who wants more than sweet persuasion. Prepare some hard facts to prove your case.

TAURUS

(April 20 to May 20)

Your usual commonsense approach to decision-making wins out again. There will be some changes in your financial situation that you can turn to your benefit.

GEMINI

(May 21 to June 20)

You need to nourish your inner self. Get away for a while from all that artificial light and closed-in surroundings. Mother Nature will do wonders for your spirit.

CANCER

(June 21 to July 22)

Your love for travel pays off this week when someone you met on a previous trip makes contact with you. Your career may seem stalled right now, but be patient; a big change is in the works.

LEO

(July 23 to August 22)

You're the hottest cat around and a certain Libra would love to bask in that warmth you exude. There's a chance of a major move at work that could mean relocating overseas.

VIRGO

(August 23 to September 22)

Your penchant for neatness is to be admired. But in your zeal to tidy up the loose ends of a relationship, don't cut yourself off forever from someone who loves you.

LIBRA

(September 23 to October 22)

You could be called upon to exercise leadership in a difficult situation. You may feel a little uneasy at the prospect, but you know it's something you can handle.

SCORPIO

(October 23 to November 21)

Someone at work wants to know a secret that someone else has confided to you. All sorts of persuasion will be offered to get you to reveal it, but stick to your principles.

SAGITTARIUS

(November 22 to December 21)

This is a good time to mend a relationship that once held great promise. The longer you delay, the more difficult it will be to patch things up. Take care of a minor health problem immediately.

CAPRICORN

(December 22 to January 19)

You may feel a mite frisky this week. Great. You earned the right for a real caper. After the fun, get back to some fundamentals, including an outstanding money matter.

AQUARIUS

(January 20 to February 18)

Family is your priority this week. Reach out to someone who may be too proud to ask for help. At work, speak up about a problem that is affecting you and your co-workers.

PISCES

(February 19 to March 20)

You may be trying to do too much too soon. Slow your pace a little and you'll find you can accomplish what you need to do without pushing yourself to exhaustion.

YOU BORN THIS WEEK: You may feel a little let down because you're not sure that people appreciate what you do for them. Not everyone can express how they feel, though; be assured that you are appreciated and loved, and for that, you should consider yourself very lucky.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD

by Chuck Shepherd

— Munich, Germany, physiotherapist Franziska Weber told reporters in December that her supercold (minus 230 degrees Fahrenheit) walk-in freezer therapy, originally designed to relieve chronic pain, now is used more frequently by clients who want merely to relieve stress. One to three minutes in the chamber (cost: about $11), Weber reports, gives patients a huge energy burst and is especially popular among business executives to condition themselves for important meetings.

— In December, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service ordered Maria Wigent, age 37 and a 32-year resident of New York City, deported (thus breaking up the home she shares with her husband and two teen-age sons) after her third shoplifting conviction, involving about $25 worth of items. And a December New York Times story recounted the plight of a Guatemalan-American in Virginia facing deportation this month for the single act of biting her husband ("domestic violence") during a fight.

People Who Are Not Like You and Me

— Police in Pittsburgh identified a 31-year-old man as the person who was too lazy to lug his Christmas tree down to the street and thus simply tossed it out his sixth-floor window on Christmas Day. The tree hit a power line on the way down, knocking out electricity to about 400 customers and deadening the 911 line briefly until a backup generator kicked on.

— The president of Oklahoma City's Fraternal Order of Police told reporters in November that the six recent incidents of on-duty sexual misbehavior by officers is attributable to "stress" emanating from their anguish working in the aftermath of the 1995 bombing of the Murrah federal building.

— Born-again Christian David Strein, 44, announced in November that he would appeal his 1998 dismissal from a New Mexico state government job for misusing his computer because he was actually powerless to stay away from Internet pornography. Strein contended that after he first discovered online porn, "Satan told me to check it out some more." Also, said Strein, once at a porn site, he was trapped on a virtually endless loop of sex sites that had taken over his computer. (The administrative law judge had ruled that Strein had visited too many sites and given them his credit-card number too many times to have been blameless.)

Crises in the Workplace

— In August, an industrial tribunal in England upheld the firing of reporter Ian

White, 36, who had been warned several times over the years about his bad hygiene, which he blamed on depression over his marriage. It was Britain's first such official decision after several that seemed to suggest that workmates had to tolerate diverse body odors.

— Fireproof Workers: An arbitration panel ruled in July that Toronto Transit Commission janitor Winston Ruhle had been improperly fired and deserved about $115,000 (U.S.) in damages; he was fired in 1995 for padding his recuperation time after surgery, improperly missing 203 days during a 244-day period. And English chauffeur John Forbes, 55, won an employment tribunal ruling in September that it was unfair to fire him simply because he had twice dressed in women's clothing on the job and flashed his underwear to passing motorists.

A horse of a different color Carnival enhances 'Camp Carnival'

In conjunction with the major exhibit "Imperial China: The Art of the Horse in Chinese History," on view at the Kentucky Horse Park from May through August, the University of Kentucky Art Museum announces the opening of "A Horse of a Different Color."

This exhibition of works selected from the museum's permanent collection includes paintings, photographs, and sculpture focused on the horse as both friend and force of nature.

Organized by the museum's education department for writing and drawing tours, the exhibition will be open until June 25.

Works in the exhibit include folk art toys, 19th century paintings, photographs, and silkscreen prints. Ralston Crawford's 1957 lithograph, "Horse," demonstrates the artist's lifelong preference for geometric forms and abstraction.

Evan Decker's mid-20th century construction "Marlboro Country," made of painted wood, metal, plastic, and string, is a tribute to Decker's Appalachian roots. A Goya etching from the "Disparates (Follies)" series, titled "El Caballo Raptor" (The Kidnapping Horse), dating from the early 1820s, reveals Goya's critical view of the social and political upheaval in his native Spain.

Photographs by Robert C. May, Ralph Eugene Meatyard, Peter Brown, Keith Carter, Danny Lyon, and James Baker Hall, illustrate various aspects of horses in Kentucky and the western United States.

Also on view are pages from Persian manuscripts, a sculpture by Minnie and Garland Adkins, and works on paper by Edward Penfield and the Italian Futurist artist, Gino Severini.

MIAMI — (INTERNET WIRE) — In anticipation of carrying a record quarter of a million children in 2000, Carnival Cruise Lines, the leader in family cruising, has made a number of recent enhancements to its complimentary fleetwide kids' program, "Camp Carnival." Included among the various kid-friendly amenities is a new turn-down service offering complimentary cookies at bedtime, along with updated children's menus and a wider variety of logo items provided to all "Camp Carnival" participants. <http://www.internetwire.com/technews/tr/06991195.dsl>

Northwest implements luggage liability limit

MINNEAPOLIS — (INTERNET WIRE) — Northwest Airlines has announced it has increased the limit it will pay for lost luggage from $1,250 to $2,500 and that the new limit is effective immediately for travel dates. The Department of Transportation (DOT) approved the increase, but would not make it effective until January 18. As part of its new Customers First customer service program, Northwest has also streamlined its lost luggage tracing procedure to include a system-wide program based on a one-, three- and 12-hour standard.

Oscar-nominated program edited by Lexington native

In 1968, on her 24th birthday, Barbara Sonneborn received word that her husband, Jeff, had been killed in Vietnam. "We regret to inform," the telegram began.

Twenty years later, Sonneborn, a photographer and visual artist, embarked on a journey in search of the truth about war and its legacy.

KET presents her vision in P.O.V. "Regret to Inform," airing Monday, January 24, at 10 p.m.

Framed as an odyssey through Vietnam to Que Son, where Jeff was killed, Sonneborn weaves together the stories of widows from both sides of the war. The result is profoundly moving examination of the impact of war over time.

The film is "so exquisitely filmed, edited and scored, it is the documentary equivalent of a tragic epic poem," writes The New York Times.

P.O.V. "Regret to Inform" is edited by filmmaker Lucy Massie Phenix, a

Lexington native, who is best known for her editing of the international award-winner "The Life and Times of Rosie The Riveter."

Phenix has also worked with Kentucky artistic mainstay Appalshop, as well as on numerous other films.

"Regret to Inform" received an Academy Award nomination for Best Documentary Feature and won the Best Director and Best Cinematography awards for documentary films at the 1999

Sundance Film Festival.

The show is produced by Barbara Sonneborn and Janet Cole with Lucy Massie Phenix and Ken Schneider and is a co-presentation with the National Asian American Telecommunications Association. The program is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing.

Viewers can find out more about programming on KET by visiting the KET Web site at <http://www.ket.org>, a Kentucky.com affiliate.

Museum of the Cherokee educational, entertaining

Cherokee, NC — The heart of Cherokee culture is located directly in the center of the Qualla Boundary. The Museum of the Cherokee Indian, with a giant red-wood sculpture of Sequoyah standing at the entrance, welcomes visitors on a journey through time.

The original Cherokee museum opened to visitors 50 years ago. The building seen today was built in 1976 and expanded in the 1980s, but the most exciting transition in the museum's history took place in 1998 with a massive renovation.

The museum closed its doors in January 1998 so the staff could remove and restore its extensive and highly prized collection. Over the next six months, more than 1,100 designers, costume specialists, electronic technicians, computer teams, writers, and historians conceived and created a new chapter in Cherokee heritage.

Artists were commissioned to make seven life size figures with faces cast from actual Cherokee tribal members currently living on the reservation.

Archivists painstakingly displayed ancient Cherokee artifacts and the museum introduced its vision to the public on June 10, 1998.

Like most museums, the Cherokee Museum is a repository for historic artifacts and age-old philosophies. The difference at the Museum of the Cherokee Indian is the innovative way they turn Cherokee history into a personal experience.

Cherokee rituals and history were originally passed down from generation to generation by "myth-keepers," often in the form of colorful stories, and that's exactly how the museum tells its story today.

Using a "story belt design," the new exhibits use the most innovative technology to tell a compelling tale. Computer generated images, lasers, specialty lighting, sound effects, and technology which elevates your interest, peaks the imagination and connects with your spirit.

As visitors walk through time, areas representing specific periods or events draw their attention into the Cherokee story, from pre-history to 20th century.

Play the Cherokee butter bean game, shiver along the snowy Trail of Tears, and hear the myth-keepers and storytellers along the way.

The Museum of the Cherokee Indian is an interactive attraction that combines factual perspective and fun into an entertaining and educational experience everyone will enjoy.

It is open year-round with the exception of New Year's Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas Day. Group rates are available; for more information contact the museum at 828/497-

The King's Singers come to Kentucky Center

The King's Singers promise a majestic evening when they perform at the Kentucky Center for the Arts in Louisville, as part of the New Masters Series, Tuesday, February 15, at 8 p.m., in the Bomhard Theater.

Tickets are $30, and include a Pre-Show Lecture at 7 p.m., in the Small Rehearsal Hall. For tickets, call 502/584-7777.

With more than 60 recordings to their credit, along with numerous guest appearances on Evening at Pops with the Boston Pops and The Tonight Show, an Emmy-winning Christmas Special, and an

A&E series, these six Englishmen have established themselves as the premier men's vocal ensemble in the world.

Their vast repertoire, assembled since they started singing together at King's College, Cambridge, in 1968, is one of the most expansive for any performing group today. They draw upon centuries of beautiful music, from 16th century madrigals and Japanese folksongs to close-harmony arrangements of top-40 hits.

The New Master Series is presented with the support of The Gordon Foundation.

ENTERTAINMENT EXTRA

Q. What has Julia Louis-Dreyfus been up to since "Seinfeld" folded? Jane S.

A. Louis-Dreyfus, who played Elaine on the series, has signed to do a movie, tentatively titled, "Geppetto." It's the story of Pinocchio told from the point of view of his creator, Geppetto.

***

Q. I understand Debbie

Reynolds is supposed to have a very serious health condition. Has she actually gone public with it - or is this a rumor? As a long-time fan I hope it is just a rumor. Connie P.

A. Debbie has, indeed, gone public with the fact that she has osteoporosis. She speaks frequently to groups around the country in hopes of raising awareness among women about the risks they run in developing the disease. She discusses those risks and what can be done to minimize them. She also points out that men may be at risk as well.

***

Q. I love the new series, "Judging Amy." I've always enjoyed Tyne Daly's work, and I enjoy Amy Brenneman as the judge. My question involves a story I read that Amy had considered a legal career and wanted to be a judge some day. Is this true? Jeri H.

A. Amy was attracted to the legal profession for much of her life. And no wonder. Her mother was a former Superior Court Justice and is now a trial referee.

Another interesting point is that Amy's character studied law at Harvard, Amy's alma mater.

Q. I recently watched a program about Burt Reynolds. They mentioned his love affair with Dinah Shore and the fact that they remained very close and very loving friends after their romance was over.

The program reminded me that I once read that they had been secretly married and then secretly divorced and that he agreed to keep that part of their lives protected from the public. Is this true in any way? Harry R.

A. In no way is it true. The rumor was one of those short-lived bits of speculation that come up in the lives of most celebrities. Some people suggested that it started with one of Dinah's life-long friends who felt she was protecting Dinah's image by suggesting that she was married to her much younger lover.

***

Q. I watched a movie recently with Anthony Hopkins, and I swear he sounded exactly like Richard Burton. I know Richard Burton's real name wasn't Burton. Was it Hopkins and is Anthony Hopkins related to him? Michelle M.

A. Richard Burton's real name was Richard Jenkins. Burton was the name of his drama teacher. Burton and Hopkins came from the same small Welsh village. Both had years of dramatic training which Burton once said, "was designed to make us sound like Englishmen. But our stubborn Celtic tongues would never completely surrender." Obviously, he was right. Both men retained their lilting Welsh intonations.

Jenny

County — although Jenny Wiley was in captivity long before she came through these parts.

It follows US 23 to Paintsville, Louisa, Ashland and Greenup, along the Big Sandy and Ohio rivers, and then turns back south. Southward, it goes along KY 1 to Grayson, KY 773 to Hitchens and back to KY 1 to Webbsville, close to the Little Sandy River.

KY 201 brings the trail to Blaine and then back to US 23, just north of Paintsville.

A map, published by Kentucky State Parks, points out activities that can be enjoyed along the trail, starting with Dewey Lake and Jenny Wiley State Resort Park.

The Jenny Wiley Grave at River, Yatesville Lake and Fallsburg are marked as the trail goes north. In Ashland, a stop at the Kentucky Highlands Museum is recommended.

The Jesse Stuart Nature Preserve, near

Greenup, is noted, as are Greenbo Lake and Carter Caves state resort parks.

Just north of Grayson are the gravesite of Lucy Virginia Downs, believed to be the first child of white parents born west of the Alleghenies, and the Oldtown Covered Bridge, built in 1880.

West of Webbsville, toward Sandy Hook, are Grayson Lake State Park, Laurel Gorge, and Cherokee Wildlife Refuge.

At trail's end are Paintsville Lake State Park and Mountain Homeplace.

The development of the Jenny Wiley Trail Heritage Byway is the cooperative effort of Kentucky State Parks, Department of Travel, Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources, and Division of Multimodal Programs.

A colorful and informative brochure on the byway is available by calling toll-free 1-800-225-8747.

New reservation policy at parks

FRANKFORT — A new reservations policy is now in effect for Kentucky State Parks.

The policy that went into effect January 3 allows a guest to make a room reservation three years to the month in advance.

If you call on March 1, 2000, for instance, you can hold a room for March 31, 2003. Previously, the limit was one year. The policy came in response to customer demand, said John Paul, director of accommodations.

Many guests like to reserve rooms for recurring annual events, such as family reunions.

For information or reservations, call toll-free 1-800-255-PARK.

The millennium's most memorable TV moments available on home

(NUE) - Over the last century, we have been exposed to numerous life-altering inventions: the automobile, the radio, the computer. But the one that has affected us the most is television.

Television is the most powerful communications medium in history. It is a part of our culture, a mirror of our society. We have adapted it into our daily lives and few Americans can remember life without television.

For example, do you remember where you were when J.R. Ewing got shot on "Dallas"? You were probably sitting in front of the TV along with millions of other American viewers. And do you remember when Sam and Diane finally got together on "Cheers"? People talked about that for days.

Wouldn't it be nice to re-live almost any one of your all-time favorite TV shows? Unfortunately, some of the most treasured television shows of our century have been damaged over time or lost. Luckily, Columbia House has preserved some of the era's most beloved television classics and is offering them to the public.

They are celebrating the new millennium with their re-tv Video Library collection which contains over 90 television collector's editions of your favorite shows featuring uncut, unedited episodes restored to their most pristine condition. The Columbia House video library is the only place you can get preserved collections of the best television shows of the 20th century.

The definitive home video collections for each show offered by Columbia House video library come in collectible packaging that features fascinating facts and rare liner notes, revealing in-depth information about each memorable episode, written by classic television experts. You can actually own never before seen cartoons from "Looney Tunes," and hard to find pilot episodes from "Law & Order," "Sanford & Son," "Good Times," and "The Incredible Hulk." In addition, each collection features all of your favorite episodes, like the one where Little Ricky was born in the "I Love Lucy Collection." And who can forget the episode of "All In The Family" when Archie Bunker is kissed by Sammi Davis Jr.

To order any of the Columbia House Video Library collections, call Columbia House at 1-800-638-2922 or visit their Web site at www.columbiahouse.com.

Folk art and writing at MSU center show

"Time All Over," an exhibition of folk art and creative writing, is now on display at the Kentucky Folk Art Center. This exhibition, developed to mark the transition from 1999 to 2000, is the first invitational exhibition presented by the center.

"On certain occasions, we look to artists and writers, in the belief that through their eyes we can better comprehend what's taking place, that their metaphor will enhance our understanding," said Adrian Swain, curator of the project.

"With the high level of public preoccupation surrounding this issue, we were persuaded that this should be one of those occasions."

Last year, KFAC invited self-taught artists and writers who were considered leading poetic voices in Kentucky, to share their thoughts about the new millennium in the form of new works. The invitation resulted in a collection of works that make us think and expand our perception of who we are, Swain noted.

"The responses are eclectic, inspiring and illuminating. Each of them is important in its own right, but collectively these poems and works of art help us leave a trail, an artistic time capsule, which tells us what special creative people were thinking about at a specific, shared moment in time," he said.

The work of these 29 authors and 25 folk artists will be combined into a book of the same title. Release of the book "Time All Over" will coincide with a public reception which will be held at the KFAC on Sunday, January 23, from 2 to 4 p.m. The reception is free and open to the public.

The exhibit will be on display at KFAC through April 8. It will be available for travel through 2001.

Kentucky Folk Art Center, a cultural and educational service of Morehead State University, is funded in part by a grant from the Kentucky Arts Council, a state agency of the Education, Arts and Humanities Cabinet.

Additional information on the Kentucky Folk Art Center, located at 102 West First Street in Morehead, is available by calling 606/783-2204.

KY Life visits horse farm, historic home

"Kentucky Life" steps through the famous yellow gate at Bourbon County's Claiborne Farm and then passes into a bygone era by visiting a home in Louisville's first subdivision. The next edition, hosted by Dave Shuffett, airs on KET at 8:30 p.m., Saturday, January 22.

The farm that bred Kentucky Derby winner, Swale and was instrumental in the syndication of Secretariat, is perhaps the most famous thoroughbred racing operation in the world. Claiborne Farm, owned by the Hancock family, has a proud tradition that stretches back half a century.

In this segment, Waddell Hancock, widow of A.B. "Bull" Hancock, who restored the farm to its early prominence, reminisces about the farm's history and direction. Now operated by her son, Seth, the farm that has been host to Queen Elizabeth, still follows the dictum of Bull Hancock: "Do the best exceptionally well."

Next, in Louisville's historic St. James Court, the Victorian Era is just a step away through the threshold of the Conrad/Caldwell House. This 1895 Richardsonian Romanesque mansion features a hand-carved stone exterior and period furnishings.

In this segment, we learn that the area, Louisville's first subdivision, was the location of the Southern Exposition of 1883. When the exposition closed in 1887, the land was sold for home lots. Visitors to this magnificent home can enjoy its gargoyles, swags, massive arches and fleur-de-lis.

"Kentucky Life" is produced and directed by Joy Flynn. Series writer is Ellen Ballard. Segment producers for this program are Charlene Heaton Pagoulatos and Connie Offutt. Craig Cornwell is executive producer. The program is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing.

KET explores Thailand

On the shores of the Andaman Sea lies a lush tropical paradise called Thailand, a peninsular finger reaching down from the Southeast Asian mainland toward the equator.

KET presents a look at this exotic land with The Living Edens "Thailand: Jewel of the Orient," Wednesday, January 26, at 8 p.m.

Thailand's jungles are the domain of the tiger. Elephants amble through the dense forest while white-handed gibbons swing from branch to branch. This is a mysterious world of flying snakes and lizards, where cobra is king.

Beneath the warm surrounding waters, brilliant coral reefs shelter bustling aquatic life, while sharks, manta rays and octopi continue their timeless ballet in the shadows. "The Living Edens" continues to open magical vistas to viewers through the expertise of renowned natural-history filmmakers. Its state-of-the-art cinematography creates an intimate sense of place and captures a world of wonder, as it transports viewers to isolated, undisturbed corners of the globe.

The Living Edens "Thailand: Jewel of the Orient" is produced by ABC/Kane Productions in association with Trebitsch Produktion International. The program is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing.

Louisville author's poetry collection chosen to help teach about Appalachia

Kentucky poet Frank X Walker's first collection of poetry, "Affrilachia," (Old Coves Press, 100 pages, $12.50 paperback) has been included in the Appalachian Literature Resource Guide to help teach students about the mountain communities of eastern Kentucky and the African American experience there.

Walker, who was born and raised in Danville and is now director of the Governor's School for the Arts, is a leading voice in a group of poets who bring a unique African American perspective to Kentucky's literary heritage.

The collection has already shown remarkable success. "Just a few days after the book came out, we took it to the Kentucky Book Fair," Walker reports. "It sold out by 11 a.m., so we got more copies, and at 4 p.m. we sold out again."

The poems explore personal themes of community and identity, response and responsibility, in a language that is both poetic and accessible to the average reader. "I've been amazed," Walker says, "with how many 'non-readers' have been making a connection with my poems."

Walker worked closely with Gurney Norman, best-selling Kentucky author and publisher at Old Coves Press in Lexington. Norman selected "Affrilachia" as the first venture by the new publishing house.

"Lassie Syndrome"

I caught a few minutes of the new updated "Lassie" series on Animal Planet the other day, while channel surfing. As usual, I could only watch about five minutes before I had to change the channel.

Animal shows tend to bother me; I used to think I just didn't want to see something get hurt, even when I knew it wasn't real, but that wasn't quite all of it. For a long time I could never quite put my finger on exactly what else bothered me, and then I saw the term "Lassie Syndrome" in print for the first time and knew I had found the explanation.

In scientific terms, it's called "anthropomorphism." You may not be familiar with this word, (neither was I until I started studying animal behavior in depth), but you are familiar with the concept.

You hear it in the catch phrases "pets are people, too," "animals are just little people inside fur coats," and so on. All these terms and phrases refer to the same idea—attributing human characteristics to animals, and this mindset gets us into a whole lot of trouble sometimes.

Now don't get me wrong; I'm not implying that I think animals are inferior or stupid compared to humans, just that we're different species. It's far more beneficial for us to be able to accept and appreciate animals for what they are, rather than continuing to try to make them fit into our romantic perceptions of them.

My mother, in fact, would not give a dog or cat a human name—she felt it was degrading to the animal.

I blame television and movies to a large extent for the prevalence of this attitude. Lassie knew how and where to go for help when there was trouble; she never had an accident in the house; and she would never think of laying teeth on Timmy's baseball card collection.

Is it any wonder we unconsciously expect our pets to know how they are supposed to behave in our world? After all, they're probably carrying on conversations in perfect English behind our backs, just like on "Homeward Bound."

In reality, both dogs and cats have very complex social systems and languages that are perfectly adapted for use within their own species. Because we humans have the ability to reason, think abstractly, and communicate verbally, it's hard for us to comprehend life as a species that does not have these same abilities.

And again, lack of these abilities does not make a dog or cat stupid or inferior; they don't have them because they don't need them. Look at it another way—we can never hope to approach having a dog's sense of smell, a cat's night vision, or the eloquence and honesty of either species' non-verbal body language.

Think about this before you yell at or punish your pet for doing something "wrong." Did the dog dig up your flower bed out of "spite," or was he listening to his instincts to tell him that soft dirt makes the best place to make a cool resting area? In this case his behavior was perfectly normal and reasonable for his species, it was just inappropriate from the human point of view.

It doesn't change the fact that the Impatiens are mutilated, of course, but it may help you think of a realistic solution. You probably can't teach him not to dig, because it's a behavior, that's been "hard-wired" into dogs' brains for thousands of years.

You probably can, however, redirect the activity to something more appropriate, such as setting up his own spot in an out-of-way corner of the yard, filled with loose dirt and buried toys where he can dig to his heart's content. You're happy, he's happy, the flowers are intact, and you've worked with your pet's nature, instead of against it.

I would like to share the qutation I have hanging in my office. If anyone is familiar with this work or its author, I would appreciate the information.

"We need another, and a wiser, and perhaps a more mystical concept of animals./ Remote from universal nature, and living by complicated artifice./ Man in civilization surveys the creature through the glass of his knowledge/ And sees thereby a feather magnified, and the whole image in distortion./ We patronize them for their incompleteness./ For their tragic fate of having taken form so far below ourselves./ And therein we err, and greatly err./ For the animal shall not be measured by man./ In a world older and more complete than ours, they move finished and complete./ Gifted with extensions of the senses we have lost or never attained./ Living by voices we shall never hear./ They are not brethren, they are not underlings./ They are other nations, caught with us in the net of life and time./ Fellow prisoners of the splendour and travail of the earth."

Henry Beston, The Outermost House

Cast of "Beverly Hills 90210" to choose nation's top youth service campaigns

"Beverly Hills 90210" cast members Ian Ziering, Luke Perry, Lindsay Price and Vincent Young will head this year's judging panel to choose the nation's top community service winners in the 2000 "Colgate Youth for America" campaign.

The award-winning program presents cash grants for the best executed projects by local units of the Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Boys & Girls Clubs, Girls Incorporated, Camp Fire and 4-H.

More than 300 local clubs and troops of these leading organizations will receive checks for up to $2,000 for their outstanding projects.

"The Colgate Youth for America program puts the positive activities of today's kids in the spotlight, recognizing and rewarding their creative solutions to problems in their communities," says Program Director Jennifer Barbara. "Hopefully it also inspires others to follow their lead and get involved in service programs in their hometowns."

Past winners range from environmental improvement projects, to violence prevention, to baby-sitting programs for special needs children, and reflect the genuine concerns of young people.

"The participation of this year's panel of judges, busy stars of one of today's most popular television shows, is a tribute to the importance of this program," Barbara says.

Part of a worldwide network of Colgate-Palmolive Company-sponsored youth programs, the campaign launched in 1972 is now the nation's longest running corporate-sponsored program benefiting U.S. youth.

It has won a Freedoms Foundation Award; been recognized by the White House under the last five administrations; been saluted by Congress; and has been recognized by countless governors and mayors throughout the nation.

Entry forms may be obtained by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to Colgate's Youth for America, P.O. Box 1058, FDR Station, New York, NY 10150-1058.

Visit Colgate's website at www.colgate.com where you can click on "Youth Activities" to get more details about the program, and print an entry form right from your screen. The deadline for entry into this year's program is March 31.

Highlands Museum

"African-American Creative Genius: A Sample of Inventions With Impact" opened January 15, and runs through February 26, at the Highlands Museum and Discovery Center in Ashland. African Americans have made significant contributions to the development of American technology, even when faced with poverty, lack of education and prejudice. This exhibit celebrates the industriousness and skill shown by a few of hundreds of African-Americans, and the devices they invented. Sponsored by Dr. Stephen Edge, the exhibit consists of 28 framed black and white drawings with descriptive text. C.J. Walker, a former laundress became the first female self-made millionaire by marketing hair care products for African-American women. George Washington Carver, a former slave renowned for his work with the peanut and sweet potato, and Garrett Morgan, inventor of the automatic stoplight, are included. The exhibition also examines some of the innovations of lesser known inventors, such as Andrew Beard, a former slave whose device for railroad cars prevented countless injuries and saved many lives, and Michael C. Harney, one of few early known African-American inventors to receive a patent from the United States Patent Office. His patent for the invention of the lantern, brought light to the lives of people across the nation. The exhibit was organized by the National Afro-American Museum and Cultural Center in Wilberforce, Ohio. Highlands Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Tuesday-Saturday, and 7-9 p.m., Monday. Admission is $2, adults; $1, senior, students and children; children 2 and under and members, free.

The "south paw from Arkansas" on Jubilee

Mike Holloway and the Bottom Line bring impressive blues talent to the "Jubilee," stage Thursday, January 27, at 10 p.m., on KET. Holloway, who has earned a stellar reputation backing up such artists as Magic Slim, B'nois King and Debbie Davies, steps out front on this episode of "Jubilee." Taped last summer at the

W. C. Handy Blues Festival in Henderson, Mike Holloway and the Bottom Line scorch their way through an impressive set. Known as the "south paw from Arkansas" and influenced by such blues heavyweights as Z.Z. Hill, Jimmy Reed and the three Kings (Albert, B.B. and Freddie), Holloway ranges from traditional Delta blues to Texas shuffles. His upside-down, left-handed guitar playing is an amazing visual addition to his sonic mastery. "Jubilee," a KET production in its fifth season, is produced and directed by H. Russell Farmer. The show is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing. Viewers can find out more about programming on KET by visiting the KET Web site at <http://www.ket.org>, a Kentucky.com affiliate.

Culture shock focuses on controversial art

The power of the arts to enthrall and disturb its audiences is at the heart of "Culture Shock," an evocative documentary series, airing on KET, Wednesdays January 26, and February 2, at 9 p.m.

The series tells the stories of cultural controversy surrounding now-classic works of art—in literature, painting, film and music. The programs explore important questions about the arts and society: How do new forms of art and popular culture emerge, and should there be limits? Who decides what constitutes good art? Should the arts ever be censored?

"Born to Trouble: Adventures of Huckleberry Finn" (1/26) examines why one of America's most beloved—and most banned—books was attacked for its "low morals" when it was published in 1885. Later, it became part of the American literary canon, only to become controversial again on the grounds of racism—a charge that is still debated today.

"The Shock of the Nude:

Manet's Olympia" (1/26) looks at the scandal surrounding Manet's painting—now regarded as a masterpiece—when it was unveiled in Paris in 1865. Manet painted visual art's most universal subject, the nude, as a prostitute who boldly stares at the viewer. By flouting the accepted ideas of propriety in art, Manet outraged audiences.

"Hollywood Censored: Movies, Morality & the Production Code" (2/2) looks at how the mass appeal of movies, including their graphic portrayals of sex and violence, has made them a target of censors since the medium's early days. Since the implementation of the 1930s Production Code, one question persists: Do movies reflect or cause social behavior?

"Devil's Music: 1920s

Jazz" (2/2) explores the early days of jazz when it faced resistance across America. Like rap today, jazz was considered a dangerous influence on young people and society, and some fought to suppress the music on moral grounds.

"Culture Shock," produced by WGBH/Boston, is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing.

Sunday Fun Day, February 6

Are your children suffering from "cabin fever?" Then join us at the University of Kentucky Art Museum on Sunday, February 6, for the first Sunday Fun Day.

This afternoon of free family entertainment will take place from noon to 3:30 p.m. in the museum, located in the Singletary Center for the Arts.

Children ages six to 12 and their parents are encouraged to come and have fun in the museum while learning and looking. Space for the event is limited, so families are urged to contact the museum Education Department at 257-6199 for reservations.

Fun Day events will focus on the current exhibit "A Place Not Forgotten:

Landscapes of the South," on view through June 25. The exhibit's sun-drenched landscapes and bright colors will warm you up as you listen to storyteller Lawrence Bowie's tales of Southern life.

Children and parents will create their own versions of southern art under the guidance of art teacher, Judy Wikel. Refreshments will also be served.

This event is made possible by the support of Target Stores Inc.

The University of Kentucky Art Museum is open noon to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday, and noon to 8 p.m. on Fridays; closed Mondays and University holidays. For more information, contact Jane Boswell at 606/257-5716.

American Experience looks at Houdini

In 1912, Harry Houdini was lowered into New York's East River in a crate thoroughly wrapped in chains. The crowd of spectators gasped, and reporters pulled out their stopwatches. Escape from the submerged box seemed nearly impossible, but Houdini was out in less than a minute.

The resulting media blitz was just one of the spectacles that forever established Houdini as "The World's Greatest Escape Artist."

The American Experience "Houdini," airing on KET Monday, January 24, at 9 p.m., examines the life of the man whose daring feats made him a legend in his own time and an inspiration for generations of magicians to come.

The thrill of Houdini's greatest escapes is brought to life through archival footage and dramatic re-creations performed by professional escape artist Bob Fellows. Interviews with illusionist David Copperfield, investigator of psychic claims James Randi, escape artist David De-Val and writers E.L. Doctorow and Ken Silverman, offer insights into Houdini's genius as both escape artist and showman.

Mandy Patinkin narrates the one-hour program.

Throughout his rise from Hungarian immigrant to international star, Houdini confronted humankind's greatest fears—entrapment, pain, death—and emerged victorious. He was among the premier entertainers of the 20th century, yet he was a man haunted by doubts, obsessions and his own mortality.

The American Experience, "Houdini," produced by Nancy Porter Productions Inc., is closed-captioned for the deaf and hard-of-hearing. Viewers can find out more about programming on KET by visiting the KET Web site at <http://www.ket.org>, a Kentucky.com affiliate.

Wildlife Education Center plans events

Frankfort — The Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR) is holding several educational and entertaining classes at the Salato Wildlife Education Center this month.

• Learn the differences between animals with antlers and those with horns. Hurrah for Headgear will be held at the wildlife education center Saturday, January 22 at 2 p.m.

• They're cold-blooded, covered with scales and carnivorous. Learn all about snakes, lizards and turtles at Remarkable Reptiles. This fun class will be held Saturday, January 29, 2 p.m. at the wildlife education center. Participants can even meet a reptile in person.

• Explore the wildlife education center on a guided tour. Beth Phillips, Visitor Services Coordinator, will lead the Salato Center Interpretive Tour at 3 p.m. on Sunday, January 30. During this tour of the native plant and animal exhibits outdoors, participants can feed the elk, bison and deer and learn about these animals' natural histories. Afterward, visitors can explore the interactive exhibits through an age-appropriate scavenger hunt.

The wildlife center is located on the KDFWR Game Farm on US 60 just west of Frankfort.

Weird

ry-like room at Tokyo's Sega Enterprises building, The Wall Street Journal described the daily activities of disfavored employee Toshiyuki Sakai during the four months between his first negative evaluation and his ultimate firing. Sakai was assigned to an empty room with a desk, chair and incoming-calls-only telephone, where he was expected to remain every day, with no assignments yet also without personal diversions. Observers cited by the Journal called Sega's room a compromise between the U.S. preference for ruthless termination and the Japanese commitment to stick with workers longer.

Kids Growing Up Fast

— Three times during the last two months of 1999, a parent passed away unexpectedly, leaving a small child alone in the house to figure out what to do next. Travis Butler, 9, Memphis, Tennessee, went to school as normal for a month, trying to hide his mother's body because he feared being put in a foster home. Lydia Hanson, 7, Peabody, Massachusetts, told her teacher the next day of her mother's death, but the teacher just shrugged, forcing the girl to spend another night caring for the body before finding a grown-up to believe her. Karina Pistorio, 4, Oklahoma City, attempted to nurse her dead father through the Christmas weekend before the police came, having been called by her father's friends concerned that he was missing. (No foul play is suspected in any of the deaths.)

Update

— When News of the Weird introduced Rev. Richard A. Rossi Jr. in December 1994, his wife had just emerged from a coma and recanted her accusation that he beat her to a pulp near their Pittsburgh home. He had repeatedly denied the charge, saying the attacker must have been someone who looked just like him, driving a car just like his. Nonetheless, he pleaded no contest to the assault and the couple moved to Long Beach, California, where he became pastor at the Immanuel Baptist Church. In November 1999, Rev. Rossi threatened to file slander lawsuits against Immanuel members who circulated news of Rossi's Pittsburgh background after he changed Immanuel's by-laws to free up church money for himself.

Recent Passings in the Weird Community

— James Velez, 25, died of infections caused by his lifelong habit of violently scratching himself as if thousands of bugs were crawling over him (New York City, October). Wendy Scott, 50, died of cancer after recovering from Munchausen syndrome, in which the afflicted complain of bogus illnesses and undergo unnecessary surgeries (42, in Scott's case) (South London, England, October).

Also, in the Last Month ...

— A lifeguard was rushed to intensive care after drinking from an open Coke bottle in a clubhouse refrigerator, having overlooked the label "Do not drink / Jellyfish tentacles" (Cairns, Australia). On Christmas Eve, Patricia White Bull, 42, abruptly awoke from a 16-year coma and regained most of her faculties (Albuquerque). Twelve people in a high-rise for seniors were hospitalized on Christmas Eve after a woman took Oprah Winfrey's advice and lit an "inspirational" candle, which toppled over and started a fire (Chicago). Seven noodle-making shops were closed after inspections revealed they were preserving their inventory in formaldehyde (Hanoi). Tim Book beat a DUI charge by telling a judge that he had just come from a hypnotist's show and was still in a trance when police stopped him (Bruderheim, Alberta).
